"Drawing upon legend, tradition, history and his own romantic fancy, Rupert Hughes has made a story of the life of that beautiful and daring adventuress Betty Bowen, who became Mme. Jumel, and who, in the days of her prime, hobnobbed with royalty itself. Mr. Hughes describes his real-life heroine as one bred in the gutter, and in appreciation of her rise to a certain glittering fame he gives to his book the title of 'The Golden Ladder.' Many names are in Mr. Hughes's pages of men and women of two worlds who were eminent in one way and another in the days that knew Hamilton and Burr. At the end of the story is a chapter giving the history of the old Jumel Mansion, that relic still prized and preserved in upper Manhattan."—N Y World

"It is as an historical novelist that Mr. Hughes is likely to be remembered. He has the grasp of details which makes for realism." D. L. Mann
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '24 1400w

"'The Golden Ladder' is a good book. It is written interestingly and with a cleverness that is real, though not in the usual superficial mode. The book is sufficiently unmoral in its story and at times suggestive enough in its terminology to appeal to the most modern reader; and it is interesting enough and done with sufficient artistry to merit the praise of the more discriminating." S. M.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 O 19 '24 550w

"Written with sympathy and understanding, it is a novel combining the glamor of fiction with the accurate knowledge of a social historian." Jim Tully
+ Int Bk R p715 S '24 1300w
N Y Times p8 Je 1 '24 1000w

"A long and fascinating story." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 100w

"An amazing story, amazingly told, amazingly vivid for all its most annoying faults. Mr. Hughes is as prodigal of material as Balzac and writes with more swing and vivacity. He seems never to aspire to literary excellence; perhaps he doesn't care to. He is popular without being cheap; 'The Golden Ladder' is as worth reading as it is pleasant to read." Kenneth Fuessle
+ N Y Tribune p26 Je 22 '24 650w
Springf'd Republican p7a D 7 '24 460w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p524 Ag 28 '24 650w
Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

HUGHES, THOMAS HAROLD, and LAMBORN, EDMUND ARNOLD GREENING. Towns and town-planning, ancient and modern. 156p il $5 Oxford [15s Milford]
710 City planning [23-14931]

"Contains a sketch of European town building from the Greek cities down to the present time. Deals particularly with city building and conditions in Great Britain."—St Louis

Am Pol Sci R 18:430 My '24 40w

"This book is admirably produced and well and abundantly illustrated."
+ New Statesman 21:342 Je 23 '23 160w
St Louis p337 D '23

Reviewed by Clough Williams-Ellis
Spec 131:321 S 8 '23 700w

"An admirable if brief, historical introduction to a fascinating subject."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 24 '24 1000w
Survey 51:415 Ja 15 '24 160w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p373 My 31 '23 120w

"A better introduction to what may be summed up as the cartography of the subject than that before us need not be desired."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p399 Je 14 '23 1250w

HUGHES, WILLIAM EARL. Modern electro-
[2] plating; a guide-book for platers, works chemists and engineers. (Oxford technical publications) 160p $5.35 Oxford [16s Milford]
537.85 Electroplating 24-8321

"A practical work consisting mainly of articles originally published in 'Beama.' The metals considered are iron, nickel, zinc, lead, tin, chromium, and copper. Chapter 12, entitled 'On Reading,' is a critical review of the literature of the subject."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"A guide book for chemists and engineers. . . Students of the book will be struck with the vigor of presentation and the evidence of a critical and constructive attitude throughout." A. W. Allen
+ Chem & Met Eng 30:324 F '24 650w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:422 O '24

HUIZINGA, J. Erasmus; with an introd. by the
[2] editor. 276p $1.50 Scribner
B or 92 Erasmus, Desiderius 24-10727

The first volume in the Great Hollanders series, edited by Edward W. Bok, is a biographical study of Erasmus, with a critical discussion of his works. The book is also an analysis of his mind and character and of his place in the great religious and intellectual controversies of his day. The author is professor of history in the University of Leyden.

"The book is pleasant reading and will be a sufficiently safe guide to further study. The translation, so far as one can judge without seeing the original, is well done." E. Emerton
+ Am Hist R 30:132 O '24 650w
Booklist 21:23 O '24

On the whole, though the book shows evidence of a careful study of Erasmus and exhibits a sane and sympathetic attitude towards Protestants and Catholics alike, there is little to justify its publication." E. K. Rand
— + New Repub 40:sup8 O 1 '24 400w

"His transparent honesty was not enough to save its author from the journalist's superficiality; not all his humour could prevent his being after all only a prince of dons."
— + New Statesman 23:498 Ag 2 '24 1400w
Outlook 138:561 D 3 '24 100w
Springf'd Republican p10 N 19 '24 300w
Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

HUIZINGA, J. Waning of the Middle ages. 328p il $5.40 Longmans [16s Arnold]
940.1 Middle ages. Civilization, Medieval. France—Social life and customs. Netherlands—Social life and customs 24-18544

Full of strange facts and keen comment, this book is not so much a history as a study of the psychology and manner of thought of the period immediately preceding the Renaissance in France and the Netherlands. The book shows the strange contrasts of life during this time—its splendor and simplicity, courtesy and cruelty, its despair and its "profound, mystic peace." The religious thought of the time is described, the idea of chivalry on which society was based, and the conception of love. The author draws his evidence from religious and secular literature, poetry and ballad, art and costume. There are excellent illustrations, a bibliography and an index.

"Professor Huizinga has made a careful and remarkably interesting analysis of a period so foreign to our own, but from which we have derived much we could ill afford to lose." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 16 '24 570w

"It is a remarkably good book, and particularly valuable at a time when our best historians tend to occupy themselves with the more intensive forms of research."

+ Nation and Ath 35:754 S 20 '24 900w

"The book virtually defies classification. The author's originality is one of his best possible claims to a hearing in this country—the work has already run through several editions in Dutch—for here the standardized methods of contemplating historical periods are falling into greater disfavor all the time. If the book were nothing more than a work of research it would still be welcomed for its scope and profundity. It goes far beyond that. Professor Huizinga has dressed his imposing and variegated assemblage of facts in the colorful garments characteristic of novels, and he parades them from his first page to the last in a vivid style which is the antithesis of plodding scholarship. He presents a series of pictures which impress one first by their realism and next by their attractiveness alone." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 17 '24 1500w

"The author guides and instructs us with a practised pen. His thoughtful and well-ordered book deserves careful study. It is, perhaps, a little drawn-out, and the translator, having done his work with such conspicuous skill, might have toned down his expressions here and there. But these are minor matters. We confidently recommend the book to English readers. The illustrations are delightful and have evidently been selected with great care and judgment."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p414 Jl 3 '24 1100w

HULL, ARTHUR EAGLEFIELD, ed. Dictionary 2 of modern music and musicians. 544p $12 Dutton [35s Dent]

780.3 Music—Dictionaries. Musicians 25-2077

A comprehensive reference book compiled under the editorial direction of a committee of distinguished English musicians with sub-editors and contributors from every country of musical importance. The dictionary covers modern musicians and musical activities since 1880.

"An invaluable book for every one interested in music."

+ Lit R p15 D 6 '24 250w

"I think that it would have been better if the writers had been restrained from giving judgments of composers and their music which, however interesting they might be in another place, are little likely to gain general concurrence and may soon be utterly out-of-date. And there is a tendency to dwell upon trifles to the exclusion of important facts." Dyneley Hussey

— Sat R 138:312 S 27 '24 660w

"There is a want of proportion in the space allotted to many important composers and there are omissions. Nor are the many misprints excusable. However, when all is said, this survey of music during the last forty years is an invaluable compilation, sanely and thoroughly carried out, and everyone connected with it, not least the publishers, is heartily to be congratulated."

+ — Spec 133:475 O 4 '24 540w

HULME, THOMAS ERNEST. Speculations; ed. 2 by Herbert Read; with a foreword by Jacob Epstein. (International lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 271p $3.75 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]

192 Philosophy. Humanism. Art—Philosophy 24-2784

"A posthumous collection of papers on the philosophy of religion and art by a young Englishman who was killed in the war. He has hitherto been known to most Americans only through the five poems in free verse which Ezra Pound published in 1915 and which are reprinted here in an appendix. Although he considered himself an amateur in speculation, he was positive, original, and acute; and it would be difficult to say how much was lost to thought when he died at Nieuport in 1917. He had laid plans for a number of volumes which should develop the theory explicit in the present fragments—the theory that religion, ethics, and art have undergone a steady degradation since the Renaissance."—Nation

"To the last page, a very human interest holds us. Certainly there is a very deep experience and a very strong personality recorded here."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 350w

"In the present volume historians of twentieth-century art may find the clearest and strongest expression of the spirit out of which it significantly came."

+ Nation 119:343 O 1 '24 400w

"These unfinished Speculations focus, I believe, the capital intellectual conflict of our time; and for this they deserve an honorable place even in the consideration of those who, like myself, feel inimical to the views Mr. Hulme sets forth." L: Mumford

New Repub 41:sup11 D 10 '24 1600w

"I find this a very interesting book. It confirms what Hulme's friends felt when he was killed in September 1917, that one of the most inquiring minds in the young generation had gone out."

+ New Statesman 22:397 Ja 12 '24 1900w

"One must admit that the author has developed his contention with seriousness and a great deal of thought, and one cannot but acknowledge that the book as a whole displays both originality of conception and depth of penetration." S. A. Coblentz

+ — N Y Times p15 My 11 '24 800w

Sat R 137:62 Ja 19 '24 660w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p73 F 7 '24 1100w

HUME, ROBERT ERNEST. World's living religions. 298p $1.75 Scribner

290 Religions 24-6750

This handbook in the Life and religion series lays the basis for an understanding of the essentials of the world's extant religions and a knowledge of their origin, history and literature. The essential facts about each religion are derived from its own sacred writings. The elements of strength and weakness in each are stated and comparisons are made with Christianity and with other religions.

J Religion 4:328 My '24 30w

Reviewed by A. E. Haydon

J Religion 4:546 S '24 400w

Lit R p11 Ag 30 '24 220w

N Y Times p11 Ap 6 '24 650w

"The value of the book lies in the fact that we have here presented the results of a long and careful study by an earnest and well-equipped student who lays before us the virtues and vices, the merits and defects, of the eleven living religions." Francis Potter

+ N Y Tribune p21 Je 1 '24 1500w

"A small and convenient reference book."

+ Outlook 136:653 Ap 16 '24 20w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 13 '25 250w

HUMMEL, GEORGE F. Subsoil. 319p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-21922

The peculiar psychology of an isolated village is here set forth in ten chapters. Each chapter is a distinctive study of a native of Norwald. The underlying forces that move men's souls are the warp and woof of these studies; the desires, passions, hopes and despairs of forty-four people enter into their making. There is the pathetic picture of old Anzy Ward who, in her loneliness resorts to spiritualism and so converses with her loved ones. Her tragic end is for her a blinding glory. Then there is the tale of Tilly May who, thru the agency of a matrimonial advertisement, became the wife of stupid Phil Hawkins. A good-hearted energetic woman was she—a good wife—until she comes face to face with her husband's cowardice. The other stories are: Fall flight; Ring around the rosie; Victory to the strong; The coming of electricity to Ollie Ben; Donkey ditch; Abigail Foster's reversion; Katy Catt; June roses.

HUMMEL, G: F.—Continued

"All in all 'Subsoil' is well worth a friendly reading. As unflinching portraiture of common, village people and events, it ranks high, and will merit its impending praise." R. B. M.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 30 '24 650w

"The present book, in itself notable, is most interesting when regarded in conjunction with his earlier work; for, so considered, it carries assurance that among us another novelist of serious mien and fine proportions is rising to his true height. Nothing could be more indicative of steady development than the utter difference in both subject matter and treatment between Mr. Hummel's first two books; they are similar only in strength and skill." Eva Goldbeck
+ Lit R p3 S 6 '24 550w
New Repub 40:151 O 8 '24 280w

"'Subsoil' eschews notoriety, snap judgments, writing by formula, and other shortcuts to the false Parnassus of best sellerdom. Whether it finds oblivion soon or late, it will stand out now as a definite, constructive piece of writing, remarkably free from preconceptions and misinterpretations." J: Carter
N Y Times p4 S 7 '24 2200w
N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 240w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Sat R of Lit 1:123 S 20 '24 550w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 21 '24 300w

HUMPHREY, GRACE. Story of the Marys. 203p il $2 Penn
920.7 Woman—Biography 23-14374

"The Marys, brief stories of whose lives are given in this book are Mary Stuart, Mary Chilton and Mary Washington, Marie Antoinette, Mary Ann Evans, Mary Livermore, Mary Lamb and Mary Somerville, Mary Lyne, and supplementing these, as the one who made the name forever honored throughout Christiandom, 'Mary the Virgin.'"—Boston Transcript

Booklist 20:222 Mr '24

"The stories are pleasantly told."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 12 '24 240w

"These brief stories are very clearly told, and each of them gives a vivid picture of its heroine. The whole is quite light reading and will be found a pleasant guide in introducing a historically inclined child to some of the most interesting figures of the past."
+ Lit R p567 Mr 1 '24 140w

HUMPHREYS, JOHN SANFORD. Bermuda houses. 317p il $15 Marshall Jones
728 Architecture, Domestic—Bermuda islands 24-2014

"In response to a request from architects of New York and Boston, Professor Humphreys of the School of Architecture at Harvard made a study of the small houses and bungalows of Bermuda. He has now gathered together some one hundred and eighty of his photographs and these, together with diagrams and explanatory text, make up the handsome monograph."—Bookm

Booklist 20:329 Je '24
Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 70w
Boston Transcript p6 F 9 '24 950w

"His book is addressed primarily to American architects, who have many problems to solve in designing small houses; but it carries a much wider appeal."
+ Lit R p511 F 9 '24 230w

HUNT, CLARA WHITEHILL. Peggy's play-
2 houses. 123p il $1.75 Houghton
24-24813

Little Peggy and her Aunt Madge, who were great chums, had a delightful summer together visiting beautiful places. First they spent a week with two great-aunts who lived in a dignified house that had an attic in which Peggy found a quaint music box shaped like a little Swiss chalet. The next visit was to Cousin Barry, a fun-loving boy, with whom Peggy had wonderful times playing Robinson Crusoe on a deserted island. Then Aunt Madge took her to the mountains, where they lived in their own bungalow, and Peggy learned to climb mountains, and the names of some beautiful flowers and birds.

Booklist 21:157 Ja '25

"Pleasant, though not enthralling story. Tribute should be paid to the illustrations of Gustaf Tenggren, which are superior in every way to the average illustrations for children's books."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:366 D 6 '24 100w

HUNTER, AYLMER. England's reawakening; preface by the Duke of Argyll. 93p $1.25 Dutton
280 Church of England. Church unity

A treatise on the history of Anglo-Catholicism and its attitude toward the prospect of a future reunion of the Christian churches, showing how the difficulties which now separate the Roman and Anglican communions can be met.

"One rather wonders just why the book needed to be published, for it adds nothing to the discussion of the affairs of Canterbury." F. D.
— Cath World 119:568 Jl '24 220w

"This little book is frankly written for the promotion of the Anglo-Catholic Movement. It is by its very nature propaganda—unavoidably and inescapably partisan however sincere in its outlook—and as such it will at once be looked upon by the average layman. That, within the limits of its premises, it is a clear and trenchant setting forth of the history of Anglo-Catholicism is undeniable."
+ — N Y Times p11 Ag 10 '24 750w

HUNTINGTON, ELLSWORTH. Character of
2 races as influenced by physical environment, natural selection and historical development. 393p $5 (25s) Scribner
572 Anthropogeography. Ethnology
24-24631

Mr Huntington's study is an attempt to understand why human character differs from race to race and place to place. He holds that migration and natural selection have been the chief factors in modifying racial characters. The two countries which he chooses especially to illustrate his point are China, where he shows a rapid process of natural selection taking place thru the influences of over-population, famine and migration; and Iceland, where a high culture once established has been remarkably persistent. The rest of the book is concerned with applying the principle of natural selection to man's early history and distribution and then more fully to specific historical instances.

"On broad canvas, and with many amplifications, the author presents his thesis in masterly fashion anew, bringing to the task the results of his own personal researches abroad and a complete familiarity with the yield of anthropogeographical science." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 20 '24 1200w
R of Rs 70:672 D '24 150w

"The process of the author seems to have been compilation to fit a thesis, and we cannot pretend to think that the result has justified either the writing or the publishing of the book."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p827 D 4 '24 350w

HUNTLEY, THEODORE A. Life of John W. Davis. (Contemporary statesmen ser.) 260p il $2.50 Duffield

B or 92 Davis, John William

"Mr. Huntley, Washington correspondent of the Pittsburgh Post, leads us in outline through the life of Davis. Nor is it bare outline, dressed only in tufts of artificial verbiage, after the long-tolerated custom in such cases. The facts are rounded out with genuine human anecdote and coloring gathered from many sources, making the subject live and breathe as a man. A hundred and fifty pages of Mr. Davis's own speeches are appended, edited by Horace Green."—Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson
Lit R p12 N 1 '24 1300w

"It was well to include in this volume several addresses which Mr. Davis has made upon public occasions. In them we see his unusual command of literary style, as well as the scope of his reading and the force of his convictions, firmly held. Thus the book may be thought of as more than a hasty and ephemeral publication. It can be read with profit after the heat and clamor of the campaign are passed."
+ N Y Times p6 O 19 '24 1150w

"Mr. Huntley has given us something different from the usual campaign biography." C. G. Bowers
+ N Y World p8e O 26 '24 900w

R of Rs 70:667 D '24 80w

"A specimen of campaign biography sound and up to date."
+ Sat R of Lit p251 N 1 '24 300w

Reviewed by Arthur Bullard
Survey 53:98 O 15 '24 660w

HURLEY, FRANK. Pearls and savages. 414p il $7.50 Putnam

919.5 New Guinea—Description and travel
24-10320

The vast tropical interior of New Guinea has been unexplored. Capt. Frank Hurley, who had been with the ill-fated Shackleton expedition, set out to investigate these wilds with a party of natives and five white men. In this book is his record of those explorations. The photographs, numerous and particularly fine, show clearly the discoveries they made and the hazards they took.

Booklist 21:21 O '24

"Even if the text were poorly written, 'Pearls and Savages' would still be a noteworthy book, for the illustrations are excellent. Rarely, indeed, have we seen such marvelous photographs; each one has atmosphere and is a very accurate pictorial record of some phase of savage life. In addition the text is readable and at times exciting."
+ Bookm 59:745 Ag '24 120w

Boston Transcript p3 My 3 '24 900w

"The record of the expedition stands forth unique as the most complete and detailed ever made of an unknown, barbaric people. Much of the diary and the photographic record are included in 'Pearls and Savages.' The vividness of the adventure is admirably preserved by having been written on the spot in time stolen from sleep at the end of each feverish day."
+ Int Bk R p370 Ap '24

"A beautiful and superbly illustrated book. . . . Captain Hurley has performed a great service: to the reader of travel and exploration books with his remarkable narrative, to the geographer with his addition of Lake Murray to the map of New Guinea, to the ethnologist with his collections, apparently obtained from the natives with considerable tact and delicacy, and to the explorer with his account of the reasons for the failure of the airplane upon which his hopes of even greater success were based. The publishers of Captain Hurley's fascinating story have evidently and with some reason regarded it primarily as a popular narrative and have made the book a beautiful one and readable. It is to be regretted, however, that they did not consider the geographer to the extent of including an adequate map and an index." Raymond Holden
+ Lit R p663 Ap 12 '24 1250w

Reviewed by Alexander Goldenweiser
Nation 119:500 N 5 '24 600w

New Statesman 24:sup7 O 11 '24 1150w

"This is one of the most absorbing and beautiful books of travel the reviewer has read for many months." J: Armstrong
+ N Y Tribune p25 My 25 '24 1400w

"The volume gives an entertaining as well as instructive record of his observations and experiences. The photographs brought back from this voyage and reproduced in his book are as interesting as the story itself."
+ Outlook 137:204 Je 4 '24 130w

St Louis p384 N '24

"Considered as a picturebook, Captain Hurley's would be hard to beat. But as a book it tells us very little except that he got among tribes who had never before seen a white man."
— + Spec 133:566 O 18 '24 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p605 O 2 '24 1700w

HUSBAND, JOSEPH. Citadel. 282p $2 Houghton

24-22678

In 1814 when the waters of San Domingo were swarming with American and English privateers, Captain John Bush piloted the Yankee brig "Lucy" to Le Cap, a French San Domingan town, there to discharge his cargo, and perchance to look again into the lustrous eyes of Mlle Virginie, which had captured him two years previously. He meets her again to find she has been betrothed by her cruel guardian to an infamous blackguard, Pierre Nicholas, an officer in the army of the notorious King Christophe. Bush then has but one purpose in life—to take the charming Virginie out of the hands of these wicked men. In carrying out his purpose, he several times faces death by poison and knife, and at last as a slave in the citadel of the king. Happily, fate intervenes. John is pardoned, he settles with Nicholas, and Virginie is his forever.

Boston Transcript p5 N 15 '24 360w

"A well told story of a brave day when everything was not quite so made to order as now and when men relied a bit more on the strength of arm and heart to carry them through." E. H.
+ Lit R p13 O 18 '24 280w

"The author writes with a good gift for words and an instinct for story telling. Yet with all the rapid movement and vigorous action of his narrative he keeps the feeling of his historical background and makes the reader see and remember his colorful setting."
+ N Y Times p22 O 26 '24 420w

N Y World p9e N 16 '24 160w

HUTCHINSON, VERE. Great waters. 390p $2 Century [7s 6d J. Cape]

24-7114

"The 'business in great waters' to which Jacob-with-the-Mouth-of-Fire introduces his son Peter (spirited away from Bristol in his twenty-second year and forced to sail on board his father's frigate) is that of an eighteenth-century pirate captain. Peter, however, reconciles himself to it for a while because of the spell the sea has laid upon him. Then, in the sacking of a Spanish treasure city, he is confronted by Sorrel Lynden, a gallant and beautiful girl from his own far-away Exmoor,

HUTCHINSON, VERE—Continued
whereupon Peter abandons his blood-thirsty calling and makes his way back to England. In due course he comes across Sorrel again and they are married, but not long afterwards the pirates capture them both once more, and it is only after a series of desperate adventures that they finally escape from their clutches."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Booklist 21:68 N '24

"Surely Miss Hutchinson has written a splendid romance full of the sea and the strong passions of men and the enduring tenderness of women." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 21 '24 1300w
Cleveland p50 Jl '24

"This conception of a lunatic buccaneer, who kidnaps his own son to make a pirate of him, might have been made into something dramatically worth while, since there are obvious possibilities in it, but Miss Hutchinson proves unequal to the task. It drops to mere ranting, even to occasional incoherence, and the story as a whole is no more than unreal melodrama."
— Lit R p778 My 24 '24 220w

"The novel does not step far out of the average track of romantic adventure tales; it contains the average ingredients stirred up according to its own particular formula. Yet it is distinguished by a style of exceptional vividness and force, the author has a well-developed gift of description, the gift of creating a scene, a situation, an atmosphere of beauty, terror or suspense, and of holding the reader's attention firmly fixed until she has had her say."
+ N Y Times p25 My 11 '24 500w

"It is intrinsically a stirring yarn, but told a little too much by indirection, obliquely with a brooding manner of phrasing obviously borrowed from Conrad." Isabel Paterson
— + N Y Tribune p28 My 4 '24 950w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 180w

"As in her former (and first) novel, 'Sea Wrack,' Miss Hutchinson shows a graceful knack of style, and plenty of that virile vigor which writers of her sex and age seem able to muster for this sort of romantic tour de force." H. W. Boynton
+ — Outlook 137:442 Jl 16 '24 160w

"The story is highly ingenious and the character-drawing highly ambitious; the writing is in a strain of violence and exaltation, which fits well enough with the subject."
+ Sat R 137:541 My 24 '24 80w

"Great Waters is exciting and picturesque and exuberant; it needed a hidden treasure to make it a really good story." L. P. Hartley
+ — Spec 132:642 Ap 19 '24 250w
Springf'd Republican p7a Je 8 '24 450w

"Miss Hutchinson is to be congratulated on a fine picturesque piece of work, with many passages of a strange, haunting beauty, especially those descriptive of the sea she loves so well, and of that lonely moorland which seems akin to the sea itself in its wildness and its brooding mystery."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p209 Ap 3 '24 200w
Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

HUTTEN ZUM STOLZENBERG, BETTINA (RIDDLE), freifrau von. Pam at fifty. 317p $2 Doran
24-5803

A series of incidents held together by the irresistible Pam as the central figure. Pam at fifty has still the same intense interest in life and the working out of other people's problems. The adventures, moreover, are as numerous as ever. In the first episode, she sends back home the eloping wife of a former lover of her own. After that she reveals to her adopted daughter what a trickster she is loving. Then of course her children cause her no end of trouble with their love affairs and Roddy's gambling, till finally, worn out and cross, she threatens to leave her family. Full of contrition they plan to make things easier for her—only to have Pam, bland and exuberant as always—unexpectedly appear before them, ready for the next experiment in straightening out other people.

"The pictures we are given of Pam and her family—her husband and three children—are made doubly engaging by the author's evident fondness for her and for them."
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 31 '24 480w

Reviewed by G: B. Dutton
Ind 113:48 Jl 19 '24 650w

"This book, despite its graceful style and good characterization, is a slight achievement compared to the sustained excellence of 'Pam' and 'Pam Decides' and the quiet beauty of 'Our Lady of the Beeches.'"
+ — Lit R p794 My 31 '24 360w

"The whole is rather like a gay patchwork cushion, made up of left-over bits from a busy woman's workbasket; useful to the reader as a palliative of the hard surface of reality." Isabel Paterson
— + N Y Tribune p30 Ap 27 '24 400w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Young Archimedes, and other stories. 312p $2 Doran
24-22679

Six short stories—one of them long enough to be called a novelette. The title story, which is the last in the book, is the tale of a beautiful and gifted Italian boy, with the possibilities in him of an Archimedes or a Pascal. Unfortunately, he finds favor in the eyes of a childless and acquisitive woman who adopts him and tries to attach him to herself by lavish gifts and indulgence. She only succeeds in crushing his soaring spirit, till one day, feeling that he is abandoned by his friends, he kills himself. Contents: Uncle Spencer; Little Mexican; Hubert and Minnie; Fard; The portrait; Young Archimedes.

"Huxley has imagination, feeling, and a gift of language. Possessed of the solid classical education, one somehow expects of the English writers, he seems also to know his way about in the seven arts. From his natural gifts and acquired equipment much may be expected, and there is some fulfillment before us." E. A. Niles
+ Ind 113:318 O 25 '24 550w

"Considered by themselves, without regard to anything that has preceded them, the six stories contained in Mr. Huxley's latest volume would be enough to place him as an artist of high rank and still higher possibilities. It takes an artist of more than usual gifts to produce 137 quietly exquisite pages in order to lead up to such a delightfully ironical tiger-or-lady ending as that of "Uncle Spencer." Edwin Bjorkman
+ Lit R p4 O 4 '24 800w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 119:499 N 5 '24 500w

"'Young Archimedes' is both the most ambitious and least entertaining of Aldous Huxley's works. A series of stories, none of them particularly vivid, shows a profound sense of the importance of character, though all are marked by an atmosphere of negation, frustration, an overwhelming sense of the defeat which life holds for all created things. That Huxley will progress is indicated by many tokens in the book."
— + N Y Times p8 O 5 '24 650w
Outlook 138:377 N 5 '24 200w

"Very diverse in matter, and in manner facile, gracious and unhurried—some of them slight, the occupation only of an artistic moment, others elaborated with the patience of a craftsman cutting an agate—these six stories, one fancies, have been interludes in Mr. Huxley's work." Shaemas O'Sheel
+ Sat R of Lit 1:197 O 18 '24 850w

HUYSMANS, JORIS-KARL. The oblate; tr. by Edward Perceval. 304p $2.50 Dutton
24-22948

This is the fourth and last stage of the life story of Durtal. "The oblate" is the intimate portrait of his life at the monastery, Val-des-Saints, where he joins the Benedictine order as an oblate-novice. The greater part of the book is given to descriptions of liturgical exercises and studies of various characters which illustrate monastic history and its splendors.

Cath World 120:421 D '24 260w

"Fascinated by the poem in prose, Huysmans evolved a complex, sometimes tortured, but always scintillating and encrusted style, which he later worked towards simplicity and clarity as in 'The Oblate.' It is a great pity that the translator of 'The Oblate' has lacked the resources to convey fully to us the flavor of his style." G. B. Munson
+ Lit R p4 S 27 '24 780w

"'The Oblate' is, on the whole, the least interesting of the tetralogy of which 'Là-Bas' is the first volume, but to those who, like the present reviewer, find the author-hero strangely fascinating, it is certainly not dull." J. W. Krutch
— + Nation 119:575 N 26 '24 140w

"If Huysmans is an artist he must be ashamed of this work, written apparently during his literary novitiate. If it were not Huysmans' it would not have been translated." H. S.
— N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 780w

"Even when positive errors are avoided, the looseness of the translation omitting and modifying phrases without any real need, destroys what can be left in English of the individuality of Huysmans's style and mind. If the volume, like its predecessors, passes through more than one edition, a thorough revision will be essential."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p357 Je 5 '24 420w

HYDE, WALTER WOODBURN. Greek religion and its survivals. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 230p $1.50 Marshall Jones
292 Greece—Religion. Greek church
23-16086

The book is concerned with the survivals of Hellenic beliefs traceable in Greek Christianity today, in the festivals of the Greek church, in the practice of divination and sacrifice and in the superstitions about various supernatural powers surviving from paganism.

Booklist 20:197 Mr '24

Cath World 118:419 Je '24 150w

"The work is done fairly with just enough reference to controversy to let the reader into the secret that the origin of many of these superstitions is disputed and their classical ancestry not fully established. . . It is on the whole an entertaining book."
+ — Lit R p586 Mr 8 '24 420w

Reviewed by R. K. Yerkes
Lit R p956 Ag 9 '24 450w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
N Y Times p9 Ja 20 '24 550w

R of Rs 69:448 Ap '24

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 22 '24 260w

HYNDMAN, ROSALIND TRAVERS. Last years of H. M. Hyndman. 326p $4 Brentano's [10s 6d G. Richards]
B or 92 Hyndman, Henry Mayers

"Nobody knew Hyndman better than his second wife, and it is she who supplements the English Socialist's two books of reminiscence with what is here offered as an account of his activities 'during the seven and a half years that we spent together.' The book is a sort of post-mortem memorial of both husband and wife. It was begun after Hyndman's death at the end of 1921, but the author never saw it in print, for her death, under what are called 'tragical circumstances,' followed in April, 1923, a few days after she had despatched the manuscript to a publisher, and the task of seeing the work through the press fell to others. In the introductory words from her literary trustees they disavow responsibility for some of the views expressed, and do so not only for themselves, but also on the part of the Social Democratic Federation which Hyndman founded and of which his wife was an active member up to the time of her death."
—Boston Transcript

"Lack of perspective is the malady which ails Rosalind Travers Hyndman's story of her husband. . . Mrs. Hyndman makes of her man a god, a giant figure, impossibly, irritatingly infallible; and somehow he annoys us so that his cause annoys us too."
— Bookm 59:480 Je '24 160w

"Vivid and interesting as a survey of Hyndman's later career as a reformer, the book takes on added value as a portrayal of his mental make-up, personal characteristics and general outlook upon life. It is throughout, moreover, a con amore deliverance such as few outsiders would be either equipped for or likely to attempt." Edmund Noble
+ — Boston Transcript p5 Mr 15 '24 1550w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
Dial 77:267 S '24 50w

N Y Times p6 Mr 16 '24 1200w

Reviewed by J: L. Heaton
N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 1000w

"Mrs Hyndman has indeed shown a most delicate craftsmanship in handling her material. One naturally starts with the assumption that this will be primarily a political and economic biography, mainly of use for its possibilities of historical information. And on those lines it very amply justifies itself; yet one closes the book wonderng whether it is not even more successful as a psychological romance. The author writes of her dead husband with a passionate enthusiasm which is very perilous for her art. The slightest misstep or overbalance, and the whole structure would have come down with a crash. But the pen never fails; and instead of a sentimental disaster we have a very beautiful portrait in words—a portrait which ranks with many a lesser work which has been called a masterpiece." G. R. S. Taylor
+ Spec 131:652 N 3 '23 650w

"We must not expect from Mrs. Hyndman's pen—should we even desire?—a detached, and narrowly discriminating valuation of Hyndman's life. We are given no plain, mirror-like reflection but a warm, coloured image of a man whom the writer found in all respects admirable."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p664 O 11 '23 880w

I

ICONOCLAST, pseud. See Hamilton, M. A.

INDIANA prize plays; preface by William O. Bates. 199p $1.50 Bobbs
812 American drama—Collections 24-3555

"Six plays by Indianians, first produced by the Little Theater Society of Indianapolis during the seasons of 1922-23. They exemplify a wide variety of themes and methods of treatment, including tense domestic drama, realistic depiction of war conditions, Hoosier comedy, fantasy, and prophetic satire on reform, and are all suitable for amateurs. Royalty." (Cleveland) Contents: The marriage gown, by J. K. Sollenberger; Where do we go from here, by W: O. Bates; Brothers, by D. G. King; Treason, by M. C. Tull; Two dollars, please! by Margaretta Stevenson; Nocturne, by H. L. Earnest.

Booklist 21:61 N '24

INDIANA prize plays—Continued

Boston Transcript p2 My 31 '24 380w
Cleveland p86 N '24
St Louis p382 N '24

"It is to be regretted that a more local flavor, a more individual and special treatment was not attempted, something which, in its reflection of the qualities of a community, might have compensated for the absence of any particular talent or technical skill."
— Theatre Arts Mo 8:426 Je '24 80w
Wis Lib Bul 20:176 Jl '24

INGE, WILLIAM RALPH. Personal religion and the life of devotion; with an introd. by the Lord Bishop of London. 96p $1 Longmans
248 Spiritual life 24-1988

In this little book on personal religion Dean Inge writes of the place of the mystical experience in the religious life—of faith, hope and joy, and self-consecration. In the last chapter, on bereavement, he lifts the veil from his own experience in the loss of his little daughter and some of the things about her which he could not bring himself to say in English, or in prose, he has kept for a metrical dedication in Latin.

Booklist 20:281 My '24

"Dean Inge is seen at his best when he is not engaged in controversy. Here he dissipates himself; he was meant for better things. The exceptionally beautiful picture of child life with which this little book ends, and the scholarly elegiac couplets with which it opens, touch the highest level." A. F.
+ — Nation and Ath 34:742 F 23 '24 200w

"Dean Inge has so long been known as the 'Gloomy Dean' that this little book should go a long way to refute the charge. In 'Personal Religion and the Life of Devotion'—a work having its origin in the darkest moments that can come into a parent's life—the author is seen as a messenger of light and as the bringer of a peace which, in the truest sense, passeth understanding."
+ N Y Times p13 F 3 '24 500w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p67 Ja 31 '24 350w

INGERSOLL, RALPH MCALLISTER. In and under Mexico. 235p il $2.50 Century
917.2 Mexico—Description and travel 24-8903

The writer, a young American mining engineer, tells his experiences in a Mexican copper mine and in the miners' camp. It is a lively yarn, for Mr. Ingersoll has a quick eye for color and incident. He describes the work of the mine, life underground and in the mining town, night life in the Mexican quarter, the social doings of the American colony and a performance in the bull ring.

Booklist 21:21 O '24
Cleveland p64 Jl '24

"A fascinating addition to the bibliography of the land of frijoles." S. F. Reavis
+ Int Bk R p529 Je '24 60w

"Mr. Ingersoll is a born raconteur, possessor of something of the magic of the 'teller of tales,' that elusive, indefinable something which cannot be learned or taught, the 'gift' of narrative. He is also the master of a supple, graceful style, free of the mannerisms that so often mar the work of the cleverest beginners. He has a fine zest in seeing and understanding, and therefore in enjoying things—all sorts of things."
+ Lit R p777 My 24 '24 350w

"A picture of Mexico that is curiously vivid and convincing."
+ New Statesman 24:310 D 13 '24 150w
N Y Tribune p25 My 18 '24 120w

"A brisk book of adventure. Mr. Ingersoll is in his first twenties and sees things with the eyes of youth. He does not attempt to solve problems, but tells his story simply and strongly."
+ N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 80w
Outlook 138:65 S 10 '24 10w
Spec 133:391 S 20 '24 180w

"The author is an engineer with a flair for writing and a discriminating eye as to incident."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 8 '24 230w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p615 O 2 '24 80w

INNES, JOHN. Till a' the seas gang dry. 290p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]
24-6688

As the title connotes, there is much that is Scotch in this simply written tale of friendship. A friendship such as Alec Colville, writer, and John Innes, minister and narrator of this story, had for each other from their boyhood days is a rare and beautiful thing. As fine is Alec's love for little Mary Morrison, a love that was hers 'till a' the seas gang dry.' For Alec's sake John suffers the reproach of his congregation because he has blessed the union, without benefit of clergy, of the two he most wanted to be happy. The unfortunate murder of Rob, the man who had brought tragedy into Mary's life, and the subsequent trial are additional stones in the monument of friendship.

"As Scotch as a thistle, and the uninitiated reader sometimes has need of the footnotes that translate puddocks into frogs, though the story is not unduly thickened with dialect, and has a pleasantly sly humor to lighten its darkest pages and its sturdy sentiment."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 14 '24 360w

"An unusual volume. Not that the story is in itself particularly novel, but the manner of its treatment is so." A. L. H.
+ Lit R p890 Jl 12 '24 200w

"It is all real, carrying instant conviction to readers. This, it is felt, is Scotch life written by one who is extremely familiar with it. Of course the prose aids the effect for it is supple, full of queer twists and unexpected Scotch methods of thought and exposition."
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 6 '24 700w

"It does contain a powerful story, and such as take their Scotch neat may relish the flavor of it greatly." Isabel Paterson
+ — N Y Tribune p24 Je 29 '24 160w

"The author, with a light touch, learned from Sir James Barrie, intermixes shrewdness, humour, and sentiment so agreeably that to demarcate them would be difficult."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p161 Mr 13 '24 200w

INSTITUTE OF AMERICAN MEAT PACKERS. Packing industry. (Chicago univ. Materials for the study of business) 357p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press
658.9 Packing industry 24-3971

"Under the joint auspices of the School of Commerce and Administration of the University of Chicago and the Institute of American Meat Packers, a course of lectures was delivered at the University one year ago by eight men who are well known in the business of meat-packing. These lectures are published in the present volume. No one of them is a strictly specialized presentation of its topic, but each one gives a bird's-eye survey of a broad subject. From the eight lectures taken together the reader may get a conception of the industry as a whole, its history and general economics, its operations and equipment, methods of financing, employment of science and procedure in distribution of the product."—R of Rs

---

"The lectures are well edited, well organized, and unusually full of content for discourse of this description." I. Lippincott
+ Am Econ R 14:537 S '24 100w
Booklist 20:324 Je '24

"The series of articles is important; in addition, it is a quite effective discussion of an industry which is little understood." J. G.
+ Bookm 59:adv My '24 150w

"The lecture that specially prompts this review is that by W. D. Richardson on 'Science in the Packing Industry.' We need more short monographs like this very readable one by Mr. Richardson, in which the scientific aspects of an industry are set forth in their true perspective." A. V. H. Mory
+ Ind & Eng Chem 16:764 Jl '24 200w

"Home economics teachers and consumers in general should find helpful the discussion of the risks involved in the meat packing business because of the lack of stability in its raw materials. In fact, the whole book could be read with great profit by laymen as well as by professional students of subjects which involve a knowledge of economics." Anna Barrows and M. B. Van Arsdale
+ J Home Econ 16:272 My '24 650w
R of Rs 69:447 Ap '24 100w

IRONS, IAN. Simples. 306 $2 Seltzer
2
24-27643

Socially entrenched in the town of Earlhampton because of very substantial holdings in the Kent Drug Co., and united in a family solidarity which at the approach of danger stiffened into an impregnable defense, the Kents were able to view with comparative calm the moral vagaries of the spoiled and attractive Edwin. The quixotic idealism of the uncompromising Alban, on the other hand, filled with dismay and dread this family the whole fabric of whose life was built upon the principle of expediency. From beginning to end, the struggle is between the easy-living Edwin and the clear-thinking Alban, with all the odds against Alban—a struggle in which Gilda Conray is made the victim, since Edwin knows very well that the way to strike at Alban is to hurt Gilda. Alban, frozen out of the business because of his peculiar ideas of how a business should be run, driven from home becaue of his protection of the helpless and unhappy Gilda whom he loves and who loves him—wins out at last. The terrible Aunt Heppie, chief of the Kent clan and feared of all, yields Alban an unwilling tribute—"Yes, you're your father—with a will to back you up"—and it is this same Aunt Heppie who at her death shows her confidence in him by leaving him her fortune.

"This is an excellently written book. Mr. Irons' manner is elegant and clear. He is a master of adjective usage and startles one by his arrangement of words." N: Atlas
+ Lit R p3 D 27 '24 510w

"'Simples' has flashes of brilliant power, spoiled by an obvious didacticism and a weakness of the author's tear ducts."
+ — N Y Times p16 D 14 '24 310w

"Mr. Irons's sentiment is marked and his humor keen."
+ N Y World p8e N 30 '24 100w

IRONS, RALPH, pseud. See Schreiner, O.

IRONSIDE, JOHN. 'Phone booth mystery. 280p $2 Holt

Mrs Cave's little post-office became the center of curiosity when the handsome young wife of Sir Robert Rawson was found in the telephone booth—murdered. This murder took place on Roger Carling's wedding day. Roger was Sir Robert's confidential secretary who the night before had handled some valuable papers which were also missing. Developments show that Lady Rawson, Russian by birth, had paid a secret visit to her countrymen, that the papers were in her possession at that time and that Roger Carling was aware of her visit. Carling is indicted for murder but at the ninth hour a group of men is hastily summoned to Sir Robert's home and there they meet Lady Rawson's murderer face to face.

"Although lacking in frequently-occurring, high-pressure episodes, too often considered essential to the detective story 'thriller,' the story retains its attraction to the last chapter. The solution of the crime is logical, but so well is it concealed that no inkling of its circumstances is given until the moment of disclosure."
+ — Boston Transcript p3 S 6 '24 190w

"The element of suspense is so well sustained and the swiftly ensuing incidents so thrilling that lovers of detective stories will find themselves irresistibly compelled to finish the book in one sitting." K. W.
+ Lit R p9 S 6 '24 120w

IRWIN, MARGARET. Who will remember? 293p
2 $2 Seltzer
24-20150

"Though her environment was ordinary enough, Jan Challard, one of the tale's two heroines, was a dreamer, and the centre of many of her dreams was a picture clipped from an illustrated magazine, the copy of a portrait called a 'Gentleman Unknown.' Through the glimpses given of Jan's dreams about this portrait the reader is prepared for the fantasy which is to follow, when, though time and space are not quite obliterated, the wall between past and present becomes so thin that the fortunes of Jan Challard, the girl of to-day, influence and are influenced by those of Juliana Clare, who in 1779 was living at Chidleigh House and wishing that something interesting and romantic would happen."—N Y Times

"Miss Irwin has written a graceful tale, carrying over from the present to the past with considerable confliction and charm."
+ Boston Transcript p7 D 17 '24 350w

"The total absence of realism will be to many readers a delightful holiday from the present-day school. . . Miss Irwin knows how to mix her colors for this pastel." Vera Edgar
+ Lit R p12 D 27 '24 580w

"A very pretty little romance with a deftly handled element of the supernatural to give it freshness."
+ N Y Times p17 Ja 4 '25 500w

IRWIN, WALLACE ADMAH. Golden bed. 437p $2 Putnam
24-20149

The book is a study in class contrasts. Admah Holtz was "poor white trash" and peddled candy in the streets of the little southern town whose ruling dynasty was the Peake family. The Peakes represented the old school of southern aristocracy and the sisters Margaret and Flora Lee inherited their share of family pride. As the years went on Flora Lee married a Spanish count, and Admah Holtz made a fortune in the candy business. After seven years of European life Flora Lee tired of her count and came back to America. When the Peakes lost their money and Flora Lee was divorced she married Admah. After she had ruined him she left him for a wealthier man. Years later she crept home to die in the old family mansion, now a cheap rooming house. Admah was left to patch up the rest of his life with the dependable sister, Margaret.

Booklist 21:68 N '24

"It is by far the keenest and most penetrating piece of work which Mr. Irwin has yet done. Its symbolism places it high among contemporary American books." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 27 '24 1300w
Ind 113:160 S 13 '24 180w

"I could find only one slight flaw in an otherwise splendid piece of work. Mr. Irwin states that the Spanish marquis pronounced ice-cream soda, eyes-crimsuda; and thereafter causes him to speak most perfect English. One goes back over his pages, rereading certain whimsical passages for the sheer delight they give. 'The Golden Bed' is charged with enthusiasm, and a mighty sympathy for frail mortals valiantly fighting their way to truth and rectitude.

IRWIN, W. A.—Continued
It is a real novel from the hand of a real man who has touched life at many points, yet who has found it abundantly good." C. H. Towne
+ Int Bk R p720 S '24 1550w

"Mr. Irwin is a good story teller. 'The Golden Bed' is a thoroughly readable, easy-to-read book; it errs, if possible, on that side. At times it is marred by echoes of magazine stories, written to be read hastily and tossed aside, but there is much good, sound observation in it; often it is graphic in its presentation of backgrounds, and its character drawing is well done." Herschel Brickell
+ — Lit R p979 Ag 23 '24 550w

" 'The Golden Bed' is masterly; but it is not a masterpiece. Mr. Irwin is guilty of many serious lapses. He has not schooled himself to master the difficult art of omission; and because he has not disciplined himself in this the book is badly clogged." P. A. Hutchison
+ — N Y Times p1 Ag 17 '24 2650w
N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 420w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 138:426 O 25 '24 170w

"The early chapters are extremely good. But the story deteriorates rapidly towards the end."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p628 O 9 '24 380w

ISMAN, FELIX. Real estate in all its branches. 307p $1.50 Appleton
658 Real estate business 24-4636

The author is a realty broker who has been engaged in the real estate business for thirty years and who passes on his experience for others to profit by. He gives practical advice about values, the economical construction of a home, real estate booms, seashore property, rent and building profiteers and certain pitfalls and snares to avoid in realty dealing.

Booklist 20:324 Je '24
Boston Transcript p4 Jl 19 '24 300w

"The book is full of anecdote and is written clearly and sensibly by a man who is imaginative but practical." Robert Kelly
+ Detroit News p15 Mr 16 '24 240w

"Here is a man who has set down in plain, unvarnished English his experiences in every branch of realty activity and placed the public in possession of such information that snares for the once thoughtless will be set in vain. . . There is nothing vague in Mr. Isman's statements. He labors on his cases without reserve, amplifying his explanations with figures, and the whole business is laid before us so that nothing is left to the imagination. The matter is so valuable, so closely allied to the ambitions of thousands of homeseekers and others, that it will be read with avidity."
+ N Y Times p22 Je 22 '24 520w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:355 Jl '24
Wis Lib Bul 20:174 Jl '24

J

JACKS, LAWRENCE PEARSALL. Living universe. 111p $1 Doran [2s 6d Hodder & S.]
204 Civilization. Religion. Education. Immortality 24-3283

Of these three lectures by Principal Jacks, two were delivered on the Hibbert lectureship and one was given in Oxford to university extension students. The thought underlying them all is that the universe is a living, not a dead, lifeless mechanism, and that we are fellow-workers in its creative evolution. In the first lecture he shows that religion and education are a unity and that a religious spirit must enter into education and an educational spirit into religion. The second lecture presents the ideal of a civilization which shall direct itself to developing the spirit of man instead of exploiting the material world. The third expresses his conception of immortality in a living universe.

Booklist 20:320 Je '24
Boston Transcript p3 Mr 15 '24 360w

Reviewed by J. F. Newton, D.D.
Int Bk R p360 Ap '24 60w

"Fresh and challenging messages like all of Principal Jack's writings."
+ J Religion 4:331 My '24 40w

Reviewed by H. A. Overstreet
Nation 119:167 Ag 13 '24 220w

"In this little new book his admirers will find a work quite as mentally stimulating and satisfying, and as easily read—because it is so briefly, simply and luminously expressed—as his previous works."
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 9 '24 550w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:332 Je '24 20w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 200w
Survey 52:364 Je 15 '24 120w

JACKS, LAWRENCE PEARSALL. Lost radiance of the Christian religion. (Essex Hall lecture) 46p 75c Doran
230 Christianity 24-4873

In this lecture Principal Jacks pictures his conception of Christianity as a radiant and joyous energy centered in the soul, which has power to transfigure man and his world. He believes that the church can, if it will, bring back this lost radiance and become the teacher of mankind.

"The popularity of Dr. Jacks will get a boost from this little book, and its contents will exalt and satisfy readers whose thoughts it expresses and whose beliefs it strengthens. Some it will depress and discourage—of which the reviewer is one." Joseph Collins
+ — Int Bk R p799 O '24 380w
J Religion 4:333 My '24 30w
Nation 119:167 Ag 13 '24 220w
St Louis p367 N '24

"In 'The Lost Radiance of the Christian Religion' Dr Jacks reveals his challenging freshness of thought. He may not ferret out all the implications of the problems discussed or invariably reach a definitely philosophic conclusion; but he has the faculty of making people see old significances in a new light, or, better, new significances in old ideas."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 200w

"One of the most brilliant essays he has ever written and full of good sense and good sayings." B. L.
+ Survey 52:364 Je 15 '24 120w

JACKS, LAWRENCE PEARSALL. Realities and shams. 214p $1.50 Doran [6s Williams & N.]
824 Social problems 24-8811

Essays prompted, the author says, "by reflection on the course of events during the last nine years." The collection is not accidental but has an easily traced underlying theme. He pleads for moral idealism in our social, political and international life, for a blending of realism with idealism as the only force that can save the world. Contents: Lest we forget; Realities and shams; a prevalent inconsistency; The rule of ideas: a war-time misgiving; The political obsession and the league of nations; The degradation of policy; The validity of international compacts; A way round; On minding one's own business; A soliloquy on voting; "Old Eddy"; The power of the people; On trusting great men; Leadership; Secret diplomacy; Compulsory education; Institutional selfishness.

Booklist 20:321 Je '24

"Well-organized, coherent essays, pleasingly written, and connected one with the other by the strand of correlated thought." J. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 26 '24 560w

"Brilliant they are, unquestionably; epigrammatic, aphoristic, erudite; yet they leave one unconvinced." F. D. W. G.

+ — Ind 112:262 My 10 '24 200w

Reviewed by J. F. Newton, D.D.

Int Bk R p360 Ap '24 80w

J Religion 4:448 Jl '24 20w

"Wisdom unites with humor and both with an incisive yet gracious style to make these essays pleasant reading."

+ Nation 119:24 Jl 2 '24 80w

"The shams that he singles out are important, and most of the realities he pits against them are valid. There is a vigor in Dr. Jacks's sturdy heresies which testifies to the strength of his orthodoxy. It is Oxford at its best." L. M.

+ New Repub 39:166 Jl 2 '24 120w

"The book is small in size but weighty in wisdom."

+ Outlook 136:652 Ap 6 '24 300w

Spec 132:338 Mr 1 '24 200w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 200w

Survey 52:364 Je 15 '24 120w

JACKSON, JOSEPH FRANCIS AMBROSE. American colonial architecture, its origin and development. 228p il $2 McKay

724.9 Architecture, Colonial 24-20061

"A collection of chapters written to convey general information about colonial architecture and the influences which shaped the development of particular styles of dwelling in the different colonies. While presenting information of general character, Mr Jackson aims at precision of definition and deduction."—Springf'd Republican

"A feature of this book is the excellent illustrations, forty-eight in number, which are principally taken from photographs. If an architect fails to gather some inspiration and helpful hint from these pages he must be dull indeed, while to the student of American bygones it is fascinating." G. H. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p5 S 13 '24 1050w

"A fresh and interesting approach to his subject, about which so many books have been written, gives to Mr. Jackson's work a distinctive value that makes it well worth the attention of students of architecture and also of those interested in the social and economic life of Colonial days."

+ N Y Times p26 D 14 '24 430w

"A well-conceived and interesting collection."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 1 '24 400w

JACKSON, WILLIAM MARVIN. Making business advancement sure. 140p $1.50 Stokes

174 Success. Business 24-5781

A book of advice to young people about building a successful business career. This advice is given in the form of fifty talks, popular in tone and very tersely expressed. Each chapter is followed by a "Guide to thought and practice" made up of questions, comment and suggestion applying the points made in the foregoing chapter.

"This book is different. It has the happy faculty of emphasizing axioms and platitudes in a style that is neither hackneyed nor false. The terse style, semi-descriptive and narrative, makes for unusual interest in the presentation of the subject matter. But the most valuable feature of the book is the series of questions and topics added to the end of each chapter. They are pertinent, pungent and practical."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 30 '24 320w

N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:297 Je '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:174 Jl '24

JAMES, M. R., tr. See Bible. New Testament—Apocrypha

JAMES, WILL. Cowboys north and south. 217p il $3.50 Scribner

917.8 Cowboys 24-23378

"I was born and raised in the cow country, I am a cowboy, and what's put down in these pages is not material that I've hunted up, it's what I've lived, seen, and went thru before I ever had any idea that my writing and sketches would ever appear before the public." The cowboy's life is described in the cowboy vernacular and illustrated with spirited drawings by the author.

Booklist 21:146 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p5 N 26 '24 200w

Cleveland p88 N '24

"Let the skeptical reader be assured at the start that the book makes excellent reading in spite of its handicap of truth. The author evidently combines keen logical insight with a rich sense of romance. While confining himself strictly to facts, the facts he brings forward are by no means dry."

+ N Y Times p11 O 12 '24 350w

"However Will James might be able to write if he set his mind to it, and whatever he may do in the future, in this first book, with the sure instinct of an artist, he has done an exceedingly wise and artistic thing: he has written exactly as the average cowpuncher talks, and that gives his book a unique distinction, so far as I know, among books of the Far West. It also gives it a unique charm." Struthers Burt

+ N Y Tribune p3 D 7 '24 1300w

"The drawings are superb and irresistibly humorous. From page 29 on the text is almost worthy of the drawings, and sometimes quite so."

+ Outlook 138:464 N 19 '24 110w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 40w

"The best part of Mr. James's book is its illustrations. His draughtsmanship is evidently as self-taught as his literary style, but in their vigor and truthfulness his studies of both horses and cattle are extraordinarily good. They have nothing to fear from comparison with the work of Frederic Remington or any other artist of the Plains."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p747 N 20 '24 720w

JAMESON, MRS ANNIE EDITH (FOSTER). See Buckrose, J. E., pseud.

JAMESON, JOHN FRANKLIN, ed. Privateering and piracy in the colonial period. 619p $5 Macmillan

973.2 Pirates. Privateering. United States—History—Colonial period 23-18431

"During all the wars in the colonial period of American history, privateering was a very active branch of warfare and business, and in some of them a business of great magnitude. Piracy, also, had a large place in our colonial history, especially in the periods after the close of wars, when privateers and other fighting characters found it hard to settle down to peaceful ways. This volume, published under the auspices of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America, presents old-time documents, of all periods from 1638 to 1763, illustrating all aspects of both occupations, and all the legal processes involved in prize cases and in trials of pirates. Though the cases are all American, or concern Americans, the book has a wide range over all seas, and into all the regions where Captain Kidd and others operated. The archives of many states, admiralty courts, historical societies, and British institutions have been drawn upon for the materials."—Publisher's note

"The work contains a body of annotations which as a storehouse of reliable and illuminating information attains to high distinction. Dr. Jameson has taken his editorial functions with the utmost seriousness and in the face of difficulties that at times seem almost insurmountable has commented on sea-terms, ship names, sails, rigging, courses, and particularly place and personal names, some of which seem almost hopelessly obscure. The notes in this volume arouse our admiration for the editor's energy and persistence and profound respect for his learning, insight, and wisdom." C: M. Andrews

JAMESON, J: F., ed.—Continued
+ Am Hist R 29:564 Ap '24 650w

Am Pol Sci R 18:428 My '24 50w

"The book is copiously and effectively indexed. The documents have been excellently annotated. No less valuable is the introduction, pointing out the most important and most characteristic of the papers reproduced. All in all, the book seems very usefully put together, and should make available to a wider clientèle historical facts now first subjected to the immortality of print." Elbridge Colby
+ Lit R p576 Mr 8 '24 1000w

"It will be a pity if this book is left entirely to the historical specialist. No reader with a taste for the literature of adventure can afford to miss these records of the freebooters and their victims." E. B. Greene
+ Nation 118:562 My 14 '24 550w

Outlook 136:196 Ja 30 '24 60w

Reviewed by S. E. Morison
Yale R n s 14:196 O '24 220w

JAMESON, M. STORM. Pitiful wife. 336p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Constable]
24-866

The manor house of Trudesthorp on the Yorkshire moors is the scene of this rather violent story. Jael, the lovely and sensitive young daughter of the house, married Richmond Drew whose grandfather had carved the panels of the noble hall of Trudesthorp, where John Trude, Jael's father, was dragging out his last lingering days, a broken giant, victim of his appetites and brute passions. The marriage of Jael and Richmond was at first an ecstasy of soul and body, but their love was always tempestuous. For no apparent reason except spent nerves after the war, Richmond proved unfaithful to his wife, tho still loving her. Jael, in bitterness of soul, was compelled "to make her way, with her husband, out of the enchantment of romance to that compromise with the cruelty of life which can only come through pity."

Booklist 20:264 Ap '24

"We must take 'The Pitiful Wife' for what it is. It is a really fine novel. It is without reticence but it does not lack restraint. It does not ignore sex, but it is not a piece of pandering literature. Above all it contains much of truth and much of art. If Miss Jameson continues to expand as she has since 'The Clash,' she will go very far indeed. We hope to live twenty years longer if only to read the Storm Jameson novel of 1944." S. L. C.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 16 '24 900w

Cleveland p23 Mr '24

Dial 77:523 D '24 50w

"Although some of the details in Miss Jameson's latest novel reveal a tendency towards overelaboration, the main thread of the narrative is firm and soundly developed. This work compares favourably with that of any of her contemporaries among the younger women writers of England." L. B.
+ — Freeman 8:502 Ja 30 '24 150w

"The characterization is excellent; the weaving of lives together in their influences on each other is subtle but strong, as is the weaving of the characters into their background. It is a remarkable book, almost an unforgettable book." E. S. Taber
+ Int Bk R p480 My '24 360w

"One feels sorry that Storm Jameson, in this novel, irritates, wearies, and alienates the reader with her extravagant descriptions and exaggerations of character; for she has an interesting story to tell, she is ambitious and very much in earnest." Amy Wellington
+ — Lit R p607 Mr 22 '24 850w

Nation 118:404 Ap 4 '24 160w

"Clearly Storm Jameson's masterpiece."
+ New Repub 38:266 Ap 30 '24 100w

"'The Pitiful Wife' seems to me one of the most tiresome novels that I have ever had the misfortune to read." Raymond Mortimer
— New Statesman 21:621 S 8 '23 700w

"Although 'The Pitiful Wife' is hardly touched with any rays of lightness or humor, yet it does not fatigue the reader. One reads the book with a troubled fascination. It is in the best sense a powerful novel—one calculated to leave a definite impression in the mind of the reader."
+ N Y Times p14 Ja 13 '24 750w

"I am not sure but that 'The Pitiful Wife' would have been a better book without the long dialectic for a closing, but I am sure it is ungrateful of me to express a slight disappointment. She writes too well, and is too much of a delight to a reviewer accustomed to wade through 300 indifferent novels a season, for him to be piqued because the novelist insisted on writing down something very dear to her heart, and not at all touching to his. Miss Jameson gives promise of being a first rank novelist." Laurence Stallings
+ N Y World p10m Ja 6 '24 600w

St Louis p399 D '24

"Miss Storm Jameson, whose best phrases show that she is or might be, a poet, has taken a familiar plot and filled up her numerous pages with sheer nonsense, which has nothing to do with the plot or with anything else. 'The Pitiful Wife' is a silly book: silliness is its dominating characteristic." Gerald Gould
— Sat R 136:281 S 8 '23 470w

"This novel should sell for it is of the type which appeals to a large number of novel-readers. It is concerned with love and hatred, it is picturesque, violent, emotional and full of variety and movement. But for the more difficult reader, for the critic who is bothered by notions that the writing of novels is a great art, 'The Pitiful Wife' is not a first-rate novel. Its writer's chief fault is that she mistakes violence for strength and verbal poetry for human passion." M. Armstrong
— + Spec 131:358 S 15 '23 560w

"There is in this strong and often beautiful story the unity of conception for which we have been waiting; and the author now shows herself able to concentrate a natural exuberance of feeling upon her immediate subject, instead of allowing it to burst its channels and run at large over the country."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p571 Ag 30 '23 600w

Wis Lib Bul 20:68 Mr '24

JANSKY, CYRIL METHODIUS, and WOOD, HARRY PETERMAN. Elements of storage batteries. (Industrial education ser.) 240p il $2.50 McGraw
621.354 Storage batteries 24-112

"Elementary course, presenting chemical and electrical principles, but adapted to the use of the practical man who is concerned with maintenance, repair, and applications."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

"So far as the non-technical reader is concerned we can recommend this book. The descriptions are clear and the recapitulations given at the end of each chapter are very useful, as they help the reader to remember the facts."
+ Nature 113:853 Jl 14 '24 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:202 Ap '24

JEFFERY, JEFFERY E., pseud. (JEFFERY EARDLEY MARSTON). The burden. 274p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d L. Parsons]
24-18764

A few months after her marriage an automobile accident rendered Christine Carnes a helpless cripple. She met her misfortune bravely, helped at every turn by her young husband's unselfish devotion, but after a time his love proved unequal to the daily task of cheering a querulous and jealous invalid. His career began to suffer thru her demands upon his time and attention and unsatisfied forces in his nature refused to be kept under continual restraint. For a time he found solace in another woman. The book closes with a repentant return to faithfulness tho Alan Carnes knew, with the knowledge experience had given him, that the burden would again prove unsupportable and he would inevitably break faith with his wife again.

Boston Transcript p6 N 5 '24 320w

"An interesting and capably told story." S. M.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8b D 7 '24 290w

"Dramatic indeed is the tale which Mr. Jeffery tells in a simple manner. His story is never wordy, never slow. His dialogue is always explicit and always revelatory of the characters and the situations it desires to illustrate." Madelin Leof
+ Lit R p16 D 27 '24 220w

Nation and Ath 34:898 Mr 22 '24 280w

"The meritorious novels of any one season are exceedingly few. 'The Burden,' however, bids fair to be numbered among those of this season, if for no other reasons than for its classic design, its massive proportions, and its dignified embellishments. It is a splendid literary edifice that has been builded out of the durable materials that make life interesting and tolerable, and sometimes almost celestial." Francis Loretz
+ N Y Tribune p9 S 28 '24 1000w

"'The Burden' is written in the terms of frankness because it has to be. It is a courageous but not an audacious story. Our author leaves no impression on the reader's mind that he has written his book with special gusto because it is this kind of a book. His discussion as carried on by force of a fictional example is as earnest and as decorous and as free as that which he has represented as being carried on by his married lovers." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e S 14 '24 360w

"Alan and Christine are not presented as persons of any profound distinction; and yet Mr. Jeffery relates their rather ordinary dialogues with an almost paternal pride. For all his efforts he leaves the impression that Alan and Christine are really quite irritating prigs."
— + Sat R of Lit 1:170 O 4 '24 380w

"It is developed with some ingenuity, but the psychology is not very profound."
+ — Spec 132:510 Mr 29 '24 50w

"An interesting problem is stated, but not quite satisfactorily solved, because her character has been allowed to run shallow, and sympathy is unfairly diverted from her tragic position. Altogether a sombre book, with no 'glad' message for anybody, but with a distinct interest of its own."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 21 '24 500w

JEFFRIES, ZAY, and ARCHER, ROBERT S.
2 Science of metals. 460p il $5 McGraw
669 Metals 24-21542

"An able presentation of the principles underlying the study of the structure and properties of metals."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:605 D '24

JENSEN, JENS PETER. Problems of public finance. (Crowell's social science ser.) 606p $3 Crowell [10s 6d Harrap]
336 Finance 24-15658

The volume, intended primarily for use in elementary courses in public finance, assumes a general knowledge of economics. Part one discusses public expenditures, their classification, extent, determinants and effects. Part two, which takes up the larger part of the book, discusses public revenues and the various methods and forms of taxation. Part three is devoted to public credit and part four to fiscal administration. Each chapter has its bibliography and there is an index.

"The establishment of standards for measuring the efficiency of government is of vital importance, but unfortunately the problem is complicated by even more obstacles than those mentioned by the author in his well-guarded conclusion. The book also has an interesting chapter on the financing of state highways."
Am Pol Sci R 18:832 N '24 300w

"It is doubtful if a stronger tracing of public fiscal policies than that in Professor Jensen's 'Problems of Public Finance' has ever been written." F. P. H.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 14 '24 200w

Reviewed by H. W. Jordan
Ind 113:106 Ag 16 '24 200w
R of Rs 69:670 Je '24 90w
St Louis p371 N '24

JENSEN, JOHANNES VILHELM. Christopher Columbus; tr. by A. G. Chater. 253p $2.50 Knopf 24-6736

This is the third volume in the trilogy "The long journey" of which we have already had "Fire and Ice" and "The Cimbrians." In this volume Columbus represents the final incarnation of human longing—the great discoverer. Thru the story of the discovery of the new world is linked ancient to modern man.

Booklist 20:338 Je '24

"The conception is fine. The circular development suggested takes in all mankind. Had the execution corresponded to the conception, we should have had a new epic as great as, or even greater than those of Homer and Virgil and Dante. But Mr. Jensen's effort does not so correspond. And why not? Because he has let the preacher in him get the better of the artist." Edwin Bjorkman
— + Lit R p703 Ap 26 '24 1000w

"The tale of that voyage has been related many times. Mr. Jensen tells it vividly and sympathetically, so that we seem to see the towering figure of the bearded Admiral pacing the poop, while on the deck below the sailors scowled and argued and quarreled among themselves."
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 23 '24 900w
N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 50w

"Now and then, but very rarely, comes to the reviewer's desk a book so noble that he becomes aware all over again, in a luminous moment of delight and humility of the essential beauty and earnestness of life. . . Well, such a book is Johannes V. Jensen's 'Christopher Columbus.'"
+ N Y World p6e Ap 13 '24 340w
Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

JEPSON, SELWYN. Sutton papers. 273p $2 Dial press
24-21590

"Alleged Bolshevist activities in England form the undercurrent of this adventure story. B. J., the youthful hero of the yarn, suddenly discovers himself to be the son of the English agent for these nefarious doings. He forthwith sets about thwarting his father's criminal, if lucrative, pursuits. Exciting adventures result, both at home and in the North Sea, including the rescue of a young girl whose desire to become an agent of the Secret Service leads her to be caught in the net of the conspirators."—Lit R

Booklist 21:153 Ja '25
Lit R p11 S 27 '24 70w

"An entertaining story."
N Y Tribune p5 N 2 '24 180w

"Mr. Jepson has compounded nearly all available elements for an exciting detective story and made a good yarn, not original but readable."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:131 S 20 '24 100w
Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 230w

JERITZA, MARIA (BARONESS VON POPPER). Sunlight and song; a singer's life; tr. by F: H. Martens. 262p il $3 (12s 6d) Appleton

B or 92 Singers 24-9662

The story of her life as told by the prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company. She tells of her early life in Austria, her debut in the little town of Olmütz, her years at the Vienna opera and her career at the Metropolitan. There are chapters on How an opera singer really lives, Studying with Sembrich and Singing for the phonograph. The book is illustrated with photographs of the singer in her various rôles.

Bookm 59:608 Jl '24 100w
Cleveland p80 S '24

"Many famous prima donnas have written their memoirs. None of them has succeeded better than Maria Jeritza in mirroring stage life and giving vivid snapshots of famous men and women she came into contact with, including the last two of the Austrian Emperors and their entourage. Her pages are chatty in the most alluring sense of the word; they are characterized by a sincerity, a girlish frankness and disposition to bask in perpetual sunshine that are most refreshing. Ambitious girls reading 'Sunlight and Song' should be warned, however, that there is a shady side to stage life—unless they can be Jeritzas." H: T. Finck
+ Int Bk R p648 Ag '24 1700w
Outlook 137:283 Je 18 '24 150w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 29 '24 40w

JEROME, JEROME KLAPKA. Miscellany of sense and nonsense; selected by the author with many apologies. 374p il $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Arrowsmith]

827 Humor

"This book of selections brings together much of the cream from sixteen of his published works. 'Three Men in a Boat' leads the way with fourteen selections, the next most favored work being 'Paul Kelver' with ten extracts. 'Three Men on the Bummel' is represented by eight selections, while from the two volumes of 'Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow' there are eight more. From each of eleven other books there are from one to four. The forty-three illustrations from pen and ink drawings by Will Owen are well done and amusing."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:16 O '24

"Altogether, it makes delightful reading not entirely without substance."
+ Bookm 59:610 Jl '24 100w
N Y Times p25 Ap 27 '24 190w
Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

JESSE, FRYNIWID TENNYSON. Murder and its motives. 258p $2.75 Knopf [8s 6d Heinemann]

343 Murder 24-20680

"A study of famous murders and murderers, who are classified in six different types according to motive. The motives recognized and the murderers selected for description as exponents of each are (1) gain, William Palmer; (2) revenge, Constance Kent; (3) elimination, the De Quérangals; (4) jealousy, Mrs. Piercey; (5) lust of killing, Neil Cream; (6) conviction, Orsini. The individuals are described and their crimes retold in great detail in each case."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Ellis Roberts
New Statesman 23:677 S 20 '24 2400w

"Aside from my objections to Miss Jesse's choice of murderers and her unwillingness, as it is in the case of Mr. Pearson, to carry the story along as a mystery, the book is well written and at times recreates the atmosphere of Lambeth Road, London, of thirty years ago."
— + N Y World p9e N 23 '24 1350w
L: Weitzenkorn

"Miss Jesse's 'Murder and Its Motives' is the result of some little study, and is possibly (although I hope not) a pioneer in a new method of writing about murder. Give her a modest bit of information, and she floats easily away on the wings of something like psychoanalysis. Without desire to be flippant to the author of a meritorious book, nevertheless I often felt a desire to write flippancies on the margins near some of its paragraphs. But these are the very paragraphs which will be read with reverence by all who genuflect at the name of Sigmund Freud." E. L. Pearson
— + Sat R of Lit 1:180 O 11 '24 400w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p439 Jl 10 '24 40w

JOAD, CYRIL EDWIN MITCHINSON. Introduction to modern philosophy. (World's manuals) 112p il $1 Oxford [2s 6d Milford]

190 Philosophy, Modern

"A textbook designed to summarize recent philosophical developments briefly and lucidly for the benefit of the student and the general reader. It covers the fields of modern realism, pragmatism, and neo-idealism; it deals at some length with the doctrines of Bertrand Russell, Bergson, and William James; it endeavors to elucidate rather than to criticize."—Bookm

"On the whole, the book is written as simply and as clearly as its somewhat involved subject matter permits, and should fulfil excellently its purpose."
+ Bookm 60:233 O '24 120w

"Exceedingly helpful little book." E. A. Burtt
+ J Philos 21:669 N 20 '24 480w

"Mr. Joad's little book is as good as a short Manual of this sort can be." J. L. Benvenisti
+ Nation and Ath 35:518 Jl 19 '24 100w

"A book describing things as they are and not as they might have been or may be. Joad's 'Introduction to Modern Philosophy' is a veritable tour de force. It describes the most recent movements in metaphysics, with all their difficulties, in clear and concise form." Woodbridge Riley
+ Outlook 138:336 O 29 '24 820w

"It is no easy task to give a clear and intelligible account of contemporary philosophy in statements so short that they can be only epitomes and in untechnical language. Mr. Joad, in this admirable little manual, has accomplished the task with very notable success."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p451 Jl 17 '24 250w

JOHN, GWEN. The prince. (British drama league ser.) 125p $2 Appleton [3s 6d Blackwell]

822 Elizabeth, queen of England—Drama [24-14280]

The play, in eight scenes, is a character study of Queen Elizabeth, presented in a series of impressions, chiefly thru conversations of the queen with her ministers, and without reliance on dramatic events.

Cleveland p86 N '24

"If rich in promising material, it is much too disjointed to make a good play. There is no movement; no one scene grows logically or emotionally out of another: episode succeeds episode as though the piece had been written for a pageant, with the result that the preface giving a short analysis of Elizabeth's character as conceived by Miss John is far more interesting than the play." Bonamy Dobrée
— Nation and Ath 34:896 Mr 22 '24 110w

"A play which elicits respect only; that indefinable something which establishes a warmth between spectator and character, and which, for lack of a better term we call sympathy; not all its art can arouse." P. A. Hutchison
— N Y Times p6 Je 15 '24 1150w

Reviewed by R: Hughes
Spec 131:1046 Je 28 '24 350w

"The play is excellent reading, sincere, direct and refreshingly free of sentimentality."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:575 Ag '24 70w

JOHNSON, EDITH CHERRY. To women of the business world. 255p $2 Lippincott
396.5 Business. Woman—Employment
23-18091

The book consists of a series of intimate and friendly talks to business women about such practical matters as dress, manners, voice, personality and character, health and endurance, savings, self-improvement, etc.

"The style of the book is extremely informal and its information is presented in a predigested form. The work is thorough."
+ Lit R p544 F 23 '24 250w

JOHNSON, GLADYS ETTA. Moon country. 301p ^{2} il $2 Penn
24-18763

"It has 'thrills' enough to satisfy anyone. There is a hunt for buried treasure, a number of murders, with a background of ancient crimes, and an elaborately woven network of present complications for the hero and the girl to work their way through; an ingenious plot, built upon a good foundation. The uncanny, ghostly element is really creepy. And perhaps the best thing in the book is the author's feeling for her background which is no mere stage setting, but an integral part of the total. It is a bit of the California coast, just south of San Francisco."—Sat R of Lit

"The eerie glamour of the background is so admirably captured and turned to account that you accept with keen enjoyment and with reserve the whole mad assortment of more or less familiar creeps of which the tale is built."
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '24 260w

"A very neat, brisk, ingenious piece of mystification."
+ N Y Tribune p13 D 14 '24 580w

"The author's attractive manner, her possession of that indefinable but always easily recognized thing we call style, lift this above the level of a mere story of high adventure."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:363 D 6 '24 300w

JOHNSON, JOSEPH FRENCH. Organized business knowledge. 250p $2 Forbes
658 Business

"This volume is a presentation of the general principles underlying the modern business structure. It brings out at the very start that the hit-or-miss method employed so generally a few years ago, is superannuated: that in its stead we have definite, well-defined procedure. In it are contained the things that the executive, the layman and the professional man should know. The book hits at the very roots of business. It tells how to establish and maintain credit; when and where to advertise; how to obtain capital for expansion purposes; organization; financial and industrial management; marketing; transportation and many other fundmentals of modern business. The author goes further. The important problem of the personal element in industry is discussed not from the viewpoint of the psychologist, but from the business man's angle."—Boston Transcript

"Few writers upon business subjects are so adequately prepared to set down in readable and interesting form the facts and conclusions drawn from many years of business experience."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '24 200w
Ind 112:268 My 10 '24 20w

"Mr Johnson proceeds in a pleasant yet thoroughly educative manner to elucidate the principles he lays down, and he accomplishes his task so that the reader will rise from a digestion of this easy scientific explication a fuller and certainly a more ambitious individual."
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '24 460w
Outlook 136:323 F 20 '24 30w

JOHNSON, MARTIN ELMER. Camera trails in Africa. 342p il $4 Century
916.7 Africa, East—Description and travel. Hunting. Animals, Photographs and photography of 24-6909

"Mr. Johnson, who is known for his books and pictures about the South Seas, has now turned to Africa, especially British East Africa, for his material. It is his ambition to record by a camera the lives of the wild animals of that country. This narrative of his adventures is easy to read. He killed few animals, and took the pictures of many. There are two or three thrilling episodes and many excellent photographs."—Outlook

Booklist 20:335 Je '24

"Good reading, specially good because there is no boasting; no glorying in insensate killing; no killing for the sake of killing. For that reason alone the book should appeal to sportsmen."
+ Bookm 59:477 Je '24 200w

"The book is more than concerned with animals or landscape or personal adventures. It is an enchanting glimpse of a lovely country." S. F. Reavis
+ Int Bk R p527 Je '24 580w

Reviewed by H. J. Massingham
Nation and Ath 36:sup386 D 6 '24 220w

"There are some notable animal studies but the narrative, written in a chatty style, makes no impression on the reader. We are reminded too much of the usual film travel lecture, where the screen often shows good pictures to the accompaniment of indifferent conversation on the part of the lecturer."
— + New Statesman 24:sup7 O 11 '24 180w

"The writer so thoroughly dismisses the notion that Africa is dark and dank and infested with savage tribes and ferocious beasts and so ably pictures a new Elysium that the book invites the tourist rather than the daring, and it is difficult to believe that Africa, even now, has been so tamed."
+ N Y World p6e Mr 30 '24 130w

"If it is not particularly distinguished in style, it is simple and never dull."
+ Outlook 136:569 Ap 2 '24 180w

"Many of the best of the photographs that they took in Africa are reproduced in this book, and even without the accompaniment of text they would tell a vivacious story. But the record of the travel and adventure—sometimes personal risk—that went to make up this extended camera 'hunt' is well worth reading."
+ R of Rs 59:560 My '24 60w
Spec 133:786 N 22 '24 140w

"One need not be a naturalist to enjoy 'Camera Trails in Africa.' Human nature in this book divides honors with adventure."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 My 30 '24 360w
Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

JOHNSON, OWEN MCMAHON. Blue blood; a dramatic interlude. 247p $1.75 Little 24-11021

The old house of Majendie was in grave danger of bankruptcy, so the young daughter Rita was deliberately sacrificed in return for the millions of an old philanderer. After six years of suffering, his death left her free. While Rita was in Montana, her cool pride had yielded to the personality of Dan Haggerty. Back in New York she found her father had played in Wall Street against Dan with disastrous results. For the second time she saved the family name—this time by a bargain with Dan to come to him whenever he called if he would save her father. Time passed and she was not summoned. In despair at the suspense and humiliation, she arranged a meeting between Dan and another suitor to decide her choice for her. An unexpected pistol shot revealed to herself the real object of her love.

JOHNSON, O. M.—Continued

"Rita Kilbaine is one of the few real personalities who have found their way into books in recent days. She is genuinely interesting —intriguing even." D. L. M.
Boston Transcript p4 Mr 15 '24 1050w

"Because Owen Johnson wrote it, 'Blue Blood' will not escape general notice. Because it is the worst book Johnson ever wrote, that notice will detract from a reputation which his other books have successively enhanced." E. C. Adams
— Detroit News p15 Mr 16 '24 300w

"'Blue Blood' remains a well-performed stunt and a readable book, but it is the morgue of a hope for that searching, moving criticism of our own times which he might almost have written." J: W. Crawford
— + Int Bk R p477 My '24 600w

"The publishers predict that Owen Johnson's 'Blue Blood' will 'provoke as great a furor' as 'The Salamander.' Possibly so; it is cheap and silly enough to excite our vast audience of hello-girls and bellhops and middle-aged movie fans to wonder and applause." H. W. Boynton
— Lit R p687 Ap 19 '24 550w

"Compared with the exuberant verbiage of such a recent book as Cyril Hume's 'Wife of the Centaur' (a Yale plus literature plus romance affair) it is arid, yet it succeeds where the latter fails, simply for the reason that Mr. Johnson, who is a seasoned writer, knows that the secret of 'gripping' fiction is narrative, not description; action rather than emotion."
N Y Times p8 Mr 16 '24 1000w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 400w

JOHNSTON, SIR HARRY HAMILTON, and
2 GUEST, LESLIE HADEN, eds. World of today; the marvels of nature and the creations of man. 4v v 1-2 241:245-497p il ea $5 Putnam [16s; mor 20s Newnes]

910 Voyages and travels 24-15644

This latest series of Outline books, in four volumes, is given to travel in many lands. It shows the reader the natural beauties and treasures, the life and romance of the various nations of the earth, bringing out the essential points of interest in each. The series is richly illustrated with photographs, including 50 full-page plates in color.

"The undertaking gives ample promise of realizing to the full the aim of its originator, for it was 'to provide readers with just such information about things, places and people in the world as every intelligent person would like to have stored in his memory.' Ensure to 'The World of Today' the wide circulation it deserves, and the world understandings so much needed will be closer to us than they have been in the past."
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 27 '24 480w

"Accompanying the text is a truly wonderful gallery of pictures which contribute greatly to our knowledge of the life of the various peoples as well as the physical features of the lands in which they dwell."
+ R of Rs 70:671 D '24 210w

JOHNSTON, J. C. Book of the beloved; a modern epic poem. 474p $12 Dutton [£2 2s L. Humphries]

821

This poem is divided into three parts: Part one, The book of the garden; Part two, The book of images; Part three, The book of God. The book of the garden describes the soul in its relations with the world of sense; the Book of images, the soul in its relations with itself; the Book of God describes the soul in its relations with the Divine world.

"This book is different; it is large, all of a piece, finished and singularly free from vulgar errors; it is not even dull. Allowed to state its own conditions, The book of the Beloved can claim to be a masterpiece. But to my way of thinking at least these conditions are unacceptable." R. G.
+ — Spec 132:90 Ja 19 '24 320w

"The persistent zeal of the whole work is remarkable. The range of enterprise which the allusions and detail of the theme map out speaks strongly for the cultivated mind here working. It is the actual poetry which does not appear, to our taste, adequate. His vers libre is mainly but chopped prose. He is fairer to himself when he expresses his ideas in a regular kind of verse, which, if it leads to artificialities, reacts upon the player and sets him off in a directed melody."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p220 Ap 10 '24 600w

JOHNSTON, MARY. Slave ship. 330p $2 Little

24-27995

An historical novel of the eighteenth century slave trade. The hero, David Scott, was a young Jacobite whose activities in the Stuart cause had brought him into prison, from which he was later taken and sent in shackles to Virginia to be sold into slavery. After some years he made his escape and embarked on a slave trader which trafficked between the African slave coast and the colonies. His conscience revolted, but circumstances made him captain of the ship and kept him in the evil trade. The novel is not only a most graphic account of the horrors of the slave ship and the tragedy of human slavery, but a searching of a man's soul. The slave ship seemed a safe place for one who dared not show his face in Scotland or Virginia. But David Scott could not stifle the voice within him. Finally and dramatically his spiritual struggle was ended and he found peace for his soul.

Booklist 21:153 Ja '25

Reviewed by D. L. Mann
Boston Transcript p4 N 15 '24 2150w

"The story is full of interest, full of pictures of strange lands, and presents a vivid picture of the time with which it deals and of the attitude of the world towards the then worldwide custom of the buying and selling of men."
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12b N 30 '24 500w

"Miss Johnston has laid aside the annoying mannerisms that marred some of her recently preceding books and has reverted to a clean and lucid style. It may, perhaps, be safely called the best of her historical novels, espeially in its finish." H. L. Pangborn
+ Int Bk R p18 D '24 1000w

"Miss Johnston's quaint, often glowingly poetical, and generally effective style lends itself well to the obtaining of the proper atmospheric effects and to the telling of David Scott's inner and outer lives—two lives clearly differentiated in the story. The question of slavery is justly and sanely dealt with, and the author is never led into the temptingly sensational side of the brutal business. 'The Slave Ship' has the first and most essential quality of all novels in that it is a well-told story. Historically it rings true, and it is written in a spirit of commendable fairness. It should add in no inconsiderable degree to the fame of Miss Johnston in her chosen field of the historical novel." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p3 N 15 '24 500w

"Miss Johnston succeeds in synthesizing spiritual and actual adventure in a startlingly beautiful story."
+ N Y Times p8 N 16 '24 650w

"To me, at least, it is the most satisfactory of her books since the days when she wrote straight adventure stories as no one else now writes them. And 'The Slave Ship' is lovely, although it is not magical like its title." Emily Clark

+ N Y Tribune p4 D 7 '24 700w

"The burly, red-headed Highlander, Scott, is one of the most appealing figures that Miss Johnston has drawn. The reader never for a moment loses sight of him, and he grows in complexity and in pathos until he seems less a fictional adventurer than an archetype of humanity. . . The subjective agonies of Scott, torn between comfort and self-interest and his horror of the slave trade are so gripping and so acute that the reader is unwillingly involved." J. W. C.

+ N Y World p9e N 9 '24 600w

"As straight, forceful narrative, albeit with a little of the visionary, semi-supernatural element to which the writer inclines, 'The Slave Ship' is a fine piece of writing—and of feeling, too." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 138:602 D 10 '24 220w

JOINT COMMITTEE ON METHODS OF PREVENTING DELINQUENCY. Three problem children. 146p $1 The committee, 50 E. 42nd st., N. Y.

136.7 Child study. Juvenile delinquency 24-21914

Narratives, based on a careful study of case records of a child guidance clinic, of three difficult children whose cases presented problems of behavior, and the treatment given them. Two of the children were of normal development, the third was of inferior mentality and beginning a career of delinquency. In the case of the first two the treatment given them went far to straighten out their difficulties. The clinic makes use of physical, psychological, psychiatric and social examination and treatment, and the cases were followed for a number of years.

Reviewed by J. H. S. Bossard

Ann Am Acad 115:254 S '24 350w

"While the material in the Appendix is of special value to the expert social worker, the descriptions in the main body of the book will be of interest to school teachers and administrators everywhere. One particular value of the reports is that they give not only the diagnosis of the child's personal traits but also the complete record of the school and home treatment as well as the results of this treatment." G. T. Buswell

+ El School J 24:789 Je '24 600w

Ind 113:50 Jl 19 '24 300w

Nation 119:392 O 8 '24 280w

"Never before in published records have we had such careful, complete diagnostic studies carried over without break into an account of treatment equally detailed and specific. Record writing ought to profit tremendously from this pioneer attempt to analyze treatment step by step as consciously and deliberately as diagnosis." Jessie Taft

+ Survey 52:245 My 15 '24 600w

JONES, ELIOT. Principles of railway transportation. 607p $3.50 Macmillan

385 Railroads 24-14200

"The book is divided in six parts—an introduction and history, data on rates and rate making, state and federal legislation prior to the world war, discussion of major problems such as valuation securities, receivership, reorganization service and labor, the war experience, and lastly postwar developments. The volume is well indexed."—Bookm

"It is an exceedingly valuable contribution to the field of railway publications. The author has delved deeply into the rather vicarious history of the railroads of the country and has deduced theories which should be of great interest to the student of transportation and incidentally the bond salesman." J. G.

+ Bookm 59:adv Ag '24 100w

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 26 '24 750w

"The brief history of transportation prior to the railway period, followed by the evolution of the railway net, is an excellent piece of work, by far the best appearing in any text that has come to our attention. The text would have been improved had the author seen fit to include a brief sketch of railroad development in Europe, the British Isles, and Canada." T. L. Kibler

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p35 N 23 '24 410w

St Louis p403 D '24

"A thoughtful and independent-minded general survey."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 7 '24 280w

JONES, EMILY BEATRIX COURSOLLES (MRS F. L. LUCAS). Inigo Sandys. 246p $2 Holt [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

Inigo Sandys is a highly impressionable youth extremely sensitive to atmosphere and painfully conscious of any failure in his relations with those he cares for. The book shows three pictures of him in as many friendships: first, at Cambridge, with Charles, when he was not able to give as much to his friend as Charles gave to him; then with Jocelyn, whom he married and found incapable of love like his own; and lastly, with Henrietta, whose love was understanding and whose death left him desolate.

"This is not so good a novel as 'The Wedgewood Medallion,' yet reveals unquestionably her unique power." D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '24 1000w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 119:126 Jl 30 '24 160w

"The whole thing is well done, but the Cambridge scenes are particularly happy. Here the story is presented almost entirely by suggestion, with hardly an emphasis, only a flick of colour here and there—a word, a picture—just what is sufficient and no more than what is sufficient to set us in possession of the strange little drama that preludes so oddly the larger drama of the world outside." Forrest Reid

+ Nation and Ath 34:924 Mr 29 '24 500w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman 22:669 Mr 15 '24 1300w

"So keen and incisive is Miss Jones's prose, so startling in its sudden exploitations, so able to say a great deal within the compass of a single sentence, that the book must be described as a packed book. It is filled with revelatory matter and not a word seems wasted. Yet in spite of this cramming the volume may be read with the utmost ease."

+ N Y Times p9 My 4 '24 800w

"'Inigo Sandys' might have been written by Henry James; it was certainly inspired by him, with an assist by Dorothy Richardson, and thereby is placed at one remove further from the common experience. It is refined to the point of attenuation and subtle, but quite uncomplex; a subtlety achieved by the most drastic eliminations." Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p24 Je 1 '24 900w

"It is the drawback of Miss Jones's narrative method that one can never be sure of the connexion of anything with anything else. She usually begins in the middle, which on the face of it, is the wrong place to begin. And it makes continuous reading impossible; one has always to be explaining the top of the page by something which is not apparent till one gets to the bottom."

— Sat R 137:356 Ap 5 '24 700w

"Perhaps the best part of this intricate and fascinating book is the description of Inigo's life at Cambridge. Only to mention one point, Inigo's preoccupation with sincerity, in himself and others: how admirably Miss Jones depicts it, the self-examination, half humorous and half agonized, the desire to do everyone justice, even one's self. It is pleasant to think that the conscientiousness of the hero is reproduced in the craftsmanship of the book; among much that is minute, even microscopic,

JONES, E. B. C.—Continued
there is hardly a detail that is trivial." L. P. Hartley
+ Spec 132:509 Mr 29 '24 460w

"It is a moving book, of unquestioned sincerity."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p158 Mr 13 '24 420w

JONES, MARY EVELYN MONCKTON. Ancient Egypt from the records. 244p il $3 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]

932 Egypt—History, Ancient. Egypt—Antiquities
[24-25313]

"This story of Ancient Egypt was prepared in the attempt to meet the general desire of a wide public for a simple, readable tale of the 'Land of Egypt.'" (Preface) Beginning with the very first signs of life in the valley of the Nile, the author traces the history of Egypt thru the various dynasties, the Hyksos kings, the empire, to the collapse after the battle of Actium.

"A modest but interesting and dependable history of Egypt."
+ N Y Times p17 Ag 31 '24 720w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p323 My 22 '24 100w

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. Fundamental ^{2} ends of life. 144p $1.75 Macmillan

170 Life 24-23079

The substance of the six lectures in this volume were given at the Oberlin school of theology and at the Yale divinity school. In them the author tries to answer some of the deepest questionings: What does life mean? What do we most want in life? Why do we want it? He sums up the answers of Plato, of Christ and of Kant to these questions and gives a chapter to a study of the mystical experience.

"It is a constructive message in the time of destructive thinking."
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 20 '24 120w
N Y Times p11 N 2 '24 500w

"A real contribution to the philosophy of religion." J. S. Bixler
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 1550w

JONES, SHERIDAN R. Black bass and bass craft; the life habits of the two bass, and successful angling strategy. 205p il $3 Macmillan

799 Fishing. Black bass 24-11774

A bass enthusiast writes of this favorite American fresh water game-fish, of the characteristics of the different varieties, their habits and haunts, of lures, casting, playing from the reel and other fine points of bass-craft.

Booklist 21:13 O '24

"For the rod enthusiast 'Black Bass and Bass Craft' will prove good reading. If you want technical advice on rods and bait Mr. Jones will give it to you, and much good bass lore besides." T. R. Coward
+ Bookm 59:595 Jl '24 440w

"The book is well illustrated by drawings and photographs and will prove a delight to every fisherman."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 26 '24 120w
N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 90w
St Louis p411 D '24
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 1550w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p527 Ag 28 '24 200w

JOPE-SLADE, CHRISTINE. House of broken dreams. 309p $2 Doran [7s 6d Nisbet]
24-23286

Up to the time he was twenty-six Angus Reid had always had someone depending on his judgment and he had always met with success in his management of the dependents. But when he was made guardian of the four temperamental O'Ranes with their following of broken-down or unsuccessful friends he almost met with disaster. He put every atom of himself into the task and finally emerged with the blessings of all the O'Ranes and all but one of the friends, and lovely Fannie O'Rane for his bride.

"An elusive, haunting charm pervades the story, which is wholly delightful." E. A. H.
+ Lit R p10 N 1 '24 280w

"Sentimentality is the enemy in 'The House of Broken Dreams' whch is rather a disappointment after her last novel: the plot is absurd without any of the fun of absurdity."
— Sat R 137:542 My 24 '24 30w

"Written with a gay, delicate humour. The comedy is unforced and charming, the style delightfully easy, the characterization deft, the entire canvas pleasing with skilful contrasts of colour. There are moments of overcrowding, however, too many people are implicated in a trivial incident, and too many trivial incidents follow breathlessly in the wake of a single person, so that there are a number of minor climaxes which distract attention from the essential theme."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p284 My 8 '24 300w

JORDAN, ELIZABETH GARVER. Lady of Pentlands. 375p $2 Century
24-6456

"The heroine, Valerie Knight, brought up in companionship of a father who appreciated the flesh-pots, and purple and fine linen, found herself penniless at his death. The problem of a livelihood was solved when she accepted the marriage proposal of Bruce Gordon after brief acquaintance. It was a business arrangement, the girl to take charge of his small children and act as mistress of his palatial country home, 'Pentlands,' on a handsome allowance. From the hour of her arrival, Valerie divined a mystery at 'Pentlands' with its sealed wing and crooked passages. Gordon scoffed at the idea; but many of the servants demonstrated their conviction in an unseen presence by leaving after a brief stay; and Gordon's small daughter disappeared for short periods almost from under the eyes of the household. The child sullenly refused to account for her occasional absences. This is the outline of the mystery which had to run its accustomed course before that ingredient of the plot, as well as the romance, could mature."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 21:68 N '24

"Miss Jordan has devised an original situation, peopled it with well-characterized individuals and solved the difficulties with a pleasant admixture of sentiment. 'The Lady of Pentland's is pleasant reading and the type of light novel which is foreordained to large popularity." F. A. G.
+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 26 '24 360w
Detroit News p14 S 14 '24 210w

"Miss Jordan has expended much skill and verbal felicity upon a theme that is too artificial to be worth so much effort."
— + Lit R p729 My 3 '24 200w
N Y Times p25 Ap 13 '24 600w

"It is of course, light and naive but exhibits workmanship."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 350w
Wis Lib Bul 20:127 My '24

JOURDAIN, ELEANOR FRANCES. Drama in Europe in theory and practice. 179p $2.25 Holt [5s Methuen]

809.2 Drama—History and criticism
[24-27638]

A brief introductory study of European drama—both esthetic and stage technique—

from the ancient Greek and Roman drama thru the modern period. The special purpose of the book is to bring out the relation between dramatic theory and stage production. Bibliography. Index.

"She has chosen a most interesting subject, and, if she had taken a dozen, or half a dozen, plays and described in simple and comprehensible language how they were staged, then Miss Jourdain would have produced a serviceable and interesting book. But instead of such thoughtful work on the plays themselves she must have read through shelves of 'books about books,' filled her notebooks with extracts from them, and then translated her notebooks into a dialect which only needs to be less sophisticated to remind us of Mr. Jingle." L: Horrox

— + Nation and Ath 35:92 Ap 19 '24 900w

"Condensed but serviceable outline. The weak place of the book is the jejune last chapter on 'The Present Day.' "

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p254 Ap 24 '24 210w

JUNIOR SUB., pseud. See Beith, J: H.

K

KAEMPFFERT, WALDEMAR BERNHARD, ed. Popular history of American invention. 2v 577;457p il $10 Scribner

609 Inventions. Industrial arts 24-25794

Experts in the various fields of engineering and industrial arts have contributed the different chapters in this history of American invention prepared under the general editorship of the former editor of the Scientific American and the Popular Science Monthly. The first volume is given to developments in transportation, communication and power; the second to material resources and automatic labor-saving devices. There are over 500 illustrations.

"A work which has no predecessor of its kind and is not soon likely to encounter a rival. The new history is 'popular' in the best sense, with far more than merely 'outline' proportions. It will appeal to the man in the street, alike by the simple language in which the story is told and by the wealth of illustrations that reinforce the text." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 13 '24 1450w

"Never before in the history of the world and never elsewhere than in the United States has there been so rapid a development of industry through invention and so complete a transformation of living conditions by applied science. Consequently, there has never before been such a story to write and never before has it been so well written as in this 'Popular History of American Invention.' " E. E. Slosson

+ N Y Tribune p5 D 14 '24 1200w

Outlook 138:733 D 31 '24 100w

"The arrangement of the work is excellent. The difficulties of such an undertaking, the divisions of which were assigned to different authors, must be recognized. When these are taken into consideration, much praise remains for the general success of the work."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 12 '24 550w

KALLAS, AINO JULIA MARIA (KROHN) (MRS OSKAR PHILLIP KALLAS). White ship; Estonian tales; tr. from the Finnish by Alex Matson; with a foreword by John Galsworthy. 256p $2.50 [7s 6d J. Cape] Knopf [24-14168]

"Stories of the primitive peasants inhabiting the new republic of Esthonia. Mme. Kallas is the daughter of a distinguished Finnish scholar and wife of the Esthonian Minister in London. Such stories as 'Ingel,' 'The Smuggler,' 'The Death of Org,' 'Bernhard Riives' and the dialogue 'A Bathsheba of Saaremaa' are little short of masterly."— N Y Times

Booklist 21:68 N '24

Cleveland p84 N '24

Dial 78:75 Ja '25 150w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 119:194 Ag 20 '24 600w

"Mrs. Kallas tells the stories convincingly and well, with a keen perception of natural beauty and with a simplicity and restraint that tend to make one underestimate her power. It would be unfair to suggest that these stories are only a study in racial disability and inferiority; but one and all they are conditioned by slavery."

+ — Nation and Ath 35:120 Ap 26 '24 480w

"In some of the stories there is a great theme dominating the vivid life portraiture; but in all, the essential humanity of these strange people is conveyed to a remarkable degree. It is pleasant to be able to add that the translation is idiomatic and does not interfere with the artistic impression." E. R.

+ New Repub 39:252 Jl 23 '24 100w

"If a writer can present characters in a very different state of civilization from our own in such a way that we make their sorrows and delights our own, the effect is particularly poignant. This authoress does not seem to me to have succeeded in doing this, but I can recognize that these tales are written with passion and translated with taste." Raymond Mortimer

— + New Statesman 22:734 Mr 29 '24 150w

"Mme. Kallas is first an intelligent, gifted human being, second a skillful narrator and third an artist. The special pleader is nowhere evident. 'The White Ship' is not only a clear, hard but profoundly stirring, record of an obscure corner of Europe, but also a comprehensive and noteworthy achievement in the exploration and evaluation of truth."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 27 '24 650w

"These brief sketches and tales have the poignancy of folk-stories, and no one who reads them is likely to forget them."

+ Sat R Mr 15 '24 80w

"Madame Kallas can give to her stories a legendary vagueness, and remoteness which can truly be called dreamlike, without ever departing from grim truth: and that is genius."

+ Sat R 137:356 Ap 5 '24 340w

Spec 133:605 Ap 12 '24 130w

"The writer has an extraordinary sense of atmosphere. And the strangeness of her scenes contributes to make upon the mind of the reader an impression of novelty and originality. . . With these virtues there is, it must be admitted, a certain lack of dramatic interest about some of the tales, which find too obviously sermons in stones."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p159 Mr 13 '24 470w

KALLEN, HORACE MEYER. Culture and democracy in the United States; studies in the group psychology of the American peoples. 347p $3 Boni & Liveright

917.3 United States—Civilization. National characteristics, American. Americanization 24-7528

The book is a study in the psychology of the American peoples, a series of reflections on the nature of culture and democracy and of their bearing on each other in the United States. All but one of the papers which compose the book have been printed elsewhere. The first deals with the passions and prejudices which are the source of the Ku Klux klan, another discusses the meaning of Americanism, and the third shows the failure of the melting pot. The longest paper is concerned with Americanization and the cultural future. The outcome of these various forces at work in America which seems desirable to Mr Kallen is described by him as a "cultural pluralism."

Booklist 21:21 O '24

KALLEN, H. M.—Continued

"The book is remarkably free of academic tedium and propagandist rhetoric. Its contention, moreover, deserves serious thought and approbation."

+ — Bookm 59:611 Jl '24 140w

Cleveland p53 Jl '24

Reviewed by Bertrand Russell

Dial 77:158 Ag '24 1100w

"They seem to be the result of the rather restless cogitation of a man ill at ease in the community by which he is environed. As he is not an American by birth, Mr. Kallen is a little lacking in that native sympathy which makes it easy for native Americans to understand one another." Brander Matthews

— Int Bk R p641 Ag '24 2100w

Reviewed by Ernest Gruening

Lit R p804 Je 7 '24 800w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko

Nation 119:146 Ag 6 '24 1000w

Reviewed by A. E. Zimmern

Nation and Ath 35:207 My 17 '24 850w

"Negatively and in detail I see eye to eye with Dr. Kallen, and I might exhaust my fairly considerable vocabulary of eulogy in praise of his learning and logic without quite surrendering to him all the way. I may as well say now as later that, though we start from the same point and share compartments through much of the journey we shall not arrive at the same destination." M. E. Ravage

+ — New Repub 39:334 Ag 13 '24 1050w

"The thirty Jeremiahs who looked upon America two years ago and found it unlovely joyed in their intellectual muckraking. Professor Kallen also finds the United States unlovely. But he has taken the pains to dissect the creature rather than simply to stick pins in it, and he believes it has a future. His dissection is in many instances penetrating. . . His book states forcibly, clearly and reasonably an interpretation of America's future which is, as he frankly points out, a challenge to the old American traditions." N: Roosevelt

± — N Y Times p3 Ap 20 '24 1700w

"His papers may be described as a well-reasoned and, barring certain verbal intricacies, well-formulated brief for the non-Nordic side. His arraignment of certain hysterical and wholly inadvisable phenomena connected with the post-war Americanization movement is trenchant and must be welcomed as an antidote to some of the twaddle produced on the other side of this controversy. On the other hand, it cannot be denied that he is a partisan himself, and that his arguments frequently, though not always, fail to count with all the aspects of the racial struggle involved."

+ — Outlook 137:70 My 14 '24 150w

St Louis p416 D '24

"Here is an author as far from blandiloquence as from reproachful peevishness; an author who refuses both to pretend that the task is lighter than it is, and to deny (with Mr Mencken) that it can be performed. American youth has had enough of optimism, but it has also had enough of nihilism—and Dr Kallen preaches neither the one nor the other. In the present volume he outlines a judgment of our life and a program for the future which in large part we can take as he presents it." Newton Arvin

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 1250w

KAMMERER, PAUL P. R. Inheritance of acquired characteristics; tr. by A. Paul Maerker-Branden. 414p il $4.50 Boni & Liveright

575.1 Heredity. Eugenics 24-23667

"There are at present two schools among experimental biologists. One group, including most of the workers, believes that acquired characters are not inherited. A few biologists maintain that there is evidence that, in some cases at least, characters acquired by an organism during its life are transmitted to its offspring. Dr Paul Kammerer of the University of Vienna is the most conspicuous spokesman for the few, and in his new book he has gathered together the results of much experimental observation on the subject. . . The last part of the volume is devoted to eugenics. Here Dr Kammerer attempts to apply the theory of acquired characters to all sorts of racial questions."—Springf'd Republican

"The book is written more for 'the laity' than for biologists, but it is a question whether readers from the one or the other group will be the most irritated by its style and contents. The biologist finds little and only inadequate new evidence for this type of inheritance, and the layman will find the argument notably incomplete and regrettably involved in controversy concerning the author's earlier investigations and writings." Oscar Riddle

— New Repub 41:50 D 3 '24 680w

"In his book Kammerer is commendably assiduous in presenting the views of his opponents, especially those that are based on non-statistical grounds. He attempts to answer his critics, of course, but he is clearly deficient in ability to weigh evidence, and so his defense is scarcely less weak than his general conclusions." H. M. Parshley

— + N Y Tribune p4 N 16 '24 1400w

"This book is a curious combination of opposites. It honestly aims, if not at completeness, at least at an all-round treatment—and yet shows the most unwarranted omissions: it contains chapters so fair-minded to opponents as to be disarming—and others which are nothing but propaganda: a scientific treatise, written by a professional scientist, it yet reveals every now and again an apparent incapacity to understand, or at least to apply, the most elementary biology." J. S. Huxley

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:377 D 13 '24 1800w

"The chief criticism of the entire work is the ever recurring appeal to the laity for judgment. The laity is not competent to pass judgment on such a question as the one under discussion, and the present appeal will be more likely to hinder than hasten the complete acceptance of the hypothesis of the inheritance of acquired characters." E. A. C.

— Springf'd Republican p6 S 29 '24 900w

KAMMERER, PAUL P. R. Rejuvenation and the prolongation of human efficiency; with an introd. by Harry Benjamin. 252p il $2 Boni & Liveright

612.4 Rejuvenation. Steinach, Eugen 23-18308

A popular explanation of the present state of rejuvenation possibilities, based upon experiences with the Steinach operation on man and animals. Dr Kammerer has been a collaborator with Steinach in the way of presenting and popularizing his findings. He explains the theory on which the operation rests, describes the experiments made on animals and men, enumerates the beneficial results of the operation and answers the objections which have been raised against it. A clinical supplement gives reports of some cases which have been successfully treated.

"Lucid, simple and direct, and profoundly interesting to even the merely curious. Will receive the most critical attention, for he is the associate of Dr. Steinach, and has given the matter almost as many years of study and practise." Gertrude Atherton

+ Int Bk R p204 F '24 1250w

"It is full of phrases that startle and hurt both the man of science and the grammarian, and about it there is far too much that savours of advertisement. The subject is a most fascinating one, for throughout the ages man has yearned for immortality and has ever schemed to achieve it. A most excellent popular book could be written about it: in our opinion, it still remains to be written." F. A. E. Crew

— Nature 114:530 O 11 '24 800w

"Dr. Kammerer is no sensationalist, but his book cannot fail to strike the attention of those who would like to steer clear of physiological and psychological senility as long as possible."
N Y Tribune p18 Ja 13 '24 300w

"Neither theory nor practice justifies the confident presentation of this volume, and Dr. Paul Kammerer, is more likely to encourage those who doubt them than to gratify their advocates by this publication."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p491 Ag 7 '24 200w

"Probably the best book on this subject. Authoritative and not sensational."
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

KAUFMAN, GEORGE S., and CONNELLY, MARCUS COOK. Beggar on horseback; a play in two parts. 237p $2 Boni & Liveright
812 24-16612

This comedy, successfully run in New York, is a satire on big business and on the life of the rich, soulless American family. Neil is a poor young artist who while working on a symphony has to eke out a living by making cheap orchestrations. Believing it to be the only way for him to gain leisure for his music, Cynthia, who loves him, urges him to marry Gladys, jazz-loving but rich. In despair he calls up, proposes and is accepted. While waiting for her he falls asleep and dreams. He is married to the girl, her money and her prattling family. In his desperation he kills them all—with a paper-cutter. At this point the audience receives copies of the "Morning-Evening," a travesty on a certain contemporary daily, wherein is printed a full account of the murder even before Neil has quite finished. Neil is given a life sentence in his father-in-law's art factory, but he prefers suicide to synthetic art. Awakening, he finds Cynthia near, manages to break his former engagement, and he and Cynthia are free to follow their creative bent.

Booklist 21:16 O '24
Cleveland p86 N '24

"In 'Beggar on Horseback' those two playboys of the western stage, Messrs. George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, have cast discretion to the winds and indulged in such a fantasia of quips and cranks and wanton wiles that their audience are left gasping with amazement and laughter. As it gambols along a good part of the disabilities and the hokum of what is called civilized life comes within the scope of its galloping burlesque." Harold Kellock
+ Freeman 7:617 Mr 5 '24 1000w

"It is an entertaining book from the first page to the last."
+ Lit R p969 Ag 16 '24 120w

"Extraordinarily inclusive and biting satire." Ludwig Lewisohn
+ Nation 118:238 F 27 '24 750w

"What would make Beggar on Horseback, agreeable as it is all through, into a play of importance, would be a continuation of the exact comment on life, and especially on middle-class American life, that appears in the first act. Beggar on Horseback starts sharply toward something. It does not arrive at this something, though the promise is there often enough, and in the first act almost always." Stark Young
+ New Repub 38:45 Mr 5 '24 900w
St Louis p411 D '24

"Perhaps, the most searching bit of stage satire yet produced in America—a satire couched in fantastic humor; a drama play rooted in truth, yet never once swerving to the bitter or sardonic." Dorothy Grafly
+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 20 '24 520w
Wis Lib Bul 20:211 O '24

KAUN, ALEXANDER SAMUEL. Leonid Andreyev; a critical study. 361p $3.50 Huebsch
B or 92 Andreieff, Leonid Nikolaevich
24-11348

This treatise was originally presented as a doctoral thesis at the University of California. It is a painstaking study of Andreyev's life and art. The first and shorter part is devoted to his life and personality; the second part to a study of the motives and background of his work. There are numerous bibliographies, including lists of translations in seven languages.

"A good thesis doesn't always make a good book. Indeed, their purposes are quite diverse, and often inimical to each other. For example, Alexander Kaun's critique, 'Leonid Andreyev' is ineffective as a book at precisely the points where it is strong as a doctor's dissertation; it is copiously annotated in several languages, minutely indexed, and carried off with the profound pedestrianism of the modern literary specialist. Mr. Kaun—and this is our quarrel with him—has not emended his book sufficiently for general circulation."
— Bookm 59:609 Jl '24 140w

"It is not a book which will ever be popular. It is not a book which reveals great scholarship. . . It represents hard labor. If the public are to look upon it with interest the book might well be cut into halves." D. F. G.
— + Boston Transcript p3 My 24 '24 500w

"Written in its present form the book tends to lose interest, while in a work whose chief merit must obviously lie in its erudition it is disconcerting to come upon words such as soulful and colorful, words which one is accustomed to associate with less distinguished writing. And yet out of these long laborious conscientious chapters 'certain leanings of Andreyev's wavering unity-lacking mind' are eventually made clear, certain epochs of his physical life made plain." Llewelyn Powys
— + New Repub 40:102 S 24 '24 1200w
Outlook 138:650 D 17 '24 250w
St Louis p386 N '24

"We regret that Mr. Kaun in his very able book forgot, in his study of Andreieff the writer, Andreieff the man, and did not differentiate between them as those who knew him well have always done." Princess Radziwill
— + Sat R of Lit 1:164 O 4 '24 560w
Wis Lib Bul 20:212 O '24

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA. Isle of thorns. 288p $2 Dutton
24-17836

First published in England in 1913, this early novel of Sheila Kaye-Smith is new to most American readers. The heroine, Sally Odiarne, belongs to the unquiet sex of a decade ago. A would-be novelist, not yet successful or self-supporting, she rebelled against the conventions and restraints of life and took to the open road, joining a travelling show for protection. The story has to do with her relations with two men, one of them connected with the show, who answered to her desire for freedom and adventure, the second a man of great refinement and intelligence to whom the other side of her nature responded and whom she in turn taught to be more natural and less of a prig. Between these two men she vacillated till in a moment of rage against her vagabond lover she stabbed him. Suspicion for the crime attached to another and the story closes on a note of moral struggle, with Sally's gentleman lover helping her to summon courage to confess her guilt.

Cleveland p66 S '24

"It is a long progress from such a story as this to the sure poise and maturity of 'Joanna Godden' and 'The End of the House of Alard,' which definitely put their author in the front rank of contemporary British novelists. While by no means her first book, this is emphatically a youthful production. Its chief defect is that some of the plot strains credulity too much. Some of the heroics of it are just a bit 'staged,' though they remain theatrically effective." Harvey Parrish
+ — Lit R p867 Jl 5 '24 400w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 39:307 Ag 6 '24 80w

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA—Continued

"It is as true and fresh a bit of observation as it was the day it was written; for all that it is neither a very profound, serious or significant work. It reminds one that, while manners change, human nature does not alter; that the most abiding quality of good fiction must still rest in the portrayals of character."

— + N Y Times p9 Jl 6 '24 700w

"Its merits are largely embryonic; in its composition the author's reach exceeded her grasp considerably, but she made a valiant effort." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p23 Je 29 '24 1050w

"The novel will interest especially those who care to observe the growth and development of the sex-novel within the decade."

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 30w

Sat R of Lit 1:34 Ag 9 '24 110w

"There is a youthful hankering for melodrama. Yet, in spite of the stage properties and beneath the spread of emotional analysis, exist the revelation of character as accurate as Joanna Godden's and as good to read about."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 13 '24 250w

KEABLE, ROBERT. Recompense. 406p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Constable]

24-7674

"In Recompense Mr. Robert Keable picks up again the threads of 'Simon called Peter,' and writes another chapter in the lives of Peter Graham, the rebelling Army chaplain, and Julie Gamelyn, the nursing-sister. Throughout the new story Peter and Julie pursue their roads apart, though at certain crucial points the paths cross. For Peter the road goes by hard fighting as a private in the last battles of the war to a grim testing in South Africa, where he works as aid to a pair of very rough customers at a trading store high on the Berg in Basutoland. When Peter, after being wounded by a marauder on the heights, is carried down by his friends and Julie in an agonizing march to the distant hospital in Maritzburg, the end of his Via dolorosa is a reborn vocation, and we take leave of him in a Carthusian house. Julie's destiny is somehow less engrossing. She becomes matron of a maternity home where audacious sexual and eugenic theories are followed, and where she finds in the surgeon, Maurice Sampson, a lover untormented by the thirst for a Divine life that robbed her of Simon called Peter."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Questions will be rife about this new book, 'Recompense.' This is absolutely inevitable. If 'Simon Called Peter' stirred up a hornet's nest of discussion, 'Recompense' can certainly do no less. Viewing the book as a whole, viewing it in the light of all we know about the two people it most concerns, we are struck with the conviction that Mr. Keable has been absolutely logical. . . . 'Recompense' is a penetrating study of very delicate psychological problems." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 2 '24 1100w

"If we can shed our irritation at Keable's conviction that the events in the lives of Julie and Peter, as set forth in 'Recompense,' are inevitable, there is to be found in the book something to enjoy. If to the reader 'the play's the thing' and the only thing, he will not find that something; but to some the setting has value, and even the most carping critic cannot deny the beauty and power of Keable's setting."

+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 13 '24 350w

"The construction of the book, with its two contrasting themes and two leading characters, whose paths lie so very far apart, is necessarily somewhat loose, tho on the whole Mr. Keable has managed it well. What kind of reception the book will have, it is quite impossible to predict. Religion and eugenics are both of them difficult and dangerous subjects to handle, so that whatever else one may think of 'Recompense,' it can not be regarded as a novel showing, on its author's part, any lack of courage." L. M. Field

Int Bk R p382 Ap '24 1200w

"One always finds him a picturesque story teller. He has the knack of fascination, of making the struggles and the heart-aches of life personal—and, indeed, absorbingly entertaining."

+ Lit R p958 Ag 9 '24 260w

"The book is frank, and it seems quite probable that it will occasion a good deal of disagreement."

N Y Times p8 Ap 6 '24 1000w

"When Keable deals with South Africa, works with the character of Julie, and constructs an eugenist's Utopia, he is at his best. There is a fire of moral enthusiasm in the man not easily to be blinked; and a quality of constructive social criticism as well. On the other hand, when Peter is on the boards, either because of Peter himself, or because of the way in which he is treated, attention lags." Kenneth Fuessle

+ — N Y Tribune p26 Ap 20 '24 850w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 650w

"The author may have had a 'sincere' intention of giving reality and meaning; but the product is none the less claptrap." H. W. Boynton

— Outlook 137:32 My 7 '24 300w

Spec 132:510 Mr 29 '24 70w

"It is evident from the prefatory note to the new book that Mr. Keable still smarts from some of the censures passed on the old one; but he has met his critics in the best possible way by lifting his second volume to an unmistakably higher level of thought and style."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 21 '24 700w

KEEN, FRANK NOEL. Towards international justice; with an introd. by Professor Gilbert Murray. 249p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Allen & U.]

341.1 League of nations [23-17643]

A collection of ten essays and papers dealing with international law and the League of Nations, written at intervals since 1915. The author was active, in the early days of the war, in working out a plan for permanent peace and since then has supported the League of nations.

Am Pol Sci R 18:428 My '24 30w

Booklist 20:283 My '24

Cleveland p55 Jl '24

"I would not for a moment pretend to say that to write a poor book is a criminal offence. But Mr. Keen should not have done it. The general public will certainly not read his book, and even the friends of internationalism will find little in it to repay their perusal." Hamilton Holt

— Lit R p608 Mr 22 '24 680w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson

N Y Times p11 Ap 27 '24 1800w

Wis Lib Bul 20:65 Mr '24

KEITH, ARTHUR BERRIEDALE. Sanskrit drama; in its origin, development, theory and practice. 406p $7 Oxford [21s Milford]

891.2 Sanskrit drama [24-24835]

"Although the existence of the Sanskrit drama was made known to Europe by an Englishman so long ago as 1789, it has been left to Professor Berriedale Keith to produce the first really weighty treatise in English on the subject. The acknowledged authority and the only comprehensive work was Professor Sylvain Lévi's 'Théâtre Indien.' To this work Professor Keith acknowledges his indebtedness; his excuse for his book (if excuse be the right word, for surely none is needed) is that the more recent discoveries of the fragments of Açvaghosa and of the plays of Bhasa have somewhat dulled the brightness of Professor

Lévi's work and have furnished the opportunity for treating the subject afresh."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Mr. Keith's work is scholarly and stimulates the reader's confidence in the author and his investigations. Voluminous footnotes give comprehensive references to a most complete bibliography of related works, while information in this volume is readily accessible by means of two indices, one in English, the other in Sanskrit terms. If intelligently read, the volume will give pleasure to anyone who has heretofore been ignorant of the classical Indian drama. For students in that field it has every right to rank as authoritative." R. B. M.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 19 '24 450w

"Professor Keith is meticulous in laying the evidence before us. His virtue is scholarly accuracy, not literary sensitiveness." G. B. M.
+ Lit R p985 Ag 23 '24 170w

"We are under a double obligation to Professor Keith, since he has given us a work that is likely to be the last word for some time to come, and has also removed the reproach that English scholars have neglected the masterpieces of Indian literature."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p474 Jl 31 '24 1500w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Catty Atkins, bandmaster. 263p il $1.75 Harper
24-18904

Catty Atkins and Wee Wee Moore once more get into difficulties together—and get out of them. There was a prize offered for the best brass band in the state and Catty was determined to win it. But there was Torrey Withey with his millionaire father to back him, and just as determined as Catty to win. With his job lot of band instruments and uniforms bought at an auction and an elderly Norwegian to train his job lot of boy friends Catty set to work. They had all kinds of trouble, from town ordinances to thieves, but they won the prize.

"The book is a joyous medley that will be enjoyed by grown-ups as well as by the youngsters for whom it is intended." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 110w

"His adventures and machinations are cleverly conceived and the youthful readers who have followed his experiences with zest in the past will find that he has lost nothing in this new chronicle of the resourcefulness and daring that delighted them in earlier volumes."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:52 Ag 16 '24 120w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Steadfast heart. 359p $2 Harper
24-2075

From a childhood spent amid poverty and degeneracy, surrounded by terror and violence, Angus Burke is forced into one situation after another, difficult enough to test the courage of any man. But a strong sense of loyalty and devotion to duty enable him to respond to the help offered him, live down a crime committed unknowingly, overcome small-town prejudice and persecution, and rise, in the end, to a position of trust in the very community that has pilloried him. Eventually he overcomes all difficulties and wins the girl he loves.

Booklist 20:300 My '24
Boston Transcript p6 Ja 30 '24 420w

"In the concoction of his latest fictional dish, Clarence Budington Kelland has used a standard recipe and has been content mechanically to follow the uninspired directions of his formula. The result is about as tasty as the quantitatively produced fare of the chain quick-lunch—and even less nourishing."
— Int Bk R p614 Jl '24 300w

"The book has no sound merit of style or substance. But it 'fills the bill.' "
— + Lit R p565 Mr 1 '24 170w

"A sentimental, innocuous little story, so thoroughly conventional that one reads it with a haunting conviction of having done so many times before."
— N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '24 500w

"Mr. Kelland's story is as impossible as a Presidential Hi Johnson. It is as full of blowholes as the case for Prohibition. Nevertheless, it has that appeal of the magic rise from poverty and degradation to riches and place of power which never fails to find readers somewhere." E. W. Osborn
— + N Y World p7e Ja 20 '24 300w

"The story is of small artistic merit but is well told and entertaining."
— + Springf'd Republican p7a F 24 '24 400w
Wis Lib Bul 20:126 My '24

KELLERMANN, BERNARD. The sea: tr. from the German by Sasha Best. 281p $2 McBride
24-5829

It is the voracious, lusty, relentless sea of a storm-swept coast which is here with masterly skill made articulate. The stranger, dwelling for a season among Breton fishermen on a lonely island so identifies himself with their life that he seems to absorb the spirit of the sea thru his very pores. This starkly primitive existence is in constant swing between terrific struggle and danger and gross appetites and satisfactions. "We had all that our hearts desired. We had women in plenty, we had enough to drink, we had storms that swept by at the rate of eighty miles an hour." It is less a story than the booming echo of the sea at once exciting and fatiguing.

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield
Bookm 59:235 Ap '24 440w

Reviewed by E. M. Corby
Int Bk R p400 Ap '24 180w

"Every adjective known to English is commandeered to describe the sea as it lashes the coast and swallows up the humble. The story is strong, though it lacks strength." A. W. Porterfield
— + Lit R p908 Jl 19 '24 470w

" 'The Sea' in point of action is entirely uninteresting and commonplace. The prose itself, as it has been translated by Sasha Best, exhibits a certain nervous strength."
— + N Y Times p22 F 10 '24 500w

"The book is well worth while." J. G.
+ N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 360w

KELLEY, ETHEL MAY. Wings. 214p $2 Knopf
24-21403

This book is written backwards. In the first section, Epilogue, is given the story of the love of Priscilla Anne Prendergast, nineteen-year-old flapper, for Paul Hutchinson, thirty-five, a poet and editor of a highbrow magazine. In book two, called The end, is told the story of Hutchinson's infatuation years earlier, for a charming married woman. In book three, The beginning, Hutchinson's first considerable love affair comes to light. By the device of having the women meet one another the author links up the story and makes it complete.

" 'Wings' is a worthy successor to 'Heart's Blood.' It has the same beautiful and terrible intensity about it and the same shuddering truthfulness. It has not so perfect a unity as the earlier novel but, on the other hand, its form is arresting." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 17 '24 950w
Cleveland p91 D '24

"It is to be regretted that Miss Kelley has not fully taken advantage of the opportunities which her theme affords. Her style, for one thing, is an irregular, staccato style that becomes highly irritating; her psychology (so far as it concerns her male character) impresses one as slightly off gear, for Hutchinson's thoughts are more petty and have less range and sweep than one could believe possible in a great poet. But in depicting her women characters the author writes with greater skill and a surer insight." S. A. C.

KELLEY, ETHEL MAY—Continued
+ — Int Bk R p902 N '24 500w

"Miss Kelley writes understandingly, sympathetically, and tolerantly of her people; she has done in 'Wings' what seems to me an unusually fine novel." H. B.
+ Lit R p9 S 13 '24 180w
New Repub 40:54 S 10 '24 80w

"Aside from an occasional false note in detail, her touch is sure and impressive. She has humor, a sense for irony and a clear understanding of her egotist."
+ — N Y Times p9 S 7 '24 680w

"As a love poem in prose 'Wings' is vividly convincing. Its passion comes through cleanly and beautifully. Its emotional scenes are flawless. As a novel, it lives for me in only one dimension, though it is there furiously alive. When Paul Jasper Hutchinson made love he became a man and his loves became women. Otherwise he was wood and they were words." E. N. Sachs
+ — N Y Tribune p5 O 12 '24 350w

"'Wings' is vividly and compellingly alive, justifying and fulfilling the high promise of 'Heart's Blood.' Miss Kelley writes with pity and wisdom and with intellectual sensitiveness. Her style is crystalline and the form of her narrative has likewise the delicacy, precision and inevitability of a crystal, a dark crystal with fire at the heart." Muna Lee
+ N Y World p9e N 23 '24 510w
Reviewed by M. F. Weeks
Sat R of Lit 1:243 N 1 '24 700w

KELLOGG, ROYAL SHAW. Pulpwood and wood pulp in North America. 273p il $4 McGraw 676 Wood-pulp. Paper making and trade 23-17848

"Deals only briefly with the processes of pulp manufacture but deals quite fully with the pulp-wood industry, statistics of production and use, and the methods and possibilities of forestry. A valuable feature is the chapter on 'Properties of American pulpwood,' arranged by species and giving the range of distribution, the kind of pulp produced, yield, character, and possible uses."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:198 Ap '24

KELLOGG, VERNON LYMAN. Evolution. 291p $1.75 Appleton
575 Evolution 24-15077

Vernon Kellogg here gives an untechnical and readable explanation of evolution—what it is, its fundamental factors, its growth and triumph—which embodies the study of plants, animals, man, and mind. It is written for those who are seeking an exact and authentic knowledge of this subject.

Booklist 21:98 D '24
Boston Transcript p4 Jl 26 '24 500w

"Dr. Kellogg has turned out a book of great value to those who are interested in evolution and who have not the time to devote to the longer and more complicated works on the subject. Its simplicity and brevity commend it." V. B. Thorne
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 13 '24 2150w
Reviewed by A. G. Ingalls
Outlook 138:26 S 3 '24 340w
Wis Lib Bul 20:209 O '24

KELLOGG, VERNON LYMAN. Mind and heredity. 108p $1.50 Princeton univ. press
136 Intellect. Heredity. Psychology, Comparative. Mental tests 23-27463

In this volume the author considers various kinds of minds and degrees of mental capacity and examines popular conceptions of human intelligence in the light of the most recent discoveries in psychology and biology.

Am J of Public Health 14:711 Ag '24 270w

"The first three or four chapters constitute the best brief popular introduction to the problems of Comparative Psychology known to the reviewer, and later chapters give an almost equally excellent account of the scope and limitations of mental testing." E. C. S.
Am J Psychol 35:285 Ap '24 100w
Booklist 20:197 Mr '24
Boston Transcript p7 F 2 '24 70w
Cath World 119:573 Jl '24 80w

"The book is a very clear, simple, and readable series of public lectures on these vital social questions." T: M. Thompson
+ Educ R 67:236 Ap '24 400w

"The book as a whole is recommended as the best to date for the intelligent reader who, lacking the opportunity for mastering biological details, must content himself with a reliable statement of results and generalizations."
+ Lit R p782 My 24 '24 360w

"Among all the scientific workers who try to write for or talk to the general public about the labors and achievements of science there is none who excels Dr. Kellogg in the ability to present a narrative whose statements and facts make no compromise with accuracy and exactness, but which any intelligent person can read with understanding and fascination. And, in addition, he has a very interesting style, simple, lucid, easily flowing, with touches here and there of poetic feeling or of eloquence, or of fantasy."
+ N Y Times p2 D 2 '23 400w

"A most excellent review and discussion of these matters. The treatment is brief, clear, up-to-date and absolutely accurate as a statement of the modern biologist's view." H. M. Parshley
+ Springf'd Republican p9a D 23 '23 250w

"Delightful little volume." A. K.
+ Survey 51:551 F 15 '24 80w
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p912 D 27 '23 200w

KELLOR, FRANCES, and HATVANY, ANTONIA. 2 Security against war. 2v 435;436-851p $6 Macmillan
341 Peace. European war, 1914-1919—Peace and mediation. League of nations. International law and relations 24-25103

"The first epoch of reconstruction under the Peace Treaties is now ended and the record is available. This book contains the narrative of one aspect of that epoch—political reconstruction through the settlement of international disputes. Part I of this narrative contains a description of the peace machinery in theory and practice. Part II relates the history of each dispute, together with the application of the peace machinery to its settlement. Part III presents the evolution and record of the Permanent Court of International Justice, together with its relation to the Hague Organization and Conferences, as being the effort to substitute law for war. Part IV analyzes the pending proposals for future peace, including disarmament, the treaties of mutual assistance and of disarmament and security and the outlawry of war. The record thus presented is one of fact and endeavor, containing information from all parts of the world, which will be of service to those desirous of forming their opinions upon a knowledge of the situation with reference to international controversies since the war."—Preface

"All who need information regarding the modern movement against war, and their name is legion, will find in this work, altogether apart from the author's opinions, a satisfactory survey of the whole field." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 10 '24 950w

"It seems to this writer that the authors are a thought too dogmatic, somewhat in the 'New Republic' manner; and that they have a good deal prejudiced the value of their criticisms by allowing a rather free scope to obvious prepossessions. But this said, it remains true that they have produced a work of great usefulness for reference, summarizing a great mass of material."

— + Outlook 138:649 D 17 '24 190w

KELLY, ALBANIS ASHMUN. Household painter; intended for the use of the household, with full directions for painting, decorating, papering, calcimining, wood staining, varnishing, etc.; together with many useful notes on these subjects, and on various matters of interest to the household management. 202p il $1.25 McKay

698 Painting, Industrial A23-1681

"A useful book for the amateur who wishes to do his own work, especially on small jobs." —Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:311 Je '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:174 Jl '24

KELLY, GEORGE EDWARD. The show-off; a transcript of life in three acts; preface by Heywood Broun. 129p $1.75 Little

812 24-10248

A realistic drama of American family life, featuring a particular specimen of the genus show-off, Aubrey Piper. Aubrey comes courting Amy, the younger daughter of the Fisher family, every member of which except Amy hates him cordially. But nothing daunts Aubrey, with his lordly ways and swagger, and he marries Amy on a salary much too small for their needs. When Mr Fisher dies and Joe, the young son, leaves home to carry on his chemical experiments, Mrs Fisher offers a home to Aubrey and Amy. Very soon Aubrey is conveying the idea to strangers that he owns the house and is keeping his mother-in-law out of charity! After dozens of flat failures Aubrey hits it off in one case, and the play ends with Mrs Fisher's despairing, "God help me, from now on."

Reviewed by Harold Kellock

Freeman 8:592 F 27 '24 900w

St Louis p382 N '24

" 'The Show-Off' ranks among the best American comedies, but it is far from being a perfect comedy."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 4 '24 800w

"The play shows in its printed dress even more clearly than on the stage the processes of an infelicitous padding."

— Theatre Arts Mo 8:792 N '24 120w

Wis Lib Bul 20:176 Jl '24

KELLY, ROBERT LINCOLN. Theological education in America; with foreword by Charles Henry Brent. 456p il $5 Doran

207 Theology—Study and teaching 24-18270

A study of ministerial training in America today in theological schools and seminaries. Partial contents: A brief historical sketch; The educational equipment and methods of the seminaries; Programs of study; Students; Finances and property: Problems; One hundred seminaries. There are also maps, charts and an appendix.

"There is in this study a fearless facing of the facts in the case which is the absolute essential to better curricula, better training and better equipment for the ministers of the Protestant churches."

Boston Transcript p3 O 4 '24 300w

"Dr. Kelly has issued a bombshell. His paragraphs teem with dynamite. If, however, it be recognized that 'faithful are the wounds of a friend,' his strong surgery may cut out evils which are already serious or ominously incipient." P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p11 Ag 24 '24 1800w

KEMP, HARRY HIBBARD. Boccaccio's untold tale, and nine other one-act plays. 252p $2 (8s 6d) Brentano's

812 24-6895

"Ten one-act plays comprise the contents of Mr. Kemp's volume, all in verse, generally in blank verse although the playwright does not avoid rhyme altogether. Not the least interesting part of Mr. Kemp's volume is the introduction in which he gives an account of the founding of the Provincetown Players."—N Y Times

Cleveland p87 N '24

"A series of slight, amusing, familiar plots, rather than a group of persons in action and living counteraction; his dialogue is kempt verse well trimmed and oiled."

+ — Lit R p728 My 3 '24 280w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 118:744 Je 25 '24 180w

"Despite the many beauties of expression and the not infrequent flashes of wit, the reader uninterested in production will find in the collection more froth than substance. But most of it is palatable froth, excellent when nothing more sustaining than afternoon tea is desired."

+ — N Y Times p12 Ap 27 '24 1000w

"All through is a lack of originality. But after all, Mr. Kemp has to do with love, and knows his subject. His attitude is reverent at times, sympathetic at least, and always gentle. It is a popular theme, especially in this season. He will be read without ennui, and with thanks for being neither mawkish nor harsh." L. L. Cline

— + N Y World p7e My 25 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p465 Jl 24 '24 170w

KENNARD, JOSEPH SPENCER. Friar in fiction, Sincerity in art, and other essays. 388p $2.50 Brentano's

814 Friars. Art 23-17498

"The first study interprets the makers of medieval Europe, the friars who have illuminated the pages of Marlowe, Chaucer, Shakespeare and Browning, Rabelais, Dante, Boccaccio and Machiavelli. Anything like a complete review of the friar's character found in the vast mass of literary material of a pictorial nature, which has appeared in Europe since the coming of the friars, would be a futile task. Consequently a selection is made, with a purpose to depict the typical friar found in the real life of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. From Chaucer's wanton and merry pilgrim to Browning's breathing, rollicking Lippo Lippi, we have a group of scapegraces, oily tricky beggars, according to the author. Over against these satirical estimates of the friars, Dr. Kennard places Martin Luther, the most eminent contemporary of Rabelais, Friar Clement, 'perhaps the greatest friar in all literature,' of Charles Reade's great work 'The Cloister and the Hearth' and the Savonarola of George Eliot's 'Romola.' "—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p5 F 9 '24 450w

"Joseph Spencer Kennard writes with a delightful clarity, an ever-recurring touch of cultured humor and a scholarly authority that is unmistakable." J. D. Haag

+ Detroit News p15 Mr 16 '24 550w

N Y World p6e F 3 '24 480w

KENNEDY, ELIJAH ROBINSON. Real Daniel Webster; with foreword by Hon. Frederick Evan Crane. 271p il $2 Revell

B or 92 Webster, Daniel 24-12902

"[A biography of Daniel Webster] refuting the charge that he was a 'libertine and an habitual drunkard; that his money affairs were scandalous; and that he betrayed the cause of liberty for the Southern slaves.' The author adds a brief bibliography; the book is indexed, and it carries a brief preface by Judge Frederick Evan Crane of the Court of Appeals." —Lit R

KENNEDY, E. R.—Continued

Am Pol Sci R 18:655 Ag '24 20w

"Kennedy writes with the zeal of a hero worshiper; properly enough under the circumstances, as he makes his points soundly. His defense of Webster's character is readable, and his examination of the abundant data is sufficiently critical for the purposes of such a book."

+ — Lit R p907 Jl 19 '24 160w

"Mr. Kennedy, like most defenders of a thesis, would prove more if he didn't try to prove so much. Accept his argument and you would have to admit that Daniel Webster was a man absolutely without flaw, except the engaging and common one of being an unwise investor." Elmer Davis

— N Y Times p8 Jl 20 '24 450w

R of Rs 70:222 Ag '24 30w

St Louis p386 N '24

KENNEDY, WILLIAM SLOANE. Real John Burroughs. 205p il $2.50 Funk

B or 92 Burroughs, John 24-8392

The author is frank and honest in his estimate of Burroughs, whom he places high as naturalist, philosopher and man, but he has refused to flatter him or soften the picture. He prefers to leave him a rugged and vital figure. He includes a chapter on Some mistakes of Burroughs—slips in nature-facts in his writings. Another chapter, entitled the Battle of the naturalists, is given to Burroughs's controversy with the nature-fakers.

Booklist 21:24 O '24

Bookm 59:610 Jl '24 160w

— Dial 77:438 N '24 100w

"An honest evaluation that is fearless and impartial in its conclusions. . . Altho some worshipers of Burroughs may find fault with the sincerity of this book, which so demonstrably sets out to tell the truth and nothing but the truth, it is difficult to conceive of any adequate reasons for their umbrage." H. S. Gorman

+ Int Bk R p458 My '24 1700w

"This volume by William Sloane Kennedy does him scant justice. His book is written in a most irritating style, a style full of jocosity, of Scotch jocosity, by far the most unpleasant species of an unpleasant thing." Llewelyn Powys

— N Y Times p18 My 11 '24 1300w

"In the opinion of this reviewer, Mr. Kennedy exalts the merits of Burroughs somewhat unduly at any rate in comparison with those of other nature writers; on the other hand, the best features of the book is its shrewd, searching, and just criticism of Burrough's defects."

+ — Outlook 138:241 Je 11 '24 440w

R of Rs 70:669 D '24 120w

St Louis p386 N '24

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 31 '24 380w

KENNELLY, ARTHUR EDWIN. Electrical vibration instruments; an elementary textbook on the behavior and tests of telephone receivers, oscillographs, and vibration galvanometers. (Engineering science ser.) 450p il $6.50 Macmillan

654.6 Telephone. Galvanometer 23-11014

"Presents the characteristics of these instruments as reciprocating electric motors. The central idea is the analogy between mechanical and electrical vibration. The major portion is devoted to telephone receivers. Mathematical treatment is kept at a minimum in the main text, the more involved parts being given in a series of appendixes."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:316 Je '24

KENNEY, ANNIE. Memories of a militant. 308p il $5.25 Longmans [16s E. Arnold]

B or 92 Woman suffrage

Annie Kenney has chosen to write her own life as the best way of presenting the history of the militant movement for woman suffrage in England. She was a factory girl whose interest in the cause dated from her chance meeting with Christabel Pankhurst in 1905. She became her devoted follower, suffered martyrdom, imprisonment and hunger-strikes and thruout the campaign, till the victory was won, showed the utmost devotion and courage.

"As documentary evidence of what the English militant suffragettes accomplished, her book has value. To American readers, the zeal which animated the burning of empty houses, or drove a woman to fling herself before the king's horse on Derby Day, seems fanatical. But the spirit of their organization, their attitude towards the Government during the war, above all their sincerity, must compel admiration." C. H.

+ — Boston Transcript p9 D 13 '24 600w

"She is a singularly good witness-medium through which to behold those stirring days, because her enthusiasm is so unreflecting and her style so spontaneous. Strangely and incongruously she numbers Voltaire among her heroes."

+ Nation and Ath 36:226 N 8 '24 130w

"Her book has both historical and psychological value. It is written in a rather unadorned and straightforward manner, but with a simplicity of religious feeling which disarms criticism, and which attracts attention to the moral and emotional factors underlying her political sympathies rather than to the narrative of outward events."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p658 O 23 '24 850w

KENNEY, ROWLAND. Pedlar's pack. 256p $2 Seltzer

24-26385

"In the course of sixteen stories men drink, fight, labor, furtively attempt song, stumble blindly with emotions and meet sudden death. It is life naked and unashamed. But there is no attempt to erect a naturalistic philosophy from its violence and grim humors. Smoke and thundering machinery beat down on man, sweatily toiling beneath them. Capstanmen, nippers, stevedores, are daily employed in environs that are constantly in the shadow of death, and whose every day is a dodging of an inevitable fate. A hard-drinking lot; but also Mick, whose 'respectability was uncanny.' Then Crump and his story, the strange quirk of an eccentric drunkard who abandons his lifelong habit, touched by some sense of beauty rendered him through seeing a lady acrobat and becomes a total abstainer, which is more than his physical status could withstand." —N Y Times

Booklist 20:338 Je '24

Int Bk R p742 S '24 320w

"Mr. Kenney writes with the direct simplicity of a practiced man of letters, but there is something in his calm acceptance of the incidents which he describes which indicates more than a mere writer's familiarity with the lives and characters of navies, longshoremen, sand-hogs, and members of those other professions whose technique is brute labor. 'A Pedlar's Pack' is not intended to be exactly terrible, and yet it is, even in its humor, for it brings vividly to the mind that savagery which, kept for the most part carefully out of sight, does the roughest of the work on which our civilization rests." J. W. Krutch

Nation 118:536 My 7 '24 350w

"There is a too thorough presentation of the workings of machinery and mechanical appliances in the switch yards and among the warehouses—as of details but lately learned. Aside from these points the technique of the stories is excellent; a sinewy brevity comes to correspond with the grim and often gruesome material." H. B. F.

+ — New Repub 39:370 Ag 20 '24 220w

"Simple, artless tales, told with no little amount of restrained gusto."
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 23 '24 820w
N Y Tribune p28 Ap 20 '24 1700w

KENT, FRANK RICHARDSON. Great game of politics. 322p $2.50 Doubleday

329 Politics, Practical. United States—Politics and government 24-17425

A popular presentation of the human facts of practical politics and the people who engage in it as a profession. The book describes the party machine from precinct executive to boss, shows what is good as well as what is bad in it, how the political game is played, how the men work, what they get out of it, how campaign funds are raised and used and how the machine handles the woman vote. The second part of the book is concerned with candidates and their ways, the influences that sway them while getting votes and the restraints under which they are forced to fight. It shows also how the newspapers' policies are formed, how political issues are made and the power exerted by groups, agencies and special interests.

Boston Transcript p4 N 24 '23 480w
Cleveland p55 Jl '24

"If, Mr. Average Citizen, you are looking for a learned dissertation on political theory you may as well pass this book by; but if you want a plain story of practical politics as the game is played in this year of grace, 1924, in the United States of America, and in the several subdivisions thereof, you cannot do better than to read it." R. D. W. C.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p9 Mr 23 '24 1000w

"Mr. Kent proceeds to point out the various parts of the structure, the way in which they work, and the functions of those in charge of them with a simplicity and directness that will enable any voter to know more about the great American game than at present is known by most persons who are considered well informed." R. J. Davis
+ Lit R p474 Ja 26 '24 600w

"Mr. Kent speaks from a quarter-century of experience in journalism which probably brings the non-professional closer to the realities of politics than any other kind of work. He is not afraid to say what he thinks and writes with quite refreshing frankness of the motives, methods, and machinations of politicians. His book is not, and is not meant to be, a history of politics in America or a dissertation on the metaphysics of the state. But, as a straightforward account of actual conditions written from the 'outside,' from a rich background of 'inside' information and observation of our political life, it fills a conspicuous gap in our materia politica." Phillips Bradley
+ Nation 118:564 My 14 '24 300w

"Mr. Kent knows a hawk from a handsaw no matter which way the wind is blowing. He has written, in the best tradition of a trained newspaper man, a restrained, realistic, readable account of the contemporary game of politics in the United States. A machine is no metaphor to Mr. Kent. He knows the function of each loosely fitted human cog. His book describes these cogs, from precinct executive to boss." J. W. Quigley
+ New Repub 38:239 Ap 23 '24 600w

"Viewed in a not too high light at the end of a not too small salon, the picture of American politics that he paints is fairly good portraiture; viewed at close range, where the paint can be smelled as well as seen, the work is highly impressionistic. . . The chief criticisms that may be lodged against this book are its inaccuracies and its omission of concrete illustration." H. L. McBain
— + Pol Sci Q 39:331 Je '24 1100w

KENT, ROCKWELL. Voyaging; southward from the Strait of Magellan. 184p il $7.50 Putnam

918 Voyages and travels. Tierra del Fuego 24-24641

The artist cruised in a small sailboat southward from the Strait of Magellan, along the bleak coasts of Tierra del Fuego and around the Horn. At various points the voyagers made anchorage, taking short inland excursions and penetrating the mountain regions of Tierra del Fuego. In these wilderness places they met a warm hospitality from the settlers, both poor and rich, and the artist found uncommon beauty to paint. He has illustrated in black and white the seas and headlands and settlements along the voyage's course.

Booklist 21:107 D '24

"A whole delightful bookfull of kicking over traces and seeing the sun rise on two sides of the earth."
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '24 280w

"Interesting and original though they are, the black and whites lack variety, for they are all in the same manner and rhythm. 'Voyaging' is distinguished work, but it will add nothing specifically new to a name already distinguished." H: Beston
+ — Ind 113:401 N 15 '24 550w

"Kent has the Rabelaisian humor and mad imagination of two other modern writers of travel books, Frederick O'Brien and the late John Reed. To say this is to give the merest hint of what 'Voyaging' is like. It is gorgeous stuff." Gregory Mason
+ Int Bk R p771 O 24 '24 1050w

"A most delightful book, interesting from beginning to end." W: Beebe
+ Lit R p4 O 18 '24 820w

"In fact Mr. Kent's book seems to be a beautiful by-product—a mere accident born of prodigious adventure undertaken for its own glorious sake. He did not write to thrill a jaded, book-glutted world, but to retain for himself in some endurable form the richness of his ardors and travailings." Glen Mullin
+ Nation 119:684 D 17 '24 860w

Reviewed by Alfred Stanford
New Repub 41:48 D 3 '24 450w

"The strength and menace and majesty of the Cape Horn region proved admirable material for Mr. Kent's black and white drawings. They are not a mere adornment for his book, but an integral part of it."
+ N Y Times p5 S 21 '24 1950w

"Rockwell Kent has the Midas knack—everything his pen touches becomes literary gold. The publication of his 'Wilderness' gave birth to the suspicion that here was a unique figure in the world of letters. With the advent of 'Voyaging' that suspicion becomes a conviction. No other literary artist is doing just what Kent is doing." Gregory Mason
+ N Y Tribune p3 O 5 '24 880w

Reviewed by Mary Mowbray-Clarke
N Y World p9e O 5 '24 780w

"Once in a blue moon a writer of rare talents describes experiences of unusual interest, and the result is a travel book to buy, borrow, or beg. Such a volume is 'Voyaging,' by Rockwell Kent." Gregory Mason
+ Outlook 138:176 O 1 '24 560w

"It is a good prose for a wanderer, beautiful and informal. Other wanderers have written better, though few in our time. One feels that Kent's art in words is less individualized than his painting, where the very harshness is a mark of final perfection in a style made utterly his own." H: S. Canby
Sat R of Lit 1:226 O 25 '24 110w

KENT, ROLAND GRUBB. Language and philology. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 174p $1.50 Marshall Jones

422 Language and languages. Classical philology. English language 24-1404

A brief study of the influence of Latin and Greek on English, not only in vocabulary but in word formation. Dr Kent describes the extent to which at different periods the English language has been permeated by words derived or borrowed from the classical languages, shows the proportion of such words in English at different times and the stock of classical words in our vocabulary today. He shows also the importance of Latin and Greek prefixes and suffixes in new English words and how our grammatical studies as well as our alphabet and styles of writing and printing may be traced back to the Greeks and Romans.

Booklist 20:326 Je '24

"He has made an astonishingly readable book out of rather refractory material." H. L. Pangborn

+ Bookm 59:603 Jl '24 110w

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 22 '24 450w

"An admirable summary. . . He has managed to give to a familiar theme fresh interest." E. F. H.

+ Cath World 118:419 Je '24 60w

"Mr. Kent gathers interesting if not original data concerning the influence of the Greek and Latin languages."

+ — Nation 118:351 Mr 26 '24 20w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:306 Je '24

Springf'd Republican p8 F 4 '24 200w

KENYON, C. FRED (GERALD CUMBERLAND, pseud.). Written in friendship; a book of reminiscences. 308p $2.50 Brentano's

928 Authors, British. Musicians 24-4517

"The plan is to present impressions of contemporary individualities, and at the same time something of the present state of English literature and music, and of the vicissitudes of English journalism as the author has known and practiced it."—Boston Transcript

"Writes entertainingly. Writes like A. S. M. Hutchinson. Like this! Yet, despite all boresomeness, here is a book to borrow!"

+ Bookm 59:477 Je '24 280w

"Whether we are in any degree acquainted with the subject of this sketch or that—and to an American reader many of these celebrities are unfamiliar—we usually find it interesting, for Mr. Cumberland has an uncommon and trained ability to picture lightly a casual meeting, and yet surprise his reader with the substance of his report." Ralph Bergengren

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 22 '24 2050w

Cleveland p68 S '24

Ind 112:157 Mr 15 '24 20w

"For people who love personalities there is much matter in this book; moreover Mr. Cumberland confesses to an acquaintance, sometimes a friendship, with the majority of his victims. There are, however, intervening pages where in the presence of a superior personality, as in his pages on Miss Rebecca West, Miss Sheila Kaye Smith, and John Galsworthy, Mr. Cumberland forgets himself sufficiently to have his sincerity get the better of his virtuosity." F. D. W. G.

— + Ind 112:261 My 10 '24 200w

Reviewed by Willard Durham

Lit R p901 Jl 19 '24 300w

"Mr. Cumberland has sprinkled ink on the tailcoat of nearly everyone who writes, composes, or acts in the British Isles. It gives him much pleasure to stick pins in poses, although it must be said that he beams and berates with equal zest. All of this book is interesting; the chapters in which he dwells upon his own experiences in the writing game are perhaps most valuable."

+ Nation 118:566 My 14 '24 120w

"His impressions are often the result of very brief contacts. When he has to eke them out with remarks upon the works of those he has just met neither his observations nor his criticisms are valuable. The most remarkable feature of the book is the number of people mentioned in it."

— + New Statesman 21:656 S 15 '23 100w

"Mr. Cumberland is as malicious in his friendship as he was friendly in his malice. He has certainly brought trivial chatter to as near a fine art as a passing acquaintance with interesting personalities and a somewhat feline literary ability could make it. He manages not to be dull, even when, as frequently, he is telling us nothing significant about people whom he has met in a bar or over a dinner-table."

+ — Spec 131:430 S 20 '23 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p606 S 13 '23 300w

KERLIN, ROBERT THOMAS. Negro poets and their poems. 285p il $1.50 Associated publishers

811.08 Negro poetry 24-1295

An anthology of contemporary Negro verse, representing some sixty poets, with biographical and bibliographical notes and critical comment. A summary of earlier Negro poetry is included and portraits of many of the poets are given.

Booklist 20:292 My '24

"A valuable reference-book. Little of the verse quoted is good if judged by liberal standards, but none of it is cheap and all of it is impressive when seen against the background of its race."

+ — Nation 118:sup455 Ap 16 '24 70w

Reviewed by E. D. Walrond

New Repub 39:53 Je '24 280w

"The volume is by no means exhaustive. However much we may disagree with many of his specific estimates, Mr Kerlin is to be thanked for giving us a readable and informative volume on a subject about which all too few of us know anything, let alone enough."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 F 27 '24 240w

KERRY, HENRY WILLIAM EDMUND ² PETTY-FITZMAURICE, earl of, ed. Secret of the Coup d'état; an unpublished correspondence of Prince Louis Napoleon, MM. de Morny, De Flahault, and others, 1848 to 1852; ed. with an introd. by the Earl of Kerry and a study by Philip Guedalla. 362p il $3.50 Putnam [18s Constable]

944.07 France—History—Second republic, 1848-1852 24-29867

"The letters which are given to the world in this volume are a selection, by his great-grandson, the Earl of Kerry, from the papers left by that Comte de Flahault who fought for the First Republic, who came to be one of Napoleon's most trusted officers, who was highly employed under Louis Philippe, who was privy and slightly assisting to Louis Napoleon's coup d'état of 1851, and who was French Ambassador at the Court of St. James, 1860-2." —Outlook

"Most people will probably read this excellent book less for the new historical matter it contains than for the searchlight it throws on the main actors—and a dingy lot they were! . . . Though Morny is inevitably the chief character on the stage, much interesting matter about the other well-known characters will be found here." Francis Birrell

+ Nation and Ath 35:669 Ag 30 '24 980w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

N Y Times p1 S 21 '24 3150w (Reprinted from Spec)

"The peculiar value of this book is that it brings into proper relief a hitherto neglected personality of great historic and romantic interest. They are not brilliant letters—printed by themselves they would not be very interesting; but, through the interpretation and setting furnished by the Earl of Kerry and Mr. Guedalla, they rise from their ashes, so to speak, they pulse and throb, they serve to humanize our impression of that drab period of French politics 1848-52 which includes the famous coup d'état."

+ Outlook 139:33 Ja 7 '25 1100w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey
Spec 133:358 S 13 '24 3150w

KESSLER, HARRY CLEMENS ULRICH, graf. Germany and Europe. (Inst. of politics publications, Williams college, Williamstown, Mass.) 150p $2 Yale univ. press

330.94 Europe—Politics. Germany—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (European war) 24-1191

Six lectures delivered before the institute of politics at Williams college in the summer of 1923. The writer presents from a German point of view the problems out of which the situation in Europe today has arisen and the part which Germany may be expected to play in it. Contents: The fruits of the war and the fruits of peace; The peacemakers at work; The fruits of Versailles; "Security"; The Ruhr and after; National and international democracy.

Booklist 20:248 Ap '24
Cleveland p60 Jl '24
N Y Times p15 F 24 '24 1500w

"The book is valuable because it gives in a clear and concise way the point of view of a sincere German liberal, who fervently hopes for peace in the world and for Germany's reentrance into the comity of nations."
+ Pol Sci Q 39:365 Je '24 420w

KETCHUM, MILO SMITH. Structural engineers' handbook; data for the design and construction of steel bridges and buildings. 3d ed enl 1065p il $7 McGraw

624 Bridges, Iron and steel. Building, Iron and steel 24-21536

"Exhaustive reference book of a very high order of merit. Much wider in scope than the subtitle indicates. In addition to design of steel superstructure it includes discussion of engineering materials in general, drafting, estimating, structural mechanics, timber trestles, retaining walls, piers, and abutments. Much of the material has not hitherto been published in book form. Thus the brief rules for inspection and the detailed instructions for erection of structural steel are particularly useful."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:598 D '24

KEYES, FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER) (MRS HENRY WILDER KEYES). Letters from a senator's wife. 339p $2.50 (10s 6d) Appleton

917.53 Washington, D.C.—Social life and customs 24-12626

In the form of letters to her friends the wife of the United States senator from New Hampshire describes the social scene in Washington official circles during the Harding administration. She writes of her first impressions of Washington, of her initiation into its complicated social usages, of the various functions she attended and the public events of the time, commenting frankly upon everything, especially upon the people she met.

"Written quite frankly to entertain as well as instruct, these informal papers may seem to the male reader a bit clogged with descriptions of parties, luncheons, dinners, and the hats, gowns, and flowers that graced them. But back of such chatty and trivial detail moves a pretty accurate and unbiased record of the capital's business during the last few years."
+ Bookm 60:101 S '24 220w

"They are graceful and illuminating letters, sometimes even fascinating."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 25 '24 230w
Cleveland p87 N '24

"The letters reveal their author as thoughtful, idealistic, energetic, with an abiding faith in the rightness of the world." Temple Bailey
+ Int Bk R p716 S '24 1100w

"A charming book, beautifully written in the gossipy, intimate style that brings you very close to the pageantry, to the dinners, the diplomatic circles and to some of the newer trends in legislation and official life of a post war Washington." C. M. Morrison
+ Lit R p924 Jl 26 '24 450w

"This chronicle of feminine life in official Washington has vividness and vivacity. To all who invest with glamour the social affairs of the capital it will possess a special interest." Silas Bent
+ N Y Times p7 Je 15 '24 1450w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p26 Jl 20 '24 520w
St Louis p386 N '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Je 26 '24 70w
Wis Lib Bul 20:212 O '24

KEYNES, JOHN MAYNARD. Monetary reform (Eng title A tract on monetary reform). 227p $2.50 (7s 6d) Macmillan

332.4 Money. Currency question. Foreign exchange 24-4049

"This exposition of monetary problems differs from most works of its class in that the author offers certain specific and practical suggestions for the future regulation of currency systems as they now exist in Great Britain, the United States and other countries. In order to maintain the stability of the internal price level, and at the same time to regulate the supply of foreign exchange so as to avoid purely temporary fluctuations, the author proposes an adaptation of the actual system which has grown up in England since the war. This he explains in detail."—R of Rs

Reviewed by O. M. W. Sprague
Am Econ R 14:770 D '24 800w
Booklist 20:283 My '24
Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 170w
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '24 1500w

"The publication of this very remarkable book marks a stage in the progress of monetary theory in relation to practical affairs. Its influences, already noticeable, will grow, and, even though the precise proposals advocated by Mr. Keynes may not be adopted, the effect of his lucid and masterly reasoning will be clearly seen as policy develops." R. J. Hawtrey
+ Econ J 34:227 Je '24 4200w

"Unlike most books on finance it is brief, concise, witty and vividly interesting." H. W. Jordan
+ Ind 112:290 My 24 '24 550w

"A courageous attempt to apply practically the principles of monetary value that are at last becoming clear even to the stupid." H: R. Mussey
+ Nation 118:684 Je 11 '24 750w
Nation and Ath 34:482 D 29 '23 2400w

Reviewed by Alvin Johnson
New Repub 37:288 F 6 '24 1050w

"It is a pity that the publication of this illuminating book should have been so timed as to have no influence in educating candidates and voters at the recent election as to the true nature of unemployment and the most hopeful means of preventing its occurrence. Our only other regret is that Mr. Keynes is too brief, too allusive, and in places too careful of the susceptibilities of the august audience of bankers and statesmen to whom his book is addressed. We miss the pungent satire of his earlier work."
+ — New Statesman 22:372 Ja 5 '24 800w

"This latest book of Mr. Keynes is marked by the virtues and vices of his previous excursions into political economy. First among its virtues will be placed a clear and simple style which makes his discussion interesting

KEYNES, J: M.—Continued
even when his conclusions are unconvincing, and the capacity of analyzing plainly a complicated economic situation. First among its vices must be placed his constant habit of dogmatic assertion without proof; his almost complete ignoring of the work of eminent economists of the past, his failure in most of his arguments to support his abstract reasoning with concrete evidence." A. D. Noyes

+ — N Y Times p3 Mr 30 '24 3400w

Reviewed by Palmer Smith
N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:301 Je '24

Pratt p14 summer '24

R of Rs 69:335 Mr '24 90w

St Louis p371 N '24

Sat R 136:683 D 22 '23 600w

"It is a skilful piece of work, and, in spite of the abstruse and technical character of the subject, very readable."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 17 '24 1800w

KILDUFF, FREDERIC W. Auditing and accounting handbook. 813p $6 McGraw ^{2}

657 Auditing. Accounting 24-11583

An extremely valuable reference work. The purpose is to furnish "important and reliable tables, classifications, schedules, digests, formulas, and other valuable information applicable to auditing and accounting."—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:516 N '24

KILPATRICK, WILLIAM HEARD, comp. Source book in the philosophy of education. 365p $2.25 Macmillan

370.1 Education 23-14260

"This book contains five hundred and fifty-seven quotations from perhaps a hundred and fifty authors. The quotations run from half a line to several pages in length. They are arranged under twenty-two chapter headings and are followed by an index of sources and of subjects. The fact that from seventy-five to a hundred of the selections are from the works of John Dewey is a tribute to our foremost educational philosopher and a recommendation for the book."—Educ R

Booklist 20:249 Ap '24

"Any intelligent reader, whether a student of education or not, will find the book an interesting and instructive anthology." I. W. Howerth

+ Educ R 67:116 F '24 180w

"Although the student of the science of education will find the general tenor of the readings somewhat different from that of the material with which he is more accustomed to deal, he will find much to stimulate thought and to suggest problems."

+ El School J 24:478 F '24 250w

KIMBALL, THEODORA. Manual of information on city planning and zoning; including references on regional, rural, and national planning. 188p $3.50 Harvard univ. press [18s Milford]

710 City planning 23-13799

"Condensed reference handbook giving an introductory statement of city planning facts, listing national and foreign organizations and periodicals and containing a most extensive and carefully prepared bibliography on the subject. Subject index."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 20:255 Ap '24

"Handsomely printed and lavishly illustrated, it presents a resume of town-planning history and an outline of present practice, both quite free of technical details of terminology. It stresses, naturally, the 'city beautiful' aspect of planning, but not to the exclusion of more sober and utilitarian considerations."

+ Survey 51:415 Ja 15 '24 160w

Wis Lib Bul 20:66 Mr '24

KING, GRACE ELIZABETH. La Dame de Sainte Hermine. 296p $2.25 Macmillan

24-7728

A tale of the settlement of New Orleans by Bienville in 1718. A beautiful young girl of noble birth, Marie Alorge, is exiled from France by lettre de cachet and sent as prisoner to the governor of the colony. The delicately reared girl has to adapt herself to wilderness ways and the rude life of the pioneers and in this she is helped by her devoted guardian, Dame Catherine. The military commandant of the province, the Chevalier de Loubois, falls in love with her and when the mystery surrounding her is solved, marries her. Marie's husband dies of a wound received in a fight with the Indians, but she lives long as an angel of mercy, ministering to the poor and distressed.

"It is a delicately moving story, which could well have been made even more poignant." S. L. R.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 4 '24 350w

Cleveland p67 S '24

"Her method is one of extreme simplicity, but she makes her people humanly real, and manages to bring to the reader something of the spirit and the feeling of the little settlement." H. B.

+ Lit R p906 Jl 19 '24 280w

"A complete absence of narrative skill and a natural gift for storytelling make themselves keenly felt in 'La Dame de Saint Hermine.'"

+ — N Y Times p8 Ap 20 '24 260w

"Miss King has made careful research for her material. She moreover handles it well, sustaining interest with adventurous action and carrying explanations necessary to her story by apt use of color. In the exploitation of American historical background for novel writing, two books by women stand high, 'To Have and to Hold,' and now 'La Dame de Sainte Hermine.'" M. R.

+ N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 240w

"There is a bit too much historical detail, otherwise the tale is agreeable if not strikingly dramatic."

+ — Outlook 138:240 Je 11 '24 200w

"In an historical romance, a story carried beyond the climax may have a tendency to drag. This is the case here. Yet the characters are skillfully and sympathetically drawn, and the historical setting possesses much to claim the reader's attention."

— + Springf'd Republican p8 S 11 '24 250w

KING, HENRY CHURCHILL. Seeing life whole; a Christian philosophy of life. 163p $1.50 Macmillan

230 Christian life. Christianity 23-13302

In six lectures on the Deems foundation at New York university President King of Oberlin meets some of the questions which have been brought to bear on a Christian philosophy of life by modern science and the evolutionary point of view, by the historical spirit, by the new psychology and comparative religion. Approaching the subject from these various angles he shows the close and vital relations of the most significant lines of modern thought to Christian living and thinking.

Booklist 20:281 My '24

Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 80w

J Religion 4:221 Mr '24 60w

Reviewed by H. A. Overstreet
Nation 119:167 Ag 13 '24 180w

"The book is a clearly reasoned, soundly based plea; a profound appeal to man's heart through his mind. Of course, as said at the outset of the review, certain schools will reject it."

+ N Y Times p13 F 3 '24 1700w

Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 22 '24 220w

KINGSLEY, FLORENCE (MORSE) (MRS CHARLES R. KINGSLEY). Life of Henry Fowle Durant, founder of Wellesley college. 354p il $3 Century

B or 92 Durant, Henry Fowle

"Few women could be found more competent than Mrs. Kingsley to write a biography of the founder of Wellesley College. One of its early students, she reveals her keen appreciation of the values and forces which made up the complex personality of Henry Fowle Durant. If her discretion occasionally appears to overrule any latent feeling she may have for the strongly dramatic elements in Mr. Durant's life, she is at least able to make us admire the skill with which she draws veils over certain passages and episodes she has not deigned to record."—Boston Transcript

---

"Mrs. Kingsley has written of an extremely interesting character. She has not cared to analyze his nature too closely. Possibly her reticence is due to sentiment. In some respects, just because Mrs. Kingsley refuses to act as an interpreter, all readers of her book will declare it a finely impartial record of the one man who gave Wellesley College its being: a man to whom women graduates of all colleges necessarily owe so much." D. F. Gilman

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 22 '24 1850w

"It is no common life-story that Mrs. Kingsley has told so well, but one that has, in the words of Imogen, 'a strain of rareness.'" K. L. Bates

+ Int Bk R p704 S '24 1600w

N Y Tribune p32 Ap 27 '24 100w

"A book not without imperfections, but a graphic and atmospheric narrative not only of an interesting man's life, but of the early days of Wellesley college."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 1400w

KINGSTON, CHARLES. Dramatic days at the [2] Old Bailey. 333p il $3.50 Stokes

343.1 Old Bailey, London. Crime and criminals. Trials [24-8068]

A running account of sensational criminal cases which have passed thru the dock of Old Bailey, London's ancient criminal court. Many anecdotes are told and stories of famous judges and counsel.

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Sat R of Lit 1:180 O 11 '24 400w

"This has no more ambitious purpose than to provide a remarkably rich collection (about a hundred) of true stories of crime, mostly garnered from recent years and told one after another, in full detail and with a businesslike and laudable absence of top dressing. It is really a treasure store for students of criminology."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p27 Ja 10 '24 80w

KINNEY, HENRY WALSWORTH. Broken butterflies. 323p $2 Little

24-3533

"The thesis of the book is modern Japan, and the broken butterflies are the Japanese girls, educated in the United States, who return to their own country to find that they are expected to return to a family life of intolerable conventions, where their emancipated ideas have no place and receive no tolerance. As a tract 'Broken Butterflies' is undeniably interesting and packed with information. The characters seize upon the slightest excuse to discuss the geisha system, the modernist movement in art, the young radicals, and the social revolution. . . The hero of the book, Hugh Trent, is an American newspaper man estranged from his wife, who goes to Japan as a correspondent for his paper. His chief function seems to be that of interlocutor, and Mr. Kinney has been successful in showing him as an indefatigable information getter. He meets native girls of various types, and there are several lukewarm love affairs with them. But in the end race calls to race, and he is left summarizing his observations on the broken butterflies to an American girl, evidently with marriage as his objective."—Lit R

Booklist 20:300 My '24

"Seldom has so keen and authoritative an analysis of Japanese life and ideals been given, particularly of the position of its women, and the relation of the geisha not only to social but to family life. Both the Oriental and the Occidental viewpoints are taken. And most readers will understand more clearly than ever before the ambitions, the strength and the weakness of Japan today." Frances Bartlett

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 23 '24 1300w

"The book is really worth while for any one who is interested in the Japan of today, a Japan which, in discarding old ideas for new, is sometimes wise but most often deplorably unwise." R. B. H.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ap 13 '24 250w

"We cannot question Mr. Kinney's knowledge of social and political conditions in Japan, but it seems to us that he has chosen the wrong medium to transmit his knowledge. 'Broken Butterflies' is a tract in spite of the skeleton of plot which enables it to classify as a novel. Disregarding the shortcomings of the novel, the book is to be taken seriously for the freshness and intelligence of the writing and the interest of the theme." Rebecca Lowrie

— + Lit R p535 F 23 '24 550w

"In spite of the structural short-comings of the book as a novel it is yet of engrossing interest throughout because of the vivacity with which the author treats his variegated material and the undoubted intimacy which he shows in describing the real life of the Japanese."

+ — N Y Times p19 F 10 '24 750w

"The Japanese girls are delicately limned; they have individuality and feminine allure. They are compelled to support a considerable burden of political and economic information, but that too is not without intrinsic interest." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p21 Mr 16 '24 900w

"If one would obtain by way of fiction a well-informed interpretation of Japanese character, point of view, traditional customs, family life, and contemporary social conditions, it may be had by reading Henry Walsworth Kinney's 'Broken Butterflies.'"

+ Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p373 Je 12 '24 100w

KIRSHMAN, JOHN EMMETT. Principles of investment. 902p $5 Shaw, A. W.

332.6 Investments 24-21094

"Dr Kirshman presents a comprehensive analysis of the principles governing the investment of personal or institutional funds. After a discussion of the elementary concepts of investment, he takes up the leading forces in the supply of and the demand for capital funds and the returns from investments. Changes in security prices through current market fluctuations as well as long-time trend in general business conditions are discussed. The management and control of investments are outlined, and diversification is discussed."—Springf'd Republican

---

"This present volume should contribute greatly to the establishment of confidence in the commitment of private and public funds in investment undertakings. It should also lead to a more satisfactory relationship between the banker and investor. And should this condition be brought to pass with its attendant benefits, considerable credit for its accomplishment must be awarded to men of Professor Kirshman's quality." L. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 22 '24 700w

"For the non-professional investor (and even the professional might find it useful) we know of no more comprehensive and simple a work than the present. Dr. Kirshman elucidates

KIRSHMAN, J: E.—Continued
every point in connection with investment problems in a brief, interesting manner." H. P. Preston
+ Lit R p9 O 25 '24 220w
Management and Adm 8:539 N '24 100w
N Y Times p24 Ja 11 '25 700w
Springf'd Republican p14 S 14 '24 240w

KITCHELL, JOSEPH GRAY. Earl of hell. 325p $2 Century
24-8878

"In search for radium, two young men, comrades in college and scientific research, discover a miraculous substance in the Andes of Ecuador. Its affinity is found at the opposite point on the earth's surface, which leads the explorers to the slopes of Mount Korentji in far-off Sumatra. When the two elements are united the resulting substance possesses the property of weightlessness, absolute levity and a capacity for absorbing and storing an almost unlimited quantity of electric power. The nullificaton of the law of gravity leads to interesting and amusing experiences. Ultimately, of course, the destructive power of the new force is seized upon and with disastrous results to the agents of a thinly disguised foreign nation who seek the new material for their country's rehabilitation and future power."—N Y Times

"This is an over-grown 'juvenile'; a wonder story addressed to grown-ups, but with nothing but its youthful zest in wonders to recommend it."
— Lit R p794 My 31 '24 140w

"The story is well organized. The slender, frayed thread of love interest is unnecessary and sometimes hinders the scientific interest of the book."
+ — N Y Times p9 My 4 '24 220w

KITCHIN, FREDERICK HARCOURT (COPPLESTONE, BENNET, pseud.). Diversions of Dawson. 301p $2 Dutton
24-1640

Four tales in which Chief inspector Dawson of Scotland Yard, under various disguises and for his own diversion, goes on some adventures in criminality. Contents: Mr Cholmondeley Jones; Ned Grimes, deck-hand; The prime minister; The butler.

"The ending is delicious, because, thank the powers, it is unexpected. The whole thing is entertaining and it has one over Sherlock Holmes. It has a lightsome sense of humor."
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '24 500w
Int Bk R p330 Mr '24 280w

"This is a good book to give your boy for the winter reading; you can read it yourself after he has gone to bed."
+ Lit R p527 F 16 '24 400w

"With those Americans who have not been brought up on rush-and-run detectives in our almost daily issue of magazines, Mr. Dawson will find some favor."
+ — N Y Times p24 F 10 '24 500w
Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 220w

KNIBBS, HENRY HERBERT. Wild horses. 272p $2 Houghton
24-4503

"A story laid in the Arizona of the old West, in which the capture of a wild gray stallion is featured, and a wealthy Chicago girl finds that flirting with a strong primitive westerner leads her into serious and unexpected difficulties."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 20:339 Je '24

"It is all very exciting, if not as convincing as some of Mr. Knibbs's plots." F. B.
+ — Boston Transcript p6 Mr 12 '24 750w

"This Wild West yarn is up to the usual specifications so far as excitement goes, and there are some nice touches in the author's descriptive passages."
+ Lit R p827 Je 14 '24 180w

"Fine, breezy romance of the Southwest, graphic with the color and feeling of a part of Arizona too little known to the general reader."
+ N Y Times p22 My 18 '24 550w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Jl 3 '24 70w
Wis Lib Bul 20:126 My '24

KNIGHT, GLADYS. Marriage for two. 256p $1.75 Boni & Liveright
24-15423

Miss Rivers was an attractive nurse and Dr Weston a fine-looking man, so what was more natural than that they should fall in love? So thought Mrs Gaynor as she lay in her cot in the sanatorium near El Paso, and she determined to bring it about. Of course there was the fact that the two seemed to be sworn enemies, but Mrs Gaynor was perishing from ennui and she had to have something to keep her occupied. Before she finished she had her hands full, but she accomplished her purpose.

Booklist 21:68 N '24
Cleveland p85 N '24

Reviewed by Elizabeth Wyman
Int Bk R p676 Ag '24 300w

"It is a type of story that has been done before, but one that will always find readers when handled as deftly as in this case. The author writes pleasantly, achieving interest without straining the reader's credulity too far. It is an agreeable book for light Summer reading or as a gift for some convalescent friend."
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 3 '24 360w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p23 Je 29 '24 600w

"'Marriage for Two' is the airy, thistledown kind of book that may be read in a hammock under the trees in two lazy hours. The novel in type and technique is a good magazine story a little too painfully stretched to fit a cloth cover." F. V. Roman
+ — N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 120w

KNOBLOCK, EDWARD. The lullaby, and other plays; with an introd. by Geo. P. Baker. 323p $2.50 Putnam
812 24-14154

Three plays, each of which has had a successful run in the New York city theatres: The lullaby in 1923, Marie-Odile in 1915 and Tiger, Tiger in 1918.

"'The Lullaby' is a conventional sex melodrama, tawdry, artificial and garishly theatrical; it is weakly constructed, feebly motivated and cheaply and superficially philosophical, and achieved only that pseudo-realism which is fundamentally untrue to life. 'Marie-Odile,' the second of the dramas, is written with a defter touch." S. A. C.
— + Lit R p858 Je 28 '24 100w
Outlook 137:445 Jl 16 '24 320w

KNOX, EDMUND GEORGE VALPY (EVOE OF PUNCH, pseud.). Fiction as she is wrote. 148p il $1.75 Dial press
827 Parodies [24-19789]

A collection of burlesques of typical popular novels of today, by Evoe of Punch. Among the types of romance parodied are society novels, clerical life, western stories, desert love and the South seas.

Boston Transcript p8 N 8 '24 560w

"Mr. Knox gives at least signs of being concerned with the essential manner and spirit of the authors and books he has selected for his parodies and occasionally he achieves a real effect. A piece called 'December Flame,' although inexcusably, by 'Rupert Kitchins,' is particularly good." H. J. Mankiewicz

— + N Y Times p23 N 2 '24 130w

Reviewed by G: Whicher
N Y Tribune p15 D 7 '24 580w

"Such cheerful and delicious nonsense, beside being a diversion in itself, is the best purge for literary follies, a sort of 'Mirrors of Fleet Street' that catches the incautious angles of writers and distorts them to a grotesque exhibition of their absurdities."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:167 O 4 '24 320w

"We would give it as our opinion that no writers or readers of contemporary literature can do without Mr. Knox's happy guidance."
+ Spec 130:452 Mr 17 '23 280w

"Mr. Knox has reduced modern popular fiction into twelve types; he has then extracted the essence of each type. The total result occupies precisely 148 pages. The slight variations on that total occupy whole circulating libraries. . . Who are Horace Wallpaper, Rupert Kitchins, Philips Quex and Hogarth Walf? The only way to identify them is to read this wonderful little book of parodies. We have done that with enormous pleasure, and, as a matter of fact, as the tipsters say, we know."
+ Spec 131:906 D 8 '23 280w

KOCH, FREDERICK HENRY, ed. Carolina folk-plays, second series; with an introd. on making a folk theatre. 173p il $2 Holt
812 Theater—Little theater movement. American drama—Collections 24-27628

The second series of "Carolina folk-plays," like the first (Book Review Digest, 1923), represents the work of student playwrights at the University of North Carolina. The material is drawn from their own experience and observation—from the history and folklore of the state or its present-day life. The editor, who is both founder and director of the Carolina playmakers, has written an introduction on the making of a folk theatre. Contents: Trista, a play of folk-superstition, by Elizabeth A. Lay; The return of Buck Gavin, the tragedy of a mountain outlaw, by Thomas Clayton Wolfe; Gaius and Gaius, jr., a comedy of plantation days, by Lucy M. Cobb; Fixin's, the tragedy of a tenant-farm woman, by Emma and Paul Green; The beaded buckle, a comedy of village aristocracy, by Francis Gray.

Reviewed by M. J. Moses
Outlook 138:509 N 26 '24 220w

"The Carolina Playmakers furnish in this, the second series of 'Carolina plays,' further evidence of the possibility of building a genuinely indigenous theater in parts of the country where the life retains a characteristic native flavor."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 26 '24 550w

KOEHLER, ARTHUR. Properties and uses of [2] wood, prepared in the Extension division of the University of Wisconsin. (Industrial education ser.) 354p il $3.50 McGraw
691.1 Wood 24-19184

"Presents the more important facts concerning the structure and the physical, mechanical, and chemical properties of wood and how they affect its utilization. Includes chapters on air seasoning, kiln drying, deterioration, and protection against decay and fire. Much of the material is based on the work of the Forest products laboratory."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:594 D '24

KOHLER, ERIC LOUIS. Accounting principles underlying federal income taxes, 1924. 489p $5 Shaw, A. W.
336.24 Income tax 24-3545

"The author of this book brings out the principles of Federal Income Taxation which are definitely established and explains exactly how these principles apply in accounting for the taxable income of the individual and corporation. The law and regulations are condensed as far as possible. Examples containing figures are given to clarify brief statements. Digests and interpretations of the more important cases follow the discussion of the various topics. Most important, there are problems which illustrate the practical application of the more difficult points."—Publisher's note

"There is no phase of the incidence of the tax left untouched, and Mr. Kohler drives home his directions in such plain language, without unnecessary technicalities or abstruse terminology that he will be a dullard indeed who cannot make up his return without resort to expert assistance."
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 2 '24 600w
St Louis p37 N '24

KOHLER, ERIC LOUIS, and PETTENGILL, PAUL W. Principles of auditing. 231p $4 Shaw, A. W.
657 Auditing 24-23509

The authors outline clearly the actual working procedure in making the audit of the various accounts of a business. Step by step, they explain just how the auditor proceeds in determining the financial condition and earnings of a business for its officers or directors, partners or stockholders, bankers or investors. They describe the methods of the auditor in detecting errors of a clerical nature, or of principle. They explain how to start an audit, its procedure in detail and the preparation of the exhibits and certificates as well as the text of the audit report. A complete set of working papers, obtained in an actual situation, with a related audit report, is reproduced.

"The several books on auditing published lately which followed a similar manner of exposition lacked the thoroughness and wealth of descriptive matter which this work contains. This volume is certain of a hearty reception at the hands of instructor and student alike." L. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 15 '24 650w
Springf'd Republican p5a O 19 '24 220w

KONOPAK, LOTHAR THEODORE. Cost accounting fundamentals from the standpoint of management. 235p il $3 Ronald
657 Cost accounting 24-2703

"Principles . . . are discussed throughout with constant reference to the uses of cost accounting, so that the cost accountant may clearly perceive the ultimate purpose of the cost work and the executive may grasp its significance in relation to his own duties."—Preface

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '24 340w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:316 Je '24

KOPALD, SYLVIA. Rebellion in labor unions. 293p $2 Boni & Liveright
331.89 Trade unions. Strikes and lockouts 24-10033

The book is a study of the insurgent movement from within the labor unions where minority groups are splitting the labor forces and expressing themselves in the so-called outlaw strikes which have disturbed American industry in recent years. The study is based on four of these outlaw strikes: that of the Illinois coal miners in 1919; the outlaw rail strike in 1920; the strike of New York printers in 1919, commonly known as the vacation movement; the newspaper web pressmen's strike in New York City in 1923.

"The book is well written and the author presents an interesting mass of detail. The reader, however, cannot see the forest on account of the trees, and there seems to be a certain lack of historical perspective." G: M. Janes
+ — Am Econ R 14:767 D '24 290w
Bookm 59:adv Ag '24 120w

KOPALD, SYLVIA—Continued

"In these four epitomes Miss Kopald presents an excellent cinema of the growing restlessness even in some of the old and entirely English-speaking unions. . . Miss Kopald's book is a doctoral dissertation, but she never commits the main idolatry of the social-science dissertation: she shows no hesitancy of courage camouflaged as impartiality. She takes the stand that even in economics some things have been settled." B: Stolberg

+ Nation 118:742 Je 25 '24 780w

"One sees much in the book that is highly interesting. The author, it is declared by the publishers, is giving an unbiased view of the subject. Quite frankly, she is not. Quite obviously, she is prejudiced in favor of the insurgent groups. That prejudice leads her to give a picture of union organization that will bring joy to the heart of every anti-union industrialist and capitalist. The officials, as she paints them, are hard, superior, autocratic and despotic. The rank and file mean nothing to them but money and power." R. C. Feld

N Y Times p18 My 18 '24 1100w

"The style is not engaging; the 'conclusions' are rather indefinite."

— Outlook 137:320 Je 25 '24 50w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 29 '24 1050w

KORNHAUSER, ARTHUR WILLIAM, and ² KINGSBURY, FORREST ALVA. Psychological tests in business. (Materials for the study of business) 194p il $1.90 Univ. of Chicago press

150 Mental tests. Employment management 24-14499

"A clear statement of the nature of psychological tests, methods of making and using, the extent of their use in office and non-office occupations and the possibilities of further development. An impartial summary of the research in this field up to the present time. Authors are instructors in the University of Chicago."—Booklist

"The nature, uses, and results of psychological tests are so commonly misunderstood that this volume deserves careful reading, alike by over-sanguine users of tests, and by hasty skeptics. The chapters presenting the results of tests applied in industry have a unique attractiveness for the executive, but their real meaning is comprehended only if the reader has an appreciation of what psychological tests really are and how they are scientifically constructed, an appreciation to which two excellent chapters are dedicated." C. L. Stone

+ Am Econ R 14:754 D '24 100w

Booklist 21:135 Ja '25

St Louis p403 D '24

KRAPP, GEORGE PHILIP. America, the great adventure. 406p il $4 Knopf

973 United States—History 24-23158

This history of America from the discovery to the present is intended especially, but not exclusively, for boys and girls. It is simply and readably written, in broad outline, and its emphasis is placed on America's growth and progress rather than on its wars. The informal illustrations by Philip von Saltza are somewhat in the Van Loon manner.

Booklist 21:157 Ja '25

"A very readable and simple account."

+ Bookm 60:507 D '24 130w

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 10 '25 520w

Cleveland p87 N '24

"George Philip Krapp has used a large canvas in 'America' and has kept intact the vastness of his theme by eliminating tedious successions of minor historical facts. . . 'America' is a dignified, important work. It is vast in scope and in attainment, and it is written so that boys and girls, men and women, will find it equally valuable. Its outward appearance is also very fine. For it is a beautiful book and enhanced by unusual illustrations." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p894 N '24 600w

"The mechanical appearance of this sumptuously printed volume suggests that the book may have been written for young people, and there is nothing in the vocabulary or the style that should cause the average American adolescent to stumble or grow fainthearted. The treatment is sufficiently mature, however, to suit the class of readers, unhappily very large, who do not care for what they loosely refer to as the 'facts' of American history, but who prefer a rapid survey, pleasantly sketched."

+ Nation 119:685 D 17 '24 200w

"This is in many ways the best book of its kind—it is primarily for young readers seven to twelve—since Edward Eggleston's 'First Book in American History.'" Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 1:259 N 8 '24 250w

KROEBER, ALFRED LOUIS. Anthropology. 523p il $4.50 Harcourt

572 Anthropology 23-16060

The professor of anthropology in the University of California sums up the present status of the whole science of anthropology, defining the central problems that concern the relations of the organic and cultural factors in man and offering such solutions as seem to have been proved valid. Contents: Scope and character of anthropology; Fossil man; Living races; Problems of race; Language; The beginnings of human civilization; Heredity, climate, and civilization; Diffusion; Parallels; The arch and the week; The spread of the alphabet; The growth of a primitive religion; The history of civilization in native America; The growth of civilization; Index.

"Professor Kroeber's book deserves most careful reading by all sociologists. It is tolerant, scholarly, and well written." M. W. Willey

+ Am J Soc 30:95 Jl '24 500w

Boston Transcript p5 F 2 '24 1050w

"Mr. Kroeber's book is a most stimulating presentation of the knowledge at the present time concerning the processes of cultural growth and diffusion. It is full of matter, but a book nevertheless so easily and intelligently presented, pervaded by so individual and wise an insight, expressed in so rare a surety of phrase that it stands high among those books to which the intelligent non-professional reader may go to discover the results of modern research." Ruth Benedict

+ Nation 118:118 Ja 30 '24 1050w

"The work will be welcomed for the sweep of perspective it affords. To the lay reader, eager for this point of view from his glimpse of it through the faulty and loose work of Mr. Wells, Dr. Kroeber's book will come with its general sane and enlightened approach and its easy style as a fascinating exposition of a theme often wondered about. But it is unfortunate that there are no references in the text to the many works from which Dr. Kroeber drew his information, nor a bibliography at the end of the book to which the interested student might go for further information." M. J. Herskovits

+ — New Repub 38:25 F 27 '24 1300w

"This volume is highly scientific and its interest is restricted to scholars and scientists who would have a comprehensive survey of anthropological discoveries and tabulations of discoveries thus far disclosed in that branch of science." J. A.

N Y Tribune p23 Mr 16 '24 100w

"Kroeber in writing his Anthropology has had the advantage of having taught large numbers of students for many years in the subject. A reading of his book discloses the value of this experience. He seems to know what the reader needs presented in order to understand. The volume is also quite rich in concrete materials, not presented only as illustrations, but as basic to the hypothesis or as historical facts valuable on their own account." W: F. Ogburn

+ Pol Sci Q 39:327 Je '24 550w

"The book is to be recommended to our friend the 'general reader' as well as the student; it will both entertain and stimulate him." B. L.
+ Survey 52:551 Ag 15 '24 170w

KROPOTKIN, PETR ALEKSIEEVICH, prince. [2] Ethics; origin and development; auth. tr. from the Russian by Louis S. Friedland and Joseph R. Piroshnikoff. 349p $4 Dial press
170.9 Ethics—History 25-816

This exposition of the history and development of moral teachings was left unfinished on the death of Prince Kropotkin. He finds the origin of moral conduct in the feelings of sympathy and in mutual aid as everywhere practiced in the animal kingdom. He traces the development of ethics thru human history in the gradually broadening conception of justice as equality of rights.

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 10 '25 1000w

"'Ethics, Origin and Development' is by far the most comprehensive and able presentation of the naturalistic bases of ethics in a long time. . . The book is a penetrating and exhaustive study of ethical thought, beginning with primitive man and coming down to Marx, Proudhon and Guyau. The matter is presented in a comprehensible way, and with a warmth of feeling for the importance of the subject. But the book remains, for all that, a historical study; it is the foundation for a contribution, not a contribution itself."
+ — N Y Times p11 Ja 4 '25 2100w

KUMMER, FREDERIC ARNOLD (ARNOLD FREDERICKS, pseud.). First days of knowledge. (Earth's story v 2) 314p il $2 Doran
571 Civilization, Ancient. Society, Primitive 23-18942

"'The First Days of Knowledge' is the second volume in a series which Mr. Kummer is writing in order to narrate, 'quite simply for young readers' the story of the earth. This new volume takes up the drama with the dawning of inventive power and of intellectual curiosity and by means of dramatic little tales set in the various parts of the world where man was beginning to use brains and hands to a purpose, shows how and why these firstlings of civilization were brought forth. One of these stories narrates the forging of the first bronze, another the invention of the water clock, the first mechanical contrivance for measuring time, while still others picture the development of weaving, of irrigation, of the arts of sculpture and music and medicine and writing, and other things."—N Y Times

Booklist 20:302 My '24
Cleveland p40 My '24

"There is a wealth of chronological information regarding man's knowledge, its acquisition and its dissemination, to be found in this book, told always in such a way that the facts have life. The music-loving child will like the chapter on music, but an outstanding attribute of the book is that it contains so much to interest every one." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p746 S '24 430w

"The author possesses enough respect for the dignity of the English language to prevent his writing down to his audience in the manner regrettably usual among the purveyors of children's books. In other words, he may have gone out of his way to find simple words, but the fact is not evident in his clear, explicit style."
+ Lit R p731 My 3 '24 140w
Nature 114:533 O 11 '24 180w

"The little stories are very simply told and each one is thoroughly invested with personal and dramatic interest."
+ N Y Times p16 My 4 '24 240w

"Certainly reading books like this should prepare the young mind for the reception of ancient history in school."
+ N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 170w

Reviewed by G. M. Goldman
N Y World p7e My 18 '24 60w

KYNE, PETER BERNARD. Enchanted hill. 369p il $2 Cosmopolitan bk.
24-25179

"The Enchanted Hill" is the name of a ranch in New Mexico owned by the hero of the story, Major Lee Purdy, ex-aviator. There are two girls, Purdy's frail sister Hallie, and Gail Ormsby of Los Angeles who comes to New Mexico to look after her ranch, and with whom Lee falls in love at first sight. The manager of Gail's ranch, Ira Todd, is a deep-dyed villain who furnishes Gail with unpleasant facts concerning Lee's life, and who on a few occasions hires men to kill Purdy. Thus the story is provided with tragedy, the hum of aeroplanes at midnight delivering mysterious messages, and the brave work of a loyal collie who speeds the villain's day of reckoning. Gail Ormsby valiantly stands by and watches the retribution of Todd and the salvation of Lee Purdy, and inevitably shares a large interest in the "Enchanted hill" and its owner.

"This sort of yarn can go far. And it does, always with the unfailing good humor and capricious jesting of Mr. Kyne. As we read, entirely beguiled, this literally ripping book, we thought Mr. Kyne must be laughing a little at us." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p12 O 25 '24 550w

"It is an interesting, well-spun yarn, ingenious, swift moving and with any amount of incident."
+ N Y Times p16 N 16 '24 650w

"We have found it well worth our while to read Mr. Kyne's story and to meet his book people, heroes and villains alike."
+ N Y World p9e N 2 '24 780w

"It is not his best story, but it will sell prodigiously; Zane Grey must look to his laurels."
+ — Outlook 138:565 D 3 '24 20w

KYRK, HAZEL. Theory of consumption. (Hart, Schaffner and Marx prize essays) 298p $2.50 Houghton
330.1 Consumption (economics). Cost and standard of living 23-11799

In developing her theory of consumption the author centers attention on the instincts and acquired interests which are expressed by the consumer's choice of goods in the market. She defines the place of the consumer in the industrial scheme, the scope and freedom of his choice, the nature of his interests and how he can make them felt. She finds that though the consumer has formal freedom of choice, producers direct and control demand, and the consumer is bound not only by the limits of his income but by standards of living imposed by social inheritance. The book discusses in detail the formation of standards of living—how they originate and how they develop and change.

Booklist 20:199 Mr '24
Reviewed by H: R. Mussey
Nation 118:146 F 6 '24 450w

L

LA BATUT, GUY DE, vicomte, and FRIEDMANN, GEORGES. History of the French people; with an introd. by Henri Barbusse. (Histories of the peoples) 315p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]
944 France—History [23-13145]

The aim of the book is to present the history of the French people disentangled as far as possible from battles, royal adventures and the annals of the great. It traces the development of the people, the movement of ideas, the unifying of their interests, the victories and defeats of their ideals, the causes and consequences of their institutions, and the state of society in successive periods. The early history of France is touched upon only so far as it throws light on the later social and popular developments. Half the book is given to the period from the French revolution to the world war.

LA BATUT, GUY DE—Continued

"It is not pedantical nor laborious by any means, and if one wishes to gain a thorough knowledge of French history in a short time he would do well to read this book." J. A.
+ N Y Tribune p21 Ja 27 '24 240w

LABOUR party's aim; a criticism and a restatement, by seven members of the Labour party. 96p $1 Macmillan
335 Labor party (Great Britain). Socialism
L23-280

In these five anonymous essays a number of men and women who are working in the British labor movement re-examine the aims of socialism and the fundamental principles of a socialist commonwealth. Contents: Why a new statement is needed; The international ideal; The economic basis of labour policy; Government in a labour state; The individual in the labour state.

"The tone of the book is good but the ideas are only loosely connected and the analysis is mostly superficial."
— + Am Pol Sci R 18:832 N '24 60w

"It represents an attempt on the part of seven enlightened laborites to formulate a creed whereby the Labor Party may consistently live. It is written with restraint and logic, and if the aims seem radical, at least they are not presented with that fierce denunciation which often accompanies socialistic dicta."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 12 '24 320w
Cleveland p55 Jl '24

"The anonymous authors are not contented with 'back to Marx' or 'back to Fabianism.' They look at the future in the light of conditions today, and their stand is to be reckoned with not only at home but in relation to imperial policy and England's part in Europe." Alpha Buse
+ Survey 51:414 Ja 15 '24 200w

LACRETELLE, JACQUES DE. Silbermann; tr. from the French by Brian Lunn. 191p $2 Boni & Liveright [6s Benn]
24-1307

A much discussed and widely translated French novel concerned with anti-Semitism as it manifests itself in a French school for boys. Silbermann is a Jewish youth of high aspirations and keen intellect who from the moment of his entrance into the school is subjected to the persecution of his schoolmates. He is befriended by one only among them, an idealistic Protestant who becomes his staunch defender and who is the narrator of the story. The situation is most skilfully used to bring out not only the strength and bitterness of the race antagonism but at the same time the qualities of the Jew which arouse it. At the close of his stormy career at the lycée Silbermann, thoroughly disillusioned and convinced that he cannot make any headway against race prejudice, goes to America with the determination to make money as the only opportunity left him.

Booklist 20:265 Ap '24

"A remarkably powerful study of adolescent friendship and motivation. I do not remember ever having read so clever a study of schoolboy affection and cruelty of parental misunderstanding, of worldly bitterness." J. F.
+ Bookm 59:70 Mr '24 120w

"Somehow a 'happy' ending makes the entire book flatten out. It instantly becomes a powerful piece of pro-Semitic propaganda, which will doubtless sell widely in New York. Either its author lacks courage, or he lacks technique. His occasional rendering of passionate outbursts on the part of the persecuted hero are excellent." D. F. G.
— + Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '24 520w
Cleveland p23 Mr '24
Dial 76:465 My '24 100w
Freeman 7:622 Mr 5 '24 120w

"The quality of the book inheres in its extraordinary frank and yet sympathetic delineation of [the chief] character, and its presentation of a social and racial problem for which no solution is, or perhaps can be, offered." H. W. Boynton
+ Ind 112:127 Mr 1 '24 300w

"It is a poignant bit of psychology, amazingly well handled." R. L. Kurzman
+ Int Bk R p556 Je '24 400w

Reviewed by Eva Goldbeck
Lit R p646 Ap 5 '24 680w

"A sinewy, unsentimental narrative unfolded with dramatic directness. In a style quite free of affectations, the story is developed, with sympathy which keeps within the bounds of restraint and with an understanding which enables one to see both sides of the prejudice."
+ Nation 118:212 F 20 '24 70w

"The novel is almost perfect in technique. Words have been impregnated with almost the throb of life. Like a conflagration moves the tempo of the book—a spark, a flame, a consuming fire, and then, dying embers—the ashes of futile endeavour."
+ N Y Times p17 Ja 20 '24 820w

"This is indeed a fine book. Some Continental critics have declared it a great book. That it has prolonged moments of greatness is undeniable. It has run into countless editions in France and received an important literary prize for its general excellence. Doubtless it deserves the distinction it has got, for it will interest and stir one deeply as a beautifully told story, and will enlighten many minds inclined to the vulgar sport of 'Jew-baiting.' " J: Armstrong
+ N Y Tribune p20 Ja 13 '24 1800w

"The study of conscious struggles in the heroes is very interesting. We are also given the problem of a stranger to adapt himself to the tradition and the culture of his new country. The story is told in a very simple and very natural style, which adds to the charm of the novel." Marcel Adler
+ N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 600w

"The delicacy of the treatment is exquisite. The ordinary becomes never the commonplace but always the poetical. There is a wistfulness, a wise and mournful acceptance of human cowardice and infidelity, an august assumption of beauty in ugliness: in a word, there is greatness." Gerald Gould
+ Sat R 136:474 O 27 '23 350w

"A novel which completely embodies a thesis and is at the same time a well-imagined, well-rounded work of art."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 20 '24 720w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p748 N 8 '23 460w

LAGERLOF, SELMA OTTILIANA LOVISA. Mårbacka; tr. from the Swedish by Velma Swanston Howard. 288p $2.50 Doubleday
B or 92
24-22474

The Swedish novelist here recalls the memories of her childhood and the home life of her family in the old farmstead, Mårbacka, inherited from Selma Lagerlöf's great grandfather. They are recollections of a serene and happy life, of work days and fête days, of visitors who came to the house, of the old Mårbacka in her grandmother's time and of her father's efforts to improve the farm.

Booklist 21:109 D '24

" 'Marbacka' is not a complete autobiography, for it tells nothing of the author's adult years, but it reveals the heart of a child with an exquisite charm that has seldom, if ever, been equaled." I: Anderson
+ Int Bk R p890 N '24 650w

"Surely there never was another autobiography like it, nor will it soon be followed by another of its kind. It is, to put it plainly, a biography with the 'auto' left out. And where the prize-winning septuagenarian successor of the little Selma tried to sit, we find the humbly lovable muse of Swedish folk poetry. She sits in an old one-horse shay, drawn lazily by an old white horse, and we laugh as we look at her, but, while we are still laughing, tears dim our eyes, and suddenly we find ourselves back in our own childhood, with eyes and ears wide open to the new wonder that is the world. How long the spell lasts is a matter of individual temperament. But when we come out of it at last the tears are still in our eyes and the smile is still on our lips." Edwin Bjorkman
+ Lit R p3 S 20 '24 850w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 36:414 D 13 '24 130w

Reviewed by Rose Lee
New Repub 40:303 N 19 '24 360w

"'Mårbacka' is one of those rare works which bring childhood back before us. That Selma Lagerlöf has done this and done it so wonderfully without shadowing the beautiful picture by the sorrow that visited her in early childhood, when she became a helpless cripple, is to me one of the most triumphantly convincing proofs of her objective genius." Francis Snow
+ N Y Times p2 S 21 '24 2300w

"One cannot close the book without knowing that a new and living element has unobtrusively crept into one's experience." Freda Kirchwey
+ N Y Tribune p10 O 5 '24 1000w

"A beautiful record, a source book for much that has preceded it from Miss Lagerlöf's pen, yet a noble book in its own right." Harry Salpeter
+ N Y World p6e S 14 '24 600w
Outlook 138:381 N 5 '24 30w

"Idyllic as it is, the reminiscent aspect of this, Miss Lagerlöf's latest book, fits in perfectly with all that has gone before. It is little to be wondered at, therefore, that this writer holds the great love and esteem of her countrymen. It is not unlikely further that 'Marbacka' may be the means of gaining for Selma Lagerlöf an even larger audience than before, and a word of commendation must go to the American publishers for their enterprise in making one more of her fascinating books available in English." Julius Moritzen
+ Sat R of Lit 1:179 O 11 '24 600w

"It is a collection of sketches embodying with a delicate and wistful charm, incidents of her childhood. Selma Lagerlöf has an elusively simple manner of description which is fully revealing and strangely fascinating."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a S 21 '24 750w

LAHEE, ARNOLD WARBURTON. Our competitors and markets. (American business ser.) 477p library ed $5 Holt

382 Foreign trade. United States—Commerce. Geography, Commercial 24-19449

An introduction to foreign trade dealing with the commercial geography of the principal foreign countries with which the United States has commercial relations. Each country is treated as a problem in itself, as to population and customs, as a source of raw materials, as a competitor in industry and as a market for our manufactures. Many maps and diagrams are provided.

"The inquiry is a limited one, directed to an immediately practical purpose. There is need for books of the kind. The only questions about it worth raising are whether the job is well done or not, and whether the job can really be well done within the limitations the author has set for himself. Mr. Lahee does it with a fair degree of skill, although real economic history places the roots of British industrialism somewhat deeper in the soil." Alvin Johnson
+ — New Repub 40:278 N 12 '24 1050w

"One suspects that Mr. Lahee is a better economist than prophet. His prophecies are a little too simple, a bit too much in one dimension." Evans Clark
— + N Y Tribune p4 O 5 '24 1800w

LALOU, RENE. Contemporary French litera-
2 ture; tr. from the French by William Aspen-wall Bradley. 402p $4.50 Knopf

840.9 French literature—History and criticism 24-30797

M. Lalou's history is a detailed survey of French literature for the fifty-year period from the Franco-German war to the present. Over six hundred writers are included in his survey and all the important movements of contemporary French literature. The first four chapters are true literary history in which are summed up the literary influences immediately following the war of 1870-71, the Parnassian epoch, the naturalistic movement and its reactions. From that point onward, when the works of living writers are reached, the author necessarily becomes the contemporary critic dealing with reputations still in the making. There is a bibliographical list containing works of the most representative authors during the period from 1871-1923 and an index.

"This book is not only a counterblast to the cant of both the conservative and the radical literary camps in America; it is intrinsically a first-rate and indispensable piece of scholarship, in the very best French tradition—balanced, clear, authoritative, and never dull." Ernest Boyd
+ Nation 120:47 Ja 14 '25 1100w

"An invaluable handbook to the study of French letters since 1870, which never fails to be suggestive, even where its author's conclusions invite disagreement. . . A serious defect is doubtless inseparable from the encyclopedic scale on which the book has been planned. Toward the middle it appears to fall into two sections, which bear to one another a relation that might be roughly expressed as the difference between full-dress criticism and 'briefer mention.' The lack, for the second portion of the book, of a perspective of forty or fifty years by which to assess wheat and chaff might reasonably be invoked to explain the discordance." H: L. Stuart
+ — N Y Times p10 D 28 '24 1650w

LA MOTTE, ELLEN NEWBOLD. Ethics of opium. 205p $1.75 Century

178.8 Opium trade 24-4470

The book shows the extent of the opium traffic thru the Far East and the responsibility of the different countries for it. The output of the raw material is the root of the matter and control hinges upon shutting off the supply at the source. The book brings out a mass of evidence to show that there has been no sincere effort on the part of producing countries to prevent the traffic in opium. The concluding chapter is concerned with the international agreement known as the Hague opium convention and the authority of the League of nations in regard to opium.

Booklist 20:321 Je '24

"Miss La Motte has collected her statistics assiduously from a variety of official and semi-official sources, and has presented them clearly. The conclusions she draws from them, however, especially with regard to China, are not always so clear."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 24 '24 440w

"For many years Miss La Motte has made an intensive study of the opium situation from its international aspects, until today she has become an authority on this difficult and highly complex subject. The book presents a striking collection of data, drawn from official documentary sources. This careful attention to detail, with footnotes citing authority for each statement, gives the book a unique value and makes it of great importance to anyone who wishes to become familiar with the opium problem. And, curiously enough, although full of statistics, the book makes anything but dry reading—an achievement difficult to attain." S. G. Porter

LA MOTTE, E. N.—Continued

+ Nation 119:23 Jl 2 '24 520w

"She has assembled an impressive mass of facts, statistics, accounts of conditions, and she marshals them convincingly to the support of her contention that there is only one way that can be made effective for the ending of the menace—reduction of the amount produced of the raw material to the bare limits of that needed for scientific and medical uses."

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 16 '24 520w

"Told in a style which is hardly more impassioned than a Government report, history and statistics are marshaled in scientific order. Yet, despite this, you have the feeling of intense drama."

+ N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 200w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:297 Je '24
Wis Lib Bul 20:171 Jl '24

LANDAU, MARK ALEKSANDROVICH (ALDANOV, M. A., pseud.). Saint Helena, little island; tr. from the Russian by A. E. Chamot. 194p $2 Knopf

24-4863

The story is a re-creation, with strict regard to historical accuracy, of the last days of Napoleon on the island of Saint Helena. Napoleon is seen thru the eyes of members of the English colony—Sir Hudson Lowe, governor of the island, and his family—in his daily life at Longwood, and in conversation with his associates, Bertrand, Gourgaud, Las Cases and Montholon. Of special interest is the view of Napoleon thru the eyes of a young girl, step-daughter of the governor, who came to the island with an imaginative picture of General Bonaparte as a figure of legend and who one day had the chance to compare the mental image with the reality.

Lit R p953 Ag 9 '24 260w

"The threads of history and of purely imaginative narrative have been laced into a tight strand in this story, which seems to catch the essence of the final isolation of Napoleon. The spiritual significance of that episode is mirrored in a style which is compact and sparingly adorned: the story has simplicity as well as vitality."

+ Nation 118:662 Je 4 '24 50w

"It is true that portions of the book read like direct transcripts of history, but yet there is a curious overtone of elemental powers which colors the material to more than historical description." H. S. Gorman

+ — N Y Times p7 F 24 '24 650w
Wis Lib Bul 20:127 My '24

LANDOR, ARNOLD HENRY SAVAGE. Everywhere; the memoirs of an explorer. 2v 387; 437p il ea $10 Stokes [30s Unwin]

B or 92 24-29647

A long and full book of memories drawn from the author's varied activities as explorer, writer, portrait painter and in the field of mechanical invention. He tells about a great many well-known people he has met but the first interest of his book is travel. His explorations have taken him all over the world and into strange and forbidden places, which he has already described in his books of travel. His most famous experiences were in Tibet where he endured fearful hardships. He was in the Boxer uprising and was the first Englishman to enter Peking with the relief expedition. He crossed the salt desert of Persia, made the trans-African journey from east to west and penetrated the interior of South America.

"The book is sketchily, but charmingly written. He has a delightful sense of humor, and despite his early assertion that his memory is faulty, he brings to mind many an anecdote, many a reminiscence, that it would be a misfortune to let lie buried in his own memory." Karl Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 29 '24 2350w

Reviewed by H. J. Massingham
Nation and Ath 36:sup384 D 6 '24 100w
New Statesman 24:supv N 8 '24 700w

"Such is his gift for narrative, and so vivid is his imagination, that he relates adventures which, if told by a lesser light, would be characterized as mere fish stories. In the present two volumes the reader is alternately tempted to ridicule and to admire." N: Roosevelt

— + N Y Times p1 D 14 '24 2200w

Reviewed by D. C. Seitz
N Y World p9e D 28 '24 800w
R of Rs 71:109 Ja '25 180w

"There is much that is really great in the man, and his book is an epic of human endurance. Yet he is still a baffling figure. Just as we are making up our minds to dislike him we find him taking some derelict leper with him on a critical expedition, or bringing back to share his ovation the faithful servant who braved every danger with him." Kenneth Saunders

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:396 D 20 '24 900w

"Mr. Landor's achievement as a writer is to have preserved unity of tone in dealing with the most varied and refractory material."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p754 N 20 '24 1200w

LANDOWSKA, WANDA. Music of the past; tr. [2] from the French by William Aspenwall Bradley. 185p il $2.50 Knopf

780.4 Music—History and criticism 25-2076

The author is a celebrated Polish pianist and harpsichordist who recently made her first appearence in America. She makes an eloquent defense of the music of the past and stresses strongly her point that there is no such thing as progress in music, that the art of the older masters is just as pure and complete as that of the most modern composer, of a different beauty but in its own way unsurpassable. The book deals mainly with the music of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries—with Bach, Palestrina, Lully, Couperin, Handel and Rameau, and with the writer's own instrument, the harpsichord.

"Many are the stout weapons with which Wanda Landowska practices her defense of the music of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. First, she seats herself at the harpsichord and reproduces Lully and Couperin with utter skill and unanswerable charm for the benefit of many hundreds of hearers. Next she assembles her wide learning in their behalf in her book Music of the Past. Third she summons a sharp but genial literary style to flutter over the centuries with mocking antennae. Lastly has she found a deft translator and a sympathetic publisher. In all this brave front, so blithely taken, there lurks, however, one weakness, one potential breach. . . Where can she find for us a pair of seventeenth century ears?" M. E. Opdyke

New Repub 41:206 Ja 14 '25 720w

"In technical as well as in non-technical matters Mme. Landowska writes with ardent enthusiasm and deep conviction and with a grace of style that rises to eloquence. She may not carry full conviction to every music lover who reads her, for there is a certain lack of measure in every enthusiast. But her book cannot fail to arouse interest and to turn attention to the great music of the past which many suppose to have only an antiquarian interest." R: Aldrich

+ N Y Times p24 D 28 '24 800w

LANE, TAMAR, pseud. What's wrong with the movies? 254p $2 Waverly co., 311 E. 4th st., Los Angeles, Cal.

778 Moving pictures

The author maintains that the movies themselves, as an art, are all right, but that almost everything is wrong with the producers, directors, authors, public, exhibitors, plays, actors, critics and censors. Producers are thinking only of box office receipts and are unwilling to take a chance on plays of a better sort; the stars also are money-mad; there are no real leaders in the silent drama; there is a hopeless sameness about the films. Among the improvements he advocates are more artistic lighting, simpler settings, fewer daredevil stunts, more character plays, smaller and more select theaters, and a chain of little theaters to produce a better type of play.

Ind 112:184 Mr 29 '24 40w

"What's wrong with the movies is a matter of such serious importance to the public that a well-informed attempt to analyze the situation in detail would interest a large audience if it were written with sufficient dignity to demand attention. Unfortunately, the present book is not written in the English language, but in a local jargon, which, attempting to be clever, succeeds only in being unbearably vulgar."

— Lit R p583 Mr 8 '24 330w

Reviewed by C: Merz
New Repub 37:183 Ja 9 '24 300w
N Y Times p10 Ja 13 '24 600w

LANGFORD, GEORGE. Stories of the first American animals. 242p il $3 Boni & Liveright

566 Animals, Stories and legends of. Animals, Extinct 23-17367

"A combination of the scientific with the story form adapted to children in their teens is this volume. In his introduction, which is evidently addressed chiefly to adults, Mr Langford traces the gradual development, through millions of years, of animal life on the earth. . . [He then] addresses himself to the children and assuming that animals have voices for speech and can converse one with another, he tells his stories of the lives of these strange animals, now gone from earth, by means of their conversations. He illustrates these conversations with strongly drawn pictures in black and white."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 20:222 Mr '24

"Besides the numerous drawings in black and white, all of which are drawn by the author, there are a half dozen illustrations in color, pictures of great vigor. It is an excellent book for boys or girls of fifteen or sixteen, combining as it does both entertainment and instruction." E. J. C.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 2 '24 550w

"Scientific accuracy has not suffered because of the story-appeal of the book, and the pictures by Ty Mahon and the author are interesting and animated. The book is a valuable addition to child literature as well as to American natural history." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p468 My '24 600w

LANGNER, LAWRENCE. Moses. 187p $2 Boni & Liveright

812 Moses—Drama 24-22692

The play, which is presented in seven scenes and four interludes, is an imaginative dramatization of Biblical history made analagous to life in the twentieth century. There is also a prologue and a lengthy introduction in which Mr Langner discusses Moses and Catholicism; Moses and Protestantism; Moses and nationalism; Moses and democracy; Moses and political liberty.

"Owing a divided allegiance to the law and to the theatre, Mr. Langner has, so to speak, torn himself asunder in writing 'Moses,' a play in seven scenes and four interludes. This duality of approach makes the play interesting for its apparent internal conflict, though it scarcely endows it with enough dramatic strength to supply the deficiencies of the text." J: Anderson

+ — Lit R p2 S 13 '24 540w

Reviewed by H. J. Mankiewicz
N Y Times p14 O 12 '24 700w

"'Moses' is a brilliant and daring reinterpretation of history (or mythology) in the light of Mosaic influence on Western civilization, especially on Protestantism and most particularly on Puritanism." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 850w
Outlook 138:259 O 15 '24 160w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 14 '24 320w

LANSBURGH, RICHARD HINES. Industrial management. 488p il $4.50 Wiley

658 Factory management 23-14209

"In brief, this book aims to present a coordinated, simple treatment of the problems, the ideals, and the methods of successful industrial management in a way which is at the same time broad and specific, and which aims to indicate the responsibilities of the factory executives to the workers, the stockholders, and the community."—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:204 Ap '24

LAPE, ESTHER EVERETT, ed. Ways to peace. 465p $3 Scribner

341 Bok peace prize. International cooperation. Peace. United States—Foreign relations 24-7215

Among the 22,000 plans submitted for the Bok peace prize there were many others of great interest and value beside the winning one by Dr Levermore. This volume contains a selection of twenty of these; among them the plans of Gutzon Borglum, M. Carey Thomas, Simeon Strunsky, Charles W. Eliot, David Starr Jordan, Manly O. Hudson and Bishop Brent. The text of Dr Levermore's plan is also included. There is a preface by Edward Bok and an introduction by Esther Lape, member in charge of the Policy committee, who conducted the actual work of carrying out the project. She describes the nature of the plans and their sources and shows what they indicate concerning the views of diverse people on the subject of peace.

Am Pol Sci R 18:643 Ag '24 230w

"It is a book not so much to read, as to study, and designed not alone for present use, but for future reference. A hundred years hence, when the world has been successfully organized for peace, it will be interesting for students to look back at this volume and see how nearly fulfillment followed the pathway of prophecy. And if another devastating war descends upon the world, there will be a melancholy satisfaction in considering how the advice of the wise might have been used to prevent catastrophe." P. R. Frothingham

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '24 540w

"While threading his way through the details of the several outlines, the reader will find his interest stimulated at almost every turn—here by the clear-cut presentation of an ideal, there by the good sense of a practical, concrete proposal. It is not necessary to agree with any one to profit by a study of all of the plans presented." C. G. Fenwick

+ Ind 113:21 Jl 5 '24 1200w

"Miss Lape's forty-five-page introduction is an admirable piece of work, luminously analytical of the great mass of plans submitted to the committee, humanly and understandingly sympathetic with the inarticulate and uncreative mere mumbling of so many of them, responsive to whatever significance may be in any of them, no matter of what grade of intelligence, notable in its grasp and effective presentation of the distinguishing features of the various groups of the important plans."

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 27 '24 1000w

LAPE, E. E., ed.—Continued

"Quite naturally such a group of talent will be found to produce much of interest bearing on the intricate problem of international peace. None of the learned gentlemen suggest that the best way to attain peace is to stop fighting!"

+ — N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 420w
Outlook 137:161 My 28 '24 260w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:297 Je '24
St Louis p332 O '24
Wis Lib Bul 20:145 Je '24

LARBAUD, VALERY. A. O. Barnabooth, his
2 diary; tr. by Gilbert Cannan. 318p $2.50 Doran

"This book is not a new work, for it has been popular in France for some time, but it is distinctly modernistic in its tendency. It purports to be the diary of an astoundingly rich young Britisher, an account of his meanderings through Florence, San Marino, Venice, Trieste, Moscow, Serghievo, St. Petersburg, Copenhagen and London in search of the absolute. . . Much of his diary is an account of his conversations with Carteyvels and the Marquis de Putouarey, who, by the way, is only secondary to the bewildered Barnabooth himself in point of interest. Through them he seeks to touch life, to be real, to obtain that happiness that is theoretically every human being's portion."—N Y Times

"The book is a sparkling one from beginning to end and there is a deal of profound observation in it. It is unique among diaries, the sort of thing that is based on a philosophical concept."

+ N Y Times p17 Ja 4 '25 850w
N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 10w

"The book, which is admirably translated from the French by Gilbert Cannan, is paradoxical, ironic and wholly delightful." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p8e D 28 '24 320w

"Barnabooth's reflections are subtle, his desires intelligible, his style exquisite; yet somehow it is impossible to feel that he matters and that is the same as to say, it is impossible to feel that he exists. Not fish, flesh, nor good red herring: it must remain his epitaph." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 138:526 N 22 '24 240w

LARDNER, RING W. How to write short stories. 359p $2 Scribner

24-10848

A collection of ten of Ring Lardner's stories is prefaced by a burlesque on the writing of short stories, in which he solemnly describes his own procedure, from choosing a title to marketing the product. The stories are presented as samples of his method. Contents: The facts; Some like them cold; Alibi Ike; The golden honeymoon; Champion; My roomy; A caddy's diary; A frame-up; Harmony; Horseshoes.

Booklist 21:68 N '24

Reviewed by T: Boyd
Bookm 59:601 Jl '24 600w

"The vernacular is never overdone and, with the brisk, short sentences, adds to the realism. Certainly these complete little tales are finely constructed."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 460w

"Mr. Lardner's newest book contains some of the most serious and interesting work which he has yet produced. . . How to Write Short Stories presents a series of studies of American types almost equal in importance to those of Sherwood Anderson and Sinclair Lewis. But where he has, so far, fallen short of both Anderson and Lewis is in artistic seriousness. He compiles a book of the best things he has written and then, with his title and his comic preface, tries to pretend that he has never attempted to write anything good at all." Edmund Wilson

+ — Dial 77:69 Jl '24 1150w

"Ring Lardner is, as his publishers aver, considerably more than a mere 'funny man'; and he is a master of vernacular." W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p772 My 24 '24 500w

Reviewed by Robert Littell
New Repub 40:25 S 3 '24 1300w

"One wishes for a little more range in Mr. Lardner's work. His gift for good-natured satire could be more variously employed. There are indications in this volume that he is trying to cut away now and then from the path he has beaten for himself." J. O. Adams

+ — N Y Times p16 My 25 '24 800w

"There is not another writer of English who could do this book. There is not another with the humor, the skill, the penetration or the lowly touch. There are better books and better writers, but Mr. Lardner is the only one who could have accomplished this particular feat, and it is all joyous reading." A. K.

+ N Y World p7e My 25 '24 280w

"Humbly we own that perhaps we are a highbrow. The idea is distressing, but after reading Mr. Ring W. Lardner's short stories it cannot be thrust aside. We were not amused. Except for an occasional twitching smile, we found ourselves impervious."

— Outlook 138:100 S 17 '24 150w
St Louis p380 N '24
Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

LARMINIE, MARGARET RIVERS. Deep meadows. 368p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

24-13353

On the verge of leaving her husband, Tom Rassell, for Tony Charter, Mary sees the latter killed in a polo game. There is nothing for her to do but return to Tom whose love is his business, whereas Mary with a great capacity for love finds no outlet for hers. The years pass as Mary seeks here and there for love, becomes absorbed in her three babies for a time, and finally leaves Tom altogether. On account of a disgraceful scandal involving Tom's father, Mary and her children change their name to Wylding. She manages to keep occupied till her children are grown up, comforted by Tony's friend, Caleb. Then her old feeling of the futility of her life returns till love appears in the person of Maurice Gale. Unfortunately her change of name and the secrecy she maintains about her real name complicate matters for all concerned, the more so since Maurice, who is prosecuting Tom for embezzlement, is totally unaware of Mary's relation to Tom. The latter's conviction leads to his suicide, Mary's love for Maurice wanes, and she turns to Caleb, her friend thru all and now a very likeable lover in her eyes.

"In this analysis of temperamental impulses and their reactions, Mrs. Larminie has done a fine bit of work." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 280w

"The book is well written, and, once begun, not easily laid aside. Almost everybody is interested in the study of personality, and 'Deep Meadows' is that to a somewhat greater degree than the average run of novels."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 O 19 '24 420w
Int Bk R p904 N '24 320w

"This novel approximates the average amount of competence found in fiction of the more serious type; but between the lines, yet clearly, it holds the potentiality of better work. 'Deep Meadows' is thoughtfully plotted and well written, but in the action, and especially in the elucidation of the heroine's character, there is the pressure of perceptible effort." Eva Goldbeck

+ — Lit R p867 Jl 5 '24 450w

"Mrs. Larminie never lets herself go; you cannot put your finger on a paragraph where the cat definitely gets out of the bag, but all the time one is conscious of some muffled sound going on; yes, there is no doubt of it, it is mewing." Raymond Mortimer

— New Statesman 22:574 F 23 '24 220w

"An element of verbosity has crept into the book and this retards, in some measure, an exposition that might have gained by swiftness and compression. However, if this had been attended to, the conventional construction of the plot might have stood out all the more obviously."

+ — N Y Times p30 Je 22 '24 500w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p23 Je 15 '24 1150w

"An interesting story, with its purely sentimental characters so cleverly developed that one's sympathy is quite constantly with its lovely heroine."

+ N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 200w

"Apart from plot interest 'Deep Meadows' is a strong novel, written in a calm, assured manner, clear in its painting of characters, interesting in its incursions into the philosophy of human nature."

+ Outlook 138:215 O 8 '24 170w

"Miss Larminie is evidently determined to avoid flatness, and at her worst sounds laboured and self-conscious: but she can write, and rises once or twice to a big scene. Only she cannot keep on doing it." Gerald Gould

— + Sat R 137:240 Mr 8 '24 200w

" 'Deep Meadows' displays an ability of more than slight order; in shapeliness of plot, power of psychological portrayal and adroit craftsmanship it rises far above the ruck of fiction of the season. In the person of Caleb, true friend and devoted lover, she has produced hardly more than a stock figure. Yet on the whole, her book is good, so good as to rouse expectations for her next."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:18 Ag 2 '24 390w

Spec 132:605 Ap 12 '24 140w

"It is difficult to believe that Margaret Larminie has written only one novel between 'Search' and 'Deep Meadows,' for in reading that first effort it seemed to one that the goal of her quest was still some way beyond her reach. Yet in two years she has not only discovered several important principles governing life on this planet—principles that in 'Search' played hide-and-seek amid the chaotic destinies of her characters—but she has found herself as a writer."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 14 '24 550w

LARRETA, ENRIQUE. Glory of Don Ramiro; a life in the times of Philip II; tr. from the Spanish by L. B. Walton. 308p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

Translation of a Spanish romance, the historical background of which is Spain in the time of Philip II. A good portion of the book describes the social and religious life in Spain. Don Ramiro, a young gallant who unknown to himself is a Moor, brings to light the plot for a Moorish uprising and is stabbed by the conspirators. Nursed back to health by his mistress, an enchanting Moorish girl, he vows not to betray his saviours, and is set free. Ramiro, however, discloses the plot to the Spaniards and consequently witnesses the tortured death of the beautiful Aixa and her friends. He eventually dies in the arms of the Christian church, a penitent, known as the "tragic cavalier."

"I cannot name, offhand, a more worthy historical novel." A. W. Porterfield

+ Bookm 60:525 D '24 260w

"The lights and shadows, the contrasts and paradoxes, although not so keenly felt or so vividly portrayed, are, nevertheless, very finely done in Larreta's novel." E. M. Jacobs

+ Int Bk R p820 O '24 300w

"This is a novel of old times, unmarred by the air of false actuality which so often destroys the best effects of historical romances. It is as though the author had sat long before a window overlooking the past and watched his hero's life go by, very far away and yet within clear sight of its most secret and least events. The picture is at once near and poignant as life itself, and remote and elusive as a dream." Winifred Katzin

+ Lit R p14 O 4 '24 780w

"It gives a very vivid and interesting historical setting to a romantic plot which is not quite so successful. The description of the social life of Spain under Philip II is well worth reading. The plot suffers from the vacillations of the hero."

+ — Nation and Ath 35:452 Jl 5 '24 260w

N Y Times p14 N 30 '24 700w

"Whether the final episode is restrained satire or simple faith on the part of the writer one cannot tell. But the whole is a powerful and memorable novel, the reverse of the conventional romance, a somber theme illumined with splendor of detail and vitalized by genuine character creation."

+ N Y Tribune p10 Ja 11 '25 800w

"The treatment is classical; his style at times brilliant. The scholar and the artist are both in evidence on congenial terms. The result is an historical picture, vividly conceived and startlingly real." Bruce Gould

+ N Y World p8e S 7 '24 400w

"The work of Mr. L. B. Walton, the translator, is worthy of a remarkable book. The prose is of exceptional merit: coloured, fluent, and arresting."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p338 My 29 '24 250w

LARSEN, JOHANNES ANKER. Philosopher's stone; tr. from the Danish by Arthur G. Chater. 379p $3 Knopf [12s Gyldendal]

24-10847

"With a quotation from Hans Christian Anderson for clew as to his purpose, Larsen begins with a picture of a dozen Danish children at play in the school yard, and proceeds to show what in the course of years life makes of them all. Two gossiping old women and a man who has gathered wisdom from much wandering about the world form a sort of chorus to the intertwined dramas presented in a broken series of detached scenes, often with considerable lapses of time between them. Only two of the characters are clearly aware of a quest for the philosopher's stone that will put meaning and value into life—the young student-friends, Jens Dahl and Christian Barnes. Dahl is the temperamental mystic who strives vainly through theology and theosophy in turn to recover his childish sense of an immaterial world. Barnes, passing through the normal corruptions of youth and finding intellectual efforts barren is led to become a disciple of a woman who has a school of mental hygiene in Los Angeles and is eventually trained into a normal conception of life and restored to the sweetheart of his boyhood."—New Repub

Booklist 21:25 O '24

"The author has not constructed his book about a single protagonist, but shifts illogically from character to character, revealing the introspection of each. Since 'The Philosopher's Stone' deals with the occult, this loose procedure is doubly unsatisfactory. It records an aspiration toward unearthly orderliness and harmony, but fails in almost every respect to be orderly or harmonious."

— Dial 77:523 D '24 140w

"That his book has power and originality there is no denying; moreover, it won the Gyldendal prize and received high praise from Knut Hamsun; but . . . I must confess that my interest in it was as a description of one of the varieties of religious experience rather than as a work of art." J. W. Krutch

Nation 119:51 Jl 9 '24 850w

"The book, despite its common sense and mockery of perpetual motion, might have become a collection of sectarian oddities but for

LARSEN, J. A.—Continued
an epic undertone of the struggle between good and evil. The conflict is, nevertheless, obscured by crowded characterization and detail, and by our own lost mediæval sense, so that the intended clash of dark upon angelic swords comes faintly from battles long ago. The power of the Danish novelist is best shown in the description of delusional or mystic states; here is a simplicity that recalls 'Hunger' deprived of its queer humour, the writings of Strindberg when he hid himself in Paris, and behind all, Swedenborg." Austin Clarke
Nation and Ath 35:569 Ag 2 '24 400w

"A novel without plot, without movement, without heroine, almost without a love story —a more characteristic Scandinavian book than this winner of the Gyldendal Prize would be hard to find. Shaped by its theme into a kind of spiritual unity, it is otherwise as formless, as complex, as illogical, as life untouched by the creative hand of art." Edith Rickert
New Repub 39:370 Ag 20 '24 500w

"As for the story, though there is clearly much to tell, one can never see it. One even has an uncomfortable feeling that to expect to understand that is almost a mark of irreverence. The book so clearly is not written for the profane. It is its philosophy that matters, or rather its revelation. The characters are there to reveal, the story is there to give them a chance of doing so. And what the revelation is, it is hard for those without an understanding of the author's very peculiar mysticism to discover." Ralph Wright
New Statesman 23:441 Jl 19 '24 450w

"This novel, though by no means a gay fiction or a light one, has the effect of illumining the soul of the reader. Dark places and marshy places, hazy recesses of the spirit, seem to open and brighten under the influence of this remarkable book. Yet, despite the dreary connotation that the phrase 'a religious novel' normally carries, the reader must be told at once that this is essentially a religious novel. No such religious novel, however, has ever been written before." H: J. Forman
N Y Times p6 My 4 '24 2000w
N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 40w

"It has things to teach, and pretty important ones at that, but it is not a tract."
+ Outlook 137:283 Je 18 '24 250w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 138:221 Ag 30 '24 450w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Spec 133:232 Ag 16 '24 950w

"'The Philosopher's Stone' is a deeply philosophical novel; there is thought and meaning behind everything in it. Yet it is a story of life and character, or rather of lives and characters, primarily. It does not leave one with the feeling of a lesson taught or a theory preached, but rather with a kaleidoscopic impression of many people whose fate spins for them a strange web of interesting events and developments."
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 10 '24 550w

"The translation takes very considerable liberties with the author's text. There is something to be said for this mode of treatment, and the cuts have been made with some discretion. But some valuable and characteristic passages have been omitted, notably in the latter part of the book. Most unwarrantable of all is the omission of any reference to these omissions."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p666 O 23 '24 500w

LA SCHUM, EDWARD E. Electric motor truck; selection of motor vehicle equipment; its operation and maintenance. 309p $4 U.P.C. bk.
629.2 Motor trucks 24-11903

"A very useful book by the general superintendent of motor vehicle equipment, American railway express, which will be of value to those interested in the transportation field and to owners and operators of electrically driven vehicles. Describes the mechanical and electrical features of all types of electric trucks and presents convincingly their possibilities in city trucking. An important chapter is that which deals with cost accounting, covering the items which enter into the operation of delivery equipment."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:364 Jl '24

LA SCHUM, EDWARD E., and BARDWELL, [2] HAROLD E. Motor truck; applied mechanics for owners and drivers. 325p il $4 U. P. C. bk.
629.2 Motor trucks 24-1501

"Written for truck operators and intended as an aid in selection and a guide to efficient operation."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:432 O '24

LATIMER, LOUISE PAYSON. Your Washington and mine. 382p il $2.50 Scribner
917.53 Washington, D.C. 24-7732

The book is historical, descriptive and fully illustrated. The story of Washington is sketched from the days of the Indians and first white settlers to the present; public buildings, historic places, streets, parks and memorials are described and an outline of Washington's municipal government is given. A section is devoted to the Potomac river and one to Mount Vernon, Arlington and Georgetown.

Bookm 60:97 S '24 80w

"Miss Latimer's work is well done. She has quite evidently read all on the subject the library has to offer, and her book will be an invaluable guide to the person who wants to go to Washington, really knowing something about it."
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 31 '24 440w

"Miss Latimer's volume, while not sacrificing the value or importance of events of the past develops a chronicle into a story of true romance. The author of this book has discovered the spirit which prompted the founders of our republic in the building of the capital city. And it is this spirit found within its pages that gives the book the right to be classed as a romance." C. E. L.
+ Cath World 119:564 Jl '24 250w
Cleveland p47 Je '24
Ind 112:241 Ap 26 '24 10w

"This is a comprehensive and entertainingly written book."
+ Lit R p11 S 20 '24 200w

"She has done very well indeed considering how much needed to be compressed into so short a space, and her narrative is very readable, so full is it of bits of human color and feeling and illustrative anecdote. But whoever wants more than a meagre and rapid outline of the history of Washington will have to seek it elsewhere."
+ — N Y Times p11 Ap 20 '24 720w

"The story of the national capital is here set down with the charm and informative fullness it has long deserved of some accurate historian."
+ N Y Tribune p25 My 18 '24 170w
Outlook 137:30 S 3 '24 20w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:379 Jl '24
St Louis p353 O '24

"While possessing no marked merit as a guidebook to or descriptive account of the city, the book supplies considerable interesting history and political analysis for the reader who cares to know more about the city than appears in the always fascinating highly attractive surface."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Je 22 '24 520w

2 LATOUR, THERESE LOUIS. Princesses, ladies and adventuresses of the reign of Louis XIV; tr. from the French by Dutton Burrard. 359p il $6 Knopf [15s K. Paul]

944.03 France—History—Louis XIV, 1643-1715. France—Biography 25-908

"In her preface to the French edition of this volume, Mme. Latour sets forth the hope that she has made the eminent women of the reign of Louis XIV take breath anew in these papers, and live, for her readers, their vivid, colorful, lives again. This book recently won the Grand Prix for prose in the annual Concours Litteraires in Marseilles."—Boston Transcript

"Each portrait is particular, precise and justly evaluated, so that, after we close the book, the twenty women discussed stand out in our memory as a score of individuals, each having contributed her own indelible personality to the record." R. B. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 4 '24 750w

"Her gallery is as monotonous as one filled entirely with portraits by Lely. The sketches are drawn from the lay models of history not sur le vif. Where Mme. Latour succeeds best is in the two stories of poisoners, and in the chapter about the Duchesse de Mazarin."

— + New Statesman 24:303 D 13 '24 1200w

"Mr. Burrard's translation is sufficiently good not to read like one. If his English is at times a trifle stilted it can be excused by the suggestion it conveys of a stilted, stately age."

+ Sat R 138:448 N 1 '24 500w

"Neither very profound nor very clever, these little studies are none the less of considerable interest. The great mistresses of royalty, the great poisoners, even the great princesses, are here portrayed with some vivacity and considerable skill. . . These studies, whatever else may be said of them, are not salacious, nor do they serve to make vice attractive. Mme. Latour knows her history; she has read widely and well in the memoirs of the period; and she has extracted from history and memoirs a rather entertaining volume of essays on its more prominent women."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:149 S 27 '24 250w

"The desire to re-animate people of historical fame may lead the writer to select from each life such incidents as possess most drama and mystery without regard to the value of the available evidence. . . Despite this acceptance of historic suspicion as historic fact, Mme. Latour has rarely been unjust to her characters, and she fulfils her purpose of bringing back for a space those who lived in simpler days."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 16 '24 900w

LAUGHLIN, CLARA ELIZABETH. So you're going to Paris! 436p il $3 Houghton

914.436 Paris—Description 24-5738

So you're going to Paris! Mrs Laughlin exclaims and sets about to point out the things she would show you if she were with you. By departing from the conventional guidebook style, the author has made her book a chatty narrative about things worth seeing in Paris. She has included in her scheme of each day's sightseeing the obscure and interesting as well as the well-known.

Booklist 21:21 O '24

"Seldom is found so much in little as is gathered into this small book, which is not a perfunctory guide-book but a veritable miniature history of Paris." F. M. W.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '24 920w

+ Cleveland p37 My '24

New Statesman 24:supxviii D 6 '24 90w

"Miss Laughlin knows her Paris thoroughly, having lived there much, read widely about it and its history, written about it not a little and talked about it still more in her well-known 'Travel Talks.' And also she loves it enthusiastically. So her equipment of knowledge both of Paris and what travelers want to see there, and of admiration and enthusiasm, has enabled her to write a unique, useful and entertaining volume."

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 30 '24 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p851 D 11 '24 230w

Wis Lib Bul 20:95 Ap '24

2 LAURIE, MAXWELL. Shameless innocent. 246p $2 Duffield [7s 6d T. W. Laurie] 24-21146

Glorinda Swift, endowed with unusual beauty, was brought up in seclusion from the wicked world by a careful maiden aunt. One day by accident Glorinda makes the acquaintaince of Marcella Tucker, a young person who boasts of being an advanced feminist. A friendship springs up and Marcella infuses into Glorinda's receptive mind strange and startling ideas concerning life and love. Glorinda is an apt pupil and when she has her first love affair endeavors to practice her theories, to the consternation of her aunt and friends.

"The climax is inadequate. Still, Mr. Laurie writes well. He is full of ideas. And he has certainly given us something out of the common." Gerald Gould

— + Sat R 138:124 Ag 2 '24 270w

Spec 133:24 Jl 5 '24 150w

LAUT, AGNES CHRISTINA. Quenchless light. 291p il $2 (7s 6d) Appleton 24-16809

"This story is placed in the earliest Christian period, and owes its chief inspiration to the Epistle to Philemon and the Acts of Thecla. If it has a hero it is Onesimus, the slave boy, whom we leave as Bishop of Ephesus, but it is rather a series of tableaux loosely strung together than the ordinary continuous narrative. These are dramatic and highly coloured, but not at all badly adapted for their purpose, which is to show that the biblical story is a living thing, concerned with real men and women."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"While not a great book, it is nevertheless an admirable, readable one, and as such is certain to appeal to a wide audience." M. F. Torrance

+ — Lit R p11 S 27 '24 160w

"The treatment is so sentimental and romantic as to stifle any possible thrill which may be inherent in the material."

— Sat R of Lit 1:150 S 27 '24 120w

"The author has read widely and thought deeply, and the conclusions which she has chosen to throw into this form deserve interest and appreciation. Her critical powers are, however, not equal to her industry."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p526 Ag 28 '24 200w

LAWES, LEWIS E. Man's judgment of death. 146p $2 Putnam

343.2 Capital punishment 24-13944

Mr Lawes, warden of Sing Sing prison and president of the American prison association, 1923, presents herein facts and statistics concerning capital punishment, a problem with which he has had twenty years of close contact. There are two appendices, the first giving tables and charts, and the second giving quotations from correspondence with state executives and attorneys and wardens of state prisons.

Booklist 21:137 Ja '25

"The thoughtful citizen is indebted to a reading of this volume for a vast number of stimulating and excessively unpleasant truths."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 12 '24 420w

Cleveland p93 D '24

"The form of the book reveals its weakness at a glance. There is no orderly arrangement of material save paragraph headings, which instead of helping, rather emphasize in large type the confusion which prevails throughout. Yet the attempt is important, because Mr. Lawes has projected a method of studying the death penalty which is without emotional prepossessions, and which may therefore lead to answers which cannot be challenged. What the answers are, however, remains as undetermined as before." M. D. F.

LAWES, L: E.—Continued

— + New Repub 41:205 Ja 14 '25 1500w

N Y Tribune p28 Ag 3 '24 100w

N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 200w

Reviewed by J: Earl

Spec 133:607 O 25 '24 900w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 16 '24 1100w

LAWRENCE, DAVID. True story of Woodrow Wilson. 368p $2.50 Doran

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 24-13348

The author is a newspaper man who, as correspondent of the Associated press during the graduate school controversy at Princeton and during Woodrow Wilson's governorship of New Jersey and candidacy for the presidency, had unusual opportunities to study and know his subject. For the eight history-making years of Wilson's administration Mr. Lawrence was special correspondent at Washington and later he covered the Peace conference. His chronicle and analysis of the man and his career are, as far as is possible with the subject, dispassionate.

Am Pol Sci R 18:830 N '24 110w

Booklist 21:24 O '24

Bookm 60:99 S '24 140w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 21 '24 400w

Cleveland p88 N '24

"The book might better have been entitled 'Woodrow Wilson as I Knew Him.' It is journalism at its best, and I commend it to all friends of the late President." Hamilton Holt

+ Int Bk R p509 Je '24 550w

Nation and Ath 36:274 N 15 '24 700w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes

New Repub 40:sup3 O 1 '24 1100w

Reviewed by Silas Bent

N Y Times p3 Je 22 '24 1200w

"The book is rich in little minor revelations that are the very spice of history. . . . Mr. Lawrence has given us some graphic, illuminating pictures—one of an actual working day in Wilson's life at the White House, indicative of the superhuman exactions of the position." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 700w

"There can be no question that Mr. Lawrence has prepared a faithful record of the facts in Wilson's life as he knew them—a record which it would have been impossible to duplicate."

+ R of Rs 70:667 D '24 160w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT, and SKINNER, M. L. Boy in the bush. 388p $2.50 Seltzer [7s 6d Secker]

24-23179

"The story traces the development of Jack Grant, a young man who goes out to Australia to escape from the restrictions of England. He is a natural aristocrat, a man who will not conform; but the sprawling freedom of Australia soon disgusts him, and he finds happiness in obedience to 'the dark Lord' in himself. He is shown in action throughout, and the action is rapid and decisive. There are a great number of vivid scenes against the perpetual background of Australian landscape and life."—Nation and Ath

"It glitters with all light and color and all freshness and beauty. Its humor has nothing in common with the rather awful humor of Mr. Lawrence's literary essays. A boy in Mr. Lawrence's bush is worth two in any other writer's hand." A. D. Douglas

+ Lit R p3 N 8 '24 1200w

"The reader cannot escape the suspicion that some maladjustment to life has called forth Mr. Lawrence's mysticism and that the maladjustment is one too rare to be more than an interesting curiosity. The author can hardly hope to win disciples save among those who suffer from his own particular psychic twist. Fascinating as his books are, he must be put down as another one of the many who have mistaken the twinge of a nerve awry for the voice of a hidden god." J. W. Krutch

Nation 119:710 D 24 '24 880w

"The end of the book is bad because Mr. Lawrence sacrifices his hero to one of his crotchets. This is one of the book's chief faults. The other is Mr. Lawrence's self-conscious facetiousness. When the inspiration fails he is not content to be pedestrian; he insists on being charming, and he cannot be charming. He can be intense, or magnificent, but he has neither wit nor humour. His jocularity is as painful as Herman Melville's, and 'The Boy in the Bush' is very bad and very good in much the same way as 'Moby Dick.'" Edwin Muir

— + Nation and Ath 35:752 S 20 '24 650w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 41:122 D 24 '24 560w

"There is much here of Mr. Lawrence at his best, especially towards the beginning—descriptions of raw primitive scenery and colonial life in the early days, queer provincial folk and the monotonous beauty of the bush, and all bathed in that freer, emptier air that he loves so deeply and reproduces so vividly. Admirable is the impression he conveys of looseness, freedom, irresponsibility, with a wonderful harmony between the emotional setting and the details." J: Franklin

+ New Statesman 23:706 S 27 '24 2050w

"It is extremely unlikely that the two groups of Mr. Lawrence's admirers will find themselves in agreement respecting his latest book. Those who have found his recent work deficient in the beauty, power and significance which they discovered in his earlier stories will probably praise 'The Boy in the Bush.' Those of his admirers, however, who prefer his recent to his earlier stories may perhaps regret that the novelist in Mr. Lawrence has once again all but silenced the social theorist." Lloyd Morris

N Y Times p9 O 26 '24 1250w

"It is not a great novel, and I do not feel that Mr. Lawrence is so securely at home as he is in his other novels. But as a master of fiction said of a master of verse—Dickens of Tennyson—it is a pleasure to read a man who can write." J: Macy

+ — N Y Tribune p1 O 19 '24 1400w

" 'The Boy in the Bush' is one of the most entertaining books Lawrence has written, and is, none the less, profound and searching and truthful." J. W. C.

+ N Y World p9e O 26 '24 420w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 138:244 S 6 '24 700w

"The 'Boy in the Bush' is obviously meant to be a Nietzchean product, but Mr. Lawrence is quite unconvincing, because we are asked to believe that this mischievous, football-loving young Briton becomes a merciless wolf-of-society after some frivolous and exhilarating adventures in the backwoods. The whole character of the hero is almost an absurd contradiction of the extremely serious and ambitious nature of his social program." Matthew Josephson

— Sat R of Lit 1:319 N 29 '24 680w

"Lovers of Mr. Lawrence's peculiar quality will find much to delight and to stimulate them, but on the whole the book is disappointing. Hasty, ragged, over-emphatic writing spoils the beauty of the details, and the imposed, rigid philosophical system crushes out the substance." L. P. Hartley

— Spec 133:364 S 13 '24 1150w

"In all the novels that he has written Mr. D. H. Lawrence can hardly have done better description than he has in The Boy in the Bush. Description is the accepted word for it, but it is no more mere description than is the painting of a great picture. We come not only to see and hear and smell what he wills us to, but to know the very spirit of the place."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p523 Ag 28 '24 800w

LAWSON, CHARLES FRANCIS. You can change it (though you won't). 215p $1.50 Appleton

150 Human nature. Psychology. Social reform 24-3622

"A subdued and conventionalized doctrine of the superman is preached in this book. Its title refers to human nature, and the [author] attempts to teach the reader not to blame the shortcomings on human nature, but to improve himself so that there will not be any shortcomings. During the course of his book he discusses social conflicts, capital and labor, the race problem and various subjects which humans are accustomed to discuss. He is optimistic and good-natured, and generous with instructions."—N Y World

Booklist 20:331 Je '24

"It is clear that when all is said, and two hundred and fifteen pages given up to the saying of it, there are no new ideas in this book. Intellectual fireworks, nothing more serious."
— Boston Transcript p4 Ap 2 '24 360w
N Y Tribune p19 S 21 '24 50w
N Y World p7e F 24 '24 170w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:347 Jl '24

"Mr Lawson has some ideas worth insisting on, but his language and his illustrations are not always transparent. His metaphors are frequently labored and tiresome."
— + Springf'd Republican p8 F 5 '24 240w
Wis Lib Bul 20:91 Ap '24

LAWSON, JAMES GILCHRIST, comp. World's best epigrams. 231p $2 Doran [6s Hodder & S.]

808.7 Epigrams. Humor 24-9023

A collection of brief pithy sayings and pungent paragraphs culled chiefly from American newspapers and classified by subject.

Booklist 20:331 Je '24

"He has made his book easy to consult, a very handbook of brilliantly pointed speech, so that any one with an after dinner talk to prepare on short notice can readily find his theme in the alphabetical index."
+ N Y Times p20 Mr 23 '24 350w

LAWSON, JOHN HOWARD. Roger Bloomer; a play in three acts; foreword by John Dos Passos. 225p il $1.75 Seltzer

812 23-16808

"Roger Bloomer begins with a boy at supper with his mother and father, who is the head of a humming chain of department stores in the Middle West. The gap between the boy and his parents has begun, and is complicated by the boy's being different from other men's sons in the town. . . He runs away to New York. And at the same time one of his father's clerks, sick with the flatness of her life, goes to New York also. In New York Roger writes and starves; the girl lives with her detested aunt, and works and dreams and hates. And against New York as the symbol of progress and hardness and passionate power, the two beat themselves. Roger tries to poison himself and is saved by a street bum. The girl steals bonds, burns them, refuses to marry the head of the firm, a millionaire. In this boy and girl, young life sets itself up against the values of the old. The girl at length takes poison and for her death Roger is sent to prison."—Stark Young in the New Repub

"As literature, and not as drama, the lines of the play read weakly. They lack the characterization which a thoughtful interpreter might add from his own experience, or which upon the stage, might come from the actor. Mr. Lawson's play is a vast, formless mass of mingled wealth and tinsel. He must become the selective artist before the many messages within him can each be given its individual voice and its appropriate form."
— + Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 250w

"The play is lacking in real unity of action, perhaps even in real unity of feeling. Still, for all the uneven, raw, and sometimes crude treatment of the theme, it is always human, intensely vital—alive."
— + Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p26 Mr 30 '24 450w

Reviewed by Stark Young
New Repub 34:100 Mr 21 '24 900w

"In published form Roger Bloomer does not read quite so well as it acted, and that is no great argument against it as play writing. This play deserves reading and serious attention because of its very definite extension of the ordinary stage technique in the American theatre."
+ — Theatre Arts Mo 8:139 F '24 150w

LAY, CHARLES DOWNING. Garden book for 2 autumn and winter. 303p il $4 Duffield

716 Gardening 24-28780

The book describes the autumn work of the garden and the preparations for winter and spring. Advice is given on the planting of spring bulbs, the treatment of terraces and rock gardens, corrective work on trees, the planting of evergreen shrubs, vines and ground covers, and the planning of shrubberies and winter gardens. A list of useful trees, shrubs and plants is added.

"With this book, Mr. Lay adds to his other distinctions that of writing the only work which deals exclusively with the garden in autumn and winter."
+ R of Rs 71:110 Ja '25 80w

LAY, WILFRED. Plea for monogamy. 305p $4 Boni & Liveright

173.1 Marriage. Love 24-3782

The main thesis of this book is that in the instincts and emotions of love the self control of the husband, and thru this his control of the exclusively erotic emotions of his wife, are essential to a successful marriage. Granted this, monogamy would naturally follow, since in the one marriage relation both husband and wife would find the fullest expression necessary to health and happiness.

"The book is enormously padded. Necessarily prevented by the censorship from being explicit about his panacea, Professor Lay indulges in endless repetition. Everything in his three hundred pages could have been put with great ease in ten." J: E. Lind
— Bookm 59:214 Ap '24 800w
Boston Transcript p5 F 23 '24 220w

"While not revolutionary in any psychological aspect, the book is an interesting and arresting statement of the marriage problem and should prove salutary reading to those in the married state, especially to the individuals whose unfamiliarity with present day psychological findings will make the information in this book fresh and new to them. . . Sometimes it seems that he tells it at too great length, much of the book being needless repetition of the same theme." Howard Weeks
+ — Detroit News p15 F 24 '24 420w

"The cause is weakened by such vulgar, redundant rhetoric as that in which Dr. Lay expresses, or more exactly, adumbrates his thought."
— Dial 77:174 Ag '24 170w

"The scientifically trained mind, while wanting to be generous, turns from his pages with a kind of malaise and disgust. Fact and fancy appear to be indistinguishable to him on the warm, flowing sea of his erotism, while his knowledge, or want of knowledge, makes his suggestions at times pernicious and even dangerous. . . Books of this sort make one realize that a psychoanalyst needs more than a mere psychoanalytic training. That, unless to this equipment anatomy, physiology and the kindred sciences that go to make up a comprehensive knowledge of the human organism be added real mischief—no matter how high the intent—may be done." H: K. Marks, M.D.

LAY, WILFRED—Continued
— Lit R p459 Ja 19 '24 720w

"A vast amount of trivial information which is supposed to bear on the question of happiness in marriage. The larding over of erotic detail with sentimental meditation and moral deduction adds speciousness to offensiveness."
— Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 27 '24 220w

"The book does not sully the waters of life. It has a reasonableness and gentleness which justifies the frankness of the exposition. . . Like all other enthusiasts, Mr. Lay sees in his formula a panacea. Surely some of the limitations of character will escape the mellowing solvent of the perfect love he depicts." Haven Emerson, M.D.
+ — Survey 51:709 Mr 15 '24 700w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. Garden of folly. 282p $2 Dodd [5s Lane]
827 24-19423

A series of humorous essays prefixed by the following quotation: "This poor old world is at best but a Garden of Folly, whose chattering gardeners move a moment among the flowers, waiting for the sunset." The author then comments on various aspects of those who live in the "garden of folly." Partial contents: The human mind up to date: The human body: its care and prevention; The perfect salesman; The perfect lover's guide; Glimpses of the future in America.

Booklist 21:16 O '24
Bookm 60:229 O '24 230w
Boston Transcript p3 Ag 23 '24 850w
Reviewed by W: R. Langfeld
Int Bk R p39 D '24 620w

"An entertaining book. Mr. Leacock doesn't always hit the mark; now and again one would like to weep at the spectacle of him dragging humor around by the scruff of the neck. For the most part, however, one accepts Mr. Leacock's joshing willingly." Walter Yust
+ — Lit R p934 Ag 2 '24 300w
Nation and Ath 35:626 Ag 16 '24 150w

"It may be that this book is merely bearing out the theory that American humour is fundamentally different from English. Still as a good Canadian, Professor Leacock might try to cater a little more for English tastes, instead of seasoning everything to suit (presumably) the American palate."
— New Statesman 23:656 S 13 '24 260w
N Y Times p5 Ag 10 '24 2250w

"'The Garden of Folly' will find every follower of this extraordinary Canadian philosopher pleased to the utmost."
+ N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 120w

"Even when not scintillating, Mr. Leacock can always be read with ease, almost always with pleasure, and frequently with profit." Gerald Gould
+ Sat R 138:268 S 13 '24 330w
Reviewed by W: R. Benet
Sat R of Lit 1:30 Ag 9 '24 380w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 130w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p486 Ag 7 '24 550w

LEARNED, WILLIAM SETCHELL. American public library and the diffusion of knowledge. 89p $1.50 Harcourt
027.4 Libraries 24-22066

Dr Learned's thoroughgoing study of the American library, its present accomplishments and future possibilities, was prepared originally as a report to the Carnegie corporation. Beginning with a discussion of the various agencies for the diffusion of knowledge he shows how the library is fitted, beyond any other institution we possess, to spread knowledge among the adult population whose formal education has stopped. An appreciative sketch is given of recent developments in library service, of the work of the American library association in its promotion, and of the library activities of Andrew Carnegie and the Carnegie corporation. The conclusion reached by the report is that a modern tax-supported public library can justify its existence only by means of a broad and varied service and that for such service public support will be willingly accorded.

Booklist 21:48 N '24

"It is a book to convert the skeptical person who looks with suspicion at the so-called 'revolutionary' procedure in libraries today, whether he be a library worker, a trustee, or one of the public." C. H.
Boston Transcript p4 O 18 '24 1000w
Library J 49:836 O 1 '24 600w

LE BON, GUSTAVE. World unbalanced. 256p $3.50 Longmans [12s 6d Unwin]
940.5 Europe—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (European war). Europe—Politics [24-19550]

The underlying idea of this book by the author of "The crowd" is that the world has gone wrong because of its neglect of certain psychological truths. Since unification can be brought about only by the acceptance of a common ideal, he examines the sources of some of the conflicting economic and social ideals of the day and the psychological elements which must enter into a unifying ideal which is possible of attainment. Contents: The political chaos; The social chaos; The financial disturbance and the sources of wealth; The world's economic chaos; The new collective powers; How to reform the mentality of a people; Alliances and wars.

Nation and Ath 35:670 Ag 30 '24 360w

"He has been and still is a great teacher. But when he enters the field of editorial comment on the unbalanced affairs in the world of 1923, he lacks the originality and stimulating penetration which so distinguished his great work." N: Roosevelt
— + N Y Times p6 Ag 24 '24 350w

"A highly entertaining and stimulating book."
+ Outlook 138:215 O 8 '24 50w

"The translator of the book is anonymous. We note that in the long account of the Genoa Conference he does not seem to know the difference between Genoa and Geneva. However, on the whole he appears to have done his work not badly. At first, indeed, we were disposed to attribute the fact that many sentences have no apparent meaning to lapse on his part: we are inclined to believe that the fault is that of the author"
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p483 Ag 7 '24 750w

LE CORBEAU, ADRIEN. Forest giant; the romance of a tree; tr. from the French by L. H. Ross. 139p $2 Harper [6s J. Cape]
582 Sequoia. Life 24-6186

This essay is a speculation upon the beginning and end of creation, with a giant sequoia for its central figure. Tossed about by the wind the little sequoia seed was at last able to germinate. Buried between two layers of soil, the seed began to ferment and live, getting thru all its pores the necessities of growth. Each spring saw the tree grow mightier and mightier. Finally sickness came and the young sequoia could scarcely carry its stunted life, but healing followed and the tree flourished. The seasons in their repeated comings and goings knew the tree as part of the life of the forest. As once seven thousand years ago, a puff of wind had cast its seed upon fertile soil, so at last, when decay had set in, a gust of wind felled the work of centuries to the earth—the life cycle completed.

"Philosophers will find Le Corbeau a writer of understanding. Poets will marvel at the exquisiteness of his prose. In no sense is this a book for the unreflective."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 30 '24 220w

Ind 112:184 Mr 29 '24 10w

Reviewed by S. W. Wallach

Int Bk R p116 Ja '25 420w

"The book is full of dreadfully noble, patriarchal, bald-headed thoughts, which, though not always intelligible, might bring a measure of comfort to one who, dying of old age, desired to learn something of Sequoias."

— Lit R p796 My 31 '24 160w

Lit R p959 Ag 9 '24 270w

Nation 119:423 O 15 '24 90w

"The little book is written with charm and no small beauty of style, though it can scarcely be said to show any very great or startling originality of thought." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p10 Ap 13 '24 600w

N Y Tribune p27 Ap 27 '24 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p350 Je 5 '24 620w

LEE, HARRY. Little poor man (Il poverello). 169p $2 Dutton

812 Francis of Assisi, Saint—Drama 24-14625

The Poetry society's drama prize of $500 was awarded this play in four acts, which is the life-drama of Saint Francis of Assisi.

"The background of the drama is very vivid with descriptive stage directions which are lovely bits in themselves. In reading 'The Little Poor Man' one gets not only a warm picture of Francis; one gets, as well, an artistically constructed drama in lovely, sometimes spirited verse."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '24 320w

"Its scenes are thrilling, and its lines exquisite, ascending frequently to the heights of true poetic thought." N. H.

+ Cath World 119:284 My '24 300w

Cleveland p52 Jl '24

Ind 112:157 Mr 15 '24 50w

"With tender simplicity this play catches 'the life-drama of Saint Francis of Assisi' into strings of beaded verse, wherein his friends and lovers may rejoice."

+ Lit R p728 My 3 '24 140w

"The short, irregular lines, often jerky and jagged, produce an unfortunate psychological effect by tending to distract the reader's attention from the play itself to the vehicle in which it is embodied; and one strongly suspects that the author's attention has likewise been distracted and that the ease of his form—an ease paralleled neither by good prose nor by verse of the stricter variety—has misled him into a damaging carelessness and incompleteness of creation." S. A. Coblentz

— N Y Times p10 Ap 13 '24 460w

Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

LEECH, MARGARET. Back of the book. 255p $2 Boni & Liveright

25-1249

Three months in the life of Virginia Stilson are rather minutely covered in this story. Vergie, a woman of twenty-eight, a successful magazine editor's secretary, attempts to find the right answers to some of the problems of her life. After several love affairs the book closes on a note of hope. Vergie seems about to find her happiness with a man of fine character and good breeding.

"Her work is clever and at moments bitingly ironic. Her heroine is no more than a medium for the author. The story with its vitality and humor holds the interest continually. The realism is never overdone. Miss Leech strikes a happy balance between being droll and being farcical for which we admire and commend her."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 27 '24 430w

"The fine parts of her books are those in which she has written everything she had to say. The weak parts are those when she hurried on with some mistaken idea of sparing the reader. When an author writes as well and as entertainingly as Miss Leech does, the reader doesn't want to be spared." R. C. Benchley

+ — Lit R p3 O 18 '24 420w

"On the whole, 'The Back of the Book' is an excellent piece of work, cast along original lines, and possibly as true a presentation of the ca'canny, educated office girl of Manhattan as has yet been made. The type is comparatively new to fiction, and the book is refreshingly independent in its viewpoint, even if its conclusions are confused by a somewhat trite conception of what is first and what second rate."

+ — N Y Times p8 S 28 '24 850w

"The story flows opaque and shallow like a clear stream. Light glancing from the sun of life illumines the clear surface, but it does not pierce to the deeps. Vergie herself seems a sigh, a regret, an evocation rather than a woman."

Sat R of Lit 1:170 O 4 '24 340w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 160w

LEIGHTON, JOSEPH ALEXANDER. Religion and the mind of to-day. 372p $2.50 Appleton

201 Religion 24-14894

The book aims to outline a philosophy of religion, to indicate its guiding principles and to apply them to the present. The three parts into which it is divided treat religion and culture today, the religion of Jesus and the validity of religion.

Booklist 21:135 Ja '25

Bookm 59:adv Ag '24 150w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 12 '24 800w

"Reasonably independent in his attitude, Prof Leighton should help many thoughtful persons for whom dogmas are no longer acceptable in a literary sense to clarify their thinking. The book as issued appears to have some technical defects. That an index is omitted is perhaps deliberate; but that the bibliographies should stop with chapter 19, when there are 12 remaining chapters which discuss some of the most difficult problems encountered in the book must be regarded as an accident of publishing."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 1 '24 650w

LEIPNIK, F. L. History of French etching. 214p il $12.50 Dodd [42s Lane]

767 Etching 24-27656

A history of French etching from its early beginnings in the middle of the sixteenth century, to our own day. It sketches the life and works of all the French etchers of note and describes their principal plates. The chief aim of the book is to serve as a guide to assist collectors in the selection and classification of plates. There are 106 reproductions in photogravure, a bibliography and an index, in which current sale prices are indicated.

"The most attractive portion of the work is, of course, the 107 illustrations which are for the most part admirable; indeed the reproductions of the delicate landscape backgrounds of Callot and of some of the more recent drypoints almost rival the originals." Hamilton Bell

+ Lit R p6 N 29 '24 720w

"For such a book abundant material existed, and no such book had been written as yet. The task has been entrusted to capable hands, and performed with zeal and intelligence and on the whole with accuracy. It is regrettable, indeed, that one who knows France and French art so well as Mr. Leipnik evidently does should be so frequently remiss in his quotation of French phrases and spelling of French names."

LEIPNIK, F. L.—Continued
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p662 O 23 '24 1700w

LEISERSON, WILLIAM MORRIS. Adjusting immigrant and industry. (Americanization studies) 356p $2.50 Harper

331.8 Immigrants in the United States. Labor and laboring classes—United States. Americanization 24-3483

The book is a study of the ways of absorbing the immigrant wage earner into the common life of America. It describes the experiences our foreign-born are having every day with labor agencies, employers, unions, public authorities and immigration agencies. This experience may adjust them to American industrial life or it may set them apart as outsiders. They find that the very people who most strongly urge their Americanization condemn them when they strive to achieve American standards of living by the methods that American workers use. It is the purpose of the book to indicate the helpful measures, public and private, which have tended to prevent maladjustment and a plan is outlined for combining experience in a United States immigration commission.

Booklist 20:283 My '24
Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 150w
Boston Transcript p4 Mr 22 '24 650w

"Much of what Dr. Leiserson's book reveals is of significance not only with reference to foreign laborers, but to the whole wage-earning class." H: P. Fairchild
+ Lit R p876 Jl 5 '24 550w

"It is a very interesting book and will be valuable to anyone who employs foreign-born labor."
+ Management and Adm 7:718 Je '24 80w

"Dr. Leiserson was unfortunate in the choice of his title. The busy student of economics and politics is likely to assume that the book would interest only those who are more or less specialists on the immigration problem. This is far from being the case. The book is worth reading from cover to cover for everyone who desires to understand the main tendencies of American economic life." Alvin Johnson
+ — New Repub 38:317 My 14 '24 650w

"The volume is no mere spinning of theories, but a penetrating and fairminded study of plans already tried out. It throws much light on a puzzling and highly important problem and is made doubly valuable by its practical character, its moderate, judicial tone and the emphasis it puts upon the observed reactions of actual people to existing conditions."
+ N Y Times p22 F 24 '24 720w
R of Rs 69:335 Mr '24 100w
Survey 52:244 My 15 '24 500w

LEMLY, HENRY ROWAN. Bolívar, liberator of Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia. 452p il $4 Stratford

B or 92 Bolívar, Simón. South America—History 23-18098

A detailed biography of the hero of South American independence who became known as the "Liberator" and who called forth a new spirit in the southern half of the American continent, for unlike most of the liberators of history he had to create a love of liberty. The work, by an American army officer, is not only a biography of Bolívar but a history of the progress of the war of independence in the five states whose freedom he was instrumental in achieving. The book is chiefly a translation and compilation of writings by men of Bolívar's own race.

"It is merely fair to say that this biography becomes at once a reliable source book in English upon a very important epoch of South American history and an equally valuable commentary upon one of the chief movements in the great narrative of the struggle for national independence in the world." S. L. Cook
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 14 '24 1500w

"A book sufficient in length but in no other respect. Major Lemly lacks almost every quality required of a satisfactory biographer and historian. The critical spirit, the gift of portraiture, a topographical sense (especially important for dealing with the Liberator's campaigns), humor, wit, style—none of these qualifications are apparent in the book under review. It is unpleasant to say these things; but truth requires it."
— Outlook 137:203 Je 4 '24 140w
R of Rs 70:222 Ag '24 60w

LEMMON, ROBERT STELL. Puppy book. 139p il $1.50 Doubleday

636.7 Dogs 24-4592

A small volume on the selection, care and training of puppies and the characteristics of the more important breeds.

Booklist 20:287 My '24

"It may be that this book is written for young children. The title and content certainly suggest it but the style is far too involved."
— New Statesman 23:582 Ag 23 '24 90w

"It is very well written and quite short."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p559 S 11 '24 180w
Wis Lib Bul 20:92 Ap '24

LENOTRE, G., pseud. See Gosselin, L. L. T.

LEONARD, JOHN LYNN. ^{2} First aid to animals. 396p il $2.50 Harper

619 Veterinary medicine 24-28010

Dr Leonard, who is veterinarian of the New York City Department of health deals simply and clearly with the symptoms, nature and emergency treatment of the ailments to which dogs, cats, horses, cattle, and other pets and farm animals are subject. He tells what to do in case of all sorts of accidents, and how to handle vicious, frightened, poisoned and rabid animals. A chapter on first aid to poultry is added, and one on the diseases of animals, communicable to man.

"Dr. Leonard seeks to cover the field in a clear and simple way, so that even a child can understand him. He has succeeded admirably. He presents a clear and concise book on the innumerable ailments to which animals are subject."
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 17 '24 160w

"The volume is comprehensive and untechnical with detailed instruction for first aid and for the treatment of disease. It is a valuable addition to the Harper library of practical handbooks."
+ N Y Tribune p11 D 21 '24 90w

LE QUEUX, WILLIAM TUFNELL. ^{2} Things I know about kings, celebrities and crooks. 320p il $4 Stokes [12s 6d Nash & G.]

B or 92 [23-18395]

William Le Queux, journalist and author of many novels, relates in an informal way what he knows about the various kinds of people he has met in his wanderings over the world. He gossips about kings and queens, criminals and crooks, editors and publishers, and other famous folk.

"Mr. Le Queux has the temperament of the 'flaneur.' He wished to miss nothing; and, from all appearances judging by these chapters, he never has missed anything. Skillfully and simply written, filled with words of honeyed praise for those of his friends who are both devoted and eminent, he has produced an arresting and a stimulating book." D. F. Gilman
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 13 '24 1900w

"Altogether, his book is personal journalism of an engaging, if utterly unselective, quality. It is a discovery, somehow, of the man himself, with all the faults and virtues of his kind."
+ N Y Times p17 D 28 '24 1300w

LE ROSSIGNOL, JAMES EDWARD. Economics for everyman. 335p $2.15 Holt
330 Economics 23-17508

An introduction to social economics which sets forth the elements of our economic system against its historical background. Each chapter is provided with a list of supplementary readings and questions.

Booklist 20:283 My '24

"It is a very interesting presentation of the economic life of man." J. G.
+ Bookm 59:adv My '24 100w

"This book is admirably adapted to do what its title suggests. It is not offered as a substitute for genuine insight in economics, but is meant to encourage every man to work for a sound understanding of the economic order." T. V. S.
+ Int J Ethics 34:305 Ap '24 120w

"Both the scholar and the beginner will read this book with pleasure—it leads on; it satisfies." W. G. L. Taylor
+ Lit R p969 Ag 16 '24 280w

LESCARBOURA, AUSTIN CELESTIN. Home owner's handbook. 494p il $2.50 Scientific American pub.
690 Building [24-5702]

"Practical information for the inexperienced man who wants to build or buy a house. Offers sensible suggestions on almost every problem which may arise in connection with the location, planning, building, and upkeep of a small house."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 70w
Outlook 137:112 My 21 '24 30w

"A very useful book which is unexcelled for its purpose."
+ Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:311 Je '24

LESLIE, SHANE. Doomsland. 370p $2.50 Scribner [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

"The theme is the 'Fall of the House of X,' so popular to-day, but drawing actuality from an Irish setting. The hero is the second son of a typical South Ulster landed family. He goes to Paris, becomes interested in the Gaelic revival among Irish residents there, and in Catholicism, chiefly because it is the religion of his countrymen; he visits Maynooth and governmental Dublin in Wyndham's days, shocks the family at home by attending Mass among the tenantry (who think him mad), assists his elder brother to elope with a neighbor's wife in the eighteenth-century manner, and comes at last to the same end as the hope of the family in two other recent 'End of the House' novels."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The medium employed is beautiful prose, smooth, clear, limpid and, at times, taking on the cadence of poetry. The diction is exquisite in its preciseness." M. A. Murphy
+ Int Bk R p399 Ap '24 350w

"Mr. Leslie's hand seems to have shaken in this book, and he could not make up his mind whether he had a real story to tell or whether he wanted to write one more skit on Irish politics, Gaelic Leaguers, Abbey Theatre dramatists and so forth. Even to those thoroughly acquainted with the people and conditions described and burlesqued this rendering of old material is rather dull. I imagine few American readers will be greatly entertained by it." Ernest Boyd
— + Lit R p786 My 31 '24 520w

"'Doomsland' is a carefully written cross-section of Irish thought, hope, and disappointment, descriptive, analytical, and at rare times whimsical. Its author has done what Irishmen are commonly thought to be racially incapable of doing: he has shown that he cares very deeply for the country of which he writes, and yet he has not taken sides."
+ Nation 118:538 My 7 '24 120w

"'Doomsland' is a vivid and graphic, if somewhat over-crowded piece of work." Forrest Reid
+ — Nation and Ath 34:434 D 15 '23 130w

"Mr. Leslie's book is a mine of interesting information about Irish movements, Irish elections, Irish affairs and the men back of Irish affairs. . . Mr. Leslie's devotion to Ireland is both profound and patent, but like many another Irishman he overestimates the importance of Ireland in the universe." M. M. Colum
— + New Repub 39:163 Jl 2 '24 650w

"It contains numerous portraits of well-known people which, if unenlightening, are at least not spiteful. The descriptions of a country childhood are pleasant, but the whole book is spoilt by the way it is written—a mixture of epigram, jingle and pun, which is a torture to read." Raymond Mortimer
— + New Statesman 22:306 D 15 '23 80w

"A leisurely, discursive novel of the old school with modern trimmings that is saturated with the placid beauty and turbulent spirit of the Irish. The panoramic spectacle of a social order that is passing has been done with deft feeling."
+ N Y Times p8 F 10 '24 1150w

"A strange sort of book in some respects, and pleasant withal." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p20 F 3 '24 950w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 136:686 D 22 '23 480w

"A rich scholarly style and abundance of wit, beauty, and wisdom distinguish the latest Irish semi-autobiographical novel."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p850 D 6 '23 700w

L'ESPAGNOL DE LA TRAMERYE, PIERRE. World-struggle for oil; tr. from the French by C. Leonard Leese. 259p $2.75 Knopf
338.2 Petroleum. Standard oil company 24-5470

The question of oil has become a matter of such vital importance in all countries, that the great powers have all an oil policy and solid political alliances are subordinated to it. This book narrates the origin, discovery and history of oil and the amazing increase in its consumption; the struggle of the trusts, in particular the Standard oil company and the Royal Dutch oil company, for its control: the contest between the powers for supremacy; and France's part in the struggle between Great Britain and the United States.

Booklist 20:287 My '24
Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 200w
Cleveland p56 Jl '24

"No one has told the story of the rise of oil and of the tremendous world struggle between the British and American trusts more comprehensively and objectively than this Frenchman, who has a pleasant cynicism about British and American trusts and about both governments." L. S. Gannett
+ Nation 119:20 Jl 2 '24 820w
Nation and Ath 34:742 F 23 '24 400w

"The main value of this comprehensive review of the oil situation is that it is written purely from a French—and violently anti-British—point of view."
+ — New Statesman 22:678 Mr 15 '24 150w

"The book contains many valuable statistics. . . M. de la Tramerye is a bit of an alarmist."
+ — N Y Times p25 F 17 '24 440w

"Our author does not deal in generalities. He gets down to cases. He makes us understand the sordidness of the Genoa Conference, with Russian oil the bait. He explains the Russian policy of Lloyd George. Yes, and easier to understand, the Turkish treaty. More interesting still, he writes the real history of the Mexican L'ESPAGNOL DE LA TRAMERYE, P.—Cont.

revolutions of recent years—the combatants but pawns in the game of oil." C. G. Bowers
+ N Y World p6e Ja 27 '24 1050w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:302 Je '24

"Here is a great tale simply told." Frank Tannenbaum
+ Survey 57:714 Mr 15 '24 350w

"The book is written from the French point of view, and cannot be taken as an unbiased statement of the facts."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p97 F 14 '24 250w
Wis Lib Bul 20:172 Jl '24

LETHABY, WILLIAM RICHARD. Londinium, architecture and the crafts. 248p il $5 Appleton [12s 6d Duckworth]

914.21 London—Antiquities. Architecture, Roman [24-358]

An account of Roman building and minor arts in London. From the records of Roman discoveries in London, the author works out his study of the building materials and methods of the Romans in Britain, their walls and bridges, cemeteries and tombs, and some of their larger monuments and works of sculpture. A knowledge of the finer Roman interiors is pieced together from a study of fragments of mosaic floors, wall paintings, marble linings, etc. There is a chapter on early Christian London and a concluding one on the origin of the city.

"A valuable grouping into one volume of the principal results of archæological research." J. S. B.
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 17 '24 330w

"Replete with interesting matter concerning the old Roman buildings and streets, its walls, gates, bridges, etc. Every page of this book holds items of interest for any one who venerates antiquity." Alfred Stoddart
+ Lit R p14 S 13 '24 160w

LEVINE, ISAAC DON. The man Lenin. 209p il $2.50 Seltzer

B or 92 Lenin, Nikolai, pseud. (Vladimir Ilich Ulyanov) 24-6904

The book is not a complete biography of Lenin but a study of the man and an account of his rise to the dictatorship of Russia. Don Levine has gathered details of his childhood and early life not heretofore known to the public and revealed qualities in his character and mentality which help to an understanding of his career. He also shows him to some extent in his private life, as a friend and as a lover of children—and cats. In the author's final summing-up Lenin "combined an unshakable, almost fanatic faith with a total absence of personal ambition, arrogance or pride. Unselfish and irreproachable in his character, of a retiring disposition, almost ascetic in his habits, extremely modest and gentle in his direct contact with people. . . Lenin could be daring and provocative in his policies, inflexible in the execution of his principles, unscrupulous in his methods of government and crafty and pitiless in his handling of men and affairs."

Booklist 21:66 N '24
Cleveland p88 N '24

"The present work is probably as good an introductory sketch of Lenin as one could reasonably hope to find under present conditions."
+ Greensboro (N.C). Daily News p8 My 25 '24 1200w

"This little book will serve as stopgap until we get the big and adequate study of the great iconoclast. It is at least honest and does not try to impose on the reader a certain conception of Lenin." E. A. R.
New Repub 40:81 S 17 '24 260w

"Without producing anything like the 'complete and impartial biography of the man who remade Russia,' which his publishers promise us on the jacket of his book, he has done a valuable piece of journalistic work." R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p15 Ap 20 '24 1500w

Reviewed by D: Karsner
N Y Tribune p21 Ag 10 '24 1900w
St Louis p355 O '24

LEWIS, EDWIN HERBERT. Sallie's newspaper. 294p $2 Hyman-McGee 24-17833

Sallie Flower after finishing her education came home to Seganku, Wisconsin, a millionairess with ideas of her own. Her first move was to change the format of the Seganku Daily Sun, which she owned and of which Jim Fletcher was editor. Sallie's idea was to educate and make a hero of Dromillard Schmit, the man all Seganku expected her to marry. Jim Fletcher was in love with Sallie but he did his part in carrying out Sallie's plan for a live newspaper. The straightforward contributions stirred up untold trouble for all concerned and in remorse Sallie put aside all thoughts of love and marriage for herself and Jim Fletcher became a farm laborer.

"So many unimportant characters and counter plots without definite object are introduced by the author that it is puzzling to determine what he means. Purporting to expose the indecencies and artificiality of our twentieth century mode of living, as seen from the vantage point of a country journalist, the story is much less illuminating than the daily press, from which the author appears to have drawn his inspiration." R. D. G.
— Boston Transcript p2 Ag 23 '24 550w
New Repub 40:53 S 10 '24 230w

"The plot is of small consequence in the present volume. Its interest lies in the topical nature of its content and in the philosophy and humor which Dr. Lewis has brought to its presentation."
N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '24 680w
N Y Tribune p9 S 21 '24 290w
Springf'd Republican p5a N 2 '24 250w

LEWIS, ISABEL ELEANOR (MARTIN) (MRS
2 CLIFFORD S. LEWIS). Handbook of solar eclipses. 118p il $1.25 Duffield

523.78 Eclipses, Solar 24-28602

A non-technical account of the cause and prediction of eclipses, their historical and scientific importance and the manner of observing them. A special chapter is devoted to the eclipse of January 24, 1925 and another to that of June 29, 1927, visible in England, but the greater part of the book deals with phenomena observable in any total eclipse of the sun, so that the usefulness of the book will not end with the passing of these two eclipses into history.

"There is in it all that a layman cares to know about eclipses in general."
+ Outlook 138:733 D 31 '24 100w

"Miss Lewis's equipment of the task of preparing such a handbook as this is evidenced by the fact that it is her duty to make the official computations on all solar and lunar eclipses for the Nautical Almanac Office of the U.S. Naval Observatory at Washington."
+ R of Rs 71:112 Ja '25 120w

"Though she deals with a highly technical subject, she has succeeded not only in giving a most readable and entertaining account of the phenomena connected with eclipses, but also manages to spread the contagion of her very evident enthusiasm to her readers."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:468 Ja 17 '25 260w

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. Creative life. 211p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

804 Literature 24-9372

These chapters on literature and life and the function of the artist are a plea for the right to live the creative life. The writer is concerned less with literature than with life and its enrichment and liberation.

Booklist 21:16 O '24

"Despite the pleasant cadence of Mr. Lewisohn's style there is a monotonous swing to his periods that distracts the reader's attention from the subject matter."
— + Bookm 59:748 Ag '24 180w
Boston Transcript p4 My 14 '24 1700w
Cleveland p68 S '24
Dial 78:79 Ja '25

Reviewed by R. Le Gallienne
Int Bk R p709 S '24 2100w

"At bottom a work of literary criticism, or more accurately of the philosophy of criticism, it throws so many sidelights upon the ordinary motives and activities of the mind and spirit that the general reader will find it not only profitable but interesting, and incandescent with the perspective that historical knowledge coupled with insight alone can give." J. A. MacCallum
+ Lit R p964 Ag 16 '24 680w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 39:24 My 28 '24 520w

" 'The Creative Life' is a book written with great felicity of phrase; indeed, not for some time—perhaps not since Havelock Ellis's 'The Dance of Life'—has there been a critical, semi-philosophical piece of work so likely to give pleasure to the reader. Mr. Lewisohn's sentences are mellifluent to a degree, becoming cloying if too much of the book is read at a sitting." P. A. Hutchison
+ — N Y Times p14 My 4 '24 1100w

"Though the book as a whole consists of unprofitable and crudely obvious criticisms of the American temper, there are comments by the way that have some meditative quality or, at least, suggestive pungency."
— + Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 21 '24 550w
Wis Lib Bul 20:175 Jl '24

LEWISOHN, MARY ARNOLD CROCKER. See Crocker, B., pseud.

LHOTZKY, HEINRICH. Soul of your child; tr. by Anna Barwell. 165p $1.50 Dodd [3s 6d Allen & U.]
²
173 Children—Management and training. Parents 24-22069

This little book, which is addressed to parents, deals with the spiritual and emotional side of the child's nature, the relationship between children and parents and with training the child to live his own life.

Boston Transcript p5 N 1 '24 290w

"He is full of benevolence, but some of his generalizations are rather platitudes, and some strike us as untrue."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p465 Jl 24 '24 90w

LIBER, BENZION. As a doctor sees it. 203p $2 Critic & guide
²

"Brief, impressionist sketches taken from an American doctor's notebook of the occurrences, tragic and humorous, sordid and heroic, which he encounters on his daily round and in the consulting room. Illustrated."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"This doctor surely has the faculty of seeing his patients as human beings and understanding their lives as well as their diseases. The tragedy of sickness and its resultant lost time and pay is told in a many-sided sameness."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 26 '24 200w

"Dr. Liber lacks a little restraint and certainly modesty, particularly when his ethical principles are called into question. A little less of the melodramatic would do the book no harm. One is struck with the author's sincerity, which, despite his artistic immaturity pops up to the surface. The author illustrates his book with excellent pencil sketches." M. H. L. V.
— + Lit R p938 Ag 2 '24 250w

"All through the book the impression is of someone looking on, someone who would like to share, to sympathize, and who has tried to write that longing down. But the result is rather a series of pictures than of anything which might be called finely realized or emotionally moving art. The result is not propaganda, nor an artistic rendering of actual conditions, but vignettes—little sketches."
Sat R of Lit 1:419 D 27 '24 420w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Ag 14 '24 50w

LICHTNER, WILLIAM OTTO. Planned control in manufacturing. (Ronald manufacturing management and administration ser.) 329p il $5 Ronald

658.7 Efficiency, Industrial. Factory management 24-4094

The book describes methods of coördinating and controlling the work of the productive departments of a plant.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:316 Je '24

"This book is a companion volume to Mr. Lichtner's previous volume on 'Time Study and Job Analysis.' The earlier volume deals with the steps involved in investigation and standardization. This new volume deals with the office and administrative sides of planning and control. Mr. Lichtner's two volumes, taken together, constitute a most complete presentation of the 'how' and 'why' of Taylor philosophy and systems of management as evolved within recent years to meet conditions and methods of present-day administration."
+ Taylor Soc Bul 9:287 D '24 700w

LICHTY, LESTER CLYDE. Measurement, compression and transmission of natural gas. 523p il $7.50 Wiley [37s 6d Chapman & H.]
²

553.28 Gas, Natural 24-1821

"The treatment necessarily involves considerable theory, but the author has also kept in mind the needs of the practical man."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:508 N '24

LILLIE, RALPH STAYNER. Protoplasmic action and nervous action. (Science ser.) 417p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

577 Protoplasm. Biology 23-18174

"In simple and for the most part non-technical language, Professor Lillie here furnishes the results of recent investigations into the nature of the activities carried on under varying conditions by the life-substance known as protoplasm. An account is given of the chemico-physical relations that are maintained between the organic cells, as well as between them and the environment; there is also an exposition of the wonderful part played by electricity within the bodies of plants and animals. To the general reader the author makes effective appeal in his chapter on 'Living Organisms,' for it is here we are informed of the extent to which the science of biology has thus far gone in explaining life."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p5 F 2 '24 500w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p43 Ja 17 '24 30w

LINCOLN, ELLIOTT CURTIS. The ranch; poems of the West. 106p $1.50 Houghton

811 24-9913

Western verses written out of the author's experiences as cowboy and homesteader. Many of the poems are in dialect.

LINCOLN, E. C.—Continued

"Whether it be a love-song, an offering to nature, a folk-song, or a humorous or witty sketch-rhyme, Mr. Lincoln is capable of putting much beauty and picturesqueness into a few sentences, and getting therefrom entertaining and inspiring verse." J. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 7 '24 420w

"Many of these poems are in Western dialect and, properly considered, cannot be called poems. They are verse, very good verse, but not of the inspired quality that is authentic poetry. It is in the more serious descriptive pieces that Mr. Lincoln touches poetry."

— + N Y Times p12 Jl 6 '24 70w

"One welcomes 'The Ranch' on the promise that it will contain more poems of the Northwest on the order of his early 'Rhymes of a Homesteader.' Nor is one disappointed, for there is in this volume the same atmosphere of winds and wide spaces, of horses and wild riding, and keen joy in living."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 11 '24 350w

Wis Lib Bul 20:175 Jl '24

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY. Rugged water. 385p $2 Appleton

24-23088

Another of the author's joyous Cape Cod stories. This time the scene of most of the action is the life saving station at Setuckit, and the characters are the men employed there and their friends. Calvin Homer, a very likable young chap, rises slowly from the position of Number One man at the station to Captain and thereby hangs the story. In the process many thrilling rescues figure and in the end the new captain wins a bride.

Booklist 21:111 D '24

"Possibly as a whole it will bore devotees of certain modern schools of fiction in which extravaganza and the fantastic are dominant, possibly many others will find nothing new or unexpected in it, but there are multitudes who will like it for just what it is—a story of very genuine people, very plausible incidents, and above all with a scene that is very close to reality." E. F. E.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 O 29 '24 580w

"It is the happiest book of the year, full of courage and a high contentment. Long may Joseph C. Lincoln be with us, to give us more of his valiant tales of coast and sea. He is an institution which American readers can not do without." C: H. Towne

+ Int Bk R p855 N '24 1250w

"This is an absorbing story of love and shipwrecks. It runs to 385 pages. There is no page in the lot which is not touched with Mr. Lincoln's fine good-humor. There is no page which hasn't the pungency of life about it, no page without the lift and roar of the sea, no page without the urge of one kind of love or another." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 O 11 '24 500w

"For a novelist who has written so many tales about the same region and the same kind of people he keeps a surprising and admirable freshness of view, spontaneity of feeling and zest of narration. In all these qualities this might be his first instead of his twenty-fifth novel scene in Cape Cod. And that is a quite remarkable achievement."

+ N Y Times p14 O 19 '24 350w

N Y World p8e O 12 '24 200w

Outlook 138:415 N 12 '24 120w

"In 'Rugged Water' the resultant of his material and treatment is a trifle juvenile. There is a little too much of the naïve and romantic and too little of solid matter, either intellectual or emotional, to make as fine a book as one might hope from Mr. Lincoln. But it is, nevertheless, charming enough to make a full evening pleasant."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:232 O 25 '24 260w

LINCOLN, NATALIE SUMNER. Thirteenth letter. 290p $1.75 (7s 6d) Appleton

24-5108

Ten miles out of Washington was a lonely country estate where lived Paul Abbott with only his caretakers for company. Before the war Paul had been a most popular young man, now people admitted that he was queer at times. One winter night while very ill Abbott was murdered and his trained nurse left chloroformed on the floor beside the bed. Who was this pretty nurse and what had she to do with the murder? What had Paul Abbott to do with the Paltoff diamond? And what was the mystery of the thirteenth letter of the secret code? All these questions Sheriff Trenholm solved and these solved the murder mystery.

"It cannot be denied that there are weak spots in the web of the narrative. But the tale holds one's interest, piques one's curiosity, and contains several exciting moments, while the explanation of it all is for the most part logical and satisfactory."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 27 '24 500w

"Miss Lincoln develops a complex maze and an atmosphere of suspense into a thoroughly satisfactory detective fiction." Donald Douglas

+ N Y Tribune p20 Mr 16 '24 480w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 250w

LINDEMAN, EDUARD CHRISTIAN. Social discovery; with an introd. by Herbert Croly. 375p pa $1 Republic pub. co., 421 W. 21st st., N.Y.

301 Social psychology 24-13608

"The author has made an exhaustive and serious study of the psychology of the group, its composition, its aims, its mode of operation and the difficulties it has encountered and still is meeting. Nothing exactly like it, so far as we are aware, has appeared before, although many volumes on the general subject have been written by the most eminent thinkers the world has produced."—Lit R

"It cannot be said too emphatically that this is a book to be reckoned with by every sociologist, and not by the sociologists alone, but by every social scientist intelligent enough to recognize his responsibilities to methodology." A. W. Small

+ Am J Soc 30:214 S '24 900w

"Excellent illustrations are offered throughout. The best recent thought in the social sciences is reflected by the author, and used in an original way. The unconventionality of the book, both in its substance and arrangement, is a rather refreshing departure." J. O. Hertzler

+ J Philos 21:557 S 25 '24 400w

"It is merely simple justice to Mr. Lindeman to say that his study compares favorably with those of his most distinguished predecessors and the prediction is made with a considerable degree of confidence that his theories will bear the acid test of actual practice better than any that have been suggested by other workers in this field."

+ Lit R p15 S 20 '24 400w

"Mr. Lindeman has made a valuable contribution to the technique of practical social organization. The book is clearly a specialized study. That is its significance as a contribution to social science. Perhaps it would have served this end better, if more detail had been included." R. C. White

+ — Survey 53:238 N 15 '24 1200w

LINFORD, MADELINE. Broken bridges. 310p $2 Doran

[23-16384]

"'Broken Bridges' is another novel of adolescent womanhood. It is the awakening and love consciousness of Rachel Silver, a more than usually appealing heroine, who leaves the dreamy mysticism of the school in Surrey to take up the more serious business of living. In a brief period she runs the gamut of love, from the first kiss she felt upon her mouth, when Philip made her conscious of her sex, to the quiet touch of Hugh's lips upon her palm, when he offered her his devotion. Perhaps the best written part of the book is the love affair between Rachel and Maurice Rideal, to whom she would have surrendered everything but for her pity for the mysterious woman who was his wife."—N Y World

"It is a most promising story, and one which should lead Miss Linfield on to wider fields." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 19 '24 670w
Cleveland p66 S '24

"Even the commonest theme may be lifted to a real plane of excellence if the handling be delicate enough. This is the case with Madeline Linford's 'Broken Bridges,' a quietly moving story of the emotional development of a shy and sensitive girl."
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 13 '24 550w

"One girl, just a nice girl, or perhaps extra nice, is not quite enough, in actual substance, to keep a full-length novel from seeming a trifle slender; but this is an intelligent and delicate exposition of the mental and emotional development of such a girl. It is very good, what there is of it, and also with no invidious implication, plenty of it, such as it is." Isabel Paterson
+ — N Y Tribune p26 Je 22 '24 500w
Reviewed by F. V. Roman
N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 100w

LIPTZIN, SOLOMON. Shelley in Germany. (Columbia university Germanic studies) 97p $1.50 Columbia univ. press
821 Shelley, Percy Bysshe 24-14279

A study of the influence of Shelley on the poets and thinkers of Germany. It shows the impression made by Shelley's personality, the influence of his ideas on German political thought and the use that was made of his life as a theme for the poet, the novelist, and the dramatist.

Boston Transcript p5 Ag 2 '24 800w

"In scholarly fashion Dr. Liptzin suggests German history by way of the German attitude toward Shelley, indicating that present conditions ought to awaken an interest in his work. It is unfortunate that one of our greatest lyric poets must depend, for recognition abroad, on the triumph of political theories similar to his own." J. T. Shipley
Lit R p9 S 13 '24 200w
Reviewed by R: Church
Spec 133:sup556 O 18 '24 80w

LITTLE, GEORGE WATSON. Dr Little's dog ^{2} book. 345p il $4 McBride
619.7 Dogs—Diseases

The writer, a specialist in the diseases of animals, was for seven years head physician of the American society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. His book, every page of which shows his love and understanding of dogs, is a complete manual covering the whole range of care and training, diet, first aid, disease and breeding. The larger part of the book is given to dog diseases and their treatment. There is a chapter on the choice of suitable dogs for gifts and of gifts for them and another on cemeteries for dogs.—Bibliography. Index.

"Here we have a book on the care of dogs written not in cold recital of how they may be kept 'in condition,' but by a lover of the canine race who has a deep sense of the duties of man to the lower animals and is outspoken in his championship of them." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 24 '25 850w

"Here is a book which undoubtedly belongs on the five-foot shelf without which no kennel is complete."
+ N Y Tribune p8 Ja 18 '25 160w

LOCKE, WILLIAM JOHN. Coming of Amos. 370p $2 Dodd
24-20558

Into the highly fashionable social life at Cannes, France, comes Amos—honest, simple Amos—unsophisticated to the verge of ignorance, but with a great deal of native intelligence. He is to be educated under the guiding hand of his Uncle David, a painter, who soon finds the task beyond his reach, and calls in friends and relatives to help in his transformation. Meanwhile his primitive behavior causes both embarrassment and amusement to Uncle David. Unfortunately, both Amos and David find themselves in love with the enchanting Princess Ramiroff. Amos's outraged sense of fair play leads him to follow her villainous husband to all corners of the earth, while at the same time he is getting a liberal education under the tutelage of a friend of David's. When they all meet again, Amos has gained the attributes of a gentleman while retaining his naïveté, but such is the disturbing character of the events that follow that the poor little Russian princess cannot make up her mind, until years later, which of the two she really loves.

Booklist 21:68 N '24

"This story is a free trip to sunny, olive-shaded France, an inexpensive gamble at Monte Carlo, and above all, a sun bath, a riot of blueness and greenness and glow, which are far better than plot and far above all character weaving." I. W. Lawrence
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 20 '24 1200w

"'The Coming of Amos' is typically William J. Locke. And to say that is our highest praise, for Mr. Locke for us, in spite of all, is ever fresh and ever amusing." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p3 Ag 30 '24 550w

"The story is curiously disappointing, for in its opening chapters it raises hopes that are never realized."
— New Statesman 24:184 N 15 '24 290w

"This new novel by Mr. Locke is written with his customary candied urbanity. The locale is Cannes. The brightness, the feverishness and the sparkle of that charming town emerge despite the foggy language of the narrator."
+ — N Y Times p13 Ag 31 '24 1100w

"It holds the reader's attention firmly and abounds in those sudden surprises and unexpected turns that are characteristic of the author. One feels sure that Mr. Locke himself thoroughly enjoyed the writing of the first part of the story." R. D. Townsend
+ Outlook 138:62 S 10 '24 1000w
Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 138:451 N 1 '24 140w
Spec 133:654 N 1 '24 50w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 380w

"In The Coming of Amos the icing with which Mr. Locke is wont to cover his confections seems a little sweeter, and the cake within a little less substantial than in days gone by."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p554 S 11 '24 620w
Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

LOCKE, WILLIAM JOHN. Golden journey of Mr Paradyne. 46p il $1.75 Dodd [5s Lane]
24-25646

Mr Paradyne, a respectable, middle-aged barrister who in all the twenty years of his married life had never quarrelled with his sour-tempered wife, fell asleep over his book one evening and was lured from his study by the piping of a fantastic tune on a flageolet. He had no notion how it all happened or how he suddenly awoke to find himself in France with a hawker's caravan and a horse. And this was only the beginning of a golden journey that was to lead him far away from home and Mrs Paradyne and the musty courts of law.

LOCKE, W: J:—Continued

Lit R p13 D 6 '24 90w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:206 N 22 '24 100w

"It is an agreeable, fantastic little tale full of that spirit of irresponsibility which makes existence so pleasant for its possessor and so difficult for those upon whose already well-laden shoulders that possessor's denied or discarded burdens are gracefully deposited. The brief sketches of French life are charming."
+ N Y Times p9 N 23 '24 780w

"It is a slight little story, beautifully illustrated."
N Y World p9e N 2 '24 330w

Outlook 138:691 D 24 '24 150w

"It is attractively bound, printed and illustrated, but is decidedly meagre in substance."
— + Sat R of Lit 1:384 D 13 '24 50w

LODGE, SIR OLIVER JOSEPH. Making of man; a study in evolution. 170p $2 Doran [3s 6d Hodder & S.]

213 Evolution 24-18300

Sir Oliver Lodge states that the arguments of this book are: (1) that evolution is a reality, that there can be a real increase of value as time proceeds, that the achievement of evolution is not easy and involves risk, but that making the effort and running the risk, results may be achieved beyond anything otherwise obtainable; (2) that mankind, dating from its conscious freedom, is in an early stage of evolution, that his present condition is a natural consequence of his immaturity, that there have already been signs of his high potentiality and destiny and that the prospect, both as an individual and as a race is one of infinite progress.

Booklist 21:56 N '24

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 26 '24 370w

Reviewed by A. B. de Mille
Ind 113:205 S 27 '24 400w

Lit R p926 Jl 26 '24 160w

Reviewed by B: Harrow
N Y Times p15 Jl 20 '24 1100w

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley
Outlook 138:334 O 29 '24 650w

St Louis p376 N '24

"Earnest and deeply interesting little book."
+ Sat R 137:539 My 24 '24 330w

Sat R of Lit 1:34 Ag 9 '24 300w

Reviewed by J. S. Huxley
Spec 132:sup796 My 17 '24 1200w

"Sir Oliver has a great deal that is fresh to say, and his thoughtful and devout way of looking at the problems involved will be helpful to many, even to those who do not share all his well-known views."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p290 My 8 '24 220w

LOGASA, HANNA, and VER NOOY, WINIFRED, comps. Index to one-act plays. (Useful reference ser.) 327p $6 Faxon

016.822 Drama—Bibliography. English drama —Bibliography 24-21477

The index contains titles of about 5000 one-act plays written in English or translated into English from a foreign language, published since 1900. The title list contains full information about the individual play—author, number and kind of characters, setting or background, suitability for elementary or high school pupils and key reference showing in what book or magazine the play may be found. An author list is also provided, as well as a subject index.

Booklist 21:92 D '24

"In listing 5,000 ubiquitous and fugitive one-act plays omissions may be expected. But such omissions! As one goes on the errors and omissions become more alarming and mysterious. All these detract from the serviceability of the index. In no manner, save that of bulk, does the present work supersede those manuals already on the market."
— Sat R of Lit 1:185 O 11 '24 250w

"The work has been done exhaustively, in a scholarly manner, and with the needs of the class-room constantly in mind" Ernest Hanes
+ School R 33:75 Ja '25 120w

LOISY, ALFRED FIRMIN, abbé. My duel with
2 the Vatican; auth. tr. by Richard Wilson Boynton. 375p $3 Dutton

B or 92 Roman Catholic church in France 24-28232

Autobiography of a Catholic modernist—the candid story of the French abbé, theologian and educator who for years fought a losing battle in his attempt to get the Catholic church in France to recognize the results of modern scholarship and research in the interpretation of the Bible and the dogmas of the church. Since his excommunication in 1908 he has occupied the chair of the history of religions in the Collège de France.

"This book deserves to rank with the masterpieces of religious autobiography written by John Henry Newman and Ernest Renan." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 20 '24 280w

J Religion 5:106 Ja '25 110w

"No summary can do justice to the autobiography which M. Loisy elaborates with painstaking detail and generous restraint, or to the high literary excellence which makes the book a hard one to put down once it has been begun." W: MacDonald
+ N Y Times p3 N 16 '24 3100w

Reviewed by Kenneth Fuessle
N Y World p9e Ja 25 '25 620w

Outlook 139:72 Ja 14 '25 40w

LONG of WRAXALL, WALTER HUME LONG, 1st viscount. Memories. 380p il $7.50 Dutton [24s Hutchinson]

B or 92 Great Britain—Politics and government. Great Britain—Social life and customs

Viscount Long, better known to the world as Walter Long, is descended from an old and powerful English county family. At the age of twenty-six he entered Parliament and served in all nearly forty years, which included thirty-four years of cabinet rank. Viscount Long has held many important public offices, among them Chief Secretary of Ireland, and First Lord of the Admiralty.

Nation and Ath 34:676 F 9 '24 220w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p3 Ag 31 '24 2600w

Reviewed by H. W. Horwill
N Y Tribune p11 O 5 '24 850w

Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 30w

+ R of Rs 70:335 S '24 80w

Sat R 137:132 F 9 '24 320w

Reviewed by W. C. Abbott
Sat R of Lit 1:141 S 27 '24 1300w

Spec 132:606 Ap 12 '24 440w

LONGSTRETH, THOMAS MORRIS. Lake Superior country. 360p il $3.50 Century

917.13 Ontario—Description and travel. Superior, Lake 24-8907

The region covered by the latest of Mr Longstreth's literary guide-books is the Canadian side of Lake Superior and, in particular, Nipigon, both river and lake. It is a narrative of camping, tramping, canoeing and fishing, enriched like his other books with human contacts all along the way. Official help was always at his disposal. He traveled with officers of the Department of fish and game, with forest rangers and the Canadian mounted police. He was out with Ojibways and half-breeds for days at a time and went on a journey with government agents to pay the Indians treaty-money. He has included numerous illustrations and two maps.

"Really fine descriptive passages are interlaced with incidents of the woods and waters, and with anecdotes of the people. Mr. Longstreth is a very good story teller; he describes what he sees freshly, with an unexpected use of adjectives and poetic images that makes his zest and humour and friendliness contagious." Lawren Harris

+ Canadian Hist R 5:283 S '24 370w

Cleveland p64 Jl '24

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis

Int Bk R p531 Je '24 30w

"Mr. Longstreth's gift is a combination of knowledge and charm. He gives necessary facts about topography and scenery, but infuses into them the breath of physical and spiritual life." C: W. Stork

+ Lit R p846 Je 21 '24 550w

"As in his previous books, 'The Catskills,' 'The Adirondacks' and 'The Laurentians,' Mr. Longstreth evokes the spirit of the place he writes about with a rare combination of feeling for the wilds and for words. He tells of tramping and canoeing in all sorts of weather, furnishes all the information an intending tripper can take in, adorns the whole with many a humorous and human incident, and in general provides a pleasant and important itinerary and travel book."

+ N Y Tribune p25 My 18 '24 100w

"Vivid and refreshing is 'The Lake Superior Country'. . . It is an epic of the lake."

+ N Y World p7e My 18 '24 120w

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 20w

R of Rs 70:223 Ag '24 70w

"This author cleverly makes one feel the local color of the region about which he writes, but there is more desultory narrative than interpretation or solid description. This is said to be the first book of any importance upon this particular region, since Agassiz's, in 1848."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Je 4 '24 180w

Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

LORD, DANIEL A. Our nuns. 280p $1.75 Benziger

271.9 Nuns. Catholic church—Charities

The author went on a series of pilgrimages to fifteen typical Catholic institutions, including a foundling asylum, an orphanage, a convent school, a house of refuge, a hospital and an old people's home, and describes the devoted work of the sisters as he observed it.

"Dealing mainly with the human side of these institutions, the author has written a brilliant, delightful book, sparing the reader the usual boresome statistics and particulars. It is a vividly true appreciation." E. E. F.

+ Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 100w

"The material is presented in an informal, sometimes anecdotal way as if to appeal to the heart rather than the head. Although this kind of treatment of the subject makes easy reading one wishes at times for a calmer and more studious viewpoint."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 12 '24 120w

Cath World 119:428 Je '24 80w

LORD, ISABEL ELY, ed. Everybody's cook ² book. 916p il $5 Holt

641 Cookery 24-31186

" 'Everybody's Cook Book' is based on thirty-five years of experimentative work in the School of Household Science and Arts of Pratt Institute, where Miss Lord, the editor of the book, was director from 1910 to 1920. The alphabetical arrangement of the subject matter as well as an adequate index makes for speed in finding any one of the more than 3,400 recipes. Cooking timetables and temperature charts are set off in a special bluepage section —to be turned to quickly. Practical tests for judging temperature in each type of cookery are given in case of the absence of the thermometer. The scientific discussion of every foodstuff as to source, variety, methods of preparation and serving makes this volume valuable to teachers as well as to housewives."—N Y Tribune

---

"This new manual is thoroughly modern and scientifically based in its description of methods, its treatment of foods and its recipes. But it is all expressed with sufficient simplicity to make it understandable by any one of ordinary intelligence. So comprehensive and up-to-date is the book that the housewife who wants to bring her cooking up to modern scientific standards will find well-nigh every thing in it that she needs to know and will find it all told in a vocabulary within her understanding, even if she has had no scientific training."

+ N Y Times p31 D 28 '24 380w

" 'Everybody's Cook Book' will appeal to the inexperienced for its careful instructions, to the professional cook for its completeness, and to the hostess for the many unusual recipes. The housewife will appreciate the economy as well as the variety of recipes." Lettie Gay

+ N Y Tribune p8 Ja 11 '25 380w

"Its source is assurance of the value of its material, and its editing is of such character as to render its matter easily usable by the veriest tyro. The recipes are chosen not alone with regard to wide variety but to economy, and are presented in simple and exact fashion. The kitchen shelf that boasts it among its possessions will be well provided."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:436 Ja 3 '25 120w

"On the whole, the work reveals scientific conception and arrangement. A feature of the recipes is the large number of minor variations which are presented in brief notes under the main directions."

+ Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 240w

LORENZ, DANIEL EDWARD. Round the world traveller. 464p il $5 Revell

910 Voyages and travels 24-13143

"Three classes of people are specially recommended to read this book: those who will travel, those who have travelled, and those who never expect to travel, save vicariously. The countries studied are Cuba, the Isthmus of Panama, Hawaii, Japan, Korea, China, the Philippine Islands, Java, the Malay Peninsula, Burma, India, Ceylon and Egypt. Perhaps nothing could better indicate the up-to-dateness of the book than the fact that in brief careful descriptions are given the story of the discovery of Tutankhamen's tomb and the progress of the explorations since."—Boston Transcript

---

Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 150w

"As valuable as timely are Dr. Lorenz's analyses of the Cuban crisis, the Philippine independence movement, the 'so-called Japanese menace,' the Gandhi policies in India and various other political problems of the present day. The study of Gandhism, in connection with travel in India is admirably clear."

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 16 '24 550w

"The many maps are an excellent feature, and the illustrations from photographs are interesting. The volume not only offers valuable service to the tourist, but the stay-at-home reader will find that its survey of essential facts and important points of interest make a handy reference book."

+ N Y Times p22 F 24 '24 650w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 8 '24 150w

LORIMER, NORMA OCTAVIA. By the waters of Egypt. 314p il $2.50 Stokes

913.32 Egypt—Description and travel. Mythology, Egyptian

In the form of a diary a travelled Englishwoman gives her impressions of a journey from Alexandria to Khartoum. She describes the mosques, temples and tombs, with special attention to the gods of Egypt and the influence of the ancient Egyptian mythology upon its monuments. There are eight illustrations in color by Benton Fletcher and a map.

LORIMER, NORMAN OCTAVIA—Continued

"The author succeeds in conveying an idea of her own intense enjoyment and sometimes the awe inspired by the monuments of the days of Egypt's greatness. Some of her conclusions about present day Egypt, particularly on political and religious questions, are also stimulating." J. J. McL.
+ Lit R p939 Ag 2 '24 360w
N Y Tribune p15 S 21 '24 120w

"It is a fresh, spontaneous account, shot through with enthusiasm, presented with no little fluency and charm, and containing considerable enlightening comment on manners and customs. But it is frankly the book of an amateur, and as such is pleasant rather than far-reaching."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:19 Ag 2 '24 160w

LOTI, PIERRE, pseud. (LOUIS MARIE JULIEN VIAUD). Notes of my youth; tr. from the French by Rose Ellen Stein. 178p $2 Doubleday
B or 92 24-10961

These notes of his youth are made up of letters hitherto unpublished and of fragments from Loti's personal diary assembled for the first time by his son, Samuel Viaud. The diary covers eight years beginning in 1870 when he was on the naval training ship, Jean Bart, to 1878 when he was taking leave of Aziyadé, the Mohammedan girl of Stamboul, whose name he gave to the first of his exotic, half-autobiographical romances.

Booklist 21:66 N '24

"These 'long, long thoughts of youth' are overflowing with the thirst for living, with the deep impressionability and with the odd attraction for simple, primitive people which have always distinguished this colorful and delightful writer, Pierre Loti." S. L. R.
Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 320w
Cleveland p62 Jl '24
Dial 77:438 N '24 100w

"Fortunately for criticism, though less fortunately for M. le Capitaine Viaud, the 'Notes of My Youth' furnish a glimpse behind the scenes. This glimpse is enough to make one realize that Pierre Loti was of weak and unwholesome mind, for all that he was a master of jeweled, if precious, prose." J: Carter
N Y Times p15 My 4 '24 1700w
Outlook 138:603 D 10 '24 30w
St Louis p355 O '24
Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 30 '24 290w

LOVING, PIERRE, ed. Ten minute plays. 215p $2 Brentano's
808.2 Drama—Collections 23-12912

Contents: Prologue for a marionette theatre, by H. von Hoffmannstahl; Echo, by J. T. Shipley; Living hours, by A. Schnitzler; In the darkness, by D. Totheroh; Pandora's box, by J. G. Amend; Scruples, by O. Mirbeau; Firefly night, by M. J. Dorff; A matter of husbands, by F. Molnar; Philanthropy, by F. G. Tompkins; At the setting of the sun, by P. Louys; Yesterday, by C. C. Clements; The stronger, by A. Strindberg; Indian summer, by P. Loving; The white lie, by M. M. Koning.

"Although the majority of the plays are not happy reading, and the effect is necessarily one of static rather than moving character, due to lack of space and time for development, yet we feel that as curtain raisers or interludes, with the human characters actually living before us, they would spice an evening, even though the spice would be deepened with dark poignancy of sarcasm playing over the brighter sheen of life and its accompanying idealism." C. T. C.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Mr 8 '24 500w
Cleveland p3 Ja '24

"This anthology is sufficiently diversified to meet all tastes." L. B.
+ Freeman 8:550 F 13 '24 80w

"In getting together this volume of one-act plays, thirteen in number, Pierre Loving has rendered a service to those who are interested in finding material suitable for little-theatre production, or 'curtain raisers.' The book should prove a boon to amateur producers, as, in addition to the interesting quality of the plays, most of the settings are simple and the characters number from two to four persons."
+ Lit R p448 Ja 12 '24 280w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 21 '24 400w

LOW, ARCHIBALD MONTGOMERY. Wireless possibilities. (Today and tomorrow ser.) 77p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]
654.1 Radio communication 24-22919

An English physicist has written this brief sketch of wireless progress and possibilities. It is his belief that its possibilities have scarcely been touched and he shows how valuable these may be in supplying the deficiencies of our natural senses.

New Statesman 23:601 Ag 30 '24 1100w

"Mr. Low's little book is lucidly explanatory in regard to how man will probably be able to bend sound and light to his uses, and to supplement greatly the range of the senses with which he is by nature endowed."
+ N Y Times p26 O 19 '24 500w

LOWIE, ROBERT HEINRICH. Primitive religion. 346p $3.50 Boni & Liveright
290 Religion, Primitive 24-24282

A study of comparative religion from the psychological point of view. By an examination of four contemporary primitive faiths—the practices of the American Crow Indians, the Ekoi tribe on the west coast of Africa, the Bukauas of New Guinea and the Polynesians, the author seeks to discover some psychological elements common to the beliefs of primitive peoples. Part one consists of synthetic sketches of these four religions; Part two, of critiques of the theories of animism, magic and collectivism; Part three, of a discussion of the historical and psychological aspects of religion.

Bookm 60:adv N '24 90w

"The work is an able and fresh contribution to the literature of comparative religion." F. W. C.
+ Boston Transcript p1 S 6 '24 650w
Dial 78:80 Ja '25 110w

"Both author and publisher have conferred upon the general public a great boon. They merit the thanks of all for a work which will stimulate thought and research at the same time that it edifies. Dr. Lowie writes in a plain straightforward way, and does not irritate or besiege the reader with wearisome and appalling scientific expressions. Any theories defined or explained are so lucidly presented as to be readily grasped." W. C. Stevens
+ Lit R p4 S 20 '24 780w

"The shortcomings are, after all, but slight. The book is certain to have a wide appeal. Sufficiently orderly and systematic to be used as a text, it will attract the general reader by the inherent interest of its data, and it contains enough theoretical wisdom to prove of value to the professional brotherhood."
+ — Nation 119:733 D 31 '24 1100w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 41:178 Ja 7 '25 1350w

"It suffers from defects which will impair its utility to scholars and, at the same time make it unintelligible to the public. For its conclusions to be generally sound, it examines too small an amount of data." J: Carter
— N Y Times p12 S 14 '24 1600w

Reviewed by Alexander Goldenweiser
N Y Tribune p3 S 21 '24 1350w

"It is his best book and a capital work in spite of the fact that, from a certain justifiable angle, it is no book at all. For neither the fact of inclusion in one binding nor that of community of theme and point of regard is quite sufficient to make of a group of studies the sort of a treatise that one can legitimately name 'a general introduction to the study of comparative religion.' What Lowie actually gives us here is an assembly of exceedingly interesting and valuable studies, picturesque and critical, in the field of primitive religion, thoroughly justifying their inclusion in their single cover, without the pretense which publishers, and to a degree authors, seem impelled to make in behalf of works of this character." H. B. Alexander

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:246 N 1 '24 1850w

LOWNDES, MRS MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC). Terriford mystery. 314p $2 Doubleday
24-12761

"Mrs. Harry Garlet, long an invalid, dies suddenly in the night. Anonymous letters bring Garlet under suspicion of having poisoned his wife, and he is about to be convicted on a remarkable chain of circumstantial evidence when the eleventh hour testimony comes to hand that saves him."—N Y World

Booklist 21:153 Ja '25

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman 22:669 Mr 15 '24 20w

"'The Terriford Mystery' is successful if it be compared with most other books of its kind: it is only when it is compared with certain of Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's previous efforts that it it seem impossible." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Times p13 Je 15 '24 450w

"In the manipulation of horror and mystery toward a plausible happy ending Mrs. Belloc is among the most expert of contemporary fictioneers. She gets enough reality into her character drawing to save the story from being a mere mechanical puzzle; yet not enough to make it seem impossible." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p24 My 25 '24 700w

"An A1 tale for every mystery-lover." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e My 25 '24 100w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Outlook 137:364 Jl 2 '24 70w

St Louis p399 D '24

"A well-sustained murder story placed in a country setting. The solution of the mystery is a little incredible, but this is probably necessary if the reader is to be prevented from solving the enigma for himself."

+ — Spec 132:430 Mr 15 '24 50w

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 14 '24 450w

LOWRY, EDITH BELLE (MRS RICHARD JAY LAMBERT). What does your child weigh? (Orchard Hill Camp ser.) 187p $1.25 Forbes & co., 443 S. Dearborn st., Chicago

649.1 Children—Care and hygiene. Children—Nutrition
24-19355

"A discussion of the physical care of children between the ages of two and eighteen, emphasizing the problem of nourishment, and giving practical information concerning proper diet and other health habits."—Booklist

"Very brief, simple and suitable for parents who have read little on the subject."

+ Booklist 21:98 D '24

"She combines medical knowledge and simplicity in a remarkable way. Nurses, matrons, mothers and teachers will do well to read, mark and 'inwardly digest' these pages." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 1 '24 280w

"This little book is, in the first place, comprehensive and well rounded in its treatment; in the next, up to date and thoroughly scientific in its counsel; and, finally, written so simply and lucidly that it could be read by any one possessing ordinary common sense."

+ N Y Times p23 S 21 '24 300w

LUBIN, ISADOR. Miners' wages and the cost of coal: an inquiry into the wages system in the bituminous coal industry and its effects on costs and coal conservation. 316p $2.50 McGraw

331.2 Coal miners. Wages. Coal industry
24-8323

"The work is confined to a full and admirable description of the machinery of establishing wage rates, and a critical discussion of its actual operation. Parts I and II are largely descriptive of mining methods and occupations and of the structure and application of the wage-making machinery. Part III is chiefly an analytical study of the present wage-making system, while part IV, largely a summary and discussion of material previously described, touches briefly on the relationship of the course of wage rates to the consumer's coal prices and contains suggestions for a readjusted wage system. There follow eight appendices, the most important being the one on 'Some suggested changes in the wages system and their probable results,' a well arranged bibliography and an index."—Am Econ R

"The author has been successful in making a clear and readable presentation of an involved technical subject." D: L. Wing

+ Am Econ R 14:552 S '24 600w

"The book shows wide reading and a knowledge of the variety of technical difficulties with which this industry is beset. The description of rate making has been admirably handled. The treatment of the many differentials which have played an important part in rate setting is a contribution." W. E. Fisher

+ Ann Am Acad 116:281 N '24 2100w

Booklist 21:52 N '24

"An illuminating analysis of a complex matter, refreshingly free from prejudice. Opponents of the United Mine Workers will find in it much justification for the existence of this misrepresented but desirable body. The book is not easy to read, and, despite the romantic nature of the coal miner's job, its perusal had better not be attempted except by serious students." W. D. Lane

+ Nation 119:194 Ag 20 '24 950w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:355 Jl '24

LUCAS, SIR CHARLES PRESTWOOD. Story [2] of the empire. (British empire, a survey) 12v v 1 286p il $4 Holt

942 Great Britain—History [24-19317]

The twelve volumes of the British empire series of which this is the first are intended to give a complete survey of the history, resources and activities of the Empire looked at as a whole. Each volume is self-contained and deals with a special aspect of the empire. The present volume is an historical sketch which, under chronological divisions covering the whole of the British empire, emphasizes its continuous expansion from an island into a commonwealth.

Boston Transcript p7 D 6 '24 270w

"Useful text-book containing a large number of facts, but there are necessarily many pitfalls in this summary treatment of so vast and complicated a stretch of history."

+ — Nation and Ath 35:418 Je 28 '24 150w

"Sir Charles Lucas tells, and tells very well, the story of the Empire from an historical aspect. Probably this is the book that will be most enjoyed by the general reader, for it goes with a fine swing. We should like to suggest that, somewhat condensed, it would make an excellent text-book for schools."

+ Sat R 138:45 Jl 12 '24 140w

"The elements that have gone to make up the national character are separately noted, and each is shown to have played its part in regulating the country's expansion; and binding them together, throughout the Empire no less than in the home island, is the sea and the instinct for sea power. This is the stimulating conception which gives life and unity to the book; and if there are occasional passages where the reader's interest flags, that is because Sir Charles Lucas has determined to make his narrative complete and does not omit any one of the details of his theme."

LUCAS, C: P.—Continued
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p471 Jl 3 '24 400w

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. Advisory Ben. 256p $2 Doran [7s 6d Methuen]
24-6738

Benita Staveley at twenty-two sees the need of going into business, since her position in her father's house has been taken by a young stepmother. Against the protests of her father and against the well-meant advice of her many relatives she chooses London for her territory and hangs out her sign: "The Beck and Call—domestic problem bureau. Bring your needs to us. Fees moderate." A wide variety of problems are presented to her, from what to do with love-lorn cooks to finding a place where the nightingales sing. Her last request comes from one of the two young men who run the book shop below her office, a request for a wife so similar to her that she can but happily take the hint.

"'Advisory Ben' would never come under the classification of a brilliant novel, but it possesses the invariable Lucas charm, it is whimsically amusing as to plot and as for the individuals with whom it is vividly peopled, they not only provide the pleasure of their immediate acquaintance but linger agreeably in recollection. 'Advisory Ben' will take its place among the most popular of Mr. Lucas's contributions." F. A. G.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 21 '24 850w
Cleveland p51 Jl '24
Ind 112:268 My 10 '24 10w
Reviewed by G: B. Dutton
Ind 113:48 Jl 19 '24 500w

"This will not add the tiniest fraction of a cubit to the stature of Mr. Lucas's literary reputation, chiefly because he has not taken the trouble to give much thought to it. As in all his writing, there are clever, animated bits of character sketches in this, and there is occasional wit, but the thing as a whole is no more than a hasty pot-boiler, of the flimsiest material, put together haphazard."
— + Lit R p794 My 31 '24 150w

"It is a pleasant book for pleasant people, giving as do many of his other stories an amusing picture of English middle-class life, full of whimsical twists and entertaining comment."
+ N Y Times p9 My 11 '24 550w
N Y Tribune p24 My 18 '24 480w

"He is not quite at his best in 'Advisory Ben,' but he proves a pleasant heroine, a pleasant hero, and several other pleasant people, with pleasant episodes all pleasantly presented, in such a friendly and amusing manner that surely few readers of fairly pleasant disposition will be ungrateful enough not to be pleased."
+ — Outlook 137:547 Ag 6 '24 100w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:344 Jl '24

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. Wanderer ^{2} among pictures. 289p il $5 Doran
759 Paintings 24-31900

This "companion to the galleries of Europe" is designed for the traveller in haste, to bring to his attention the pictures that ought not to be missed in the galleries of London, Paris, Madrid, Milan, Florence, Rome, Venice, Vienna, Munich, Dresden, Berlin, Amsterdam, The Hague, Antwerp and Brussels. Seventy-two illustrations accompany the readable commentary on the most notable paintings.

"Altogether a book to be highly recommended to any one intending to tour Europe who does not want to miss the magical creations of the painter's brush, which we inevitably think of at the very sound of the word 'Europe.'" J. C.
+ Lit R p9 Ja 3 '25 320w

"The book would have gained considerably if it could have been a complete anthology of the pictures of Europe. The illustrations are well chosen, although the reproduction is not always perfect."
+ — New Statesman 24:278 D 6 '24 320w
N Y Times p23 D 14 '24 430w

"It is a guide book that does not press too hard the obligations of culture; it is informative without being dull, critical without being pontifical." H. S.
+ N Y World p9e N 23 '24 130w

LUCAS, EMILY BEATRIX COURSOLLES. See Jones, E. B. C.

LUCAS, FRANK LAURENCE. Euripides and his influence; introd. by R. W. Livingstone. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 188p $1.50 Marshall Jones
882 Euripides 24-3990

A study of the influence of Euripides thru the ages as dramatist and thinker. It shows the main changes made by Euripides in the drama of his own time, in its construction, characterization and style; what later writers fell under his spell; what qualities in him attracted men in different ages; what poets as various as Ovid, Milton, Racine and Goethe and Browning owed to him.

Booklist 20:332 Je '24

"This excellent study of Euripides does not attempt too much; it is rather a whet to the appetite of the reader than a full statement." H. L. Pangborn
+ Bookm 59:602 Jl '24 480w
Boston Transcript p6 F 13 '24 310w
Cath World 119:418 Je '24 160w

"Mr. Lucas' volume is one of the best in the series, and one of the few that fulfils the promise of its title." Paul Shorey
+ Class Philol 19:94 Ja '24 220w

"The volume on Euripides and his influence was one which demanded unusual powers from the writer—a deep and thorough knowledge of Euripides and his age, an equally deep and thorough knowledge of European literature, and a style that could worthily set forth so great a subject. In every one of these qualifications Mr. Lucas has met the test." R. Anderson
+ Lit R p846 Je 21 '24 580w

"Mr. Lucas is excellently sensible about Euripides, reading his plays primarily as works of art which inevitably express the intellectual temper of their author, not as pieces of propaganda for this or that modern idea."
+ Nation 118:351 Mr 26 '24 60w

"Mr. Lucas writes with a verve and a power of epigram that make reading a pleasure, and though he pretends rather to undervalue the echoes of Euripides in later literature, he produces more in this way than his colleagues in the series."
+ New Statesman 23:198 My 24 '24 1100w
Wis Lib Bul 20:210 O '24

LUCE, ROBERT. Legislative assemblies. (The science of legislation) 691p $6 Houghton
328 Legislative bodies. United States—Congress 24-18642

From an experience of nine years in the Massachusetts legislature and a term as United States representative Mr Luce writes this, the second volume of his projected four-volume work on representative government and the science of legislation. He describes law-making bodies, their framework, make-up, characteristics, manners and habits. Chapters are given to such questions as lobbies, bribery, privilege, contempt, salaries, expenses, decorum, etc.

Booklist 21:94 D '24

"The book is, in short, a contribution to the human side of lawmaking, and as such it is welcome." W: MacDonald

+ N Y Times p3 S 21 '24 2950w

R of Rs 70:334 S '24 100w

LUCKIESH, MATTHEW. Light and color in advertising and merchandising. 268p il $3 Van Nostrand [16s Lockwood]

659 Color in advertising. Lighting. Advertising 23-11994

"A popular work on the effectiveness of color as a factor in publicity, and the use of proper illumination in display of merchandise. Illustrated with specimens of commercial color printing."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 20:327 Je '24

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:75 F '24

School Arts M 23:320 Ja '24 60w

[2] LUCKIESH, MATTHEW. Light and work; a discussion of quality and quantity of light in relation to effective vision and efficient work. 296p il $4 Van Nostrand

628.9 Lighting 24-14453

"A non-technical work considering the fundamentals of vision, the character of natural illumination, and the methods and importance of correct artificial illumination."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:513 N '24

LUCKIESH, MATTHEW. Portable lamps, their design and use. 144p $2 Dutton

628.9 Lighting. Lamps. Electric lighting 24-4937

The director of the lighting research laboratory of the General Electric company describes the possibilities of portable lamps, their design and their application thruout the home. He tells about the different types of lamp and the best uses for each type and shows how a house should be wired to obtain the best results. He also discusses pedestals and shades.

Booklist 20:327 Je '24

J Home Econ 16:274 My '24 80w

LUCIO, pseud. See Phillips, G.

LULLIN DE CHATEAUVIEUX, JACOB FREDERIC, supposed author. Manuscript of St Helena; tr. by Willard Parker. 152p il $2 Appleton

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French 24-22464

This manuscript is dated 1817, three years after Napoleon's banishment to St Helena and four years before his death. It has been attributed to Napoleon but its authorship is in doubt. In his will, made in 1820, he specifically says "I disavow the Manuscript of St. Helena." He therefore knew of its existence. It reads like a private diary, summarizing the events of his reign, and purports to show Napoleon as he appeared to himself and wished to be judged. The manuscript was first published in French in 1817.

Boston Transcript p8 N 12 '24 460w

"The manuscript fails of conviction because it does not in any real sense picture the man himself. The events recorded are familiar to every historian and are therefore of no value." Hugo Sonnenschein

— Lit R p14 N 15 '24 820w

New Statesman 24:148 N 8 '24 740w

"Whether or not the manuscript was dictated by Napoleon, or whether some clever scribe who had caught the very trick and temper of Napoleon's mind and style set down the master's thoughts after him, detracts nothing from the absorbing interest of the book. It is a graphic sketch, as brutally frank as Machiavelli's 'Prince.'" W: MacDonald

N Y Times p3 O 5 '24 2750w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y Tribune p3 O 19 '24 1550w

N Y World p6e S 14 '24 70w

"If Napoleon ever saw the thing, he was quite right in disavowing it in his will. It would be hard to conceive of a more puerile paraphrase of his ability to express himself. One only needs to read that cogent compilation, 'The Corsican,' where Napoleon's career is set down so precisely in his own language, to realize that 'The Manuscript of St. Helena' is the merest sort of hifalutin, weakly written and silly in the high spots."

— N Y World p9e O 19 '24 250w

LUTES, MRS DELLA (THOMPSON). Gracious hostess; a book of etiquette. 523p $3.50 Bobbs

395 Etiquet 23-17893

"Mrs. Lutes has written a different sort of book of etiquette based on common sense. . . In the main, this book deals with things as they are; and her experience as editor of a woman's magazine has taught Mrs. Lutes those innumerable marvelous shortcuts and methods of saving time and money which are so useful in most families. Her chapter on etiquette for the business woman is written from the standpoint of one who has been a business woman and has bossed other business women. And all the way through she manages to point out to the perhaps reluctant reader not only why things are done this way, but why it pays to do them this way."—N Y Times

Booklist 20:324 Je '24

"The author's humor is delightful and keeps a recital of social amenities from becoming dull. Although her style is never forbidding or formal, she does not neglect to be businesslike and arranges her work under captions. An index makes the volume handy for reference."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 2 '24 280w

"Mrs. Lutes has written the most modern and practical of the hand-books of etiquette." Elmer Davis

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 30 '24 2200w

Reviewed by L. L. Cline

N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 290w

LUTHER, MARK LEE. Boosters. 352p $2 Bobbs 24-2248

"This is a story of Los Angeles, its 'boosters' and its climate, its cultural disadvantages and its excessive advertising. In particular, it is the story of one George Hammond, an unsuccessful Boston architect who comes to California upon the suggestion of his wife, disliking to leave the East, and yet having little choice except to seek untried fields for advancement. His first impression of the Coast is highly unfavorable. Ultimately, however, his views undergo a reform, and that reform is simultaneous with the improvement in his material position."—N Y Times

"Entertaining reading and an entirely plausible picture of varying degrees of adaptability. Mr. Luther sets forth his 'boosters' with a kindly sense of humor and weaves the threads of romance entertainingly about the newcomers and the older inhabitants among 'The Boosters.'"

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 23 '24 260w

Cleveland p36 My '24

"On the whole, an absorbing story exceedingly well done!" M. A. E. White

+ Int Bk R p397 Ap '24 230w

"The author writes of that rapidly expanding city with insight and kindly humor. In his charming local-color story very little, good or bad, has escaped the vigilant and artistic eye of Mr. Luther." F: Blanchard

+ Lit R p555 Mr 1 '24 520w

LUTHER, MARK LEE—Continued

"The novel is a fairly entertaining one even though it is loosely constructed and though the love element is subordinated to a secondary position."

+ — N Y Times p16 Ja 20 '24 550w

"Coming or going, this light and sprightly little novel ought to gain the suffrages of at least one of the two main divisions of Americans—those who like California and those who don't." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p22 Ja 27 '24 550w

"We suspect our author, really, of having put Spencer Ward into his story, because he felt that, as a matter of counterbalance, there must be one thing rotten even in Los Angeles. The rest of the book is almost too bright and good for human readers' daily food." E. W. Osborn

— + N Y World p7e Ja 20 '24 450w

LUTOSLAWSKI, WINCENTY. World of souls; with a preface by William James. 224p $3.50 Dial press [10s 6d Allen & U.]

104 [24-11679]

"Twenty-five years ago, six of the seven essays now contained in 'The World of Souls,' together with four others which are here omitted, were published in German. Upon receiving a copy, Professor James wrote a preface which he hoped might help in securing an English or American publisher for the book. Nothing came of the attempt, however, and it took the seventh essay of the present collection, 'A New Theory of Sex,' to arouse the long-slumbering public. After a generalizing chapter on 'Philosophy and its Teachers,' he tries to prove 'The Soul's Existence,' and then shows the place of each entity in 'The World of Souls.' 'Individual Training' advances his theories of self-education, 'Immortality' reveals his belief in preëxistence and reincarnation."—Boston Transcript

"A bit too idealistic to be entirely consonant with the modern note. But they are sane and refreshingly wholesome."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '24 390w

"Professor Lutoslawski is aware that the majority of his readers will consider his discovery as a subjective illusion, but points out that a persistent illusion is at least a psychological fact deserving attention. He will find fewer believers in his intuitive certainty of pre-existence. The work closes on a delightfully utopian note. But this, like Plato's ideal republic, is not likely to be realized on earth." M. J.

Int J Ethics 35:208 Ja '25 430w

Reviewed by G. B. Munson

Lit R p5 D 13 '24 850w

"The present collection of essays, most of them written before 1900, would doubtless have received more enthusiasm from the last decade of the nineteenth century than can be hoped for from this generation. What might have been an importance shrinks, after thirty years, to a significance. But it is a significance worth considerable attention. It displays anew a well-known phase of the state of European metaphysics after the bankruptcy of Kantianism, and it places the aspirations of the preceding age in sharp contrast with the more cautious philosophic ideals of our own." Allen Tate

+ — Nation 119:549 N 19 '24 950w

Reviewed by C. M. Smertenko

N Y Tribune p5 N 16 '24 720w

"Here is intrepid adventure undismayed by doubt, personal magnetism, the infectious quality. Before its easy flow of enthusiasm all obstacles vanish. You are nigh persuaded of your own importance, saint, artist and philosopher at once, or thereabouts."

+ Sat R 137:163 F 16 '24 480w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p138 Mr 6 '24 880w

LUTZ, GRACE (LIVINGSTON) HILL (MRS FLAVIUS J. LUTZ). Re-creations. 376p $2 Lippincott

24-11141

From college, where she has gone without realizing the sacrifices that made it possible, Cornelia Copley was suddenly brought home by a climax in the family misfortunes. It was a most discouraging situation that awaited Cornelia—her mother ill, her father depressed with worry and financial losses, the pleasant home she had known exchanged for a shabby house in a cheap neighborhood, the whole household demoralized. For a moment she was overwhelmed, but her plucky spirit rose to the occasion. She turned her artistic talent to transforming the house and her loving spirit to the recreation of the home, with results little short of miraculous.

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 23 '24 150w

"Mrs. Hill has written a clean love tale praising the enterprise of sturdy young womanhood and young manhood. Her appeal is to those who believe in the everlasting reward of happiness for self-sacrifice, work, and duty, as well as to the rest who deep down in their hearts want to find in books what it is so difficult for them to hold in life—the intangible beauty of romantic, happy youth." M. L.

+ Lit R p921 Jl 26 '24 220w

"To the reader's disappointment the entire book is a development of a saying current in certain circles—'Be good and you will be happy.' " M. A. Murphy

— N Y Tribune p23 Je 1 '24 680w

LYDENBERG, HARRY MILLER. John Shaw Billings. (American lib. pioneers) 95p $2.50 A.L.A.

B or 92 Billings, John Shaw 24-20388

A biographical sketch of a remarkable figure in librarianship and medicine. The three great things in Dr Billings's life were the development of the Surgeon-General's library, the planning of the Johns Hopkins Hospital and the directorship of the New York Public Library. Mr Lydenberg's biography devotes itself to the first and the last of these activities and to his work as bibliographer.

"An attractive book both in style and make-up."

+ Booklist 21:24 O '24

LYESKOV, NICOLAI SEMYONOVITCH. Cathedral folk: tr. from the Russian by Isabel F. Hapgood. 439p $2.50 Knopf

24-2326

"Nicolai Lyeskov's masterpiece has never before been translated into English tho it was published as long ago as 1872 and was tremendously popular with the Russian populace. 'The Cathedral Folk' is a carefully documented picture of the old Russian ecclesiastical life and its principal characters are three of the Orthodox clergy, Archpriest Savely Tuberozoff, Priest Zakhariya Benefaktoff and Deacon Akhilla Desnitzin. Such a book sounds as though it might be limited in interest and yet it is not so. On the contrary, it is of particularly wide interest, for these three priests are not merely pegs upon which to hang ecclesiastical pictures. Rather are they vitally moving human beings, and in the cases of two, the archpriest and the deacon, astonishing creations who compel the sympathy and affection of the reader as they pass through crises that thrill even though the reader be somewhat foggy as to schisms in the Russian Orthodox Church."—N Y Times

"Although the story may deal with the Clergy and Russian Orthodoxy, its appeal is in no wise restricted. There is something in the pages for everyone. Humor is there in quantity, description is there, political intrigue is there, village life is there. And over everything there is the arrogant breath of oppression and malignant power. An impressive portrayal of a little-known aspect of the Russia that was." W. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '24 550w

"Rich in human values which appear—in the smooth, crisp translation of Isabel F. Hapgood—to have lost little of their savor."

+ Dial 76:288 Mr '24 70w

"Lyeskov is probably the only first-rate Russian writer to have described the officials and the clergy sine ira. 'The Cathedral Folk' is a large canvas, on which full-length portraits of provincial Russian priests are drawn with bold strokes and with obvious sympathy." Alexander Kaun

+ Lit R p868 Jl 5 '24 520w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko

Nation 118:565 My 14 '24 350w

"Many of the scenes in 'The Cathedral Folk' are high comedy and Lyeskov has written them with a sort of burly farcicality that is intensely amusing. This is not a book to be read in a hurry, but one to read slowly and at leisure, so that the many aspects of interest may be properly assimilated."

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 20 '24 700w

"In spite of the frigid confines of the style, the classical exhortations to 'resplendent Phoebus' and the deus ex machina that appears obligingly to listen to lengthy confessions for the reader's information, the rather bulky novel has often a living warmth that thrills for its very unexpectedness."

+ — N Y World p7e F 24 '24 520w

2 LYESKOV, NICOLAI SEMYONOVITCH. Enchanted wanderer; tr. from the Russian by A. G. Paschkoff; ed. with an introd. by Maxim Gorky. 265p $2.50 McBride

"'The Enchanted Wanderer' shows a vein in his writings of which we have had no previous example in English. It is a romantic and humorous narrative of the life of Ivan Severianich Fliaguin, a serf who, in a rash moment, chose an accordion when he should have elected to enter a convent, with the result that he became Golovan, the Enchanted Wanderer, wandering the roads, paying the penalty for a trifling offence, encountering adventures now grotesque, now fantastic. He is a species of Peer Gynt or Gosta Berling, and his story, as related to the passengers on the boat sailing along Lake Ladoga, is a fascinating chapter out of some incredible Russian saga."—N Y World

"We have here the story of a wild, riotous, reckless life, with the central character a youth not wholly responsible for his actions. He is imbued, however, with a pathos, a whimsicality, a humaneness that make of him an acceptable personage, and of the tale of his wanderings a strangely fascinating narrative." W. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 10 '24 560w

"'The Enchanted Wanderer' is a comedy of pathos. Golovan himself is a little larger, a little more simple, than any human figure. He is a symbol of man's aimless straying and also of his knight-errantry. The grotesqueness of his fortunes and misfortunes contributes to the impression that we are listening to an old fairy tale or a miniature epic. Golovan steps out of the frame—when the book is closed—and lives on. We remember him for his simplicity and unassuming true-heartedness, for his humor; we laugh at him and are encouraged by his courage. It is impossible to define in a few words the charm of this book, but we know that it is charm, and that it is distinctively Russian." Eva Goldbeck

+ Lit R p3 D 13 '24 600w

"Whether you want a gorgeous tale of adventure conceived by what has been called 'a fiercely imaginative faculty' or a beautiful embodiment of a people, read 'The Enchanted Wanderer.' Lyeskoff has the Biblical gift of speaking in parables, but his teachings, thank Heaven, are obscure." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p9e N 23 '24 170w

"Gorky sees in Golovan, the Enchanted Wanderer, a symbol of a certain Russian type . . . 'men of inexhaustible, fantastic energy which they could find no usual manner of applying. Deprived of the possibility of making history, they created anecdotes.' Out of a series of such anecdotes Lyeskov has woven the most humorously imaginative and happiest of all his books and one which should finally establish this unjustly neglected writer in the esteem and affection of American readers." Ernest Boyd

+ N Y World p9e N 30 '24 1050w

LYMAN, CHESTER SMITH. Around the Horn to the Sandwich Islands and California, 1845-1850, ed. by Frederick J. Teggart. 328p il $3.50 Yale univ. press

919.69 Hawaiian Islands. California—Description and travel. Voyages and travels

24-21369

"This is the unadorned text of a private journal kept nearly seventy-five years ago. As a young man, Mr. Lyman embarked from New York in October of 1845 on the Mariposa. He gives a full and circumstantial chronicle of life at sea on the long voyage around the Horn, and depicts with great detail both the native and the foreign aspects of life in the Hawaiian Islands. He entered the Golden Gate and traveled among the coast towns of California. In the first months of the gold fever he made two extended visits to the diggings, the first as an actual prospector and miner, the second as a trader. Throughout the four and a half years from October, 1845, to April, 1850, he recorded his doings and observations almost every day; and since he was a disinterested observer whose natural bent was largely scientific, his picture of both the Islands and the gold fields is of considerable historical significance."—Publisher's note

"His able work is rendered still more attractive by many beautiful illustrations, and an admirable index multiplies its usefulness." W. C. Stevens

+ Lit R p14 N 15 '24 720w

"The diary makes an interesting addition to the social history of the Hawaiian Islands, and, more especially, of California in the early days. The illustrations deserve a word, for they are mostly reproductions of quaint woodcuts and drawings made during the early decades of the last century."

+ N Y Times p23 O 12 '24 600w

LYNCH, BOHUN. Perfect day. 183p $2 Seltzer [5s Collins]

24-6739

A book for the person who sees the shadows instead of the sunshine. Here at least is one person who is able to say that he has had one perfect day—and it is such a day as might come to anyone. Waking in the morning he finds perfect weather, a perfect breakfast, and perfect contentment till luncheon time. He continues thru the day to find everything perfect—his wife, his house, the joy life has to offer. There is no plot. It is just a pleasant confession of one person's absolute contentment on one summer day.

Boston Transcript p4 My 14 '24 160w

"It seems strange that a writer of Mr Lynch's experience should not have realized that there is something singularly vulgar about publishing abroad one's gratification at having been born in a state of society which derives its good in life from an excess of physical comfort."

— Dial 77:346 O '24 60w

"The thing is not the ghastly, sentimental monotony you might expect. . . 'A Perfect Day' is among the most charming volumes of the year. It touches that supreme level of art at which the craftsmanship disappears in the perfection of the execution." G. W. J.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p7 Je 29 '24 450w

"The book is something of a tour de force. It is, however, quite a successful one because Mr. Lynch is too acutely conscious of the unusual character of his good fortune to write a 'glad book' and because there is enough cynicism in his determination to accept his happiness without worrying about those who have less to keep him from being, like the professional optimist, depressing."

LYNCH, BOHUN—Continued
— + Nation 119:170 Ag 13 '24 220w

"Unfortunately, the author does not live up to his professions, for a touch of the cheap bohemian mars his best endeavor to paint the lusty, robust creatures he admires. He sets up a contemporary sentimental savage of the English upper classes, heaps him with joys of the senses, showing a nice observation of detail, a keen sense of character and a stout instinct for simplicity. But almost on the first page he vitiates his atmosphere."
— N Y Times p8 Ap 20 '24 750w

"It is charmingly written and the style purrs with contentment." Edith Leighton
+ N Y Tribune p24 My 25 '24 390w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Outlook 137:442 Jl 16 '24 130w

"We conduct an ante-mortem inquest into the contents of Joseph's mind. Our verdict is that such a mind may be very well equipped to confront the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, but it would be rash to expect the reading public to keep awake at night reading this rather agitated account of it."
— Spec 132:93 Ja 19 '24 350w

"One smiles in reading these gay but manly pages, but it is with anything but the smile of superior disparagement. Those who know joy will here recognize joy captured. Mr. Bohun Lynch carries us with him to the end without surfeit."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p768 N 15 '23 480w

LYND, ROBERT (Y.Y., pseud.). Blue lion, and other essays. 211p $2.50 Doran [6s Methuen]
824 [24-1009]

Many of Robert Lynd's essays are contributed to the New Statesman under the signature, "Y.Y." and some of the present collection have appeared there. They are lighthearted and conversational and somehow manage to bring out a distinct savour in timeworn and trivial themes. Partial contents: The shy fathers; Fear; Cigarette pictures; Afternoon tea; Out of print; The morals of bird's-nesting; On being rather ill; On never going to the British museum; Enchantment in the music hall; The watchers; Joy bells.

Booklist 21:16 O '24

"A book determinedly, correctly, even happily pleasant."
+ Bookm 60:234 O '24 110w

"Mr. Lynd writes with charm. Some of the pegs on which he hangs his fancies are worn from custom. In the main he follows the Lamb tradition. Still the art of talking pleasantly about nothing requires a singularly adroit mind."
— + Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 220w

"This is a delightful book."
+ Dial 77:349 O '24 60w

"Light though his touch is, Mr. Lynd is never merely jocular; and when he drops into graver affairs, as he does too rarely in this book, he is never solemn. No doubt his secret is a very simple one. He is one of those rare artists who believe that other men's tastes are worthy of attention, and that other men are as real and as important as himself. There you have the secret of his popularity."
+ New Statesman 22:344 D 22 '23 850w
N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 50w

"Though he may on some occasions elaborate trivialities, this malady of the periodical contributor rarely blights his humour and never his good will."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p764 N 15 '23 400w

M

MCADIE, ALEXANDER GEORGE. Making the weather. (Outing handbooks) 88p $1 Macmillan
551.5 Meteorology. Fog 23-17539

The seven brief essays in this little book have to do with the artificial control of the atmosphere and especially with the dispersal or condensation of clouds. The author shows how the results of more than one of the great sea fights of history, in particular the North Sea fight in the late war, have hung upon visibility and how important it is to devise some practical method of dissipating fog over flying fields and in military and naval operations.

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 23 '24 220w

"Aside from the misnaming of the work, and the fact that it is perhaps more gossipy than informational, the book has only one fault—viz, that the author displays too great an assurance that the wars of the future will be principally fought, and probably won, in the air. Still, the attempt at strategic and tactical strategy from the isolated viewpoint of a weather-fan can be forgiven, in view of the delightful discursiveness of the interesting professor."
+ — Lit R p636 Ap 29 '24 200w

"The present reviewer has seen a number of people take up Prof. McAdie's little book and has not yet seen one of them lay it down until it was read through—not a great effort indeed, for there is not more than an hour's reading in it, but something that implies a marked difference from the type with which we are familiar in Great Britain."
+ Nature 113:486 Ap 5 '24 190w

"Professor McAdie writes with a graphic and vigorous pen, and his essays are all very readable."
+ N Y Times p23 Ja 27 '24 400w

MCADOO, WILLIAM. When the court takes a recess. 234p $2 Dutton
364 Narcotics. Firearms. Theater—Censorship 24-17682

From his viewpoint as Chief city magistrate, New York, the author discusses some crimnial tendencies of today—the narcotic habit, the relation between crime and the carrying of firearms, and censorship of plays. Some shorter papers are added which show Judge McAdoo's interest in nature and human nature.

Booklist 21:50 N '24

"He is a judge with a heart, as many of his rulings and published words have proved; and his experiences have qualified him to write well and interestingly this book." J. E. Chamberlin
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 2 '24 1250w
Lit R p955 Ag 9 '24 220w
N Y Times p2 Ag 3 '24 600w
N Y Tribune p11 S 28 '24 130w

"No one can fail to be impressed by the American magistrate's clear-sighted analysis of the conditions or to approve his pertinent suggestions, expressed, as they are, in telling, forceful and beautifully precise English." J. Carter
+ Sat R of Lit 1:8 Ag 2 '24 540w
Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 70w

MCALISTER, ALISTER. See Wharton, A. P., pseud.

MACARTNEY, MAXWELL HENRY HAYES. Five years of European chaos. 242p $4 Dutton [10s 6d Chapman & H.]
940.5 Europe—History. Reconstruction (European war) [23-18450]

As special correspondent of the London Times Mr Macartney has travelled up and down Europe since the armistice, observing the effects of the peace treaty and the discontent generally prevailing. His comment is frank and pointed. Contents: Some aftermaths of the peace; Four months' bolshevism in Budapest; Austria's fight for life; Kaiser Karl's bids for his throne; The Upper Silesian muddle; The rebirth of German unity; The Irish "controversy" in 1922; King Constantine's second flight; The fall of the sultan.

Am Pol Sci R 18:648 Ag '24 150w

"Without attempting to give an ordered narrative account of any of these episodes, Mr. Macartney is able from his personal experience to throw a vivid light upon the situation, and his excursions behind the scenes were at times entertaining as well as dramatic." W: MacDonald

+ Lit R p892 Jl 12 '24 500w

N Y Times p5 My 18 '24 800w

"As a whole the book is a most severe arraignment of the ignorance and the prejudices—found not here or there, but everywhere—which continue to keep the civilized world in a state of disturbed suspense or open turmoil."

Outlook 139:70 Ja 14 '25 300w

"A lively sense of humor is all that saves the narrative from the grimness of tragedy."

— + R of Rs 69:670 Je '24 100w

MACAULAY, ROSE. Told by an idiot. 340p $2 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d Collins]

24-2894

That "life is a tale told by an idiot," that there is nothing really new under the sun, that history is always absurdly repeating itself and the younger generation continually in revolt against the older, are the constantly recurring motifs in this story which follows the fortunes of an English family during three generations, from later Victorian times to the present. The story is a panorama of the changes and events of the years from 1879 to 1923 as they affect the lives of the Garden family—the Rev Aubrey Garden, a minister who was always changing his creed, his wife, who patiently adapted herself to each of papa's new faiths, his children and grandchildren. The follies and peculiarities of each period, of each year even, are touched off brilliantly and wittily. Satire it is—but never bitter or intolerant.

Booklist 20:265 Ap '24

"She is witty and she is wise but she is profoundly hopeless—with that attitude of mind which declares that it is not worth while to hope. Her scalpel cuts very deeply and it leaves the impression not merely of agnosticism but of the conviction that there is nothing in which to believe. Hers is a brilliant but a dangerous creed." D. L. M.

Boston Transcript p6 F 6 '24 1150w

Cath World 119:565 Jl '24 360w

" 'Told by an Idiot' is a novel of unusual distinction made almost unique in recent fiction by the fact that it is conceived entirely in the vein of pure comedy. The true comic spirit, with its invitation to what Meredith called thoughtful laughter and to wholesome, unprejudiced self-observation, is rare enough in any age and almost totally absent from our own. That it so largely informs Miss Macaulay's novel is therefore notable and suggests that she has achieved absolute control of her equipment and command of her art; in short, that she has extracted the greatest possible value from her talents and her material." Lloyd Morris

+ Int Bk R p345 Ap '24 1100w

" 'Told by an Idiot' should be read with care and will be appreciated by the wise. It is cast in a style that is happy, straightforward and amusing." J: Carter

+ Lit R p519 F 16 '24 1300w

"Miss Macaulay means the title of her brilliantly executed satire to be taken seriously, but it is with difficulty that she achieves gloom. Through her pages, liberally sprinkled with exploding bombs of wit, she leads one character who bridges the three generations described, who watches with bitter detachment the flux of enthusiasms and absurdities which constitute life, and who ends with Macbeth's words upon her lips." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 118:288 Mr 12 '24 900w

"Witty, and brilliantly clever in its faint satirization of our fathers, ourselves and our children. And without the least ostentation Miss Macaulay has brought a real scholarship to her presentation of life, letters, and politics in the course of the past half-century. This is a book to buy and presently to refer to; but do not, I implore you, be inveigled by Miss Macaulay's art into accepting her thesis." J. D. Beresford

+ Nation and Ath 34:sup403 D 8 '23 220w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 38:211 Ap 16 '24 1000w

"The book is full of the stupid things leader-writers, deans and similar responsible persons feel called upon to say, with appropriate interjections in brackets from Miss Macaulay. Never was there such remorseless flogging of dead horses, such fearless tilting at obsolete windmills. Her mind, however, is as active as a robin, and there is no subject on which she is not ready to have her say, and she finds the novel a commodious vehicle for her comments." Raymond Mortimer

— + New Statesman 22:146 N 10 '23 700w

"A wise title and an exceedingly wise book."

+ N Y Times p8 F 10 '24 950w

"If a novel of such exceptional power of penetration and presentation, such delightful humor and wit, such unfailing distinction of style, leaves after it a faint sense of dissatisfaction, it cannot well be with the achievement of the artist; surely Miss Macaulay has done all that she attempted."

+ Outlook 136:359 F 27 '24 900w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:293 Je '24

"Miss Macaulay gropes marvellously deep into her characters. She has, as it were, packed twenty novels into one. Her one fault in art is that she has found room for a few irrelevancies." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 136:550 N 17 '23 300w

"Though the focus is perfect, the scale all through is tiny, and the colours, though never blurred, are sometimes a little faint. The reader will wish that she would or could have given herself more time for the book. Not that it is not an exquisite and highly-polished piece of work. But if she could have lived with it longer she might have given it just that depth and richness whose absence now makes 'Told by an Idiot' not quite a great book." A. Williams-Ellis

+ — Spec 131:760 N 17 '23 750w

"Miss Macaulay is unfailingly cheerful, and the story such as it is is in her wittiest vein. It is the product of a mood—not a balanced or practical mood, but one that may well come to people who are prodigiously clever and detached from the more serious concern of living."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 1100w

"Told by an Idiot is a sympathetic as well as a brilliant book. It is done with an ease and thoroughness that disguises the solid industry of the feat, the patience and penetration required to assemble just the incongruous ridiculous matters that illuminate her theme—that history repeats itself mechanically like an idiot, that life is a tale full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p726 N 1 '23 780w

Wis Lib Bul 20:68 Mr '24

MACBETH, JAMES CRUICKSHANK HENDERSON. Common sense in auction bridge. 322p $2.50 Dutton

795 Auction bridge 24-16316

This is a concise treatment of the principles and practice of the game of auction bridge. It is written in a conversational style for beginners.

MACBETH, J. C. H.—Continued

"There are excellent points made; but the totality is confusing." C. W.

+ — Lit R p938 Ag 2 '24 100w

N Y Times p20 Ag 17 '24 320w

"Most bridge players will find the book instructive as well as interesting."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 19 '24 160w

MCBLAIR, ROBERT. Mister Fish Kelly. 348p $2 Appleton

24-9130

"Mr. McBlair's humorously presented negroes belong with the familiar creations of Hugh Wiley and E. K. Means; a somewhat conventionalized presentation of the lazy, kindly, child-like negro whose superstitions, absurdities, and indolence are occasionally spiced with shrewdness and interrupted by bursts of energy. They are real negroes—so far as they go, and some of the episodes of the series that make up the adventures of Fish Kelly are hilariously entertaining, though they often verge upon the slap-stick variety of comedy."—Lit R

"Mister Fish Kelly is a delightful character who passes from one ludicrous situation to another. The book is well written with an eye to the humorous, and the dialect is ably recorded and not overdone."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '24 140w

"The negro in recent fiction has figured notably as a tragic personage, to be taken very seriously indeed. Possibly a return to consideration of his amusing aspects may be useful, as in some sort, a palliative, something that may help to take out the very bad taste left after absorbing such stories as Mr. Shand's 'White and Black' or Stribling's 'Birthright.' For the humorous picture is quite as truthful as the other."

+ Lit R p779 My 24 '24 150w

"Robert McBlair has made negro life in its own setting down South the warp and the woof of his narrative. He records the adventures of his titular hero with much humor and zest. But his humor does not consist in poking fun at racial peculiarities and differences. All the episodes fall in line with accepted negro characteristics."

+ N Y Times p9 Je 8 '24 700w

"Despite the daring, exquisite excursions into the spiritual realism of the 'black belt' of Jean Toomer, Roland Firbank, Waldo Frank and others, they will continue to write such tiresome nonsense as this." E. D. Walrond

— N Y Tribune p25 Jl 13 '24 200w

"Two dozen episodes are filmed by Mr McBlair in a field that is not yet overcrowded."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 22 '24 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p852 D 11 '24 150w

MCCALL, SAMUEL WALKER. Patriotism of the American Jew; with a foreword by Charles W. Eliot. 288p $2.50 Plymouth press

296 Jews in the United States 24-5097

The late Gov. Samuel McCall fully describes the record of the Jew in American military affairs from the time of Columbus thru the European war. "He examines in some detail the record of the Jews as participants in government and also as participants in movements against established rule, as in France and in Russia, and rejects the sweeping charge that the 'Jew is a revolutionist.' He also goes at length into the record of the Jew in finance and rejects allegations of sinister Jewish dominance or leadership. The historical development of the Jew as a money-lender is also interestingly reviewed and mistaken impressions concerning it corrected. Of Jewish leadership in philanthropy, the author also has much to say." (Springf'd Republican)

"Even Dr. Eliot's opinion that Governor McCall's book ought to be widely read in the United States does not convince me that there is anything of value in the volume beyond the first and the last two chapters, in which the author generalizes in a liberal and intelligent manner on the dangers of race prejudice and on America's position in the present Ku Klux crisis. For the rest, it is the usual compilation of historical instances which, though they reflect credit on the Jew, are useless as evidence of Jewish worth and utterly irrelevant to the questions of racial tolerance and America's problem in establishing national amity." J. J. Smertenko

— Nation 119:98 Jl 23 '24 280w

Reviewed by J: Corbin

N Y Times p19 My 25 '24 2100w

St Louis p334 O '24

Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 17 '24 1000w

MCCARTER, MARGARET (HILL) (MRS
2 WILLIAM ARTHUR MCCARTER). Widening waters. 401p $2 Harper

24-24693

The story centers about the struggle for water rights in the tablelands of New Mexico. To the Redstone Ranch comes John Baronet, a sturdy young Kansan engineer with plans for irrigating the Las Deltas grazing lands, but Sir Lawrence Redstone, English land owner, will not permit the water in his control to be used for any such development. John's problem becomes intense when he falls in love with Faith Harborough, daughter of the manager of Redstone ranch, whose shrewd mother plans to marry her to Sir Lawrence's son Roger. Intrigues with murderous Mexicans add to the complications of the story which closes with the success both of John Baronet's enterprise and of his love affair.

"The theme has the stuff of drama in it, but in this heavy-gaited, plodding story nothing vital emerges either in the situations or in the characters. . . The stiffness of the dialogue does much to spoil the author's effects."

— N Y Times p17 Ja 4 '25 220w

"The story is written in a style certainly not less competent than the average; it catches picturesquely the wild natural atmosphere of the undeveloped West; it is constructed as well as most novels of its type; and, if one be a lover of the standard brand of Western fiction, it is certain to hold one's interest once one has caught the main drift of the narrative."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:330 N 29 '24 170w

MACCARTHY, MARY (MRS DESMOND MACCARTHY). Nineteenth century childhood. 114p $2 Doubleday

B or 92

Mrs Desmond MacCarthy recalls the memories of a Victorian childhood, spent mostly at Eton, where her father was a warden. The memories are delicate and detached, touches and scents here and there, yet they make an unforgettable picture. Some eminent Victorians appear, but it is in the life of the writer's family—the school room and nursery, the whole friendly, comfortable home, the distinctive yet somewhat illusive figures of father and mother, that the interest of the narrative consists.

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 24 '25 1400w

"What makes Mrs. MacCarthy's book so delightful, is that she seems, with an effortless instinct, to have regained the childish atmosphere and perspective, and to be able to write of things as they occurred with that curious detachment which is an enviable power of childhood, the power of sharply separating one incident, or one string of incidents, from those with which it was in reality closely intertwined." A. C. Benson

+ Nation and Ath 35:774 S 27 '24 1900w

"The old will adore Mrs. MacCarthy's book because it is so simple, the young because it is so sly. And the young will be, as usual, right. For Mrs. MacCarthy is, beyond all possibility of salvation, an artist."

+ New Statesman 24:176 N 15 '24 960w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p609 O 2 '24 780w

MCCASLIN, HERBERT JOHN. Wood pattern-making. 296p il $2.25 McGraw

621.74 Pattern making 23-12510

"Text-book based on a progressive series of problems. Connected with the practice where castings are to be made as individual molds, rather than by machine molding."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:73 F '24

MCCLELLAND, NANCY VINCENT. Historic [2] wall-papers. 458p il $25 (£5 10s) Lippincott

745 Wall paper 24-25785

A sumptuous book, with twelve plates in color and 245 half-tone illustrations, which reviews the history of wall-papers from their first appearance in the sixteenth century to the introduction of machine-printing in 1840. Beginning with the earliest block-printed papers in France Miss McClelland traces each successive stage in wall-paper development—paper imitating tapestries, woven and printed fabrics and decorative painting, and scenic papers. There is a chapter on early American wall-papers, also one on some famous scenic papers and their owners. A conspectus of biography of wall-paper designers, manufacturers and dealers is provided, a list of French fabricants and their designs and a bibliography.

"Miss McClelland has produced a beautiful book. It is not only a readable book but a very complete one." C: de Kay

+ N Y Times p12 F 1 '25 1200w

"Even if we do not fully share her enthusiasm for the 'Scenic Paper,' we can readily admit that Miss McClelland has not only given us a very entertaining book, but has done a good service to one of the most neglected of the minor arts in undertaking this long 'paper-chase.' "

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p864 D 18 '24 1150w

MCCLURE, MARJORY BARKLEY. High fires. 358p $2 Little

24-6025

The story opens in Detroit, in the year 1905, when that city was just beginning to be a manufacturing center, and is concerned with two families, the Stanhopes and the Stevensons. The Stanhopes were fairly well-to-do but had very little religion; the Stevensons were poor and had almost too much religion, for Dr Stevenson was a Presbyterian minister. However, the Stevensons were a jolly family and made friends even among those who did not have like religious views. In 1917 the children of the two families had grown up and Frances Stevenson and Richard Stanhope were very much in love. The old question of religion stood between them, and Frances was torn between her loyalty to her father and her great love for Richard. When the war broke out Richard was among the first to go, but in a few months returned wounded. As soon as he was able he again took up his law practice, while he waited for Frances to return from Egypt where she had a secretarial position with an archeological expedition. When the members of the church with which Dr Stevenson had been connected for many years were most unjust to him, Richard took up the fight and thus matters stood when Frances came home. And shortly after there was a wedding.

Booklist 20:339 Je '24

"It is worth a great deal to read a story of modern life, wherein youth's outlook clashes with a conservative maturity, which does not give its chief attention to hectic jazz and liquor-laden 'smartness.' On the other hand it is also worth something to read a novel which having been kept out of this erotic atmosphere, is neither saccharine nor priggish. There is no bland sanctimoniousness about 'High Fires.' It is a well-wrought story. It has literary excellence. It has breadth and beauty and it is intensely human." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 26 '24 850w

"Not a sensational story, we must own; but not a Pollyanna story, either. There is much gentle realism and close observation in the minor scenes. If the author had kept the feminine point of view and spared us the arguments of Angus, and the endeavor to depict a man's world in his encounters with the baseball player, the servant's seducer, and the automobile magnate, we might have had a more artistic book." Clare Howard

+ — Lit R p607 Mr 22 '24 450w

"High Fires is a masterpiece of the school of thought represented by the Youth's Companion and the Y.M.C.A. Readers who are shocked and pained by Flaming Youth and Janet March will turn to its wholesome pages with relief." R. M. L.

New Repub 38:346 My 21 '24 80w

"One of the characters remarked we get nowhere arguing religion. Nor, in the big sense, do books. The propaganda novel, for some reason, is always doomed to perish, as the bones of English literature reveals. Somehow Angus Stevenson is so out of date his passing does not rouse the sympathy half as much as it might."

— N Y Times p8 Mr 9 '24 720w

"Mrs. McClure is to be congratulated on a thoughtful book that has not been written in haste and will be read with pride by those who are hopeful of American literature." C: H. Towne

+ N Y Tribune p20 Mr 16 '24 1050w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 360w

Outlook 136:746 Ap 30 '24 70w

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 27 '24 80w

Wis Lib Bul 20:98 Ap '24

MCCLURE, ROBERT E. Dominant blood. 389p [2] $2 Doubleday

24-29829

Maynard Evans, American, is "intelligent, humorous, kindly, admired for his ability and renowned for his all-around charm." His wife, Augusta, a "large, handsome woman of formidable strength of mind and character" is above all else the German daughter of her German father. In Stuart, their only child these two natures meet and clash, and strive for the supremacy. The book is an account of this conflict begun in his early childhood and reaching its sharp climax with the war.

"There is a delicacy of comprehension, a fearlessness of outlook, in Robert McClure's novel which make us feel that he is a man who has something to say worth hearing." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 13 '24 1100w

"Mr. McClure's range in his character-drawing is wide, and uniformly successful; with the women, especially the heroine, as well as with the various sorts and conditions of men. Herein he displays the sureness and skill of the potentially master novelist. If there is one serious lack in his equipment, it may be in the small proportion of humorous perception in his work; it is not wholly absent, but it is not much in evidence." H. L. P.

+ — Int Bk R p138 Ja '25 470w

"When he speaks of institutions Mr. McClure has a neat irony; when he turns to women he disconcertingly swerves into sentimentality. He is not yet in entire command of his medium. For this reason his style lacks charm, and he leaves unfinished much that he begins. Nevertheless, the book has substance and a well-bred air; it very nearly—but not quite—rises to its theme." Eva Goldbeck

— + Lit R p3 D 20 '24 420w

N Y Times p9 D 14 '24 410w

MCCLURE, R. E.—Continued
"To write a novel which will appeal to the sophisticated and which, at the same time, is sufficiently lucid and simple in style and theme to interest the large majority is an accomplishment of merit. This is what Mr. McClure has done."
+ N Y World p9e D 21 '24 220w

"No tawdry passages, no shoddy stuff, and no false touches annoy the reader. Mr McClure has taken the time and the trouble to produce a book such as returns its purchaser honest worth in substance and in treatment."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 7 '24 560w

MACCLURE, VICTOR. Ark of the covenant; a romance of the air and of science. 414p $2 Harper
24-7677

"Jimmy Boon, a brilliant young aviator, is the hero of 'The Ark of the Covenant,' the story of how a series of Wall Street bank robberies and a plot involving world-wide destruction and crime are traced to an organized power having under its control all sorts of deadly gases and electric currents, besides an outfit of the swiftest airships. Jimmy, whose father has suffered through the raiding forces, sets out to track down the mysterious criminals, and he succeeds in his purpose after speeding into lurid adventures in all parts of the known earth."—N Y World

Boston Transcript p6 Je 7 '24 520w
Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"The book is not only a great 'yarn,' but actually gives to youth some idea of the scientific resources of the twentieth century."
+ Lit R p747 My 10 '24 150w

"The whole of the narrative is written in an easy, intimate style, with all that detail that makes so much for the appearance of reality. It is an ingeniously imagined tale and any one who enjoys a mystery story will find in this a good evening full of satisfaction and enjoyment."
+ N Y Times p27 Ap 27 '24 670w

"The author has put together an excellent story well told, and with the suspense element cleverly handled throughout." W. N. C. Carlton
+ N Y Tribune p28 Je 22 '24 520w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 100w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 80w

MCCULLAGH, FRANCIS. Bolshevik persecution of Christianity. 401p il $7 Dutton [18s Murray]
272.9 Bolshevism—Russia. Russia—Religion
24-16778

The author, a newspaper correspondent, gives an account of the Bolshevist persecution not only of the Greek Orthodox church but of other Christian churches as well. The first part deals with the attack on the Russian church, the persecution of Archbishop Tikhon and the founding of the "Red church." The second and longest part gives an exhaustive account of the trial of Mgr. Cieplak, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Petrograd, and fourteen of his clergy. The author was present thruout these proceedings and took full notes of all that occurred. The third part is concerned with the position now of the Christian churches in Russia.

Reviewed by E. L. Shuman
Int Bk R p596 Jl '24 2200w

"The frame of mind of the author and his method of presenting facts do not make an impartial opinion possible."
— Nation and Ath 35:268 My 24 '24 180w

"His style is clear and graphic. The book is virtually indispensable to any one who wishes to reach correct conclusions about the conflict of the Soviet régime with the religious sentiment deeply implanted in the hearts of a majority of the Russian people." A. S. Will
+ N Y Times p1 Je 1 '24 2450w

"Of absorbing interest from cover to cover."
+ Outlook 137:516 Jl 30 '24 160w
St Louis p369 N '24

"Captain McCullagh writes as a journalist, not as a lawyer used to the sifting of evidence. Further, it may be alleged against him that he is biased in his view of Bolshevism because of what he underwent at the hands of the Bolsheviks when he was captured in Siberia two or three years ago—he wrote a vivid account of his experiences and of what he saw of the working of the Soviet system in a former book, 'A Prisoner of the Reds.' Yet making every allowance, no one can read the present book without coming to the conclusion that what he states is not only true but convincingly put."
+ — Sat R 137:327 Mr 29 '24 880w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p211 Ap 3 '24 170w

MACCURDY, GEORGE GRANT. Human origins; a manual of prehistory. 2v 440;516p il $10 Appleton
571 Man, Prehistoric. Man—Origin. Archeology
24-20653

A comprehensive work covering not only the origin and development of man but also the origin and development of man's mind as reflected in his discoveries, inventions and activities. The period covered antedates the period of recorded history and cultural evolution is more fully treated than organic evolution. There are 254 illustrations, a glossary of terms and a long and valuable appendix giving in condensed form the results of a stratigraphic study of the principal sites occupied by man during a series of epochs or during different phases of the same epoch. These sites are arranged alphabetically under the various countries in which they are located and under each station bibliographic references are given.

"Dr. MacCurdy's sumptuous and richly freighted volumes go far towards exhausting the information that is now available on the subject of prehistoric man. All the pertinent discoveries find detailed mention in the work, and many of its chapters are supplemented with bibliographies. The glossary of terms will be of assistance to the general reader." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p3 O 18 '24 1150w

"He has done admirable work himself as anthropological investigator and discoverer, and he is thoroughly informed and a competent judge of the work of others. The book itself is written simply and clearly and is handsomely printed and abundantly illustrated." Vernon Kellogg
+ No Am 220:349 D '24 1100w

"This book might be said to combine the qualities of an elementary treatise on the subject of paleoanthropology and an advanced research reference book. One who possessed average intelligence and nothing but a strong desire to understand the growing science of man's past could use this book to advantage. Professor MacCurdy's style is so clear that the study of his book will not become a grind."
+ Outlook 138:606 D 10 '24 240w
Springf'd Republican p10 O 7 '24 600w

MCCUTCHEON, GEORGE BARR. East of the setting sun, a story of Graustark. 350p $2 Dodd
24-19665

This is Mr McCutcheon's latest contribution to the interesting history of Graustark. One cold night in New York nine men were grouped around the fireplace of a famous club, when there arose the question of the destiny of Graustark since the war. No one seemed to know, but every man's curiosity being aroused, a publisher in the company sends his best feature-writer to the Balkans to report the condition of the little principality. And that is how Pendennis Yorke, a live young American, becomes involved in an amazing adventure which abounds in hazardous situations and handicaps. But Denny overcomes all of these obstacles and returns in triumph with a satisfactory report and the beautiful princess Virginia—his wife.

"Altogether delightful." A. D. Douglas
+ Int Bk R p858 N '24 100w

"Rarely does any sequel come up to the expectations of those who enjoyed the first story, but this comes near to doing so, and readers who come to it without any acquaintance with the earlier history of Graustark will inevitably be driven to go back and get the earlier books." Harvey Parrish
+ Lit R p14 O 25 '24 670w

N Y Times p9 S 28 '24 440w

Sat R of Lit 1:233 O 25 '24 300w

MACDONALD, GREVILLE. Billy Barnicoat. 230p $2.50 Dutton

One night many years ago a Spanish ship was wrecked on the coast of Cornwall, and among the wreckage washed up by the sea was a baby. This baby was adopted by Jacob Hornisyde and his wife Rachel and he was called Billy Barnicoat. The Hornisydes had no children so Billy was the joy of Rachel's life, tho as he grew older his marvelous adventures often frightened her. Near the shore lived a mermaid with the most wonderful looking glass and she and Billy became fast friends. It was when looking in the mermaid's glass that Billy found his Lady mother and the little blackamoor Angelito and had such gay times. There was a wicked old witch who lived near the village who tried to work Billy ill, but the very elements seemed to be in his favor and he came safely thru all his adventures and lived happily with Aunt Rachel and Uncle Jacob.

Booklist 20:146 Ja '24

Bookm 59:303 My '24 30w

"If I were told to choose one book from the Christmas tree for my very own I would choose 'Billy Barnicoat.'" Jacqueline Overton
+ Ind 111:227 N 10 '23 70w

"An English tale which is one of the finds of the season, written with great charm and rarely illustrated."
+ Lit R p354 D 8 '23 200w

"He conjures with moonshine and sunshine. His fancy, now wild and whimsical, now beautiful and tender, plays with true flesh and blood and with shadowy creatures of a wonder-world. Mr. MacDonald's way of combining humor with realism and fancy is straightforward and charming. As far as I know nothing like this book has happened before. A child discovers here for us a world of human experience." H. S. Wright
+ Nation 118:120 Ja 30 '24 720w

"Greville MacDonald makes his young readers free of the land of romance where any kind of strange or beautiful or thrilling thing may happen at any moment, and he puts into their hands the fairy magic that makes the impossible real and true. And it is all written in a simple, graphic way that gives the seeming of reality to his whimseys and fantasies."
+ N Y Times p4 N 11 '23 300w

"F. D. Bedford has illustrated 'Billy' and does so with his usual skill, using to the full his gift of putting into a picture just the things a child most wants to see." Audrey Lucas
+ N Y World D 16 '23 150w

MACDONALD, GREVILLE. George Macdonald and his wife; with an introd. by G. K. Chesterton. 575p il $6 Dial press [21s Allen & W.]

B or 92 Macdonald, George. Macdonald, Louisa (Powell) (Mrs George Macdonald) [24-25562]

The one-hundredth anniversary of George Macdonald's birth brings forth the first authoritative biography, tho his poems and novels have been read and loved by three generations of the religiously minded and his fairy tales are counted as children's classics. Louisa Macdonald, his wife, has an equal share in the interest of this biography, written by their son, and many of their letters are included. It tells of a full and rich family life which poverty, ill health and bitter griefs could not rob of its happiness. The brave steps which the resourceful Louisa Macdonald took to relieve financial troubles and the generosity with which the family borders were enlarged to include orphans and other unfortunates are humorously described. As one expedient the whole family trouped about in the summer producing Mrs Macdonald's dramatization of "Pilgrim's Progress," which helped to pay for their winters in Italy.

Booklist 21:109 D '24

"A book that will afford considerable interest to the student of English literature, and much spiritual help to anyone who has poverty or ill health to fight against."
+ Bookm 60:357 N '24 100w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p2 S 6 '24 1200w

Reviewed by H. J. Massingham
Nation and Ath 35:569 Ag 2 '24 650w

New Statesman 23:290 Je 14 '24 900w

N Y Times p16 Ag 24 '24 1100w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
N Y Tribune p6 S 21 '24 480w

Reviewed by S. T. Williams
No Am 220:352 D '24 600w

"Not an altogether exhilarating picture of 'domestic happiness three generations back.' And yet there is much of zest and happiness in this book, and we may fairly ask ourselves what we have to boast of in substituting chill smile and ironic gesture for the affectionate raptures and concealments of our fathers." H. W. Boynton
— + Outlook 138:648 D 17 '24 700w

St Louis p387 N '24

Sat R 137:591 Je 7 '24 400w

Sat R of Lit 1:129 S 20 '24 550w

"The story of his life, reverently, humorously, shrewdly told by his son, is that of an honourable, brave, sensitive man who had capacity and opportunity for enjoying and suffering more than most."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p329 My 29 '24 800w

MACDONALD, JAMES RAMSAY. Margaret Ethel MacDonald. 239p $2.50 Seltzer

B or 92 MacDonald, Margaret Ethel [24-13701]

Margaret Ethel MacDonald, who died in 1911, was the wife of England's Labor premier. She was a woman of lovely character and noble activities who lived a life of helpfulness to others. She was a profound influence in the life of her husband, whose political faith she shared, and his reverence for her is apparent in every page of his biography. It is chiefly the public side of her life of which he writes but he shows her also in her home which was "the source of her steadfastness and energy."

Booklist 21:66 N '24

"He displays a beauty of style and of sentiment that at places verges on the poetic."
+ Bookm 50:607 Jl '24 160w

"Written from a heart whose inner shrine is veiled with a delicate and complete reticence, this biography of the wife of the present Prime Minister of England takes its place beside that other 'perfect work of biography,' 'The Life of Alice Freeman Palmer.'" F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 3 '24 700w

"MacDonald's story of his wife is a piece of literature. It must live." S. F. Wicks
+ Nation 119:49 Jl 9 '24 240w

MACDONALD, JAMES RAMSAY—Continued

"It offers a very profound charm in the conscious dignity and tender restraint of its lines and in the gracious, high-purposed personality which it describes." R. B. F.

+ New Repub 39:166 Jl 2 '24 80w

"The Premier of the British Empire has done with good taste and literary quality a difficult thing. For he has written a restrained, tempered, excellent biography of the wife whom evidently he both loved deeply and admired greatly. The feeling of reverent love goes as an undertone all through the pages. But the account of her busy life, the estimate of her character, the portrayal of her interesting intellectual and spiritual development—none of these is vitiated by sentimentality or anywhere betrays the lessening of the restraint of literary good taste."

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 20 '24 650w

N Y Tribune p22 Je 15 '24 70w

"The manner of man that is J. Ramsay MacDonald, Labor Premier of Great Britain, is revealed by implication in the biography of his wife. . . Quite aside from the position in world affairs occupied by the bereaved husband, it is a touching human document." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p6e My 11 '24 650w

"It is a book that should be read, not for the sake of what is contained in its several chapters, but for the sake of the total effect left behind in the reader's mind after its completion."

+ Outlook 137:443 Jl 16 '24 340w

St Louis p355 O '24

Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 28 '24 180w

Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

MACDONALD, WILLIAM. Intellectual worker and his work. 351p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d J. Cape]

331.71 Intellectuals. Professions. Intellectual cooperation

"All kinds of work into which the intellectual element enters are here discussed with a view to better appreciation of its value and to organized methods of ensuring for it a larger tribute of economic and social reward. Dealing with both 'occupations' and 'professions,' Mr. MacDonald shows a wide and intimate knowledge of the tasks they involve and of the difficulties under which they are often carried on. The need now, from his point of view, is an organization of the intellectual workers as shall enable them to come into their own. In the appendices of the book are given the manifestoes and statutes of various already organized groups of intellectual workers in Europe."—Boston Transcript

"The author's discussion will repay a thoughtful reading by every intellectual worker." G. S. Watkins

+ Ann Am Acad 114:160 Jl '24 420w

Booklist 20:321 Je '24

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 15 '24 780w

"The simplicity and precision of the author's style, the coherent, logical presentation of facts give this volume the air of a primer. But the economics therein is basic as well as elementary. The book is journalistic enough to be read with ease even by the intellectual worker." J. J. Smertenko

+ Lit R p820 Je 14 '24 550w

Reviewed by J: Corbin

N Y Times p14 Ap 6 '24 1650w

"Mr. MacDonald's study is marked by thoroughness rather than by any special acuteness."

+ — Spec 133:166 Ag 4 '24 150w

"The book is penetrating but somewhat cheerless in its scrutiny of different professions, and the view which it presents is not uniformly balanced and accurate."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a F 3 '24 1000w

Survey 52:108 Ap 15 '24 110w

"A very conscientious and interesting piece of work."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p359 My 24 '24 90w

MCDOUGALL, WILLIAM. Ethics and some modern world problems. 256p $2.50 Putnam [7s 6d Methuen]

172 Social ethics. Ethics. International law and relations 24-6853

"Mr. McDougall's chief fear is Universal Ethics, which he sees embodied in the Christian gospels, democracy and socialism. The biological effect of these forces unchecked will be disastrous since they will result in a deterioration of the human stock by the overbreeding of inferior races, nations, and classes at the expense of the superior. It is therefore mistaken ethics for the superior nation or class not to assert itself. In the long run such assertion makes for eugenic progress. . . . As a matter of practical organization we should be governed by a responsible aristocracy. Nations (which are the true social units rather than individuals or classes) must be preserved, but as members of a society of nations. Only the literate—and the test for literacy should be high—should be enfranchised citizens. Between them and the illiterate intermarriage should be illegal."—Nation

"It must be admitted that Dr. McDougall presents his general argument with great skill and with an impressive array of illustrative material." E. N.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ap 5 '24 1400w

Int J Ethics 35:191 Ja '25 700w

"Such a book as this hardly deserves serious review except that the reputation of the author, his plausible style, and his skill in pseudo-scientific statement make it a welcome defense to all the hoary old prejudices and outworn modes of economic organization that menace the peace of the world. McDougall in this book is the Imperial Wizard for a more or less highbrow Ku Klux Klan." Norman Thomas

— Nation 118:564 My 14 '24 580w

"Anyone who is interested in the processes by which private anxiety will build itself an ivory tower of public doctrine will find a pleasant evening's entertainment in this book." H. M. Kallen

— New Repub 39:50 Je 4 '24 1450w

"Professor McDougall's language is unusually clear, lucid and plain; but he cannot get rid of the professorial habit of stating one-syllable thoughts in ten-syllable terms." C: W. Thompson

+ — N Y Times p11 Je 22 '24 1400w

N Y Tribune p25 My 25 '24 160w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter

N Y World p6e Ap 6 '24 680w

"Dr. McDougall is admirable as an ethical philosopher, critic, diagnostician, in the theoric part; but when he comes to the practical, the constructive, the prescribing part, he is not in his proper element." H: W. Boynton

+ — Outlook 137:547 Ag 6 '24 680w

Reviewed by Dean Inge

Spec 132:910 Je 7 '24 1150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Jl 3 '24 350w

MCDOWALL, STEWART ANDREW. Evolution, knowledge and revelation; being the Hulsean lectures delivered before the University of Cambridge, 1923-24. 99p $1 Macmillan [6s Cambridge univ. press]

121 Knowledge, Theory of. Evolution 24-10429

The stated object of the book is to formulate a theory of knowledge in accord with the established facts of biological science as well as with the spiritual interpretation of nature. It first examines the Biblical view of knowledge and then, those questions of evolution which bear upon the growing acquaintance of the animal with his environment. The last lecture discusses the place of revelation in the scheme.

"As his object is primarily a philosophical one, it is a pity that his interest is so largely biological and that he has been able only partially to break away from orthodox theology.

His early chapters are involved with a mass of irrelevant biological arguments, and his later almost abandon the intellectualist attitude, which is the primary motif of the book, and adopt a strain of mysticism which is largely a concession to orthodoxy. There is nevertheless much of value in the book for a rational knowledge of God, though the especial importance attached to biology is entirely unreal."
Boston Transcript p6 Je 28 '24 220w

J Religion 4:557 S '24 50w

— + Spec 132:759 My 10 '24 450w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 3 '24 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p348 Je 5 '24 600w

MCELROY, ROBERT MCNUTT. Grover Cleveland, the man and the statesman. 2v 359;427p $10 Harper

B or 92 Cleveland, Grover. United States—Politics and government 23-16894

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"In these two volumes we have what is likely to be the final word on the character and work of Grover Cleveland." J. A. Woodburn
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:389 My '24 1600w

Booklist 20:216 Mr '24

"Painstakingly impartial."
+ Bookm 59:88 Mr '24 180w

Cleveland p14 F '24

"This Life of Grover Cleveland has to be a history of the Democratic party, and as such it is tremendously valuable." H. I. Gilchrist
+ Dial 77:73 Jl '24 900w

Reviewed by H: E. Armstrong
Int Bk R p290 Mr '24 1350w

"While doing full honour to the memory of a great man, he has written mainly as an historian, and he has produced a fascinating and instructive historical narrative, dominated by the charm and power of a great personality."
+ No Am 219:423 Mr '24 1200w

"It tells in an honest and straightforward manner the story of an honest and straightforward man, which those who despair of democracy ought to read for the heartening of their souls." W. E. Brooks
+ Survey 52:641 S 15 '24 240w

MCFARLAND, JOSEPH. Fighting foes too small to see. 309p il $2.50 Davis

616.01 Micro-organisms. Infectious diseases 24-90

The invisible foes of which the book treats are the micro-organisms which cause disease. The author, who is professor of pathology in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, describes the effects of micro-organisms, the phenomena of infection, the means by which epidemic diseases are transmitted and combatted, the prevention of disease through inoculation and vaccination, and insects as carriers of contagion.

"A summing up in simple language of everything the average citizen needs to know and will be glad to know on the subject of micro-organisms and their connection with disease."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '24 600w

Reviewed by James Stokley
Lit R p939 Ag 2 '24 190w

"Lay readers are likely to find Dr. McFarland's book both technical and popular in the right proportions to give thanks according to their degree of interest in microbiology."
+ N Y Tribune p27 Je 29 '24 130w

"This is anything but a text-book, but rather an entertaining work of the sort one with a general interest in biological science would choose to read in order to get a clear idea of the nature of microbes without making a systematic study of the whole subject."
+ Outlook 138:242 Je 11 '24 140w

R of Rs 70:112 Jl '24 20w

Survey 52:120 Ap 15 '24 80w

MCFARLANE, PETER CLARK. Tongues of flame. 405p $2 Cosmopolitan bk. 24-11653

"The theme upon which the story is based, namely, dubious title to property, has caused many a real tragedy in the settling of the West. Indian ownership of coast lands has afforded John Boland an opportunity for sharp practice. This is where Henry Harrington comes in. The Indians trust him and Boland needs his influence with them. When Harrington finally sees light and makes a belated attempt to act as their champion Boland's combination, which for its own purpose has showed him its benevolent aspects, turns into a steam roller to crush him. In the midst of this excitement the discovery is made that all of the land upon which the town of Edgewater is built was years before obtained by Boland under a patent based upon an incorrectly drawn map. The Supreme Court renders a verdict in favor of the original Indian owners. Panic and general hysteria reign, and the title of the book finds a justification in reality."—N Y Tribune

Booklist 21:69 N '24

Boston Transcript p1 My 31 '24 700w

"Conventional, even stereotyped in its general outline and development though the novel is, it is not uninteresting, and while the love story is negligible, the mob scenes are well handled, and at times almost thrilling. Mr. MacFarlane holds a brief for the Indians, whose magnanimity at the last does seem to the reader more than a trifle superhuman."
— + N Y Times p13 Je 15 '24 500w

"The plot is unwieldy from its many ramifications and not perfectly resolved in the end. Nevertheless, the story moves and develops at least one original situation. Moreover, it raises interesting speculations as to the foundations of many things in our civilized society." Elizabeth Wyman
+ — N Y Tribune p24 Je 15 '24 850w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e My 25 '24 220w

Outlook 138:649 D 17 '24 130w

MCFEE, MRS INEZ NELLIE (CANFIELD). Food and health; a book for the lay reader who believes that health is what we make it. 345p il $2.50 Crowell

613.2 Food. Nutrition 24-8774

A practical book on food and nutrition which discusses in a readable way the composition and values of the various foods and how to combine them in the diet in such a manner as to form a perfectly balanced ration. It also describes savory, out-of-the-ordinary ways of preparing the more important foods. Appendices give tables of the chemical composition of different foods, a dietetic food list and a time table for cooking meats, breads, vegetables, etc. Bibliography. Index.

"Written by a popular author in popular style this book has a breeziness which is not usually found in books on scientific matters."
+ — Am J of Public Health 14:617 Jl '24 550w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 28 '24 120w

"Information compiled in readable style from well-known sources not always accurately interpreted, and sometimes supplemented by less authenticated theories."
— + J Home Econ 16:399 Jl '24 80w

"The book is the kind of thing that many housewives will be glad to have, since it translates into everyday form, as far as possible, the latest conclusions of scientific investigators concerning the food values of all the ordinary factors of diet, gives them direct, practical application to the daily menu and discusses their implications for the health of the family and its members."
+ N Y Times p23 My 4 '24 480w

MCFEE, INEZ NELLIE—Continued

"Here is a combination cook and health book that cannot come amiss in any home. Mrs. McFee is a gifted housewife, as well as an able popular writer on scientific subjects."

+ N Y Tribune p24 Je 22 '24 90w

Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 220w

MCFEE, WILLIAM. Race. 398p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Secker]

24-9265

There is hardly a trace of the sea or sailors in "Race," which is a picture of life in a London suburb in the closing decades of the last century. There is a crowded background of characters but before the story progresses far the interest begins to center in four of them—two of the seven daughters of the Heath family, Hazel and Lena, and Francis Striker, son of a rich wine merchant, who comes home from school in Germany bringing a French schoolmate, Louis Chaillu, with him. It is the development of these young people and their ambitions that forms the mellow interest of the story. At its close success for them all, in varying degrees, is foreshadowed. Hazel has received a promising offer from a publisher for one of her stories. Lena has thrown off the shackles of family drudge and escaped to London to become an artist's model. Francis and Louis are off to South America to build a railway. There is a promise that Chaillu is coming back soon for Hazel and hint of a high destiny for Striker as one of England's empire builders.

Reviewed by C: P. Curtis, jr.

Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '24 300w

"'Race' is an admirable novel. The clash of temperament and character resulting from racial inheritance is handled with great skill. . . There is nothing neurotic about this psychological study, yet it strikes me as being intensely real." J. F.

+ Bookm 59:457 Je '24 340w

"Seldom do we have the good fortune to read a novel so unpretentiously fine as 'Race.' The method of its progress, growing, amplifying as it goes on, its sure sense of character, its quiet stress on its subject, gentle and yet definite, is notable." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 24 '24 1350w

"Race is a volume of meticulous observation and of careful, humorous description, rather than a narrative novel. It is baffling in its fragmentary quality. It is like a prolonged prologue which so occupies its author's affectionate attention that before he knows it he has filled his allotted space and has no room left for the story to which it is introductory." S. S. A.

— + Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 S 28 '24 380w

Ind 112:316 Je 7 '24 780w

"'Race' is rich, full, meaty, salted with humor and sweetened with sympathy. There is in 'Race' the healing expression of a man who loves his fellow-creatures, altho seeing them without illusions; is slow to anger and quick to a humorous pity which never descends to the lacrimose. It affords a distinct contrast to the surly, hostile fiction of soured reformers. . . 'Race' is a representation of lives not thrillingly eventful, but so human and interesting that we must go on to the end, regretting the inconclusiveness of it."

+ Int Bk R p608 Jl '24 840w

"Mr. McFee is a regular writer; he has knocked about the world and seen more or less of all the people to whom he introduces us and, needless to say, his pictures of them are accurate enough and the separate bits of the narrative mosaic handled with competence. But the story never gets together as a whole, and one too often has the feeling that the author, instead of writing something that 'had to be written,' is merely doing another novel." Arthur Ruhl

+ — Lit R p719 My 3 '24 1450w

"Mr. McFee's realism is real enough to embrace the romance that gives colour and vividness to details that are often seen as merely ordinary or commonplace. The faults of the novel are that sometimes Mr. McFee's style is too portentous for his matter, and that the conclusion of the book leaves too much to the reader's imagination."

+ — Nation and Ath 35:214 My 17 '24 200w

"Take it all in all, 'Race,' while not being a great novel, has moments of greatness. In style the story suffers from many strictures. McFee is far too hospitable in the number of guests he invites into his pages for the parsimony with which he entertains them."

— + N Y Times p6 Ap 20 '24 2350w

"In spite of the immaturity of all the principal figures, there is no flavor of mawkishness about them. There is no gush nor affectation; the author's powers of observation are sensitive and accurate; his wit is kindly but searching. In short, I like this book extremely." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p28 Ap 27 '24 1400w

"The reader feels that the author deliberately keeps aloof from construction, continuity of action, or climax in situation. Yet the story holds the attention singularly well. The point is that these people are endued with the warmth of life; they do interest you; you like to read about them; you don't care whether the rules of novel-writing are followed or not."

+ Outlook 137:159 My 28 '24 240w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:345 Jl '24

"Race is very good, as one expects Mr. McFee to be; but it is somehow a little flat. The analysis of character is delicate, every detail is just, but the interplay of personality and event fails to appear. Yet it is a pleasure to read anything so well written: and perhaps that is a sufficient answer to critical doubts."

+ — Sat R 137:542 My 24 '24 120w

"If his book at times lacks impetus and impulse it is because, godlike, he revels too much in acts of creation for their own sake: he introduces new characters without due regard to perspective. But it is unfair to labour this trifling defect of Mr. McFee's impressive and considerable qualities: his invention, his knowledge, his control over and power of fusing the most stubborn material. Race might have been a great book; in any case it is a stimulating and remarkable one." L. P. Hartley

+ — Spec 132:760 My 10 '24 650w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 200w

"An extremely interesting book in an inconclusive fashion. Mr. Heath and the rest are so real that we could take a tram and find them."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p284 My 8 '24 360w

MCGIFFERT, ARTHUR CUSHMAN. God of the early Christians. 200p $1.75 Scribner

231 God 24-2720

"Prof McGiffert's lectures were first delivered at Yale in October, 1922. The main thesis is that from the first, Gentile Christianity worshiped Jesus as God and that the doctrine of the Trinity was a product of philosophy, based on the Logos conception. Of greater interest than this to the layman or general reader, is Prof McGiffert's sketch of the changing Christian idea of God."—Springf'd Republican

---

"The author is to be commended for his zeal in the search for truth, for his candor and fairness, but it must be confessed that the impression made by his book is to the effect that much theology is man-made stuff and has little basis in reality. Probably the reality when found will prove to be something very simple."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Mr 8 '24 330w

"An exceptionally suggestive historical survey of early Christian religious thinking, considering particularly the gentile world, where the worship of Jesus Christ was primary and the God of the Jews of secondary importance. The development of theological thought from this angle gives a fresh survey of a familiar field."

+ J Religion 4:220 Mr '24 50w

"It is a very lucid, compact, and dispassionate exposition of early Christian interest in and thinking about God." S. J. Case

+ J Religion 4:322 My '24 900w

"While the book is for the most part too technical to be of interest to the general reader it is one that no student of Christian theology can afford to neglect."

+ — Lit R p722 My 3 '24 440w

"Professor McGiffert has told a difficult story extremely well, although this book is not easy reading. It ought to be of great value to those fundamentalists and modernists alike, who will never have the opportunity to read larger works for themselves, much less the source material." G. H. Hadzsits

+ Lit R p6 N 8 '24 700w

"The difference between the moderns and the ancients is the problem of synthesizing Christian thought with a greatly advanced science. The essentials in the controversy remain as constants. Consequently Dr. McGiffert's book is invaluable as an aid to seeing that problem clearly. And one hazards the guess that when it is thus brought out into the light of day the problem will disappear."

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 9 '24 2200w

St Louis p335 O '24

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 11 '24 600w

MACGILL, PATRICK. Moleskin Joe. 331p $2 Harper

24-3918

The scene of the story is a rough labor camp in Scotland where several hundred navvies are at work building a reservoir. Moleskin Joe, famed as fighter, drinker and worker, who had been one of the gang, comes back to the camp to find refuge from an unjust prison sentence and also to do vengeance on the man who he believes is guilty of the crime. But complications arise which keep Joe from carrying out his purpose. He finds at Glencorrie the sweet Irish girl whom he had loved for seven years, now married and mother of a mite of a boy, and shadowed by something of a mystery. Joe's unselfish love for her and for the boy make a new man of him.

"It is a good story, it is written with skill, it pictures its scenes and its people vividly, it captures and holds the reader's interest. But one still expects much more than all that from the man who could write 'Children of the Dead End' and 'The Ratpit'. . . He writes a better and more entertaining story, considered as a story, but it is no longer a vivid and significant transcript of life."

+ — N Y Times p24 F 17 '24 620w

Reviewed by F. E. Thomson

N Y Tribune p30 Ap 27 '24 400w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e F 24 '24 280w

"'Moleskin Joe' will be something of a disappointment to Patrick MacGill's admirers. It lacks the gay abandon and whimsical humor of 'Lanty Hanlon' and the grim reality of 'The Rat Pit.' In plot and treatment it leans towards the latter, but lacks the stimulus of outstanding theme. It is conceived out of an incident which might have been adequately covered in fewer words."

— Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 350w

Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

MCGOVERN, MRS JANET B. (MONTGOMERY). Butterflies of Taiwan, and other fantasies. 53p $1.25 Appleton [3s 6d Heffer]

821 [24-11793]

"[The author], for a long time a teacher and social worker in Japan, in a series of poetical fantasies discourses touchingly on certain customs and traditions of the Japanese people whom she loves. Chiefly, she gives voice to the impassioned doubt, the sufferings, the eternal tragedy in the life of the present-day Japanese woman, too old to be of the new era, young enough to cry out against the slavery to which the ancient laws of Japan have subjected her."—Lit R

"From the thirty-eight poems with the preface and notes one gets a better notion of the Japanese than from a long treatise. They are remarkable." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 25 '24 450w

"Miss McGovern's poetry is well written. The nature of the things she writes about is in itself so intensely poetic, so profoundly of the soul, that she does well to cloak it in the simplest of language and the simplest of cadence—an almost prose." N. A.

+ Lit R p11 O 11 '24 320w

Reviewed by F. L. Lucas

New Statesman 23:622 S 6 '24 170w

Sat R of Lit 1:252 N 1 '24 90w

MCGOVERN, WILLIAM MONTGOMERY. To Lhasa in disguise. 462p il $5 Century

915.15 Tibet—Description and travel 24-22009

Going on a secret expedition to Tibet, a country fiercely jealous of intruders, the author was forced to disguise himself as a coolie, in order to avoid detection. His knowledge of colloquial Tibetan made this possible and "going native," as he calls it, gave him unusual opportunities for studying country and people. The journey was made at the cost of terrible hardships, but in spite of every obstacle he reached the Sacred City.

Booklist 21:147 Ja '25

Reviewed by Sidney Greenbie

Bookm 60:501 D '24 240w

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p4 S 27 '24 1200w

Ind 113:234 O 4 '24 230w

"Despite its uninspired writing, it does give us thrills, and the sort of information that piques our curiosity and romantic longing, and a most vivid contrast between cultures." G. B. Munson

+ — Lit R p2 O 4 '24 400w

"Young Dr. McGovern's journey to Lhasa in disguise will take its place as one of the greatest of the great larks undertaken by British travelers. Many books have been written about this secluded country. Dr. McGovern's is second to none, and, perhaps, superior to the best of its forerunners." D. D.

+ New Statesman 24:supx D 6 '24 650w

"As an account of a perilous and unique adventure the book is fascinating, but it has also much serious interest because of the bits of description and comment on the scene, the people, their customs and manners which Dr. McGovern throws into his narrative as he goes along."

+ N Y Times p20 O 5 '24 400w

N Y Tribune p14 D 14 '24 290w

N Y World p6e S 14 '24 230w

Outlook 138:464 N 19 '24 550w

St Louis p415 D '24

"A man cannot be expected to do everything and this book lacks the gift of style. Still, he gets the story through."

+ — Spec 134:84 Ja 17 '25 400w

"The book contains much that is of interest, and many shrewd observations on Tibetan affairs, domestic, political and religious."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p810 D 4 '24 750w

MACGOWAN, ALICE, and NEWBERRY, PERRY. Mystery woman. 303p $1.75 Stokes

24-2896

Eleven days after all the coast papers had carried a front-page story that John Scott Sargent, president of the Russo-Siberian syndicate, had sailed from San Francisco came the message by wireless that his stateroom in the MACGOWAN, A., and NEWBERRY, P.—Cont. Shinyo Maru had never been occupied. This disappearance in mid-ocean, if known, would have disastrous effects on the syndicate's stock selling campaign, so Jerry Boyne, head of the big detective agency, was called in. In the solution of the mystery a tangled plot is revealed, the threads of which reach back more than twenty years.

"'The Mystery Woman' is a satisfying mystery tale, for the secret remains a secret till the very close, and at the close the triumphant detective is turned into a very different type of man." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 22 '24 600w

"The collaboration helps to explain the plot. The actual writing was evidently done by only one of the authors, and done badly. The reading becomes labored in parts where the writer has neglected to put in a verb or has strung along a number of words that give the reader little idea of what they mean. Interest in the mystery lags in the early pages, and picks up and wanes at intervals."
— N Y Times p9 F 10 '24 500w

Reviewed by E. C. H. De Festetics
N Y Tribune p23 Je 8 '24 290w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e F 3 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Ag 14 '24 80w

MACGOWAN, KENNETH, and ROSSE, HERMAN. Masks and demons. 177p il $5 Harcourt
Masks. Demonology. Theater 23-18349

"The interest aroused by the modern masks of Craig and Benda and Dulac has stimulated the study of the origin and history of the masks which have been used in the ritual and the festival and the theatre of almost the whole world. By remarkable photographs, with explanatory text and illustrative designs, Mr. Macgowan and Mr. Rosse have developed this history and fulfilled their purpose of bridging the gap that lies 'between the Duk-Duk dancer who regulates morals and acquires riches in New Guinea, and some artist of the theatre who wishes to bring the mask back to the stage.'"—Theatre Arts Mo

"A fascinating record." L. B.
+ Freeman 8:455 Ja 16 '24 160w

+ Lit R p536 F 23 '24 800w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p851 D 11 '24 100w

Theatre Arts Mo 8:140 F '24 100w

MACGRATH, HAROLD. Green stone. 346p $2 Doubleday
24-21398

To prolong her grandfather's life and to pay off old debts, Mary Cunningham sells a valuable emerald which does not belong to her, and so brands herself a thief and cheat. The selling of the jewel is the beginning of romance and adventure for Mary. She comes to New York with the gem from the lonely coast of North Carolina. At a critical moment, when she believes she is being followed, she takes refuge in a comfortable sedan belonging to Tommy Crumley, archeologist. With Tommy's aid she sells the emerald for $30,000. Then enter upon the scene three thieves, all of whom have a knowledge of the history of the green stone. Mary and Tommy, thru sheer courage and determination, save a treasure chest hidden in the sand dunes of North Carolina, and thus preserve the secret of the glittering emerald.

Cleveland p92 D '24

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p858 N '24 20w

"This is an excellent specimen; built upon the buried treasure foundation but not at all conventional in its detail or its management."
+ Lit R p10 S 20 '24 160w

"There are several moments in the story when, did the heroine show a spark of common sense, the tale would come to an abrupt end. Indeed, had she ever been even mildly sensible, it never would have begun at all, which would really be rather a pity, as it is a lively and entertaining yarn, with complications enough and an extremely unpleasant demise indicated for the principal villain."
+ — N Y Times p16 Ja 4 '25 500w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 14 '24 80w

Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 270w

MACHEN, ARTHUR. Dog and duck. 226p $2.50 Knopf
824 24-4724

"A charming book of essays in the Dickens manner, treating of old English holidays and customs, book collecting, food, drink, and divers oddments."—Carl Van Vechten

Booklist 20:292 My '24

"There is evidence of some strain in the necessary tone of simplicity; but it is genially maintained, and erudition is brought into play only very tactfully and lightly in graceful circumlocutions."
+ Bookm 59:476 Je '24 110w

"Briefly, in a number of the essays one perceives the journalist writing to fill space. There is much in the book that will not enhance Machen's reputation as a man of letters."
— Boston Transcript p3 F 23 '24 260w

"Would enrich any periodical; but in the form of a book, they are less satisfactory."
+ — Dial 76:466 My '24 120w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet
Lit R p705 Ap 26 '24 240w

"It is not possible for anyone to fail to admire Mr. Machen as a stylist, but only minds with his own peculiar twist will receive from him intense pleasure."
Nation 118:591 My 21 '24 80w

"In his description of old scenes and games, of personal adventures, of the flotsam and jetsam incidental to the daily life of his neighbour, he is delightful and Dickensian. When he dogmatizes he tends to become 'lowbrow,' which is equally as unpleasant as being 'highbrow.' The publisher is to be congratulated on the perfect production of this book." R: Church
+ — Nation and Ath 35:56 Ap 12 '24 280w

"All these papers are shot with shafts of wit, stuffed with matured advice; and if Machen, as a philosopher, might fail in a rigid test, even the most quarrelsome of metaphysicians will be forced to bow before his sagacity."
+ N Y Times p15 F 10 '24 1950w

"Little essays in this whimsical volume are slight, but very pleasant. They are perhaps journalism rather than literature, not because they are not very well written, but because their aim is to amuse for five minutes, like a column in a newspaper."
+ — Sat R 137:391 Ap 12 '24 480w

"These essays, with the charming account of the (we suspect) apocryphal game of Dog and Duck which constitutes the first, are nearly all in the wistful note which is characteristic of this author."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p143 Mr 6 '24 450w

Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

MACHEN, ARTHUR. London adventure; an 2 essay in wandering. 170p $2 Knopf
824 London 24-21794

"'The London Adventure' is ostensibly a guide to queer physical and spiritual nooks in the dear Cockney city of the Thames. Actually, the book is a guide to nooks and crannies in Machen, illustrated by copious references to his published works. He mentions individual writings no less than sixteen times, pads a whole chapter with extracts from his early notebooks, gives autobiographical scraps of information, and in general produces an essay in wandering in Arthur Machen."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 21:103 D '24

"He sometimes has affectations in manner, and even in substance; but he is at heart one of our simplest authors, and an essayist whose temperament is a delight to those who enjoy whim, fancy and imagination in writing."

+ — New Statesman 24:sup12 O 11 '24 400w

"'The London Adventure' is certainly not great, and, though none of Mr. Machen's prose is mediocre, this is distinctly unworthy of his talents. . . This book shows indelible traces of weariness, impatience, nay, even unwillingness, to write. It might almost have been written under compulsion, so obviously thin it is." J: Carter

— N Y Times p12 O 12 '24 1300w

"These random thoughts and reminiscences add nothing in particular to Mr. Machen's achievement. The book may mildly entertain an idle hour, but, even as what its subtitle calls it, 'An Essay in Wandering,' it runs quite thin and is a mere footnote to 'Far Off Things.'"

— Sat R of Lit 1:329 N 29 '24 100w

MCILWAIN, CHARLES HOWARD. American revolution; a constitutional interpretation. 198p $2.25 Macmillan

973.3 United States—History—Revolution
23-15239

The writer, who is professor of history and government in Harvard university, interprets the constitutional issues involved in the American revolution and examines the legality of the claims of the colonists to freedom from parliamentary control. The conflicting constitutional views of the Americans and of the English parliament are compared and judged on their respective merits and the American rather than the English view of the authority of Parliament is upheld.

"An immensely interesting volume. . . As always, Professor McIlwain writes from an inexhaustible fund of knowledge and with insight which constantly sheds light on the most interesting topics. No one has a finer flair for significant problems in his field, or greater art in conveying his own enthusiasm undiminished to his readers." E: S. Corwin

+ Am Hist R 29:775 Jl '24 1250w

"At last some one has done what ought to have been done long ago, and he has done it with learning and skill." A. C. McLaughlin

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:180 F '24 1100w

Booklist 20:260 Ap '24

"Professor McIlwain has performed a service for which all students of politics will be grateful. In giving us a view of the American Revolution solely from the angle of constitutional law, he has attempted something which has long been overdue." W. P. M. Kennedy

+ Canadian Hist R 5:168 Je '24 1000w

Eng Hist R 39:469 Jl '24 300w

"No competent historical critic will question the wisdom of the judges in awarding the Pulitzer prize in American history for 1924 to this study of the constitutional aspects of the American revolution. Professor McIlwain's book is more modest in bulk than the average doctoral dissertation, but in content it fulfills every desideratum of historical workmanship: originality of conception, clear definition of thesis, cogency of argument, cautiousness in deduction, justness of documentation, and a grasp of the sources underlying the discussion which inspires great confidence in the author's conclusions." D: S. Muzzey

+ New Repub 39:134 Je 25 '24 1500w

"Mr. McIlwain has not succeeded in keeping his book wholly free from error in statement, and from some of his opinions the present reviewer at least is compelled to dissent. But no reader who appreciates the difference in historical research and composition between simple good intentions and capacity of a very high order will fail to be impressed by this brilliant essay in Anglo-American constitutional history." R. L. Schuyler

+ — Pol Sci Q 39:151 Mr '24 2900w

Springf'd Republican p6 Je 2 '24 260w

MCINTYRE, OSCAR ODD. White light nights. 274p $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

917.471 New York (city)—Description
24-12442

Journalistic sketches of New York night life especially that which centers about Broadway. Partial contents: Union square; The Bowery; A visit to Longacre square; The Avenue; Greenwich village; Tin pan alley; Olla-Podrida; The jazz king; Manhattan minutes; George M.; Along the dazzling gulch; Take me back to old Broadway; Folks back home.

Cleveland p96 D '24

"McIntyre has caught the spirit of Gotham's main thoroughfare, the spirit that makes it as different from Main Street in some ways as it is similar to it in others. 'White Light Nights' is the pæan of an ordinary man to America's most extraordinary city—a pæan that is no doubt most appreciated by non-New Yorkers." Madelin Leof

+ Lit R p878 Jl 5 '24 300w

"Mr. McIntyre has the happy knack of turning every hour of Gotham's throbbing life into ready 'copy.' Nothing seems too casual to escape his notice, few things too banal. Much of it is every-day newspaper stuff. All of it is readable reporting. Broadway as well as Main Street will find plenty of interest in this handbook of Gotham gossip."

+ — N Y Times p18 Je 8 '24 850w

"The best of his sketches are so good as to make us regret his frequently cavalier use of English and his occasional decline into journalistic slapstick." H. W. Boynton

+ — Outlook 137:442 Jl 16 '24 180w

St Louis p353 O '24

"Mr McIntyre at least helps to conjure up the atmosphere that the visitor expects to find. But besides this genial service, he touches some of the city's real spots."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 600w

MACKAIL, DENIS GEORGE. Majestic mystery. 309p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Heinemann]
24-21917

Two young journalists are spending a weekend holiday in an English seaside hotel. Staying in the same hotel are the author, producer and star of a new play which is to be tried out at Newcliff-on-Sea prior to its West End production. On the night before this first performance, the producer is found murdered in his room in the hotel and the two journalists are drawn into the mystery. Mr. Mackail's light-hearted manner keeps the tale from anything like gruesomeness.

"It is a very good yarn indeed, without very much blood or messiness, and with a deal of humor and considerable love. But we do wish we knew what an aneurism and a pier-complex are." I. W. L.

— + Boston Transcript p5 O 18 '24 620w

"The author turns from his well-known field of light romance to that of mystery with a skill which betokens a practiced hand and varied ability. His new book contains the same easy flowing and readable style, the same graceful characterizations, and the same quiet charm and gentle humor." M. P.

+ Lit R p10 O 11 '24 110w

"In spite of minor flaws, that portion of the public which loves a good mystery and appreciates clever satire will find entertainment in Mr. Mackail's book."

+ — N Y Tribune p9 Ja 18 '25 450w

N Y World p8e O 5 '24 130w

MACKAIL, DENIS GEORGE—Continued

"Altogether it is one of the most spirited of recent detective stories. When the journalist-detective learns the true story of the murder he does not credit it, and he hears it from the culprit at that."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 2 '24 370w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p554 S 11 '24 470w

MACKAIL, DENIS GEORGE. Summertime. 344p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Heinemann] 24-26318

Another of Mr Mackail's light-hearted stories, having for its hero the same David Lawrence whose earlier adventures were told in "Romance to the rescue." (Book Review Digest, 1922) He is an engaging young man who is much beset thruout the story by his uncertainty about the choice of a profession. But he has no such doubt about the choice of Anne Drummond, a sunny young person doomed to live in the muffled gloom of a home shadowed by the loss of its center, her brother Robin, in the war. The merest accident of his failure to meet her at the appointed place keeps Anne and David from a runaway marriage. Toby, an earlier love, turns up instead, and Anne promptly decides it is he she loves, and not David. For the moment David's wound is deep, but the reader has strong hopes of its healing.

Booklist 20:301 My '24

"Denis Mackail is in love with life. And thereby hangs a very delightful tale entitled 'Summertime.' . . . In fact, a kind of delicious midsummer madness pervades the whole tale. 'Summertime' is a welcome antidote for the overdose of sordid realism of which the literary world is now a victim."

+ Int Bk R p614 Jl '24 400w

"Mr. Mackail is visibly growing up: gaining stature and bulk as a novelist, but, happily, without loss of the lightness and grace of manner that made his rather airy early ventures attractive. He has entertained us several times before; this time he is more ambitious and adds something of moralizing intent to the amusement offered."

+ Lit R p546 F 23 '24 350w

"Mr. Mackail's book is light entertainment, of course, and it is obvious that he means it as no more than that. But it is not easy to write even light entertainment that will accord so finely with one's desires to be thoroughly amused."

+ N Y Times p9 F 10 '24 750w

"Mr. Mackail writes with humor, but a mirthful mood never impels him to sprint, skip, prance, or otherwise accelerate his literary pace: he strolls."

+ Outlook 136:360 F 27 '24 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:345 Jl '24

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 136:336 S 22 '23 120w

"Mr. Mackail handles his theme excellently once his story gets into its stride; and his dialogue, when not bent upon being funny, often has the very flavour and echo of real speech. His style, too, apart from inexplicable lapses in the earlier chapters, is workmanlike and even distinguished."

+ — Spec 131:564 O 20 '23 220w

"Light, gay, vivacious and quite 'human' enough for its purpose."

+ Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 320w

Wis Lib Bul 20:69 Mr '24

MACKAYE, JAMES. Logic of conduct. 486p $3 Boni & Liveright

170 Ethics 24-4541

"The purpose of the book is to illustrate a method of applying science to morals whereby a logic of conduct may be established as secure as that upon which rests the recognized logic of belief." The form of exposition is discussion by dialogs carried on between two friends, Senior and Junior, and divided into brief daily sessions, the main conclusions reached being summarized at the close of each session.

Dial 77:526 D '24 60w

"In his preface Mr. MacKaye states that we are in need of a group of volumes on the science of 'utilitechnics.' He modestly intimates that should the demand justify the preparation of such volumes he would be glad to undertake them. If the present ancient, threadbare presentation is an earnest of what they will be like, heaven forbid that in this day of the high cost of paper and printing he can ever again find so lenient a publisher for his manuscripts." J: B. Watson

— Nation 119:128 Jl 30 '24 200w

"Whether or not one agrees with his deductions, they are nevertheless stimulating, and the volume on the whole is readable." J. A.

+ — N Y Tribune p28 Jl 13 '24 120w

"'The Logic of Conduct' will not tempt or beguile the reader who runs. Among non-fiction, James Harvey Robinson's synthesis of liberal thought and feeling, 'The Mind in the Making,' was a best seller, but no such fate awaits so stringently written a book as this. It is the kind of book that only a non-commercial publisher will print and only a student faithfully read." Harry Salpeter

— N Y World p7e My 25 '24 800w

Outlook 138:216 O 8 '24 240w

St Louis p400 D '24

MACKAYE, PERCY. Skippers of Nancy Gloucester. 56p il $2 Brick row bk. shop

811 24-6144

"Mr. MacKaye's 'The Skippers of Nancy Gloucester,' is an occasional poem written for a particular event, the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. It is an entity divided into three parts, each one illustrative of the career of a Gloucester skipper. After a brief opening the first part is a ballad concerning John White, who commanded the first voyage to the Massachusetts Bay fisheries; the second section deals with Andrew Haraden, who fought and conquered the pirate, John Philips, in 1723, and the concluding portion introduces Solomon Davis, who sailed to Surinam in 1823."—N Y Times

---

"The poem is not in Mr. MacKaye's usual style, and for that reason, if for no other, will arouse discussion and add to its author's renown."

+ — Lit R p748 My 10 '24 300w

"No doubt Mr. MacKaye's quick sense of individuality and oddity is a little apt to betray him. The line which divides the comic from the grotesque is extremely difficult to mark, and there are moments when it seems as if touches intensely realistic and significant in themselves develop the fantastic slightly at the expense of the human. But this minor defect is less sensible in the case of the 'Nancy Gloucester' than elsewhere, because the vague touch of the grotesque seems to tone in naturally with the bluff, hardy, salt mystery of these Gloucester fishermen." Gamaliel Bradford

+ — Lit R p771 My 24 '24 450w

"As historical vignettes of Gloucester it possesses authentic value, but as poetry so much may not be said."

+ — N Y Times p10 My 18 '24 330w

N Y Tribune p22 My 25 '24 50w

St Louis p381 N '24

MACKAYE, PERCY. This fine-pretty world; a comedy of the Kentucky mountains. 197p $1.50 Macmillan

812 24-368

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Booklist 20:258 Ap '24

"Mr. MacKaye has made a patchwork quilt of mountain idioms. They seem homesick for their mountain air."
— Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 360w
Cleveland p52 Jl '24

"The effect on spectator and reader alike is one of vitality, at times of abandonment, of a buoyancy and beauty that should, if this were possible, be appropriated by the dully American speaking population of cities."
+ Dial 76:288 Mr '24 160w

"To a skilled ear the beauty of MacKaye's dialog is implicit in mountaineer speech, a speech which he studied lovingly and transcribed carefully in notes; but the speech of the play would have been impossible if the author had not been deeply versed in the pure springs of English literature, in Celtic romance, in Malory, in Beowulf, and in Chaucer." T: H. Dickinson
+ Int Bk R p310 Mr '24 1250w

"Before he wrote a line he had made himself as much as possible a native of these mountains, and he writes as from within the confidence of their people, in a language of quite extraordinary richness and variety." Carl Van Doren
+ Nation 118:68 Ja 16 '24 700w

"We must read, or witness, 'This Fine-Pretty World' not merely as a play but also as a contribution to philology. Assuming the correctness of Mr. Mackaye's observations, he has done for Kentucky what Synge did for the Aran Islands and Caradoc Evans for Wales. In the spoken language recorded here there is a vigor and wealth that justify Mr. Mackaye in describing the illiteracy of these mountaineers as noble."
+ N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 650w

"A bewildering beauty and old-time quality lurks in speech after speech. . . The rhythms for the numerous characters are too similar in volume and music, there is a confusion of tone, idea and event. The play fails to come off with life and clarity of outline and remains an admirable effort rather than a creation."
+ — Theatre Arts Mo 8:282 Ap '24 160w
Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

MCKENNA, STEPHEN. Commandment of Moses. 322p $2 Little [7s 6d Hutchinson]
[23-17164]

The commandment of the title is the seventh and the question raised hinges on the right of a woman to marry a man without making confession to him of her past life. Joan Prendergast, at nineteen and out of a great love, had given herself to an army officer before he had obtained the divorce from his wife which he expected soon to secure. But he was killed at Vimy Ridge before there was an opportunity to legalize their relations. When another lover appeared, worthy of Joan in every way, her struggle began with a love she feared herself unworthy to accept. In the end her problem seems in the way of being satisfactorily solved.

"Never in anything which Mr. McKenna has written has he delved more deeply into the springs of human nature or brought out more precious truth. In the little group of characters we have a wonderfully comprehensive miniature world." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 4 '24 1400w

"On the whole, the 'carpentering' of the tale is a bit too evident for 'The Commandment of Moses' to rank with its author's best work."
— Int Bk R p904 N '24 300w

"Mr. McKenna's contribution to the already voluminous literature, in fiction, on the problem adds nothing new, but it is always interesting, and it does serve to show once more that the whole scheme of marriage and sex relations has been, and now is, undergoing enormously significant changes from the ancient, traditional attitude. As a work of art the book is not up to his best, being a little overburdened by its thesis, but it is still a fine piece of work." Harvey Parrish
+ — Lit R p835 Je 21 '24 550w

"On the whole Mr. McKenna writes well, but there is a peculiarly pedestrian quality in his writing. . . Somehow one never feels that he is interested in the human creatures for whose actions and motives he has assumed the responsibility. They are too often tired and listless beings, galvanized into life by a vast deal of conscious presentation."
— + N Y Times p8 Je 1 '24 900w

Reviewed by Bruce Gould
N Y Tribune p25 Ag 3 '24 750w

"The story is hardly more than a string of forced incidents and the characters are without depth. Some of them have, however, a certain amount of charm—not only Joan, whose sweetness at times is very winning, but the military men and some of the rest, who seem to be tender and gracious for all their well-deserved reputations as men of the world."
— + Springf'd Republican p7a Je 8 '24 550w

MCKENNA, STEPHEN. To-morrow and to-morrow. . . 349p $2 Little [7s 6d T. Butterworth]
24-23086

"In To-morrow and To-morrow Mr. Stephen McKenna brings to a close the 'Sonia' series with an amount of solemnity which would do credit to a serious historian. The period covered runs from the Armistice to the march of the hunger strikers; and in that time George Oakleigh, the amiable but ineffective Liberal narrator, is able to take part in a prodigious amount of discussion about the Peace Treaty, the economic discontent, and the future of society. By way of relief from the preponderatingly sociological trend of this very conscientious document we are indulged with the passionate reactions of George Oakleigh's wife, who, it will be remembered, was 'Babs' Neave, the celebrated society beauty and a troubler of hearts. This time her own heart is as much troubled as dear George's, and Eric Lane is the reason; but we infer that, after the night when O'Rane was killed by rioters, this trouble was laid to rest."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p4 O 8 '24 1100w
Cleveland p85 N '24

"By all the rules, a reader should fall into a heavy slumber after reading fifty pages, yet he does nothing of the kind. He reads on bright-eyed and eager, gripped, as it were, enjoying the book as he goes, and waiting always for the episode which he feels sure is going to explode in or near the last chapter." D. R.
+ Ind 113:459 N 29 '24 400w

"The plot is comparatively unimportant and takes up some of the characters whom we have met before in Mr. McKenna's work. There is just enough love-interest to form a thread to hold the story, but the volume is not dependent upon this for interest. Properly speaking, it is a study rather than a novel, an essay in fiction form, and is a serious and worth-while piece of work." A. L. Hill
+ Lit R p4 O 11 '24 650w

"If Mr. McKenna here fails somewhat as an artist, he succeeds admirably as a historian, and as such is likely to be consulted by the posterity upon which he obviously has his eye. Whether, in his spirited castigation of our age, he is justified of his pessimism, only the future can show." Gilbert Thomas
+ — Nation and Ath 35:150 My 3 '24 380w

"It seems to me very like others in the series I have read, a curious mixture of radical idealism and the tone of the Tatler and Bystander. Perhaps it is good that people in all camps should be on the side of the Angels. Judged as journalists there are better novelists than Mr. McKenna." Ralph Wright
— New Statesman 23:196 My 24 '24 70w

MCKENNA, STEPHEN—Continued

"It is wearying to read so much endless discussion, especially where it does not belong. The novel is many things, but it will never successfully become a social tract."

— N Y Times p9 O 12 '24 440w

N Y World p9e N 9 '24 140w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 137:568 My 31 '24 360w

"A cynic may mock at Mr. McKenna's dismay with the retort that only an ass ever expected a warless world, but there is no doubt that Mr. McKenna has drawn a remarkably true and vivid picture of that portion of his world which he sees." Stanley Went
Sat R of Lit 1:224 O 25 '24 850w

Spec 132:926 Je 7 '24 50w

"We doubt whether these thinly sketched-in figures who talk, dance, make love, and intrigue against an effectively drawn background of London drawing-rooms, night clubs, and smoking-rooms will seem of much account in the clear view of future generations. There is no really solid figure to give a sense of life to this feverish shadow play."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p266 My 1 '24 280w

MCKENNA, STEPHEN. Vindication. 393p $2 Little [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-865

Gloria Britton, daughter of a Spanish opera-singer and an impecunious English roué, in her rôle of a well-born but needy adventuress, seeks an alliance in marriage that will insure her both wealth and social position. She falls in love with Norman Cartwright, descendant of an old family and heir to Newbridge, but jilts him to marry Freddie Kendaile, son of a wealthy banker and a veritable Don Juan, whose home, Nelby, adjoins Newbridge. Cartwright marries soon afterward, and the subsequent history of the two families makes the story—of love and passion, jealousy and revenge.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic's Bookshelf Mr '24 500w

"Another mordantly conceived and cleverly executed study of decadent English society. Coolly written, it is more scarifying from its lack of moral earnestness. With McKenna's attitude of a surgeon goes the instinct of the novelist. The result is a story that, despite faulty motivation and the somewhat incredible seductiveness of an English Don Juan, generally commands close interest." Sidney Williams

+ — Bookm 59:77 Mr '24 450w

"The blade of his rapier is so keen that we scarcely realize he is cutting until we see the devastation he has wrought. Once again he has proved his terrifying knowledge of the psychology of his countrywomen, and he has reveled in showing just how badly things need mending in his country. His acid is a bitter corrective, but we could scarcely accept the idea that it does not leave a healthier condition behind it." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 5 '24 1200w

"Mr McKenna's method is the opposite of artificial; he seems to be both industrious and languid; his style is like a respectable, badly fitting coat. Vaguely and wearily one gathers the sense, through paragraphs as unsatisfactory as the windows of coloured glass once admired in German and American houses."

— Dial 76:370 Ap '24 220w

"Mr. McKenna's satirical handling of his theme is noteworthy. He knows his characters well and has drawn them to the life."

+ Int Bk R p612 Jl '24 350w

"Mr. McKenna is maturing. This last novel is less of a strain than his earlier ones on the credulousness of the reader. It is a more subtle and difficult piece of writing. While Mr. McKenna has tinges of Glynnishness, while at times he rivals Leonard Merrick in stripping off the shreds of Victorian sentiment from every relation in life nevertheless he has a consciousness of the deepest forces at work in human souls, and a knack of recording their effects on outward conduct and speech that entitles him to be mentioned only a few breaths after Galesworthy, and even his great model, George Eliot." S. C. Halbrook

+ Lit R p455 Ja 19 '24 800w

"I cannot feel that in this instance the artist has done what he set out to do. It is clear that Mr. McKenna has an honest desire to tell a real story, which is the first business of a novelist, and to interpret human nature through that story." H. W. Boynton

— Lit R p591 Mr 15 '24 480w

"He gropes, both in his thinking and in his style. The book improves as it progresses, and it will be found provocative. And if not to be taken too seriously it is not to be dismissed too lightly."

+ — N Y Times p9 D 30 '23 1100w

" 'Vindication' is a neater piece of work than its predecessors, being more concentrated and direct. The interest is focused on four people, instead of being scattered over a whole social set. . . It is a feverish novel, but not erotic in any right sense of the word. There is no emotion in it, nothing but froth and sparkle; it is not witty, but in a way, yes, it is brilliant."

+ — N Y Tribune p21 Ja 13 '24 800w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend
Outlook 136:192 Ja 30 '24 450w

"The book is entirely worthless and should command a large public. It is the product of an author who once had a serious reputation to make if not to lose. Is it too late?" Gerald Gould

— Sat R 136:447 O 20 '23 220w

" 'Vindication' is one of the books which have caught and fixed an accurate but partial picture of English society at the decisive moment of one of England's most ironical transformations."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 3 '24 450w

"Mr. McKenna is at least never melodramatic; but the social life is too monotonously 'county' and its comings and goings much too intricate and prolix for the story."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p672 O 11 '23 320w

MACKENZIE, AGNES MURE. Women in
2 Shakespeare's plays. 474p $4 Doubleday

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Characters—Women

In a long, closely-printed book Miss MacKenzie studies critically Shakespeare's treatment of the women characters in his plays and the growth and change of his attitude toward them. She holds that Shakespeare's outlook on life was greatly influenced by women and that his plays, studied in the order in which they were written, mark the changes in his attitude. At the beginning he had no special interest in them except as they supplied the motives for the actions of his men characters. Then, gradually, they became vital figures, important in themselves. Miss MacKenzie analyzes each play in order as a revelation of Shakespeare's developing idea of women.

New Statesman 24:118 N 1 '24 520w

Reviewed by R: Le Gallienne
N Y Times p7 D 28 '24 2300w

"Unfortunately, so princely a scale was not necessitated by the wealth of Miss Mackenzie's ideas. The digressions, though sensible, are irrelevant; while two thirds of the rest of the book is occupied by a running commentary on the text which is unconvincing when it is not superfluous. These floods of verbiage conceal rather than convey the author's ideas, and as they sweep over the reader's head on their clamorous and apparently aimless course, he begins to doubt whether the book is the expression of any coherent theory at all. . . But in spite of this flaw, her theory and her defects of form, Miss Mackenzie has many of the critic's virtues. Her taste is acute and catholic, her knowledge of literature extensive, and she has the historic sense." D: Cecil

— + Spec 133:sup558 O 18 '24 750w

"It is the book of a woman who rates the powers and duties of her sex very high, yet is without contempt for the human male; the book of a well-read, thoughtful, humorous, and on occasion very plain-spoken woman. Her work cannot always command assent; but it is always bracing and sensible."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p523 Ag 28 '24 1300w

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. Heavenly ladder. 356p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Cassell] 24-28672

This novel, the third of a trilogy, completes the spiritual pilgrimage of Mark Lidderdale, the young Anglican priest, begun in "The altar steps" and continued in "The parson's progress." When he introduces his extreme ritualism into the little Cornish parish of Nancepean he is persecuted by his flock, put under discipline by his bishop and finally expelled from the parish and vicarage. Then, after a brief experience as a private in the war, he goes to Italy, where he is converted to the Church of Rome and, like a child, begins life all over again.

Booklist 21:112 D '24
Boston Transcript p4 O 22 '24 100w

"The beauty of the scenery about Nancepean, a beauty which seems never to have touched the dull and frequently foul minds of the inhabitants, is delineated with all the delicacy and sympathy one has learned to expect of Mr. Mackenzie's pen-pictures; his style is too well known for any dwelling upon it to be necessary. So far as the book's power of winning and holding the reader's attention is concerned, that factor is too closely connected with the appeal or lack of appeal its subject may have for the individual reader for any general estimate of it to be possible." L. M. Field
+ — Int Bk R p874 N '24 500w

"The trilogy is a monumental achievement of sound literary artistry." H. L. Pangborn
+ Lit R p4 N 8 '24 660w

"Few, who are not interested in particular religious controversy and the tendencies of Anglo-Catholicism, can have followed through two preceding volumes, with any increasing excitement, the perplexed soul of the Reverend Mark Lidderdale. Since salvation is presumably best achieved in fear and trembling, the process, when described externally, cannot in fiction appear other than unheroic." Austin Clarke
— + Nation and Ath 35:297 My 31 '24 250w

"It is a competent, if not very thrilling piece of work, with what reads like a quite genuine account of the Anglican Church and the ways of Cornishmen. I wish Mr. Mackenzie would return to the vulgarities of life where he can be so amusing." Ralph Wright
— + New Statesman 23:258 Je 7 '24 380w

"Though over-detailed, the novel is well written, with many gracefully done passages describing the scenery about Nancepean."
N Y Times p16 O 19 '24 530w

"'The Heavenly Ladder' is made of stuff stern enough to persuade the most convinced admirer of gloom that it is an excellent novel. And it is an excellent book, whether or not it is a novel." Frances Newman
N Y Tribune p11 O 26 '24 640w
Outlook 138:299 O 22 '24 30w

"Mark Lidderdale's adventures are much more interesting in 'The Heavenly Ladder' than they were in its predecessors: plot and incident, till near the end, are indeed almost painfully exciting: but when the war is called upon to provide a deciding spiritual experience, we feel that the terrible god has been brought out of the machine in order to lay the puppet back in its box. As for the final reception into the Roman Catholic Church, it assuredly might have been Mark's lot as it has been the lot of many; but again the mechanism is that of the deus ex machina; there is no æsthetic necessity. The good part of the book, comprising the earlier two-thirds of it, treats of Mark's attempts to convert his Cornish flock to his own views and practices." Gerald Gould
+ — Sat R 137:540 My 24 '24 800w

Reviewed by G: Meadows
Sat R of Lit 1:244 N 1 '24 850w
Spec 133:201 Ag 9 '24 370w

"This volume is likely to appeal even more exclusively than its predecessors to that section of the public to whom the life of the English Church is a grave and intimate concern. They will note once more the scrupulous accuracy with which Mr. Mackenzie always finishes his ecclesiastical detail; but they will probably feel, too, that he has this time struck a deeper, if harsher, vein of feeling than he did in the earlier parts of the tale. He is nearer to stark fact."
The Times [London] Lit Sup p302 My 15 '24 370w

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. Old men of the sea; a romance of adventure in the South Pacific. 308p $2 Stokes 24-23173

In answer to an enticing advertisement, a motley group of men and women having romantic inclinations embark on "The Octoroon" bound for an unknown island in the South seas. In this group is Mr Marsham, the narrator of this tale of adventure. The villainy of the two seamen who conduct this mysterious expedition is soon apparent to Marsham. Before the unknown island is reached all manner of catastrophes occur, but with the tragic death of the pilot the ultimate aim of the trip is revealed and eventually the romantic longings of the crew are gratified.

Booklist 21:153 Ja '25

"This is a delightful tale. It is hilarious!" K. S.
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 25 '24 550w

Reviewed by H. L. Pangborn
Lit R p4 N 8 '24 110w
New Statesman 24:supviii D 6 '24 240w

"A lurid tale of South Sea adventure is precisely what the novelist has offered us; and he has justified himself neither by distinctiveness of presentation, fidelity to life, nor seductive romance. 'The Old Men of the Sea' is an entertaining book, and little more."
— + N Y Times p14 O 19 '24 500w

"'The Old Men of the Sea' isn't made of very stern stuff, but it is very possibly the most charming and the most involved story of the South Seas." Frances Newman
+ — N Y Tribune p11 O 26 '24 200w

"His characters are caricatured as Charles Dickens never would have dared, and they bounce and grimace and mouth their quaintly mannered platitudes like well-trained puppets. The assurance on the jacket that the story is true in so far that the author has drawn on actual happenings explains, possibly a certain wandering of amplification."
— N Y World N 9 '24 240w

"Compton MacKenzie has strayed from his usual environment to write a most amusing yarn."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 550w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p732 N 13 '24 350w

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. Parson's progress. 330p $2.50 Doran 24-4511

The second of a trilogy of which "The altar steps" was the prelude. It continues the religious experiences of the young Anglican priest, Mark Lidderdale, from his ordination thru several curacies and brings him back at the close of the book to the little vicarage on the Cornish coast, where as a boy he had lived with his grandfather. Like the first story, "The parsons' progress" is written from the point of view of the Anglo-Catholic party in the English church and it is filled with the observances

MACKENZIE, COMPTON—Continued
of an extreme ritualism. But religion means much more to Mark Lidderdale than ceremonial and sacrament and he is filled with a sincere desire for service. While he is trying to cure the souls of others his own soul is in travail, and it is thru his own experience that he comes to a fuller understanding and sympathy.

Booklist 20:265 Ap '24

Reviewed by S. L. Cook
Boston Transcript p4 Mr 1 '24 1300w

"The problem has dramatic, psychological and symbolical possibilities, but these are allowed to dissolve into a vapour of restlessness further clouding already opaque discussions of form and ceremony. The passage of time is not vitalized by character development, nor the progression of the theme unified by a crisis. The book represents the untimely desiccation of a writer once happily animated.'
— Dial 76:559 Je '24 90w

Reviewed by L. M. Field
Int Bk R p874 N '24 500w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Lit R p627 Ap 29 '24 350w

Nation 119:221 Ag 27 '24 50w

New Repub 39:192 Jl 9 '24 280w

"A beautiful and serene book that has been written with sympathy and wide knowledge."
+ N Y Times p8 F 24 '24 1100w

"This has occcasional humorous moments; it presents a 'soul-struggle' for those who care for that kind of thing. But it is painfully serious and often dull."
— + Outlook 136:399 Mr 5 '24 320w

"It is difficult to believe that anyone who is not interested in the more superficial aspect of forms and ceremonies within the various parties which divide the Church of England can fail to find Mr. Compton Mackenzie's new novel desolatingly dull. . . The characters are flat and only half real, and the fog of religious professionalism obscures the undeniable virtues of the book."
— + Spec 132:166 F 2 '24 150w

MACKENZIE, JEAN KENYON. African clearings. 270p $2.50 Houghton

916.7 Kamerun, Africa. Bantus 24-9797

Miss MacKenzie has lived for fourteen years as a missionary among the Bantu tribes of the Kamerun in West Africa. She writes of the people among whom she has ministered, of their childlike ways, their hospitality, her talks with them about the things of God, her moments of coming very close to them, her hardships and her luxuries. The whole is a sensitive interpretation of the souls of her "black sheep" and their forest background.

Booklist 21:21 O '24

Bookm 60:96 S '24 180w

"She shows the African as he really is, the book being full of the quaint phraseology and philosophy of these children of the twilight forest world."
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 24 '24 200w

Cleveland p88 N '24

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey
Ind 112:317 Je 7 '24 190w

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p529 Je '24 60w

"One senses quickly the vivid realism of the work, a realism that is all the more impressive because it is portrayed in phraseology that is born of a poetic imagination. . . The book is full of little scenes of personalities and happenings, each one brief but colorful and alive."
+ N Y Times p5 My 11 '24 2050w

Outlook 137:480 Jl 23 '24 200w

St Louis p416 D '24

"It has great beauty and sunlight and color; it has a strange magic of rhythm and cadence; it leaves you with the conviction that more is meant than meets the eye. With all its beauty and its charm there is something just a little exasperating about Miss Mackenzie's writing."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 1 '24 230w

Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

MCKINSEY, JAMES OSCAR. Managerial accounting. (Materials for the study of business) v 1 671p $4 Univ. of Chicago press ^{2}

658 Accounting. Business (24-22550)

"Devoted to the proper managerial use of standards and records including statistical as well as accounting data. It is based on the assumption that all business administrators should have a basic knowledge of accounting to aid them in their work. Present volume contains first part of material based on course of study presented at University of Chicago. Main subjects discussed are: Need and nature of, and organization for controlling standards and records, administrative reports; sales, purchasing, traffic, and production control."—Management and Adm

"Within the pages of this single volume is encompassed the major portion of a college course in business. The second and final volume, which is soon to appear, will be eagerly awaited." L. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 25 '24 780w

"The book is written primarily for students so is free from highly technical accounting or statistical discussions. Each subject is treated fully enough to make the book of real value to all business administratives who wish to learn how their standards and records can be used to greater advantage."
+ Management and Adm 8:539 N '24 180w

St Louis p406 D '24

MCKREADY, KELVIN, pseud. See Murphy, E. G.

MACLAGEN, BRIDGET, pseud. See Borden-Turner, M.

MACLAREN, ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL. Cricket old and new; with a preface by F. S. Jackson. 211p il $2 (6s) Longmans

797 Cricket 24-13807

Mr Maclaren, an international authority on this subject, herewith presents a thorough discussion of how the game should and should not be played. There are numerous illustrations of well-known cricket players in action. Contents: Old methods and new; Batting, as it is and as it should be; Bowling tactics; Fielding; Captaincy; Umpiring; Coaching; Conclusion.

"Mr. Maclaren, though a giant as a cricketer, is not such a good or such an interesting writer as Mr. Cardus. Still, the book is good reading, and the knowledge of the game it contains is, of course, immense."
+ — New Statesman 23:418 Jl 12 '24 120w

"As a writer, Mr. Maclaren has no airs and graces; he discusses the points of cricket in a plain, sensible style; and he possesses, as none would deny, an exquisite knowledge of the game. He has also ample experience as a coach, so that much is to be learnt from him. His analysis of batting is one of the clearest that we have seen."
+ Sat R 137:641 Je 21 '24 290w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p339 My 29 '24 600w

MCLAUGHLIN, ALLAN JOSEPH. Communicable diseases; how they spread and how they may be controlled. (Harper's public health ser.) 269p $3 Harper

614.4 Infectious diseases 23-15723

"Dr. McLaughlin, no mere collector of the commonplaces of public health method and practice, but himself a contributor to the standards of procedure, a practitioner in the life of cholera, plague and typhoid control abroad and at home, a courageous and ready officer of health who has made his mark in local, state and federal positions, gives us the brief and simple facts about the communicable diseases which have been established by students all around the world during the past fifty years, so that we may act with intelligence and good conscience in our personal and public relationships."—Survey

"Dr. McLaughlin's book will accomplish much in the public health movement."

+ Am J of Public Health 14:66 Ja '24 600w

Booklist 20:288 My '24

Eng N 92:734 Ap 24 '24 240w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:312 Je '24

"The school teacher, the nurse, the physician will especially welcome the brevity and completeness of Dr. McLaughlin's presentation of the stories which they are called upon to teach over and over again. Sufficient reference is made to the original contributions of science to lead the critical reader to further study. The quotations are apt and illuminating." Haven Emerson, M.D.

+ Survey 51:534 F 15 '24 680w

Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. Happy marriage, and other poems. 80p $1.25 Houghton

811 24-4884

The title-poem is a sonnet sequence on love with lyric variations here and there.

"It is one of the most impressive poems of marital love I have ever read. It contains lines of amazing beauty and irresistible combination of ecstasy, disillusionment, revolt, and tenderness. The other poems in the volume, drier, more incisive, may well be discounted." J. F.

+ — Bookm 59:340 My '24 150w

"Mr. MacLeish has published a second book which more than fulfills with its sure, clear utterance the stammered promise of his book of undergraduate verse published several years ago. Here we have poems which give one immediate access to a richer and more varied world." J. L. McL.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 26 '24 500w

"These poems are shot through with flashes of imagination that make them notable even though the verse is uneven and occasionally descends to the level of mere prose."

+ — Dial 77:437 N '24 80w

"This slight, almost insignificant volume came into the hands of a weary reviewer as the last dwindling syllable of a sesquipedalian shelf. And of a sudden he felt here at the last is something real, something vital, an adventure bravely undertaken." D. R.

+ Ind 112:233 Ap 26 '24 900w

Reviewed by A. R. Bellinger

Lit R p939 Ag 2 '24 200w

N Y Times p26 My 4 '24 360w

"Mr. MacLeish's 'The Happy Marriage' is an interesting and noteworthy experiment. It is a book of happy and triumphant love, marked by a high atmosphere of beauty and uncommon mood. It has truth, vitality and an undercurrent of philosophy. The sonnets and shorter poems have authentic passion and the intellectual content of the entire volume makes it a pleasure to peruse." B. S. Wagstaff

+ N Y Tribune p26 Ap 27 '24 300w

"It is marked by phrases of unusual beauty and discloses genuine poetic power." Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 136:649 Ap 16 '24 50w

MCMILLAN, MARGARET. Education through the imagination. 208p il $2 Appleton [6s Allen & U.]

372 Imagination. Education of children [E24-13]

The writer is an English educator whose name is chiefly associated with the nursery schools which, since 1918, have been a legal part of the educational system in England. In this book she pleads the importance of the part played by the imagination in elementary education. She shows the various ways in which the imagination manifests itself in childhood and how this creative power of the mind should be cultivated and made use of in education.

"There is a certain vigor and sanity about this book, attributable no doubt to its writer's long practical experience that will make an appeal to the working teacher as distinguished from the mere theorist."

+ Lit R p873 Jl 5 '24 200w

"It is the more interesting because the author, notwithstanding her practical qualities, so often shows the feeling, the flashing intuition and the vibrant mental quality of the poet."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 30 '24 600w

"The book will prove particularly suggestive to those interested in the beginnings of education for children, but it will be a person of very limited horizons who will fail to get something well worth while from it."

+ Outlook 136:615 Ap 9 '24 280w

MCMILLEN, WHEELER. Farming fever. 168p $1.50 Appleton

630 Agriculture. Farm life 24-15299

This book is intended for the information, and amusement, of the city man who fancies he would like to farm. It answers some of the questions which he might profitably ask before he makes his decision. Tho it shows the attractions as well as the drawbacks of farm life, the effect of the book is likely to be rather discouraging to the man who aspires to be a farmer.

Booklist 21:56 N '24

"The book is an outline of what a prospective farm owner should consider; it is not an exhaustive work on farming. It points the way to questions and their solution, sometimes very concretely as with the lists of government aids in the chapter on sources of information."

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 6 '24 190w

N Y Times p5 Ag 24 '24 400w

St Louis p377 N '24

MCNEILE, CYRIL (SAPPER, pseud.). Jim ^{2} Maitland. 285p $2 Doran

24-24811

The book is written in the form of a series of short stories in each one of which Jim Maitland, a prepossessing and well-groomed young Englishman emerges from the most harrowing and blood-curdling experiences a hero and a gentleman. Wherever and whenever Jim observes injustice being perpetrated, he offers his invaluable services for he possesses a steady nerve and strong arm, and he loves a good fight. The scenes of Jim's escapades are varied. One time it is Monte Carlo where he saves a lad from self-destruction; then Egypt where the Pool of the sacred crocodile attracts his attention; in Valparaiso he daringly rescues an abandoned dance-hall girl. Tampico, Colombo and Australia also furnish bizarre settings for high adventure. Eventually Jim returns to London where he nearly shatters his own dream of love because of lack of nerve.

"Our old friend 'Sapper' is still writing, and still writing good stuff. If there is lacking that touch of humor which made his war stories so delightful, there is nevertheless left a virile charm which attaches itself to tales of men hard-pressed in far-flung climes."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 3 '25 400w

"This book is a thriller, and will prove a boon to those readers looking for excitement."

Sat R of Lit 1:384 D 13 '24 110w

MCSPADDEN, JOSEPH WALKER. Famous sculptors of America. 377p il $3.50 Dodd

730 Sculptors, American. Sculpture, American 24-24271

"'Famous Sculptors of America,' like the author's preceding book, 'Famous Painters of MCSPADDEN, JOSEPH WALKER—Continued America,' is not primarily a work of art criticism. Instead, its purpose is to make the casual reader acquainted with some of the men themselves, who have made the noteworthy pieces of sculpture which greet us in the public square or public building, or adorn our museums." (Foreword) Contents: John Quincy Adams Ward; Augustus Saint Gaudens; Frederick MacMonnies; Daniel Chester French; Paul Wayland Bartlett; George Grey Barnard; Gutzon Borglum; John Massey Rhind; James Earle Fraser; Hermon Atkins MacNeil; Women sculptors of note: Harriet Hosmer; Anna Vaughn Hyatt; Janet Scudder; Bessie Potter Vonnoh; Bibliography.

Booklist 21:100 D '24

Reviewed by M. A. Fletcher
Lit R p9 O 11 '24 150w

"No one should go to his book, as indeed he gives fair warning in his foreword, expecting incisive, informed and illuminating criticism. But it does furnish readable sketches, much of whose material has been obtained from talks with the artists themselves."
+ N Y Times p26 N 9 '24 450w

"A book that will entertain and enlighten the casual reader."
+ Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 200w

MAGONIGLE, HAROLD VAN BUREN. Nature,
2 practice and history of art. 314p il $2.50 Scribner
709 Art 24-27653

In the first part of the book the author gives some notion of the nature of art, of the artist's point of view, and of the way he does his work. In the second and longer part he gives the briefest possible introduction to the history of art and indicates its relations to the great movements in the history of mankind. There are 128 illustrations.

"Both student and general reader will find the book instructive, stimulating, and thought-provoking."
+ Outlook 138:603 D 10 '24 140w

MAGRUDER, MARY LANIER. Wages. 308p $2 Harper
24-4866

Wishing for an heir to carry on her ancestral estate, Nellie MacGregor deliberately and without love, marries Stephen Gower, a young doctor who has become beloved thruout the Kentucky lowlands. Nellie at thirty, high-spirited and beautiful, has been untouched by love because of her misconception of the relations of men and women. Even Stephen's charm cannot break down her coolness, while he oversteps his part of the bargain by falling deeply in love with her. Relations between them become more complicated by the results of Stephen's wild, adventurous youth spent in the far places of the earth. In the intimacy of their life together, Nellie's generous nature is gradually brought under the influence of love, and they have one brief moment of happiness before the fates again interpose.

"We have a feeling that the author could have written a good novel if she had not tried for melodrama. As it is, she has succeeded in what she attempted."
— Boston Transcript p3 My 10 '24 220w

"It falls short of being a significant book because the situation is one of the interplay of character and emotion or it is nothing, and it demands a more penetrating treatment than has been given it." I. F. Weeks
— Lit R p688 Ap 19 '24 580w

"The problem presented as the core of Mary Lanier Magruder's 'Wages' and from which all the subsequent proceedings have their inception is not new in fiction, but the degree of originality with which it is developed rather lifts the book from a commonplace category. The prose itself is, for the most part, carefully written."
+ — N Y Times p16 Mr 23 '24 720w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 480w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 270w

MAIS, STUART PETRE BRODIE. Prunello. 370p $2 Brentano's [7s 6d C. Richards]

"Prunello, reviving the old theme of a swineherd who loved a princess, has not the fine economy of method that we find in the fairy tale. Colin Entwhistle, hackwriter and vagabond, wants to marry Olwen Vaughan, the daughter of a proud but impoverished aristocrat; and wins her after a series of complications covering 366 pages. His worthiness has conquered all obstacles—the leather and prunello and trappings of caste that stood in his way—as effectively as the swineherd's magic kettle; but not so promptly nor so blithely."—New Repub

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 16 '24 950w

"One puts this book down at the end with a feeling of disappointment, a sense that it is a 'might-have-been,' a book that almost arrives at real distinction but somehow falls short. There is often delicacy in the author's insight, and there is a fine, even a vehement, emotion behind his writing. But he is not quite able to bring either his complaint or any possible suggestion of a way out of the mess into a sharp focus."
+ — Lit R p778 My 24 '24 350w

"In telling the story, the author could not suppress his flair for dissertation: that is the epitaph of the book." R. C.
New Repub 39:108 Je 18 '24 100w

"Judged by some standards, Mr. Mais has done an exceedingly faulty piece of fiction. He has little sense of balance. His romance is too romantic, his beauty too beautiful, his squalor too squalid."
— + N Y Times p9 Mr 23 '24 430w

Sat R 136:170 Ag 11 '23

Spec 131:261 Ag 25 '23 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p518 Ag 2 '23 400w

MANLY, JOHN MATTHEWS, and RICKERT, EDITH. Writer's index of good form and good English. 261p $1.28 Holt
808 English language—Rhetoric. Authorship
24-196

A writer's desk book which gives directions for the preparation of papers, for finding material in libraries through the use of the various indexes and for the use of special reference books. The greater part of the book is given to the rules of capitalization and punctuation and of English composition.

Booklist 20:326 Je '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:93 Ap '24

MANN, THOMAS. Buddenbrooks; tr. from the German by H. T. Lowe-Porter. 2v 389;359p $5 Knopf
24-4622

"This novel is already one of the classics of modern German literature, although published in Germany a little more than twenty years ago. It is the chronicle of the Buddenbrook family through four generations. In the first generation of 1830 we see Johann Buddenbrook the respected head of a prosperous family of Lübeck's merchant nobility; in the next, with Consul Buddenbrook, all the appearances of prosperity and success are still there, but in the third generation of Thomas and Christian, a decline is noticeable, the firm is sinking, and not even the election of Thomas as Senator can conceal the fact that the Buddenbrooks are on the downward grade. After his death the business is sold, and in the last generation, Hanno, the weak, dreamy, ineffectual artist, symbolizes the extinction of a great family through over-refinement."—Publisher's note

Booklist 20:339 Je '24

"Very few Americans will take the trouble to read this book to the end. It contains no climaxes, no vivid surprises. Everything bears the stamp of logic and reason. If Thomas Mann wrote this record of the achievements and failures of a single family at the age of twenty-six that fact explains many faults. A young writer always makes his first novel too long. He is continually afraid he has not said enough, when the chances are that his book would be better cut to half its length. That excessive thoroughness with which so many Germans are infected is a malady from which Thomas Mann has not escaped. Interesting as his story may be, it is too loosely constructed, and for many readers that will prove a barrier." D. F. G.

— + Boston Transcript p8 F 27 '24 900w

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke
Dial 77:420 N '24 1200w

Reviewed by Joseph Collins
Int Bk R p651 Ag '24 1400w

"It is plainly enough, even as a mere novel, an isolated story, a very great book, a narrative of human beings and of human fates of an incomparable depth, insight, creative fulness, structural perfection. There is no turbidness in it, no faltering, no laxness. Mr. H. T. Lowe-Porter's version contains an occasional blunder. But, upon the whole, it is adequate and at times elegant." Ludwig Lewisohn

+ Nation 118:sup442 Ap 16 '24 1500w

Nation and Ath 36:196 N 1 '24 250w

"There is something very just and very noble about this book, with all its triviality and petty humanity. It recalls Carlyle's plea for reality." R. M. Lovett

+ — New Repub 38:sup7 Ap 9 '24 1500w

"The fact that the reviewer finds so many questions forced upon him is evidence of the vitality of 'Buddenbrooks' as a piece of literature. That the narrative has greatness cannot be denied. In the last analysis 'Buddenbrooks' is immature. But now that the story has been translated and made available to the American reader he will be unwise to let slip the opportunity to become acquainted with a work to which Europe has granted so much of praise."

+ — N Y Times p6 F 17 '24 1900w

"One might spend three months reading 'Buddenbrooks' to the exclusion of any other recently published fiction. In the crowding of incidents, clashing of loves, philosophical sweep of life there is an enlargement of human experience. 'Buddenbrooks' has all that the novel as a complete literary form must contain. If one quarrels with its length one can admire Mann's inexhaustible invention and strength." Laurence Stallings

+ — N Y World p13 Mr 14 '24 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:293 Je '24

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Spec 133:652 N 1 '24 350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p608 O 2 '24 700w

Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

MANNING, ANTHONY B. Elements of cost
2 accounting. 166p $2 McGraw

657 Cost accounting 24-19853

"An elementary study of cost accounting designed to acquaint an interested person with the fundamental principles of the subject. The material is presented by graphic charts which are explained in accompanying text matter. There is also a continuous series of problem data which are representative of the practical work in a cost department of a manufacturing concern."—Management and Adm

"Parts of the volume may tend to fatigue the student by the multitude of directions which follow each other almost without interruption, but on the whole the author has been successful in avoiding unnecessary monotony. No doubt this will prove a satisfactory textbook to be used in short courses where the available time is sufficient only to 'lay down the law.'" A. W. Henson

+ — Am Econ R 14:756 D '24 150w

Management and Adm 8:428 O '24 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:603 D '24

St Louis p378 N '24

MANNING, FREDERIC. Life of Sir William White; with an introd. by Lord George Hamilton. 502p $8 Dutton [21s Murray]

B or 92 White, Sir William Henry. Great Britain—Navy. Naval architecture

Sir William White, 1845-1913, was an English naval architect, for seventeen years, from 1885 to 1902, director of naval construction. This was an era of great activity in naval shipbuilding and of important changes in the development of marine architecture and design. During this time more than two hundred vessels of various types were added to the British navy, for the design and construction of which Sir William White was primarily responsible. Another of his most important public services was the reform of dockyard administration. The book is chiefly confined to his official activities. It contains many extracts from his letters, papers and memoranda.

Boston Transcript p6 F 2 '24 1100w

"It would be impossible to write the life of Sir William White without writing into it a considerable part of the history of naval architecture in Great Britain from the early eighties until the late war. Frederic Manning has realized this and has seized the opportunity thus afforded to present almost a history of the development of naval architecture during the years of Sir William White's public life."

Eng N 92:734 Ap 24 '24 370w

"Mr. Manning tells his story admirably, and his book is none the worse for a touch of generous partizanship. It has more than biographical interest." C. E. Fayle

+ Nation and Ath 34:352 D 1 '23 300w

"Mr. Manning tells the story of Sir William's life in full detail, so far as his special work is concerned. The book is therefore of particular interest to those concerned with the history of naval architecture and with the developments that have given the British Navy its modern form. For other readers it is perhaps too engrossed in those subjects and too detailed in their treatment to have much appeal. But for those whose concerns lie in the same direction it will be valuable and interesting, for it is authoritative."

+ — N Y Times p20 F 10 '24 600w

N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 80w

R of Rs 69:334 Mr '24 250w

Sat R 136:681 D 22 '23 700w

"Sir William White did most undeniably do a great work as Constructor for the Navy, and therefore also for us all. But did he provide a good subject for a biography? After reading Mr. Manning's Life of him and finding it very interesting, we are constrained to answer in the negative."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p764 N 15 '23 1050w

MANSFIELD, KATHERINE, pseud. (MRS JOHN MIDDLETON MURRY). Little girl (Eng title Something childish) and other stories. 253p $2.50 Knopf [6s Constable] 24-26942

"The stories in this posthumous collection of Katherine Mansfield's work cover thirteen years: the first was written when she was nineteen. The stories are arranged chronologically." (Sat R) Some of the titles included are: Something childish but very natural; The black cap; The journey to Bruges; Pension séguin; An indiscreet journey; Poison; The woman at the store.

Booklist 21:112 D '24

MANSFIELD, K., pseud.—Continued

"There is consolation in such a volume as this, for it illustrates almost every quality of her sensitive mind; realistic and mystical, sardonic and tender, shot through with bizarre horror and wistful poetry.' Ernest Boyd
+ Ind 113:317 O 25 '24 360w

"It would be unfair to judge the talents of the late Katherine Mansfield by the pieces gathered in this volume. The editor candidly tells us that he doubts whether Miss Mansfield herself would have allowed some of these stories to appear. Indeed, when the book is read carefully there appears to be little or nothing in it equal to her best work in other books; these pieces are the artist's 'throwouts,' stories which did not, perhaps, quite satisfy her fastidious taste, of sketches too slight in matter for her to wish them published in permanent form." R: Aldington
Nation and Ath 35:694 S 6 '24 1150w

Reviewed by R: Aldington
New Repub 40:207 O 22 '24 1150w
(Same as Nation and Ath)

"Most of them she thought not good enough, yet many are perfect, and all, even one written when she was 19, quiver with the same life." J: Franklin
+ New Statesman 23:649 S 13 '24 250w

"The magic and finesse of fine literary talent is in these twenty-five stories and sketches of 'The Little Girl.' "
+ N Y Times p8 N 9 '24 670w

Reviewed by Mary Ross
N Y Tribune p3 O 19 '24 750w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 138:268 S 13 '24 700w

"Although it all but lacks intrinsic value, the reader can scarcely regret its publication, because of the revealing light—the oddly diminishing light—which it sheds upon its writer." T. K. Whipple
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:342 D 6 '24 1150w

"It is, after all, not for her black witchcraft that we go to her books, but for the gleams of beauty, registered by a nature as sensitive to loveliness as to ugliness, which come and go elusively all through the texture of her tales. They shine most purely here in the story 'Something Childish but very Natural.' "
The Times [London] Lit Sup p511 Ag 21 '24 800w

MANSFIELD, KATHERINE, pseud. (MRS JOHN MIDDLETON MURRY). Poems. 112p $2.50 Knopf
821 24-4888

Among the literary remains of Katherine Mansfield which have been brought to light by her husband is this book of verse, written between the ages of sixteen and twenty-eight. The poems are grouped by periods, some of them being the simplest of child verses. Comparatively few of the poems have been published before.

"Katherine Mansfield's poems are not great poems, but they are the fine record of the softer side of a fine personality, and as such they will be read by many who hold dear the memory of this extraordinary, gifted woman." J. F.
+ Bookm 59:211 Ap '24 160w

"It is a matter for regret that Mr John Middleton Murry should have insisted upon publishing this book. One cannot help suspecting that many of the verses it contains were never intended by their author to see the light. We may be willing to concede that Katherine Mansfield was capable of writing distinguished short stories, but her literary reputation can only be damaged by having her weaker work put so indiscriminately, so shamelessly before us."
— Dial 76:372 Ap '24 150w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet
Lit R p645 Ap 5 '24 750w

"This free verse of 1910-1911 was ahead of its time in England. Through it Katherine Mansfield aimed at the effect which she was uniquely qualified to achieve—the effect of clear, distinct, and dancing reality, the effect of an evanescent mood caught by an adroit hand and delicately particularized."
+ Nation 118:485 Ap 23 '24 120w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden
Nation and Ath 34:609 Ja 26 '24 1000w

"The publication of these poems adds interestingly to that small remainder of her unpublished writing whereby we who want to may know her better, but it cannot conceivably add to her reputation. . . The first poem in the book is better than any of the others, and the others are more or less diminishingly unremarkable down to those written when she was sixteen—poems which are no better than hundreds written at that age by young ladies who later forget all about them and grow up to be merely wives, mothers and members of women's clubs." Robert Littell
— New Repub 37:288 F 6 '24 1550w

"The book but re-emphasizes the fact that her personality had been touched by the Divine Fire."
+ N Y Times p12 F 10 '24 750w

"There is not one poem in this volume that does not smack a little of a child's garden of verses. It is this eternal digging up of literary remains that dims Katherine Mansfield's brightness." Maxwell Anderson
— N Y World p6e Ja 27 '24 1550w

"The book includes more than twenty poems about children, written as long ago as 1907. They were well worth preserving, both for their own sake, because they are as true to childhood as any child poems that we know and for the light that they throw on the later work. We may see here already that sharpness of memory, that intensity of apprehension, and that sensibility to significance which came out in the more mature work."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p892 D 20 '23 1050w

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1922-1923, and The year book of the drama in America. 621p $2 Small
808.2 Drama—Collections (20-21432

"The ten plays selected as best from the theatrical season, June 1922-June 1923, are Rain, by John Colton and Clemence Randolph; You and I, a Harvard 47 Workshop prize play, by Philip Barry; Loyalties, by John Galsworthy; Icebound, by Owen Davis; Why not, by Jesse Lynch Williams; The fool, by Channing Pollock; Merton of the movies, dramatized from Harry Leon Wilson's novel, by George Kaufman and Marc Connelly; The old soak, by Don Marquis; R. U. R., by Karel Capek; Mary the 3rd, by Rachel Crothers. The book contains an abstract of each of the ten, with copious extracts, also briefer summaries of all the plays of 1922-1923 and many interesting statistics of the theatrical season."—Cleveland

---

Booklist 20:290 My '24

"Obviously, the list is of unequal value and will provoke controversy; everyone can think of plays which might have been omitted and of others which ought to have been substituted. But nearly everyone must agree that those included are highly representative of their season, and that they are more than worth the price of the volume." K. B.
Cath World 119:136 Ap '24 180w

Cleveland p3 Ja '24

Freeman 8:455 Ja 16 '24 80w

"Mr. Mantle offers a capable, comprehensive volume containing a vast amount of information and much just and interesting comment."
+ N Y Times p20 N 18 '23 400w

N Y Tribune p19 Mr 16 '24 130w

"In years to come the volumes of 'The Best Plays' will at least prove interesting as a survey of American progress in the drama, its production and its creation. They are contemporaneously of some value for information." D. G.

+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 13 '24 550w

Wis Lib Bul 20:67 Mr '24

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1923-24,
2 and The year book of the drama in America. (Best plays ser.) 481p il $2.50 Small

808.2 Drama—Collections

The plays chosen for inclusion in Mr Burns Mantle's fifth annual yearbook and review of the theater are the following: The show-off; Hell-bent fer heaven; The swan; Outward bound; The goose hangs high; Beggar on horseback; The changelings; Sun-up; Chicken feed; Tarnish. Over half the book is given to synopses of the plays and extracts from the dialog. There is also considerable matter about the theatrical year, including articles on the New York and the Chicago seasons, a statistical summary of the plays of the year and various lists. Biographical notes on the authors of the ten selected dramas are also given.

Cath World 120:566 Ja '25 150w

Lit R p10 Ja 3 '25 250w

"The volume is invaluable as a reference book for any one interested in theatrical affairs."

+ N Y Times p20 N 23 '24 320w

"This is a standard yearbook, of inestimable service for the writer on the theater, and a sort of dramatic digest." M. J. Moses

Outlook 138:510 N 26 '24 140w

"The value of the book lies not so much in this crowning of the Ten Best, as in the detailed information concerning the theatrical season which it makes available: its excellent summaries, lists and indexes and its convenient as well as comprehensive scheme."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 9:70 Ja '25 200w

MANZONI, ALESSANDRO. The bethrothed (I promessi sposi)); a Milanese story of the seventeenth century; tr. by Daniel J. Connor. 666p $3 Macmillan

24-12438

This is a new translation of Italy's great historical romance, the first to be based upon Manzoni's final revision of the book. The story tells of Renzo and Lucia, peasant lovers. They are about to be married when Father Abbondino, the priest who is to officiate at the ceremony, is threatened with death by Don Rodrigo and his bandits, for Don Rodrigo is desirous of claiming Lucia for himself. Lucia thereupon enters a convent and prepares to become a nun but relinquishes her vows when a pestilence attacks the city killing Don Rodrigo, and restoring Renzo to her. Thus the lovers are free to be wedded.

"The long, leisurely book, though ethical in texture, is leavened with a fine humor, a quiet irony; its psychological insight, though it never grows clinical with the lore of contemporary psychiatry, is none the less sound. Indeed, on many a page one comes across observations that are clearly the result of Manzoni's personal experience with nervous ailment." I. G.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 28 '24 1150w

"At last we have an English version which can be pronounced worthy of its great original, for I Promessi Sposi is universally conceded to be one of the great literary achievements of the world, wholly the product of the Italian genius and yet transcending all national limitations and appealing to the shared humanity of the race." B. M. K.

+ Cath World 119:856 S '24 220w

Reviewed by C: A. Madison

+ Lit R p937 Ag 2 '24 440w

"Manzoni satisfies excellently the desire for a story with elements of the truth. The main story is richly embroidered with characters whose own stories only enchance the interest with which we follow the fate of Lucia and Renzo. Daniel J. Connor has ably rendered Manzoni's prose into English neither too archaic nor modern."

+ N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 360w

MARBLE, ANNIE (RUSSELL) (MRS CHARLES FRANCIS MARBLE). Women of the Bible; their services in home and state. 315p il $2 Century

220.92. Bible. Whole—Women. Women—Biography 23-18289

A popular account of the women of the Bible—both of the Old and the New Testament. Some of these women were heroic patriots like Miriam, Deborah, Esther and Judith; some were religious workers, like Anna, the prophetess, and Priscilla, co-worker with Saint Paul; some were notable mothers, like Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel and Hannah. In contrast to these are women like Jezebel, Delilah and Herodias, whose names are connected with evil deeds. Nearly all the women mentioned in the Bible are included and the author groups them according to the type of woman or period of history illustrated. Contents: The story of Eve; The Hebrew woman in her home; Wives of the Bible; Mothers in Israel; Women in patriotic and religious service; Friends and co-workers; Bibliography; Index.

Booklist 20:281 My '24

"This is a popular, considerably modernized series of sketches."

+ Lit R p652 Ap 5 '24 100w

Wis Lib Bul 20:44 F '24

MARCHANT, SIR JAMES, ed. Immortality; with an introd. by Lord Ernle. 224p $1.75 (7s 6d) Putnam

237 immortality 24-20073

The nine chapters in this book, by as many writers, trace the conception of immortality in Egyptian, Greek, Indian, Hebrew and Christian thought. Other subjects discussed are the judgment of philosophy, the ethical basis of immortality, the attitude of science and the testimony of the poets. Contents: Egyptian conceptions of immortality, by Sir Flinders Petrie; Greek views of immortality, by F. M. Cornford; Immortality in Indian thought, by A. A. Macdonell; Hebrew and apocalyptic conceptions of immortality, by A. C. Welch; The Christian idea of immortality, by R. G. Macintyre; The philosophy of immortality, by George Galloway; The ethical basis of immortality, by Rudolf Eucken; Science and immortality, by E. W. Barnes; Immortality in the poets, by M. H. Hewlett.

"The visitor from Mars reading this book unwarned would get a strange idea of what Christian eschatology really does teach. The articles on Egypt (by Petrie), on Greece, and on Hebrew thought are really worth reading." B. C. A. W.

— + Cath World 120:137 O '24 350w

New Statesman 23:628 S 6 '24 420w

"Whether or not the reader finds anything here to clarify his own thoughts on the subject, he cannot close this book without a deeper sense of the immense hold which the idea of immortality has had on the mind of man from the remotest times of which we have knowledge." J: D. Adams

N Y Times p13 Ag 24 '24 2250w

MARCOSSON, ISAAC FREDERICK. Black Golconda; the romance of petroleum. 369p il $4 Harper

338.2 Petroleum industry and trade 24-16772

Mr Marcosson graphically depicts the international struggle for oil domains. He analyzes the oil situation with special reference to American needs and participation and endeavors to impress upon the minds of the American people the strategic position which the oil interests occupy today in the field of American industry.

MARCOSSON, I: F:—Continued
There are intimate portraits of some of the outstanding men engaged in the oil industry both in America and Europe.

Booklist 21:10 O '24
Boston Transcript p6 Jl 30 '24 1100w
Reviewed by C. M. Morrison
Lit R p972 Ag 16 '24 200w

"Mr. Marcosson succeeds admirably in informing his sketch of the development of the petroleum industry. While his pages fairly bristle with the facts and figures and the material aspects of how and why petroleum, from a mere quack remedy, has come to dominate modern life and control the policies of Governments, at the same time they glow with wonder stories of men and success and wealth and adventure."
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 10 '24 600w
N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 320w
Reviewed by N: Roosevelt
No Am 220:190 S '24 1000w
St Louis p371 N '24

"In the story of the international contest for oil, Mr. Marcosson let his pen be caught in the tangled web of intrigue, with the result that he gives a picture impressive for its tangledness." Manfred Gottfried
Sat R of Lit 1:29 Ag 9 '24 550w

MARGUERITTE, PAUL, and MARGUERITTE, VICTOR. Poum; the adventures of a little boy; tr. from the French by Bérengère Drillien. 170p $2.50 Knopf [2s Sidgwick & J.]
24-4589

"'Poum' is a more or less autobiographical picture of the childhood of the celebrated brothers Margueritte. It is supposed to refer more especially to that of Paul, the older of the two, but is in fact a series of memories of the childhood of both in which they collaborated, each refreshing the recollections of the other and combining both in this tale of the little boy 'Poum.' Beginning with his earliest remembrances, it carries him along through a great variety of incidents, ideas, dreams, naughtinesses, discoveries, explorations, until he is sent away to school at the age, perhaps, of 8 or 9. It is the vivid picture of a typical French childhood, although the little lad about whom it is told is not a typical child, either French or any other, but a highly individual one, full of dreams, imaginative, nervous, delighting in exploring and experimenting with life even at so early an age."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p2 F 23 '24 160w

"It is in its own way thoroughly delightful. 'Its own way' means an extremely French way. The book is written in a series of short sketches and makes very delightful reading. The illustrations by Kathleen W. Coales are beautifully in keeping."
+ Lit R p747 My 10 '24 300w

"The story is told with the instinctive art, the trained skill and the sure insight into the human heart of the French artist with words and is written so delightfully that its every page is a pleasure. It is quite possible indeed, that it will give more pleasure to adult than to young readers."
+ N Y Times p16 My 4 '24 220w

MARKS, LIONEL SIMEON, and others, eds.
^{2} Mechanical engineers' handbook. 2d ed rev 1986p il $6 McGraw
621 Mechanical engineering 24-9725

"Represents the collaboration of more than 50 engineers, among them many recognized as authorities, and one claim of superiority is that co-operation has secured representative rather than individual practice."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:514 N '24

MARKS, PERCY. Plastic age. 332p $2 Century
24-2625

Every side of college life is touched upon in this realistic story of Hugh Carver's four years at Sanford. It shows the students in class and chapel, at study, in their sports and recreations and sex relations, in their discussions among themselves of sex, religion and other matters. The picture is photographic. Not an experience is missed, and the talk is in the latest college vernacular. The book is evidently an attempt at truth-telling which conceals neither the startling reality nor the higher impulses at work, expressing themselves at times in a genuine idealism.

Booklist 20:339 Je '24

"It is by no means a mild book. The sex questions are very boldly handled indeed, yet as well as we have ever seen them handled. They are just real, and not there for their own sake. No one could read this book for them alone, and not a sentence is suppressible or offending. This is not because it is veiled. It is because it is not veiled." Clifford Orr
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '24 1500w
Cleveland p42 Je '24

"'Plastic Age' is a book that some will condemn: others will praise. This reviewer leaves it without doing either. He does pause, however, and express the wish that it will be widely read. The college man will read it with a smile as he recalls certain incidents of his own college career. The college woman may do the same. To others it may start an evaluation of certain facts that may beget something akin to doubt. It should not if they think clear." G. O. Mudge
Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p22 Ap 20 '24 360w

"Even for the young people of to-day there are adventures other than those of flamboyant nights and sodden days. In short, the facts adduced in this type of fiction may be accurate, but the evidence is incomplete, and the resulting picture is as romantic as fishermen's stories or tales of far travelers." G: B. Dutton
— Ind 112:314 Je 7 '24 370w

"Altho Carver is not typical, he is drawn against a background that is. To this extent every college man (or woman) will find a picture to bring pleasant memories. The author has sympathy for these youths who are just meeting life, and keeps the story constantly entertaining."
— + Int Bk R p331 Mr '24 280w

"In strict point of verisimilitude, Percy Marks has excelled the Fitzgeralds and Benets with their pre-war Princetons and Yales. He has drawn a lively and natural picture of a community of boys growing into men under the peculiar circumstances that beset American youth. He has reported their thoughts, their actions, their emotions and their words with brilliant accuracy. If he has taken advantage of his opportunity to work off some of his own moralizings on the state of affairs it is primarily his own concern." J: F. Carter, jr.
+ — Lit R p487 F 2 '24 1000w
Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 118:289 Mr 12 '24 250w
Reviewed by Ralph Wright
New Statesman 23:441 Jl 19 '24 550w

"He has succeeded in portraying with relentless truth, with quite uncanny insight, and an almost photographic and, indeed, phonographic, realism, a panorama of life at a typical American college at the present time. . . Each experience in turn comes up for review—fraternities, gin, women good and bad, petting parties, religious and moral doubts and questionings—and each in turn gets that same detached yet realistic treatment."
+ N Y Times p9 F 3 '24 780w

"Of the three classical qualities of a good novel, structure, style and character, the first is totally wanting in this effort, the second never rises above the level of tolerable reporting and the third is faintly discernible in rudimentary and static outlines. If the requirements of post-graduate literature are not higher than that they ought to be." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p21 F 3 '24 1000w

Outlook 136:360 F 27 '24 240w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:293 Je '24

Spec 133:134 Jl 26 '24 80w

"At the end of 'The Plastic Age' the reader felt that the author had sincerely attempted an inclusive, unprejudiced and fundamental portrayal of American college life."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a F 17 '24 900w

"Mr. Mark's intention is unobjectionable, but his art suffers from needless emphasis."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p402 Je 26 '24 350w

MARR, GEORGE SIMPSON. Periodical essayists of the eighteenth century. 264p $2.50 Appleton [8s 6d J. Clarke]

824 Periodicals. Essay [24-14052]

A detailed survey of the periodical essay which had its rise in the first decade of the eighteenth century and which coincided with the appearance of the weekly or bi-weekly paper. Besides the Tatler, Spectator, Guardian, and other widely famous periodicals the author has examined many exceedingly rare and inaccessible periodicals which yield many delightful examples of the essay form. There are chapters on the great essayists—Addison, Steele, Johnson, and Goldsmith, and many extracts from their essays are included. Both a chronological and an alphabetical list of periodicals is given and there is an index.

"The book is strangely unsuccessful; it is an exhaustive and chronological précis; its aim is to assist rather than to attract. The quotations are lengthy and numerous, but, even so, the whole is unreadable without the use of the originals." G: Rylands

— Nation and Ath 34:578 Ja 19 '24 650w

"Dr. Marr is entitled to great credit for the continuity of interest he has preserved in his book. In spite of the mass of material in which he worked, details have not swamped him, and although he undertook to report on even the more insignificant periodicals, he has written with such an admirable sense of proportion that the main outlines stand out clearly."

+ N Y Times p13 S 7 '24 2750w

"Being arranged like a catalogue, it is not particularly readable. In characterizing individual periodicals Dr. Marr shows no sense of proportion and no perception of the significant. He is deadly in his idea of humor and his want of critical judgment is flagrant whenever he has to exercise it on matter that has not had thorough appraisal already." Jacob Zeitlin

— N Y Tribune p4 O 12 '24 1100w

Reviewed by H. J. Smith

Sat R of Lit 1:324 N 29 '24 780w.

Spec 132:336 Mr 1 '24 500w

MARRIOTT, JOHN ARTHUR RANSOME. Economics and ethics; a treatise on wealth and life. 293p $5 Dutton [10s 6d Methuen]

330.1 Economics. Ethics [24-1306]

Basing his argument on the thesis that economics is primarily a science founded upon a few simple and powerful laws, the author sets himself to answer such questions as: Are these economic laws in conflict with Christianity? Is it possible to be successful in business without disobeying the precepts of Christ? Are politics and economics compatible with ethics, and the pursuit of wealth consistent with the service of God? His conclusion is that ethical practice is conditioned by the operation of economic law and that there is, in the last analysis, no contradiction between them.

Am Pol Sci R 18:431 My '24 70w

"Professor Marriott's way has never been the popular way; he writes by preference for the Fortnightly Review or the Nineteenth Century and After, not for the more widely circulated weeklies. Yet his many years of active service in University Extension work prove him no Tory. He is a human being, not a stand-patter." R. H. A.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 9 '24 1300w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

N Y Times p25 Mr 2 '24 440w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:302 Je '24

"One of the best books on the subject that we have read. . . Presented in language which all can understand, and not in the professional jargon of the day."

+ Sat R 136:518 N 10 '23 950w

"Mr. Marriott's handling of the thesis is in no wise dogmatic or partisan. He takes the reader gently by the hand and leads him through the intricacies of economic theory and history, explaining, illustrating, correcting fallacies, persuasively arguing, weighing and balancing."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p700 O 25 '23 2250w

MARRIOTT, JOSEPH WESTON, comp. One-act plays of to-day. 270p $2 Small [3s 6d Harrap]

822 English drama—Collections 24-25135

"Eleven short plays by modern English, Scottish, and Irish playwrights." (The Times [London] Lit Sup) Contents: The boy comes home, by A. A. Milne; Followers, by H. Brighouse; The stepmother, by A. Bennett; The maker of dreams, by O. Down; The little man, by J. Galsworthy; A night at an inn, by Lord Dunsany; Campbell of Kilmhor, by J. A. Ferguson; The grand cham's diamond, by A. Monkhouse; Thread o' scarlet, by J. J. Bell; Becky Sharp, by Olive Conway; The seraphic vision, by L. Housman; Notes and exercises.

"If variety was Mr. Marriott's main object in making this selection of eleven one-act plays, he has been successful in attaining it. But the pieces he has chosen are of very unequal value and some of the best known authors are but poorly represented." J. R. Towse

+ — Lit R p9 O 25 '24 300w

"This may seem on the whole a poor selection of plays, but the editor has compiled it with a masterly and conscious pedagogy. The aim is to cultivate taste." Bonamy Dobrée

+ — Nation and Ath 35:356 Je 14 '24 400w

New Statesman 23:326 Je 21 '24 160w

"Mr. Marriott's little volume of selected pieces will prove very useful to amateurs in search of the less known work of great names."

+ Sat R 138:123 Ag 2 '24 140w

"He refers to light comedy, farce, and other types of plays, without further clarification. Such incoherencies render the book valuable only for one who confines himself to the plays themselves, and spell confusion for the student who seeks guidance."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:186 O 11 '24 380w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p283 My 8 '24 550w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p288 My 8 '24 30w

MARSH, AGNES M., and MARSH, L. P. Dance in education. 252p $10 Barnes, A. S.

793 Dancing 24-7646

The book describes various interpretative dances to be used in schools and classes, giving the music for each and references to help in correlating the dance with literature, sculpture and painting.

"It may be said that while this book, designed primarily as a working model for the teacher of dancing, appeals chiefly to those concerned with the practice of this art, it will yet be found stimulating and inspirational by all interested in education and cultural development. For it opens up vistas of a still wider application of this fundamental principle of correlation, not merely between the dance and the allied arts and sciences, but between all branches of human knowledge." L. N.

MARSH, A. M. and L. P.—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 26 '24 1650w

"To judge by the photographs the pupils are less interested in 'moral and religious motivation' and 'the formulation of ideals concerning' posture than in dancing, because they enjoy it. Their work looks very good indeed." Marion Tyler

+ N Y Tribune p10 Ja 11 '25 350w

Outlook 136:749 Ap 30 '24 350w

MARSH, CHARLES FIELDING. After harvest. 353p $2 Appleton
[24-24815]

The wind-swept marshlands of Norfolk furnish the setting for this tale. Here it is that the conniving Mrs Thirtle lives with her handsome son John, whose dissolute habits are diminishing his mother's purse. Thru the cunning arrangement of Mrs Thirtle, who is convinced that John's salvation lies in marriage to a good respectable girl, Priscilla Postle, refined and educated, becomes a guest at Brent Farm. Priscilla, with an overpowering sense of duty, believes she must save this man from degradation if it is within her power. John, under Priscilla's influence, mends his ways and she promises to marry him after harvest. But he is not pleased with the growing friendship between her and his shepherd, Reuben Gladden, an idealist. Harvest comes and with it an epidemic which attacks Reuben. Priscilla at the risk of her reputation saves the shepherd's life. Death interferes with Mrs Thirtle's carefully laid plans and unearths a secret which makes Priscilla free to marry the man she loves.

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p4 Jl 26 '24 700w

"The plot has some ingenuity, even a certain novelty, but the importance of the book rests upon its presentation of various types and its minute study of individual psychology. The stage setting is excellent." H. P.

+ Lit R p958 Ag 9 '24 330w

"The book is not uninteresting; one reads it without difficulty, yet to leave it unfinished would be no special hardship. The style is of the most part neither noticeably good nor noticeably bad, and much the same thing may be said for the characterization."

+ — N Y Times p9 Jl 13 '24 440w

"The author displays a genuine grasp of character; and though he cannot resist a touch of melodrama he never falls into sentimentality. It is a good, strongly-built, satisfying story, a bit old-fashioned, but of a durable model." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p23 Jl 27 '24 750w

Reviewed by J. L. Ford
Outlook 137:576 Ag 13 '24 150w

MARSHALL, ARCHIBALD. Anthony Dare's progress. 324p $2 Dodd
24-21806

A continuation of the story of Anthony Dare from the point where "The education of Anthony Dare" left it. The narrative is as leisurely as its forerunners, carrying Anthony only one year further in his progress. It sees him thru the beginnings of his journalistic career and two love affairs in which he is the loser because of his lack of money, and leaves him on the eve of his marriage to Alice Cutting, now the widowed Lady March, whom he was rather in love with as a boy. The material advantages of the marriage are great and he sees the prospect of settling down comfortably to his career as a novelist. Tony is becoming more and more confirmed in his habit of taking the line of least resistance.

Booklist 21:69 N '24

Reviewed by Madelin Leof
Lit R p12 N 1 '24 470w

"The novel is a level, competent accomplishment. It is as smooth as glass and equally revealing."

+ N Y Times p8 S 21 '24 470w

"However disappointing Anthony Dare may be in this age of distinguished autobiographical and biographical novels, one cannot but delight in Mr. Marshall's respect for form. In an essay a few years ago he said that an author's only concern should be to tell a story; and, whatever the shortcomings of 'Anthony Dare's Progress' in individualization may be, Mr Marshall has here, as almost always, resisted all temptations to stem the rapid flow of narration." Dix Harwood

+ — N Y Tribune p10 S 28 '24 560w

"The book is written in quite the same leisurely, ambling manner as the others, and with quite the same careful, beautiful style." E. M'D. J.

+ N Y World p6e S 21 '24 150w

"Mr Marshall's work has always been particularly pleasing amid much of the hysterical writing of his contemporaries. One felt sure that one's common sense would not be insulted when one picked up one of his books to read. The Anthony Dare books, though written with the same honesty of workmanship, seem a little ineffectual."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 500w

MARSHALL, ARCHIBALD. Education of Anthony Dare. 314p $3.50 Dodd
24-9129

The story is a continuation of "Anthony Dare" (Book Review Digest, 1923) and the same characters reappear in it. Tony's education was interrupted by his father's death, which made it necessary for him to lay aside his literary aspirations and take a clerkship in the city. The work was uncongenial and he made little headway in it, but he continued to make friends thru his sunny, engaging personality. Among the friends he made was his half-brother Henry, who at first disliked and envied him but who came to take a real interest in his welfare and made it possible for him to go to Cambridge and resume his old loved associations. When Henry died, within five years of his father, he and Tony had come very close to each other and Tony had begun to make a man of himself.

Booklist 20:339 Je '24

"Anyone who wants excitement and thrills and violence will not find them in this story, or indeed in any other of Mr. Marshall's novels since 'The House of Merrilees.' But they are as enjoyable in their way as are the redoubtable Sabatini's romances of heroes and heroines in times and in costumes other than our own." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '24 1100w

Cleveland p42 Je '24

Ind 112:289 My 24 '24 360w

"While the novel is written with a fair degree of skill, one somehow feels that it is lacking in that vitality that sustained interest which alone can make a book notable." S. A. Coblentz

— + Int Bk R p673 Ag '24 230w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:268 D 6 '24 400w

"While the book is complete in itself and has bits of explanation which will probably make what has gone before fairly clear to any reader, it will prove more interesting to those who followed the career of this very likable youth from the beginning. It is of course only readers of the first book who can fully appreciate the delicacy and dexterity of the character development shown in this one."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 27 '24 1200w

"At times, Mr. Marshall achieves a verisimilitude that is painfully convincing. He is never less than accurate, but seldom inspired; so it may be that he does well in choosing such a character as Anthony to expend his care upon. Inspiration would fall dead in the neighborhood of Anthony, but as a subject for meticulous observation and cold analysis he is perfect." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p25 My 4 '24 800w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 120w

Outlook 137:547 Ag 6 '24 100w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 138:527 N 22 '24 150w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 260w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p794 N 27 '24 420w

Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

MARSHALL, EDISON. Seward's folly. 312p $2 Little

24-15290

A romance built about the purchase of Alaska by the United States, known as Seward's folly. Young Jeff Sharp, ex-officer in the Confederate army, was sent by Secretary Seward to Sitka, the capital of Alaska, to block the deal between the Hudson's Bay company and a Russian corporation to keep Alaska from the United States. He had an unexpected ally in an American girl whom he met on the ship which carried him to Alaska, and who proved to be also a secret agent, sent by the czar to protect his interests in Alaska. Her keen wit and courage helped the impetuous Southerner out of more than one tight place and in the process of accomplishing his mission Jeff forgot that he was a rebel and became an American.

Booklist 21:28 O '24

"While in our estimation, the story is not quite up to the level of some of the author's previous productions, it is a first-class tale, and a worth-while one." W. B.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Jl 16 '24 500w

Cleveland p92 D '24

Reviewed by Kathleen Reynolds

Int Bk R p820 O '24 200w

"The narrative is well written, and the life of Alaska of that period vividly and impressively portrayed." M. P.

+ Lit R p953 Ag 9 '24 300w

"The author writes in the crisp, straightforward, narrative style which distinguished his previous stories. If the reader heeds the book's foreword not to take its historical pretensions too seriously, 'Seward's Folly' may be recommended as a workmanlike and thoroughly diverting yarn."

+ N Y Times p9 Jl 6 '24 560w

"There is a fair story running throughout the book, which is a good American type."

+ N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 90w

Sat R of Lit 1:34 Ag 9 '24 160w

"It is lively and interesting in a superficial way, and will yield good light entertainment though its pervading tone of spread eagleism belongs to 50 years ago rather than to 1924."

— + Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p852 D 11 '24 70w

Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

MARSHALL, FRANK JAMES, and MACBETH, JAMES CRUICKSHANK HENDERSON. Chess step by step. 306p il $3.50 Dutton

794 Chess 24-23645

The American chess champion is the first of the two authors of this book, which is a clear and simple explanation of the principles and strategy of the game, with a selection of openings and a series of games illustrative of the different lines of play which result from the various methods of beginning the game.

"A most valuable book for those who wish to learn the oldest of indoor games." J. T. S.

+ Lit R p11 S 20 '24 210w

N Y Times p20 Ag 17 '24 480w

"There are other books that give as good instruction, but even the new chess players are not innoculated against the contemporary disease that impels a search for something different. So here is a new book on chess—no better and no worse." P. N. Stone

N Y Tribune p10 Ja 11 '25 480w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 150w

MARSTON, JEFFERY EARDLEY. See Jeffery, J. E., pseud.

MARTIN, BASIL KINGSLEY. Triumph of Lord Palmerston. 259p $3.50 Dial press [10s 6d Allen & U.]

942.08 Palmerston, Henry John Temple, viscount. Crimean war, 1853-1856. Great Britain—History—Nineteenth century. Public opinion [24-14277]

The author makes the origin of the Crimean war the basis of a study of public opinion and its sources and of the processes by which modern nations go to war. He analyzes the development of public opinion in the years preceding the Crimean war to discover why this war, characterized by Disraeli as "just but unnecessary" took hold of the popular imagination. In particular he studies Lord Palmerston's responsibility in it and the secret of his popularity.

"Mr. Martin's examination of the complex elements of this total of public opinion is acutely penetrating: it is, to some extent, breaking a new path for the historian. The book is very carefully documented and is readably fluent."

+ Bookm 60:352 N '24 210w

"A brilliant sketch of the manner in which that least useful of all the attempts to solve the Eastern question was engineered." W. M.

+ Eng Hist R 39:639 O '24 280w

"There are faults in this book—as there are in all books. But it is brilliantly written and fairly. And the drama of history, the clash of wills, the sullen chorus of public opinion swaying the actors, now driving them, now led by them—this human drama is splendidly presented. It is a book which discriminating people will appreciate." D. R.

+ — Ind 113:318 O 25 '24 840w

"It is to be hoped that Mr. Martin will find many readers for his 'Triumph of Lord Palmerston.' He has not only constructed a brilliant and racy narrative but he offers much food for reflection to those appalled by our present discontents."

+ Nation and Ath 35:54 Ap 12 '24 920w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 40:101 S 24 '24 1600w

"Mr. Martin has still a good deal to learn about the correction of proofs, and his book is disfigured by a number of small errors which do not make more palatable the censorious tone that he adopts towards his predecessors among historians, but he writes with point and vigour, and shapes like a promising disciple of Mr. Lytton Strachey."

— + New Statesman 24:44 Ap 19 '24 1300w

Reviewed by H. W. Horwill

N Y Tribune p3 N 2 '24 800w

N Y World p8e O 12 '24 600w

"Caustic, scholarly and analytical book."

+ Sat R 137:461 My 3 '24 540w

"The author's careful observation of the critical methods of the sound historian in no wise impairs the unusual attractiveness of his style." N. C. Kendrick

+ Sat R of Lit 1:246 N 1 '24 580w

Spec 133:234 Ag 16 '24 350w

MARTIN, EVERETT DEAN. Mystery of religion; a study in social psychology. 390p $3 Harper

201 Psychology, Religious. Psychoanalysis 24-13283

The book is a study of the hidden motives back of religious behavior which give it a sense of mystery and an analysis of these mo-

MARTIN, EVERETT DEAN—Continued
tives in the light of the new psychology. Dr Martin treats religion as a psychopathic phenomenon and shows the analogy between certain phases of religion and types of dreams and abnormal behavior. He fits the symbols, ceremonials and taboos of religion into the Freudian formula of complexes, repressions, conflicts, symbols, the family image, etc.

"A thought-provoking, stimulating book, written with clarity and simplicity."
+ Booklist 21:92 D '24

Bookm 59:adv Jl '24 80w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 28 '24 220w

Reviewed by G. B. Munson
Lit R p5 Ag 30 '24 720w

"It requires some temerity to announce the Oedipus complex as the root of all religion. Mr. Martin does it quite inoffensively, perhaps because he is a student of social psychology and not of mental diseases. . . He can criticize the religious experience in terms of social utility. And yet he can avoid both the unconscious obscurantism of the priest and the false perspective of the psychiatrist. This alone is an achievement." C. E. Ayres
+ New Repub 39:249 Jl 23 '24 1400w

Reviewed by H. N. Denny
N Y Times p10 N 23 '24 1150w

"Mr. Martin has produced an engrossing book in which he carries to a logical conclusion the hypotheses he sets out for himself." F. V. Roman
+ — N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 450w

"This is an interesting and well-written study of religion from the stand-point of the current Behaviorist Psychology." H: S. Coffin
+ Sat R of Lit 1:48 Ag 16 '24 900w

"Penetrating as it does into the very foundations of the fictions by which men and women live, and give moral valuation to the world they live in, The Mystery of Religion may be expected to evoke a storm of objection in certain quarters. In the reviewer's opinion, the book in its essential message will stand the test. It is not so convincing as The Behavior of Crowds; but that is to be expected since it penetrates to a far deeper and more obscure level of human nature than does the latter work. It has the virtue, however, of being less dogmatic in assertion." F. H. Allport
+ — Survey 53:102 O 15 '24 650w

MARTIN, EVERETT DEAN. Psychology; what it has to teach you about yourself and the world you live in. 248p $3 W. W. Norton, 70 5th Av., N.Y.

150 Psychology

"This present publication is an example of the sudden and enormous growth of popular interest in psychology. It is composed of twenty lectures that were given before classes in the People's Institute by its director, Everett Dean Martin. So many wanted to hear them and so many more outside of New York who could not attend the institute wanted to read them that they have been put into print in this handy form. Each lecture is printed in a separate pamphlet and the whole twenty are enclosed in a cover of paper boards."—N Y Times

"Vigorous, lucid, often brilliantly written but always carefully critical exposition and explanation of the main lines of modern psychological study, prepared for the intelligent layman but often, also, of interest to the qualified specialists." H. L. Pangborn
+ Lit R p14 Ag 30 '24 600w

"The author knows his subject thoroughly and is abreast of all its latest developments. And he has, moreover, a notable gift for popular exposition of a difficult and intricate theme."
+ N Y Times p17 Jl 20 '24 470w

MARTIN, MRS HELEN (REIMENSNYDER) (MRS FREDERIC C. MARTIN). The snob; the story of a marriage. 391p $2 Dodd
24-1645

By reason of a certain lofty bearing and irreproachable manners in public, Eugene Curry has gained the reputation of being an idealist and aristocrat. His wife Nancy is likewise deceived when she marries him, but she gradually senses the thin veneer that conceals a coarse, common nature, the result of his upbringing. His small economies in his own household, his neglect of Nancy even in illness, his respect for the social climbers of Leitersville who place money on a pedestal, and finally his infidelity, serve to kill her love for him completely. In contempt she leaves him for Herrick Appleton, who has fearlessly maintained his own ideals against the bigoted leaders of Leitersville.

Booklist 20:265 Ap '24

"No one, writing of them today, understands and interprets the Pennsylvania Dutch as does she; their crudities, their sincerities, their primitive beliefs and customs, the fascinating barbarities of their speech."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 30 '24 320w

"More a caricature than a character study, and the reader is left with a great deal of doubt in his mind as to its fairness. . . 'The Snob' closely approaches the quality of Mrs. Martin's earlier Mennonite novels." T. H. L.
— + Int Bk R p331 Mr '24 400w

"If the novel were at least a hundred pages shorter it would be by so much the better. And if Mrs. Martin could find a way to make her educated characters as real as her Germans it would be a corking story. Maybe she will in time. In the meantime Leitersville itself and the real Pennsylvania Germans in the story make up for a good many of the other deficiencies."
+ — Lit R p488 F 2 '24 450w

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons
Nation 119:127 Jl 30 '24 320w

"There is much that is excellent in this book, and while it cannot be placed beside earlier works of Miss Martin, it is yet near enough to them to deserve attention."
+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 27 '24 660w

"As with all of Mrs. Martin's novels, 'The Snob' can be read with ease and interest, with considerable amusement, but with something less than complete conviction. The characters are not quite puppets, but they are obviously under marching orders from their author, put to work to illustrate a thesis."
+ — N Y Tribune p23 Ja 20 '24 900w

"It is not an entirely solid work, but interest never slackens from the opening scene."
— + Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p828 D 4 '24 130w

Wis Lib Bul 20:98 Ap '24

MARTZ, CHARLES ELLSWORTH, and KINNEMANN, JOHN A. Social science for teachers. (Riverside textbooks in education. Division on secondary education) 340p $1.90 Houghton

300 Sociology. Political science 23-17273

"The book is a very elementary treatise on the life of people in organized society, presenting in simple form some of the more important present-day social problems, describing briefly the great governmental and social institutions of such society, and pointing out the relation of all these to the problem of education for citizenship in a democracy. The book is intended for the beginner, and for that great mass of teachers in service who have had but a high-school education and are lacking in social and political conceptions. Arranged in a series of Lessons, rather than chapters; supplemented by a few simple questions, to bring out the main thought and apply the lessons; and further equipped with lists of selected readings and topics for study and report."—Introd.

"As an effort to organize a body of social doctrine and information, the book is not particularly successful. But as an attempt to meet the immediate problem of instructing teachers in training who have but fifty hours for the study of the problems of society and government the book will prove useful." E. B. Reuter

+ — Educ R 67:174 Mr '24 300w

Reviewed by C. V. Good

School R 32:236 Mr '24 450w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Sard Harker. 412p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Heinemann]

24-25643

"Ships, the sea and the jungle, burning deserts and icy mountains, murder, lust and intrigue on a tropical stage—Mr. Masefield works in Sard Harker with much the same material as Joseph Conrad, but to other ends. Two souls are destined for one another, a girl and a strong, silent Englishman, first officer in a clipper. A secular train of bloody events, including a revolution and the establishment of a dictatorship, in the fulness of time sends the hero, who has been warned by dreams to be ready, to a certain house to tell the girl that she is in danger. He does not know the nature of the danger, which in fact is a plot by a magician, who personifies the powers of evil, to abduct the girl. But he gives the warning, misses his ship, and is carried blindly to the final rescue through a series of trials that test his manhood to the utmost. Nothing but his dream-knowledge pulls him through."—New Statesman

Booklist 21:153 Ja '25

"If we regard 'Sard Harker' as Masefield probably intended we should, as a single love story continuously developed, we shall be disappointed, no doubt; but if we regard it as a modern Odyssey, as a series of adventures and mishaps which have come to one indomitable man in his wanderings, then we shall like it very much indeed." S. L. Rich

+ — Boston Transcript p3 N 1 '24 2350w

Reviewed by E. A. Niles

Ind 113:550 D 20 '24 280w

"'Sard Harker' will not live; it will not go down as a great novel, or even as a great romance. Masefield has drunk a little too freely of the milk of Paradise. But the yarn—yes, that will have to be the final designation—must not be missed. Assuredly it must not be missed." P. A. Hutchison

— + Int Bk R p17 D '24 1600w

"'Sard Harker' is a grand, exciting book with no 'arty' nonsense in it, a book for he-men . . . but he-men with intelligence." L: Bromfield

+ Lit R p3 N 1 '24 780w

"Mr. Masefield is a rare author who owns both an inspired imagination and a broad background of powerful life; and these combine to give a dreadful actuality to . . . the places and people and pictures that haunt Sard's tortured pilgrimage through the mountains. In richness of material, in sheer abundance, the book is an amazing one." Helen Goodspeed

+ New Repub 41:152 D 31 '24 550w

Reviewed by J: Franklin

New Statesman 24:81 O 25 '24 450w

"'Sard Harker' is written with verve and salt. It has the relish for rough life and the gusto of Smollett. Life has been poured into the pages of this book in beautiful prose, in which Masefield has caught up the clash of human passion and the loveliness and fierce beauty of nature. Mr. Masefield has told with remarkable felicity an exciting and adventurous story against the most picturesque setting. It is the dream romance told as a little epic."

+ N Y Times p8 O 26 '24 1200w

"The incidents of the book are well invented; but the plot, with its visions and mysterious messages at the beginning is painfully manufactured rather than truly imagined." R. D. Townsend

+ — Outlook 138:602 D 10 '24 180w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 138:451 N 1 '24 750w

"The sustained brilliance and honesty of this narrative is amazing. Honesty, I call it, for Mr. Masefield never overstresses the horrors and never delays the culmination of disasters by spinning out the incident; all follows naturally and convincingly as if it were in truth a journal of adventure. And every subsidiary character who so much as pops up his head into the narrative is firmly and energetically drawn." H. A.

+ Spec 133:568 O 18 '24 1000w

"The core of the writing of it is the athletic economy and directness, which, starting on the first page as a matter-of-fact precision, are able to take in the extremes of imagination, the wildest scenes, and the most dreadful sufferings without a sign of effort or of relapse from poise. You must have greatness of mind, and greatness of art as well, to be capable of telling a simple adventure story about simple people in simple sentences, and making of the whole a great heroic tale."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p647 O 16 '24 1200w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Taking of Helen, and other prose selections. 169p $1.60 Macmillan

828 24-9283

The title piece is the story of the flight of Helen of Troy with Paris, in a prose rendering. This is followed by a few of the poet's letters from America, a talk on play-writing, and an essay on fox-hunting which tells how he came to write his poem Reynard the Fox.

Booklist 21:17 O '24

Bookm 59:747 Ag '24 180w

English J 13:684 N '24 30w

"'The Taking of Helen' is exquisitely told." E. A. Weeks

+ Ind 113:20 Jl 5 '24 760w

"This, we regret to say, is a padded book. The title piece is excellent, very nearly the best Masefield. The other prose selections are disappointing. These are not the best Masefield."

+ — Lit R p793 My 31 '24 120w

"It would be interesting could one know by what processes of the mind and the imagination John Masefield came to write the little book to which he gives the title 'The Taking of Helen,' a book that is destined to live as one of the rarities of English literature. But it will live only for the elect."

+ N Y Times p18 N 11 '23 870w

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 200w

"Having reached the end of one of the most perfect stories produced in our own time, one regrets that other things of less value should have been added just to make the volume thick enough and costly enough for advantageous commercial handling."

+ — Outlook 138:240 Je 11 '24 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:373 Jl '24

"It is not Greek or heroic in atmosphere, but exquisitely simple, delicate and lovely."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 27 '24 800w

MASON, ALFRED EDWARD WOODLEY. House of the arrow. 311p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

24-23087

Jim Frobisher, junior member of a prominent London law-firm, and M. Hanaud, famous French detective, had a very difficult task to perform. Mrs Harlow, a wealthy client of Frobisher's firm, had died, apparently a natural death. Suddenly, Betty, Mrs Harlow's niece, was charged with the murder of her aunt. The body was exhumed and while no trace of poison was found, M. Hanaud makes the astounding statement: "Madame Harlow was murdered in this house." And in time the famous detective's words were proved and the guilty one captured.

MASON, A. E: W.—Continued

"It is very long, unusually long for a mystery story, but it never drags for a single instant, and at the end all the tiny incidents fit perfectly into place, making the picture complete."

+ Int Bk R p821 O '24 500w

"The large body of readers already familiar with Mr. Mason's work do not need to be told that it is excellent in its finish, but this is perhaps the most highly polished, the most carefully worked over of any of his stories. It is beyond doubt the best detective story of this year's crop, to date." Harvey Parrish

+ Lit R p12 S 27 '24 550w

"A well-imagined and well-contrived mystery story."

+ N Y Times p16 D 21 '24 600w

N Y Tribune p10 O 12 '24 650w

Outlook 138:298 O 22 '24 70w

"Plot and character are often a badly matched pair in double harness: Mr. Mason handles them so that the drive is not only exciting but full of various interest."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p512 Ag 21 '24 340w

MASON, ARTHUR. Cook and the captain bold. 217p $2 Atlantic monthly

24-7948

Ten short stories of the sea. The Chanteyman tells the story of a young lad who shipped as sailor on the Earl of Devon. Because he could not stand rough usage the crew had nothing but contempt for him, but twice in times of stress his singing of old sea chanteys saved the occasion, and thus in some small measure he gained a reputation. Contents: The captain; Lobster-creels; The captain's wife; The ship; Sailors' psychology; The sailmaker; The bo'sun; The wreckmaster; The donkeyman's Christmas; The chanteyman.

"Mr. Mason is himself a sailor, the deep and sure knowledge of ships and of the sea is his. In addition, he can tell of what he knows, and tell it well." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '24 350w

Cleveland p52 Jl '24

"His yarns, decidedly original as they are, run true, or should we say sail true, to the recognized Jacobs form. In all, one finds the well-rounded narrative; in all, a like Dickensian twist in characterization, and in all, the salty savor of a thoroughly sea-going vocabulary."

N Y Times p19 Ap 13 '24 880w

"One of the unique charms of the volume is that it tells of American sailors on American ships. We have grown too accustomed to taking our sea stories in imported wrappings. It is good to find a document of an American sailor of this generation." Morris Gilbert

+ N Y Tribune p25 Je 8 '24 700w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

MASON, CAROLINE (ATWATER) (MRS JOHN HENRY MASON). High way. 382p $2 Revell

24-3171

"It is the story of the conflicts and difficulties Hardy Shannon meets when, after studying to be an engineer, disgusted by materialism everywhere, he decides to devote his life to the ministry. His father belongs to the old order of ministers, avoiding anything that might cause him to deflect from set opinions, while the son, and his mother too, welcome new ideas and tests. Despite destructive criticism, Hardy's faith remains steadfast. Perhaps this is because he does not make reason the ultimate test of religion, leaving something to be accounted for through faith."—Springf'd Republican

"This is a novel whose merit lies in a curiously healthy commonplaceness. It is much too long and again and again the characters still maintaining their puppet-like quality show a tendency to tumble over one another in confusion. Still Mrs. Mason knows a good deal about human nature and her novel's appeal based as it is on a religion motive cannot help being noted by her readers, who, being commonplace themselves, may appreciate her story."

— + Boston Transcript p5 Ja 26 '24 200w

"A plea gentle, intelligent, and impressive. For this writer does not waste herself in resentment, or contempt of those who do not agree with her. And her story and people are real enough—that is, give us a sufficient sense of reality—to be worth knowing for their own sakes." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 112:104 F 16 '24 900w

Ind 112:130 Mr 1 '24 30w

N Y Times p16 Ja 13 '24 550w

"The spiritual import of 'The High Way' will carry the reader's interest unbrokenly but the general reader will enjoy the romance and bits of modern social life Mrs Atwater so well knows how to weave into her picture."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 9 '24 550w

MASON, WILLIAM LESLEY, comp. Troublesome words and how to use them. 451p $1.50 Sully

428.3 English language 24-2030

A popular handbook containing words which are commonly found troublesome as to spelling, pronunciation, accent, syllabication or use. The words given in the book are arranged in groups according to the peculiarity of each class of words, while at the end of the book they are all brought together in an alphabetic index.

Booklist 20:326 Je '24

"The book, notwithstanding small errors to be found in it, will be very useful to most writers and students as a hand desk book. And the author deserves praise for his purpose and effort to improve the spoken and written use of English among Americans."

+ — N Y Times p22 F 3 '24 500w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 20w

Wis Lib Bul 20:92 Ap '24

MASSINGHAM, HAROLD JOHN. In praise of England. 237p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]

914.2 England—Description and travel. Nature

These chapters deal with aspects of nature in England in different places at different times of the year. They are keenly sensitive to the deeper beauties discoverable only by the loving eye and to the mystic harmony between man and nature. Contents: Branscombe; The cliffs; The colour of life; Old King Cole; Stonehenge; A golden age; Mendip; Antiquity; The bass rock; Flowers of June; Scoulton mere; The sleeping beauty; Cornish wilds; Maiden castle; Treeology; London gossip; The serpent in the garden.

"Whether he is describing the strange and ancient lure of Stonehenge or the bird life of the London parks, he is equally at home. Each chapter opens a vista into some charm of England." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 19 '24 800w

"Easy and pleasant to read and always full of information." Robert Graves

+ Nation and Ath 35:723 S 13 '24 800w

"There is both wisdom and humor in Mr. Massingham's book and these aspects allied with the keenness of vision and precision of description and poetic implications make it one of the most charming nature books that have been published in a long time. It is, in ensemble, an introduction to the rare possibilities of man's relationship with nature on a plane of intimacy that somehow closely approaches the aspects of art."

+ N Y Times p16 N 30 '24 1250w

Reviewed by H: W. Nevinson

N Y Tribune p4 D 21 '24 1800w

"These papers combine the naturalist and the imaginist, and they gain by being simpler in style than some of the author's work. His full mind tends occasionally to much ornament."
+ Sat R 138:220 Ag 30 '24 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p522 Ag 28 '24 720w

MASSON, THOMAS LANSING, ed. Tom Masson's annual for 1924. 353p il $2 Doubleday
817

The second annual collection of what Mr Masson considers the best humorous light verse, sketches, stories, jokes and anecdotes of the year.

"'Tom Masson's Annual' should be particularly useful for a dentist's waiting room." Newman Levy
+ Lit R p18 N 15 '24 550w

"They are richly humorous, all of them, except such as are explosively witty, and the book can be warranted to furnish from one to half a dozen laughs in every one of its three hundred-odd pages."
+ N Y Times p18 N 16 '24 380w

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall
N Y Tribune p11 D 21 '24 500w

MASTERS, DAVID. Wonders of salvage. 229p il $2.50 Dodd
910.4 Salvage. Shipwrecks 24-25432

An account of the wonderful feats of salvors and wreckers, beginning with the early hunts for Spanish Armada and pirate treasure. Among the exploits described are the national treasure-hunt for the White Star liner Laurentic with its immensely valuable cargo of specie, and the raising of other victims of the German submarine campaign. The methods and apparatus of the salvage expert are described and the work of the salvage section of the British Admiralty during and since the war. The salvage operations are illustrated by 48 photographs.

"He has many wonders to tell that will be new to most of his readers, and they are illustrated by an admirable series of photographs of actual salvage operations."
+ Nation and Ath 35:602 Ag 9 '24 90w

New Statesman 23:604 Ag 30 '24 430w

"The most imaginative and inventive writer of sea-adventure fiction would be hard pressed to equal the daring, peril, romance and marvels of these true tales."
+ N Y Times p23 O 12 '24 450w

Reviewed by Arthur Warner
N Y Tribune p9 O 5 '24 700w

Outlook 138:380 N 5 '24 30w

"His book is a worthy tribute to one of the most romantic of peace-time professions."
+ Sat R 138:267 S 13 '24 550w

Sat R of Lit 1:270 N 8 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p445 Jl 17 '24 1100w

MASTERS, EDGAR LEE. Mirage. 427p $2.50 Boni & Liveright
24-7318

"Mirage" carries on the story of "Skeeters Kirby" (Book Review Digest, 1923) for another decade of his life. Kirby is resentful of American materialism and has a vague longing for beauty and freedom of soul and action but he is a sensualist and his aspirations are feeble. The men and women who surround him are a sorry lot. The book is chiefly concerned with his relations with four women, and especially with his infatuation for Becky Norris, which long holds him captive. At forty-two where the book leaves him, the muddle of his life has not cleared up or its meaning begun to appear. It is still a mirage.

Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 1000w

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 25 '24 550w

"'Mirage' reads like the novel of a man whose soul is cankering. It is for those men (and possibly women) whose mood it mirrors." Harry Salpeter
— Int Bk R p552 Je '24 780w

"'Mirage' is a muddled story. . . topheavy in construction, vulgar in thought, provincial in expression, and preposterously lacking in humor."
— Lit R p762 My 17 '24 440w

"His story is description, invective, warning. As such, and also as a statement of a man's wisdom wrung from bitter experience, it has eloquence, significance, and power." Ludwig Lewisohn
— + Nation 118:616 My 28 '24 750w

"The style of the Mirage is a long, long way from the restraints of the Spoon River etching, from the flexible vigor of Domesday Book, from the self-effacing simplicity of Mitch Miller. It is just bad style. . . As to the illumination of sex relations, a recital of naive fornications reveals nothing fresh." Robert Herrick
— New Repub 39:138 Je 25 '24 750w

"'Mirage' is a strange and disquieting novel. If its studied naïveté of narrative, as with so many of the new writers, sometimes degenerates into baldness, it is full of the precious quality of glamour. But its world is a world seen through the tired eyes of voluptuaries sated with indulgence to whom the bracing effect of even occasional self-denial never suggests itself. Sadness pervades it."
— + N Y Times p9 Mr 30 '24 750w

"It is a courageous and beautiful achievement in fiction. It is passionately honest and convincing. It contains some searching and impartial character depiction. The comparison of Mr. Masters as a novelist with Theodore Dreiser is rather inevitable. They are both tortured and bewildered men, fumbling for beauty, serenity and meaning in life, and voicing in their novels a very prevalent spirit of the times." Burton Rascoe
+ — N Y Tribune p26 Ap 20 '24 800w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Outlook 137:31 My 7 '24 500w

"'Mirage' like many others of its kind, is possessed of blemishing absurdities. And yet the book was written by a poet. When he remembers his theme in the last chapter, and reflects on the riot of the preceding pages, he is capable of simple and moving prose. The reader must be profoundly conscious when he attains the last page that America is responsible for the best as well as the worst the book contains."
— + Springf'd Republican p7a My 11 '24 480w

MASTERS, EDGAR LEE. New Spoon river. 368p $2.50 Boni & Liveright
811 24-23824

Tho the first "Spoon River anthology" was published only ten years ago it is a new Spoon River which appears in this second collection of epitaphs, "a new set of feelings, ideals, and convictions." Spoon River has grown and, like the rest of the country, became standardized and commercialized.

"The work is important enough to make comparisons with the old 'Spoon River' idle. If much of it has been said before, most of it still needs the saying. Moreover, now and again through the book, the social critic yields his place to the simple poet, and there result passages of both depth and beauty." E. A. Niles
+ Ind 113:523 D 13 '24 160w

"No other book since Walt Whitman's 'Leaves of Grass' has revealed so significantly the essential genius of American poetry. These poems are of the flesh and blood of America and of her soil. Yet they are universal; yet they are not of their day alone and generation.

MASTERS, EDGAR LEE—Continued
I cannot conceive of their being forgotten; as long as the English-speaking races live they must endure." May Sinclair
+ Int Bk R p32 D '24 800w

Reviewed by Robert Nichols
Int Bk R p32 D '24 1050w

" 'The New Spoon River' noticeably strengthens the conviction that here is the poet's forte, that in this method of capturing life in cameo, so to speak, his essential value as a poet is to be found. He is bound here by a necessary brevity that concentrates his observations of mortal existence. And because of this concentration his revelations plunged the deeper into the reader's consciousness." H. S. Gorman
+ Lit R p2 S 27 '24 950w

"A book decidedly inferior to 'The Spoon River Anthology,' a book comparatively deficient in drama, in irony, in fun, a book less universal in value—the paradox is familiar—than its truly provincial predecessor. . . It would be a mistake, however, to suppose that the new anthology is without virtue. Bad or good, it manages to be continuously interesting; its energy, as nearly always with Mr. Masters, is unbounded. There is wealth in the episodes, there is zest in their telling, and plainly there is still unusual hitting power in the poet's blunt free verse." Mark Van Doren
+ — Nation 119:388 O 8 '24 550w

"Life and Death have always been fair game for poets, but these two, plus politics, the local bank, scandal, war, millionaires, divorce and illegitimacy, are the fair game of leader writers and preachers as well. Mr. Masters is a little of all three—too much the preacher to be quite a poet, too much the poet to be a parson, too much the pulpit-poet to be a really good editorial writer." Robert Littell
— + New Repub 40:148 O 8 '24 900w

"In the world of letters there is some indefinite line which sets off genius from mere competency. In 'The New Spoon River' Mr. Masters seldom crosses to the side of genius. He writes of these folk with instinctive understanding, rarely praising or blaming to excess, and likewise with a fine sense of social values. The epitaphs throb with worldly import. But although both the manner and the matter of 'The Spoon River Anthology' appear again in the 'The New Spoon River,' the ecstasy of poetry has softened."
N Y Times p6 S 28 '24 950w

Reviewed by J: Erskine
N Y Tribune p2 O 5 '24 950w
Outlook 138:731 D 31 '24 160w

Reviewed by O. W. Firkins
Sat R of Lit 1:178 O 11 '24 1600w

MATEER, FLORENCE. Unstable child; an interpretation of psychopathy as a source of unbalanced behavior in abnormal and troublesome children. 471p $2.75 (10s 6d) Appleton

136.76 Children, Abnormal and backward. Juvenile delinquency. Psychology, Pathological 24-2704

The book deals with the problem of delinquent and troublesome children, of children who may test normal yet whose behavior is erratic, bright children who show peculiar inability in some directions, children in whom the mental age test has revealed no reason for abnormal tendencies. The study of such deviation from normal is known as psychopathy and it is to its practice by the clinical psychologist—both diagnosis and remedial treatment—that the last half of the book is devoted.

Reviewed by J. H. S. Bossard
Ann Am Acad 115:253 S '24 450w

Booklist 20:324 Je '24

"A copy of The Unstable Child should be in the hands of every Clinical Examiner, not because of the facts with which it deals, or the arguments which it presents; but because of the attitude which it reveals. Doctor Mateer is one Psychologist who has reached full maturity in her expression of breadth and tolerance of opinion. Her judgments of the sort of person needed for clinical work is definite and clear, without being dogmatic, or without indicating personal bias. Her knowledge of the social tendencies underlying the problems of the school is unusual, and her desire to make use of society as a means of aid to the child is always evident." G. G. Ide
+ Educ R 68:50 Je '24 350w

"The whole book is invaluable to the clinical psychologist because of its clear statement of a rapidly developing point of view and its illuminating case studies."
+ Lit R p766 My 17 '24 280w

"The treatment throughout is stimulating, suggestive, and constructive. The volume should be enthusiastically received by progressive teachers, administrative officers, social workers, and lay readers." W. C. Reavis
+ School R 32:388 My '24 900w

"Dr. Mateer's book is a fairly complete manual for the administration of a psychological clinic, and there has been no book covering this important field as such. Furthermore, it contains the first review of psychometric methods that is at once broad and critical. These features themselves suffice to put it in the 'indispensable' class for clinical psychologists for some time to come. . . The style of the book is more vivacious than is usually associated with such themes. At the same time there is no tendency to minimize the difficulties of the problems, or to arouse exaggerated expectations. The viewpoint is broad, and there are several entertaining philosophical reflections." F. L. Wells
+ Science 60:294 S 26 '24 630w

"Contains valuable matter for anyone working with abnormal children and some chapters of interest to all teachers and to general social workers."
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:91 Ap '24

MATHEWS, BASIL JOSEPH. Wilfred Grenfell, the master-mariner; a life of adventure on sea and ice. 178p il $1.50 Doran [3s 6d Partridge]

B or 92 Grenfell, Wilfred Thomason 24-23166

A boys' life of the Labrador doctor which emphasizes the adventurous side of his work. Going back to the days of his boyhood it shows how the Grenfell love for the sea and his boyish zest for adventure led him to become doctor to the deep-sea fishermen of Labrador and Newfoundland.

"His narrative is sometimes carelessly written, as to style, but it is always graphic and appealing."
— + N Y Times p21 N 2 '24 260w
N Y World p9e N 30 '24 100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p526 Ag 28 '24 80w

MATHEWS, JOHN MABRY. American state ² government. 660p $3.75 (16s) Appleton

353 State governments 24-24058

The professor of political science in the University of Illinois makes a minute analysis of the various state governments within the Union. Beginning with a brief account of the place of the states in the Union he presents an orderly survey of state constitutions, state powers and limitations, legislative organization and procedure, the powers of the state executive, state administrative organization, the organization and work of the state courts and the relation of state and local governments. There are chapters also on suffrage, parties and elections, on the direct primary and on the initiative, referendum and recall.

"For college and university classes which are studying state government . . . this is a reliable and serviceable volume. It may be doubted whether the needs of the general reader will be equally well served. Our general reader wants not merely facts, but also food for the imagination. He wants 'causes' to support, and arguments with which to support them. But the author has been so wary in expressing his own opinion, and so cautious in criticism, that the 'causes' to which he is devoted are often implied rather than expressed." H. N. Holcombe

+ — N Y Tribune p5 Ja 11 '25 550w

"It is not so much an argumentative as an expository work; though of course exposition is sometimes the most effective argument. The author surveys intelligently and appreciatively the various State Governments." W. F. Johnson

+ No Am 220:368 D '24 210w

Outlook 138:341 O 29 '24 10w

"There is much to interest English readers in this book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p779 N 20 '24 300w

MATHEWS, SHAILER, and others. Contributions of science to religion. 427p il $3 Appleton 2

215 Religion and science 24-28230

The dean of the Divinity school of the University of Chicago contributes the first and the last four of the eighteen chapters in this volume. Each of the other thirteen chapters is written by an authority in the branch of science of which he writes: Robert A. Millikan on the structure of matter; John M. Coulter on plant life; Edwin B. Frost on the structure of the cosmos; Charles B. Davenport on eugenics, and others. In these scientific chapters there is neither religion nor theology, simply a brief statement of our present knowledge in these various fields of investigation. In Dr Mathews's four chapters of summing-up he discusses the harmony between the scientific and religious field of interest and the service that science may render faith.

Boston Transcript D 20 '24 200w

New Repub 41:123 D 24 '24 1000w

"The hard-headed thinking man, who has watched the encroachments of science on religion will welcome these papers."

N Y Times p24 N 2 '24 170w

MAUPASSANT, GUY DE. Day and night stories; [tr. by Storm Jameson; ed. by Ernest Boyd] (Collected novels and stories) 246p $2 Knopf

Contents: The father; Confessing; The necklace; Happiness; The old man; A coward; The drunkard; A vendetta; Coco; The hand; The tramp; A parricide; The little one; Guillemot rock; Timbuctoo; A true story; Farewell; A memory; The confession; A humble drama; Mister Belhomme's beast; For sale; The unknown; The secret; The christening; Indiscretion; A madman.

"We do not recall that the macabre art of Guy de Maupassant has ever been more effectively displayed than in 'Day and Night Stories.' "

+ Bookm 60:100 S '24 180w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Ariel, the life of Shelley; tr. by Ella D'Arcy. 336p $2.50 Appleton

B or 92 Shelley, Percy Bysshe 24-9687

This life of Shelley is an advance on the newest methods of biography. It might almost be called a novel, but while the presentation is dramatic the facts are true and the words, also, that are put in Shelley's mouth. The title expresses M. Maurois's conception of him. Shelley appears more as an engaging sprite than as a responsible human being and his absurdities, extravagances and utter impracticability are revealed with an irony that is sometimes cruel. There is no criticism of his poetry, but much about his amours. Of the friends of Shelley who move thru the narrative Byron, figuring as Don Juan, gets the least sympathy.

"The narrative thrills and throbs with all the magic that attaches to one of the most fascinating spirits that ever appeared in this mixed and troubled world. The ideal Shelley shines everywhere in the pages of M. Maurois, and he ennobles our dull days by making us feel that the best thing in life is the undying effort to make it different." Gamaliel Bradford

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Jl '24 500w

Reviewed by J: Donelson

Bookm 59:740 Ag '24 220w

"Maurois shows no preconceived opinion of the man, any more than would a novelist, unfolding day by day and event by event his hero's existence. . . Maurois has all the sense of humor that Shelley lacked. He can show the utter absurdity of Shelley's wild ideas, yet show them with infinite respect and compassion." Clifford Orr

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 26 '24 2950w

Cleveland p80 S '24

"His attitude may be French but the portrait that he has drawn is the work of an artist." G. O. Mudge

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 13 '24 880w

Ind 112:262 My 10 '24 290w

Reviewed by O. W. Firkins

Lit R p884 Jl 12 '24 1050w

"M. Maurois has set himself to secure a small triumph, and let us at once admit he has secured it. He has written a biography of Shelley that can be read as easily and amusedly as a novel, with the additional satisfaction to his readers that they are studying history at the same time." Robert Graves

+ Nation and Ath 34:891 Mr 22 '24 500w

"M. Maurois has discovered a new kind of biography, and it is one which is sure to be imitated. He has written a book about Shelley which the reader can consider as a novel of which Shelley is the hero, or as a biography of Shelley. The narrative is very well done. The only general criticism is that, while M. Maurois's portrait of Shelley is not inconsistent with his being a great poet, those who had not already read Shelley's poems would hardly think it probable. This is due to the tone of the narrative; M. Maurois tells the story with sympathetic, ironical amusement. The result for us is like watching dancers from afar through a shut window—movements without music, the agitations of life without accompanying emotions."

+ — New Statesman 22:304 D 15 '23 1300w

"M. Maurois places Shelley for us faithfully in time and space." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p22 My 11 '24 1300w

"Unquestionably the dramatic biography is the fashion, and 'Ariel' will receive its due share of popularity. It will be read by many who never read Trelawny's rich and discursive book. And M. Maurois has done English readers a service in writing of Shelley without moral regard for the lapses of decorum which studded his life. His book is extraordinary not in the way it has been done but in that it has never been done before." Laurence Stallings

+ N Y World p13 Ap 25 '24 950w

"The book is wholly delightful. It is true biography, but not formal biography; it is biography that reads like a novel." Ethel Parton

+ Outlook 137:515 Jl 30 '24 460w

St Louis p355 O '24

Reviewed by Martin Armstrong

Spec 132:334 Mr 1 '24 700w

"As a portrayal of the life of Shelley it is as authentic as it is spirited."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a My 11 '24 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

Reviewed by Miguel Arce

World Tomorrow 7:351 N '24 550w

MAVITY, MRS NANCY BARR. Dinner of herbs. 54p $1.25 Seltzer
811 23-16490

The first group of poems in this little book addressed to Nancy in her first year, are poems of womanhood. The others group themselves around nature, love and friendship.

"Some of the verses here are rhymed, but the majority are in the free style, and they comprise the best possible refutation to those who can find nothing of beauty in the modern form of expression. All of these poems have a quiet simplicity, and the color is a matter of harmonious tinting rather than vivid splashing."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '24 350w

"Excepting when Mrs. Mavity speaks of the sensations of maternity and motherhood, she has very little to say that is particularly moving in substance or beautiful in phraseology."
— + Lit R p498 F 2 '24 250w

"The poems are interesting, if limpid and saccharine." P. S. Wagstaff
— + N Y Tribune p18 Ja 6 '24 70w

MAVITY, MRS NANCY BARR. Hazard. 311p $2 Harper
24-4870

Born with the spirit of a tomboy, Tracy Everson is always at odds with the conventional standards of her home town. She is eager for the joy of life, seeing adventure always just around the corner and tho the reality does not always measure up to her expectations, she never loses her sense of humor and independence. She is happy in her marriage to Oliver Garnett because he agrees with her ideas of partnership and understands her need for retaining her own individuality. When Oliver is forced to return to his home town to save his father's business, Tracy's instinct for creative work clashes with the petty social ambitions of the community. Good fortune comes their way when they are enabled to leave for New York as partners in a new publishing house and Tracy's belief in the modern marriage is vindicated.

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 19 '24 450w

"'Hazard's sugar-coating of its thesis takes the form of another of those somewhat tedious autobiographical, biographical, biological novels done in the feminine gender. . . This 'partnership' remedy for the disease of marriage seems singularly chilly and unsatisfactory." J: Carter
— Lit R p688 Ap 19 '24 600w

"A more than ordinarily entertaining novel. It is unimportant as a work of fiction but it is carried through with some skill and a deal of excellent literary ability."
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 23 '24 780w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 400w

"The narrative is a direct, quiet and sincere account of normal, likable persons of the younger generation, who some way can be 'modern' without living a life of jazz."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 120w

Wis Lib Bul 20:126 My '24

MAXEY, CHESTER COLLINS. Outline of municipal government. 388p $3 Doubleday
352 Municipal government 24-10822

An outgrowth of the author's teaching at Western Reserve university, this volume is intended primarily as a college text but will serve equally as an outline for the general reader. A bibliography follows each chapter.

Am City 30:69 Je '24 170w
Booklist 21:94 D '24

"Dr. Maxey has presented merely an outline of the subject, which is comparatively easy of assimilation in its compactness." F. P. H.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 14 '24 280w
Cleveland p93 D '24
Ind 113:204 S 27 '24 600w
Outlook 138:64 S 10 '24 20w
St Louis p403 D '24

MAXEY, CHESTER COLLINS, ed. Readings in municipal government. 627p $3.50 Doubleday
352 Municipal government 24-10823

This volume contains various charts, surveys, pamphlets and documents relating to problems of municipal affairs. It is divided into three sections: Municipal government; Municipal functions; Municipal finance. The documents are arranged in chapter groups to accompany the author's "An outline of municipal government."

Cleveland p93 D '24
R of Rs 70:111 Jl '24 50w

MAXIM, HUDSON. Reminiscences and comments as reported by Clifton Johnson. 350p il $5 Doubleday
B or 92

The preface explains that there are three famous Maxim inventors about whom the public is somewhat confused: Hudson Maxim, inventor of smokeless cannon powder and high explosives; his brother, Hiram Stevens Maxim, inventor of the Maxim automatic gun; and the latter's son, Hiram Percy Maxim, inventor of the Maxim silencer. This book is a biography of the first of these, and the material for it has been gathered in a long series of autobiographic talks which Mr Johnson has reported from notes made at the time. The talks provide a natural and informal account of the man and his work, his opinions and ideals.

Reviewed by Edmund Noble
Boston Transcript p4 N 22 '24 2000w

"Mr. Johnson prefaces each chapter with a foreword in which he tells with exactness and with dramatic and colorful picturing the story of some day or evening, or breakfast or drive in which Mr. Maxim dominated the scene, and unconsciously gave effective expression to his salient and individual characteristics. The result is a singularly lifelike, vivid portrayal of a unique personality."
+ N Y Times p23 D 14 '24 450w
N Y World p9e D 21 '24 100w
Springf'd Republican p7a D 21 '24 1750w

MAXWELL, GORDON S. Authors' Thames; a literary ramble through the Thames valley. 338p $4.50 Brentano's [12s 6d C. Palmer]
914.2 Thames river. Authors, English. Literary journeys

"The Thames, in John Burns's famous phrase, is 'liquid history.' Mr. Maxwell has provided us here with a Thesaurus of the river's literary associations from Julius Caesar to Jerome—the English Jerome. He not only records its connection with the lives of distinguished English writers who have made their homes in the Thames Valley but transcribes the numerous allusions to it in literature of every variety. He recalls such incidents as Becky Sharp's throwing Johnson's Dictionary out of the window of the coach when she left Miss Pinkerton's Academy on Chiswick Mall. The book covers only the stretches of the river between Putney and Windsor but Mr. Maxwell takes into account its tributaries also, and is thus able to bring in Box Hill and George Meredith."—Nation

"The very fact that this country is so 'rich in association' accounts no doubt for the encyclopædic and Baedeker-like quality of the volume. Mr. Maxwell has, however, handled a vast amount of material in a graceful manner, and the charming sketches of Lucilla S. Maxwell which illumine the text help to produce the illusion that one is on English soil."
+ Bookm 60:350 N '24 210w

"The compilation is a useful one, and the wonder is that no one has undertaken the task before."
+ Nation 119:450 O 22 '24 170w

New Statesman 23:476 Jl 26 '24 400w

N Y Times p12 O 12 '24 1100w

"The text, which is written in a clear and straightforward, though not brilliant, style, is pleasantly supplemented by drawings from the pen of the author's mother, and the whole leaves one with the feeling that this is precisely one of the excursions one must return to Europe to make."

+ N Y Tribune p10 O 19 '24 360w

N Y World p7e S 21 '24 220w

"The tone of these reminiscences is hearty and jovial; there is less effort to present the characters themselves, than to make gossip of them. Mr. Maxwell has the romantic touch; he gilds what he sees, and his Thames is not so much a river as a scroll bearing famous names."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:253 N 1 '24 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p359 Je 5 '24 500w

MAXWELL, MARIUS. Stalking big game with a camera in equatorial Africa, with a monograph on the African elephant; preface by Sir Sidney F. Harmer. 311p il $9 Century

599 Photography of animals. Elephants. Zoology—Africa 24-25800

"A thrilling study at close range of the elephants, the giraffe, the hippopotamus, the rhinoceros, the buffalo, and the zebra."—Nation

---

Booklist 21:139 Ja '25

"Every page is a sudden joy, for Mr. Maxwell can write, as well as stalk and take photographs."

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 3 '24 320w

"The photographs are among the most brilliant ever taken."

+ Nation 119:550 N 19 '24 30w

"Photographing big game is far finer sport than shooting it. When it is done as Mr. Maxwell does it, it is also more dangerous to the sportsman. The letterpress in his book is excellent, for it describes his experiences with considerable skill, and at not too great a length."

+ Nation and Ath 35:539 Jl 26 '24 320w

"The text of the volume, although the work is primarily a picture book, is as interesting as the illustrations. One needs to read it, indeed, to appreciate the pictures."

+ N Y Times p20 N 23 '24 500w

"Maxwell is the first among African big game photographers to publish his splendid pictures and their interesting story in a manner commensurate with the magnitude of his efforts. His handsome volume, just issued, stands supreme in this field." Herbert Lang

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 4 '25 2150w

Reviewed by L. S. Crandell

N Y Tribune p16 D 7 '24 250w

"When one meets with photographs as interesting as those of Mr. Maxwell, one is inclined to pass lightly over the accompanying text. It would be a great mistake to treat Mr. Maxwell's work thus cavalierly. His observations on the habits of the game are exceedingly interesting, and the accounts of his thrilling adventures with dangerous game are modestly and yet most graphically told." Kermit Roosevelt

+ Sat R of Lit 1:346 D 6 '24 480w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 28 '24 700w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Jl 3 '24 950w

MAXWELL, WILLIAM BABINGTON. Elaine at the gates. 397p $2 Doubleday 24-29530

An intensely emotional story of a proud and sensitive woman in her relations with a masterful and fanatical clergyman of strangely contradictory character, who is at once a brute and a spiritual genius. Elaine agrees to marry Mark Awdrey at the moment when her lover's desertion has left her life empty. They agree that it is to be a marriage in name only. She throws herself whole-heartedly into his work in the London slums and proves a most effective partner in the cure of souls. Her feeling for Mark changes from dislike and shrinking to respect for his spiritual zeal, while his for her gradually develops into an overmastering passion which leaves her at the mercy of the brute in him. But not for long. The man's soul gets the upper hand of his flesh and he voluntarily releases Elaine to marry her old lover, now happily free from the toils of a degrading marriage.

"He has the gift of making conversation between his characters, but too frequently the dialogue is verbose and commonplace, and again and again it retards the progress of the story. Many readers who admired 'Spinster of this Parish' may be interested in 'Elaine at the Gates,' but they will certainly be disappointed by it."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 1 '24 400w

"A good book to read at leisure—a particularly good book to read aloud." G. C.

+ Ind 113:492 D 6 '24 200w

"'Elaine at the Gates' is a worthy successor to 'Spinster of This Parish'; which, as those who know Mr. Maxwell's work will realize, is to praise it very highly indeed." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p58 D '24 1250w

"'Elaine at the Gates' is an eminently readable and enjoyable story but it is not up to the standard of 'Spinster of This Parish' although it has many flashes of Maxwell at his best. Elaine is an arresting heroine . . . but the interest of the reader will center on the Rev. Mark Awdrey, one of the best drawn characters in recent fiction. It is an exciting and moving story and we heartily recommend it to those who enjoy a meaty novel." W. O. Tewson

+ Lit R p3 N 1 '24 530w

"On the thread of a plot that is neither uninteresting nor particularly new, Mr. Maxwell has strung a sequence of well-turned episodes with the skill of a good craftsman. The work is competent, deft and transparently sincere. In fact, it is so good that one is aware of a regret that it should not be even a little great."

+ N Y Tribune p13 O 26 '24 210w

"The Reverend Mark Awdrey is a character, very odd, very difficult to reveal, so clearly seen and firmly set down that he can neither be denied nor shaken off. 'Elaine at the Gates' does not always win our ready assent; but it does a difficult thing well, and it has people in it that will stay in the memory."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p610 O 2 '24 500w

MAY, EARL CHAPIN. Cuddy of the white tops. 273p $1.75 Appleton 24-14017

A story of circus life, its triumphs and failures, its comedies and tragedies. Clarence Cuddington Cotter, a college senior, has suddenly thrust upon him the proprietorship of a circus—and nothing more, it being the whole of his father's estate. Altho wholly ignorant of the duties which his inheritance involves he secretly leaves town, friends and fiancée, Marjorie Trent, and courageously shoulders his new responsibilities. As a circus owner, there are tense moments for Cuddy. With the assistance of Marion Fortescue, queen of the arena, he reorganizes his staff and puts the business on a firm basis. Then one day the circus appears in his home town. How can he face Marjorie and his friends as the proprietor of the white top? He devises a clever plan and the problem is satisfactorily solved for all concerned.

"Only one who is steeped in circus lore could have written so fascinating a story of the travelling show."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 6 '24 180w

"Mr. May's swift-moving and journalistically smart story of circus life has the merit of giving an excellent and life-like picture of the ways and customs as well as the language of the folk who dwell under canvas." H. B.

MAY, EARL CHAPIN—Continued
+ Lit R p954 Ag 9 '24 200w

"Circus fans and those who love a story of excitement, thrilling adventures and romance, and those who are looking for less serious reading than usual for their Summer vacation, will find this story by Mr. May a well-told, enjoyable one."
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 6 '24 200w
Springf'd Republican p7a D 28 '24 200w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p542 S 4 '24 50w

MAY, EARL CHAPIN. 2000 miles through Chile; the land of more or less. 462p il $3.50 Century
918.3 Chile—Description and travel. Chile—Social life and customs 24-6667

"Chile is the Yankee-land of Spanish America, and 'Two Thousand Miles Through Chile' has to do with the South American Yankees themselves more than the merely superficial aspects likely to be noted by travelers. Each of the 28 chapters deals with some special topic—President Arturo Allessandri, the 'commoner president and strong guiding figure; the nitrate industry which enabled the allies to hold their own until they won the war, and then 'slumped' with disastrous effects upon the prosperity of Chile; mining; the water-power and land concessions said to have been granted Americans, the development of which may mean the transformation of a vast area in the direction of industrialism (the existence of such grants is denied); schools; newspapers; military affairs."—Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p528 Je '24 130w
R of Rs 69:559 My '24 120w

"Mr. May remained long enough and had numerous enough opportunities to study the Chileans intimately, to make his account many-sided and dependable. The style is easy and the illustrations abundant."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 21 '24 200w
Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

MAY, JAMES LEWIS. Anatole France, the man and his work; an essay in critical biography. 262p $3 Dodd [15s Lane]
B or 92 France, Anatole 24-22023

In the first part of Mr May's biographical essay he describes Anatole France's early life, his literary début, his travels in France and abroad. The second part of the book discusses M. France as a novelist, a short-story teller, historian, critic, philosopher and stylist. There is also an epilogue entitled "At La Béchellerie" which gives an account of the author's visit to his home.

"Accurately written, and attractively printed and illustrated, consists almost entirely of panegyric. A sincere love of literature and Gaul, the author of this most interesting essay has been won by the magnetic charm of personality and atmosphere of an illustrious magician of letters." J. B.
— + Cath World 120:567 Ja '25 600w

Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison
Int Bk R p851 N '24 1550w

"Mr. May is the translator of two volumes by the man whom he calls The Master, and his critical study is published uniformly with the standard English edition begun by the house of John Lane. It scarcely deserves the distinction—as perhaps no study which it is possible to write at present would." Mark Van Doren
— Nation 119:497 N 5 '24 700w

"Mr. May's book, pleasantly and simply written as it is, shows signs of inevitable constraint. But it is convenient to have the biographical facts so conveniently together, and, when it comes to criticism, Mr. May provides material for argument."
— + Nation and Ath 35:154 My 3 '24 120w
N Y Times p6 S 28 '24 850w
N Y Tribune p1 O 26 '24 4200w
N Y World p7e S 14 '24 170w
St Louis p416 D '24

"Mr. May's book is a graceful introduction. He maintains our intercourse with his hero on an easy footing. Objection is barely stirred. There is little of over-statement."
+ Sat R 137:437 Ap 26 '24 880w

"Such a method, in the present fashion of subtle and sophisticated biography, is embarrassingly simple. The actual criticism is scanty and, although invariably sincere, not always profound."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p220 Ap 10 '24 850w

MAY, STELLA BURKE (MRS EARL CHAPIN MAY). Men, maidens and mantillas. 362p il $3.50 Century [15s Long]
918 Latin America—Description and travel 24-13524

A book of travel in Mexico, Central and South America. The writer spent a year in these countries, wherever it was possible taking a house or apartment in the native quarter, living the life of the people of the country and speaking their language. She describes people rather than scenes, and especially the women of the countries visited—their rapidly changing conditions and growing independence.

Reviewed by Edmund Candler
Nation and Ath 35:600 Ag 9 '24 300w
New Statesman 23:601 Ag 30 '24 320w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p467 Jl 24 '24 160w

MAYER, CHARLES. Jungle beasts I have captured. 269p il $4 Doubleday
2
799 Trapping. Hunting. Animals—Habits and behavior
24-23642

The author's profession is catching wild animals alive for circuses, zoos, and for gifts of eastern potentates. He tells of catching elephants for a sultan, trapping a two-hundred pound python, netting a rhino and of a great animal drive in Trengganu. He has spent eighteen years in the Malay Peninsula in this adventurous life of animal trapping.

Booklist 21:141 Ja '25

"He is a wonderful narrator and the reader experiences quick-coming shortness of breath many times in the course of these pages."
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8b D 7 '24 220w

"Mr. Mayer is an experienced collector and his thrilling tales are written with a creditable air of restraint." L. S. Crandell
+ N Y Tribune p16 D 7 '24 140w

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Down the big river. 270p il $1.75 Harcourt
24-8257

"The pioneer days of the West is the scene of this story. Tom Lockwood with his parents, while making the trip from Philadelphia to Missouri, fell into the hands of a notorious gang which nearly cost them their lives. During their travels Tom finds an Irish terrier mongrel that proves a great companion to him and by his keen instinct helps him through many tight places." (Boston Transcript) "For boys from nine to sixteen years of age." (Lit R)

Booklist 21:72 N '24
Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 120w

"Mr. Meader knows how to tell a good yarn, and has illustrated his story; so that he doubly displays his talent for the graphic. The old days on the Ohio are great material, and the exciting story gives a really good picture of the epoch."
+ Lit R p731 My 3 '24 180w

"A well-told pioneer story, chockfull of adventures and perils and narrow escapes."
+ N Y Times p16 My 4 '24 270w

MECKLIN, JOHN MOFFAT. Ku Klux klan; a study of the American mind. 244p $1.75 Harcourt
363 Ku Klux klan 24-5783

After a brief statement of the main facts in the revival of the so-called "Invisible Empire" of the Knights of the Ku Klux klan and the rapid expansion of the order since the radical change in its organization in 1920, the author, who is professor of sociology in Dartmouth college, comes to the main object of his study, which is to analyze the Klan psychology and the secret of its appeal. His investigations of the Klan show that it draws its members chiefly from the old American stock living in villages and small towns and its strength from its appeal to ignorance, to ancient hates and prejudices, to the distrust of all things foreign and to the dramatic interest attaching to its weird costumes and spectacular initiations.

"This study is based upon careful and adequate preparation. It is rarely that one finds an account of an organization less than ten years old which is so satisfactory. It frankly opposes the Klan, yet its tone is not bitter, and it gives confidence in the fairness of the judgments, which are freely expressed." C. R. Fish
+ Am Hist R 29:811 Jl '24 300w
Am Pol Sci R 18:650 Ag '24 140w
Booklist 20:284 My '24

"The dweller in the larger city is more or less apathetic to this recurring phenomenon, but he may well heed such a volume as Professor Mecklin's, as well as anyone interested in what has become an issue not easily dismissed from our national life."
Boston Transcript p5 Mr 8 '24 320w
Cleveland p54 Jl '24

"This is, by far, the sanest, most balanced and unbiased study of the present-day Ku Klux movement that has yet appeared." J. G. de R. H.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 Ag 24 '24 2000w

"Professor Mecklin will, we may be sure, be roundly abused for holding [his thesis], and its truth may very probably be heatedly denied, but his exposition of it, disastrous as it is to every pretension of the Klan, nevertheless makes his book one of the most notable contributions to an understanding of the psychology and pathology of the American mind that has appeared for many a day." W: MacDonald
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 16 '24 2150w
Reviewed by Leonard Kline
N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 800w

"His style might be a bit gayer and some of his remarks might be rather more profound, but on the whole his book is illuminating as well as timely." C. J. H. Hayes
+ Pol Sci Q 39:502 S '24 1600w
R of Rs 69:446 Ap '24 120w
Survey 52:251 My 15 '24 240w
Wis Lib Bul 20:145 Je '24

MEDAUGH, FREDERICK WILBUR. Elementary hydraulics. 144p il $2 Van Nostrand
532.5 Hydraulics 24-5444

"An introduction to the subject, requiring no knowledge of higher mathematics. Deals for the most part with flow of water in pipes and conduits, over weirs, and through orifices." —Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:359 Jl '24

MEGROZ, R. L. Walter de la Mare; a biographical and critical study. (Bookman lib.) 303p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
821 De la Mare, Walter John [24-14051]

This first book to deal with the work of Walter de la Mare is an account of the poet as an artist. Fifty pages are given to personal impressions and a brief biography and the rest of the book to a study of his poetry in which the author has been "chiefly at pains to show the poet of dream in a human light . . . and also to contradict the too common belief that he is narrow in range of thought and interests and technique."

Booklist 21:103 D '24

"Highly illuminating, and very readable, biographical and critical study." A. C. Moore
+ Bookm 60:165 O '24 380w
Boston Transcript p4 O 1 '24 1050w
Reviewed by J: Cournos
Lit R p2 Ag 30 '24 880w

"The chief virtue of this book is the enthusiasm that burns through it: the fine flame that though sometimes obscured by the vehemence of its own smoke, yet lightens the reading of the volume. The subject, the victim almost, of this treatise is made to undergo the most minute analysis. He is discussed in every possible relation to life—as a schoolboy; as a talker in the home-circle; the texture of the hero's poetry is examined, the language dissected. Hero-worship is the essence of the book." Osbert Sitwell
+ — Nation and Ath 35:118 Ap 26 '24 550w

"Certain things stand out in de la Mare's work, and Mr. Megroz in his loving and extensive study of them certainly renders them plainer to the casual reader."
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 24 '24 1100w
Reviewed by S. P. Sherman
N Y Tribune p1 S 28 '24 1200w

"Mr. Megroz is not perfect by any means; he errs because of an excessive enthusiasm and veneration for his subject, whom he would place with Donne and Coleridge; but, in the main, he proves to be an impressive champion and a critic who has opened a new door on the bulk of De La Mare's work and flooded it with a light as unearthly as that in which it glimmers itself." H. S. Gorman
+ — No Am 220:372 D '24 1250w

"Written with the enthusiasm for its subject which is the best warrant for authorship, and with a vocabulary which contains all the latest catchwords of popular psychology. As to the key of the criticism, I can only say that while Mr. De la Mare is a true poet, to put him in comparison as an equal with Shelley and Keats among others, is to make him and the author ridiculous. Still the book is well worth reading and the biography is trustworthy. But I have my doubts as to the propriety of writing critical studies of men who are still in the full tide of production."
+ — Sat R 137:215 Mr 1 '24 150w

"We have here no 'confessions' of any kind but just the brief external story. The two additions of interest made to it by Mr. Mégroz are, first, his own impression of the man, who, as he truly says, neither talks nor looks like 'the frail bloom of the dream-born poetry which is generally associated with his name'; and secondly the information that the de la Mare family is of Huguenot origin and that the early atmosphere of the poet, whether at home or at school, was professional and especially clerical. . . It is to literary criticism that Mr. Mégroz has necessarily and rightly devoted nearly the whole of his book."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p236 Ap 17 '24 1200w

MEIGS, CORNELIA LYNDE. New moon. 251p $2 Macmillan
24-22939

A story for boys and girls about the pioneering days of America. Dick Martin, a little Irish boy, comes to the new country on a sailing vessel with old Thomas Garrity and his flock of sheep. Together they walk across the state of Pennsylvania and on beyond the Mississippi. Their experiences along the way with Indians and trappers gravely try their courage and endurance. But a beautiful friendship develops between Dick and an Indian boy and girl who teach him not only how to hunt and fish and live in the wilderness, but also of loyalty, friendship and courage.

MEIGS, C. L.—Continued

Booklist 21:158 Ja '25

"Miss Meigs has pioneered in a field of writing which holds rich possibilities for the historically minded who have the artist's sense of values in the selection and blending of their material." A. C. Moore
+ Bookm 60:167 O '24 160w

"A story that makes pioneering days in America the height of romance and courage. Well written and imaginative in its details of Indian life and the forests." L. St. J: Power
+ Outlook 138:412 N 12 '24 210w

"A wholesome story, interesting and inspiring."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:385 D 13 '24 150w

MELLER, WALTER CLIFFORD. Knight's life
2 in the days of chivalry. 300p $8 Greenberg, pub., inc., 15 E. 40th st., N.Y. [30s T. W. Laurie]
394 Chivalry. Knights and knighthood
[24-25546]

"The object of this book is to present a picture of the whole career of a mediaeval knight, his birth and education, his life on the battlefield, at the tournament, at the chase, and in his lady's bower, his death and his obsequies. The author's information is drawn mainly from other writers on chivalry, and from French chansons de geste, romances, and poems, from which he gives many excerpts, usually with translations, which will enable the general reader to surmount the difficulties of Old French."—Nation and Ath

"The book is so obviously a labour of love that one criticizes it with regret. Mr. Mellor is an amateur who has interested himself in the Middle Ages, and as such he is to be welcomed and commended; but by implicitly claiming attention as a serious historian he has laid himself open to serious criticism as a historian, and it has to be admitted that this book, for all its merits, shows him to be inadequately acquainted with historical method, historical accuracy, and historical etiquette." Eileen Power
— + Nation and Ath 36:192 N 1 '24 950w

"Book of superficial jottings, largely compiled from unscholarly popularizations of twenty-five years or more ago." R. S. Loomis
— N Y Tribune p4 D 7 '24 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p509 Ag 21 '24 1250w

MELLON, ANDREW WILLIAM. Taxation: the people's business. 227p $1.25 (6s) Macmillan
336.2 Taxation 24-9342

The Secretary of the Treasury brings together in this volume his views on taxation, discussing his plan of tax reduction and its bearing on the prosperity of the community. He considers the general principles of taxation, Treasury policies since the war, surtaxes and their effect upon investment, estate taxes and tax-exempt securities. The Appendices include the text of the letter from the Secretary of the Treasury to Chairman Green of the Committee on ways and means, proposing the program of tax revision known as the Mellon plan.

Am Econ R 14:566 S '24 50w
Booklist 21:8 O '24
Eng N 93:112 Jl 17 '24 210w

"This is a well-written book, in the finest, concise, straight-forward style of a man, who is accustomed to direct, frontal attack, and who does not know how to do anything other than well. . . If this little volume can be read with a clear understanding of its purpose and with full knowledge of the possible bias of its author, it will do much to stimulate a much needed interest in public finance." D. D. C.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Je 1 '24 1100w

Reviewed by C. M. Morrison
Lit R p942 Ag 2 '24 760w

"It is a very clear exposition of a subject which is usually quite unintelligible to anyone but an expert. Whether the reader of the book agrees with Mr. Mellon or not he is sure to gain a much clearer understanding of the difficulties accompanying the formulation of any taxation program, and he will be in a better position to judge the relative merits of the various plans now under discussion."
+ Management and Adm Je '24 160w

"Mr. Mellon knows naught of economics, and less of the shifting and incidence of taxation. His book omits a large part of the relevant facts, its reasoning is bad, and its practical conclusions in general are dead wrong but these flaws do not in the least detract from its excellence. For in it the Secretary of the Treasury, a successful banker, sets forth succinctly and simply the reasons why he honestly believes that the best way to make the United States prosperous is to take disproportionate taxes off wealthy business men. This gives those who disagree with the Secretary a chance to say why." H: R. Mussey
Nation 118:613 My 28 '24 1800w

"Good enough for practical politics, we suppose, but hardly seems to justify a volume on taxation in itself."
— + Nation and Ath 35:788 S 27 '24 190w

"The real weakness of Secretary Mellon's book is that in order to get any help from it, even in support of a program one might join with him in promoting, one has to be a true believing Chamber of Commerce Rotarian. One must humble one's reason in the presence of the Prophet, second richest man in America." Alvin Johnson
— New Repub 39:161 Jl 2 '24 950w

"In style the book is marked by modesty, dignity and simplicity. It has the force which marks the utterances of those who see clearly and describe what they see with sincerity and without affectation. Much of the power of the book comes from the author's intimate personal acquaintanceship with the most important phenomena which he discusses: the reactions of wealthy men under the pressure of high surtax rates. . . Where the Secretary rests his case upon actual fiscal experience he is, to the reviewer at least, wholly convincing. In a few casual references to a broader social philosophy he is less persuasive." T. S. Adams
+ — N Y Times p3 My 18 '24 2250w
N Y Tribune p28 Jl 13 '24 150w

"The style is clear, the logic is cogent, the proofs adduced are compelling."
+ Outlook 137:481 Jl 23 '24 130w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:302 Je '24
R of Rs 69:670 Je '24 60w

Reviewed by J. W. Scott
Spec 133:610 O 25 '24 70w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p541 S 4 '24 40w

MELVILLE, HELEN, pseud. See Benjamin, H. M.

MELVILLE, LEWIS, pseud. See Benjamin, L: S.

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. Prejudices: fourth series. 305p $2.50 Knopf
814 24-28241

Among Mr Mencken's aversions in this, his fourth series of "Prejudices" are farmers, the church, the Volstead act, Methodists, Rotarians and others. Contents: The American traditions; The husbandman; High and ghostly matters; Justice under democracy; Reflections on human monogamy; The politician; From a critic's notebook; Totentanz; Meditations in the Methodist desert; Essay in constructive criticism; On the nature of man; Bugaboo; On government; Toward a realistic aesthetic; Contributions to the study of vulgar psychology; The Amercan novel; People and things.

Booklist 21:144 Ja '25

"We forgive him because he works with his tongue in his cheek, because he has a gift of phrase which is both effective and risible. But his generalizations tend to become boresome." G. D. Eaton

+ — Int Bk R p125 Ja '25 1800w

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart

N Y Times p3 N 2 '24 1350w

N Y World p8e N 9 '24 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p844 D 11 '24 400w

MENDEL, LAFAYETTE BENEDICT. Nutrition: the chemistry of life. (Hitchcock lectures delivered at the University of California, 1923) 150p il $3 Yale univ. press

612.39 Nutrition 23-17979

Following a brief retrospect of the science of nutrition and the development of biochemistry and an account of a series of investigations on the nutrition of cattle are chapters on the influence of changes in the vitamin content of the diet, on the protein factor and on the energy problem in nutrition.

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 19 '24 200w

"Even an unscientific reader cannot fail to enjoy the beauty of the form to which the publishers have given a suitable setting." Ruth Wheeler

+ J Home Econ 16:333 Je '24 550w

"There is an individuality possessed by this little book which makes it very different from any other which has yet appeared on the subject. . . The story of modern research is told simply and embellished with illustrations which make an appeal to a wide circle of readers. Dr. Mendel's extraordinary ability as a lecturer and teacher is reflected in this series of lectures." E. V. McCollum

+ Science 59:165 F 15 '24 250w

Reviewed by W: R. P. Emerson, M.D.

Survey 52:247 My 15 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p55 Ja 24 '24 40w

"The book abounds in excellent photographs illustrating the results of the various diets upon animals. It also contains many quotations, and the only criticism that the reviewer and others who know Mendel would have to make is that in several instances the space thus awarded would have been better used had it been dedicated to the words of Mendel himself." Graham Lusk

+ — Yale R n s 13:609 Ap '24 1350w

MERCER, SAMUEL ALFRED BROWNE. Tutankhamen and Egyptology. (Biblical and oriental ser.) 100p $1.50 Morehouse [6s 6d Mowbray]

913.32 Egypt—Antiquities. Tut-ankh-amen 23-17746

"By the Professor of Semitic Languages and Egyptology, Trinity College, Toronto, who here presents an excellent short account of the recent excavations in Egypt and of the results of archaeological research there, with accounts of Tutankhamen and of the inscriptions bearing upon him, of contemporary Biblical events, and other cognate matters."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"This small illustrated booklet destined not for the expert but for the general reader, gives a simple and good account of the first period of the excavation of Tutankhamen's tomb. It is probable that the inscription material of the present booklet will soon be incomplete." T. C. P.

+ — Cath World 118:854 Mr '24 270w

"The book is not a safe guide for the uninitiated."

— J Religion 4:217 Mr '24 210w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p80 F 7 '24 60w

MERREL, CONCORDIA. Love courageous. 288p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d Selwyn]

23-17646

A love story which follows the vacillations of the beautiful heroine, Virginia Goring, between the man whom it was her mother's dying wish that she should marry and the man she really loved. The courage which finally enabled her to exchange the love of the possessive Fordyce for that of the more unselfish Desmond was not sufficient to enable her to trust that love when it was put to the test. So she wavered between the two.

"The story is an entertaining one, even if not especially coherent in some details, moves swiftly, requires little thought, and holds the reader's attention. Any one who seeks amusement will find it in this little book, and we feel no hesitation in recommending it, especially to the consideration of the lovers of Ethel M. Dell, to whose school it decidedly belongs."

— + Lit R p778 My 24 '24 110w

"It requires a generous measure of patience."

— Nation 118:351 Mr 26 '24 60w

MERREL, CONCORDIA. Miss Pilgrim's progress. 302p $2 Seltzer

24-25412

The heroine's progress is from an unhappy tawdry home from which in her innate refinement she recoils, thru rough experiences to haven at last in the love of a strong, honest man. Hetty Carol leaves home soon after the advent of a vulgar stepmother, to make her own life. Her pilgrimage leads her steadily onward toward success but her path is beset with temptations and embittering experiences to which her beauty and innocence inevitably expose her. An unusual intelligence and a strong puritan strain in her help her to keep straight and fit for the love of the patient Ben Jones.

"The title of this book is its one attraction. The story itself is like a dime novel which has strayed from the paper fold and lost itself mysteriously between board covers. We feel—even as we did in the case of the heroine, who tried to do the same thing in human terms—that it is out of place. The style is atrocious. The author's choice of words for the dialogue of her characters renders hopelessly tawdry whatever emotions she has attempted to portray."

— Boston Transcript p9 D 13 '24 190w

"The story is well put together, full of incidents that attract and hold the attention, but the plot plays a minor role to the characters."

+ Lit R p9 D 27 '24 230w

N Y Times p8 D 7 '24 680w

"The author earnestly desires that the reader accept Hetty as a flesh and blood woman, but every once in a while one sees the wires. Good writing has gone into the book, and many of the situations are dramatically told. It is only after Hetty begins her struggle for worldly ambition that the note is forced; her progress is too external to be rightly considered a pilgrimage."

+ — N Y Tribune p12 Ja 11 '25 240w

MERRIAM, CHARLES EDWARD, and GOSNELL, HAROLD FOOTE. Non-voting; causes and methods of control. (Univ. of Chicago studies in social science) 287p $2.50 pa $1.60 Univ. of Chicago press

324.2 Voting 24-21889

This study is an analysis of the reasons back of the failure of a large number of eligible voters to use their voting privileges. A particular election, the Chicago mayoralty election of April 3, 1923, is made the basis of an in-

MERRIAM, C: E:, and GOSNELL, H. F.—Cont. tensive study of the causes—physical, legal, social or otherwise—of non-voting, and the methods of controlling them.

Booklist 21:95 D '24

"The authors have made a most careful and interesting study of a problem which is confronting the American public not only in city but in national politics." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 11 '24 460w

Lit R p10 O 11 '24 330w

N Y Times p13 Ja 4 '25 1000w

Reviewed by Phillips Bradley
N Y Tribune p5 S 21 '24 750w

Reviewed by W. F. Johnson
No Am 220:370 D '24 350w

Outlook 138:466 N 19 '24 140w

R of Rs 70:447 O '24 160w

"This is a very interesting analysis of a problem which is attracting a great deal of public attention at the present time. The authors of this book have been the first to make a careful analysis of the reasons why so many of the voters do not bother to record their choice." H. C. Pell, jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 1:142 S 27 '24 1450w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 22 '24 750w

MERRICK, LEONARD. Quaint companions; with an introd. by H. G. Wells. 299p $1.90 Dutton

"Mr. Merrick presents the theme of racial miscegenation. His story tells of the love of Elisha Lee, a famous negro tenor, for an Englishwoman. Mrs. Harris, a restless and discontented blond, toys with the affections of Elisha. Then because he can give her what she wants—escape for her and her son from boarding houses to gaudy living—she finally marries him. From then on she leads him a merry chase, revealing her cheap, selfish and pitiless self. A mulatto boy is born to them. The mother cannot abide her colored son, while the boy is everything to Elisha. The repugnance, prejudice and clash of mixed color is dramatized. . . Elisha stands out from this group of mean and weak people with something of the gesture of a reckless Titan. When he dies, in the middle of the novel, considerable potency passes out with him. Mr. Merrick goes on with the next generation, taking up the story of David, the ugly duckling, goaded by his swanky, unpleasant half-brother Vivian."—N Y Times

---

"In this novel, his strongest, most significant, and in many ways his finest book, Mr. Merrick goes beyond questions of race and racial inheritance, far beyond into the depths of the human spirit, the spirit common to all humanity, with its weaknesses and littlenesses, its capacity for what is high and fine and true. Seldom if ever has his gift of a sympathy which never for an instant verges on sentimentality been as deeply and as clearly evident as in this superb novel."

+ Int Bk R p123 Ja '25 1800w

Reviewed by Margaret Widdemer
Lit R p3 D 27 '24 800w

"The story is sympathetic and compelling in its appeal for fair play, as it is graceful and mellow in its wisdom. Its understanding and pity of so much frustrated desire and misguided affection, and the sufferings of such human characters have considerable human interest. This is certainly one of the finest and most pretentious novels in its serious treatment of life that Merrick has written."

+ N Y Times p8 N 30 '24 780w

"The story is undeniably engrossing, and it has been rendered skillfully. It must be admitted that the author has stacked the cards, but, that being granted, he plays a sound game."

+ N Y Tribune p10 D 21 '24 220w

"There is much of the Merrick wisdom here and many of the Merrick beauties of style." Will Cuppy

+ N Y World p9e N 23 '24 420w

"In workmanship and in reserve power it is exceedingly fine. There is not a page that is superfluous; one might almost say that there is not a line that is not needed." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 139:114 Ja 21 '25 280w

Springf'd Republican p7a F 1 '25 230w

MERRILL, ELMER TRUESDELL. Essays in early Christian history. 344p $3.50 (15s) Macmillan

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early church

As the title and table of contents of this book show it is not a connected history of the early church but a collection of essays on scattered topics connected with this period. Also, it is written more from the standpoint of the classical historian than of the ecclesiastic. Contents: On materials and methods; The attitude of ancient Rome toward religion and religious cults; General considerations regarding the persecutions; The persecution by Nero; The "Institutum Neronianum"; The alleged persecution by Domitian; The persecution by Trajan; The rescript of Hadrian; On "Clement of Rome"; Some external aspects of the church in the fourth century; St. Peter and the church in Rome.

J Religion 4:441 Jl '24 50w

Sat R 137:487 My 10 '24 600w

Reviewed by Alfred Fawkes
Spec 132:640 Ap 19 '24 600w

"Mr. Merrill is a classicist. It is an ugly word, but his own. As such, he has set for himself a very high standard of critical exactness; and it grieves him to see how far short of perfection are the accepted authors of early Christian history. He has therefore set himself the task of detecting and exposing their faults. He does it vigorously and with an enjoyment which he can at times communicate to his readers; at other times, it must be confessed he wraps them in a dull fog of details."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p218 Ap 10 '24 2000w

MERRILL, GEORGE PERKINS. First one hundred years of American geology. 773p il $6 Yale univ. press
2

550.9 Geology—History 24-21175

"His opening chapters deal with the Maclurean Era, 1785-1819, so named from William Maclure who, in 1809, issued his epoch-making 'Observations on the Geology of the United States.' "The Eatonian Era, 1820-1829, followed, with Amos Eaton, author of the geological text-book, as its chief figure; then came the era of the State survey, extending from 1830 to 1880, to be succeeded in turn by the era of national surveys reaching to our own time. In the course of the exposition mention is made of several hundred of the contributors to the development of geology in the United States, often with accounts of their opinions, quotations from their writings and sketches of their lives." —Boston Transcript

---

"This well-written volume, with its wealth of detail and attention to personal achievements, erects a worthy literary monument to the men who, whether alone as university professors or as members of societies, contributed unselfishly to the building up of American geology during the first hundred years of its work." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 1 '24 1150w

"The book gives evidence of great labor in searching out, selecting, and organization data. It seems to be as free from bias as such a work can well be at this date. American geology owes a debt of gratitude to Dr. Merrill for his great labor in its behalf." T. C. Chamberlin

+ Sat R of Lit 1:429 Ja 3 '25 1150w

MERSHON, WILLIAM BUTTS. Recollections of my fifty years hunting and fishing. 259p il $3.50 Stratford

799 Hunting. Fishing 23-17729

The author confesses to a glorious time afield with rod and gun for half a century, beginning with schoolboy experiences. The first recollections are of hunting game birds around Saginaw, Michigan. Then there are accounts of deer hunting in various parts of the Lower peninsula, hunting at Dawson, North Dakota, trout and grayling fishing, and salmon fishing in Quebec. Some of the sketches are contributed by other sportsmen.

"Mr. Mershon chats throughout his book in an extremely interesting fashion of the experiences of many years with gun and with rod."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 23 '24 400w

N Y World p6e Ja 13 '24 120w

"Mr Mershon's efforts are valuable as a matter of record of the hunting methods and abundance of game in the Lake region and other sections of the west after the middle of the 19th century."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 24 '24 300w

MERZ, CHARLES. Centerville, U. S. A. 275p $2 Century

24-20382

An American small town is the scene and connecting link of the short stories gathered in this book. Centerville people may live narrow lives in narrow houses but it is their humanness which Mr Merz sees and reveals, without bitterness or satire. Grandpa Gilpin is one of these people. His son-in-law, in order to keep him in his attic room and prevent his embarrassing appearances down stairs gave him a radio set that wouldn't work. Henrietta Crosby is another—the school teacher who taught after she was stone-deaf and hoped to continue her deception till her pension became due. Still another of these Centerville figures is Harvey Burch, the enthusiastic Klansman, who numbered among his trusted friends the Roman Catholic cop, Sam the colored furnaceman, and the Jewish neighbor with whom he played cribbage. Contents: Grandpa Gilpin; Cod Macy; Henrietta Crosby; Doctor Hodge; Mrs Henry Nesbit; The brothers Tevis; Madame Nalda; Captain Foley; Lucy Wallis; Myron Daw; Millie Turner; Harvey Burch; Jim Lee; Parson Todd; Ernest Loring; Peter Quigley.

Booklist 21:112 D '24

"Often the germ of a sketch, pregnant with power and capable, under a master's pen, of evolving into an excellent short story, will waste itself away, leaving only the depressing reality of something which might have been good, but which has entirely missed the mark. The book has many good points, however. Talent for sensing the dramatic is unmistakable, and the aspects of small town life which the author chooses to give us are not unfair to the average village in Eastern or Middle Western America." R. B. M.

— + Boston Transcript p4 S 17 '24 440w

"An excellent series of pictures, which do not try to be X-ray photographs or flash lights of literary ectoplasm." D. R.

+ Ind 113:160 S 13 '24 630w

"A book full of tears and laughter and that strange beauty which is in some etchings of dingy, tumbledown houses." James Clark

Lit R p12 S 20 '24 380w

New Repub 40:151 O 8 '24 120w

N Y Times p22 S 21 '24 570w

"The failure and the power of the book lie in knowing one technique too well and in submitting to it every character without selection." Margery Latimer

N Y Tribune p2 N 2 '24 600w

"A book of easy moment-to-moment reading." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e S 21 '24 100w

"They are mildly interesting stories, told with agreeable skill and with a sympathy not too sentimental for the homely characters portrayed. But they record only the surface gesture, never seeking to lead back by any deductive process to the source of that gesture." Neil Martin

— + Sat R of Lit 1:124 S 20 '24 120w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 21 '24 210w

MEYNELL, ALICE CHRISTIANA (THOMPSON) (MRS WILFRID MEYNELL). School of poetry; an anthology chosen for young readers. 241p $2.50 Scribner [7s 6d Collins]

821.08 English poetry—Collections A24-662

"Mrs. Meynell's anthology is chosen for young readers; the ages suggested are ten to fourteen. [Some of the poets included are]: Ben Jonson, Bishop Corbet, Herrick, George Herbert, Shirley, Crashaw, Milton, Fuller, Cowley, Bunyan, Andrew Marvell, Henry Vaughan, Thomas Traherne. Over half a dozen extracts from Blake follow several from Cowper, with Dibdin's 'Tom Bowling' sandwiched between. There is only one selection from Burns, 'To a Field Mouse.' Walter Scott has two, Wordsworth seven. Coleridge and Shelley have two apiece and Tennyson eight to Browning's two."—Lit R

Booklist 20:303 My '24

Cleveland p83 N '24

Reviewed by W: R. Benet

Lit R p774 My 24 '24 200w

"Mrs. Meynell has put together a charming book, delightful also to grown-up people."

+ New Statesman 21:720 S 29 '23 150w

St Louis p349 O '24

"A quality of high excellence pervades the volume and the little introductory notes are charming. Expensive in its present form for school collections but would be admirable for that purpose."

+ Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

MICHENER, CARROLL K. Heirs of the Incas. 287p il $3 Minton, Balch & co.

918 South America—Description and travel 24-22912

This account of travel in South America, chiefly in Peru and Bolivia, the author calls a collection of impressions, observations and prejudices. With the descriptions of scenery and native manners and customs are combined entertaining and useful information about hotels, food, transportation, etc. There is a chapter on South American journalism, and another on the position of women.

"Mr. Michener possesses a strong sense of humor which adds noticeably to the pleasure we feel in his account of his travels, of the places he visited, the different peoples he saw, and especially in his repeated efforts to identify the sources of various habits and customs he found."

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 20 '24 400w

Cleveland p88 N '24

"Mr. Michener's book is one that will be read with avidity by all who are interested in this picturesque region. It is richly illustrated."

+ Lit R p19 D 13 '24 320w

N Y Times p12 N 23 '24 780w

"In thinking over this book of Mr. Michener's I feel its outstanding characteristic to be that sincerity without which a travel book is valueless; while its chief contribution to the literature of the region lies in the correlating of the South American scene to its background of Spanish and Moorish influence; a correlation made possible by Mr. Michener's wide travel. Thus the tapestry of his present is enriched by the pattern of what has gone before." Blair Niles

+ N Y Tribune p2 O 19 '24 400w

R of Rs 71:110 Ja '25 80w

MIDDLETON, ARTHUR, pseud. See O'Brien, E: J. H.

MIDDLETON, ELLIS. Chance—and the woman. 357p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Mills & B.]
24-30781

A tale of romantic adventure in eighteenth century Lancashire. Stephen Burgoyne, a fashionable gallant, is reputed immune to the wiles of woman. But at first sight he falls in love with Lady Averill Stapleton and becomes involved in a madcap plot which puts him in peril of his freedom and his life. He has a villainous rival in Sir Randolph Gorst into whose artfully laid traps Stephen unwittingly falls, but a mysterious highwayman, in a crucial moment, befriends Stephen—and the romance of Lady Averill and Stephen Burgoyne continues without further interference.

"The attempted slightly archaic diction is not so heavily loaded with 'pink me's' and gadzookery as to make hard reading. It will hold one's attention very well."
+ — N Y Tribune p10 D 14 '24 120w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 21 '24 80w

"Mr. Middleton makes a good story of it all, but should be careful of his anachronisms."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p358 Je 5 '24 120w

MIDLAND (periodical). Stories from the Midland. 319p $2.50 Knopf
Short stories—Collections 24-5502

Fifteen short stories selected and edited by John T. Frederick from among those recently published in the magazine of which he is editor. They are by different authors, two of the authors contributing two each; but there is a pervading color tone, sombre and sincere. The scenes and characters belong for the most part to the farm or the village, and even in the striking tale of James Neal's quest of the "Man with the good face," New York's roaring subways and panoramic streets become somehow transmuted; their oppressiveness gains epic quality. Contents: Wasted, by Mary Arbuckle; Doc Greer's practice, by A. M. Brownell; The scarlet one, by G. Carver; Thomas, by H. Goodman; The mixing, by D. Harrison; Mist-green oats, by R. Knister; Knowing dad, by I. McPeak; The man with the good face, by F. L. Mott; The prairie, by W. J. Muilenburg; Heart of youth, by W. J. Muilenburg; Glare of circumstance, by R. L. Sergel; In the uplands, by W. L. Myers; A rural community, by Ruth Suckow; Uprooted, by Ruth Suckow; Arkansas, by R. Weeks.

Booklist 20:338 Je '24

Reviewed by B. C. Williams
Bookm 59:344 My '24 340w

"Of an admirably even excellence are the stories of these young writers." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 5 '24 850w

Cleveland p85 N '24

"'Knowing Dad,' by Ival McPeak is a banality utterly out of tune with the rest of the volume. Nevertheless the average of workmanship as well as of vital creative genius is extremely high in this collection." J. J. Smertenko
+ — Lit R p909 Jl 19 '24 500w

"There is force and directness in all this, almost enough to compensate for the callowness which we find in many of the stories. It is the force of a Mid-Western landscape; pure air, pure water, and clean earth, uniformly and doggedly productive, unlike the finished cultivation of English scenes, but promising harvests for the future." Rose Lee
+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 30 '24 2300w

Reviewed by Bruce Gould
N Y Tribune p23 Je 1 '24 650w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:293 Je '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:98 Ap '24

MILES, MRS SUSAN, comp. Childhood in verse and prose; an anthology. 408p $3 Oxford [7s 6d Milford]
808.8 Children [24-11578]

"This is an anthology of the literature of childhood; an anthology that attempts 'to bring together, within the scope of a single volume, those passages of English literature from the fourteenth to the twentieth century which deal most happily with children.' The compiler has made many notable omissions; she has included nothing by American writers; she has intentionally neglected both the farcical and fantastic; she has passed by a number of celebrated works about children because of the difficulty of detaching significant paragraphs."—Lit R

"There is throughout an effort to make the book scholarly as well as to make it pleasant reading, and the compiler shows wide knowledge as well as a good judgment in selections."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 30 '24 250w

"On the whole, she has given us a comprehensive and representative collection and has included the best in the literature about children from the anonymous writers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries to the time of Arnold Bennett and Walter de la Mare."
Lit R p709 Ap 26 '24 140w

"This anthology, splendidly unsentimental, a miracle of three hundred and eighty-seven pages, is complementary to 'Come Hither,' and should be in everybody's possession." G. Rylands
+ Nation and Ath 34:772 Mr 1 '24 310w

"Mrs. Miles has done her work exceedingly well. If we must find something to quibble at in this excellent selection it is that, although translations were not included, we think that such a ruling need not have necessitated the exclusion of Bible extracts. We miss the story of the Shunammite woman's son." C. H: Warren
+ Spec 132:sup420 Mr 15 '24 400w

"Mrs. Miles has for the first time produced a selection from the relevant prose and verse together. To the gatherer of such a work two views of the aim of it are possible, the first, merely to provide the public with a good readable book; the second, to make accessible at one time all the literature concerned which has merit. The more exacting and salutary of these purposes is the one acknowledged by our compiler, and despite the gigantic area of our literature, she appears to have made a very considerable success of it."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p50 Ja 24 '24 1200w

MILHAM, WILLIS ISBISTER. Time and time keepers. 609p il $6 Macmillan
681 Clocks and watches 23-17961

The professor of astronomy at Williams college has written a complete compendium on the history, construction, care and accuracy of clocks and watches, for the antiquarian, manufacturer and general reader. Beginning with a chapter on the abstract subject of time, Dr Milham goes on to trace the origin of the sun-dial, clepsydra and other early timekeepers, up to the year 1360 when at least one clock in the modern sense of the word is known to have been in existence. From this point a detailed history is given, including two chapters on clock and watch making in America, a chapter on modern European watchmakers and another on some famous clocks and watches. There are 339 illustrations, a full bibliography and index.

Booklist 20:288 My '24

Cleveland p78 S '24

"Remarkable in a scientific production, this book is full of information entertaining to the average man on the street, who for the most part is only interested in keeping his engagements." Walter Camp
+ Lit R p473 Ja 26 '24 950w

"The field surveyed is so extensive, and in detail the book contains such a quantity of information, gathered first-hand, which it would be impossible to find elsewhere, that it would be pedantic to quarrel with a statement here and there. The book fills a vacant place in horological literature, and should be widely appreciated and used." R. A. S.

+ Nature 113:415 Mr 22 '24 580w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:311 Je '24

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 290w

"A valuable book with over three hundred illustrations and a full and classified bibliography."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p55 Ja 24 '24 120w

MILL, JOHN STUART. Autobiography of John Stuart Mill; with a preface by John Jacob Coss. 221p $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Milford]

B or 92 24-27691

The text as printed in this volume has been taken from the original manuscript in the possession of Columbia university. It is published without alterations or omissions, even to the accurate following of the varying capitalization and punctuation of the original.

Boston Transcript p3 D 27 '24 400w

"No one, save those in search of excitement, can fail to be attracted by the clarity and candour of its style."

+ New Statesman 24:150 N 8 '24 280w

N Y World p8e N 16 '24 280w

MILLARD, THOMAS FRANKLIN FAIRFAX. Conflict of policies in Asia. 507p $4 Century

327 Eastern question (Far East). United States—Foreign relations 24-12846

A discussion of the foreign policies and interests of the nations principally concerned in Far Eastern affairs and, in particular, the relation of the United States. The survey covers the post-war period from the Peace conference to the present.

"Mr. Millard's latest book on Asia is very timely. His themes are of deep importance." S. L. Rich

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 7 '24 420w

Cleveland p87 N '24

"It is in the opening and closing chapters devoted to more general considerations, rather than in the detailed examination of diplomatic negotiations, that the general reader will find the provocative ideas which make this book of very real value to all those interested in the Far East. For the more serious student of Pacific problems an extremely valuable section is the appendix made up of recent treaties and agreements relating to the Far East." F. R. Dulles

+ Ind 112:344 Je 21 '24 1100w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer

New Repub 40:280 N 12 '24 650w

"This is a valuable book, full of much important material. And despite the anti-Japanese bias of the author it is worthy of the serious attention of every one who is interested in America's dealings with the Far East." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 20 '24 1150w

N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 70w

St Louis p370 N '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p802 N 27 '24 360w

MILLAY, EDNA ST VINCENT (MRS EUGEN BOISSEVAIN) (NANCY BOYD, pseud.). Distressing dialogues; with a preface by Edna St Vincent Millay. 290p $2 Harper

817 24-22301

Small satires which appeared originally in Vanity Fair. Not all of them are dialogs. Contents: I like Americans; Honor bright; Our all-American almanac and prophetic messenger; The implacable Aphrodite; The same boat; No bigger than a man's hand; The Greek dance; Art and how to fake it; Powder, rouge and lipstick; Out of reach of the baby; Look me up; For winter, for summer; "Madame a tort!" "Two souls with but a single thought"; Knock wood; Tea for the muse; Rolls and salt; How to be happy though good; Here comes the bride; Breakfast in bed; Ships and sealing-wax; Cordially yours.

"The humor is versatile, sparkling and at all times brilliant. Rarely does one meet with satiric wit which is at once as refreshing and as originally phrased. This is far better than Leacock at his present rate of speed. It easily out-distances Mr. Benchley, and his somewhat heavy attempts at being ostentatiously amusing."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 15 '24 250w

"In the pages of Vanity Fair her brief bits produced an effect—they were sprightly and tricksy, even if now and again a trifle earthy. Between covers they are less to be relished. Everything is cleverly done—even here and there with spurts of the inexplicable thing which must be called genius; yet one would be as well pleased if it hadn't been done at all." H. B. Fuller

— + New Repub 41:180 Ja 7 '25 250w

Reviewed by J: Franklin

New Statesman 24:205 N 22 '24 70w

"Mrs. Boyd is primarily a satirist, but with a passion for reform that she may well watch, lest it swallow her. Thus, early in the present volume, there is an 'All-American Almanac and Prophetic Messenger,' full of bitterly invective satire that is anything but funny and that at moments resembles annoyance, chiefly because of its relentless intensity. At times Mrs. Boyd scowls when she should leer. These times, however, are happily few, and for the rest she is daintily and sophisticatedly funny." H. J. Mankiewicz

+ — N Y Times p12 N 2 '24 780w

Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 220w

MILLAY, EDNA ST VINCENT (MRS EUGEN BOISSEVAIN) (NANCY BOYD, pseud.). Harp-weaver, and other poems. 93p $2 Harper

811 23-27470

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"Never did the poetry of disillusion pipe a tenderer note than in this small, distinguished volume of lyrics. Open this little book where you will, and the perfect lyric flashes from the page." Florence Converse

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ap '24 540w

Booklist 20:210 Mr '24

Reviewed by J: S. Fletcher

Freeman 8:502 Ja 30 '24 180w

"It is Miss Millay's most beautiful book, and, with the exception of the single poem 'Renascence,' which remains a higher water-mark than she or most other people can reach again, her best one. She has the gift of self-expression in its fullest freedom." Margaret Widdemer

+ Int Bk R p645 Ag '24 270w

"It would be an injustice to her to imply that all of the poems here are of the first rank. Certain of them could have been turned off by any one of a dozen competent contemporaries. But the proportion of unexceptionable pieces is great, and the book leaves its creator permanently settled in her very high place." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 118:209 F 20 '24 680w

"Merit there certainly is in one who from the beginnings has continued steadfastly in the same rigorous and self-appointed path." V. Sackville-West

+ Nation and Ath 35:118 Ap 26 '24 400w

"This latest collection represents Miss Millay accurately and broadly, if not always at her best. . . There is a various genius, served by a competent versatility. Miss Millay has a broad and deep wisdom of mood and emotion, and a gift to render that wisdom lyrical and rememberable."

MILLAY, E. ST V.—Continued
+ Outlook 136:154 Ja 23 '24 280w

Reviewed by Stanley Alden
Springf'd Republican p7a F 17 '24 650w

"Her heart is intent as well as her mind, and out of the clash of the two almost all her best poetry is born. The problem of reconciling life's realism with imagination's values, passion's fever with the serenity and disinterestedness of intelligence, is no exclusively modern phenomenon, but it is perhaps more intense and general to-day than ever before. Miss Millay gives striking expression to the conflict itself and the disillusionment engendered by it, particularly in a number of fine sonnets."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Je 26 '24 450w

Reviewed by L: Untermeyer
Yale R n s 14:158 O '24 460w

MILLER, ALICE (DUER) (MRS HENRY WISE MILLER). Are parents people? 296p $2 Dodd
24-4585

Nine short stories which have appeared in the magazines from 1914 to 1924. The first story, Are parents people, tells how a clever girl of boarding school age brought together her divorced parents, and won a lover for herself. The other stories are: The American husband; Devoted women; The return to normalcy; The red carpet; The widow's might; Whose petard was it? The new stoics; Worse than married.

Booklist 20:339 Je '24

"Alice Duer Miller is an extremely good story teller. She is so good that it is really a pity she does not tell better stories. Her style has a lightness that should adorn a tale more worthy than any in her latest collection." C. B. O.
— + Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '24 320w

"Alice Duer Miller, in the novelette, provocatively entitled 'Are Parents People?' has treated the subject of divorce with warmth and freshness and from an individual point of view. As much, unfortunately, cannot be said regarding the various shorter pieces included in the book, for these, while sometimes original in theme and always at least moderately interesting, are constructed with no greater skill and display no deeper insight into life than one finds in the average ephemeral magazine story."
+ — Lit R p730 My 3 '24 250w

Outlook 136:440 Mr 12 '24 70w

"Mrs Miller has a bit of gift toward novelty of manner, and her stories are correspondingly agreeable—sophisticated people in interesting situations set forth with a light and facile touch."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 16 '24 120w

Wis Lib Bul 20:98 Ap '24

MILLER, ALICE (DUER) (MRS HENRY WISE MILLER). Priceless pearl. 186p $1.75 Dodd
24-20557

In ten months Pearl Leavitt had lost four jobs, for the simple reason that she was so good-looking. The men in the offices all fell in love with her. In despair she impersonated a college friend and took her place as governess when the friend married suddenly. Here new difficulties awaited her in the form of a young adorer of the daughter of the house, and a stolen pearl necklace, but an absent uncle returned in time to straighten matters out.

Booklist 21:69 N '24
Boston Transcript p7 O 18 '24 440w
Cleveland p92 D '24

"Alice Duer Miller has achieved another innocently charming story." E. M. Corby
Int Bk R p820 O '24 180w

"Never heavy, never far-fetched, always frothy and good-humored, Mrs. Miller's story is sure to bring a smile to the sourest face and drive the tear from the sorriest pessimist." Madelin Leof
+ Lit R p14 S 13 '24 550w

"As in her other books, Mrs. Miller weaves an amusing story. The author of 'Come Out of the Kitchen' is no mean tyro in the field of light fiction, and one has the feeling that her achievement in 'The Priceless Pearl' is just what she wanted it to be."
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 31 '24 550w

"The attitude of the boy toward the unfortunate governess is a subtly understood bit of adolescent psychology; the best thing in the book. The workmanship of the whole is well up to Mrs. Miller's high standard of technique."
+ N Y Tribune p17 S 21 '24 200w

Outlook 138:512 N 26 '24 90w

"This is an unimportant book, but it is an amusing one written with a gay good humor which should recommend it to invalids convalescing from minor ailments, or to commuters within an hour's distance from New York."
Sat R of Lit 1:150 S 27 '24 170w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 190w

Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

MILLER, CLYDE R., and CHARLES, FRED.
² Publicity and the public school. (Riverside educational monographs) 179p $1.20 Houghton
379 Public schools. Publicity. Education advertising
24-19472

It is only of recent years that educational leaders, especially school superintendents, have realized the possibilities and importance of school publicity—of giving information to the public about the institution that depends upon the people for its support. This little book, the first of its kind, deals with principles and methods of procedure; the various avenues of publicity, especially the public press; questionable practices and pitfalls to be avoided.

"I should expect them to produce a practical and engaging manual upon effective ways of informing the public as to the work and needs of its public school. This expectation is more than satisfied by the trim little volume."
+ Educ R 69:51 Ja '25 920w

"The volume should excite constructive thought and should lead to the formulation of a publicity program for every school system. Whether or not all readers will believe alike with regard to the ever increasing responsibilities which, according to the authors, the school must assume, they will agree that there is an important problem of school publicity which educational leaders must meet and solve. The monograph is full of interest and inspiration. It should be read and welcomed by school administrators in particular and by all teachers and citizens interested in educational advancement." W: A. Richards
+ School R 32:712 N '24 520w

MILLER, MRS ELIZABETH (YORK). Obligations. 335p $2 Century
24-20555

When Virginia O'Dare was only seven she had a very bad scare. She was pushing a playmate in a swing when the branch broke and the boy fell and lay apparently dead. Virginia fled in terror, but never told anyone of her part in the accident. Years later when her father was connected with the American embassy in London Virginia met and loved Sir Nevill Davies. Suddenly, in the studio of a French artist, she one day met Nicholas, her former playmate, now a crippled and embittered artist. Altho she was engaged to Sir Nevill, Virginia's sense of obligation was so strong that she married Nicholas. Thru years of wretched poverty, estranged from her family, Virginia clung to Nicholas, until he one day became famous. And suddenly she realized that she loved him.

"An admirable story, exceedingly well, often brilliantly, written, and it holds the reader from the beginning to the end. There are several weak spots in Mrs. Miller's plot. Still, when she cannot go around a hazard skilfully, she goes over it with admirable coolness." D. F. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 S 10 '24 980w

"This soul-struggling story is written in a wholly inadequate style." Irene Ellis

— Detroit News p14 S 14 '24 430w

"Mrs. Miller has a facile style born of much experience. Her story runs along easily and her English pleases. She has a sense of humor. Not that it is a humorous story, but rather that we suspect the author of poking fun at her own tale as she tells it. In short, it is a serious story, written in a light vein." W. H. T.

Lit R p14 N 22 '24 330w

"For the most part 'Obligations' belongs to that type of novel which is popularly dubbed 'light.' It is a story for the sake of a story."

— N Y Times p9 S 21 '24 550w

MILLER, HUGH CRICHTON. New psychology ^{2} and the preacher. 246p $2 Seltzer [6s Jarrolds]

201 Psychology, Religious. Psychoanalysis 24-24837

The book is addressed not alone to the preacher but to all who are interested in the bearing of modern psychology on religious questions. The motives back of the religious impulse are analyzed and those tests which the psychologist believes justified are applied to the various manifestations of religion.

"It is a comprehensive and varied outline." T. C. R.

Boston Transcript p7 D 6 '24 320w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p423 Jl 3 '24 200w

MILLER, MRS NELLIE (BURGET). In earthen bowls. 127p $1.50 Appleton

811 24-24068

The appeal of this volume of verse by the "poet laureate of Colorado" is to those who ask of poetry that it shall express something of their daily lives—the earthen bowls into which they look to discover some hidden beauty or radiance.

"Messages she gives us, music in poetry—no unusual thing—and beauty in terms of human lives buried in earthen bowls."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 29 '24 140w

"'In Earthen Bowls' is a mixture of good and bad, with the good predominating." P. A. Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p5 N 30 '24 480w

MILLER, PATRICK. Natural man. 307p $2 Brentano's [7s 6d G. Richards]

24-25638

"Blaven, the hero, is a young artillery officer of average brains and sound body. He finds himself in this story, but not until in a perfectly unanalytical way he stumbles on the fact that lust is rather unclean and decidedly fearful in its propinquities. Blaven gets Paris leave at last and essays one of the daughters of Lutetia, but still booted and belted he leaves the adventure, bound for the front again. He prefers his gruelling work in the trenches. Blaven made no pretense to preciseness, but he perceived the awful solemnity of the vestibule called war. Gradually he came to contemplate that stage where a man is and in the twinkling of an eye goes like a shred of smoke."—Lit R

"It is absolutely unlike most of the books that have come out of the war. One may suspect, moreover, that it comes much nearer the actual psychology of most of the men who served than do the various laments and denunciations of war, the insistence upon its horrors and filth and unrighteousness, that constitute the bulk of such novels. Neither is it at all in the spirit of adventurousness, the braggart joy of the modern knight errantry. It is a sober book without any highflying heroics, though its emotion is often tense enough." H. L. Pangborn

+ Lit R p3 N 22 '24 680w

"It is done without any great display of emotion, and with an apparent effort to be authentic rather than dramatic. Although such was not the intention, the book makes quite as good a case against the soldier's usefulness in the scheme of progress as to other works deliberately anti-militaristic."

Nation 120:49 Ja 14 '25 120w

"'The Natural Man' is the winner of a prize offered by Mr. Grant Richards for the best 'first' novel; it is also a competent and arresting piece of work. There has probably been no book written about the war from which it would be more difficult to guess on which side the author was; the scenes which Mr. Miller describes are full of passion and life, yet he remains stubbornly detached within himself, and his detachment is pushed to the verge of loneliness." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 35:647 Ag 23 '24 750w

"Mr. Patrick Miller has written a remarkable first novel, and I can easily believe it was hors concours in the publisher's competition in which it obtained the prize for 'literary quality.' The puzzle is that the book gives a feeling of unity, and yet there is no vestige of plot, no interest in the fate of individuals and none in the fortunes of the war; externally, it is merely a series of sketches connected by what seems the slightest of threads—the reaction of the central personage to war." J. Franklin

+ New Statesman 23:648 S 13 '24 950w

N Y Times p17 D 14 '24 600w

"'The Natural Man,' from its ambiguous title to its inconclusive close, is full of interest—the interest of something sharply distinct, individual and concrete. If by 'natural' is meant ordinary, usual, then Mr. Miller's hero has no right to the name; but he has every right if 'natural' means, as it ought to mean, comprised within the baffling but convincing order of nature." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 138:195 Ag 23 '24 680w

"It is interesting because it is an honest piece of work and is a war book that must overcome the lassitude of the public. Portraying the spiritual, but not the religious, growth and rounding of a man, it does so without conventional trumpetings. It is quite as realistic as a novel need be and yet leaves the pacifist and the militarist peering as though something uncovenanted had winged over their heads." J. H. Sedgwick

+ Sat R of Lit 1:341 D 6 '24 780w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Spec 133:200 Ag 9 '24 550w

"A very fine study of the fighting man from a point of view which, though not all-embracing, comes nearer to the whole truth of war psychology than the cries of indignation and pain which were the first to reach expression. It may seem almost blasphemous to say that his hero (an invidious title) enjoyed the war; but that, if we bear in mind that he too was free of the mock-heroic illusion, indicates the essential originality of the study."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p488 Ag 7 '24 500w

MILLER, SIDNEY LINCOLN. Railway trans- ^{2} portation; principles and point of view. 905p $4 Shaw, A. W.

385 Railroads—United States 24-22554

Written by the assistant professor of economics in the University of Wisconsin, the book

MILLER, SIDNEY LINCOLN—Continued
is a comprehensive review of railway transportation in the United States. Part one treats of the development of the American railway net during the past 100 years; part two, railway service, freight, passenger, mail and express; part three, railroad economics; part four, the development of public control over railway enterprise, by legislature, commission and court, both state and federal.

"Clearly Professor Miller strives to write without bias and to present his facts impartially, although he expresses opinions on many phases of existing conditions. The book is valuable for reference, and, which is high praise, it is a railway book that any intelligent person, however little he may know of the railway business, will find readable." F. L. B.
+ Boston Transcript p7 D 10 '24 670w

"This is an interesting and instructive work which is an important addition to transportation literature."
+ Management and Adm 8:544 N '24 100w

MILLER, WARREN HASTINGS. Medicine gold. 261p $1.75 (6s) Appleton
24-5501

"Medicine gold" has a special appeal for boys in their teens. Its scene is laid toward the north of Canada where the action of the story takes the Trojans, a club of young men, on a fishing and hunting trip. With them is a young Englishman, Lord Jim, and an Indian, and French-Canadian guides. Thru the tale runs a thread of mystery which is attached to a gold locket known as "Medicine gold" worn by young Antoine. Several Indian thieves who had tried to steal it had been found dead with the locket in their hands. Again an attempt is made to get the locket. Antoine is kidnapped. The expedition of the Trojans teems with adventure culminating in the finding of Antoine and the discovery of the secret of "Medicine gold."

Detroit News p14 S 14 '24 160w

"It is all told with graphic coloring but with simplicity."
+ N Y Times p16 My 4 '24 300w

MILLIKAN, ROBERT ANDREWS. The elec-
[2] tron; its isolation and measurement and the determination of some of its properties. (Univ. of Chicago science ser.) 2d ed rev 293p il $1.75 Univ. of Chicago press
541.2 Electrons 24-28280

"Professor Milliken, who conceived an original and effective manner of catching an electron, was awarded the Nobel Peace prize for his researches. His first book recorded his experiments; this book is merely another and later edition of his first book, very much more complete. It gives briefly the history of the rise of the electron in the human consciousness."—Lit R

"Here is the authoritative word on the electron and its bearing on the great questions of modern physics, put in as readable a form as possible by one who has made American scholarship respected the world over."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 24 '25 200w

"This little book of Professor Millikan's is quite remarkable in that he has written it in such simple language as to make the most of it intelligible to persons of ordinary capacity. This does not mean that it is all as simple as Mother Goose; it means only that one may snatch from it the main idea of the electron, and the main idea is sufficiently dramatic and startling to satisfy the most jaded mind." T: L. Masson
+ Lit R p3 N 15 '24 620w

"While the ordinary educated layman may find himself bogged in a mathematical swamp, the author has no doubt been just as popular as he could be without the sacrifice of scientific authenticity. No doubt Professor Lewis of California and other chemist partisans of the 'loafer' electron theory will still dissent; but we have here astounding scientific revelations, and none can question Mr. Millikan's competence. His authentic demonstration of an atomic theory, which, strangely enough, reechoes the ideas of such worthies as Thales and Franklin, and Prout, gains ground steadily and is everywhere accorded increasing respect."
+ Nation 120:49 Ja 14 '25 120w

MILLS, ENOS ABIJAH. Rocky Mountain national park; with a foreword by Robert W. Johnson. memorial ed 239p il $2.50 Doubleday
711 Rocky Mountain national park 24-8898

"In 1905 the author brought out 'The Story of Estes Park and a Guide Book.' It was written because a guide book was needed and also for the purpose of recording the story of one of the historic places of the West before the pioneers and other sources of information had vanished. 'The Story of Estes Park' has gone through four editions. In its present form, 'The Rocky Mountain National Park,' all the original historical material of the book has been used, and in addition, chapters relating to the development of the region for recreational and educational purposes as a national park."—Preface

Boston Transcript p2 My 31 '24 280w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p443 My '24 150w

"It is an interesting volume, if somewhat rambling."
+ — Lit R p861 Je 28 '24 60w

"His two friends have done what little was possible in the short space accorded to them in this memorial volume, and between them they give to the reader some vital glimpses of the man himself, his feeling for the wild animals and plants that he loved so much, and the career that began so hopelessly and ended in such fine and signal achievement."
+ N Y Times p13 Ap 13 '24 800w

N Y Tribune p27 Ap 27 '24 130w

"It will be read with delight by the many who have visited the Rocky Mountain National Park, and with profit by those who intend to do so. Mills had unusual ability as a story-teller, and his studies of wild animals and their ways are often amusing and exciting."
+ Outlook 137:70 My 14 '24 330w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:370 Jl '24

MILN, LOUISE (JORDAN) (MRS GEORGE CRICHTON MILN). In a Shantung garden. 351p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
24-17123

"Mrs. Miln's latest novel of the Celestial Empire, is a romance of the love of a young American business man for a daughter of China. His father had told him 'Learn China and the Chinese. That is the one essential that I want you to accomplish presently. Take your time about it. Do it thoroughly.' Young Drew chose the most universal way of doing it, and in the old Shantung garden he learned a race through the heart of a woman."—N Y World

Booklist 21:69 N '24

Cleveland p67 S '24

"Mrs. Miln's extensive travels in Asia (her first book of the East was written, I believe, in 1894) have given her a fund of information which she transmutes into rich, glowing prose in her descriptive passages. Allusions to Chinese poetry and painting add delicate touches to her story, and through the medium of Tom Drew she gives a peek at the manners and customs of China's well-born that are even yet too little understood and appreciated in the West." J: J. McLaughlin
+ Lit R p988 Ag 23 '24 260w

New Statesman 24:56 O 18 '24 250w

N Y Times p18 Ag 10 '24 60w

"It is a clean and reasonably agreeable romance, but would hardly be absorbing if it were not for minor situations, minor characters and an attractive setting." Elizabeth Wyman

+ — N Y Tribune p25 Ag 10 '24 850w

"Besides picturesqueness and romance, the book reveals an understanding of rather queasy international problems." F. V. Roman
N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 90w

"The background is more worth while than the story, though the plot is well built and the climax dramatic."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:33 Ag 9 '24 120w

"'In a Shantung Garden' is decidedly attractive, for if by chance the story doesn't appeal, the vivid intimate, revealing descriptions of Chinese things hold attention."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 240w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p557 S 11 '24 220w

Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. When we were very young. 100p il $2 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]
821 24-29102

Frolicsome children's verses written by the well-known English author for a certain small person called Christopher Robin, who figures largely in the book. There are rhymes and pictures about all sorts and stations of beings and things from the kings and queens to teddy bears and dormice. The pictures are as gay as the rhymes.

"The imaginings, games, make-believes, expressions and bewitching traits of little children are difficult of capture. It is a rare author who can surmount that difficulty, but Mr. Milne is one. His capture of them has been so free of imprisoning qualities. He has given them the freshness and the artless charm of childhood itself. Every one who is, or who has ever been, a child, will enjoy this book." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p128 Ja '25 950w

"It is a great book. It is a little like A Child's Garden of Verses, and a little like Peacock Pie, but mostly like nothing at all but Mr. Milne and Christopher Robin—with seductive illustrations, in lovely lippety metres and splendid crispy rhymes." E. V.
+ New Repub 41:207 Ja 14 '25 300w

"Many thousands of people must have been waiting for this book, which gives permanent form to the delightful nonsense rhymes which Mr. Milne has been contributing to Punch during the past year. It is difficult to review such a book, because it seems impossible to convey in any words, except their own, the odd sentimental charm of Mr. Milne's verses."
+ New Statesman 24:178 N 15 '24 480w

N Y Times p16 Ja 11 '25 780w

"Here is that rare thing, a book about children which they may enjoy. The rhythm alone would hold them entranced, even without the absolute rightness of the sense and nonsense. The book has the vitality that children crave; there is nothing conventional between its covers, not an insipid line, either in the verses or in the drawings that so perfectly illustrate them." H. C. Forbes
+ N Y Tribune p6 D 14 '24 700w

"Not since 'Peacock Pie' have we found such drollery and naivete and wistfulness all piping together with such winning inevitability and radiant justice." Joseph Auslander
+ N Y World p8e D 14 '24 100w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman
Outlook 138:731 D 31 '24 130w

"Mr. Guiterman said that this was a book to get for 'a kind child who will let you read it out loud.' That is exactly true, but grown-ups with no children handy will enjoy it also, and it is not absolutely necessary for a child to be indulgent with his elders before he can listen to these rippling measures." E. L. Pearson
+ Outlook 139:68 Ja 14 '25 900w

"Quite one of the most delightful books for very small children (and for their elders who get a surreptitious joy from what is meant for their little ones) is this volume in which Mr. Milne's gay jingles have found a worthy accompaniment in the charming illustrations of Mr. Shepard."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:386 D 13 '24 120w

"The best praise of these poems is that all the fathers who can't write poems for their own Christopher Robins can find them here. And all the people who haven't got Christopher Robins of their own can love the Christopher Robin of the book."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 14 '24 400w

"Mr. Milne knows the secret of writing to charm and amuse a child, and to entertain and satisfy the grown-ups at the same time. He writes both for and about children in the same poem, and at his best is ravishing."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p765 N 20 '24 270w

MILNE, MRS LESLIE. Home of an Eastern clan; a study of the Palaungs of the Shan states. 428p il $5.35 Oxford [16s Milford]
915.9 Palaungs. Shan States [24-19213]

An account, based on first-hand observations extending over many years, of the life and customs of a little-known tribe of northeastern Burma which is as yet hardly touched by European civilization.

"It combines a charming style with strictly scientific method, making it at once an entertaining story of travel experiences and a reliable contribution to the science of philology, ethnology and folk-lore." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 2 '24 600w

"As a first full-length study of a vanishing people the work is valuable anthropologically. Yet apparent essential omissions or mis-emphases mar it as a scientific study. It is a faithful and earnest work, rather than an illuminating one." C. W.
+ — Lit R p13 Ag 30 '24 70w

"One lays the book down with the impression that it is all too good to be true. Morally, it is as true as a fairy tale, and literally as true, perhaps, as an account of the diurnal and nocturnal round by an exact and conscientious observer whose eyes have been shut during the night. A sympathetic rather than a scientific interpretation. And the folklore is delightful." Edmund Candler
+ Nation and Ath 35:488 Jl 12 '24 500w

"This book can be thoroughly recommended, for it contains a mass of interesting custom and belief; it is a work of folk lore rather than of anthropology, and it covers fresh ground."
+ New Statesman 23:680 S 20 '24 720w

Outlook 138:181 O 1 '24 10w

Spec 133:104 Jl 19 '24 230w

"The book is a record of high ethnological value."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p532 S 4 '24 1550w

MILTON, ARTHUR. Rome in seven days; a guide for people in a hurry. 111p $1.75 McBride [5s Mills & B.]
914.56 Rome—Description 24-13381

The author of "London in seven days" and "Paris in seven days" has shown in this volume how Rome may be seen in the same length of time. Starting with Monday, he makes out a program, geographically arranged for convenience. Each succeeding day of the week has its scheme of sight-seeing likewise arranged. As a good meal is essential to contentment in traveling Mr Milton has named the interesting restaurants, and the particular dishes that one should order in each.

MILTON, ARTHUR—Continued

"For all those who can assimilate works of art and Italian food with equal facility, Arthur Milton's 'Rome in Seven Days' is an ideal guidebook to the Eternal City."

+ Bookm 59:473 Je '24 220w

"A useful and engaging handbook of Rome for tourists whose time there is limited to a few days."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 23 '24 300w

N Y Tribune p28 Je 8 '24 120w

Outlook 137:71 My 14 '24 200w

St Louis p352 O '24

MINNIGERODE, MEADE. Fabulous forties, 1840-1850. 345p il $3.50 Putnam

917.3 United States—Social life and customs 24-6668

A picture of the decade of the forties in America, and especially in its metropolis. These were the days of the Elssler mania and Tippecanoe clubs and forty-niners, when P. T. Barnum was beginning to earn his title of prince of the humbugs, and Charles Dickens was visiting us, and the fight was on in the theater between Macready and Forrest. Mr Minnigerode shows the politics, home and social life, fashions, literary activities and recreations of this almost incredible era, America's "awkward age."

Booklist 20:333 Je '24

Cleveland p64 Jl '24

"There is just one adverse criticism to be made of this book. There isn't any relief from the monotony of satirical cleverness." B. B. K.

+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 11 '24 800w

"It is a laughable portrait that Mr. Minnegerode has painted; and it is as instructive as it is amusing." Brander Matthews

+ Int Bk R p354 Ap '24 1700w

"An interesting and it seemed to me a fairly accurate history by hearsay of a decade that lies beyond my own recollection was 'The Fabulous Forties.' " J. L. Ford

Int Bk R p785 O '24 650w

"His book is interesting, but not as interesting as it would have been if he had not marred some of his material by not letting it speak sufficiently for itself; his own comments are often superfluous and annoyingly smart instead of refreshingly brilliant." M. R. Werner

— + Lit R p609 Mr 22 '24 350w

Nation 119:343 O 1 '24 120w

"It is the work of an American who is fascinated by his material and who regards it as incredible largely because he is surprised by it. He displays the amusement of the provincial traveler who finds all foreigners funny if not absurd because they do not behave like the people on his own block, and who thinks that Englishmen are affected in their speech. The diary of such a traveler is often engaging, the detailed observations are often sound, but the generalizations are likely to be very fallible." P. H. Boynton

+ — New Repub 39:106 Je 18 '24 800w

Reviewed by I: Anderson

N Y Times p3 Mr 9 '24 2050w

Reviewed by J: L. Heaton

N Y World p6e Ap 6 '24 700w

"Although obviously lacking in the literary skill required for the writing of a coherent and well-arranged chronicle of a period rich in raw material, Mr. Minnigerode has nevertheless succeeded in hitting many of the high spots in the decade that he has made his own." J. L. Ford

+ — Outlook 136:527 Mr 26 '24 2100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:330 Je '24

Pratt p33 summer '24

R of Rs 70:670 D '24 130w

St Louis p385 N '24

Sat R 137:542 My 24 '24 300w

"The book, in truth, is amazing and curious from the first page to the last. The illustrations, from contemporary prints, are really staggering. They would seem to prove that American artists in the 'forties were—without knowing it—Impressionists or Cubists, or even Futurists, both as regards landscapes and figures. It is a real score for the most modern of the pictorial modernists." J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 132:881 My 31 '24 1400w

Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 600w

"Mr. Minnigerode has produced an excellent picture of an age, necessary perhaps in the development of a race, yet nevertheless unmourned by any today."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p325 My 22 '24 250w

"The Fabulous Forties must be read to be believed, and should be read by anyone interested in the development of the theatre in America, not merely for the joy he will have in the process, but for the many side lights it casts on mob psychology, the 'theatre for the people' and the ever engaging question of what the theatre is really all about!" Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:423 Je '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:211 O '24

MINOR, RUBY. Principles of teaching practically applied. (Riverside textbooks in education. Division of secondary education) 281p $1.90 Houghton 2

371 Teaching 24-9547

The book is a simple, readable statement of teaching technique, discussing the principles which teaching and studies in educational psychology have found to be of value. These are further explained by practical illustrations from schoolroom experience.

"Motives, incentives, atmosphere, thoroughness, review, forming habits, helping individuals, guidance of study, projects, records, discipline, every well known and many new particulars, are given clear and really alluring treatment. It is a fine piece of work well done."

+ Educ R 68:165 O '24 850w

"In summary, the book serves a useful purpose as a statement, in non-technical language, of the principles of instruction, supported by a wealth of concrete illustrative material taken from practice. It should prove stimulating to immature teachers and thus find a field of service and usefulness." F. D. McClusky

+ — El School J 25:147 O '24 900w

MIRICK, GEORGE ALONZO. Progressive education. 314p $1.90 Houghton

370.1 Education 23-13212

Progressive education accepts the facts of science regarding human nature and tries to use them in education. Mr Mirick devotes the first part of his book to showing that educational thinking should be the kind the scientist uses and that education should be based upon facts that scientific study has revealed about children. The second half of the book applies these facts more systematically to schoolroom practices, to show the kind of school we should have if we accepted them as educational principles.

Booklist 20:325 Je '24

"In both its formulation of principles and its more specific discussions, the book should exert a strong influence in the direction of schools so adapted to child-life as to permit self-development through activity, prompted by the child's own impulses and purposes in response to the richest environment—material, social, and curricular—which present-day culture can afford." T. D. Brooks

+ El School J 24:473 F '24 800w

"To a large extent, the volume is written in plain, untechnical language which even the lay reader should find little trouble in understanding." C. V. Good
+ School R 32:150 F '24 650w

MITCHELL, BENJAMIN WIESTLING. Trail
3 life in the Canadian Rockies. 269p il $3 Macmillan

917.12 Rocky mountains, Canadian. Mountaineering 24-31168

The author writes from the experience of nine summers spent in the wilds of the Canadian Rockies and the trail life which he describes was rigorous and full of adventure. He and his companions made the circuit of the Yoho valley, and ascents among the high peaks of the Selkirks. There were expeditions into the Saskatchewan wilderness, to the Columbia headwaters and to the sources of the Athabaska. Combined with eloquent descriptions of scenery is much practical advice to trampers and campers. Illustrated from photographs by the author.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 3 '25 380w

"The reader of this fine, true story of personal experience in Canada's great mountains will marvel often when he finds what heavy packs Dr. Mitchell and his comrade cheerfully assumed. On every page the enthusiasm of the aesthetic is balanced with the practical sagacity of the trained camper. Of such material, in physique and in disposition, the ideal mountaineer is made." F. L. Waldo
+ Lit R p6 D 20 '24 330w

N Y World p8e D 14 '24 80w

"In style it is too overlaid with adjective and simile to be truly excellent, but the author has approached his task with such enthusiasm, and there is so much of native interest in his subject, that the book makes very agreeable reading."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:438 Ja 3 '25 120w

MITCHELL, CHARLES AINSWORTH. Expert witness. 188p il $2.50 Appleton

347.94 Evidence (law). Identification

A continuation of the discussion begun by the author in an earlier volume, "Science and the Criminal." (Book Review Digest, 1911) He is concerned here not only with the methods of scientific proof but also with specialized evidence of every kind. Contents: Expert evidence; Evidence of identity; Identification of skin prints; Medicinal evidence; The evidence of the chemist; Scientific evidence in poison trials; Bacteriological evidence; Documentary evidence; The expert in handwriting; Experts in art; Application of expert evidence to history; Index.

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 1 '24 380w

Cleveland p55 Jl '24

"On these themes Mr. Mitchell can speak with authority, and this book is written in a style both straightforward and urbane."
+ New Statesman 22:460 Ja 26 '24 350w

MITCHELL, EDWARD PAGE. Memoirs of an editor. 458p il $4.50 Scribner

B or 92 Journalism 24-24253

Nearly all of Mr Mitchell's fifty years' journalistic experience has been with the New York Sun, for a third of that time as its editor-in-chief. He was with the Sun during the greater part of Charles A. Dana's editorship and many of his memories gather about Dana and his staff. There are recollections of the leading contributors to the paper, of the oddities connected with it and the political and economic issues for which it stood. The book is full of personalities and anecdotes about them.

Booklist 21:149 Ja '25

"'Memoirs of an Editor,' which bears the subtitle 'Fifty Years of American Journalism,' is without much doubt the most valuable and diverting of many books covering or touching upon this same field." L: Bromfield
+ Bookm 60:494 D '24 300w

Reviewed by Sylvester Baxter
Boston Transcript p1 N 1 '24 4800w

Reviewed by F. M. O'Brien
Int Bk R p119 Ja '25 1650w

New Statesman 24:274 D 6 '24 200w

"In the way and manner Mr. Mitchell has elected to write his story not a dull line cumbers these pages. The touch is light, the tone kindly, the style flows limpidly and always in sunlight." H: E. Armstrong
+ N Y Times p3 O 26 '24 1900w

"The 'Memoirs of an Editor' have high value as a contribution to the social and political history of our times. Naturally they possess unusual literary merit; Mr. Mitchell is a master craftsman with words. These reminiscences constitute a book to read and a book to preserve. For literary workers and other lovers of literature it is a mine of information; and it preserves (praise be! in permanent form) the deathless tale of the Nantucket whaler." H. M. Anderson
+ N Y Tribune p4 N 2 '24 1500w

Reviewed by W. P. Beazell
N Y World p9e O 12 '24 2200w

"It would be hard to find a more delightful book. Any well written story of a life is interesting, but the story of such a life as Mr. Mitchell's, by such a brilliant writer as he, is a choice addition to the literature of the country." C: H. Clark
+ No Am 220:359 D '24 970w

Outlook 138:341 O 29 '24 50w

"Mr. Mitchell's is a model autobiography, modest, yet sufficiently personal; and full of recollections of men and events since the days of Lincoln." E. L. Pearson
+ Outlook 138:688 D 24 '24 420w

R of Rs 70:668 D '24 180w

Springf'd Republican p8 D 22 '24 1250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p800 N 27 '24 900w

MITCHELL, RUTH COMFORT (MRS. WIL-
2 LIAM SANBORN YOUNG). White stone. 350p $2 Appleton

24-28668

"To him that overcometh will I give . . . a white stone." Around this biblical quotation is woven the story of Rejoice Evers, the proud and sensitive child of invalid parents. Rejoice, who is neither beautiful nor talented, is regarded with pity by the younger set of the smug San Franciscan suburb in which she lives, until she meets and marries Roland Duval, one of the world's great pianists. But her triumphant entry into the social world comes to an abrupt end, and she spends the years that follow in endeavoring to shield the ignoble character of her husband from the eyes of the public. This agonizing struggle comes to an end in the foothills of California where she brings Duval to regain his health. Here a new vision of life opens to Rejoice, bringing with it invaluable friendships and love.

"It is all told one of those stories written for romantic girls and disappointed women, where the author subtly suggests that though you may be as poor and unattractive a grub as Rejoice, there may be marvelous fortune waiting just around the corner for you. The reason for the appeal of these stories is very obvious, but this does not imply that they have an literary value." D. L. M.
— Boston Transcript p2 Ja 24 '25 950w

"Miss Mitchell's flair for breezy inconsequentiality saves many of her situations from being banal. The great mass of the reading public will find this novel enormously to their taste and will imbibe its saccharine philosophy, nothing doubting." H. A. Jaggard
— + Lit R p6 D 20 '24 500w

MITCHELL, R. C.—Continued

"The first chapters of the book form a vivid, truthful narrative of the experiences and humiliations of a plain girl, and they also give an excellent picture of the commonplace group of people among whom her lot was cast. The beginning of the second part of the novel also is well done. It is when the story moves to Cypress Ranch that it begins to drag and to lose its effect of reality."

+ — N Y Times p21 D 28 '24 600w

"Three-quarters of this entirely readable novel is applesauce, manufactured to be ladled out in neat installments through the popular magazines. The fourth quarter is the stuff of life; real character, inevitable situations and honest treatment, though perhaps a trifle polemical rather than artistic."

— N Y Tribune p13 D 14 '24 520w

"As a character study and strong love story Miss Mitchell has produced an even more readable book than her 'Corduroy.' "

+ N Y World p8e D 7 '24 110w

MITCHISON, MRS NAOMI. When the bough breaks. 318p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Cape] [24-21409]

"The connecting link in these stories is that they all deal with Roman history. The first of the stories is 'The Hostages.' Under the general title 'Vercingetorix and the Others' are three brief tales; 'Cottia Went to Bibraete,' 'The Man From Alesia' and 'Got to Put Up With It Now.' In the first of these Vercingetorix appears at the height of his power; in the second, one of his followers tells of his last battle and surrender, although this is merely incidental to the main theme of the story; and in the third we see Vercingetorix in a Roman prison awaiting the end. 'The Triumph of Faith' is a story of the early Christians. 'When the Bough Breaks,' the last story in the book, tells of the sacking of Rome by Alaric."—N Y Times

"She has written a volume so scholarly that only the educated will enjoy it, and yet so—shall we say 'modern'—that it could not be put into the hands of young people who are still young enough to read their Christmas presents."

Boston Transcript p4 S 24 '24 310w

"All the tales, but one, are written in the colloquial first person, but the clipped speech, couldn't, wouldn't, shouldn't, wasn't, there'd—becomes provocative, and one is soon involved in a game of counting. The modern treatment hardly illuminates." Austin Clarke

— Nation and Ath 35:150 My 3 '24 180w

"All the stories are simply told and they have no moral. Each story is complete in itself. In each there are characters who interest us because they seem to be at once true to the time in whch they lived and true to what in human nature remains unchanged. None of these characters are very complex, nor, on the other hand, are they types. They are simple and often attractive individuals." Ralph Wright

+ New Statesman 23:130 My 10 '24 900w

"The book has nothing whatever in common with the standardized brand of fiction dealing with ancient times. There is none of that stilted oratorical language which so many writers of historical novels put into the mouths of their characters. And, best of all, the characters are neither impossible paragons of virtue nor equally impossible monsters of cruelty and vice. They are human beings, swayed by human passions and emotions and reacting to their environment very much as men and women of today do to theirs."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 24 '24 600w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 150w

"Mrs. Mitchison has an uncanny power of making you feel that she was there; that the external habits, the moral codes, the very moods and thoughts, of her Romans and barbarians are natural, simple, inevitable, true. Believers in reincarnation will be interested in this phenomenon. Lovers of good writing will be interested in the book for reasons more direct: there is much in it that is powerful and touching, and the sack of the city by the Goths at the end is full of pity and terror." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 137:441 Ap 26 '24 200w

"When the Bough Breaks is full of movement and colour. It has no airs and graces, no preciosity, no parade of learning, but it has an engaging eagerness and frankness, an historical sense, and the rare power of making character rise like a phoenix, and not like a skeleton from the ashes of the past." L. P. Hartley

+ Spec 132:679 Ap 26 '24 320w

"Interesting, delightful, and fresh as morning dew."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p284 My 8 '24 300w

MOFFAT, J., tr. See Bible. Old Testament

MOLNAR, FRANZ. Husbands and lovers. 264p $2 Boni & Liveright

894 24-7747

In this collection of nineteen rather audacious short dramatic dialogues, Franz Molnar, thru the medium of flippant and sprightly conversation, expatiates upon the affairs of the heart. The eternal feminine and masculine play about with love. The dialogues are satirical and sophisticated with an alarming touch of levity. Contents: A matter of husbands; The key; Two slaps in the face; The knight of the Blue chin; Lies; A street and number; Heavenly and earthly love; The unpardonable sin; The kiss.

"A flabby representation of Viennese life and people as a lot of husbands and wives playing a game of hide and seek with each other and society, is rather unfair to Vienna, and is such an aping of Boccaccio as requires, to justify its presentation to a modern audience, a fresh approach and a new utilization of suspense, surprise, and thrill."

— Boston Transcript p6 Mr 12 '24 240w

"On the whole, the semi-dramatic rendering of life which Molnár has attempted in the dialogues of 'Husbands and Lovers' is an attractive form of literary self-expression for a man like Molnár, who possesses the gift to be both a fascinating dramatist and an interesting novelist." Emil Lengyel

+ Lit R p773 My 24 '24 650w

"It is frankly sophisticated. But for the adult of catholic and cosmopolitan taste such literary sophistication sweeps down across our arid desert of sex novels and sex stories like a gust of refreshing wind; it is a draught of cool water on a parched tongue."

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 30 '24 1700w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 150w

MONAHAN, MICHAEL. Heinrich Heine; romance and tragedy of the poet's life; with a critical appreciation. 199p $2 Brown, N. L.

B or 92 Heine, Heinrich 24-3684

"Mr. Monahan has written of the high lights in this great satirist's life: the episodes with Red Sefchen and with Amalie, his adoration of the pre-Brumaire Napoleon, his quips of pedantic Gottingen, his mattress-grave in Paris. He has recorded, above all, eclipsing facts of delightful because presumably unwonted tenderness, the marvelous witticisms that with much less irony than they themselves possess, have become our best hereditary link with the author of 'Die Harzreise.' "—Boston Transcript

Bookm 59:352 My '24 120w

"Mr. Monahan makes him out a readable if not an arresting or distinguished brief. This brief is written with a temperance it may be guessed the writer did not learn from his engrossing subject, but it is bitter-sweet now and then in sly patches of near animus turned against certain humans whom, for these purposes, Mr. Monahan knows—and here he does show a well-served apprenticeship—how to treat as excellently as they would have fared under the lash of the pride of Dusseldorf himself." J. W. L.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 5 '24 490w

"Immediately under the wand of this born 'causeur,' we feel that it hardly matters what he has to say of Heine, so long as Michael Monahan says it. . . One might even go so far as to say of Mr. Monahan's 'Heine' that, if it has one defect, it has too little of Michael Monahan. Let it not be doubted that as a study it has real value, as probably the completest presentation of Heine in all his protean moods: but, at the same time, we are first on the watch for Mr. Monahan's familiar 'asides.'" R: Le Gallienne

+ Int Bk R p272 Mr '24 3300w

"There is no use to argue with Mr. Monahan: his dual sub-title makes debate ineffectual. He has laid his feelings down in words that are final. He has expressed his opinions in really 'remarkably' good form—clear, concise, mordant where softness would obviously be out of place. He is altogether generous, and in the main sensible enough."

+ — Lit R p649 Ap 5 '24 180w

Reviewed by Ludwig Lewisohn

Nation 118:307 Mr 19 '24 1100w

"'Heinrich Heine,' if a slender book, is a colorful one."

+ N Y Times p14 F 3 '24 2000w

"Not only a welcome addition to the all too scanty records of the poet's life and writing, but unique and charming in itself. Michael Monahan's inimitable style, his feeling for romance and beauty, his dry, clever sense of humor were never shown to better advantage. It would be as impossible to miss the flavor of his own personality in the pages of this book as to be cold to the enthusiasm he engenders for his subject."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 23 '24 600w

MONKHOUSE, ALLAN NOBLE. Conquering hero; a play in four acts. (Contemporary British dramatists) 96p $1.50 Stokes [3s 6d Benn]

822

A psychological drama of war-time England. The tragedy it depicts is in the soul of an idealist and conscientious objector set in the midst of militant relatives, very vocal in their patriotism and their scorn of the young pacifist. His father, a fine type of professional soldier, is more reticent and kindly but his pain over his son's unpopular opinions is harder to bear than the more aggressive attitude of the others. Finally Chris is goaded into enlistment and comes back irreparably broken, not so much in body as in soul.

Lit R p932 Ag 2 '24 220w

"A sympathetic but not mawkish study of the tragedy of a young idealist in the late war."

+ New Statesman 22:490 F 2 '24 90w

N Y Tribune p26 Ag 3 '24 30w

"Good as a play and good—extraordinarily good—as a psychological study." Martin Armstrong

+ Spec 131:743 N 17 '23 700w

"Mr. Monkhouse can hardly have expected that the theatre—or even a dramatic society—would venture on 'The Conquering Hero.' It is a war play; and the public taste, we believe, declines war plays. It is a play full of unpopular opinions, of a dreadful irony, of intense suffering. It lays bare feelings on which one can scarcely endure to look, yet which lure one with the fascination of truth."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p36 Ja 17 '24 180w

Theatre Arts Mo 8:348 My '24 140w

MONKHOUSE, ALLAN NOBLE. My daughter Helen. 311p $2 Harcourt

24-20560

A devoted father who had dreamed of a free and glorious life for his motherless daughter is forced to look on helplessly while she makes a tragic mistake in her choice of a husband and at the misfortunes which pile up after her marriage. Marmaduke Abney fulfilled the worst fears of his father-in-law. Flighty and unstable, he is from the first a disturbing element in the family and soon becomes a disgrace. Helen's father never fails in tenderness toward her and generosity to Marmaduke. Father and daughter are alike in loyalty and meet with courage each storm that breaks over their heads, but when Marmaduke finally takes himself out of their lives, the relief is keen, if unacknowledged. The story is a delicate psychological study of the relation of father and daughter.

Booklist 21:112 D '24

"The novel is written in biographical style as the name suggests, and is done in a manner so unselfconscious, that to read it is like eavesdropping upon the lives of the three principal characters." L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 27 '24 720w

"It is something of a tour de force, but it holds up throughout with no strain and with no feeling of over-elaboration. It is a fine piece of literary artistry." H. L. P.

+ Lit R p9 S 13 '24 300w

"Mr. Monkhouse has given us a very understanding and sympathetic study of father and daughter, with the father's point of view conscientiously maintained. Friendly reviewers overemphasize the subtlety and insight of the study, but they can do no more than justice to its rightness of feeling, and scrupulous honesty of presentation."

+ — New Repub 40:152 O 8 '24 160w

"If the book has defects—the lack of interest begotten by even so unusual a formula, the diffusion and limitation of scope inherent in a narrative restricted to one character—it also has very real qualities. In the first place, all the characters are solid, human, tangible types. . . In the second place, through the method of narration, Mr. Monkhouse has been able to make some very sage and sensible comments on human affairs."

+ — N Y Times p9 S 21 '24 760w

"This sort of special pleading not only fails of its intended effect, but tends to one exactly opposite. And to me there is even something oversweet in the mellowness of that style, which reminds me of a 'sleepy' pear, overripe, verging on the pulpy first stage of decay. As for Helen, the titular heroine—she is a fool. She could be made endurable only by the wit of a Jane Austen, which is lacking." Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p4 O 5 '24 800w

"He has done, obviously for a small but deeply appreciative audience, a fine-tempered, beautiful thing; lit with a strange inner beauty—a beauty complete and individual. It is so quietly done and with such an assured touch that its strength and scope are at first hardly felt, but grow until they evoke fascinated conviction. 'My Daughter Helen' is a thoroughly satisfying novel." Howard Devree

+ Sat R of Lit 1:139 S 27 '24 850w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 330w

MONROE, ARTHUR ELI, ed. Early economic thought; selections from economic literature prior to Adam Smith. 400p $3.50 Harvard univ. press [16s Milford]

330.8 Economics 24-2301

"Contains selections from economic literature before Adam Smith. The extracts given range from Aristotle to Antonio Serra, and from Thomas Mun to von Justi, the aim in translations being to keep to the English idiom without departing too much from the author's own style. With regard to the collection as a whole, the editor has endeavored to safeguard the individuality of the authors and, now that the barriers of language and inaccessibility have been overcome for them, serious economic students have an opportunity of adding to their scholarship." (Spec) The other authors from whose works selections have been taken are: Xenophon, St Thomas Aquinas, Oresme, Molinaeus, Bodin, Sir William Petty, Hornick, Cantillon, Galiani, David Hume, Quesnay, and Turgot.

MONROE, ARTHUR ELI, ed.—Continued

"For the student seeking some conception of economic thought prior to Adam Smith, without depending entirely on secondary sources, this is an excellent aid. They are well chosen, always extensive enough to give an adequate idea of the author's style and thought, and several of them especially welcome because they have hitherto been inaccessible to most of us." G. A. K.
+ Am Econ R 14:298 Je '24 160w
Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 500w

"It is, on the whole, a good selection. The book is excellently printed."
+ — New Statesman 22:770 Ap 5 '24 200w

Reviewed by E. R. A. Seligman
Pol Sci Q 39:500 S '24 90w

"This is an admirably produced and edited volume."
+ Spec 132:970 Je 14 '24 90w

MONROE, HARRIET. The difference, and other poems, including the Columbian ode. 123p $2 Hyman-McGee
811 24-11156

The book contains practically all of the author's poems to date. "Miss Monroe, in a prefatory note, offers her book more or less in the nature of a contemporary historical exhibit. While the inclusion in the book of the 'Columbian Ode' of thirty years ago serves to measure the temperamental distance from our own skeptical and disillusioned days, the element of contrast is more pointedly revealed in the effective title poem in two parts—'1823' and '1923.' " (Bookm)

" 'The Difference' is, by all odds, the most interesting poem in the book. On the whole, one closes the book grateful for the vivid and interesting title poem, two or three graphic portraits in bold, brief strokes, and a singing lyric" D. Morton
+ Bookm 60:94 S '24 320w

"Miss Monroe's selection of subject is excellent. When she tries to be dramatic, she lacks strength. The technique used by Miss Monroe is evident. That she imitates Miss Lowell is all too apparent. She might do better if she imitated that conscientious, talented poet, Elizabeth Coatsworth, who never over-strains her medium." D. F. G.
— Boston Transcript p2 Je 21 '24 350w

"As a poet, Miss Monroe falls short of genius, but many of the pieces in the present little book are entitled to an honorable place in any anthology of American verse, especially her somewhat long poem, 'Ten Years Old,' and very nearly all of the vignettes included under the title 'At the Prado.' " P. A. Hutchison
— + N Y Times p24 Je 1 '24 250w

MONTAGU, ELIZABETH (ROBINSON) (MRS EDWARD MONTAGU). Queen of the blues; her letters and friendships from 1762 to 1800; ed. by Reginald Blunt. 2v 369;389p $10 set Houghton [42s Constable]
B or 92

"The late Mrs. Emily Climenson published in 1906 a first instalment of a memoir of her accomplished great-great-aunt, covering the first forty years of that lady's life, with a representative selection of letters written or received by her during that period. The two volumes edited a century earlier by Matthew Montagu stopped at about the same date (1761), and very little of the Montagu correspondence from 1762 to 1800 had been printed. At Mrs. Climenson's death the whole of this material was bequeathed to Mr. Blunt with discretionary powers. In due course Mr. Blunt was confronted with some 5,000 letters in quarto, of which many are of immense length and nearly all are undated. Availing himself of Mrs. Climenson's unpublished labours (she had reached 1784), supplementing them by his own researches, and applying heroic remedies, the indomitable editor has cut away all the elaborate openings and studied conclusions, masses of domestic detail, 'nine-tenths of the fine passages which evoked the enthusiasm of her correspondents,' and has served up what remains in two volumes."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The letters form, under Mr. Blunt's skilful and sympathetic grouping of the extracts from them, a distinct contribution to literature, and to the enjoyment of their future leaders, drawing from their brilliant pages such largesse of anecdote, of wit, of humor and of the 'philosophy,' of an appealing temperamental age as is seldom so generously given." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 5 '24 900w

"In Mr. Blunt's hands the letters are such as anyone would be delighted to receive from a friend to-day." L. Collison-Morley
+ Nation and Ath 34:493 D 29 '23 380w

Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison
N Y Times p1 F 10 '24 3500w

"Mr. Blunt has had to select his material from an enormous mass of documents, letters, books and papers, and it was impossible for him in the limits of two volumes to supply more than a minimum of comment and narrative between the letters and excerpts, but this work is of the greatest value in the study of the eighteenth century." Burton Rascoe
+ N Y Tribune p17 F 17 '24 1300w

"Readers will be grateful to him for the laborious care with which he has put the letters together, and the flow of explanation and comment, which tells them in the pleasantest manner possible exactly what they should know to obtain the fullest enjoyment of the letters themselves. That enjoyment is considerable. The letters are wise and witty, interesting and amusing."
+ Sat R 136:682 D 22 '23 380w

"Very readable and delightfully illustrated volumes."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p761 N 15 '23 1650w

MONTAGUE, CHARLES EDWARD. Hind let loose. 264p $2 Doubleday
24-4264

"An early book by C. E. Montague which has just been brought out in a first American edition. The hero—or rather the admirable scoundrel—is a leader writer for two Midland metropolitan papers. By deceit and cunning he has obtained two positions, writing opposite editorials on the same situation every night. He actually occupies one office, where he writes both pieces and his wife takes one of them to the opposition paper, carrying on the deceit as if it had been written at home. Colum Fay, the wild and brilliant Irishman who wears the double mask for Mr. Montague's polemical figure, is a vivid achievement in characterization. The book itself is slight, but it is a vicious indictment of the newspaper partisan."—N Y World

"There are many overtones of satire, which keep the reader in a constant mood of true comedy, 'the laughter of the mind.' The book is certainly one to keep and return to." R. M. Gay
+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '24 560w
Booklist 20:301 My '24

"It is an extraordinarily ironic and clever account of how an editorial writer can work for both sides of a single question. The story is written by a journalist who knows his own profession only too well. Also the style in which the book is written is caustic, penetrating, yet with an elaboration of phrasing which will startle the average reviewer." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 8 '24 520w

"As to the statement and the working out of his theme Mr. Montague is superbly equipped: yet in his manner of writing there seems to be a flaw. His mind seems to be so steeped in classical and historical knowledge—although his writing is far from a reflection of pedantry—that his pages are strongly flavored with allusions, metaphors and comparison to ancient things to the extent that they frequently become obstacles instead of illuminations. They are scattered so thickly through the book that his writing takes on a rhetoricity which detracts from the narration of his splendidly conceived story." Howard Weeks

+ — Detroit News p8 F 17 '24 800w

Dial 77:264 S '24 80w

"This is the most brilliant novel that it has been the good fortune of the reviewer to encounter this year." G. W. J.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 11 '24 450w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter

Int Bk R p398 Ap '24 600w

"He has achieved so interesting and absorbing a composition that all thought as to his novelty or plausibility is shaken off as inconsequential and even forcibly intrusive. . . Mr. Montague is a master of delicate satire. Not for him the axe of clamoring appeal—he seems most unconcerned whether his points are made or not. He never cries 'touch,' and in not a few instances checks his thrust so far from its mark that the lazy mind is forced to decide between work and irritating recognition that there is something precious just beyond reach."

+ N Y Times p9 F 24 '24 1000w

"As a piece of satire it is eloquent and its humor is ferocious. I do not know if the average reader will follow some of its sallies, since it is written purely from the inside, but it is recommended to all newspaper men over here, and as a bedside book for editorial writers." Laurence Stallings

+ N Y World p6e Ja 27 '24 900w

"Mr. Montague's style is Meredithian—the quintessence of the metaphorical, the allusive, the indirect. It is so artfully rounded out that without analysis it seems spontaneous; though somehow lacking the Celtic exuberance, celebrated by the author in his preface, that would make it unequivocally so. Its subtlety and richness, tokens of the author's fine intellect and sensibility, invariably repay explication."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 25 '24 750w

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 8 '24 1000w

Springf'd Republican p9a My 4 '24 200w

Wis Lib Bul 20:98 Ap '24

MONTAGUE, CHARLES EDWARD. The right place. 225p $2.50 Doubleday

824 Travel [24-18324]

The sub-title, "A book of pleasures," is perfectly descriptive. It is all about holidays and travel—in the Alps, along English country roads, thru the streets of great cities. Wherever we are is the right place, if it be only reading a map, for the delights Mr Montague describes reside more in ourselves than in the place.

Booklist 21:17 O '24

Bookm 60:86 S '24 210w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 25 '24 800w

"A volume which the discerning reader will cherish, worthy to be added to his collection of 'bedside books,' to be kept at hand for comfortable re-reading. . . There is a genial whimsicality, a kindliness that does not prevent sharp criticism where criticism is necessary, but makes for a hopeful, healing outlook upon life in Mr. Montague's philosophy. His thinking has clean sharp-cutting edges, and if it does not pretend to cut very deeply there is always a beautiful precision about it." H. L. P.

Lit R p894 Jl 12 '24 360w

"One may doubt whether, lacking serenity, he will be permanent. His bitterness against the evils of today—the politicians, the war-makers, the social parasites who are 'cultured' and work not—is meat and drink to his own generation, the majority of which hungers in vain for leisure, for a sight of the South, for the glory of Italy. A future age may not comprehend this rankling sense of injustice, which may thus interfere with his prestige as a classic—but we are now too sympathetic, and share too many of his hatreds, to be super-critical." R: Church

+ — Nation and Ath 35:56 Ap 12 '24 450w

"There are excellent things in this book, essays full of that keen and rather embittered sense which has marked other work of Mr. Montague's, and his style here is generally as good as in his two last books, as good, that is, as an exquisite, arranged, deliberately effective style can be."

+ New Statesman 22:768 Ap 5 '24 840w

"'The Right Place' is a rare book, the kind which comes once in a great many whiles. Montague confronts nature with the calm of a Wordsworth, he observes her with the reticent yet penetrating scrutiny of a Hudson."

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 6 '24 1600w

"It is subtly satisfying. Mr. Montague has conceived the idea of a travel book in no way like any other travel book that was ever written. Joy of travel is in it, joy of life, of living, of pure motion. But there is more. There is joy of understanding, of the mind, too. And words—Mr. Montague must love them truly to use them so!" Kenneth Rede

+ N Y Tribune p28 Jl 13 '24 820w

"It is a gallant book, full of high adventure, quick with the zest of living, sturdy for all its ready enthusiasm, and mellowed now and again by a wistfulness that creeps almost unawares into its exuberance of mood."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:12 Ag 2 '24 380w

"Everywhere he gives us something more than a tourist's rhapsody and fine writing, for all these essays have a philosophical background, and this background is frankly recognized and partly explored in the very last paper of all." J. B. Priestly

+ Spec 132:508 Mr 29 '24 620w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 240w

Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 750w

"The truth may be old, but this book renews it with an immediate, ubiquitous reality. The blessedness of those times when the visions of the eye and the mind complete each other emerges with a rich and keen precision. There is a genuineness in every page; and the pleasant things there, the fine glow in them, and the high-hearted temper of it all are sure of gratitude."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p141 Mr 6 '24 1050w

MONTGOMERY, ELIZABETH SHAW. Scarlet runner. 96p $2 Crowell

811 23-17862

"This is a first book of poems by a woman long identified with poetry interests in New York City. It is composed of lyrics and sonnets and the themes are the phenomena of nature and love and sorrow."—Outlook

---

"Hesitancy of thought and execution continually mars 'Scarlet Runner.' Yet occasionally Mrs. Montgomery can express her feeling of uncertainty vividly enough."

— + Bookm 59:355 My '24 50w

"Altogether this volume contains much that is delightful and nothing that seems artificial or straining for effect in construction or content."

+ Boston Transcript p13 Mr 29 '24 240w

Reviewed by Milton Raison

N Y Tribune p18 Ja 13 '24 270w

MONTGOMERY, E. S.—Continued
"While the poems as a whole are lacking in distinction, there are occasional instances of authentic imagination and feeling and of fortunate phrasing."
— + Outlook 136:70 Ja 9 '24 60w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p27 Ja 10 '24 40w

MONTROSS, LOIS SEYSTER. Crimson cloak. 71p $1.75 Boni & Liveright
811 24-9909

Love lyrics and some poems of more dramatic quality make up this first book of verse.

"Here is verse filled with ideas and with spirit; but it is, much of it, very conventional both in form and in thought. The author undoubtedly has a poetic gift; but it seems to be scattered and uncontrolled in this first volume." J: Donelson
+ — Bookm 59:604 Jl '24 130w
Lit R p859 Je 28 '24 180w

"Mrs. Montross has written some love poems which are better at the first than at the second reading. Their note is an intense one, and their inspiration is doubtless true; but a certain over-neatness about their conclusions, a finality of touch, robs them of their full effect." Mark Van Doren
— + Nation 118:712 Je 18 '24 200w

"The verses are often uncombed and there is frequently evident an inclination to put up with the first word that comes to hand whether it convey the precise shade of meaning or not. But in spite of this and in spite of certain deficiencies in metrical technique there are many good things in the book, things fashioned into real values through a luxuriance of fancy and an extreme sensitivity of mood."
+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 6 '24 320w

"'The Crimson Cloak' has a certain originality and dashing expression. The author has the careless enthusiasm of youth and its smiling cynicism, the rather 'fin de siècle' manner of Dowson and Symons. She succeeds in echoing many things in her ardent verses." B. S. Wagstaff
+ N Y Tribune p22 My 25 '24 220w

"An obviously youthful yet not unpromising first book of verse by Lois Seyster Montross . . . she is a clever, rather intense young woman who is likely to turn out some good and original work." Arthur Guiterman
+ — Outlook 137:157 My 28 '24 240w

MONTROSS, LYNN. Half gods. 296p $2 Doran
24-8791

"A story of the narrow yet intense life of the little Main Street home town in the Middle West to which Frances Leeper returns after her college course and straight from a job in Boston. The half-hour revolt of her meek gray-haired father and the street fight in which the young village preacher administers a dose of muscular Christianity to the ruffian who has insulted Frances are the two most stirring incidents in the book."—N Y World

"Mr. Montross has done an intelligent piece of work. It errs, as does that of all his school, in the degree in which it is most accurately detailed. 'Half Gods' is worth the reading." F. A. G.
+ — Boston Transcript p1 My 31 '24 300w
Cleveland p51 Jl '24
Int Bk R p678 Ag '24 440w
Reviewed by Howard Devree
Lit R p661 Ap 12 '24 350w

"Insouciant, defiant pagan that she is, the girl Frances wins from us not so much our admiration as our pity. For though with her we watch her half gods vanish after so brief a reign, we glimpse the advent of no god worthy of the title or the succession. Mr. Montross's brew, strong as it gave promise of being, shows signs of having been watered—and the flavor suffers by the process." C. N.
— New Repub 38:346 My 21 '24 50w

"'Half Gods' is a very clever piece of work indeed—the fruit of a faculty for observation that never flags. But it is one of an order whose repetition is beginning to dull the contemporary critical sense. It is only from afar or seen in perspective that bulk assumes a quality and reiteration acquires a meaning."
— + N Y Times p8 Ap 6 '24 900w
Reviewed by Lois Montross
N Y Tribune p30 Ap 27 '24 750w
Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 90w

"On his tiny stage, with the now familiar setting of the provincial town in midland America, he has tried to focus his impression of this restless and rudderless generation. This narrative is not a satire, but a thoughtful presentment of a society at odds with itself." H. W. Boynton
+ Outlook 137:33 My 7 '24 280w

MOORE, MRS ALICE MEDORA (ROGERS). Chinese recipes; letters from Alice Moore to Ethel Moore Rook. 113p $1.50 Doubleday
641 Cookery, Chinese 23-18423

In letters home the author sends a lively account of life in Peking to-day. Recipes for many excellent, easily prepared dishes are included, along with anecdotes of the curious and interesting ways in which they were obtained.

Booklist 20:205 Mr '24
"Interesting, valuable little book." J. D. S.
+ N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 300w

MOORE, ANNIE CARROLL. New roads to childhood. 209p $2 Doran
028.5 Children's literature 23-17819

The supervisor of work with children in the New York public library here brings together the reviews of children's books which she has written for the Bookman during the last three years. Contents: The romance of the streets; David Copperfield's library; Illustrating books for children; Who is writing for children; Story-telling and the art of reading; Some unusual books; Making a library; Holiday books; The unwritten review; The children of France; Visits to French and English publishers; Recent Italian children's books; The creative spirit in America; Index.

Booklist 20:119 Ja '24
"'New Roads to Childhood' is charmingly written; it should be read by anyone who is directing the reading of a child."
+ Bookm 58:671 F '24 120w

"Such a charming road does Miss Moore picture, that reading of it will make any grown up wish to start at once back along this route. Always Miss Moore insists that the best illustrators, the greatest poets, the cleverest cartoonists, the subtlest playwrights, should give only of their finest productions to the little 'fathers of men.' She has an unusual gift for inspiring and stimulating the best of us to take pride in writing for children."
+ Bookm 59:610 Jl '24 150w

"Especially interesting are the chapters that describe the Charles Dickens Library for Children that has been established in the Micawber house of his childhood."
+ N Y Times p12 F 3 '24 440w
Reviewed by G. M. Goldman
N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 140w
Wis Lib Bul 20:209 O '24

MOORE, ANNIE CARROLL. Nicholas; a Manhattan Christmas story. 331p il $2 Putnam
24-24347

Nicholas is an interesting little Dutch boy who comes to New York on Christmas eve looking for Christmas. He has with him a pictorial map of the things he wants to see in New York—Statue of Liberty, Capt. Kidd's town house, Trinity church, Wall street, Bronx park, and many other interesting places. A Brownie gives a large party in Nicholas' honor which is held at the Public Library on Fifth avenúe, and at which Nicholas meets so many story book celebrities. During his visit he also becomes friendly with the Knickerbockers, and Washington Irving and even arouses the two lions which guard the library, so that when the day comes for Nicholas to sail he leaves behind him many friends who are loathe to see him depart.

Booklist 21:158 Ja '25

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Bookm 60:164 O '24 350w

"Miss Moore has made Nicholas so real, and his goings and comings so filled with magic, that the book actually relights old places for the reader." J. F.
+ Bookm 60:491 D '24 310w

"The light-joyous spirit of the narrative is quite captivating, but the language, one suspects, is sometimes too grown-up for children of the fairy-story age. Miss Moore, however, has drawn upon her long experience as a childrens' librarian in the making of this book, and it reads as if she had enjoyed writing it just as much as the little folks will enjoy having it read to them."
+ Int Bk R p57 D '24 320w

"A rich handfull of a book Miss Moore has written that will be unusually precious to children who have cut their teeth on New York's skyline and to children afar to whom it is a longed-for fairyland, some day to rise above the horizon. Mr. Jay Van Everen has provided drawings in the manner of woodcuts as understandable as they are understanding of the event and for good measure one of the most engaging maps in or out of fairyland." Geoffrey Parsons
+ N Y Tribune p6 S 28 '24 550w
Outlook 138:412 N 12 '24 50w

MOORE, GEORGE. Conversations in Ebury Street. 315p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

824 Authors. Literature 24-30885

Conversations on art, letters and life with Walter De la Mare, John Freeman, Edmund Gosse, Granville-Barker, Cunninghame Graham, and others.

Bookm 60:504 D '24 230w
Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '24 650w

"The book is printed in that manner to which readers of Moore's latest volumes are now accustomed. There are no quotation marks, few paragraphs, few breaks of any sort. There are other departures from the customary, but there is no difficulty in getting the full meaning of what is written, and there is achieved a sense of continuity, of informality, of ease, difficult to explain but decidedly present." Hildegarde Hawthorne
Int Bk R p441 My '24 2050w

"It is one of the most useful and stimulating books for writers we have seen; it is irritating in spots, which is generally beneficial. A book written by any one who knows how to write is so rare that, in this instance it is difficult to avoid being over-enthusiastic, about it." T: L. Mann
+ Lit R p2 N 8 '24 1350w

"The tone of these conversations is for the most part the most mellow, affable and kindly to be found in any of Mr. Moore's books. The pity is the greater that he permitted himself the luxury of the attack which it contains upon Thomas Hardy." S: C. Chew
+ — Nation 119:645 D 10 '24 950w

"I do not think that 'Conversations in Ebury Street' is among the most successful of Mr. Moore's books—it certainly never reaches the level of the great trilogy of reminiscences or of 'Avowals'—but every page of it shows that the writer is an artist in words. And the achievement is both rare and enjoyable—sentences which flow with a rhythm and beauty of their own, forming themselves, under Mr Moore's patient and anxious guidance, so easily and yet so elaborately into the formal scheme of his paragraphs and the larger pattern of his 'Conversations.'" Leonard Woolf
+ — Nation and Ath 34:702 F 16 '24 1250w
New Repub 41:124 D 24 '24 750w

"The 'Conversations' are stimulating, provocative. There is contradiction and idiosyncrasy, but also a singular gusto. And for the pure joy of literary talk, Hazlitt's conversation of authors, Moore, Freeman and De La Mare's discussion of Pure Poetry, would be difficult to match. Altogether, this is a deliciously entertaining feat in modern letters." H: J. Forman
+ N Y Times p6 O 12 '24 1100w

"It is one of those rare books which, coming to the end of it, one feels it would be a pleasure to begin over again—a classic as surely as Landor or Jeremy Taylor or the Elizabethan lyricists to whom we return untiringly not for their words and thoughts but for the way they say them and think them. This book shows us Mr. Moore in his old age, without any flagging of his powers of imagination, still conscientiously perfecting his prose style, for much of the prose in Conversations In Ebury Street is the most perfect he has written." Martin Armstrong
+ Spec 132:sup413 Mr 15 '24 1350w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p63 Ja 31 '24 1200w

MOORE, HARRY HASCALL. Public health in the United States; an outline with statistical data; with an introd. by Haven Emerson. (Harper's public health ser.) 557p il $4 Harper

614 Public health. United States—Sanitary affairs 24-433

A very comprehensive book covering all phases of the organized effort to promote public health in the United States. The author, who has been associated for four years with the United States public health service, includes in his survey a discussion of the human and economic costs of disease, the results of the warfare against the major diseases, and an account of quackery and other unscientific forms of treatment. The rest of the book deals with the conquest of disease by health—the various health organizations and activities, and the whole matter of popular health education. The appendices contain many statistical tables and there is a bibliography. Index.

"The book should form the basis of an educational program for the health worker and should be of great value to him in educating his clients and in securing additional appropriations with which to carry on the activities of his department."
+ Am J of Public Health 14:146 F '24 1100w
Booklist 20:288 My '24

"A better social service could not well be performed than that rendered by this book, and its publication is surely entitled to inclusion among the notable humanitarian efforts of our time." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p6 F 23 '24 900w
Cleveland p72 S '24
Ind 113:105 Ag 16 '24 180w

Reviewed by J. A. Tobey
Int Bk R p190 F '24 160w

"The volume is of interest to medical and social workers and to the laity." D. B. Armstrong, M.D.
Lit R p524 F 16 '24 900w
Nation 119:393 O 8 '24 210w
Outlook 136:235 F 6 '24 40w
R of Rs 69:446 Ap '24 70w

"If legislators in England would read and take to heart the material in Dr. Roberts' book, as he evidently wants them to, and if the educated classes who mold public opinion in this country would read and absorb the information available in Mr. Moore's compendium, the English speaking races might be immeasurably better off." J. A. Tobey

MOORE, H. H.—Continued
+ Survey 51:533 F 15 '24 400w
Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

MOORE, JOHN BASSETT. International law and some current illusions; and other essays. 381p $4 Macmillan
341 International law and relations 24-13824

Dr Moore is judge of the Permanent Court of International Justice and in the winter of 1922-1923, as representative of the United States, was elected president of the International Conference at The Hague to make rules to regulate the use of aircraft and of radio in time of war. The papers are in the main a collection of addresses delivered during the last twelve years. Contents: International law and some current illusions; Contraband of war; International arbitration; The permanent court of international justice; Rules of warfare: aircraft and radio; Law and organization; The passion for uniformity; Suggestions for a school of jurisprudence; Relativity.

"The book is full of material for thought and few readers will not profit by reflection on Judge Moore's well-considered opinions." Quincy Wright
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:809 N '24 1300w
Booklist 21:53 N '24
Bookm 60:230 O '24 320w

"Dr. Moore's essays are of great interest and of great benefit in establishing some of the fallacies of public understanding of international law." S. L. C.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 28 '24 650w
Cleveland p93 D '24

"This is a volume which no persons seriously interested in international law and foreign relations can afford not to possess and assimilate. The repute, wisdom and insight of its author recommend his well-matured judgments." Elbridge Colby
+ Lit R p2 N 29 '24 1050w

"This book is a sane and sensible discussion of matters vital to American citizenship by a man of wide experience at home and abroad, of much learning, of scholarly tastes and judicial temper, a book it does one good to study." T. S. Woolsey
+ N Y Times p1 Jl 6 '24 1800w

"In discussing International Law and Some Current Illusions Professor John Bassett Moore performs a doubly valuable work, in correcting errors and in presenting pertinent truths." W. F. Johnson
+ No Am 220:181 S '24 320w

"It is a valuable and much-needed contribution."
+ Outlook 138:137 S 24 '24 200w

"The book is the sort to stimulate fresh thought on matters too infrequently the concern of the man in the street, who, in the last analysis, determines the application of the rules of war and peace." P. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 O 30 '24 600w

MOORE, THOMAS VERNER. Dynamic psychology; an introduction to modern psychological theory and practice. 444p $3 Lippincott
150 Psychology 24-25305

The author in the preface states that this work is an attempt to present the essentials of a course in psychology that will give the student an insight into the modern trends of psychology, a foundation for a practical understanding of his own inner life, and an introduction to the clinical problems of psychology. The book is divided into six parts as follows: The analysis of mind; Stimulus and response and human behavior; Human emotional life; The driving forces of human nature and their adjustment; Psychoanalysis and psychotherapy; Volitional control.

"Dr. Moore's spirit throughout is genial and urbane. His reading has been wide and thorough. His style is clear and his definitions are to the point. Occasionally, however, he makes use of rather careless English: 'Some place' for some where; 'to duly explain' and the like. He adds a glossary of technical terms, and his explanations are models of conciseness; but oddly enough he fails to include many that should have been." N. H. D.
+ — Boston Transcript p7 D 13 '24 1350w

"This is a solidly constructed volume that brings the complicated subject as nearly up to date as can be done in print."
+ N Y World p9e D 14 '24 160w

MORAN, HUGH ANDERSON. Creed for college men. 149p $1.25 Macmillan
^{2}
230 Christian life

Dr Moran who has spent most of his life among students has written this book especially for young men and women seeking to work out a philosophy of life based upon facts and truth. He discusses in an informal way such subjects as: Personality, human and divine; The origin and nature of evil; The divinity and personality of Jesus Christ; Body, mind, and spirit; The idea of the trinity; The psychology of religious experience; Prayer and miracles; The meaning of the cross.

N Y Times p10 D 28 '24 780w

MORAND, PAUL. Green shoots; with an introd. by A. G. Walkley; preface by Marcel Proust. 152p $1.75 Seltzer [6s Chapman & Dodd]
24-8045

A trio of impressionistic story studies of three young girls—Clarisse, Delphine, Aurore—seen thru the eyes of a Frenchman. Morand was in England at the outbreak of the war, went to the front and returned to undergraduate life at Oxford. The three girls are fantastic types, consciously exaggerated—decorations done in the most modern manner, but the Oxford and London which form their background have more reality.

Dial 77:171 Ag '24 80w

"Mr. Morand has a personal and charming style and a very pretty talent at analyzing complexities." J. W. Krutch
— + Nation 118:685 Je 11 '24 500w

"It is not necessary to compare 'Green Shoots' with the original to perceive that it is a very bad translation indeed. The three slight studies of women cannot be enjoyed because the reader is tormented by the questions; What was it Morand really said?" E. B. C. Jones
— Nation and Ath 34:548 Ja 12 '24 130w

"Morand's three studies are fantastic, unreal affairs, brilliantly written and full of what the wise Brontë children, when discussing literature in the nursery at Haworth parsonage, used to term 'cleverality.' "
+ — N Y Times p22 My 4 '24 950w

"His analyses of Clarisse, Delphine and Aurore are shrewd and amusing, no more. For me the best portions of the book are those which convey rather extraordinary impressions of life at Oxford and in London. Morand was educated at Oxford, and he brings to his criticism of English manners a Frenchman's point of view which is very refreshing." Burton Rascoe
— + N Y Tribune p25 Ap 27 '24 800w
N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 110w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p838 N 29 '23 260w

MORDAUNT, ELINOR, pseud. (MRS EVELYN MAY [CLOWES] WIEHE). Reputation. 369p $2 Small 24-11554

"The trouble begins in 1882, and, given the conventional rector's family, the date, and an uneasy girl ambitious to 'live,' the rest may be readily deduced. Claudia tried to solve the problem by running off, practically kidnaping an elderly roué, Lord Blagden, but she does it in incredible ignorance of its implications and promptly abandons the noble lover at an early stage of the journey. But she had acquired the 'reputation' of being an abandoned woman. Nevertheless, after some ostracism, she builds up a literary career for herself and finally marries, at forty, quite respectably. Section two exhibits her, however, as an awful example, for her niece narrowly escapes repeating her mistake. Finally, we get a peek at Claudia the third, of today, who is fully 'emancipated' and is not at all shocked by her great-aunt's prehistoric naughtiness."—Lit R

"The story has dramatic intensity and swiftness." F. W. Stokoe
+ Nation and Ath 34:348 D 1 '23 460w
Lit R p858 Je 28 '24 360w
N Y Times p8 My 18 '24 780w

"This is a sincere, unsensational, intelligent novel of genuine interest quite aside from the problem worked out in it, and there is a clever twist to the plot." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p24 My 18 '24 900w

MORE, PAUL ELMER. Christ of the New Testament. (Greek tradition) 294p $3 Princeton univ. press [13s 6d Milford]

232 Jesus Christ 24-18069

"In his preface the author tells us that he accepts the solid results of the past century gained by the German investigation in Biblical criticism, being specially indebted to such scholars as Johannes Weiss, Schweitzer, Kabisch, Wendt, and Eduard Mayer. But he is definitely hostile to the philosophy which lies behind this scholarship and believes that the achievements of higher criticism may be accepted without succumbing to a purely humanitarian view of Christianity. He covers a wide ground, starting with a chapter on 'Otherworldliness and Morality' and then dealing with the preparation and early years of Israel, the Kingdom, and repentance, purity of heart, the great Commandment, authority, and the Messianic Secret. Four chapters follow bearing on the headings, St. Paul, the Fourth Gospel, the Son of God, and Miracles and the Resurrection." —The Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 9 '24 200w
N Y Times p16 Je 22 '24 1400w

"This is surprisingly inept apologetic for a man of Mr More's discernment. Does he imagine that clauses 'unargued and unreasoned' are peculiarly convincing, or, for that matter, that they are peculiarly Greek? We are not helped much by the assertion that the full scope of religion requires a theology and a mythology as well as a philosophy."
— Springf'd Republican p10 Je 24 '24 500w

"The book secures the sustained attention of the reader, and frequently suggests lines of thought which have not received the attention they deserved, but it leaves us in some doubt as to the position of the author on many questions he discusses."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p479 Jl 31 '24 210w

MORE, PAUL ELMER. Hellenistic philosophies. (Greek tradition) 385p $4 Princeton univ. press

180 Philosophy, Greek 24-2328

"The present volume is the third in a still uncompleted series designed to trace the course of Greek philosophy and its interrelations with Christian thought. Though necessarily less detailed in its treatment than its predecessors, Platonism and The Religion of Plato, Hellenistic Philosophies is a much needed addition to the relatively few books in English dealing with the leading schools of Greek thought."—Cath World

Boston Transcript p4 Je 21 '24 2600w
Cath World 119:139 Ap '24 450w

"His style is a little too arid to be widely read, but the calm and disinterestedness of his views render him a much more important figure than his many and curiously hysterical detractors."
+ — Dial 77:84 Jl '24 70w

Reviewed by G: D. Meadows
Lit R p629 Ap 29 '24 1200w

"Dr. More's volume is a sterling compound of compilation and quotation, sturdily mortared by the abundant expression of his own views and opinions as a Platonist and a dualist. It tells us—often without too great difficulty—all that we need know about the currents of Greek thought through several centuries." H: B. Fuller
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 20 '24 600w

Reviewed by Lane Cooper
N Y Tribune p24 My 4 '24 1350w

"He writes with that unction and with that charm which make his book of an ancient philosophy what every book of philosophy ought to be, a book of adventure (of course, in this case a safe adventure) for the soul; and it is with passionate interest that one turns the pages of his book."
+ No Am 219:429 Mr '24 580w
Springf'd Republican p16 Jl 18 '24 330w

MORGAN, ARTHUR EUSTACE. Tendencies of modern English drama. 320p $3 Scribner [10s 6d Constable]

822.09 English drama—History and criticism [24-21444]

The aim of this study of modern English drama is to show the direction in which drama has been moving during the past fifty years and to how great an extent it has been a drama of ideas and an expression of the outlook on life of that period as interpreted by the dramatists. Contents: Of modern drama; The early Victorians; A mid-Victorian (Robertson); Late Victorians (Grundy); H. A. Jones and Pinero; Shaw the iconoclast; Shaw the philosopher; Barker; Hankin; Galsworthy; The Irish pioneers (Yeats, Martyn, Gregory); Synge; The drama of revolt (Houghton, Baker, Sowerby); Irish dramatists (Colum, Robinson); More Irish dramatists (Murray, Ervine); Fairy tales (Barrie); Masefield; Drinkwater; More poets (Dunsany, Flecker, Bottomley, Abercrombie).

Booklist 21:144 Ja '25
Boston Transcript p4 O 11 '24 640w

"His book, while not to be swallowed whole, is tonic for playwrights, their critics and their public."
+ — Dial 77:526 D '24 180w

"Mr. Morgan has no clear idea as to what a play is; he has no intimacy with the theater; he does not apprehend the close relation between the author and the actor; and, what is even more obvious, he has not troubled to acquaint himself with the history of the art, the contemporary manifestations of which he has rashly undertaken to weigh and measure." Brander Matthews
— Int Bk R p112 Ja '25 550w

"As a competent and often brilliant appraisal of the respective merits of the principal works of the leading dramatists of the last two generations this is a book which no student of the modern theatre can afford to neglect." J. R. Towse
+ Lit R p4 Ag 30 '24 1400w

"It is not to be supposed that Mr. Morgan's judgments are final; he is too near, we are too near, the period studied, for final judgment. But the thoroughness with which he has combed the material spread on the stage over recent years, and the thoughtfulness with which he has matured his opinions of that material, stamp 'Tendencies of Modern English Drama' as a book of supreme interest to all who are interested in the English-speaking theatre." P. A. Hutchison
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 3 '24 1450w

MORGAN, A. E.—Continued

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

Outlook 138:508 N 26 '24 120w

Outlook 138:604 D 10 '24 500w

St Louis p411 D '24

"Professor Morgan's book is a valuable and illuminating summary. His expositions occasionally precipitate him into familiar pitfalls. But he generally avoids the temptation to wander off into speculative criticism."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p337 My 29 '24 1200w

MORGAN, CHARLES STILLMAN. Regulation and the management of public utilities. (Hart, Schaffner & Marx prize essays) 362p $2.50 Houghton

380.16 Public utilities 23-11798

The treatise is devoted to the study of the management of a regulated industry, to determine the efficiency with which the industry is conducted and the causes for the large differences in the efficiency of various utility enterprises, and to show some methods at present used to promote efficiency. The author finds that there is not enough real competition in the public utility field to force the companies to make great effort in reducing costs and rates and improving service. He analyzes the sliding-scale method, the "service-at-cost" plan, and other schemes and offers some constructive suggestions.

Reviewed by W: Anderson

Am Pol Sci R 18:406 My '24 550w

Booklist 20:325 Je '24

"The book is one that deserves the close study of the utilities and their staffs, the financiers that dominate so many of the utilities, city officials, leaders of public opinion and legislators."

+ Eng N 93:471 S 18 '24 400w

Reviewed by H. W. Jordan

Ind 113:22 Jl 5 '24 320w

"Fills a very useful place in public utility literature." J. M. Clark

+ J Pol Econ 32:259 Ap '24 780w

Wis Lib Bul 20:64 Mr '24

MORGAN, JAMES. Our presidents. 326p il $2.50 Macmillan

923.2 Presidents—United States 24-23154

Brief biographies of the presidents from Washington to Coolidge. The author's long newspaper experience has helped him to convey in the few pages devoted to each president an idea of his personality, the problems with which he was called upon to deal and his success in meeting them.

Booklist 21:149 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p3 D 27 '24 500w

"His judgments are not always fair nor his comments temperate, but there is understanding and tolerance about them." C. M. Morrison

+ — Lit R p9 N 8 '24 380w

"Through all the long list, extending through more than 150 years and including so great a variety of men of so many diverse views, Mr. Morgan is temperate, judicial and balanced in his judgments and interpretations. If he is ever adversely critical of action or quality, it is with understanding and lenient spirit and diplomatic expression."

+ N Y Times p21 O 12 '24 400w

Outlook 138:341 O 29 '24 20w

Sat R of Lit 1:419 D 27 '24 120w

"Mr Morgan is always intelligent in his handling of historical data, and his style is animated and suggestive."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 O 17 '24 250w

2 MORGAN, JOHN HARTMAN. John, Viscount Morley; an appreciation and some reminiscences. 215p $3 Houghton [10s 6d Murray]

B or 92 Morley of Blackburn, John Morley, 1st viscount

"Lord Morley desired that no formal biography should be written of him, and his admirers must thus be content to accept such light on his distinguished personality as can be thrown by such a sketch as this. The first three chapters—two of which have already appeared in the Quarterly—give a sympathetic account of his character and way of life, illustrated by many recollected snatches of his conversations with the author. The remaining four contain an enthusiastic appreciation of Lord Morley's writings in detail."—Sat R

"Mr. Morgan's study is in its way a notable tribute, dealing with the man and his work in a spirit of well-tempered appreciation from the hand of one who had been admitted to his circle of intimate friends."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 31 '25 1850w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

N Y Times p6 D 28 '24 2500w (Same as in Spec D 13 '24)

Sat R 138:610 D 13 '24 100w

"The book is readable, suggestive and stimulating throughout and in a high degree, but by far the best and most attractive part, as General Morgan would admit, is that containing the extracts from the notebooks in which he recorded his conversations with John Morley. They are not only eminently delightful, but what the poverty of the phraseology dedicated to such subjects compels me to call, though I detest the cliché, 'a valuable contribution not only to contemporary history, but to the art and science of statesmanship in the abstract.' " J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 133:947 D 13 '24 2400w

Reviewed by J. St. L. Strachey

Spec 133:987 D 20 '24 2350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p806 D 4 '24 750w

MORGAN, JOHN HARTMAN. Present state of Germany. 107p $1.50 Small [2s 6d Univ. of London press]

943 Germany—History. Germany—Economic conditions [24-11334]

"General Morgan served for four years in unoccupied Germany as Deputy Adjutant-General on the Military Disarmament Commission and Deputy-President of one of the two Sub-Commissions, and during this time was constantly inquiring into the organization of the Army, police-units and factories in every State in Germany. The contents of this book—small in size but large in import—were originally the subject of a lecture delivered in the University of London, but the author has since added a long and important introduction in which he expands and elucidates his thesis."—Sat R

"The style is thoughtful and clear."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 23 '24 220w

"These observations, based on four years' residence, are worth reading. They are particularly illuminating in their analysis of the German temperament and for that reason possess more than a passing value."

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 24 '24 700w

"General Morgan's picture of Germany in defeat is more than depressing; it is almost intolerable, yet we do not believe it to be in any respect overdrawn. His opportunities for observation have been almost unique, and his conclusions are quite impartial."

+ Sat R 137:132 F 9 '24 1250w

"This slight volume contains in compact form exactly the information one needs on a problem as important and as difficult to grasp as any in Europe. No one who wishes to understand the European situation should fail to read this little book—which we should add has the advantage of being admirably written."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p99 F 14 '24 240w

MORIO, FRANK XAVIER. Automobile pattern drafting. 60p il $3 U.P.C. bk.
629.2 Automobiles—Design and construction. Sheet-metal work—Pattern-making
23-5231

"A concise course of instruction in laying out complete patterns for hoods, cowls, bodies, guards, fenders and other sheet metal parts, with chapters on stamping, painting and finishing and many useful tables."—Subtitle

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:73 F '24

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT, ed. Sources and documents illustrating the American revolution, 1764-1788, and the formation of the federal constitution. 368p $3 Oxford [10s 6d Milford]
973.3 United States—History—Revolution
24-2366

"The editor has covered not only the whole period of the American Revolution, from the Stamp Act to the policies following the peace, but has made a liberal selection from the debates of the Convention (1787-8) which framed the Federal Constitution. The volume includes dispatches, letters, speeches and many other documents."—New Statesman

Am Pol Sci R 18:646 Ag '24 250w
Reviewed by R. G. Adams
Lit R p972 Ag 16 '24 800w
Reviewed by E. B. Greene
Nation 118:660 Je 4 '24 720w

"A valuable source book."
+ New Statesman 22:582 F 28 '24 100w

"Mr. Morison sadly confesses, the compiling of source books is a thankless task; it is certainly not one in which a playful fancy can disport itself, but he has the consolation of having done his work well. The introduction is a valuable piece of historical writing, in that it suggests angles that will probably be quite new to many English students."
+ Sat R 137:15 Ja 5 '24 360w

"An aid of great value to the more thorough and more independent study of the Revolutionary period."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 22 '24 360w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p887 D 20 '23 1700w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. One act plays. 174p $1.75 Doubleday
812
24-20399

Six one-act plays two of which, Thursday evening and The rehearsal, are already favorites with amateur performers. The other plays are: Bedroom suite; On the shelf; Walt; East of Eden.

Booklist 21:62 N '24

"The admixture of shrewd common sense and a graceful whimsicality is as noticeable in these plays as in any of the author's other writings." D. W.
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 4 '24 500w
Cleveland p87 N '24

"The plays will no doubt be in demand among amateurs, since so few dramatists cater to this humble, but appreciative, kind of folk."
+ Lit R p9 S 27 '24 120w

"Something should be done about Mr. Christopher Morley. The printing presses, one suspects, are too close to his hand. Else why the present 'One Act Plays?'" H. J. Mankiewicz
— N Y Times p14 O 12 '24 300w

"Remembering the winning satire of 'Where the Blue Begins,' the lilting irresponsibility of 'Parnassus on Wheels,' the brief zestful essays on 'kinsprits' of the 17th century, one finds these plays of modern American life a little tepid."
— Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 27 '24 500w

"It is very far below his standard of writing, and only proves again that (Mr. Morley to the contrary notwithstanding) the arts of the theatre cannot be acquired in spare minutes in the nursery."
— Theatre Arts Mo 8:794 N '24 210w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Parsons' Pleasure. 137p $1.75 Doran 811
23-17907

Parsons' Pleasure at New college, Oxford, is "the green bathing pool on the Cherwell backwater where even the most confident theologians are happily out of their depth." This book of poems takes its name from the pool, and one of the longer poems describes bathing therein. The book is divided into three sections: Parsons and pleasures; Translations from the Chinese; Epi-(sodes, grams, taphs).

Booklist 20:258 Ap '24
Bookm 58:672 F '24 120w

"The gracious and ingratiating Morley here wins us, above all, by his really remarkable essays in Shakespearean dramatic verse. 'So This is Arden' (Jaques and Touchstone) and 'Tropes and Tropics' (Miranda and Ferdinand) are pure delights. Wholesome, jocund, and possessing that most exquisite and most rare of all the qualities of true poetry, fancy, these verses of Morley's are worth reading over and over." C. P.
+ Cath World 118:856 Mr '24 420w
Dial 76:561 Je '24 160w

"It contains some really delightful poetry, complicated with an engaging, dry Quaker mysticism, some pleasantly fantastic tours de force, and a few of those less fortunate performances which, to travesty Doctor Johnson, are the dreams of a poet who seemed to be doomed to make a colyumist." Leonard Bacon
+ — Lit R p419 Ja 5 '24 1000w

"Clever rhymes by a genial man who is very fond of life. Mr. Morley is an exceedingly able poet of the lighter sort, but incidentally he should not write so many poems about poetry."
+ — Nation 118:95 Ja 23 '24 110w

"It is as though Mr. Morley had turned inside out his writer's rag bag and neatly arranged under one cover all the bright scraps—silk, sacking; gossamer, suiting; gold tissue, monk's cloth. Then tagged the whole with a delectable title." M. A. Murphy
+ N Y Tribune p20 Ja 20 '24 750w
Outlook 136:193 Ja 30 '24 400w
Wis Lib Bul 20:24 Ja '24

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Religio journalistici. 62p $1 Doubleday
070 Journalism
24-22799

Reprinted from the Century magazine for July, 1924, Mr Morley's brief homily has for its theme the analogy between church and press.

Bookm 60:adv N '24 100w

"The book (it is hardly more than a pamphlet, though in this first edition a splendid piece of bookmaking) is a nice evaluation of the significances of the modern news sheet and the modern church, of the mental attitude arrived at by one who knows them both and, perhaps most pleasing of all, Morley from first to last." J. F. V.
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 12 '24 280w

"In a day when all matters of morals and letters have become relative to no other standard than taste and 'what I like' is boldly advanced against 'what you like,' it is improbable that Mr. Morley will hearken to any critical remonstrance that he leave off polishing his spade and dig a little more deeply. For he needs must be allusive, picturesque and discursive at all costs. He would rather be epigrammatic than right. It is too bad." G. H. Carson
— N Y Tribune p5 S 28 '24 300w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON, comp. Bowling Green; an anthology of verse. 182p $1.75 Doubleday

811.08 American poetry—Collections 24-10950

The 130 poems in this anthology have all appeared in the "Bowling Green," a column printed on the editorial page of the New York Evening Post, and have been chosen from a total of about a thousand poems. Mr. Morley confesses that his method of selection was by this question: Is it memorable? If so, it was included, if not, rejected. The poems are usually short and often light but there is a great variety of moods and subjects.

Bookm 59:606 Jl '24 120w

"This anthology has verse to fit all moods and fancies. Excellent, too, all of it. In every way this is a most successful book which deserves popularity."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 14 '24 200w

"It is safe to say that no more original book of verse will come from the presses this year. The volume will long stand as a fine memorial of the vanished Bowling Green." G. W. J.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 6 '24 500w

"'The Bowling Green' is a charming and valuable anthology."

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 6 '24 100w

Outlook 138:415 N 12 '24 100w

"Mr. Morley's skill and charm as a writer are equalled by his skill as an anthologist. Poems of all moods are in the volume, but they are all spirited and all worthy. The lover of poetry will make no mistake in adding this truly charming volume to his library."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 260w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON, comp. Modern essays; second series. 457p $2 Harcourt

824 Essays 24-11788

Mr Morley has made a second collection of contemporary essays, both English and American. Each essay is prefaced by brief memoranda about the author. Partial contents: Oxford as I see it, by Stephen Leacock; Mussolini and the League of nations, by R. B. Fosdick; Farewell to America; by H: W. Nevinson; The creed of the old South, by B. L. Gildersleeve; Geese, by W. H. Hudson; Vignettes of the sea, by Felix Riesenberg; Autumn tints in chivalry, by C. E. Montague; Conrad and Melville, by H: S. Canby; The Cary girls, by E. L. Pearson; Fido and Ponto, by Elizabeth Bibesco; Slaves of the roof, by Bruce Bliven; The novel Démeublé, by Willa Cather; Waste lands, by J: C. Ransom; The Elwell case, by Lawrence Perry; The saxophone, by William Bolitho.

"Here and there the selection becomes a bit turgid, but the papers are so arranged that the turn of a few pages brings you to something brighter." Richardson Wright

+ — Bookm 59:742 Ag '24 500w

Boston Transcript p1 My 24 '24 480w

Cleveland p69 S '24

Ind 112:344 Je 21 '24 500w

Reviewed by Brander Matthews

Int Bk R p781 O '24 780w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko

Nation 119:168 Ag 13 '24 250w

"The very merit of his book lies in its catholicity. The mind of a house of many windows, says Mr. Morley, in effect; and he has thrown them all wide open."

+ N Y Times p14 My 18 '24 1950w

"Mr. Morley achieves a wonderful richness and variety as an anthologist." H. S.

+ N Y World p7e My 25 '24 300w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Outlook 137:364 Jl 2 '24 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:373 Jl '24

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Sat R of Lit 1:140 S 27 '24 950w

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 16 '24 380w

Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON, and MARQUIS, DON. Pandora lifts the lid. 229p $2 Doran

24-13354

"The mystery of 'Pandora Lifts the Lid' lies in the disappearance of seven young girls from an exclusive Long Island finishing school in company with a poetic and rather radical-minded young instructor in English. The tale unfolds in alternate sections recounted by Melville Kennedy, bachelor globe-trotting uncle of Pandora, who is the mainspring of the action, and by Marjorie Conway, Pandora's lieutenant and historian. Before it ends you make the acquaintance of an engaging and competent master-bootlegger and his gang: of a septuagenarian financier with a gift for the logic of strong waters; of a headstrong gentleman-aviator; and of other admirably drawn characters. You will not lack for thrills, and you will read an excellent treatise on the consanguinity of big business and smuggling."—N Y Tribune

Booklist 21:28 O '24

Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 900w

Cleveland p68 S '24

"This delightfully preposterous book reeks with a gay whimsicality."

+ Nation 119:293 S 17 '24 70w

Nation and Ath 36:164 O 25 '24 160w

"'Pandora Lifts the Lid' is at once a gripping adventure story, with suspense accumulating from page to page, and a travesty of all pirate-and-kidnapping yarns. Its characters are both caricatured in terms of their foibles and inanities and rounded as full-blooded, lovable human beings. Its plot is a perfectly workmanlike construction of credible misunderstandings and cross-purposes and a joyous fabric of nonsense and fantasy."

+ N Y Times p12 My 25 '24 1450w

"Let it suffice that 'Pandora Lifts the Lid' is a comely and vivacious summer's story, the work of lucent craftsmen. It would fit well in any week-end valise, if for nothing more than the sake of Pandora's black-and-blue chart, which serves as a frontispiece." Morris Gilbert

+ N Y Tribune p22 Je 15 '24 700w

N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 320w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Outlook 137:364 Jl 2 '24 60w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 138:551 N 29 '24 60w

"The book is written in the highest spirits and may be recommended as a sure antidote for depression."

+ Spec 133:848 N 29 '24 140w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 16 '24 180w

MORLEY, FELIX. Unemployment relief in Great Britain; a study in state socialism. (Hart, Schaffner and Marx prize essays in economics) 203p $2 Houghton [6s Routledge]

331.25 Unemployment. Insurance, Unemployment. Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain 24-25109

The book is an authoritative account of British experimentation in unemployment relief since 1912. It surveys the twelve years' history of state-operated unemployment insurance, the collapse of the system in the depression following the war, and the work of the employment exchanges. The book advocates the replacement of national insurance with unemployment insurance by industry.

"His book is very useful, for it gives an excellent short history of the various Acts and expedients from the first introduction of special arrangements for the relief of the unemployed.

It also contains many statistics, which make it invaluable for reference. It was written before Mr. Shaw's Act of this year, and therefore does not embody the latest changes. But it is by far the handiest guide to the working of the system up to 1924."

+ New Statesman 24:118 N 1 '24 400w

Reviewed by H: R. Mussey

N Y Tribune p12 D 7 '24 950w

R of Rs 71:111 Ja '25 60w

MORLEY, FRANK V. Travels in East Anglia. 266p $3 Harcourt [7s 6d Methuen]

914.2 England—Description and travel [24-13148]

"F. V. Morley is a brother of Christopher Morley. He gives us a most unusual guidebook—essays filled with wisdom and charm. Along the highways and byways of Lowestoft, of Cambridge, of Grantchester, of Sudbury, he discovers the historical tidbit, the literary illusion. There are moments with Crabbe, with Borrow, with Rupert Brooke. It is a walking and a bicycling book. Nor has Mr. Morley confined himself to fact—for he embroiders his ramblings by recounting countryside legends."—Bookm

Bookm 59:68 Mr '24 250w

"The style in which he writes is too ingenuous. He manages to work into the various chapters all the information he happens to possess about historical spots and literary landmarks. At first the pages are delightful. By degrees certain delicate affectations are revealed."

+ Boston Transcript p7 F 2 '24 340w

Cleveland p48 Je '24

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis

Int Bk R p531 Je '24 40w

"Mr. Morley strikes me as a literary somnambulist. He has a most disconcerting way of suddenly going to sleep and at the same time continuing his walk." H. J. Massingham

— Nation and Ath 34:sup406 D 8 '23 140w

N Y Tribune p25 My 18 '24 140w

MORLEY, LINDA H., and KNIGHT, ADELAIDE C. Mailing list directory and classified index to trade directories; [comp.] under the direction of John Cotton Dana. 727p $10 McGraw

016.67 Directories—Bibliography 24-1317

"A guide to the contents of professional and industrial directories. Refers to some 1,500 separate lists and is fully supplied with cross references."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"The volume is prepared with great care, with topical headings and cross references so as to prevent loss of time in its use."

+ Am Econ R 14:336 Je '24 130w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:198 Ap '24

MORMAN, JAMES BALE. Farm credits in the United States and Canada. (Rural science ser.) 406p $3.50 Macmillan

332.3 Agricultural credit 24-6012

Dr Morman gives a survey from three points of view—legislative, financial and economic—of the most reliable data on farm credits in the United States and Canada. The chief points held in view are interest rates, commission charges, periods of loans, and methods of repayment. The subject is divided into two parts, Farm mortgage credit in the United States and Canada, and Short-time and intermediate credit in the United States and Canada. The book also contains a bibliography.

"The best chapters in this useful handbook are those which describe the federal farm credit legislation enacted in recent years and what has been done under it. From his long contact with agricultural problems and his present position as economist of the Federal Farm Loan Board, the author is well fitted for the descriptive portion of his task. But wherever he deals with theoretical matters, he is less satisfying." G. O. Virtue

+ — Am Econ R 14:556 S '24 1200w

"Professor Morman's book ought to be perused by students of agricultural credit as it is the first one to pass through our hands which deals satisfactorily with the repayment of loans as well as with systems of making them." J: Appleton

+ Canadian Hist R 5:275 S '24 1500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:355 Jl '24

"His survey of actual accomplishment in America is complete and authoritative. This accomplishment he reviews from the legislative, the financial and the economic points of view. Beyond a slight emotional taint in discussing the needs of the future there is nothing to mar the book's general excellence."

+ — Pol Sci Q 39:727 D '24 200w

St Louis p402 D '24

Reviewed by C. F. Ansley

Survey 52:466 Jl 15 '24 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p799 N 27 '24 60w

MOROSO, JOHN ANTONIO. Listening man. 274p $1.75 (6s) Appleton

24-9126

"Further exploits of James Tierney, former New York detective, are detailed in 'The Listening Man.' There are forty-two of these chapters, and in them we read of the crimes of violence that hold a whole countryside in fear, and of the methods by which Tierney roots out and destroys the gang guilty of the outrages."—N Y World

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 60w

"The stories are not especially ingenious or exciting, but the reader feels that they may be nearer the truth of crook performance and police pursuit than many that are more so. There is no blood-and-thunder to horrify sensitive souls, nor will they allure the young and innocent to crime."

+ — Outlook 137:365 Jl 2 '24 130w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p325 My 22 '24 90w

MORRIS CHARLES RICHARD, and MORRIS,
² MARY (MRS CHARLES RICHARD MORRIS). History of political ideas. 202p $2.50 Putnam [5s 6d Christophers]

320.9 Political science—History [24-27740]

"The book gives a brief sketch of political thought in seven chapters: Greece, Rome, Middle Ages, Reformation, Hobbs, Rousseau, Austin and the problem of Sovereignty, and modern theories of the State."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"A well-written acutely reasoned study." H. L. Pangborn

+ Lit R p14 S 6 '24 500w

"Political scientists will find much to interest them in this book. The student, however, who thinks the title promises him something in the nature of an encyclopaedia of political thought, will be disappointed."

— + New Statesman 23:714 S 27 '24 150w

Reviewed by A. S. Will

N Y Times p10 N 2 '24 1500w

"A history of political ideas, or ideals, might be a useful book, especially if a short one. This virtue—brevity—Mr. and Mrs. Morris's book can justly claim, but unfortunately it is not a history." Harold Hodge

— + Sat R 138:266 S 13 '24 660w

"It is not very well written. One comes upon long-winded and obscure sentences. But anyone who wants a handbook of political speculation will find it here, and will only occasionally be baffled by such sentences."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p470 Jl 31 '24 440w

MORRIS, GOUVERNEUR. Keeping the peace. 295p $2 Scribner
24-21148

There is no mitigating touch in the picture of woman drawn in this book. She is a creature with whom peace must be kept at any price and the price paid by every man in the story is high. In particular, it is a study of one woman in her relations with her husband and her sons, but numerous other women add to the devastating picture. Mrs. Eaton drives her sons from her, one by one, and her husband, tho outwardly submissive, is a rebel in spirit. Upon her youngest son, Edward, her interference has a deadly effect which is not helped by the woman who later comes into his life. "Sometimes Edward wishes that the whole race of women was at the bottom of the sea."

Boston Transcript p4 O 15 '24 1550w

Reviewed by E. A. Niles
Ind 113:374 N 8 '24 200w

"A book that is long drawn out and dull in places. The characters are alive, the characterizations deft and at times very striking, but this is about all one can say for the book. It depicts only one type of woman, and that the most hateful." R. L. Kurzman
— + Int Bk R p61 D '24 400w

"It is embarrassingly difficult to make a fair appraisal of this remarkable book which shall not give a wrong idea of it to the reader, for the thing is a veritable nightmare. But this novel is a finely finished piece of literary artistry. Moreover, one cannot say that any single character in it is overdone or distorted; they are only too solidly, indisputably veritable human men and women." H. L. Pangborn
+ — Lit R p6 Ja 3 '25 570w

"Aside from the bitterness and morbidness of Mr. Morris's satire, there are bits of writing which seem hasty, English which is none too sound, and an overuse of slapstick and trowel. Yet the vehemence of the telling and a certain modicum of truth in his arraignment make the reader follow through."
— + N Y Times p6 O 5 '24 600w
N Y Tribune p10 O 12 '24 280w

"If Gouverneur Morris sins too much on the side of charcoaling woman, he goes to the other extreme, whitewashing man. No sacrifice is too noble for him to perform, even if it goes against the very laws of nature. It is this lack of proportion in the realism that mars a well written and otherwise coherent novel." F. V. Roman
— + N Y World p7e S 14 '24 580w

"In spite of its over-emphasis 'Keeping the Peace' is well-written, has a good plot, and shows masterly facility in characterization. Morally, the book is stupidly preoccupied with pursuing a futile argument."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:210 O 18 '24 280w
Springf'd Republican p5a O 19 '24 440w

MORRIS, JOSEPH, and ADAMS, ST CLAIR, comps. and eds. Book of friendship verse. 369p $1.50 Sully

821.08 Friendship—Poetry. English poetry—Collections 24-27700

The book is primarily a collection of poems on the subject of friendship. Its material is taken in about equal measure from standard authors and writers of popular appeal. Prose selections on friendship are included as well as some quotations and sayings.

"Any one who likes to read verse can dip into its pages with rewarding pleasure on any of those odd moments which come to almost every one and are so rarely well used. For here one can find old favorites and new friends, verse famous and verse little known, the best that has been said in both prose and verse on the subject through hundreds of years."
+ N Y Times p20 N 30 '24 250w
N Y World p9e N 23 '24 20w

MORROW, MRS HONORE (MCCUE) WILLSIE. The Devonshers. 354p $2 Stokes
24-21812

Eve Devonsher, the granddaughter of the man who once owned all of Antelope Basin, Wyoming, was on trial for the murder of Angus Duncan, a family enemy. The shrewd old judge sympathized with Eve, but was determined that justice should be done. During the trial startling truths came to light dating back to the days of the first enmity between the Devonshers and the Duncans. After long and harrowing weeks for Eve the trial was ended when a confession of murder came from an unsuspected source.

Booklist 21:112 D '24

"The dialogue is always good. Her situations taken alone are occasionally very dramatic. She writes with emotion. She conveys it. In fact the whole story drips with 'red blooded integrity.' On the whole, Mrs. Morrow's contribution to American fiction is wholesome, sane and refreshing. Few American women can wield a pen with such a deft and forceful hand." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 8 '24 750w

"Mrs. Morrow attempted almost more than she could manage, and the end, perhaps, flats a little in the manner in which the truth about the killing of Angus comes to light. . . 'The Devonshers' is not only an exceptionally good popular novel, but also a remarkably interesting and refreshing departure in method. It deserves very well at the hands of the fiction reading public."
+ — N Y Times p16 D 21 '24 820w
N Y Tribune p17 S 21 '24 160w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 14 '24 110w

"The author never fails to make us recognize the majesty and impressiveness of mountains and canyons—she depicts them with the devotion and sincerity of a great painter. In the handling of plot and characters she is less successful, and there is too much here of the retelling of the same thing by different people."
+ — Outlook 138:257 O 15 '24 60w
Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 300w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p852 D 11 '24 250w

MORSE, HERMANN NELSON, and BRUNNER, EDMUND DE SCHWEINITZ. Town and country church in the United States. 179p il $2.50 Doran

260 Country church. Religious surveys
23-17999

This volume contains the results of the Town and country survey of the Interchurch world movement which were salvaged by the Committee on social and religious surveys. The book is written from the viewpoint of the church, due recognition being given to the effect of social and economic conditions on church life. Contents: Regional characteristics; Some national deductions; The general status of the church enterprise; The inter-relations of town, village, hamlet and open country; Church growth and decline; Home mission aid as a factor in rural church development; Religious education in the rural church school; Equipment and finance; The rural church and racial groups; Tenant and migrant; The rural church program; Index.

J Religion 4:335 My '24 120w

"A searching and interesting presentation of conditions which affect the social-religious life of the country districts and small cities." W: E. Brooks
+ Survey 52:108 Ap 15 '24 160w

"Valuable for students of the church problem."
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:171 Jl '24

MORTON, DAVID. Harvest; a book of sonnets. 47p $1.75 Putnam

811 24-10247

A book of forty-five sonnets in which the prevailing mood is one of melancholy.

"These sonnets are of an even excellence and a sure beauty more mature than that found in Mr. Morton's earlier volume, 'Ships in Harbour.' His rhythms are soft, his colors are soft, and his thought is quiet." J: Donelson

+ Bookm 59:604 Jl '24 160w

"The sonnets of David Morton seem to be far above the average. There are in a good many of these sonnets every thing that goes to make good poetry." K. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 17 '24 780w

Dial 77:266 S '24 50w

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz

Lit R p908 Jl 19 '24 680w

"It is a book of limitations. A gentle melancholy, a ghostly wistfulness, a spirit of Autumn pervades these mellifluous lines. But few strings are plucked by the poet and they become monotonous after a while. The subdued languor and seizing of easy motifs predicates a certain evasion of the hard demands of poetry."

— + N Y Times p10 My 18 '24 360w

Reviewed by Milton Raison

N Y Tribune p22 Jl 27 '24 350w

"In all these sonnets there is loveliness of thought and language and perfect clarity of expression, together with those overtones and implications of what is left unsaid that are the very fragrance of poetry." Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 137:156 My 28 '24 380w

MOSES, MONTROSE JONAS, ed. Representative continental dramas revolutionary and transitional. 688p $4.50 Little

808.2 Drama—Collections 24-7835

An anthology of fifteen plays drawn from the contemporary drama of eight European countries. Biographical introductions and bibliographies are provided. Contents: Wild duck, by Henrik Ibsen; Lonely way, by Arthur Schnitzler; Fires of St. John, by Hermann Sudermann; Sunken bell, by Gerhart Hauptmann; Sea-gull, by Anton Tchekhoff; Life of man, by Leonid Andreyeff; Daughter of Jorio, by Gabriele D'Annunzio; Like falling leaves, by Giuseppe Giacosa; World and his wife, by Charles Frederic Nirdlinger; Bonds of interest, by Jacinto Benavente; Cyrano de Bergerac, by Edmond Rostand; Vultures, by Henry Becque; Lovers, by Maurice Donnay; Monna Vanna, by Maurice Maeterlinck; Dawn, by Emile Verhaeren.

Booklist 20:332 Je '24

Cleveland p87 N '24

Reviewed by W: L. Phelps

Int Bk R p663 Ag '24 1100w

N Y Tribune p27 Jl 13 '24 160w

"All the plays seem to have been published before, but grouped as they now are, they will be of value for purposes of comparison and systematic study." Edwin Bjorkman

+ Outlook 137:238 Je 11 '24 240w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:325 Je '24

Springf'd Republican p5a Ja 11 '25 350w

Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

MOSKOWITZ, HENRY. Alfred E. Smith. 312p $3.50 Seltzer

B or 92 Smith, Alfred Emanuel 24-13800

Coming at this time Mr. Moskowitz's biography of Alfred Smith must of course be regarded as a campaign document but it has none of the usual marks of such a document. Written by a social worker who has had every opportunity of studying Gov. Smith, it is an orderly, unprejudiced record of his public life, and is the outcome of personal contact, a study of private sources of information and public records and documents. Gov. Smith's speeches and messages, upon which the record largely rests, reveal the man and his convictions and his program of social reform.

"Interesting and stimulating."

+ Bookm 60:98 S '24 260w

"No one who is genuinely interested in America and its future can afford not to read this biography, written by a social worker and student of affairs—a realist and idealist. It isn't just an account of the rise of one American named Smith, although it's a good story merely as such. It's an act from the great American drama, a piece of our national epic. And just now it's a challenge. . . the American people have the duty of familiarizing themselves with Governor Smith's record of achievement and a stake in doing so. They will find it as close an approach to absolute zero in buncombe and blather as may be found anywhere in the political game that is so largely fashioned of these two ingredients." Ernest Gruening

+ Nation 119:19 Jl 2 '24 660w

"With all that has been written about Governor Smith, no complete and rounded account of him as a man has appeared before. When the whole of Al Smith is presented it makes some odd and startling changes in the view that his friends and foes alike have come to take of him. Mr. Moskowitz's work is a campaign biography, but instead of being slammed together in the usual way, it is written selectively and in perfect proportion. The true Smith with his manifold interests emerges." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p3 Je 15 '24 1450w

St Louis p387 N '24

MOSS, GEOFFREY. Defeat. 264p $2 Boni & Liveright [6s Constable]

24-8165

Germany, in its defeat and impoverishment or its occupied Rhineland is the scene of all of these six stories. The first is of a young clerical worker in Berlin, engaged all day in computing the dizzying fluctuations of the mark, who sells herself for the price of a ticket home at Christmas time, only to find that the price of the ticket had again risen and that she has not money enough. The title story is an incident of the French occupation. Contents: Löttchen of the Nacht Lokal; The souvenir; The wrong receipt; Moi, je suis Francais; "Isn't life wonderful!" Defeat.

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 9 '24 650w

Lit R p710 Ap 26 '24 800w

Reviewed by E. B. C. Jones

Nation and Ath 34:738 F 23 '24 160w

"It should be admitted at once and without quibbling, that 'Defeat' is propaganda of the better sort directed against the French occupation of the Rhineland and the Ruhr. But the book is greater than the colored views it conveys; it is literature, some of it of a pretty high order."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 30 '24 1000w

"There is emotion here without emotionalism, and the hand of an artist."

+ Outlook 137:319 Je 25 '24 150w

"It has the same merits as 'Sweet Pepper'—the strong sympathy with suffering, the power to seize and render atmosphere, the quickness and alertness of narrative: and the same faults—a certain cheapness of effect, a willingness to use the artifice of sentimentality when the subject demands the stark art of tragedy. The name-story is certainly the best, because the most restrained. All the stories leave their mark: none of them can be shaken out of the mind." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 137:111 F 2 '24 180w

"The stories in themselves are interesting to the general reader, and the moral is inserted so deftly, with so little emphasis, as to make them palatable as well as medicinal. But as stories they are, unfortunately, nothing more nor less than good magazine stories, and those who look for a fulfillment of the literary promise of Sweet Pepper will be disappointed."

— + Spec 132:252 F 16 '24 500w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 600w

MOSS, GEOFFREY—Continued

"It is only after reading the last word that the full weight of the title becomes sensible. Then perhaps it brings with it a regret that his six stories had not been absorbed in a longer and more comprehensive survey. They are so poignant in their emotion as it is, they rouse so swiftly the reader's pity and anger, that it would seem excessive to demand any more of them. This immediate response is due to a great extent to the circumstances related, though it is raised far above its natural level by the skill of the writer."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p64 Ja 31 '24 520w

MOTTRAM, RALPH HALE. Spanish farm; with a preface by John Galsworthy. 275p $2.50 Dial press [7s Chatto & W.]

24-21587

The setting of this chronicle of French life during the war is a substantial farmstead in French Flanders within sound of the guns, which was used continuously for the billeting of British troops. The central character is Madeleine Vanderlynden, a masterful young French girl and daughter of the owner of the farm, whom a succession of army officers and men held in wholesome respect and paid liberally for her service and supplies. The book is an evidently truthful picture of life in this part of the war zone and a character study of this resolute girl who is made to typify the indomitable spirit of the French borderland.

Booklist 21:112 D '24

"Mr. Mottram has a fashion of writing, quietly and with sympathy, which rescues his heroine from materialism, and her story from sordidness." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 27 '24 540w

"Mr. Mottram has written a very fine and most interesting novel." Hugo Sonnenschein

+ Lit R p10 O 4 '24 360w

"Mr. Galsworthy concerns himself too much, perhaps, with the form of this book, but his final definition of 'highly humanized history' is acceptable, though the sheer vividness of the story is as much due to the stereoscopic nature of the author's imagination as to experience."

+ — Nation and Ath 35:330 Je 7 '24 220w

"It is a good chronicle and Madeleine is a really interesting study, true to life; neither softened to suit English tastes, nor romanticised into a patriot to suit the taste of the French." Ralph Wright

+ New Statesman 23:259 Je 7 '24 240w

N Y Times p9 S 28 '24 1150w

"A small masterpiece." C. G. Stillman

+ N Y Tribune p4 O 19 '24 650w

"I believe it will rank, with Mr. Gerhardi's 'Futility' and one or two others, among the little masterpieces of our day—delicate, simple, unpretentious but permanent. The character of Madeleine is beautiful, and to have read about her is to have enriched one's experience." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 138:18 Jl 5 '24 850w

"The woman's character is ably and even brilliantly drawn with concessions perhaps to a preconceived idea but none to facility or to sentimentality." L. P. Hartley

+ Spec 132:886 My 31 '24 220w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 28 '24 580w

"It is a socio-historical study, quiet, full of detail, yet not lacking in drama, of Flemish peasant character reacting to the conditions of war-time. And it is an excellent piece of fiction because the men and women that move in its pages are individuals as well as types."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p338 My 29 '24 700w

MOULT, THOMAS. Comely Lass. 312p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]

" 'The Comely Lass' is the name of a fisherman's boat. The boat is named for Margaret Handlip. Margaret's sheep-farming father, in the Peaklands of Derbyshire, plans for his daughter an assisted elopement with Jacob Golden; this, on account of the ill state of mind of the girl's cousin Harriet, who is of a disposition to have Jacob herself if, by fair strategy or foul, such a thing may be managed. The elopement having been brought successfully to pass, the story transfers itself to Tide's End and Tackleway Cottage, on the far Yorkshire coast, and there Margaret lives out her span of married happiness, her hour of blissful motherhood and the too grievously justified fear of the incalculable sea."—N Y World

Boston Transcript p3 Je 21 '24 680w

"Like a piece of handmade furniture or pottery, it is simple in its essence, yet so rare in this day that its effect is almost exotic and wholly delightful."

+ Dial 77:171 Ag '24 110w

"It is a book that is not quite easy to read, but that still manages, with all its faults, to be worth the reading." L. E. Ludwig

+ — Int Bk R p820 O '24 520w

"The story is memorable in its slow human movement and its rooted beauty of atmosphere and setting." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p988 Ag 23 '24 400w

"Sentiment sinking to sentimentality is the mark of Mr. Moult's melancholy romance of the moorlands and the sea. Where, one wonders, does he find the prototypes of his fanciful farmers and ecstatic fishermen? The language of love is always on their lips and their persistent lyricism serves to take the edge off some excellent character-drawing. . . Unfortunately, Mr. Moult diversifies the speech of the Peak District and the East Riding with variants and provincialisms garnered from Ireland, Somerset, and the Bible." L. P. Hartley

— + Nation and Ath 34:672 F 9 '24 150w

"His sense of formalized poetry leads him to hale his characters out into the open, wantonly to apostrophize them. Although the sheer, wistful beauty of many of these passages seems at times easily to justify their presence, a greater restraint on this one point would have been mother to a more vigorous, more nearly perfect, craftsmanship." R. B. F.

+ — New Repub 39:252 Jl 23 '24 200w

"While Mr. Moult's tale is not exactly stale—for he writes vivid conventional English—somehow it is not moving and, in consequence, falls flat. . . The people in this novel are real enough and, in their bucolic fashion, interesting—all the material in it is valid, but the spark to set the 'works' off is, judging by the results, never applied."

— + N Y Times p22 Je 1 '24 950w

"There are two beautiful things about Thomas Moult's second novel, 'The Comely Lass.' One of them is the story and the other is the manner of its telling. No reader will need to be told that it is the work of a poet as well as of a story teller." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e My 18 '24 350w

"Why anybody should write like this when the plain English language is available, neither Mr. Moult nor anybody else will ever make me understand. And, for him, it is available. Get over the obstacles of verbal twist and strain which he has so inexplicably interposed between his reader and his theme, and you will appreciate the radiant rightness of his outlook: lift the burden of far-fetched and high-heaped sentimentality under which he has sought to hide his human message, and the message will be found worth while. . . If only the telling were as direct as the thing told!" Gerald Gould

— + Sat R 137:17 Ja 5 '24 550w

"Mr. Moult has painted with a deft hand two strips of English country, the Peak and the Yorkshire Coast, he has created a set of most lovable, individual and unspoilt characters; and he has given us two lovers, Jacob and Margaret Golden, the sailor and the farm lass, who are realistic without being tortured and romantic without being silly."

+ — Spec 132:643 Ap 9 '24 600w

"Mr. Moult suffers from excess of sentiment, while his style is coloured by his free use of adjectives. There is no hour of the day, no action by man, woman, or child that Mr. Moult cannot irradiate for pages with his opulent imagery; and he is ready at crises to burst into passionate apostrophes to his own characters."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p879 D 13 '23 180w

MOULT, THOMAS, ed. Best poems of 1922. 158p il $2 Harcourt [6s J. Cape]

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections

"Mr. Moult has chosen his poetry from both English and American periodicals without regard for the fame or lack of fame of their authors. This does not mean that poets of renown are absent. Thomas Hardy is represented with his magnificent 'An Ancient to Ancients,' Carl Sandburg with two poems, and there are Amy Lowell, Elinor Wylie, G. K. Chesterton, Robert Graves, Louis Untermeyer, J. C. Squire, and Aline Kilmer."—Bookm

---

Booklist 20:211 Mr '24

"A beautifully printed little book and edited with an unusual taste. A catholic collection to be sure, and one that is designed to prove nothing, except that good poetry is being written."
+ Bookm 59:85 Mr '24 300w

"It is hard to imagine what such a collection of verse as this can do but help confuse or destroy what incipient taste for contemporary poetry its more occasional readers may be nursing."
— + Dial 76:200 F '24 150w

"An admirable volume which it is to be hoped will inaugurate an annual series."
+ Nation 117:531 N 7 '23 40w

"The only way to keep a fairly clear head under the shower of anthologies, which shows no signs of abating, is to imagine oneself a reader in 1980. Beneath that umbrella The Best Poems of 1922 and the Keepsakes and Elegant Extracts of the last century appear on about the same level."
— New Statesman 22:sup22 O 13 '23 300w

Spec 131:227 Ag 18 '23 100w

"If we accept Mr. Moult's decision as final, 1922 was a lean year for poems in the journals. Of the eighty and more compositions which he would save from limbo, the majority are neat and pretty enough, but there seems a general want of staying power."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p374 My 31 '23 200w

MOULTON, HAROLD GLENN. Reparation plan. (Institute of economics. Investigations in international economic reconstruction) 325p $2.50 McGraw

330.943 European war, 1914-1919—Reparations. Germany—Economic conditions
24-17980

"In this volume the reparation plan referred to is the one set forth in the Dawes report with occasional references to its companion, the McKenna report. There are three parts: first, a brief economic analysis of the plan; second, a discussion of the economic issues involved; and third, a reprint of the two reports with all of their annexes and with a special index. The reports occupy more than one-half of the volume. The first three chapters, which summarize the two reports, are quite concise. This leaves Chapters IV, V and VI, which contain the author's interpretation and criticism—first, of the revenue feature; second, of the transfer problem; and third, of the unsettled aspects of the whole reparation problem."—New Repub

---

Reviewed by E. E. Agger
Am Econ R 14:730 D '24 720w

Booklist 21:137 Ja '25

Cleveland p93 D '24

"There are many excellent features in the volume, but it has the defect of not going far enough." E. M. Patterson
— + New Repub 40:23 S 3 '24 1550w

"The author is well equipped for his task, as his earlier studies of post war problems have given him a keen appreciation of the sympathies of the reparation problem. His criticism of the experts' plan are cogent and will be helpful to those who seek to appraise the practical results which may be expected from the operation of the Plan."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:234 O 25 '24 320w

MOWAT, ROBERT BALMAIN. Diplomacy of Napoleon. 315p $5.40 Longmans [16s Arnold]

944.04 France—History—1789-1815. Napoleon I, emperor of the French. Europe—History—1789-1815
24-20161

Maintaining that statesmanship occupied more of Napoleon's time than strategy and that "his armies were merely the instruments of his diplomacy," the author presents a study of Napoleon's diplomatic aims and methods and the relations of France with foreign powers during his régime. The book is rich in details concerning diplomatic negotiations but assumes on the part of the reader an intimate knowledge of the Napoleonic campaigns.

Boston Transcript p5 S 27 '24 900w

"This is a very useful and business-like summary of Napoleon's achievement in diplomacy."
+ New Statesman 24:51 O 18 '24 1100w

"Mr. Mowat tells the story in an admirably clear and readable way, and those who already know his previous volume, 'History of European Diplomacy, 1815-1914,' will find the present work a useful background."
+ N Y Times p26 Ja 11 '25 550w

"This is a true British book—painstaking (not painsgiving), unphilosophical, dignified, sound. Students of its fascinating subject will find it not exhaustive but complete in essentials, reliable and convenient." Albert Guérard
+ N Y Tribune p4 O 26 '24 280w

"Mr. Mowat, admirably and exactly keeping within the limits of his task, enters into no discussion of general principles. Or, rather and better, he supplies the whole material for quiet judgment."
+ Sat R 138:95 Jl 26 '24 680w

Reviewed by E. M. Wrong
Spec 133:296 Ag 30 '24 670w

"It requires some courage to add yet another volume to the vast literature which has gathered round the name of Napoleon. Mr. Mowat does not apologize for his temerity; he explains it. The seven volumes of Sorel's great work, to which Mr. Mowat acknowledges his obligations, have never been translated into English. The present work, then, is designed to fill a gap: to give to English readers an account of Napoleon's diplomacy as distinct from his career as a soldier."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p379 Je 19 '24 1150w

MOWRER, PAUL SCOTT. Our foreign affairs; a study in national interest and the new diplomacy. 348p $3.50 Dutton

327.73 United States—Foreign relations
24-6007

The trend of the argument is that two prejudices, the one of moral superiority, the other of fear, have heretofore governed our international attitude. Now that the World war has transformed our position in world affairs, our enlightened self-interest, putting the matter on its lowest ground, can be best furthered by international cooperation, not by isolation. It is not enough to establish a foreign policy. The people must be convinced and educated. And if our diplomacy is to function effectively and adopt positive policies the people must indicate definitely what they want.

MOWRER, PAUL SCOTT—Continued

"Interestingly, if uninspiredly, written, in short chapters, with no evidence of an axe to grind, the book justifies its title and deserves the attention of those for whom it has been prepared." H. S. Quigley

+ — Am Pol Sci R 18:817 N '24 320w

Bookm 59:174 Je '24 150w

"To the student of American affairs it is encouraging at least to know that we have men like Paul Scott Mowrer writing books like this. No more carefully prepared contribution to our political literature has ever been given us than this just, well-balanced, thoughtful, and interestingly written work." C. P.

+ Cath World 120:569 Ja '25 480w

"A strong feature of the book is the wealth of historical data, valuable bits of information on current events, and innumerable quotations from a large selection of well chosen books by which the author reinforces his arguments. Inaccuracies such as are contained in the chapter on foreign trade are to be regretted, but do not detract from the general merit of the book as a valuable and stimulating contribution to our literature on foreign affairs." E. W. Z.

+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p11 S 7 '24 1050w

"Mr. Mowrer argues cogently and fairly, but he would be more convincing if more questioning." Nathaniel Peffer

+ — New Repub 41:177 Ja 7 '24 180w

"Mr. Mowrer has written a book which cannot fail to interest every one concerned with the progress of world relations. . . It has much sound sense and many interesting observations which are the result of a number of years of close study of international politics in the capitals of Europe, where, thanks to his position as one of the best-informed American correspondents, he has had exceptional opportunities to inquire thoroughly and to inform himself well." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 6 '24 1700w

"A stimulating and illuminating volume, especially valuable at this moment when wise guidance and reasoned judgments are so desperately needed in our relations with proud peoples different in race and language from ourselves." W. N. C. Carlton

+ N Y Tribune p21 My 25 '24 720w

Reviewed by W. F. Johnson
No Am 219:890 Je '24 650w

"It covers practically every aspect of our foreign relationships, and it does so in a peculiarly able, balanced, and lucid manner." Edwin Bjorkman

+ Outlook 137:284 Je 18 '24 230w

R of Rs 69:669 Je '24 120w

St Louis p370 N '24

MUDGE, ISADORE GILBERT, and SEARS, MINNIE EARL. George Eliot dictionary. 260p $3.25 Wilson, H. W. [12s 6d Routledge]

823 Eliot, George, pseud. (Mrs Mary Ann Evans [Lewes] Cross)—Dictionaries 24-20006

A dictionary of the characters and scenes of George Eliot's novels and short stories, and of the poems also, in so far as these latter contain fictitious names or characters. The aim has been to include in the dictionary the names of all characters, either fictitious or historical, which have a definite part, however small, in the action of a story, or influence in any way the development of the plot. In the same way, all place-names, either real or fictitious, which constitute a definite scene are included. Historical characters are differentiated from fictitious, and real places from those which exist only in "literary geography." The work on historical names in "Romola," which have been identified and provided with notes, forms a very special feature of the dictionary. (Condensed from Preface)

Booklist 21:103 D '24

English J 13:688 N '24 60w

"The George Eliot Dictionary will be welcomed by librarians thruout the United States. The synopses of the novels and poems with dates of first editions are a distinct contribution. The device of describing the characters in the author's own words has been successfully followed and always the better and more interesting side of the personality is brought forward. . . The 'Index to Originals' is flame for a dull hour. . . Truly a very human dictionary."

+ Library J 49:774 S 15 '24 600w

"Book belongs to a highly specialized type which is invaluable to a limited class of persons, among whom are to be numbered literary editors."

+ Nation and Ath 35:574 Ag 2 '24 70w

"The general scheme of the work is such that so far as possible the descriptions are at first hand, with such additions as are necessary written in the bluntest possible style. The compilers have taken to heart Leslie Stephen's warning to his contributors: 'No flowers, by request'—with the result that there is little that one would have cut, and one imagines that, laborious as the research entailed must have been, it has been a labour of love."

+ New Statesman 23:603 Ag 30 '24 500w

"Any reference that may be wanted to a character or incident or place in Georg Eliot may quickly be run to earth in this book, which is very well done and must clearly have been a labour of love. The synopses of the novels are clear and good . . . the characters are also skilfully summed up in very few words, and the whole book is marked by good sense and sense of proportion not always conspicuous in those who worship at the shrine of a particular novelist. It is a capital book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 19 24 220w

MUIR, EDWIN. Latitudes. 322p $2 Huebsch

824 Literary criticism 24-7628

It was H. L. Mencken who first introduced Edwin Muir to the United States. His book of essays is concerned chiefly with literature, art and philosophy. He gives critical valuations of various writers among whom are Robert Burns, George Douglas, Conrad, Dostoevskii, Ibsen and Nietzsche. He pleads for the psychological method in criticism and demands that the critic must be artist as well as psychologist and philosopher. Mr Muir is a radical thinker who is not in the least restrained by any literary opinions of his contemporaries.

"A bit juvenilely Nietzschean, hastily synthesized, this little study in æsthetics is one of the sanest ever assumed by an American publisher."

+ Bookm 59:479 Je '24 170w

"Mr. Muir has been referred to as a classicist. His brilliantly comprehending glances at classic art in this book, together with his expressed leaning toward a sunny objectivity, a vigorous, outwardly operating curiosity, a clean, masterful attitude toward life, bear out that definition. . . His chief lack is a lack of metaphysical and logical clearness." M. K.

+ — Cath World 120:130 O '24 580w

Cleveland p68 S '24

Reviewed by R: Le Gallienne
Int Bk R p582 Jl '24 2200w

"The author never rambles off the track. Every essay is packed with thought—not the light, reflective comment of the literary trifler, but the substantial diet that presupposes an appetite for philosophy." Arnold Whitridge

+ Lit R p705 Ap 26 '24 750w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko
Nation 119:472 O 29 '24 350w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 36:113 O 18 '24 470w

"Among the many good things that were interred with the bones of The Freeman, Mr. Edwin Muir's essays had a high place; and it is a pleasure to find some of them recovered and preserved in the present volume." L: Mumford

+ New Repub 40:232 O 29 '24 900w

"A work not always sensible, but—undeniably—brilliant." F. L. Lucas

+ New Statesman 24:300 D 13 '24 530w

Reviewed by H: J. Forman

N Y Times p11 Ag 31 '24 1500w

Reviewed by Maxwell Anderson

N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 800w

"At his best, Mr. Muir is provocative; at his worst, provoking. Between these extremes of merit and demerit he swings with vertiginous rapidity. He forces one to think, but the outcome of one's thinking is not so much approval or disapproval as a regret that he has nothing but a new one-sidedness to offer as substitute for the existing one which he decries. . . There are some inherent contradictions and fallibilities that make Mr. Muir's volume rather good reading. One disagrees so delightfully with him."

+ — Outlook 137:35 My 7 '24 500w

St Louis p383 N '24

Sat R 138:520 N 22 '24 320w

"Mr. Muir is an extremely amusing writer; more often shrewd than right, in the judgment of Sensible People perhaps; but a useful one all the same (in spite of his plea for uselessness), and an admirable antidote to be taken before, during and after his more sententious rivals, whose aim is avowedly more to be right than to be shrewd."

+ — Spec 133:608 O 25 '24 500w

"A series of critical essays of quite exceptional acumen and subtlety." N. A.

+ Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 520w

"There is sound and generous appreciation in Mr. Muir's literary studies. His very anxiety to find value and meaning in criticism widens his sympathies and vitalizes his interest in æsthetic experience."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p646 O 16 '24 850w

Wis Lib Bul 20:210 O '24

MUIRHEAD, JOHN HENRY, ed. Contemporary British philosophy. (Library of philosophy) 432p $4.50 Macmillan [16s Allen & U.]

192 Philosophy, British

The volume brings together statements from sixteen philosophers who have been the chief contributors to contemporary British philosophy of what they regard as the main problem of philosophy and what they have centered upon in their speculations about it. In nearly every case the writer has prefaced his statement of his personal philosophy by a biographical sketch showing the influences which have formed his thought; and for each a bibliography of his writings is given.

"This is a most interesting and amusing book." C. D. Burns

+ Int J Ethics 35:93 O '24 450w

"The essays give a compact and systematic statement of the philosophical positions held to-day by the various writers. To be sure, few of the essays contain any new argument on a disputed point or a development of thought beyond what the writers have already given in other published works. Yet the present book is a most interesting and valuable volume." S. P. Lamprecht

+ J Philos 22:20 Ja 1 '25 2950w

Reviewed by R. B. Perry

Lit R p948 Ag 9 '24 600w

Reviewed by R. B. Braithwaite

Nation and Ath 35:122 Ap 26 '24 450w

New Statesman 23:104 My 3 '24 850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:296 Je '24

"The task is excellently accomplished; there is small need to say that the student will find the book indispensable."

+ Sat R 137:163 F 16 '24 180w

"Significant and stimulating book."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Je 7 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p122 F 28 '24 1100w

MUKERJI, DHAN GOPAL. Hari, the jungle lad. 220p il $2 Dutton

24-25647

The story of a lad's adventures in the jungle where he and his father hunted for a living. Hari's education did not consist of book-learning but in knowledge of the ways of the tiger and the leopard, the meaning of nature and the place of man among his brothers. He tells of many thrilling encounters he and his father had with ferocious animals, and also of the return of Kari, the extraordinary elephant who years before had escaped from his owner.

Booklist 21:158 Ja '25

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p895 N '24 50w

"He pictures tiger hunting, elephant tracking, the rush of floods, the battle of man with beast, in a manner that is convincing and thrilling." L. St. J: Power

+ Outlook 138:410 N 12 '24 70w

"Up to a certain point he has the powers of magicians; he is a fluent storyteller, he writes with charm, his style and narration are at ease within the requirements of writing for children. But his invention is utterly naïve. On me—and, I should expect, on widewake readers ten years old—the hunting adventures of Hari and his father fail to work, because they are merely 'steep' in the Munchausen way." H. E. Dounce

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:259 N 8 '24 150w

"Let every boy who wants to get the thrill of his life, read 'Hari, the Jungle Lad.' " S. G.

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 4 '25 470w

MUKERJI, DHAN GOPAL. My brother's face. 367p $3 Dutton

B or 92 India—Social life and customs. Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand. Hinduism

24-24708

In "Caste and Outcast" (Book Review Digest, 1923) Mukerji described the experiences of his boyhood in India and the early years of his life in America. Now after twelve years in the western world he returns to India and notes the material and spiritual changes which have taken place in his country since he left it. He reached India in the midst of the Gandhi ferment and he found Gandhi's influence permeating all India. Mukerji's book of rambling impressions is a revelation of the soul of India, of the great struggle which is going on there between modern industrialism and the spirituality of medieval India.

"With a fine reserve Mr. Mukerji rather presents his impressions than argues his convictions, showing by illustration how modern industrialism eradicates the self-respect of its victims and degrades them from individuals into tools of a system. In more than one way 'My Brother's Face' is the most important and inspiring book that has appeared in America since the war." C: W. Stork

+ Lit R p3 O 25 '24 1000w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey

New Repub 41:207 Ja 14 '25 520w

N Y World p9e O 19 '24 50w

"There is, from the western point of view, a slightly saccharine quality in Mukerji's style; but it is absolutely without sentimentalism. It has in it the lush of the Orient, and would be little more than chaff without it." Sidney Greenbie

Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 480w

MUKERJI, DHAN GOPAL—Continued

"Dhan Gopal Mukerji sees his beloved India through a poet's eyes and writes of it in singing prose. If other folk, like me, obliged to rely on second-hand impressions, are left unsatisfied by geographers, economists, press correspondents, and even philosophers!—let them lay aside such heavy rare and drink in the liquid beauty of this book by an East Indian whose use of English puts us all to shame." D. A.

+ World Tomorrow 7:382 D '24 300w

MULFORD, CLARENCE EDWARD. Hopalong Cassidy returns. 310p $2 Doubleday
24-21144

Hopalong Cassidy and Red Connors, the two most lovable and dangerous punchers on the range prepare to go on a fifteen hundred mile trip to Montana. As they are about to start, Hopalong encounters young Mesquite Jenkins, fearless, strong, and splendid company, who captivates Happy's heart and at whose invitation Mesquite joins the outfit. Their first stop is the decrepit town of Dodge where Mesquite falls into the meshes of a red-haired dance-hall girl, but the vigilance and expert gun-play on the part of his two staunch friends extricate the youngster from this inglorious affair. The trio travel on until they hit Ogallala, a town boasting an even shadier reputation than Dodge. Here the good-for-nothing Sheriff "acts up" and the three punchers handle matters so successfully that the offender takes to his heels. Before the valiant three reach the end of the trail they have several more thrilling escapades.

"It is well up to the standard so far as plot and rapidity and variety of action are concerned, and Mr. Mulford is one of the few practitioners of the robust art of Wild-Westing who writes in acceptably good English and who often manages to give his wild men considerable resemblance to possible human beings. A good yarn of its family." H. W.

+ Lit R p10 S 13 '24 150w

N Y Times p17 Ja 4 '25 300w

"We guarantee to the right reader a reading of Mr. Mulford's new book at one sitting." E. W. O.

+ N Y World p8e S 7 '24 100w

MULFORD, CLARENCE EDWARD. Rustlers' valley. 333p il $2 Doubleday
24-1643

Jed Hollister takes to the hills when he is wanted for a bank robbery which he did not commit. With a daring leap across a chasm he makes his escape from his pursuers and joins a cow outfit in another valley, meanwhile biding his time for clearing his name. Unfortunately, matters are greatly complicated for him under his alias of Matt Skinner, since one Bud Skinner has a price upon his head. In company with Baldy, a steady-eyed shot of enviable reputation Matt gets into rapid action to solve the mystery of the cattle rustling on the Hundred-Eleven ranch, and even finds time to win his girl.

Booklist 20:265 Ap '24

"The conversation that Mr. Mulford uses to carry along his narrative has a definite life-likeness about it and not a little of the real Western tang. He has the happy knack of hitting things off quickly with a deft simile. All in all, 'Rustlers' Valley' is good entertainment."

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 20 '24 600w

"He packs his plot tight with exciting incidents and provides the reader with just as much kick as though it had never been done before. He wastes no time sentimentalizing about the open spaces and he lets the reader judge for himself whether men are men or not by their actions." Edith Leighton

+ N Y Tribune p22 Ja 20 '24 350w

"There are romance and a fine girl in Mr. Mulford's book. They have their chance when the rustlers are driven out of the valley and out of business." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p10m Ja 6 '24 180w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 19 '24 100w

Wis Lib Bul 20:97 Ap '24

MULLINS, EDGAR YOUNG. Christianity at the cross roads. 289p $1.75 Doran
239 Christianity 25-752

Tho the author, who is president and professor of theology of the Southern Baptist theological seminary, makes almost no use of the terms modernist and fundamentalist, his discussion of the present controversy over the Christian religion is written from the fundamentalist position. He states the issues involved, shows the violence which has been done to the Christian religion by the radical movement, as he believes, and how Christianity has been reduced by modern science, philosophy and modern methods of historical criticism and comparative religion. The last four chapters are a statement of the author's conception of an "irreducible Christ."

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 16 '24 420w

J Religion 4:445 Jl '24 50w

"The style of the book is fervent, rhetorical, picturesque. The sympathetic reader is carried along tempestuously. The critical reader waits to get his bearings; but seldom is an issue presented in such fashion that the considerations appear which lead liberal scholars to their conclusions." G. B. Smith

— + J Religion 4:539 S '24 500w

N Y Tribune p13 S 28 '24 80w

"The author presents an argumentative defense of evangelical Christianity in perfectly equable temper and with abundant references to the positions of science and philosophy."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 8 '24 180w

Springf'd Republian p10 S 23 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p615 O 2 '24 220w

MULLINS, HELENE, and GALLEGHER, MARIE. Paulus Fy. 224p $2 McBride
24-29190

A satirical portrait of an esthete. The life of Paulus Fy is replete with the touch of soft, silken things such as his bedclothes, his jade dressing gown, and Cez, the fluffy white cat. The aroma of dainty perfumed notes from exquisite ladies fills his sleeping-room. The only contact Paulus has with the grimy world is that of the classroom, for he teaches French to a number of unruly children. But Paulus does take a fancy to little Ian and Mary. They are bright. Mary leaves to enter a convent and life for Paulus becomes a dreary thing until he, too, seeks solitude behind monastery walls. Just before death claims him Paulus and Mary meet once more.

Booklist 21:113 D '24

Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '24 300w

"The tale is told by two young women who have the most delightful sense of parody, or rather of Pastiche, and whose sense of mischief is equally developed. The result is a work which has all the amusing qualities of the type of literature burlesqued, with the added charm of mockery, which is the only retort to the attitudinizing of the various Paulus Fys, who insist upon acquainting an innocent public with their too utterly wonderful private lives." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 113:317 O 25 '24 280w

"Here, at last, is a novel which does not purport to be profound. It is written with a delicate sense of humor and irony. It portrays many persons we all have met, some of them very lovable, others otherwise. And because of these innumerable charms—the craftsmanship which is superb for two so young writers, the hero and heroines who are so very adorable and charming, and the language of the story, one can't forget—though regretfully —that the ending is rather weak and pointless and disappointing." C: Norman

+ — Lit R p4 O 25 '24 400w

"This skit is well written. Occasionally it is slyly amusing and sharp in its observation. But through it all runs a suppressed titter that is unpleasant. In fact, quite silly."
— + N Y Times p22 N 9 '24 600w

MUMBY, FRANK ARTHUR. George III and the American revolution; the beginnings. 432p il $4 Houghton

973.3 United States—History—Revolution. George III, king of Great Britain 24-16310

Thru contemporary letters written with no view to publication Mr Mumby opens doors which throw new light on the character and times of George III, the early years of his reign and the American revolution thru its first phase. The book is composed of letters which passed between the king, William Pitt, Edmund Burke, Lord Bute, Horace Walpole, Sir Horace Mann, Benjamin Franklin, George Washington, Samuel Adams and many others, from the accession of George III in 1760, to the outbreak of the Revolutionary war. Illustrated with portraits. Index.

Booklist 20:334 Je '24

"Mr. Mumby has pursued his announced intention of allowing the actors in the historical drama before him to speak for themselves in so far as is possible, being content to give only so much description and context as would explain the letters, and render the whole into one more or less continuous narrative. In so doing he has made a most interesting and vivid description of a stirring and important period of English history." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p13 Mr 29 '24 850w

"The text is entertaining, but one feels that the method is wrong and that Mr. Mumby himself does not always understand the issues at stake." C: M. Andrews
— + Nation 119:193 Ag 20 '24 200w

"Mr. Mumby provides a delectable banquet. He has cast his net far and wide, and brought in a miraculously fine draught of fishes. He is far more readable than the ordinary historian, and his book deserves to be widely read. It is only when we have read through it with our eyes starting out of our heads that it suddenly dawns on us that we have heard the story before—and where? With a stab in our heart we realize—in Lord Macaulay, in Sir G. Otto Trevelyan, and the Whig historians. It is they who taught us in order to buoy up their own prejudices that George III. substituted personal for parliamentary government and lost the Colonies as a result." F. B.
+ — Nation and Ath 34:706 F 16 '24 1150w

"We would commend this volume by a fair minded English scholar to those misguided Americans who confuse patriotism with the noisy assertion of a prejudiced and indefensible chauvinism." D: S. Muzzey
+ New Repub 39:215 Jl 16 '24 1550w

"A book that is agreeable rather than important."
+ — New Statesman 22:740 Mr 29 '24 140w

"Mr. Mumby has done his work very well. His selections have been made judiciously, and his own supplemental and connective contributions are adequate but unobtrusive. . . A valuable and delightful volume."
+ Outlook 137:204 Je 4 '24 320w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:333 Je '24

"An interesting and valuable book."
+ Sat R 137:212 Mr 1 '24 360w

Spec 132:886 My 31 '24 160w

"The most striking feature of the book is the skill and the impartiality with which Mr. Mumby has discharged his task, not only in the choice of the letters, but also in the construction of well-informed connecting paragraphs, which give all that is necessary, and no more than is required, for an intelligent appreciation of the circumstances."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p134 Mr 6 '24 400w

MUMFORD, ETHEL (WATTS) (MRS PETER GEDDES GRANT). Wedding song. 292p $2 Doubleday

24-23489

This love story has its scene in the happy isles of the South seas. Hayes Hallam, known as the pearl king, for the first time in his life ventures outside of his own island. He goes to New York, where he falls into the hands of the suave Paul Glynn, a notorious gambler. Hallam meets and loves Glynn's pretty sister Beatrice, and takes her to his South Sea island where Paul plots to strip Hallam of his rarest pearls. Glynn's carefully laid plans come to naught thru the interference of some one who recognizes him. He falls under the wrath of Hallam's subjects and meets his death thru the magic of their gods. And then the lovers are blessed by the native crooning of the wedding song.

"A gorgeous performance, spiced with much Broadway and sporting page dialect, as well as splashed with 'native' color. It should screen wonderfully well." H. L. P.
— Lit R p10 N 1 '24 210w

N Y Times p22 O 26 '24 170w

MUMFORD, LEWIS. Sticks and stones; a study of American architecture and civilization. 247p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

720.973 Architecture—United States 24-24043

A study of architecture and city development in America as a reflection of our civilization. Mr Mumford shows the influences that shaped the New England village and architecture, the development of the grand style in the manors of Virginia and Maryland, the effect of industrialism on architecture and other influences. He makes it clear that architecture and civilization develop together, the characteristic buildings of each period being the memorials of its institutions.

Booklist 21:101 D '24

"Sticks and stones is a book of first importance, not only by reason of its historical truth, but also because of its intelligent blending of aesthetics and humanism. In reading these essays, I was continually impressed by the author's perceptive balance: the fact that a young Utopian like Mr. Mumford should have written with such charm and hopefulness while presenting the most sordid and bombastic phases of our civilization, is, I take it, indicative of his faith in the future." T: Craven
+ Dial 78:153 F '25 1450w

"Mr. Mumford writes with a conviction that gives power to his phrases, and with a discernment and discrimination that shape beauty in his style. His chapters end on a pithy or epigrammatic note that is perhaps too recurrent; but his ideas are generally as sound as his approach is original; he sticks by no pet theory, he leaves no stone unturned, and has produced a most searching and salutary survey of American social development and ideals." J. T. Shipley
+ Lit R p5 D 13 '24 1100w

"By all odds 'Sticks and stones' is the most stimulating book on architecture in many a long day." T. F. Hamlin
+ Nation 119:604 D 3 '24 1000w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 41:sup7 D 10 '24 1400w

Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison
N Y Times p4 S 21 '24 2500w

Reviewed by Fiske Kimball
N Y Tribune p3 O 26 '24 1050w

MUMFORD, LEWIS—Continued

"He has really covered his subject in an illuminating and exact exposition of what we have achieved or failed to achieve both in architecture and in life during the three hundred years that have elapsed since the settlement of this country. It is a truly remarkable book." Aymar Embury II

+ Sat R of Lit 1:413 D 27 '24 2450w

MUNDY, TALBOT. Nine unknown. 353p il $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Hutchinson]

24-6686

"Twelve men, actuated by love of adventure, scientific interest, religious belief or a desire for gold, go in search of nine super-books of black magic. The story deals with the futile struggle carried on for possession of the books, between the twelve searchers, an Indian secret society called the 'Nine Unknown,' and a spurious band of Unknowns."—Cleveland

Cleveland p43 Je '24

"Here Mr. Mundy is very much and very lusciously at home. Moreover, he is a word painter with an almost inspired instinct for color, tone and atmosphere. The characters in this book are flesh and blood; they live and breathe and remain in the reader's mind as vital creatures after he has closed the book."

+ Lit R p9 S 20 '24 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 19 '24 150w

MUNRO, WILLIAM BENNETT. Current problems in citizenship. 541p $1.80 Macmillan

320 Political science. United States—Politics and government 24-20679

Current problems is used in a broad sense to include man and his environment, the organization and work of government and questions relating to civic matters—economic, social and international. Each problem is discussed as to its origin and various phases, the ways in which it makes itself felt in daily life and the various solutions offered, with arguments for and against.

"Admirably lucid, judicial and temperate in treatment and expression. The book is remarkably free from prejudice and from partisan or personal animus. The author is not interested in the preaching of his personal opinions but aims merely to illuminate with informed statement and judicial discussion matters that are of profound and universal interest for American citizens."

+ N Y Times p23 O 19 '24 500w

"Prof Munro does not hesitate to express his opinions, but the opinions that he expresses, while finality cannot be claimed for them all, are arrived at by dispassionate examination of evidence and in the light both of history and of knowledge of social and governmental principles. In other words, he is neither dogmatic nor a propagandist, and his little book, though offering nothing new, and, in fact, being little more than an abstract of a higher work, should help toward the formation of instructed public opinion."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 S 3 '24 800w

MUNRO, WILLIAM BENNETT. Personality in politics. 114p $1.50 Macmillan

329 Politics, Practical 24-23278

Professor Munro herein analyzes and compares the outstanding types in American politics—leaders, bosses, and reformers, explaining who they are, what they do, and how they do it. He also explains why reformers frequently fail and why bosses so often triumph.

"The book is a model of sound sense and inspiriting suggestion, well adapted to catch and hold the attention of readers for whom more bulky treatises have no charm." W: MacDonald

+ Nation 119:547 N 19 '24 220w

"Everything in them is true, and useful for young men in college; but it is not particularly exciting nor does it get us much further." Elmer Davis

— + New Repub 41:100 D 17 '24 330w

"As informed and informing a book on the personal factor in politics as we have had in this country. There is not a dull page in it and hardly one which does not reveal some new facet of government in action—'human nature in politics.'" Phillips Bradley

+ N Y Tribune p5 O 19 '24 50w

Reviewed by W. N. Seymour

Sat R of Lit 1:378 D 13 '24 770w

MURPHY, EDGAR GARDNER (KELVIN MCKREADY, pseud.). 2 Beginner's guide to the stars; based on [his] A beginner's star book, arranged by Maud King Murphy. 86p il $1 Putnam

523.8 Stars. Astronomy 24-14445

"A guide to identification of stars and planets. Includes star maps from the author's earlier and larger book, together with brief, practical observation by the unaided eye or with opera-glasses."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:588 D '24

MURPHY, THOMAS DOWLER. New England 2 highways and byways from a motor car. (See America first ser.) 327p il $6 Page

917.4 New England—Description and travel 24-15989

"Mr. Murphy and his party took the month of September for the trip [thru New England]. Three thousand miles made the span of their journey, an average of a hundred a day. They stopped at most of the famous old inns and saw the most interesting of the many old churches, visited nearly all the colleges and universities, had a brief view of several of the larger cities, devoted ample time to the outstanding old towns with museums and to all the important literary shrines. Mr. Murphy wrote his book primarily for the use of those who want to make a similar tour."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:147 Ja '25

"A careful, detailed and interesting guide. Stay-at-homes also will discover that it affords much interesting and useful reading, for it is freshly and pleasantly written and is crammed full of information about the places visited."

+ N Y Times p20 S 14 '24 650w

"Mr. Murphy's text has been prepared with an adequate sense of the real beauties of rural New England and with a keen appreciation of the historical interest associated with the towns and localities described. The illustrations—half in color—are in keeping with the general attractiveness of the subject."

+ R of Rs 70:336 S '24 100w

MURTAGH, GILBERT. Small houses. 145p il $3 Doubleday

728 Architecture, Domestic 24-6659

The book contains about twenty-five designs ranging in cost from $5,000 to $25,000. In each case floor plans and exterior views are given. There are chapters on the site and grounds, on interior decoration and lighting, materials and construction, equipment, and financing the home.

"One can say that the author's taste and judgment are excellent and that the advice that he gives is based upon good common sense and sound tradition." A. C. Nash

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 6 '24 480w

N Y Tribune p28 Jl 13 '24 70w

"Gilbert Murtaugh spreads out before us an assortment of excellently planned little homes."

+ N Y World p7e My 18 '24 100w

"The greater part of the book consists of letter-press and the suggestions will usually be found helpful for those who need them."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 9 '24 100w

MUSSOLINI, BENITO. Mussolini as revealed in his political speeches (November 1914-August 1923); selected, tr. and ed. by Barone Bernardo Quaranta di San Severino. 375p $3.50 (7s 6d) Dutton

945 Italy—Fascisti movement

These selections from Mussolini's political speeches during the last nine years follow that leader thru the successive stages of his career from Socialist to Fascist prime minister of Italy and show the steps which led up to the Fascist revolution. The questions he discusses concern not Italy alone but the rest of the world as well.

Am Pol Sci R 18:426 My '24 60w

Ann Am Acad 114:164 Jl '24 160w

Booklist 20:261 Ap '24

"The speeches must be read in their entirety to give one a satisfactory insight into the views of Mussolini on leading questions of the hour. They throw much light on the attitude of the Italian people and the emotions of the Italy of the Fascisti." O. McK., jr.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 1 '24 600w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris

Int Bk R p875 N '24 1500w

Reviewed by Arthur Livingston

Nation 118:714 Je 18 '24 550w

"This is an excellent selection from Mussolini's rhetorical performances. The lack of humor which is one of the principal ingredients of the speeches themselves allowed their publication and authorized the treacherously adequate participle in the subtitle." E. S. Bagger

+ — New Repub 41:49 D 3 '24 1300w

"The first surprise which the volume brings to the average American reader is the breadth of the Italian Premier's culture. He is a self-made man of humble origin—but it is clear that he has read much, and thought more. In every public utterance there is at least one inspiring idea felicitously expressed, with the moral value of a biblical quotation, which his hearers carry away." H. N. Gay

+ N Y Times p7 My 11 '24 1200w

N Y World p7e Ja 13 '24 180w

Outlook 136:196 Ja 30 '24 20w

R of Rs 69:224 F '24 80w

"In it Mussolini himself speaks in his own vibrant voice, thinks with a brain swift as it is sure, acts almost before the words are spoken with the flash of a sword that catches the sun. We recommend everyone truly in earnest for England to study these piercing speeches. The longest of them is short. They resound with sincere yet far-reaching statesmanship, fraught with lessons for us all."

+ Sat R 136:621 D 8 '23 650w

Spec 132:17 Ja 5 '24 1800w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p59 Ja 31 '24 600w

MYERS, JAMES. Representative government in industry. 249p $2 Doran

331.152 Employees' representation in management 24-13255

An account of employee representation at work which explains in practical detail the technique necessary for successful operation and the social and moral influences which, in the writer's observation, are directly bearing on the actual operation of the works councils. The book tells how to start, regulate and keep in repair the new forms of industrial machinery necessary to the movement and also discusses the larger issues involved.

"The book is so written as to be of interest both to the owners and managers and to labor, as well as to students of social science and government." J. G.

Bookm 59:adv Jl '24 80w

"This is an earnest and thoughtful book, but still a somewhat disappointing one." Stuart Chase

+ — Nation 119:148 Ag 6 '24 780w

"Mr. Myers, whose position as executive Secretary of the Board of Operatives at the Dutchess Bleachery has given him an opportunity of observing from the beginning one of the most successful plans of workers' participation in this country, surveys the whole question in the various forms in which the experiment has been tried. What is said by way of theory is reinforced by illustrations drawn from the experience of different industries, and there are extracts from the actual minutes and proceedings of various types of work councils." W: MacDonald

N Y Times p10 Je 1 '24 350w

N Y Tribune p25 Je 29 '24 60w

Outlook 138:606 D 10 '24 150w

"This is a notable book. While his own conclusions are optimistic, he so clearly presents the obstacles to making labor co-partnership effective over the whole industrial field, that a reader of a less sanguine disposition may find material in his pages for as gloomy a view of the future of industrial America as suits his personal disposition." H: R. Seager

+ Survey 52:550 Ag 15 '24 900w

MYERS, ROLLO H. Modern music; its aims and tendencies. (Music lover's lib. ser.) 89p $1.25 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

780 Music 24-442

A short survey of modernism in music; its tendency to express literary and scenic ideas; its striving toward harmonic freedom; its reliance upon the dance; its leaning toward the grotesque; its tendency toward simplicity and realism.

"As an excellent analysis of extreme modernism in music this book is likely to be read by many. The general reader will have little difficulty with the book and will find it a concise and unadorned statement."

+ Lit R p584 Mr 8 '24 300w

"Thoughtful and discriminating little volume."

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '24 380w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p685 O 18 '23 700w

MYERS, WILLIAM STARR. American democracy today, and other essays on politics and government. 162p $1.75 Princeton univ. press [8s Milford]

320.4 United States—Politics and government 24-17826

"Fundamental principles of political science are here reviewed in the light of their present-day applicability by the professor of politics in Princeton University. Among the subjects considered are Presidential leadership, certain contemporary dangers, the Constitution and the people, the position of the Senate, the House of Representatives, the importance of the judiciary, parties and partisanship, state governments, the organization of the American government and the conduct of war. The essays are somewhat elementary in form, being intended to serve as an introduction to further reading."—N Y Tribune

---

Boston Transcript p6 My 24 '24 200w

N Y Tribune p27 Jl 13 '24 80w

Pol Sci Q 39:538 S '24 450w

"They are, in the main, one man's observations on the state of the nation; while there are some fresh deductions in the book, as a whole it covers familiar ground in a somewhat random fashion. Prof Myers is not appealing to a professional clientele, and his views as here set forth gain little weight from the fact that he is a professor of politics. Agreeable in tone though with considerate personal bias, they are mainly of the nature of club or club-car discussion."

— + Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 2 '24 950w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p307 My 15 '24 50w

N

NAMM, BENJAMIN H. Advertising the retail store; with a foreword by Arthur Brisbane. 228p il $2.50 U.P.C. bk.

659 Advertising. Retail trade 24-1718

"A thoroughly practical work, written by and based upon the successful experience of a retailer."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"While the book is technical in its treatment it should have a real application in the activities of its particular field of advertising."

Bookm 59:adv Je '24 160w

"Mr. Namm writes well and modestly."

+ N Y Times p12 F 17 '24 800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:367 Jl '24

NANSEN, FRIDTJOF. Russia and peace. 162p $2 Macmillan [5s Allen & U.]

914.7 Russia—Economic conditions A24-790

Dr Nansen discusses in an impartial way the present economic situation in Russia—the condition of her transport system, trade, finance, industry, agriculture, education and sanitary affairs. He pleads for a resumption of normal relations between Russia and other countries as essential to world recovery and international peace.

"The statements of conditions are analyzed with much judgment by the author; and, though it must be difficult to avoid some bias from contact with high officials, the text is not prejudiced. The work of the organization enabled the author to keep in touch with actual conditions." A. P. Usher

+ Am Econ R 14:303 Je '24 480w

Am Pol Sci R 18:426 My '24 50w

Booklist 20:296 My '24

Cleveland p56 Jl '24

"The author does his best to remain neutral. He tries to give an account of the original effort of the Bolsheviki to start their communistic experiment, but his whole narrative is a convincing exposition of their failure. Nansen's sources of information are predominantly Bolshevik reports." S. A. Korff

+ Lit R p538 F 23 '24 780w

Reviewed by A. I. Nazaroff

N Y Times p2 Mr 16 '24 1550w

"No man could be less a partisan and more a humane spectator of the Russian scene than Dr. Nansen. He is a man wthout an ax to grind, a cause to plead, a party to denounce, a dogma to preach, a panacea to promote." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p6e F 24 '24 800w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:381 Jl '24

Pol Sci Q 39:363 Je '24 140w

Wis Lib Bul 20:96 Ap '24

NASR-ED-DIN KHOJA. The Khoja, tales of Nasr-ed-Din; tr. from the Turkish text by Henry D. Barnham; with a foreword by Sir Valentine Chirol. 260p il $2.50 Appleton

398 Folklore—Turkey 24-15895

These are the century-old Turkish folktales of Nasr-ed-Din, a native of Sivri-hissar. They do not picture "the ruling Turk, black-coated with a Western veneer," but "the primitive and picturesque Turk, simple-minded and blissfully ignorant, gifted with a broad sense of humor." The Khoja relates mostly the doings of the humbler folk, their domestic and social differences, their weaknesses, and the life of their farmyards and animals. Partial contents: The innkeeper's bill; Tamerlane's elephants; The cook and the beggar; Putting the baby to sleep; The prize turkey; Married or single? Off with his head! The governor's wife; The Khoja's parable for young children; The Khoja's nightcap.

"Interesting, and the general reader will find in their novelty a half-hour's diversion."

+ English J 13:685 N '24 90w

"In the present translation of the Khoja, the translator notes in his introduction that he 'has been obliged to reject a good many, some because they are uninteresting and some because their crudity offends against good taste or their humor depends upon a play of words which may amuse those who know Turkish, but loses all point in translation.' Still, what we have now in English carry out the suggestion that the Khoja was an amusing old fellow."

N Y Times p8 Je 8 '24 750w

"One can read his thousand and three fables without effort, and often with genuine amusement, but there is little chance of asking him in to swap yarns and shout delectable indelicacies with Petronius, Boccaccio, Straparola and Margaret of Navarre." A. D. Douglas

+ — N Y Tribune p24 Jl 13 '24 430w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 70w

"A very interesting collection." J. L. H.

+ N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 360w

Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 2 '24 350w

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. Materia critica. 242p $2.50 Knopf

792 Theater. Drama 24-21608

Mr Nathan's latest book of critical notes on the theater and drama deals with critic and criticism, art and artist, certain dramatists, actors and actresses and with the theater in general. There is here no falling off in the frankness and provocativeness which mark all his critical essays.

Bookm 60:350 N '24 90w

"In all his criticism there is at once an impishness and a deeply underlying sobriety. 'Materia Critica' takes its place with 'The Critic and The Drama' as an example of Nathan's best work,—a work that is of the finest coinage despite the inevitable alloy."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 30 '24 1100w

"If at times he lectures with the unction and dogmatism of the pedagogue he decries, forgiveness can only be accorded an unction and dogmatism that have had so salutary an effect in mowing the stubble from the field of American criticism. There is much sound meat in 'Materia Critica' whether you like it or not. Mr. Nathan seems to be at his best in his discussion of various dramatists and in his notes on the theatre. But wherever you turn in the book, your eye ere long will fall upon an unprotected epigram that will make you smile happily or put blood in your eye." W. O.

+ — Lit R p11 S 6 '24 370w

N Y Times p6 S 14 '24 580w

Reviewed by J. M. Cain

N Y World p8e Ja 11 '25 850w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

Outlook 138:509 N 26 '24 300w

"His book is a remarkable compound of confused theorizing, sharp and discriminating critical judgments, curious insensibilities, and deplorable literary manners." H. E. Woodbridge

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:198 O 18 '24 1500w

NEFF, EMERY EDWARD. Carlyle and Mill; mystic and utilitarian. 334p $2.25 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Carlyle, Thomas. Mill, John Stuart 24-20878

The book is a study of Carlyle and Mill as representatives of conflicting thought on the subjects which were perplexing their day. The author first sketches the meeting and early relations of the two men, their long friendship and gradual estrangement. In the following chapters he explains the economic and intellectual forces which were shaping the England of their day and shows how Carlyle and Mill, through the incompatibility of their temperaments and the conflict of their thought must inevitably have become divided.

Reviewed by G. H. Carson
Int Bk R p118 Ja '25 220w

Reviewed by J. M. Drachman
Lit R p974 Ag 16 '24 500w

Reviewed by H: R. Mussey
Nation 119:382 O 8 '24 650w

"In view of the capital importance of these two figures it is strange that the comparison suggested by Spencer should not have been undertaken before this. The omission cannot be regretted, however, in the light of the full, exact and luminous statement which Mr. Neff has given us. He has supplied a most useful part of the foundation for a synthetic study of English literature in the nineteenth century, and has given his learning a readable form which is reminiscent of French rather than English or American scholarship." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 39:276 Jl 30 '24 1200w

New Statesman 23:287 Je 14 '24 80w

"Exhaustive and well-ordered volume set forth and sustained with close-knit logic and notable erudition." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p22 Jl 20 '24 1300w

NEILSON, FRANCIS. Sin-eater's Hallowe'en; a fantasy in one act and two scenes. 89p $1.50 Huebsch
812 24-7625

"A sin eater is a man, who for trifling payment was believed to take upon himself by means of food and drink, the sins of a deceased person." Around this ancient belief Francis Neilson has written in the form of a one-act comedy a satire of the Peace conference and international relations. At the Cat and Fiddle Inn a group of personages representing the heads of European countries called together by one Makepeace have assembled for the purpose of forming a plan for peace. There is a great deal of discussion of Europe's economic situation and considerable eating and drinking. Finally they eat themselves to death and Timothy the sin eater is called in. With due ceremony he performs the rite of purification but cannot stomach their sins. Immediately, as a result, they come to life. Yet in spite of their acquaintance with the sin eater they depart haggling among themselves over the payment of the bill.

"The symbolism lacks all subtlety and is leavened with so little reality that it topples of its own weight."
— Nation 118:591 My 21 '24 70w

"Another playwright gone wrong is Francis Neilson, whose play 'The Sin-Eater's Hallowe'en' is a most extraordinary mixture of the dramatic and that which could not by any possibility be made dramatic."
— N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '24 140w

Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 100w

NEVILL, RALPH HENRY. Unconventional memories. 324p $6 Doran [18s Hutchinson]
B or 92 24-13382

A son of Lady Dorothy Nevill, whose reminiscences he edited, Ralph Nevill's memories begin with the early seventies when as a child he saw at his mother's house most of the prominent politicians of her day. Memories of days at Eton and Cambridge follow and of his later experiences in Persia as attaché of the British legation. There are chapters on London clubs, restaurants and theatres, on a trip to Japan and on the life of a boulevardier in the Paris of the nineties.

"The charm and vividness of the substance of Ralph Nevill's 'Unconventional Memories' is proof against his heavy, awkward style (betraying in its frequent ablative absolute constructions a long tutelage to the classics) and his somewhat puerile method of organization."
+ — Bookm 60:230 O '24 200w

"We lay the book aside with a smile of gratitude for all the entertainment Mr. Nevill has given us, if, be it confessed, an accompanying sigh for 'The days that were—the days that were.' " F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '24 1200w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson
N Y Times p14 Je 29 '24 360w

" 'Unconventional Memories,' by Ralph Nevill is a merry chronicle of life lightly taken."
+ N Y World p7a My 18 '24 160w

St Louis p387 N '24

NEVILL, RALPH HENRY. World of fashion, 1837-1922. 280p il $6 Dutton [16s Methuen]
914.2 England—Social life and customs [24-4062]

"Mr. Nevill's volume of reminiscences, of anecdote, and of occasionally biting comment serves to illustrate amply and in great variety the various changes that marked the passage of years between them. His glimpses of the early portions of the years covered by his title are, naturally, second hand, but authentic enough. But the bulk of the volume is the work of an eye-witness and participant, who looks on with sometimes an amused detachment, being able to sympathize with and understand the youth of today, but who really belongs himself to the older order. . . Mr. Nevill had the entrée everywhere, especially at Devonshire House, and seems to have met nearly every one of consequence."—Lit R

"The book is packed with detail, aptly chosen and skilfully worked in. But its chief attraction for many readers will be its wealth of anecdotes, most of them hitherto unpublished, of celebrities of all sorts, from the '40s to the present. The book is never dull, though it is somewhat prolix."
+ Lit R p782 My 24 '24 240w

"This keen-eyed observer rambles entertainingly through many decades. Mr. Nevill insisted on viewing the celebrities of his time with his own eyes, and the result is that in many cases he has either thrown new light upon them or given our impressions of them an agreeably fresh slant." C: W. Thompson
+ N Y Times p14 Je 29 '24 950w

NEVILLE, MARGOT. Safety first. 293p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
24-21919

His Aunt Caroline had named him Hippocrates in the hope that he would be a great doctor, but Hugh Paine preferred to be Hughie to his friends. Aunt Caroline was the source of all Hugh's income so of course when she asked him to take her cherished ruby ring to the jeweler's to be fixed he complied with her request. But the very day the ring was returned to Hugh it disappeared. He knew his life would be made miserable and his income cut off if the ring were not found, so he embarked upon a series of highly diverting adventures in his endeavor to regain the ring. And it reappeared just in time to avert the catastrophe.

Boston Transcript p4 O 15 '24 280w

Cleveland p92 D '24

"Miss Neville's story is just as sprightly as her dialogue—her characters are just as lively." M. L.
+ Lit R p9 O 11 '24 170w

"The life of a commuter need not be regarded with fear and frown so long as there are people in the world to write such hilarious tasks as Margot Neville has in 'Safety First.' Rather will Miss Neville have reason to feel aggrieved if some enterprising producer doesn't give her yarn to the stage as a vehicle for Willie Collier or some one like him."
+ N Y Times p5 O 19 '24 280w

Springf'd Republican p5a O 19 '24 250w

NEVILLE, MARGOT—Continued

"There is matter enough, if only the author had the skill to handle it effectively. But it is often too obviously padded out and its humour is too obviously forced."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p542 S 4 '24 70w

NEVINS, ALLAN, comp. and ed. American social history as recorded by British travellers. 577p $4 Holt [18s Allen & U.]

917.3 United States—Description and travel. National characteristics, American. United States—Social life and customs 24-332

"The aim of the compiler and editor of this book has been 'to give a view of the development of American society from Washington's day to Harding's' by means of passages selected from the writings of thirty or more British travellers in the United States. He takes his writers in four periods, [beginning with 1789 and ending with the present day] and has something brief and to the point to say of each traveller, of the circumstances in which he visited the country, of the impression, if any, that he made at the time, and of the reception given his book."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"This book is a valuable tool for the history teacher as well as an interesting and thought-stimulating book for the general reader. . . While practically all of the works quoted in this book are known to the historical specialist, and most of them to any well-read person, by bringing together so much material in such usable form, Mr. Nevins has put a valuable critique of American social evolution within the reach of everyone." M. L. Bonham, jr.

+ Am Hist R 29:778 Jl '24 700w

Am Pol Sci R 18:646 Ag '24 100w

"Many of his selections, especially those portraying our great men, have charm, and as most are drawn from writers who are not easily available, the general reader will get a great deal of amusement from the book." J: B. Wheelwright

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Jl '24 480w

Booklist 20:335 Je '24

"This is one of the most interesting books I have read for a long time. It is interesting not only because of its theme and the quality of the extracts, but on account of the editor's perspicacity and his literary gift. . . The book is of great merit." Frank Swinnerton

+ Bookm 59:592 Jl '24 1100w

"An extremely interesting book, a record so varied, of things so interesting that it can be read continuously or kept by the bed-side. The work is well done, the selection of quotations excellent, and the introductions are bright and useful."

+ Dial 77:85 Jl '24 130w

"A volume of excellent selections from the observations of thirty of the best qualified British observers. In making this compilation Mr. Nevins has not only given a better picture than any one of them could have supplied, but he has brought forward many almost forgotten and extremely valuable contributions to our written history." C. T. Crowell

+ Int Bk R p421 My '24 2650w

"A most important history of American manners." M. R. Werner

+ Lit R p609 Mr 22 '24 800w

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley

Nation 119:265 S 10 '24 300w

"Mr. Nevins has taken the word social, it seems to me, in a somewhat narrow sense, and occasionally has emphasized customs and manners to the disparagement of other phases of our life, quite as interesting to the reader and more important to the student of history. These are minor flaws, however, in an able and illuminating selection. I trust this book will meet enough success to justify a companion volume, dealing with travelers from other countries." L: Mumford

+ — New Repub 40:277 N 12 '24 1750w

"Mr. Nevins has done a good job, and one that needed doing." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 2 '24 4950w

Outlook 136:442 Mr 12 '24 150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:330 Je '24

"The whole book is a service rendered. And it could not be bettered as a treasury of the most varied wares." Garnet Smith

+ Sat R 138:193 Ag 23 '24 370w

"Entertaining and in some ways enlightening book."

+ — Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 1400w

"A compilation of this kind is too often superficial and incoherent; in the present instance it is highly successful, thanks to good judgment and good editing."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p506 Ag 21 '24 1700w

Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

NEVINSON, HENRY WOODD. Changes and chances. 373p il $4.50 Harcourt [15s Nisbet]

B or 92 24-7990

"Mr. Nevinson tells us about his early years in rural England, describes his experiences at Shrewsbury School on the Severn and at Christ Church, Oxford; sets down what he saw during his visits to Germany, France and Switzerland, and writes extensively concerning war assignments that took him to Greece, Spain, South Africa and other parts of the world, the United States included. But the chief interest of the volume centres in London and in the life the author led, first as a lecturer and free-lance contributor to magazines and newspapers; then as a leader-writer on the London Chronicle, finally as an attaché of The Nation and writer for the Daily Herald and Manchester Guardian."—Boston Transcript

---

Booklist 20:336 Je '24

Bookm 59:357 My '24 140w

"Discursive as Mr. Nevinson is, sometimes passing from subject to subject with kaleidoscopic suddenness, he knows how to make every topic interesting, if only with a quotation from Goethe or an excerpt from the Greek classics. His talent comes out especially in the limning of personality." Edmund Noble

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 9 '24 1600w

"A beautifully written and a stimulating book."

+ Dial 76:373 Ap '24 50w

"By violating the traditions of the trade H. W. Nevinson has written one of the most interesting books of reminiscence of his period. Mr. Nevinson is an example of the rare person who can write of his own life better than another could for him after he is dead." M. R. Werner

+ Lit R p521 F 16 '24 720w

Reviewed by H. W. Massingham

Nation 118:482 Ap 23 '24 600w

"It would not be easy to name a living man of letters whose writing more continually reveals a knowledge of all the literature and history that matters to an educated Englishman. Mr. Nevinson professes a boundless contempt for the stylists. Along with such opposites as Matthew Arnold and Bernard Shaw he contends that there is no such thing as a secret of style, beyond the having something to say and saying it as clearly as may be. That, of course, is simply not so. All the knowledge and sense and toil in the world would not enable a man to achieve the grace and rhythm of Mr. Nevinson's prose at its best."

+ New Statesman 22:88 O 27 '23 800w

"The charm of these random sketches is unmistakable." H: E. Armstrong

+ N Y Times p7 F 17 '24 2050w

"A well-known English journalist and knight errant, whose life has been conspicuous for individual adventure and espousal of lost causes, has written an autobiography that will excite rather more interest than the average book of its class.''

Springf'd Republican p8 O 27 '23 1300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p661 O 11 '23 700w

NEW YORK GUILD FOR THE JEWISH ^{2} BLIND. Aces; a collection of short stories; comp. by the Community workers of the [guild]. 317p $2 Putnam

Short stories—Collections

"This collection of the work of contemporary short-story writers—all Americans with the exception of Israel Zangwill—was made possible through the efforts of The Community Workers of the New York Guild for the Jewish Blind. It was undertaken to raise funds for their work in the Center which they have established to make the blind self-supporting. The stories included are all the work of popular writers. They range from Edna Ferber at her best in 'Old Man Minick,' to F. Scott Fitzgerald at his worst in 'Gretchen's Forty Winks.' "—N Y Times

Int Bk R p99 Ja '25 130w

"It is a book to appeal to those who enjoy the better done of our popular magazine stories." H. B.

Lit R p10 D 20 '24 110w

N Y Times p8 D 7 '24 240w

"If the editors of 'Aces' had first selected 'Old Man Minick' and then determined that each of the other stories must be as truly representative of its author, they might have had a collection of little masterpieces. For 'Aces' has its authors—only most of them were caught in an off mood." Alison Smith

— + N Y World p8e D 28 '24 300w

Outlook 138:654 D 17 '24 20w

"The title is a happy choice, especially as most of the stories represent the author's best, most characteristic work."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:330 N 29 '24 160w

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY. BUREAU OF BUSINESS RESEARCH. Source-book of research data; a list of reliable current sources of statistics of quantity and price for important commodities. 70p $4 Prentice-Hall

016.658 Commercial statistics—Bibliography. Prices—Bibliography

"A valuable reference work. Indicates the source and exact character of much statistical information on prices, production, consumption, storage, etc."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:76 F '24

NEWBIGIN, MARION ISABEL. Commercial geography. 256p $1 Holt [2s 6d Williams & N.]

380 Geography, Commercial 24-14764

This concise handbook in the Home university library series covers the three elements on which commercial geography is based—production, transport and exchange of commodities.

Bookm 59:adv Je '24 180w

"Dr. Newbigin is an acknowledged authority on her subject, and she has written upon it well and interestingly. She has selected and arranged her groups of commodities in a sensible manner, and relates the facts she has gathered to the trading accounts of certain great nations in a way that throws considerable light on the general economic and political situation of the present century. Her little book thus provides both the material and the conclusions of her subject—a condition which short textbooks do not by any means always fulfil."

+ New Statesman 22:640 Mr 8 '24 200w

NEWBIGIN, MARION ISABEL. Mediterranean ^{2} lands; an introductory study in human and historical geography. 222p $2.75 Knopf [7s 6d Christophers]

914 Mediterranean sea. Anthropo-geography 24-30519

"This study of how it was that lands around the Mediterranean Sea 'came to be a training-ground for civilized man in a fashion not paralleled elsewhere,' is in two parts—'The Geography of the Mediterranean Lands'—their main relief features, their climate and vegetation, and man's reaction to these physical conditions; and 'The Historical Sequence,' tracing the origins and development of man in the Mediterranean marginal lands; the development of sea-trade; the evolution of Athens and the Greek City-State; the rise of Rome; its decline; the development of the mediæval trading-centers; and that invasion of the Turks which deprived the Mediterranean area of its long-established importance as 'the center of the civilized world.' "—Boston Transcript

"It is impossible to emphasize too strongly the interest as well as value of this rare study whose arrangement is as clear as its erudition is profound."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '25 520w

"I find in this volume a neatly ordered mind and that respect for facts (good, bad and indifferent) which makes me suspect that the excellent lady is right, or about as right as anybody can ever hope to be. The story of the Mediterranean lands is not particularly new. People began to write about them as early as the Trojan war. It seemed that everything which could be told had been told. But no, here we get the same facts, recomposed in such a fashion that the resultant symphony pleases our ears and delights our brain." H. W. Van Loon

+ Nation 119:642 D 10 '24 220w

"The present volume is called an introductory study in human and historical geography, and it has all the virtues and vices of the French school whose influence has done much to shape English geographical thought. On the one hand some life is breathed into the bare bones which used to be called geography; we are taught to correlate man and his environment and to consider the effect of the Mediterranean climate and physical features upon the history of culture and the human race as a whole. But there is a tendency to degenerate into that verbalism which is the last infirmity of the quasi-scientific mind."

+ — New Statesman 24:58 O 18 '24 200w

"It is all interesting, well put and eminently suggestive. Her book will stimulate many a teacher of history to think twice about what he or she has taken for granted hitherto, and to account for and connect up events which scholars used to be made merely to memorize as unconditioned isolated facts. The authoress has taken great and evident pains to be up to date not only in geographical science, but in the archæological and historical fields."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p751 N 20 '24 520w

NEWMAN, ERNEST. Wagner as man and artist. 399p il $5 Knopf

B or 92 Wagner, Richard 24-30743

Written by the musical critic of the London Sunday Times, this is a completely revised edition of a book published in England on the eve of the war and shortly afterward out of print. The first part deals with Wagner as a man, the second with his theory and practice as an artist.

"Wagner appears as 'a folio of vanity, heartlessness, and egoism.' Indeed, the author is so successful with this portrait that he almost overproves his case, and we find it a little hard,

NEWMAN, ERNEST—Continued
in passing to the sections on the artist, to accept his broad generalization that 'art is not life, and the artist may be very different from his art.' Later he admits the difficulty." D. G. Mason
Lit R p4 D 13 '24 1250w

"Mr. Ernest Newman has gathered into convenient and readable form an astonishing amount of important matter relating to the composer who, as Mr. W. J. Henderson once said, is, taken by and large, the most interesting figure in the history of music. The readability of this book must not be underestimated." Pitts Sanborn
+ N Y Tribune p9 Ja 18 '25 620w

"Mr. Newman is musician enough to understand that Wagner was as magnificent an artist as he was, in many ways, contemptible as a person. The obligations of iconoclasm cannot be entirely pleasing to Mr. Newman, but he fulfils them to the confusion of such worshippers who think stoning too good for any one who dares point out the streak of clay in the idol." Harry Salpeter
N Y World p8e N 16 '24 750w

NEWMAN, FRANCES, comp. and tr. Short
2 story's mutations. 332p $2.50 Huebsch
Short story. Short stories—Collections
25-2971

By carefully chosen examples Miss Newman traces the evolution of the short story. The French fabliaux, the Gesta Romanorum, Boccaccio, Voltaire, Hans Christian Andersen, de Musset, Mérimée, de Maupassant, Jules Laforgue, Henry James, Chekhov, Sherwood Anderson, D. H. Lawrence and James Joyce, mark the "genealogical steps in the line" that leads from Petronius to Paul Morand.

"To the person who likes a short story for its own sake, the book will appeal because of its exceptionally fine selection; to students and writers of others interested in the more technical aspects of literature, Miss Newman's comment will prove, to put it very mildly, stimulating and thought-provoking." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p7 D 6 '24 900w

"'The Short Story's Mutations' is a remarkable anthology, and more. Miss Newman furnishes a commentary which sets a new standard for the American anthologist." Carl Van Doren
+ Nation 119:711 D 24 '24 650w

"The whole group, together with Miss Newman's spicily charming, but slightly opinionated, comments, gives an entertaining little glimpse of Miss Newman herself, at least of her taste in literature. Incidentally, the translations from French, Latin, Russian and Italian sources are Miss Newman's own; they reveal her as an accomplished linguist."
+ N Y Times p12 D 28 '24 1250w

NEWMAN, HORATIO HACKETT. Outlines of general zoölogy. 480p il $3.50 Macmillan
590 Zoology 24-16215

"Professor Newman opens with a historical survey of his subject, and after discussing the problems associated with life, protoplasm and the cell, goes on to describe a series of animal types ranging from the amoeba to the frog, each type being used in concrete illustration of one or more of the principles involved; general biology is then taken up for a more or less critical survey of evolutionary aspects and theories. Questions follow each chapter. At the close, supplementing a bibliography, there is an ample glossary of terms."—Boston Transcript

"This account of zoölogy does credit alike to the author and to the institution he represents; it succeeds not only as a method of teaching the facts of the science to students, but also as a presentation likely to attract general readers who wish to know something of the lore underlying the doctrine of evolution."
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 25 '24 850w

"Textbooks are notoriously dry, but the author of this one, who is professor of zoology in the University of Chicago, has written several that are distinctly not dry, and this is one of them." A. G. Ingalls
+ Lit R p11 Ag 30 '24 200w

"A good text book of general zoology for the beginning student should be scrupulously accurate. It should also not attempt to cover too large a field. An examination of 'Outlines of General Zoology' reveals some defects in both respects." E. A. C.
— Springf'd Republican p7a O 5 '24 350w

NEWSHOLME, SIR ARTHUR. Elements of vital statistics in their bearing on social and public health problems. 623p $7.50 Appleton [24s Allen & U.]
312 Vital statistics [24-2887]

First published in 1889, Sir Arthur Newsholme's work has long been a recognized authority and text-book on vital statistics. The present edition has been entirely re-written.

Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '24 800w

"A crowning and authoritative resumé of all of the important elements in the vital statistics of both England and the United States. This reference work should prove invaluable if not indispensable for 'medical officers of health and others engaged in public health and social work.'" G. J. Drolet, M.D.
+ Survey 52:246 My 15 '24 420w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 17 '24 50w

NEWTON, ALMA (MRS ALMA NEWTON ANDERSON). An old-fashioned romance. 248p $2 Minton, Balch & co.
24-11333

"The hero of the tale is a remarkable and extraordinarily handsome young Southerner named Algernon Emmett Nichol. He falls in love at first sight with beautiful Rosa Gordon. Presently they are married, and a year or so later she dies, having previously assured him that she will 'come back.' After a time he marries again, and his second wife also dies, leaving him with a baby girl, Laura, who is the reincarnation of wife number one. The greater part of the book is devoted to Laura, who is an 'Eastern soul,' and presently decides that her real place is where she can 'speak of reincarnation, of destiny, of telepathy, of prophecy, freely.'"—N Y Times

"It is a puzzling but a very interesting study of old and wonderful ideas which Alma Newton embodies here."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 12 '24 270w
Int Bk R p609 Jl '24 400w

"It is an unspeakably dull performance."
— Lit R p843 Je 21 '24 90w

"This is a theme which needs much better handling than the author has given it."
— N Y Times p24 My 4 '24 220w

"Like the drooping rose on the pale yellow jacket of this book, the novel itself seems to be the product of worn-out soil."
— N Y Tribune p14 O 26 '24 440w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. Preaching in New York; diaries and papers. 206p $2 Doran
917.471 New York (city)—Description
24-4872

The title of the book is not borne out in its contents, for there is not much about preaching in it. Rather, it is a book of impressions of New York and of American life, after an absence of three years during which the author was pastor of the City Temple, London.

Most of the book consists of a diary covering two years from November, 1919, and filled with his reflections on men, women and things in the "most amazing city on earth."

"The style is fascinating and haunting, the point of view broad but spiritual; the conclusions are informing and interesting, and the entire book is convincing in its picture and parable portraying 'the insides' of the greatest American city. Dr. Newton makes one feel that 'reality' and 'realism' do not mean simply sin, shame and slums in life and literature. The great reality to him is the spiritual."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 21 '24 180w

"He has brought to his observations and interpretations of life in the metropolis a fresh, keen edge of appreciation, an abounding curiosity, and a broad, sympathetic appreciation of the city's problems and its relation to the rest of the country. All through there is acute, tolerant, discriminating comment."

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 20 '24 650w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT, ed. Best sermons, 1924. 352p $2.50 Harcourt

252 Sermons 24-23319

That sermons may not be lacking among the numerous annuals, Dr Newton has brought together this selection of the year's best. Various denominations and cities are represented by the preachers.

Boston Transcript p5 O 11 '24 360w

"The book will be an inspiration to every clergyman who is fortunate enough to possess it, and will also offer to the inquiring layman an easy access to an understanding of the tendency of present day religious thought." J. A. MacCallum

+ Lit R p6 N 15 '24 750w

N Y World p8e N 9 '24 200w

NEWTON, WILFRID DOUGLAS. The brute. 309p il $2 Appleton

24-18675

A beautiful girl, Jennifer Daun, is bound with a group of friends for the South American wilderness on a hazardous expedition to free Ralph Felton, her step-brother, from prison and also to capture the man who was the cause of his plight. Their schooner the "Evelyn Hope" belongs to the captain, Martin Sondes, known as "Martin, the Devil" because of his herculean strength and stature. The big captain has fallen in love with the girl before he realizes that he is the man whom she believes to have persecuted her brother. This is but one of the complications of the story, which is filled with adventure and hairbreadth escapes.

Reviewed by A. D Douglas

Int Bk R p857 N '24 100w

"This is a novel with a thrill on every page and one that will hold the most blase reader enthralled from the opening to the closing chapter."

+ Lit R p10 S 6 '24 90w

"The author of this stirring novel does not spare his highlights. People, scenes, situations, incidents are all intense and highly colored. But it is 'a braw tale' and will delight the hearts of those who like vivid tones and plenty of action and are not repelled by the absence of most of those qualities that enable fiction to become literature."

+ — N Y Times p22 Ag 24 '24 500w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 120w

NICHOLS, ADELAIDE. Haunted circle, and other outdoor plays. 279p $2.50 Dutton

812 24-5687

Four plays, each for one of the seasons. They are in a sense miracle plays because they all deal with mortals who find themselves on the edge of a world beyond reality. In each there is one character who stands as interpreter between the world of human beings and the world of imagination and romance. While particularly intended for community organizations with casts of varying ages, the plays are also adapted to high school or college presentation. Miss Nichols gives suggestions for dances, pantomime and music and for the settings and costumes. Contents: The haunted circle; The gardener's cap; The devil's field; The shepherd's pipe.

"There are flashes of real poetry in these little plays, which bear us into realms of magic and romance and dreamy beauty. The author writes interestingly, and with an occasional trace of distinction."

+ Lit R p746 My 10 '24 180w

"'A Spring Enchantment' if presented, as the author intended, out of doors and with appropriate costumes and music, might be little short of fascinating." S. A. Coblentz

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 3 '24 1000w

NICHOLS, MRS JEANNETTE (PADDOCK). Alaska, a history of its administration, exploitation, and industrial development during its first half century under the rule of the United States. 456p il $7.50 Arthur H. Clark co.

979.8 Alaska—History. Alaska—Politics and government 23-17788

"A comprehensive and detailed history of Alaska since its acquisition by the United States. The troubled story of the Territory's development, with all its entanglements local and National, political and economic is told with a wealth of detail."—Outlook

"Her book is a history of petty politics; but it is a good history, founded upon real sources and intelligently put together." F: L. Paxson

+ Am Hist R 29:579 Ap '24 500w

Am Pol Sci R 18:432 My '24 40w

"It is not only interesting; it is a helpful study of Alaska and of politics in its social and economic aspects." H. C. Nixon

+ Ann Am Acad 114:163 Jl '24 420w

"It is useless, in the short space of a review, to attempt to give a fair synopsis of this remarkable book. Every chapter is good reading and particularly the later ones, which deal with men and events of the present. It is not often that a volume which presents such difficulties as does a history of our own time is written with such a due sense of perspective and a just appreciation of values." G. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 12 '24 1450w

Reviewed by S. E. Morison

Eng Hist R 39:452 Jl '24 350w

"The book relegates all other histories of Alaska to unimportance, and may fairly be expected to hold its place for a long time as the only comprehensive acccount of Alaska's political history that it is worth any one's time to consult. Whether viewed technically, as a piece of scholarship, or argumentatively, as a piece of exposition, it is something to be welcomed and heartily praised." W: MacDonald

+ Lit R p610 Mr 22 '24 1200w

"There have been many volumes of many kinds written about Alaska, but this is perhaps the first to consider its story chiefly from the viewpoint of its political history and the effect of this upon its industrial development. Mrs. Nichols has delved into the subject with thoroughgoing industry and produced a work that is scholarly in its careful and painstaking research, comprehensive in its scheme and detailed in its treatment."

+ N Y Times p21 My 18 '24 500w

"Told with a clarity of understanding which will make the book an authority on its subject. Many of the chapters are on controversial subjects, but the author's fairness and impartiality are not likely to be questioned."

+ Outlook 136:70 Ja 9 '24 80w

R of Rs 69:222 F '24 180w

NICHOLS, MRS NELL BEAUBIEN. Farm cook and rule book. 295p $2 Macmillan

641 Cookery 23-13353

"As the title indicates, the 'Farm Cook and Rule Book' is a departure from the usual cook book, as to both scope and purpose. It is intended for that large group of women on farms, whose problems differ in many ways from those of the woman in the city. We therefore find besides the chapters devoted to foods and cooking others which give general household hints about taking out stains, making soaps, or storing vegetables. For the home nurse there is a chapter on cooking for the sick. Nor does Mrs. Nichols lose sight of the fact that the housekeeper is only one phase of the women. She devotes one delightful chapter to 'Grandmother's Beauty Secrets.' "—J Home Econ

Booklist 20:253 Ap '24

"Because the book is primarily intended for the woman on a farm does not mean that it is only for her. Its definite clear style, its adaptability to everyday household problems, and the sound information that is given make it a book to appeal to every woman." Sarah Simpson

+ J Home Econ 16:93 F '24 250w

Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

NICOLAY, HELEN. Our capital on the Potomac. 545p il $5 Century

975.3 Washington, D.C.—History. Washington, D.C.—Social life and customs 24-25528

The daughter of one of Lincoln's private secretaries, who collaborated with John Hay in writing the life of Lincoln, Miss Nicolay has long been a resident of Washington and her book, she says, is the result of much browsing among books old and new. Two-thirds of her book is given to the early history of Washington before the period of the Civil war. The human and personal side of the life of the capital is treated with generous fulness—descriptions of dramatic events, famous scenes, social affairs, etc.—and there are many pen portraits and stories of statesmen, diplomats and great ladies who figured largely in the life of their day. Numerous extracts from letters and diaries are included and there are thirty-two illustrations.

"Read before one visits the city Miss Nicolay's book is a college preparation in itself. Read by one who knows or thinks he knows our capital on the Potomac, it is a joy, a friend and a surprise." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 13 '24 450w

"An informing and picturesquely entertaining volume."

+ N Y Times p20 N 16 '24 660w

"Helen Nicolay has told this story in an informal, essayist style, as it might be told over tea cups or to the members of a woman's club." J: Herrmann

N Y Tribune p12 Ja 11 '25 550w

"Hardly any incident or person connected with the city is neglected, but with all this comprehensiveness it is never dull. The halftone illustrations are good, and a few of them merit the word superb."

+ Outlook 138:382 N 5 '24 50w

"Miss Nicolay has long been a resident of Washington, and the research which enabled her to describe the growth of the city from the time when it was designated as the nation's capital was evidently a labor of love."

R of Rs 70:671 D '24 70w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 19 '24 300w

NICOLL, SIR WILLIAM ROBERTSON. Dickens's own story. 244p $3 Stokes [10s 6d Chapman & H.]

B or 92 Dickens, Charles [24-3876]

A collection of essays on Charles Dickens by a devoted and curious Dickens student. They explore a number of interesting literary byways and contain much out-of-the-way information. Some are reviews of books on Dickens—Chesterton's "Appreciations and criticisms," Ley's "Dickens circle" and Lehman's "Charles Dickens as editor," an article by Swinburne and a criticism by Edgar Allan Poe. One of the essays is concerned with Fanny Dickens, the novelist's sister, another with Maria Beadnell, the original of Dora Copperfield, and another with Dickens's arch-enemy, Fitzjames Stephen. Still another subject of interested inquiry by the author, which he refers to more than once in the course of his essays, is the cause of Dickens's violent dislike of Dissenters.

N Y Times p2 Jl 27 '24 1000w

"These essays while adding nothing new to Dickens criticism are interesting as presenting the opinions of a scholar and an enthusiast whose eyes despite his admiration for his subject are open to the defects of his greatness."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:12 Ag 2 '24 140w

NICOLSON, HAROLD GEORGE. Byron, the last journey, April 1823-April 1824. 288p $4 Houghton [12s 6d Constable]

B or 92 Byron, George Gordon Noel Byron, 6th baron [24-9809]

"Mr Nicolson sets out to tell an old tale, Byron's journey to Missolonghi and his death, with the help of new material. In part this consists of papers and manuscripts which were left to Mr. John Murray by Lady Dorchester, in part it consists of what Mr Nicolson's own keen eyes observed in traveling over the scenes amid which Byron desired to strike his blow for Hellas. But Mr. Nicolson's aim is not simply to fill out the details of the record or to elucidate its topography; his true purpose is imaginative reconstruction. He seeks to paint Byron and his background in the last phase as vividly as a fancy kindled from ample fuel of documents and observations can do it."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by J: Donelson

+ Bookm 59:741 Ag '24 60w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p2 My 31 '24 1250w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 112:230 Ap 26 '24 240w

"In a style of rare distinction—'as readable as a novel,' if that abused phrase had not been outlawed from the critic's vocabulary—Mr. Nicolson tells the story of the days which have made Byron immortal, but tells it, too, with a realism 'which Byron, of all men, would himself have desired.' "

+ Int Bk R p790 O '24 380w

Reviewed by Shane Leslie

Lit R p852 Je 28 '24 1400w

"He is soundly documented; brilliant, entertaining, clever (a little too clever), at ease. The picture he draws of Byron is amazingly vivid, but it does not show the whole man." S: C. Chew

+ — Nation 119:149 Ag 6 '24 270w

"This is one of those books which 'it is a positive pleasure to read'; one which even a reviewer is sorry to finish. What more can one say? . . Mr. Nicolson and M. Maurois are the two most brilliant members of that new school of biography of which Mr. Strachey is the master. Mr. Nicolson is his aptest pupil; without being less easy and entertaining than M. Maurois he contrives to be much more scholarly." Clive Bell

+ New Repub 39:25 My 28 '24 950w

"It is the best and most entertaining piece of biographical narrative I have read since I read Lytton Strachey's Eminent Victorians and his Queen Victoria. It is packed with delicate, vivid detail and yet the outline and curve of the story are so clearly marked that it is easy to see everything in perspective. He deals with only the last two years of Byron's life, and yet one acquires a complete impression of his character."

+ New Statesman 22:604 Mr 1 '24 1350w

"It would be difficult to imagine a more dramatic and living account of Byron's last journey than has been given by Mr. Nicolson."
+ N Y Times p15 Je 1 '24 1600w

"At last we have a real book, and I shall be much mistaken if Harold Nicolson's 'The Last Journey' does not prove to be the finest work of the centennial year and one worthy to be placed along with the best of the Byron studies produced during the last hundred years." W. N. C. Carlton
+ N Y Tribune p22 Jl 27 '24 1200w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Outlook 138:212 O 8 '24 680w

R of Rs 70:223 Ag '24 30w

"Mr. Nicolson has given us a most interesting and successful example of a literary 'close-up'—a photographic portrait on a big scale such as one sees at the cinema. It is not a caricature, but a piece of realism in which certain features and aspects of the man or woman portrayed are magnified though not distorted. . . The book is a very true delineation of Byron's mind and character, a true general analysis. Though the background of the picture is the Palaces and the port of Genoa, the Adriatic Sea, the Ionian Islands, and the mud flats of Missolonghi, the mind of the man is the thing." J: St L. Strachey
+ Spec 132:427 Mr 15 '24 2750w

"Harold Nicolson proves his experience in the newer style of biography—crisp, concrete, ironical and luminous, portrayal, analysis and narrative combined."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 19 '24 1000w

"At his best Mr. Nicolson writes with a power that sweeps away our doubts about his equity."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p141 Mr 6 '24 1250w

NICOLSON, VICTORIA MARY (SACKVILLE-WEST) (MRS HAROLD NICOLSON). See Sackville-West, V. M.

NILES, BLAIR (MRS ROBERT L. NILES). Colombia, land of miracles. 389p il $3.50 Century
918.6 Colombia—Description and travel
24-23156

Mrs Niles's book is impressionistic and very successful in conveying the spirit and personality of the land she describes. She writes against the background of Colombia's history, legend and tradition, going back in her introductory chapters to Rosaura, a sixteenth-century mulatto sorceress for her evocation of the history and legends of the far-famed Cartagena, "pearl of the Caribes." But it is in the streets of its cities of today—in markets, shrines, shops and churches, that she searches for the quality of the country and its people.

Boston Transcript p6 N 12 '24 420w

"Mrs. Niles writes fascinatingly of her experiences in this old nation. It has for her a charm that she communicates to her readers." E. B. Smith
+ Lit R p15 O 25 '24 150w

"To the ordinary reader the miracles are rather tiresome, while she glimpses Colombia just enough to be exasperating."
— N Y World p9e O 19 '24 80w

NIVEN, FREDERICK JOHN. Justice of the peace; with introductions by Hugh Walpole and Christopher Morley. 453p $2.50 Boni & Liveright
23-18070

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Booklist 20:265 Ap '24

"One delights in its subtlety and in the fine intensity with which a theme which might easily have proved hackneyed has been made to yield significance."
+ Dial 77:264 S '24 80w

"The conflict which arises between mother and son of antagonistic temperaments has been handled here with discrimination and sincerity; the result is a novel of genuine achievement."
+ Nation 118:211 F 20 '24 80w

"The strength, dour wit and masterly life touch of his story takes the reader stride for stride alongside of the author in his remorseless running to earth of the woman who wrecked an artist's soul—mother though she be." Malcom Ross
+ N Y World p7e F 10 '24 500w

"Frederick Niven deserves to be read by all who desire sincere and thoughtful study of character and to recognize the deeper strains of human nature as distinct from mere entertainment or excitement."
+ Outlook 136:318 F 20 '24 240w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:293 Je '24

NOICE, HAROLD. With Stefansson in the Arctic. 270p il $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Harrap]
919.8 Arctic regions. Stefansson, Vilhjalmur
24-26926

Harold Noice who at nineteen took to the Arctic for adventure happened to fall in with Stefansson at the time of his rescue, when every one had given him up for lost. He joined Stefansson as a member of one of the most famous expeditions in history and his book is a narrative of his two years with that explorer in the Arctic. It is not only an account of great adventure but a portrait of Stefansson himself who in the end became a great hero to the author, tho he did not at first like him.

Booklist 21:107 D '24

Boston Transcript p2 N 1 '24 400w

Reviewed by Edmund Candler
Nation and Ath 36:160 O 25 '24 1050w

"A remarkable man, and for this most convincing portrait of him, Mr. Noice must be sincerely thanked."
+ New Statesman 23:714 S 27 '24 230w

N Y Times p7 O 12 '24 800w

"There is just enough of the uplift in it to mar an otherwise good tale. Noice is a young man—he was only twenty when he started on the expedition which he describes—so, of course he may be forgiven for not writing quite so objectively as one would wish." L. F. Parton
— + N Y Tribune p8 N 16 '24 570w

"For the reader who can overcome the misgivings aroused by a volume which in appearance is singularly unattractive and stodgy, there is much good stuff in Harold Noice's chronicle of his years in the Far North." M. M.
+ N Y World p8e O 19 '24 600w

Outlook 138:562 D 3 '24 280w

St Louis p416 D '24

"We heartily commend Mr. Noice's book to all who care for the literature of scientific adventure." W. E. Garrett-Fisher
+ Sat R 138:289 S 20 '24 400w

Spec 133:392 S 20 '24 1500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p508 Ag 21 '24 850w

NORDEN, HERMANN. White and black in East Africa. 304p $5 Small [15s Witherby]
916.7 Kenya Colony and Protectorate. Uganda. Ethnology—Africa [24-14269]

"It is the record by an experienced American traveller—the author is a Fellow of both the Royal Geographical and the American Geographical Societies—of the first part of a safari across Central Africa from the east coast to the west. His long overland journey began at Mombasa, after a preliminary visit to Zanzibar, and carried him right across Kenya—a colony whose affairs have of late thrust it into public notice at home—and Uganda. Before entering the latter colony however, he stopped first at Nairobi and then at Kisumu, and from these centres made detours which, between them,

NORDEN, HERMANN—Continued
covered a very wide area of Kenya. Thus he acquired a fairly broad basis of insight into the political, social and economic situation in the colony, and into the relations between the officials, the settlers, white and brown and the natives."—New Statesman

"What he saw he describes so vividly that the reader cannot but share his zest of adventure." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 22 '24 1050w

"Mr. Norden's book is a welcome change from the common run of books of African travel. That he is a traveller—as well as a travel author—of experience means that he knows what to look for, how to look for it, and how to present to the reader the results of his observation."

+ New Statesman 23:328 Je 21 '24 320w

Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 10w

Reviewed by R. W. Barton

Sat R of Lit 1:428 Ja 3 '25 680w

"Mr. Norden possesses several qualifications for writing about Central Africa in a way to interest the general reader. In the first place, he had never been there before making the journey which is the subject of this book; secondly, he likes to use his eyes for himself and to set down afterwards what has attracted his attention; thirdly, he starts without prejudices or prepossessions about Africa."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p311 My 22 '24 850w

NORDHOFF, CHARLES BERNARD. Pearl lagoon. 224p il $2 Atlantic monthly
24-26893

"Charlie Selden, a young Californian, leaves his father's ranch in California to sail to the South Seas, with his 'rainbow-chasing' Uncle Harry, on a quest for a certain bed of gold-lipped oysters valuable for their mother of pearl. There are thrilling adventures with man-eating sharks and present-day pirates and a wealth of detail about pearl diving, fishing and other phases of life afloat and ashore in the South Sea Islands."—Cleveland

Booklist 21:72 N '24

Reviewed by Sidney Greenbie

Bookm 60:501 D '24 240w

Cleveland p85 N '24

"Not only has he written a book giving lots of valuable information; but he shows therein his knowledge of the principal business of the archipelago. The book is not only a boy's book; it also makes interesting reading for grownups. Mr. Nordhoff has an interesting style, and keeps his characters clearly before his reader."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 200w

NORDHOFF, CHARLES BERNARD. Pícaro. 299p $2 Harper

Pícaro, the hero of this tale, has little in common with his younger daredevil brother Blaise, for Blaise was all Spaniard, while Pícaro was endowed with the traits of his American father, Major Langhorne. Pícaro, upon the death of his mother, surrenders to his brother the two things he loves most in life—the Guadalupe ranch and Rita, for he had discovered that Rita loved Blaise. Then Pícaro turns to the mechanics' quarters in Paris to seek his fortune, and with the assistance of his friend Orsay manufactures a motor for aircraft which plays an important part in the World war, bringing to its inventors fortune and fame. When Pícaro meets his brother again, Blaise is a renowned ace of the flying corps. The destinies of these two brothers are strangely worked out thru a tragedy which results in Pícaro's recovery of the ranch and the woman he loves.

"Mr. Nordhoff writes with cultivated nonchalance. He slides his narrative along with amiable intent. Too many characters claim our attention. Too much of the past is told when the author starts off with a chapter about the present. Nevertheless it is far from a mediocre story."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 N 22 '24 230w

"The people of the book are more apt to make speeches than to indulge in conversation, and some of them walk with no little stiffness. There is entertainment in it, nevertheless, and a lack of pretension which is pleasing." G. C.

— + Ind 113:346 N 1 '24 200w

" 'Picaro,' both the character and the novel, show minor defects of execution. The author is, almost, at too much pains to balance each brother within himself and one against the other. At times it is perilously close to formula and again the sharp design is lost in a maze of extraneous detail. . . It is an able first novel."

— + N Y Times p16 D 21 '24 700w

"Although a novel without distinction or permanent value, 'Picaro' has a certain interest for us, in that it gropes for a solution to the great riddle proposed by the war." G. H. Busey

— + N Y Tribune p15 D 14 '24 620w

N Y World p9e N 16 '24 190w

Sat R of Lit 1:232 O 25 '24 180w

NORDMANN, CHARLES. Kingdom of the heavens; some star secrets. 261p $3.50 Appleton [12s 6d Unwin]

523 Astronomy

"Puts into simple popular form some late astronomical theories on the tides and their utilization; life in the universe; sun-spots and their rhythm; ionization; radium; Einstein theory: Does the earth turn? Author is astronomer in the observatory of Paris."—Booklist

Booklist 20:327 Je '24

"In his stimulating book he writes 'not to instruct or amuse, but to produce thought and even dreams, if I can.' The lure of the unknown is in his blood; he, luckily, has technique and a telescope; he is the man of science as poet. His imaginative mind discusses only the most recent star secrets, as revealed by the spectroscope on the 'little dust particle we call the earth.' The wonder and beauty of what he tells us are staggering—to the layman often incredible—but they are never fanciful." Algernon Blackwood

+ Int Bk R p526 Je '24 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 20:66 Mr '24

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). The Callahans and The Murphys. 381p il $2 Doubleday
24-8653

The book is divided into two long novelettes, the first entitled The Callahans, the second The Murphys. In The Callahans the central figure is Agnes Callahan, the widowed mother of Jim, Annie, Mary and Josie. Jim was the main support of the family; Annie was a school teacher; Mary was a telephone operator and Josie was still in high school. Mrs Callahan kept the house efficiently, made her children happy, and was always ready to help her neighbors. In the Murphys, the action centers around beautiful young Ellen Murphy. Both novelettes give poignant glimpses of the life of the middle-class Irish families, in their joys and their sorrows, successes and failures.

Booklist 21:28 O '24

"Here we have a baker's dozen of admirably visioned and quietly and honestly expressed narratives concerning the tribulations and joys of some excellent types of an important element in our American life." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 23 '24 700w

Int Bk R p677 Ag '24 350w

"Artistically, the book suffers from being a collection of short stories rather than a continuous narrative, for it is burdened with tiresome repetitions and résumés of characterization, incident, and description."

— + Lit R p762 My 17 '24 280w

"If American writers have not a monopoly of homely sentiment, they alone seem able to wallow in it without making either themselves or their subject ridiculous. These stories of episodes in the lives of two groups of hard-working Irish-American families, for instance, are sentimental to a degree, yet it is honest sentiment and gives no offence, being seasoned by humour and inspired by understanding of the sorrows and joys of humble people."

+ New Statesman 23:330 Je 21 '24 150w

"It seems a little hasty and ill-considered in a writer of Mrs. Norris's ability. . . Mrs. Norris succeeds admirably in sharing the lives and the backgrounds of these lovable, bossy, capable women."

— + N Y Times p8 Ap 13 '24 600w

N Y Tribune p27 Ap 20 '24 470w

Outlook 137:515 Jl 30 '24 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:345 Jl '24

"A narrative that never grows tedious, though it relates minute details of domesticity. Enough of the rough side of life is depicted to make a contrast, and a possible cramped or tiresome situation is always saved by the author's keen appreciation and use of humor."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 380w

"Once upon a time Mrs. Norris presented San Francisco in certain aspects with liveliness and truth, and the babies were fewer and the books she wrote much better."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p341 My 29 '24 200w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Rose of the world. 423p $2 Doubleday

24-20379

Rosalind Kirby, whose family no longer figures as a social asset in Gates Mills because of financial reverses, promises to become the wife of Jack Talbot whose father owns the Talbot iron works. Jack's ambitious mother, however, treats the affair with disdain, persuades him to give up "this poor Kirby girl" and marry Edith Rogers who is socially his equal. Rose, piqued by Jack's treatment accepts Clyde Bainbridge's proposal of marriage thereby becoming the wife of the Vice President of The Talbot iron works. The domestic affairs of this group of people become very closely interwoven thru the discovery of a valuable paper which virtually gives Rose the sole possession of the iron works, and brings disgrace upon the house of Talbot. Rose bravely endeavors to avoid this catastrophe, but is checked by the intervention of Fate, and the results are—complete happiness for Jack and his Rose of the world.

"The ideas at the foundation of Mrs. Norris's book are unquestionably wholesome. She upholds all the traditional virtues and she condones none of the modern manners and customs, but she wraps her story in so heavy a shroud of sentiment, that she obscures many of its true values." D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 1 '24 1050w

"The book is not outstanding in literary style and, indeed, is lacking in strength in almost every particular, but it is sufficiently well written to be decidedly readable."

+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 26 '24 550w

"Out of this turmoil of pain and tragedy Rose emerges victorious. I think one would have hailed her as victor even without the aid of the happy ending which Mrs. Norris adroitly creates. But since one unconsciously accepts Rose as a real person long before the end of the book is reached, one is somehow glad that she is allowed to be happy as well as victorious. And certainly the ending is most adroitly managed." R. McC. Barker

+ Lit R p980 Ag 23 '24 450w

"'Rose of the World' is scarcely the sort of novel that can be taken seriously. It is not a book for the sophisticated or the intelligent, but no doubt the numerous readers who have enjoyed Kathleen Norris's other stories will approve of this one."

— + N Y Times p9 Ag 24 '24 650w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 120w

Sat R of Lit 1:150 S 27 '24 260w

"The reader gets in this book a real Mrs Norris brand of optimistic, sentimental, unusual story, with its broad observation of human characteristics and motives, plus an abundance of small-town detail."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a O 12 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 16 '24 130w

Wis Lib Bul 20:213 O '24

NORTON, FREDERICK OWEN. Rise of Christianity; a historical study of the origin of the Christian religion. 269p $2 Univ. of Chicago press

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early church. Bible. New Testament—History

24-2097

The book gives in brief compass an interpretation of the source materials for the origin and early development of Christianity. These sources are found mostly in the New Testament, but also in the writings of the church Fathers and in some brief incidental allusions to Jesus or the early Christians in five non-Christian writers of the first two centuries. The book may be used by the general reader as a continuous story to be read without reference to sources, and also by the student.

— Cath World 119:131 Ap '24 500w

J Religion 4:220 Mr '24 50w

NORTON, GRACE FALLOW. Miller's youngest daughter. 24p $1.25 Houghton

811 24-4560

A fantastical poem of a little girl who ran away to look for life's meaning. The youngest daughter of a miller who ran his mill for wealth alone cannot understand all this talk of money. She refuses to sing the song of the mill, which is "Money, money, money." And so she goes from her father's house. The old miller cannot persuade her to come back altho he "Sets a candle on her sill and lays a jasmine by her plate," ready for her return. The little girl continues to search for something deeper in life than she found in the song of the mill.

"Grace Fallow Norton sustains her reputation for delicacy of treatment and subtle poignancy of effect in a slight allegorical narrative under the title, 'The Miller's Youngest Daughter.'" D: Morton

+ Bookm 59:347 My '24 120w

Boston Transcript p6 N 1 '24 500w

Cleveland p69 S '24

"This is a rather disappointing volume—a volume filled with much doggerel and little poetry. The book abounds in crude, prosy, unrhythmical passages. Occasionally, however, one comes across a deft little lyric which is worth more than all the narrative portions of the poem combined."

— + Lit R p732 My 3 '24 160w

"Frankly disappointing. It is easy to see what she attempted here, an allegorical narrative that should have been delicate, eery and mystical. But somehow, it misses fire, either because of the obviousness of the allegory or because of the pedestrian qualities of the lyrics."

— N Y Times p26 Mr 30 '24 100w

"The poem sustains a nice but always subdued dramatic pitch. The fabric of the narrative could stand fortifying to make it a complete whole, but even in its brief fragmentary form it remains a colorful bit of lyricism." B. S. Wagstaff

+ — N Y Tribune p26 Ap 27 '24 200w

NOWAK, KARL FRIEDRICH. Collapse of Central Europe; with an introd. by Viscount Haldane. 365p $8 Dutton [15s K. Paul]

940.334 European war 1914-1919—Germany. European war, 1914-1919—Austria-Hungary. European war, 1914-1919—Diplomatic history [24-16930]

The period covered by this history is from the peace negotiations at Brest Litovsk in December, 1917 to the collapse of the Central Powers in October, 1918. Dr Nowak shows the powerful forces working toward dissolution—politics, hunger and exhaustion, the increasing sense of nationality, the various attempts at peace, the breakdown of the armies and the growing strain on their leaders produced by President Wilson's declarations. The views of Count Czernin, Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, Von Kühlmann, German secretary of state, and General Ludendorff are presented, and important documents are given in the appendices.

"It is carefully written with the caution and discrimination of the trained historian, while its literary quality is high, holding the reader's attention closely from beginning to end." E. M. Patterson

+ Ann Am Acad 117:296 Ja '25 620w

Boston Transcript p2 S 6 '24 1050w

"Brilliant in style, in presentation, in dramatic effectiveness." D. R.

+ Ind 113:161 S 13 '24 440w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

Nation 120:123 F 4 '25 620w

Nation and Ath 35:544 Jl 26 '24 220w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer

New Repub 41:176 Ja 7 '25 320w

"It certainly contains some of the most vivid historical writing that has come out of the war. For American readers the praise must be qualified a little. Unless one is already well versed in the parliamentary history of the decade he may find the extreme detail of one or two of Dr. Nowak's political chapters a little confusing and therefore a little dull." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 31 '24 2050w

"This is much more than another war book. It is not only source material for the future historian to sift; it is itself history. Here is a clearly analyzed, co-ordinated and admirably balanced account of the descent of the Central European empires from their pinnacle of power early in 1917 to the crash at the armistice. Moreover, it is engagingly written with the quick narrative flow of good fiction." Nathaniel Peffer

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 12 '24 560w

"Beyond question, the author had command of an extraordinary amount of material, and he has made a most skilful use of it. He has given us perhaps the best book in English on the subject."

+ R of Rs 70:447 O '24 90w

"The author has charged his narrative with downright drama, at once vivid and compelling, by keeping ever before us the actors in the tragedy rather than the events that brought it about."

+ Sat R 138:15 Jl 5 '24 380w

"This is in many ways a brilliant book. Yet it is almost impossible to set it down without a feeling of dissatisfaction and irritation."

+ — Spec 133:197 Ag 9 '24 1300w

"Lord Haldane, in his introductory note, describes this book as 'very brilliant.' The epithet does no more than justice to Herr Nowak's glittering style. His narrative grips, and is meant to grip."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p331 My 29 '24 580w

NOYES, ALFRED. Some aspects of modern poetry. 349p $2.50 Stokes

821 Poetry. English poetry 24-28254

Mr Noyes's essays on some modern poets, English and American, include his Lowell Institute lectures and other studies on similar subjects. Some of his essays are sermons, almost, in defense of the poetic art and his faith that the true poetry of today has its roots in the past. He is frank in the expression of his distaste for some modern novelties and eccentricities. Contents: Alice Meynell; The poet of light [Shelley]; Poetry, old and new; The poetry of Emerson; The poetry of W. E. Henley; The poems of Austin Dobson; Stevenson; Some aspects of modern poetry; Tennyson and some recent critics; The spirit of Touchstone; Shakespeare and the sea; Longfellow and modern critics; Swinburne's tragedies; Some Cambridge poets and poetry; The nature poet of the eighteenth century [Thomson]; Wordsworth; Acceptances; Some characteristics of modern literature.

"In this series of essays Mr. Noyes has performed a genuine service to poetry and to lovers of the poetic. Tracing his course without difficulty through the tangled mazes of modern literature, Mr. Noyes has seen a clear pathway where others go fumbling blindly; he has guided himself with the light of principles undimmed by the exigencies of the moment or by the creeds of a day; he has dared to set down staunchly the laws upon which all true poetry and all true literature must be founded, and to fortify his position with innumerable examples from writers of the present and of the near past." S. A. Coblentz

+ Lit R p6 D 13 '24 580w

"This is a poet's message to the modern generation; and he supports his theme with the best possible argument, an abundance of delightful quotations from some of the most beautiful passages in English poetry."

+ New Statesman 24:sup8 O 11 '24 340w

Reviewed by Llewelyn Powys

N Y Times p12 D 28 '24 1550w

"The bulk of the volume is given to praise of poets he loves, yet the impression he leaves is of discontent with the poetic situation today, and of a certain suspicion in his heart that the masters he praises are not so secure as he'd like to have us think. He has done too much defending. With all respect, the reader concludes that Tennyson is in a bad way if he needs Mr. Noyes to defend him so much." J: Erskine

— + N Y Tribune p4 Ja 11 '25 480w

"His essays, or lectures, on Alice Meynell, Shelley and Henley are touched with some of that fire which might have shed radiance upon a poem." H. S.

N Y World p8e N 9 '24 50w

Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 20w

"One could wish that he had been more precise; he indulges in too much abuse of 'self-styled intellectuals and 'new revolutionists,' without enough chapter and verse for his condemnation; but he is no bigoted opposer of novelty as such, no mind formalist—witness his attitude of Emerson, an iconoclast in verse if ever there was one. What is wrong with the book is a too easy complacence; if it could be, so to say, tightened up, it would be admirable."

+ — Sat R 138:574 D 6 '24 520w

"We wish the violent pulpiteering were absent from this volume, for Mr. Noyes knows great verse when he sees it, and can explain its merits. He takes much too seriously the lunatic fringe of contemporary poetic experimentation, and as we have said, seems entirely blind to a certain solid amount of contemporary accomplishment. He frequently construes personal irritation as righteous wrath." W: R. Benet

Sat R of Lit 1:476 Ja 24 '25 1650w

"This volume is largely a vehicle of indignation... In vituperation, Mr Noyes has all the vivacity and pungency of a Mencken, and, at times, one must confess, discloses equally defective taste. When Mr Noyes employes irony, instead of downright denunciation, he makes it obvious rather than diverting."

— + Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 9 '25 850w

"The soundest and usefullest form of attack upon what one thinks bad is the exhibition of something that one thinks better. In literature, as in politics, the effective critic of a bad policy is not the railer, but the man who produces a good policy. And that Mr. Noyes amply and ably does. Many of the essays in this book are constructive criticism."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p608 O 2 '24 1350w

NOYES, CARLETON ELDREDGE. Genius of Israel; a reading of Hebrew Scriptures prior to the exile. 452p $5 Houghton

220.9 Jews—History. Bible. Old Testament —History 24-15316

"An interpretation rather than a history, this book aims to portray the Israelites as they were in the flesh, at work and at play, in the actual circumstances of their everyday experience, and in their relations with contemporary nations. The genius of Israel was supremely a genius for religion." The Old Testament, as a composite of many different books, is not easy to understand if read consecutively. The author has therefore tried to weave together the various threads from these scattered and fragmentary writings and interpret the people and civilization of which they are a record.

"The author has made the Israelites live again with a warmth and a power which makes the book fascinating to read." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 12 '24 760w

"The book before us is heartily welcome, for it is written by a scholar and much more than a scholar. Not least of his qualifications, he is master of an unusually good literary style, so that his book reads well and holds the interest to the last." J. M. P. Smith
+ J Religion 4:547 S '24 580w
Outlook 137:30 S 3 '24 50w

"The book has been written in a popular rather than a technical style, although the author uses freely the results of critical study and scholarly research. The result is an illuminating and delightful book for all readers. It is a real addition to that literature called by the exegetes 'introduction.'"
+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 2 '24 630w

NUTT, LILY CLIVE. See Arden, C., pseud.

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1923; chosen by the Society of arts and sciences; with an introd. by Blanche Colton Williams. 277p $2 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections

Contents: Prelude, by E. V. Smith; A friend of Napoleon, by R. Connell; Towers of fame, by E. I. Folsom; Phantom adventure, by Floyd Dell; The distant street, by F. E. Faragoh; The wager, by I. U. Glenn; Célestine, by James Hopper; Witch Mary, by Genevieve Larsson; The bamboo trap, by R. S. Lemmon; The hat of eight reflections, by James Mahoney; Homebrew, by G. S. Mason; Derrick's return, by Gouverneur Morris; Shadowed, by Mary Synon; The one hundred dollar bill, by Booth Tarkington; Nice neighbours, by M. S. Watts; Not wanted, by J. L. Williams.

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 26 '24 580w
Ind 112:288 My 24 '24 300w

"It is an interesting book, especially for any one desiring to note the trend of the American magazine story."
+ Int Bk R p903 N '24 250w

"The preface asserts that the American concept of life 'demands an underlying philosophy, not negative and pessimistic, but positive and optimistic.' The collection itself belies the claim. If it proves anything, it proves that the American short story is at its weakest and least convincing when most optimistic."
N Y Times p16 Mr 30 '24 780w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:294 Je '24
Springf'd Republican p7a Je 22 '24 480w

OAKLEY, NANCY, and OAKLEY, JOHN. Clevedon case. 312p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Jenkins]

Dennis Holt, well-known criminologist, comes to live in a remote village where everything spells peace and quiet. Late one night a girl taps on his window asking to be let in. She explains that she has hurt herself while lost in the fog. The next day Holt is precipitated into the midst of the Clevedon mystery. Sir Philip Clevedon is found stabbed with a hatpin, but the coroner's inquest pronounces death thru poisoning. The local police help on details, but it is Holt who carefully and none too easily reconstructs the happenings preceding the murder, and in the course of discovering the real culprit he unearths some very surprising events in the lives of the main characters of the story.

"The story ambles on in a comfortable easy fashion, typically British in its absence of 'storm and stress.' If you are to be murdered, for decency's sake do it in England. There all things are arranged for privacy and leisure. But all the same, the story will appeal to the jaded American palate."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Mr 26 '24 390w

"The book has the most important elements of the good detective tale, plausibility and suspense, and the added touch of romance is that much more to its credit."
+ Lit R p618 Mr 22 '24 130w

"Nancy and John Oakley have given us good entertainment in their modest book, and we hope they'll do it again with a setting as interesting and a group of characters as diverting." Elizabeth Wyman
+ N Y Tribune p21 Mr 16 '24 540w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 240w

OBERMAIER, HUGO. Fossil man in Spain; [tr. 2 by Christine D. Matthew]; with an introd. by Henry Fairfield Osborn. 495p il $5 Yale univ. press; for sale by Hispanic soc. of Am.

571 Man, Prehistoric. Spain—Antiquities 24-25757

"The relatively open lands of North Africa and the smooth summer waters of the Mediterranean afforded more attractive and more open migration routes than the river borders and dense forests of the European mainland at the close of the Ice Age. It is therefore, not surprising to find that the prehistoric cultures of Spain constitute a connecting link between the ancient Orient and the ancient Occident, and we are but barely beginning to appreciate the importance of the rôle thus played by Spain. The explorations of the distinguished author of this volume, of the brilliant Henri Breuil, and of the long line of Spanish archæologists quoted and cited by the author have—with the last four decades—played a prominent part in expanding our knowledge of the prehistory of all of Western Europe, and in giving Fossil Man in Spain his proper setting in the drama of prehistory. . . This volume presents the last word on the prehistory of Spain."—Introd.

"The Hispanic Society has done well to add this superb contribution to the lore which is gradually clearing up for English readers the structure, activities, customs, arts and mentality of early man." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 31 '24 880w

"The present work, most ably translated by Christine D. Matthew, under the masterly editorship of Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn, is in every way worthy of the author's high reputation, leaving nothing to be desired save a little more of the coherence and lucidity which distinguish this editor's 'Men of the Old Stone Age.' The classified bibliography will be invaluable to the student, and the excellent illustrations, of which twenty-three are in color, enormously enhance the attractiveness of the work." Hamilton Bell

OBERMAIER, HUGO—Continued
+ Lit R p8 D 6 '24 1050w

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON (ARTHUR MIDDLETON, pseud.), ed. Best short stories of 1923, and the Yearbook of the American short story. 544p $2 Small [7s 6d J. Cape]

Short stories—Collections

"Mr. O'Brien has selected for reprinting twenty-one stories. Four of these are from Harper's, three from The Pictorial Review, two each from Scribner's, The Century, The The Atlantic and The Saturday Evening Post. Among the stories by well known authors are 'The man's story' by Sherwood Anderson, 'Reina' by Theodore Dreiser, and 'Seven candles' by Fannie Hurst which was afterwards incorporated in The Lummox. Contains the usual comprehensive yearbook material.—Cleveland

Booklist 20:266 Ap '24

Reviewed by B. C. Williams
Bookm 59:343 My '24 250w

Cleveland p43 Je '24

"The Best Short Stories of 1923 is, as heretofore, the most intelligent of the annual collections, the only one which an American not wholly crass might show to a civilized European."
+ Dial 76:560 Je '24 130w

Reviewed by H: S. Canby
Lit R p607 Mr 22 '24 700w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko
Nation 119:240 S 3 '24 680w

"This collection is vastly better stuff than the Best British of the same year, collected by the same editor. Most of these twenty-one tales have something to them, some virtue either of matter or of manner, which distinguishes them from the sugary, rounded pill which the magazines both here and in America commonly offer." Rose Macaulay
+ Nation and Ath 35:sup247 My 24 '24 330w

"The reader who enjoys self-conscious structure, earnestness and tension, will find here a surfeit of what he likes."
— New Statesman 23:392 Jl 5 '24 220w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman
N Y Times p11 F 3 '24 1000w

Spec 132:714 My 3 '24 30w

"Mr. O'Brien's collection of American short stories contains a few tales that are excellent, many that are lost in the wealth of their material, none except perhaps the first that could be said to break new ground." L. P. Hartley
+ — Spec 132:809 My 17 '24 130w

"The selection of its contents will appear to some to have been made with greater attention than Mr. O'Brien has been accustomed to pay to reprinting stories of a representative significance and type. The value as well as the usefulness of the collection is at least not lessened thereby."
Springf'd Republican p7a My 11 '24 90w

Wis Lib Bul 20:69 Mr '24

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON (ARTHUR MIDDLETON, pseud.), and COURNOS, JOHN, eds. Best British short stories of 1923, and year book of the British short story. 333p $2 Small

Short stories—Collections

The book is composed of twenty-six short stories. Partial contents: The fly, by Katherine Mansfield; The mole, by Gerald Bullett; The horse dealer's daughter, by D. H. Lawrence; Stripes, by E. C. Mayne; Miss Bracegirdle does her duty, by Stacy Aumonier; Alas, poor Bollington, by A. E. Coppard; Old Gadgett, by Sheila Kaye-Smith; Some talk of Alexander, by A. S. M. Hutchinson; The machine breaks down, by Osbert Sitwell; Blessed are the meek, by Mary Webb; The taipan, by W: S. Maugham; The enemy, by Hugh Walpole; Another temple gone, by C. E. Montague; Inspired busman, by Elinor Mordaunt; The sniper, by Liam O'Flaherty.

Cleveland p6 Ja '24

"Despite the high degree of technical excellence to which American writers have brought the short story, they still lag behind their British competitors in the finer nuances of characterization and motivation. No matter how slight the plot, the Englishmen who have focused their talents upon this form of writing seem to have an artistic grasp of these elements of form which lends an undeniable beauty to their work."
+ Nation 118:94 Ja 23 '24 80w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Nation and Ath 34:894 Mr 22 '24 380w

"We find in most of the stories collected by Messrs. O'Brien and Cournos, substance, simplicity, and truth." D. B. Woolsey
+ New Repub 37:237 Ja 23 '24 220w

"This collection has evidently been made with the greatest care, and I do not suppose a better representative anthology could be arranged. But what dreary machine-made flowers most of them are, like the white plaster blossoms that you see under glass domes in cemeteries." Raymond Mortimer
— + New Statesman 22:513 F 9 '24 250w

"The editors have been modest in intent. Without pretension to having erected a monument they have ended by performing a very creditable service." Margaret Sperry
+ N Y Tribune p22 Ja 20 '24 1050w

Sat R 137:109 F 2 '24 1100w

"Looking at the contents, one is moved to feel that if the admirable criteria of the editors have been strained a little here and there, if there has been no 'great story'—and this, they agree, would be a quite exceptional event—there has yet been a fair nucleus of real quality and perhaps a livelier entertainment than one guessed."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p63 Ja 31 '24 1000w

O'CONNOR, VINCENT CLARENCE SCOTT. Vision of Morocco, the far west of Islam. 400p il $6 Doubleday

916.4 Morocco—Description and travel
24-6903

In the winter of 1921-1922, Mr O'Connor travelled from the north to the south of Morocco and back again, visiting such places as Shesshawan, the sacred city, Fez, the city of Haround-al-Raschid, Marrakesh, Mogador, and Tangiers. In telling the story of Morocco as it is today under French rule, he also recaptures somewhat the splendors and the terrors of the old Morocco under the Moorish invasion.

"The word 'vision' was well chosen. Surely never were those details more clearly visualized than in this more than study." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p14 Mr 29 '24 2500w

Cleveland p64 Jl '24

Reviewed by S. F. Reavis
Int Bk R p529 Je '24 80w

"Vivid and vigorous."
+ N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 70w

"Mr. O'Connor is at his best when presenting the reflection of the past on the characteristics and aims of the different races which now inhabit Morocco, but the author is less convincing when dealing with the future."
+ — Sat R 136:522 N 10 '23 650w

"Mr. O'Connor has this important qualification for writing, that he is intensely interested in everything that the country has to show and recall and suggest—in the scenery, the people, the buildings, and the customs; in the feats and methods of the great Mahomedan rulers of the past; and in the organic changes that are being brought about by the supersession of those rulers by European Powers of another faith and with a different outlook. He treats of these various aspects of Morocco discursively as they occur to him and not in accordance with any logical plan. The effect is vivid and kaleidoscopic; and if the reader may find himself confusing one pattern with the next, that is perhaps as true an impression of modern and indeed earlier Morocco as he could hope to obtain."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p750 N 8 '23 400w

ODELL, JOSEPH HENRY. Unmailed letters. [2] 221p $2.50 Dutton

814 24-23498

Brief essays in the form of letters and often lightened by narrative and anecdote. Tho the themes are various—art and literature, religion, a New England Christmas, trout fishing, etc.—the letters all reflect an introspective mind chiefly interested in the things of the spirit.

"It is gracefully phrased, not without a genial humor, and it works an optimistic view of life in spite of the depression of ill health and an atmosphere of mild melancholy." H. L. P.

+ Lit R p13 D 13 '24 100w

"His manner is always engaging; suave, often humorous, and also capable of deep cutting criticism. It keeps, however, pretty steadily to the tone of quiet introspection, and meditation upon Nature and mankind, emerging in a certain optimistic view of life, on the whole, which one feels to be really due to the writer's own innate geniality."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:401 D 20 '24 360w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 14 '25 470w

O'FLAHERTY, LIAM. Thy neighbor's wife. 338p $2 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d J. Cape]

24-5104

"The Aran Islands, off the coast of Ireland, provide the setting for Liam O'Flaherty's novel, and with the knowledge of a native, he has painted Irish life as it existed in Inverara, with its tangled threads of passion, politics, potheen, religion and superstition. The central character is a young curate, Father McMahon, who finds himself still in love with the girl who had been his sweetheart before his ordination. His temptations and trials reach a stirring climax during the week in which the action passes, while all around him the life of the island swings to its ancient rhythm."—Publisher's note

---

"There is a skilful mingling of the grave and gay, and a fine appreciation of both light and shadow in all sorts of people. In a word, the book has charm." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 26 '24 780w

Cleveland p68 S '24

Reviewed by Neil Martyn

Lit R p627 Ap 29 '24 350w

Nation 118:486 Ap 23 '24 60w

"An Irish style, in the sense that the well-known Irish writers possess a distinctive racial style, Mr. O'Flaherty has not got. He has, however, a sense of humor that goes with the traditional Irish novel and with it a fine exuberance." M. M. Colum

+ New Repub 39:164 Jl 2 '24 420w

"The amount of interest the reader finds in 'Thy Neighbor's Wife,' will depend very largely on the amount of interest he chances to take in a description of the lives of the peasantry and dwellers in and around a small village on one of the Aran Islands off the Irish coast. For it is of such descriptions that this long book is very largely composed, descriptions many of which are well done."

N Y Times p8 Mr 2 '24 800w

Sat R 136:447 O 20 '23 130w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 120w

OGDEN, ROBERT MORRIS. Hearing. 351p $3.50 Harcourt [15s J. Cape]

152.2 Hearing 24-4112

"The book deals with the physiology and phenomenology of single tones, vocables and noises, and then passes on to the structures occurring in music and language. The author lays particular stress on the relational qualities of so-called elementary auditory sensations when they occur as members of groups or constructs."—New Statesman

---

"Mr. Ogden's book is packed with information, and is of interest not only to the psychologist, but also to the musician and the educationalist. The last chapter is concerned with an appeal for a more satisfactory musical education which would make musicians of us all. He seems unduly optimistic, but the attempts to find musical tests, which he mentions, are exceedingly interesting."

+ New Statesman 23:606 Ag 30 '24 170w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:296 Je '24

St Louis p333 O '24

"Learned and conscientious."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p349 Je 5 '24 900w

O'HARE, MRS KATE RICHARDS. In prison. 211p $2 Knopf

365 Prisons. Crime and criminals 23-17952

Mrs O'Hare, sometime Federal prisoner number 21669, was confined for fourteen months as a political offender in the State penitentiary at Jefferson City, Missouri. Her experience gave her the best of opportunities to study prison conditions, crime and criminals in the only place where they can be intelligently studied Writing impersonally and without apparent rancour, she draws an appalling picture of the whole prison system and of life within prison walls, especially the life of the women. In conclusion she suggests a definite program of reform.

Booklist 20:249 Ap '24

" 'In Prison' is not pleasant reading; no book written from the 'inside' by a reasonably accurate observer ever could be. It is shocking that the extremity of martyrdom should have been necessary to produce this brilliant study in criminology."

Bookm 59:230 Ap '24 250w

"Wrong-headed or right-headed, Mrs. O'Hare is at least clear-headed. She is certainly a sound observer and unless she is an unmitigated liar—and her apparent candor and lack of personal bias seems to us very convincing—she has unearthed one of the most wicked, scandalous and dangerous conditions which it would be possible to imagine. We wish every legislator and executive, State and national, in this country, could read Mrs. O'Hare's book. Even the most indifferent could not escape being quickened by it." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 20 '24 580w

Cleveland p54 Jl '24

Lit R p695 Ap 19 '24 160w

"A book for mature men and women and students of social problems. Index is unfortunately inaccurate."

Wis Lib Bul 20:22 Ja '24

O'HIGGINS, HARVEY JERROLD. Julie Cane. 343p il $2 Harper [7s 6d J. Cape]

24-22001

"Julie Cane" is a psychological study of the relations of a father with a daughter whom no laws of heredity could explain. John Cane, by nature a dreamer and thinker, whom accident had made a grocer and the husband of a sour and loveless woman could only look at this daughter of his and marvel. He saw a chance to realize in her some of his own dreams and to apply to the teaching of Julie the philosophy which he had worked out from his wide if eccentric reading. And Julie proved an apt

O'HIGGINS, HARVEY JERROLD—Continued
pupil. To her innate ability to learn was added confidence, independence of mind and the insight to appreciate her father. From her childhood she seemed poised to meet each test that came to her. She held her head high and knew whom to trust. The book carries her little beyond the school girl stage, but a brief epilogue affirms the conspicuous success of her later career.

"'Julie Cane' is both clever and interesting; nevertheless, an unregenerate reader—meaning myself—cannot avert a suspicion that it would have been three instead of two dimensional if Mr. Higgins would allow that living must be dealt with as a condition, not a theorem. All the same, I recommend 'Julie Cane.' Mr. O'Higgins can write." Isabel Paterson

+ — Bookm 60:496 D '24 320w

"We feel quite safe in calling it a most distinguished novel. It is one of the nearest approaches to sane writing which has come our way almost since before 'Main Street.' It is one of those rare novels in which sex and the complexities of sex are carefully avoided and yet few novels have more deeply got into the inner workings of a girl's soul and mind. Best of all the entire novel, like Julie Cane herself, has strength and levelheadedness to gain freedom from the drawbacks of the commonplace. This is a novel about Main Street. But that colorless thoroughfare, praise be! is in the background. It is Julie and her father that stand out most for us to see. And we see them, true, living, loved and lovable, characters of fiction and of fact. Mr. O'Higgins has drawn them well and in their drawing has given us two characters about whom there will be much talk. 'Julie Cane' is a real story which deeply probes the psychology of real people." Karl Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 11 '24 780w

Ind 113:401 N 15 '24 260w

"'Julie Cane' is one of the best American novels published in this or any season. It has page after page of keen observation, of clear seeing and clear thinking. In few novels today will anyone get so sound a feeling that modern psychology is not merely a phrase, but represents a definite advance of insight into the human mind." H: J. Forman

+ Int Bk R p58 D '24 800w

"A little too much Freud maybe, an overplus of psychology, but all in all, one of the genuinely notable novels of a year in which notable novels are not many." C. M. Morrison

+ — Lit R p12 D 13 '24 400w

"Mr. O'Higgins has a sense of humor and a sense of proportion; he has swallowed his psychology and digested it; it reappears firm and well-mastered in his credible characters." E. V.

+ New Repub 40:280 N 12 '24 600w

"His plot is slight—even insignificant—but his characters are all drawn with the deftness and insight of well-rounded portraits."

+ — N Y Times p9 O 12 '24 650w

Reviewed by Joseph Wayer

N Y Tribune p9 O 19 '24 450w

N Y World p8e O 12 '24 240w

Spec 133:654 N 1 '24 120w

"The story of Julie Cane is told with economy and humour, and a simplicity far removed from emptiness, but also far removed from Mr. Harvey O'Higgins's earlier manner, which, in some of his remarkable short stories, was very involved. The psychology of behaviour still absorbs him, but the terms of the text-book are forgotten and the artist in him finds freer expression than hitherto. Julie's outwardly simple history becomes profoundly dramatic, lit up by flashes from the obscure little lives round her. . . There is the warmth of real life in this memorable book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p594 S 25 '24 400w

O'HIGGINS, HARVEY JERROLD, and REEDE, EDWARD HIRAM. American mind in action. 336p $3 Harper

920 United States—Biography. National characteristics, American. Puritanism 24-5006

The first chapter is given to an analysis of certain traits and mental qualities that are accepted as characteristically American. To the foreigner, the typical American is above all a Puritan and it is to Puritan traditions and ways of thought that the new psychology looks for an explanation of the peculiarities and contradictions of the so-called American mind. The generalizations of the first chapter are illustrated in the remaining chapters by studies of some conspicuous Americans, to find the origin of the qualities in them which are accepted as typically American. These Americans are: Mark Twain; Abraham Lincoln; Ralph Waldo Emerson; Andrew Carnegie; Anthony Comstock; P. T. Barnum; Benjamin Franklin; Henry W. Longfellow; Walt Whitman; Mark Hanna; Julia Ward Howe; Anna Howard Shaw; Margaret Fuller.

"The book is original in that it employs for the diagnosis of American symptoms, the 'new psychology,' or the method of psychoanalysis. . . The name for the affliction when Americans suffer from it is Puritanism, but one is left to infer that to the psychoanalyst all men are Puritans. The present study, in other words, suffers for lack of the comparative method. To prove that what is American is also distinctively or peculiarly American it would be necessary to introduce and analyze at least one perfectly healthy-minded non-American." R. B. Perry

Atlantic's Bookshelf Jl '24 600w

Booklist 21:24 O '24

"When some of these sketches by Mr. O'Higgins and Dr. Reede first began to appear, they fell on a rising market. Alas! the bound collection meets, at least so far as the scientifically informed are concerned, a cold and unsympathetic scrutiny. The vogue of the Freudians is passing." Morris Fishbein

— Bookm 59:471 Je '24 800w

"The work is absorbingly interesting, holding the reader as with a magic spell from beginning to end." F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p16 Mr 29 '24 1950w

"An interesting, suggestive book." D. R.

+ Ind 113:76 Ag 2 '24 850w

"The book also has a value independent of its Freudian basis. Many readers will discount or reject its psychoanalytic conclusions, but will, nevertheless, be entertained and instructed by these portraits. In its vigorous portraiture, and in the suggestiveness, not the finality, of his theories regarding the subconscious mind as a determinant of some great careers, lies the value of Mr. O'Higgins's book."

+ Lit R p756 My 17 '24 1050w

N Y Times p22 My 11 '24 1450w

"A brave and valiant book." Ruth Hale

+ N Y World p6e Mr 16 '24 2000w

Outlook 138:136 S 24 '24 40w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:328 Je '24

R of Rs 69:558 My '24 50w

"These sketches of psychoanalytical biography are labored and uninteresting, as well as far-fetched and often misleading."

— Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 220w

Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

OLDHAM, JOSEPH HOULDSWORTH. Christianity and the race problem. 280p $2.25 Doran [7s 6d Student Christian movement]

261 Church and social problems. Race problems 24-25550

To the author the ultimate problem of the world is how its different races may live together in peace, and his book is primarily concerned with the attitude which Christians ought to take toward racial questions and what they can contribute to the improvement of relations between the different races. He discusses the causes of antagonism, some of the chief differences which arise between races and the principles which must guide in dealing with these relations.

"Mr. Oldham has given us the Christian interpretation most satisfactorily, and the general principles and practical suggestions with which he closes may well be carefully considered not only by Christians, but by persons of every religion or of no religion." H: P. Fairchild

+ Bookm 60:500 D '24 750w

Boston Transcript p6 D 20 '24 410w

Reviewed by Edwin Bevan

Nation and Ath 35:621 Ag 16 '24 1550w

"Mr. Oldham, from his position and experience, writes on this matter with real authority; and this book deserves very careful study. It is a strong and serious contribution to one of the most pressing of all problems." F. R. Barry

+ Sat R 138:44 Jl 12 '24 1000w

Spec 133:266 Ag 23 '24 550w

"He has travelled widely under conditions which have enabled him to gain first-hand knowledge of peculiar value. His attitude is singularly unprejudiced by his own racial origin; so that he can present the standpoint of, say, an Indian or a Japanese with convincing, and sometimes disquieting, clearness. He is not in the least a blind optimist; and has no short cuts to an earthly millennium to offer. He recognizes the complexity of the problems which he investigates and the danger inherent in racial ambitions and antagonisms."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p396 Je 26 '24 2250w

OLIVER, ROLAND. Back stage; a story of the theatre. 285p $2 Macmillan

24-15188

"As the title suggests, it is another story of the 'inside' of the New York world of the theatre; another case of the meteoric rise of a brilliant young dramatist, of his troubles with Semitic managers, actresses, and other queer folk. This one deals chiefly with the developments of the semi-amateur Greenwich Village playhouses and is fairly closely drawn from the living models, and therein it holds some novelty, though for the most part the action is familiar enough in its lines. But the values of the story lie in its people; chiefly the amiable and very British young Peter Millard. Peter gets a newspaper job, drifts into the Village theatrical world, and writes a playlet which is a 'wow,' and thus attracts the Olympian notice of a Broadway magnate."—Lit R

"The incredible part is that, on a basis of a flimsy story, with utterly unlikely happenings, the author has written a sheerly delightful book. Like Peter, we are not quite sure how he has done it." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 9 '24 600w

"Mr. Oliver has one rare quality which should make him greatly welcome as a newcomer among our novelists, a genuinely mellow, genial humor, not of the caustic, smart, or sardonic variety, but the humor of a kindly understanding of human nature, with its queernesses and lovable absurdities that are so often apparent in the most tragic or pathetic situations. The plot is more or less conventional, and toward the end it wanders, as a narrative, and tends to peter out."

+ — Lit R p933 Ag 2 '24 250w

"The tale starts out well enough, or perhaps the reader is deluded into the belief that a good start has been made because the pages are enlivened by a considerable amount of breezy slang. But as soon as the author ceases to score with his slang—which is soon—the piece reveals itself for what it is, a hopelessly amateurish narrative."

— + N Y Times p19 Jl 20 '24 320w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 50w

"Mr. Oliver has presented to the public gaze the Community Playhouse, partly professional, partly amateur, of the sort that has sprung up in Greenwich Village in recent years. So far as I am aware, the avant scène of such a place of entertainment has not yet been portrayed as convincingly and amusingly as he has done it in 'Back Stage.' . . As a story the novel is monotonous, and deals too much with the playwriting and love affairs of Peter Millard." J. L. Ford

+ — Outlook 137:576 Ag 13 '24 180w

OLLIVANT, ALFRED. Devil Dare; the story of a traitor. 289p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Heinemann]

A romance of Napoleonic times. Devil Dare is a gentleman traitor who, because he once loved Nelson's Emma (Lady Hamilton), joins a conspiracy to capture Nelson and bring Napoleon into England. He shows Napoleon how he can effect a landing in Sussex. Dare has a price placed on his head, but by his wit and courage escapes capture. The plot is frustrated by an honest smuggler and a Methodist maid.

Booklist 21:153 Ja '25

"It is a good story by a writer of experience and skill."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '24 420w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p857 N '24 150w

Reviewed by Bruce Gould

Lit R p14 N 1 '24 500w

"Mr. Ollivant is perhaps a little too sentimental about horses and landscapes, but he is agreeably realistic about his hero. He presents none of the dummy figures patented by romance. He has shrewdness and irony and some pathos. He does much to aid the cause of true romance."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:170 O 4 '24 300w

"Mr. Ollivant shows a scholarly knowledge of Sussex history and the bypaths of policy, but he tumbles into the rankest melodrama. Half the number of incidents and a fair chance of breathing between them would have made a better story."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p793 N 22 '23 150w

OLMSTEAD, ALBERT TEN EYCK. History of Assyria. 695p il $7.50 Scribner

935.2 Assyria—History 23-17167

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"It would be difficult to exaggerate the importance of this book. The publishers have excelled even their highest standards in its production, for it is superbly printed, richly, appropriately, and even wisely illustrated. The book deserves all that has been lavishly spent upon it, nor can one think of more that might have been offered save for a map worthy of the rest of the equipment. . . The book is well written, in sound, workmanlike English." R. W. Rogers

+ Am Hist R 29:529 Ap '24 1100w

Booklist 20:212 Mr '24

Bookm 59:350 My '24 160w

"Professor Olmstead's history is a careful reconstruction of the isolated Assyrian Empire. With all the latest archæological material at hand and a complete mastery of all the available texts, he has written an authoritative work, astonishing in the assurance of facts which a few years ago would have been considered mere conjecture." Robert Hillyer

+ Freeman 8:499 Ja 30 '24 1400w

"The book has many merits and for a long time to come will be our best and most reliable history of Assyria." G: A. Barton

+ Lit R p524 F 16 '24 600w

OLMSTEAD, ALBERT TEN EYCK—Continued
"Here at last is an up-to-date, beautifully bound monograph on this subject written not by a mere chronicler but by an historian of grasp and power." E. G. H. Kraeling
+ Nation 118:236 F 27 '24 420w

Nation and Ath 34:470 D 22 '23 50w

"Intensive scholarship, unflagging industry, complete mastery of the sources of information, a progressive and synthetic attitude towards history, and an all-absorbing enthusiasm for the subject in hand are rarely combined in an author, but when they do coexist a notable product is likely to emerge. This was conspicuously the case in the previous volume in this series, Professor Breasted's famous History of Egypt. No higher praise could be bestowed upon Professor Olmstead's volume than to say that it does not suffer seriously by comparison with Breasted's magnum opus." H. E. B.
+ New Repub 38:291 My 7 '24 320w

"A full and careful and very interesting account of the Assyrian Empire."
+ New Statesman 22:490 F 2 '24 160w

Reviewed by C: de Kay
N Y Times p12 Jl 20 '24 1700w

Outlook 136:70 Ja 9 '24 180w

"Prof Olmstead tells a fascinating story in a fascinating way not loading it down with confusing conjectures but giving it coherence and permitting it the human interest that every story of a great people is certain to possess."
+ Springf'd Republican p14 Ap 11 '24 480w

"To write such a history properly and aptly illustrate it is an immense labor, demanding a knowledge of the language, a familiarity with all that is published on the subject, and a personal acquaintance with the country. Professor A. T. Olmstead possesses these essentials in no small degree, and his history offers a good, solid presentation of the material to scholars."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p191 Mr 27 '24 650w

OMAN, SIR CHARLES WILLIAM CHADWICK. Art of war in the middle ages, A.D. 378-1485. new and enl ed 2v 526;459p il $12.50 Houghton [36s Methuen]
355 Military art and science

"Many of us remember the red-backed volume, published twenty-six years ago, in which Sir Charles Oman told the story of the art of war from 235 A.D. down to the year 1375. He has now completed his narrative by extending it to the end of the Middle Ages. The single volume has thus swelled to two, making with the new matter a work of nearly a thousand pages. Most of the former sections have been revised and eight appear entirely re-written, especially those dealing with Anglo-Norman military institutions, with castle-building, with the Italian wars of the thirteenth century, and with the Welsh campaigns of Edward I. The new chapters continue the account of Western warfare down to the year 1485."—Boston Transcript

---

Boston Transcript p6 S 3 '24 1250w

"A book which, with all its defects, has been a delight and a stimulus to many, and conveys a vivid picture, substantially right in its main features, of the fighting of a long and intricate period. But though good reading and excellent popular history, it is not a work of exact scholarship." T. F. Tout
— + Eng Hist R 40:113 Ja '25 2550w

"The volumes are prepared with the certainty of touch found only in works of scholarship. Nevertheless, because they deal with human acts, human frailties, human character, and human thoughts, they are fascinating books. Their frankness in quest of the truth of the matters with which they deal in detail is equaled only by the ease of explanation evident in almost every passage." Elbridge Colby
+ — Lit R p12 O 11 '24 1000w

"The new part of the work, which occupies most of the second volume, contains some of Sir Charles Oman's best writing and most careful research. He has a special skill in the concise but romantic narration of battles, which makes even a brief summary like this one as readable as a novel."
+ Sat R 137:328 Mr 29 '24 1000w

"The rather inadequate treatment of the development of armour after 1300 is one of the few criticisms to be raised against the book. Another, and a more serious one, is that the publisher has been decidedly niggardly with maps and plans. Black and white plans do not cost much; and though Sir Charles Oman's narratives are extremely clear, there are many readers to whom even the roughest diagram is not merely a help but a necessity."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Ap 3 '24 2550w

O'NEILL, EUGENE GLADSTONE. All God's chillun got wings, and Welded. 170p $2 Boni & Liveright
812 24-9282

The first play has for its theme the disastrous consequences of the marriage of a black man and a white woman. "Welded" is an emotional drama of a playwright and his actress wife who love intensely but "who torture and tear and clutch for each other's souls."

Booklist 21:17 O '24

Cleveland p86 N '24

Reviewed by L. G. Shaw
Lit R p806 Je 7 '24 1100w

"From time to time Mr. Eugene O'Neill starts his career all over again. . . 'Welded' is a new departure. Mr. O'Neill wants to exhaust the problem of the intricate relations between two people. His difficulty is that he has not thought out the question of these relations to their last depth, to a last clarity. Only what has not been thought out and thought through is murky and 'Welded,' though I strained my powers of attention to the utmost, remains murky." Ludwig Lewisohn
— Nation 118:376 Ap 2 '24 800w

"It is in revealing this dark and secret thing —the immemorial, ineradicable character of race prejudice—that Mr. O'Neill reaches a height hitherto inaccessible to him. The problem he has selected cleaves so near the bone of human life itself that it possesses a transcendent symbolic character. There are not many such themes in the world; this is one of them." Ludwig Lewisohn
+ Nation 118:664 Je 4 '24 580w

"'Welded' must be put down as one of Mr. O'Neill's failures, for it is conventional both in treatment and material." J. W. Krutch
Nation 118:743 Je 25 '24 620w

"One of the best things yet written about the race problem and among the best of O'Neill's plays. It is not quite so consistently well-written or attractive as The Hairy Ape or The Emperor Jones; it has its harsh notes and raw expanses. But then it is perhaps more satisfactory in showing two equally solid characters in collision instead of only one character wrestling with himself." Edmund Wilson
+ — New Repub 39:22 My 28 '24 800w

"Both are worth reading as well as seeing. Both belong to the more outstanding plays produced in this country. And yet both are marred by some lack or shortcoming which is rather hard to define. They do not quite convince. Perhaps it is because the feelings of the characters are so hectic, or because these feelings are expressed at such length and with such unusual intensity." Edwin Bjorkman
+ — Outlook 137:238 Je 11 '24 240w

"'All God's Chillun Got Wings' fails to ring true. Its very artificiality accentuates its repellent features. One misses in both these recent plays the moments of dramatic beauty which rendered rare the earlier works by this masterful American dramatist."
— Springf'd Republican p12 Je 13 '24 340w

O'NEILL, JAMES MILTON, comp. Modern short speeches. 394p $1.75 Century

808.5 Orations 23-17332

"There are 98 speeches of introduction, welcome, farewell, presentation, acceptance, dedication, personal tribute and several other varieties delivered by all sorts of orators from Lloyd George and Chauncey Depew, President Coolidge and Arthur Balfour, down to a number of intercollegiate oratorical contestants, both boys and girls. The most ancient of these modern speeches is the farewell of Embassador Phelps in 1890, as he prepared to come home from London, and they cover the calendar pretty evenly from that year down to 1922."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 20:258 Ap '24

"Merely as specimens of literature these addresses have intrinsic value and interest, and as models for a coming generation of budding orators they have a pragmatic value as well."
Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 9 '24 130w

"Admirable selection. All the speeches are short, all are complete and all are modern, none dating back of 1890. Excellent for public speaking classes, or for individual reading and study."
Wis Lib Bul 20:67 Mr '24

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Inevit-
2 able millionaires. 322p $2 Little

25-891

"The tale of two brothers in England who inherit a lot of money from their father along with directions to spend most of their income where it will do the most good to their fellows. Only they are not to gamble, on the Stock Exchange or elsewhere. Mr. Oppenheim's pair have trouble in being successful spendthrifts. They try theatrical ventures, golf club endowments and many risky ventures."—N Y World

"It is an Oppenheim in a welcome mood, an Oppenheim in a realm of fantasy that is wholly his own." E. F. E.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '25 520w

"It is generally entertaining, smoothly written and with plenty of easy dialogue."
+ — N Y Times p20 D 28 '24 700w
N Y World p9e Ja 11 '25 160w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Passionate quest. 342p $2 Little [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

24-23288

"This story is concerned with a Nonconformist boot manufacturer somewhere in the Midlands and his three wards. They leave him to seek their fortunes. While they are learning to know the world and failing or progressing as their temperaments lead them, a great change comes over their sometime guardian, Benjamin Stone. The one time millionaire gives himself out as ruined and takes a job in London as a night watchman. His real object is to look after his wards. One of them, whose ambition is money, he saves from imminent ruin; another, whose tastes are dramatic, he helps to the production of a successful play, and—that all may end in conventional fashion—provides for his marriage to the third ward."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"His excellence lies most of all in the matter of his plots and it is for this reason chiefly that we find 'The Passionate Quest' not measuring up to the most exciting of his novels. It is entertaining, but it does not hold one breathless with suspense as Oppenheim can do in his most successful vein." D. L. M.
— + Boston Transcript p6 O 29 '24 1200w

"One closes the book feeling as one does after an Italian table d' hôte dinner—that one has had a great deal to eat, but that somehow one has not really been fed. There is nothing substantial to stick to the ribs." Dora Mulkins
— Int Bk R p63 D '24 430w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld
New Repub 41:sup13 D 10 '24 1800w
N Y Times p9 O 5 '24 240w

"This romance is unsophisticated; its characters are puppets manipulated to form a plot; the book is ideal entertainment for the Babbitt mind, and an excellent money-maker for author and publisher." J. M. Wayer
— N Y Tribune p10 O 19 '24 900w
Outlook 138:512 N 26 '24 70w
Sat R of Lit 1:186 O 11 '24 100w
Spec 133:330 S 6 '24 40w

"The story is not Mr Oppenheim at his best, but in some ways is characteristic."
— + Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 4 '25 500w

"The story is slightly exaggerated but it is eminently readable."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Ag 14 '24 150w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Wrath to come. 355p $2 Little

A story of international intrigue in the year 1950. In 1930 there had been a Pact of Nations which made wars between members impossible. The United States had never joined the Pact. There was a plot simmering between Germany, Russia and Japan to attack the United States, the richest country in the world. Grant Slattery, a wealthy American, supposed to be loitering at Monte Carlo, turns out to be a secret service man and a very astute one. Thru his cleverness he foils every plot hatched against him, evades the charming woman spy, and saves his country.

"It is a story everyone should read, that he may form his own conclusions, for, whatever may be said for it, one thing is sure. It does start one thinking. The alliance which he suggests is much talked of in the East, and the premises are perfectly sound." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 12 '24 1050w
Cleveland p67 S '24

"'The Wrath to Come' has all the thrills that a reader of plot novels could desire, and besides, has the added advantage of being a workmanlike and well-written yarn."
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 6 '24 1000w

"Mr. Oppenheim is his own sprightly self. He has never been dull and he is seldom even preposterous."
+ N Y Tribune p23 Jl 13 '24 280w

"Those who like Oppenheim will find this one of the most interesting of his—how many? A hundred?—stories." Laurence Stallings
+ N Y World p11 Mr 26 '24 160w

"Mr. Oppenheim's admirers will find in his latest novel all the qualities that have established his popularity."
+ Outlook 137:68 My 14 '24 300w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:293 Je '24

"E. Phillips Oppenheim in his creative romance casts the horoscope of 1950. As if gazing into a mirror, we see so vividly the dramatic play of the characters and their relation to the entire mise-en-scene, that on closing the volume it is difficult to readjust one's self to the environment of 1924. . . Indirectly this story is a keen and scathing commentary on the failure of the United States to join the League of Nations. These imaginary conditions of 1950 result from the country's not having joined the 'pact.'" Lilian Whiting
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 650w
Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

OPPENHEIM, JAMES. The sea. 561p $5 Knopf

811 24-5690

"In consolidating this book out of its previously published parts, I have somewhat cut down Songs for the New Age, omitted the War and Laughter volume altogether, taken from The Book of Self only The Song of Life, made various changes in the remainder of the material, and added Stanner and the Interludes

OPPENHEIM, JAMES—Continued
which continue the Mystic Warrior as little inner connecting hallways between the different sections. Songs for the New Age was written in 1914 and is the earliest work of mine included in the book. The Mystic Warrior was not written until 1920 when the whole plan of the book had come clear, and the need arose of an introductory section of autobiography. Hence, The Mystic Warrior, a later work, precedes Songs for the New Age, the earliest. Otherwise the book proceeds chronologically, as written."—Author's note

Booklist 20:332 Je '24

"Like the deep his inspiration falls occasionally into a dead calm, when poetry is submerged beneath the prosy monotony of an autobiographical narrative. We do not quarrel with the too frequent triviality of these incidents, but rather with the dull, formless primer style in which they are told. Against their drabness, the vivid, sentient portions of the book flash like lightning across a dead sky."
— + Bookm 59:482 Je '24 250w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet
Lit R p918 Jl 26 '24 150w

"Much of this poetry is of little worth; it is Walt Whitman without music, egoism without excuse. But The Song of Life, salvaged from 'The Book of Self,' is passionate and beautiful; and there are occasional passages elsewhere of great verse."
— + Nation 118:715 Je 18 '24 90w

"Oppenheim's 'The Sea' is, without question, the most interesting book of poetry which has come out in this country in years—the most arresting, perhaps, since 'Leaves of Grass.' Aside from the fact that 'The Sea' is an extraordinary document, in which every reader will find himself, his longings, his strivings, mirrored with a faithfulness before which he is likely to wince—this fact aside, Oppenheim has produced a vast quantity of exceptional verse." P. A. Hutchison
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 16 '24 2350w

"He is often too acrid and pungent a mental tonic for the squeamish. But at his highest music he commands an orchestral sweep and variety. 'The Sea' will grow in significance as it finds followers who will give themselves to its force and vision." Orrick Johns
+ — N Y Tribune p22 My 18 '24 640w

ORCZY, EMMUSKA, baroness. Honourable Jim. 336p $2 Doran
24-6737

"Baroness Orczy has gone back to the days of Charles I and the battle of Naseby for her story, which is a quite seriously conceived historical romance. The central theme is evolved from the marriage of the future parliamentarian to a girl who is fiercely royalist; a child marriage, 'in name only,' as Barbara was but thirteen and the Honorable Jim eighteen when their parents and guardians had them marry. Four years later comes the war—with Barbara on one side and her despised husband on the other. There is also the rather tragic third party, 'Tubal,' who is not a 'gentleman' but who loved Barbara. And so on to a properly happy ending wherein the true heroism of the noble Jim is adequately demonstrated." —Lit R

Cleveland p50 Jl '24

"It is a substantial, workmanlike piece of good literary artisanship."
+ Lit R p811 Je 7 '24 200w

"When she strives to be poetical she is generally banal and full of clichés. But on the score of sustained movement she is to be congratulated. 'The Honourable Jim' moves constantly and at a swift pace to its climax, and this, perhaps, is all that the reader will desire as he settles himself in his parlor-car seat and opens the book."
+ — N Y Times p17 Ap 6 '24 600w

Reviewed by A. L. Hill
N Y Tribune p24 Je 1 '24 260w

"The Baroness, unfortunately, never outgrows a literary schoolgirlishness of attitude which makes her fall in love with her own heroes and revel emotionally in the emotions of her heroines. Any one who, having persevered through the concluding chapters of 'The Honourable Jim,' is still able to endure hearing the words 'Heart o' mine' clearly pronounced, has doubtless been a devoted admirer of the Baroness Orczy ever since the appearance of 'The Scarlet Pimpernel.'"
— Outlook 137:110 My 21 '24 170w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p324 My 22 '24 180w

ORENBURGSKY, SERGEY GUSSIEV, pseud. See Gusev, S. I.

ORLEANS, ELISABETH CHARLOTTE, duchesse d'. Letters of Madame; tr. and ed. by G. S. Stevenson. 288p $5 Appleton [18s Chapman & Dodd]

B or 92 France—History—Bourbons, 1589-1789 [24-14039]

Madame was the title by which Elizabeth-Charlotte of Bavaria, Princess Palatine, sister-in-law of Louis XIV, was known at the French court. During a long and harassed life at that court Madame kept up a voluminous correspondence with her many royal relatives and friends in Germany, Spain, Italy and England. A woman of vigor and courage she did not hesitate to express herself fully on the subject of the life and extravagances which surrounded her.

Booklist 21:24 O '24

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield
Bookm 60:241 O '24 580w

"Fascinating to the end is this picture-gallery. The translation is marred by some solecisms such as 'like he was' and 'like she and I' and there are some misprints." N. H. D.
+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ag 16 '24 1150w

"Her letters read like the chatter of any day. The chatter of a middle-aged lady who loved to chatter and whose mind was a bit stronger than that of her neighbors. The book is delightful reading, thanks not a little to the informal though careful translation by Gertrude Scott Stevenson." W. Y.
+ Lit R p937 Ag 2 '24 300w

"She was not mealy-mouthed, and though the present editor has translated a good deal of rather 'free' gossip, the continual recurrence of asterisks at the most interesting moments is trying. Still the book was well worth doing, and we look forward to volume two. The translation is competent and lively, and the notes informative without becoming cumbersome."
+ — Nation and Ath 35:26 Ap 5 '24 170w

"Her correspondence was enormous and has the added interest for us to-day of being conducted without that eye on portraits which is so common among her best contemporaries. It covers the most fascinating period of French history and is filled with pictures of the most interesting people of that age. And among these people Madame herself is far from being the least interesting."
+ New Statesman 22:636 Mr 8 '24 1000w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 1400w

Reviewed by Burton Rascoe
N Y World p6e S 14 '24 1100w

"These letters give one a remarkably graphic picture of French Court life. They are written in a forthright, virile style, and though the Duchess always calls a spade a spade she is never pornographic. High-principled, human, and humorous, she has, unwittingly, left for posterity valuable commentaries on the political and social life of her day."
+ Outlook 137:27 S 3 '24 90w

"What she sees, she sees clearly; minces nothing, uses no veil."
+ Sat R 137:266 Mr 15 '24 350w

"Miss Stevenson has done her work well. The translation is both faithful and vivid."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p155 Mr 13 '24 1100w

ORPEN, SIR WILLIAM, ed. Outline of art. 2v 231;233-491p il $4.50 Putnam

750 Art—History. Painting—History 23-13538

In this new addition to the Outline series, there is no attempt to cover all the details of the history of art or to introduce critical argument. The main purpose is to reproduce as many as possible of the greatest pictures in the world, to explain their peculiar characteristics and the qualities of the work that make it beautiful and inspiring. There are over 300 illustrations including 24 full-page color plates.

Booklist 20:329 Je '24 (Review of v 2)

"The book is concise, even to the point of being juiceless; and is accompanied by moderately well chosen but immoderately badly printed reproductions of celebrated paintings. The color reproductions offend particularly."
— + Bookm 59:226 Ap '24 140w
Bookm 60:351 N '24 90w

"As far as it goes it is excellent." N. H. D.
+ — Boston Transcript p5 My 24 '24 580w
New Repub 40:397 Ag 27 '24 170w

"The illustrations are numerous and very well chosen, wisely mingling famous and less familiar masterpieces; and by reason of their size they would be valuable were they better printed. Many of the black-and-white ones are gray and misty, while the color prints are coarsely rendered and often in hot coppery tones." Mrs Schuyler Van Rensselaer
— + Outlook 137:67 My 14 '24 480w

"A work which by its emphasis, as well as by the proportion of its space and illustrations, is meant for the English reader cannot fairly be judged on the basis of its universal value. But just as a book on art, it seems unusually badly edited and the reproductions poorly made."
— Theatre Arts Mo 8:870 D '24 80w

ORTLOFF, HENRY STUART. Garden bluebook of annuals and biennials. 245p il $2.50 Doubleday

716 Gardening. Floriculture 24-7656

The author, a landscape architect, writes from the desire to bring the annuals into more gardens and to encourage the use of a wider variety of them. He gives detailed advice on the practical side of gardening with annuals—selection, planting, soil preparation, etc. He also treats the artistic side—garden designs and color schemes. Many planting plans are given and lists of annuals for particular places and purposes.

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p444 My '24 150w

Reviewed by H: T. Finck
Lit R p774 My '24 120w

"Perhaps it is just as well to be made to realize at the outset that annuals are a considerable quota for a burst of bloom that may last only two or three weeks. The most helpful notes are those on time of germination for each kind of seed, height, color, time and length of bloom."
+ — Springf'd Republican p16 Ap 18 '24 130w

OSBORN, CHASE SALMON. Madagascar; land of the man-eating tree. 443p il $5 Republic pub co.

916.9 Madagascar 24-12226

The author confesses at the outset that he uses the lurid sub-title to enlist and focus the interest upon one of the least known spots of the world and one on which the existing literature is very small. Having thrown out his lure he settles down to his traveller's account of the island, but keeping up thruout his lively style. He tells much about the geology and topography of the island, its fauna and flora, its native races, Malagasy folklore and customs, and the French government of the island. There is a chapter on Madagascar's Robinson Crusoe, Robert Drury, and one on Captain Kidd.

Booklist 21:105 D '24

"From beginning to end the narrative glows with color, and the shrewd comment of a trained as well as observant mind. His studies of the Malagasies have, moreover, a future as well as present value. For these 'wild men' of Madagascar, like the aborigines of all lands where the 'white man's civilization' has been thrust, are rapidly disappearing and their curious customs soon will become only a tale that is told." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 25 '24 1200w

"In his declared effort to write a readable book, Mr. Osborn has perhaps sacrificed something to literary finish. But, unquestionably, he has made available a wealth of information concerning an area hitherto little known and well worth study from many angles." A. P.
+ — Ind 113:105 Ag 16 '24 410w

Reviewed by Alexander Goldenweiser
Nation 119:124 Jl 30 '24 1200w

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Osborn is not more of an artist in words, for it is quite evident that an unusual book might be written about Madagascar. He has compressed in his volume a considerable mass of information; his chapters on native characteristics contain much first-hand material, and he had brought together a great deal of interesting historical data, but he has left the field wide open for a genuinely descriptive writer."
— + N Y Times p2 Je 22 '24 1150w

"Little has been written about Madagascar and Gov. Osborn does not perceptibly increase the quantity or quality. There is much of quotation in the book but all too little of direct observation."
— N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 420w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Tribune p24 Je 22 '24 1950w
St Louis p383 N '24

"He is a difficult writer to follow with attention, because his natural diction contains solid blocks of what is apparently foreign matter and because this natural diction itself abounds in figures of speech."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p430 Jl 10 '24 740w

OSBORN, HENRY FAIRFIELD. Impressions of great naturalists. 216p il $2.50 Scribner

925 Naturalists 24-25798

With most of the naturalists of whom Professor Osborn writes he was personally acquainted or associated in one way or another. The sketches range from a youthful tribute to Francis Maitland Balfour, in 1883, to the recent sketches of John Muir and Howard Crosby Butler. The impressions are not attempts at portrayal of the whole man, but of one principal aspect only of each life. Contents: Alfred Russel Wallace; Charles Darwin; Thomas Henry Huxley; Francis Maitland Balfour; James Bryce; Louis Pasteur; Joseph Leidy; Edward Drinker Cope; Theodore Roosevelt; John Burroughs; John Muir.

Booklist 21:149 Ja '25
N Y Times p13 Ja 4 '25 980w
N Y World p9e D 14 '24 180w

"Professor Osborn is a scientist of distinction and was personally acquainted with most of the naturalists he deals with; we therefore have reason to expect a notable book. But, unfortunately, Professor Osborn does not possess in any considerable measure the rare gift of portraiture, and, like most American scientists, he lacks that gift of truly lucid exposition which he handsomely recognizes in the great English scientists. The book, therefore, though interesting and valuable, is disappointing."
+ — Outlook 138:652 D 17 '24 110w

OSBORNE, THOMAS MOTT. Prisons and common sense. 105p $1.25 (6s) Lippincott
365 Prisons 24-11770

The author, who has devoted his life to prison reform, has written this volume with the hope of stirring a sense of common responsibility toward bettering prison conditions. He tells the story of the Mutual Welfare league and its work at Auburn, Sing Sing and the naval prison at Portsmouth. A great deal of misinformation which has been circulated concerning the league is corrected. Commander Osborne explains the league's policy and tells clearly what it is not as well as what it is.

Booklist 21:8 O '24
Bookm 59:746 Ag '24 100w
Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '24 200w

"Mr. Osborne writes so entertainingly that one is carried away by the human interest of his story and is apt to lose sight of the serious purpose back of it. To be appreciated, Prisons and Common Sense must be read more than once." W. E. C.
+ Cath World 119:707 Ag '24 550w

"The creation of the Mutual Welfare League and the successful demonstration of its usefulness have been perhaps the most outstanding developments of prison management of the last quarter century or more and Mr. Osborne's temperate, well-reasoned and very interesting presentation of its history and its principles deserves the attention of every one concerned in any way with or about prisons and their betterment."
+ N Y Times p23 My 25 '24 520w
N Y Tribune p26 Ag 10 '24 210w

"A cogent and well-written plea."
+ Outlook 137:481 Jl 23 '24 130w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:353 Jl '24

"One finds here in a nutshell a clear statement of what Mr. Osborne believes and has actually accomplished by way of realizing his theories."
+ R of Rs 70:111 Jl '24 80w
St Louis p338 O '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p543 S 4 '24 60w
Wis Lib Bul 20:172 Jl '24

OSBOURNE, LLOYD. Intimate portrait of R. L. S. 155p $1.50 Scribner
B or 92 Stevenson, Robert Louis 24-4068

Stevenson was twenty-six and Lloyd Osbourne eight when they first met at Grèz. Three years later Stevenson married Lloyd Osbourne's mother, and for the rest of his life his stepson was a member of his household and collaborated with him in the writing of some of his novels. It is an intimate and personal account of their years of living and working together at Davos, at Hyères, at Bournemouth and finally, in Samoa, which is here given.

Booklist 20:298 My '24

"In Lloyd Osbourne's book there is real sentiment, tinged by a delicate sense of humor and a real restraint."
+ Bookm 59:338 My '24 240w

"This little collection of recorded episodes and impressions is written always with Stevenson as the central figure, and while it makes no claim to completeness, it is nevertheless almost a perfect picture of him. Although it seems as if everything possible about Stevenson had been written, it gives here and there something new, something vital and something strange." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 1 '24 1850w
Cleveland p46 Je '24

"Osbourne is here turning over the well-worn pages of memory, and the newness of his product inheres less in the bare facts presented than in his mellowing attitude toward them. Nevertheless, for those who have not consumed the earlier publications as they appeared, this will make an agreeable substitute. Stevenson's private and professional life have never been more adequately sketched in so brief a compass." E. C. Adams
+ — Detroit News p14 Mr 30 '24 260w
Dial 77:267 S '24 110w

"Throughout, although Mr. Osbourne's tone is frankly affectionate, the portrait is a human Stevenson—a man who is not the wraith carefully nursed into legend by aged and pious pens. It is the more welcome, and the book should do Stevenson's reputation good. It is full of vivid passages. It does not pretend to be full-dress or full-size, but it does throw into relief a very lovable and charming figure." Frank Swinnerton
+ Lit R p644 Ap 5 '24 500w

"A book well worth writing and very well written indeed." G: S. Hellman
+ Nation 118:565 My 14 '24 480w

"Mr. Osbourne's book is an interesting chronicle of Stevenson's private life, giving us a clear vision of the man outside the author." Ryan Walker
+ N Y Times p21 Mr 2 '24 1500w
N Y Tribune p26 Ap 27 '24 300w

"As one reads this book of Mr. Osbourne, the old charm reasserts itself. Stevenson can not be too much written about by those who really knew him and by those who understood him. The best praise of this book of Mr. Osbourne is that it is genuinely Stevensonian—the nearest thing to a book by Stevenson that we shall ever have now."
+ No Am 219:716 My '24 350w

"The material is new, and the descriptions of Stevenson in Europe, America, and especially in the South Seas, are all admirable."
+ Outlook 136:442 Mr 12 '24 120w

"Possesses undeniable qualities of interest and charm."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 16 '24 800w
Wis Lib Bul 20:96 Ap '24

OSGOOD, HERBERT LEVI. American colonies in the eighteenth century. 4v v 1-2 552;554p ea $5.50; per set $20 Columbia univ. press
973.2 United States — History — Colonial period (24-3889)

These two volumes of a work to be complete in four volumes are a continuation of "The American Colonies in the Seventeenth Century," published by the author in 1907. In the present work the account of every colony and every subject is resumed at the point where it was left in the preceding volumes.

Reviewed by C. H. McIlwain
Am Pol Sci R 18:807 N '24 950w
Booklist 21:63 N '24

"The whole constitutes a most ambitious monument to historical research, ably and scholarly executed." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 26 '24 800w

Reviewed by W. P. M. Kennedy
Canadian Hist R 5:170 Je '24 200w

Reviewed by C: M. Andrews
Nation 119:193 Ag 20 '24 170w

"Professor Osgood's desire to present truth for truth's sake alone was too great to permit him to dress her in embellishing garb. Always lucid, he is eagerly read by those who are drawn to his subject, but the fascination of popular literature was far from what he wished to attain. His work throws upon the canvas an immense and complete scene, of which not a few detached parts, when viewed in detail, represent opportunities for development by others to the limits of an ordinary book." A. S. Will
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 27 '24 2600w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p273 My 8 '24 3050w

O'SHAUGHNESSY, EDITH LOUISE (COUES) (MRS NELSON O'SHAUGHNESSY). Viennese medley. 295p $2 Huebsch

24-27996

A story of post war Vienna in which the central figure is a fragile, gentle old lady of seventy. Frau Ildefonse Stacher, born von Berg, was left penniless after the war. One by one she sold her precious possessions, furniture and jewelry, until she was forced to accept a tiny alcove in the apartment of one of her nieces as her abiding place. From the alcove Tante Ilde went each day of the week to the house of a different niece or nephew for her dinner. Some of these dinners were grudgingly given, others with love, but in the old days Tante Ilde had given unstintingly to each. The struggle for existence finally became too great for poor Tante Ilde and having given to the full of her love and kindness, she died.

Cleveland p91 D '24

Ind 113:381 N 8 '24 30w

"Mrs. O'Shaughnessy has managed it all without overdoing it, with the result that hers is a most moving book. If there is a trace of artificiality in the case of the brilliant Fanny, it remains slight and she is a genuinely human figure, even though a trifle posed. The artistry of the book is of a very high order, and there is a force of conviction behind it that gives it a vigorous living quality." H. L. Pangborn

+ Lit R p2 O 25 '24 400w

N Y Times p8 O 12 '24 500w

N Y World p8e N 16 '24 40w

St Louis p399 D '24

O'SHEA, MICHAEL VINCENT, ed. The child: his nature and his needs. 516p il $1 Children's foundation, Valparaiso, Ind.

136.7 Child study. Children—Care and hygiene. Education of children 24-12908

"This volume is planned as a 'survey of present-day knowledge concerning child nature and the promotion of the well-being and education of the young.' Professor O'Shea has called to his assistance a notable group of experts who have written on such themes as the active nature and needs of childhood, the child's moral equipment and development, the social traits of childhood and youth, relation of nutrition to mental development, nervous and mental hygiene among children, treatment of sense defects, prevention of delinquency, care of intellectually inferior and superior children, problems of adolescence, changing objectives, course of study, teaching methods. Twenty pages of topical bibliography are added."—J Religion

Booklist 21:95 D '24

"There are topics in the field of child training where sentiment is apt to becloud judgment and the value of one or two contributions is modified by this, but the book as a whole is not seriously affected. Its modest cost is a wise investment for the intelligent parent."

+ — Ind 113:50 Jl 19 '24 350w

"The volume should be of value to all students of children, teachers and intelligent parents."

+ J Religion 4:558 S '24 150w

"One might easily discover gaps and unsatisfactory factors in an undertaking of such general character, but on the whole the task has been so well performed that minor criticisms would seem misplaced. Short biographical sketches of the various contributors, an exhaustive bibliography, and a refreshingly complete index increase the volume's usefulness." E. C. L.

+ — New Repub 40:sup27 N 12 '24 350w

Outlook 138:564 D 3 '24 220w

R of Rs 70:448 O '24 100w

OSSENDOWSKI, FERDINAND ANTHONY, and PALEN, LEWIS STANTON. Man and mystery in Asia. 343p $3 Dutton

915.7 Siberia—Description and travel

24-4299

Another volume of adventure in strange and little known parts of Asia, chiefly in Siberia, where the author spent ten years of his life studying mineral veins or making scientific expeditions. In Part one he describes experiences on the Siberian prairies along the banks of the Yenesei river. Part two narrates his adventures in the Ussurian province and regions around Vladivostok. In Part three he describes experiences on the island of Sakhalin, the Russian convict settlement where the worst of criminal prisoners are banished. Part four is the narrative of an exploring expedition which took him into the Kulunda steppes and the Altai mountains.

"On the whole this new book by the author of 'Beasts, Men and Gods' is not so good a book as the other, but it is a more exciting book. In this case, violent journalism has been allowed to run away with simplicity in the telling; while the book contains passages of great beauty, it occasionally reads very much like a travel story in a newspaper Sunday supplement." J. F.

— + Bookm 59:211 Ap '24 250w

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 12 '24 1350w

Cath World 119:562 Jl '24 740w

Cleveland p39 My '24

Reviewed by C: de Kay

Int Bk R p647 Ag '24

Reviewed by Cass Canfield

Lit R p592 Mr 15 '24 450w

"I very much doubt whether M. Ossendowski's books will be so popular next year as they are now. Few of us read Tourneur and Kyd to-day. 'Man and Mystery in Asia' is the picture of a maniacal world, in which the variety of incident is only superficial. The setting changes swiftly. But in the dramas themselves and the beings who act them, there is the sameness of torture, horror, and blood." H. J. Massingham

— Nation and Ath 35:298 My 31 '24 500w

"Credulity sometimes slightly falters. A tale may be too well turned out, too symmetrical, too conclusive. It may lead to the surmise that, after a certain amount of practice with the pen, the author, full as he is of first-hand knowledge of unique and vastly important things, may have mistakenly sunk, now and then, to the level of what has been termed, disparagingly, 'mere literature.' Dr. Ossendowski is the last man in the world who needs to do this, and one prefers to hope that he has not done it." H: B. Fuller

+ — New Repub 38:51 Mr 5 '24 1750w

"In Ossendowski the scientist and the adventurer are closely welded, and the result is a volume that appears to be quite accurate (although, of course, but few people can actually attest to its truthfulness) and is at the same time as exciting as a romance yarn."

+ N Y Times p6 F 24 '24 2000w

"The book exhales the breath of romance and adventure. It is a rapidly moving narrative, written as though the author knew so many things that he could not begin to tell them all. It is an adventure book worthy to go on the shelf with all those great journals of strange lands, since the days when Marco Polo wandered China. It has not an enchanting style, but that is a secondary consideration in this case, for it has the stuff of which great adventure books are made." Laurence Stallings

+ N Y World p6e F 10 '24 1200w

Outlook 136:487 Mr 19 '24 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:331 Je '24

"The book, like its predecessor, is full of thrilling adventure, and at the same time gives valuable descriptions of little known regions and peoples."

+ R of Rs 69:334 Mr '24 80w

OSSENDOWSKI, F. A., and PALEN, L: S. —Continued

"Every chapter is not only interesting, it is exciting. Yet in the presentation of these adventures there is a certain coldness, such as we find in newspaper reports. This quality of professionalism may give a clear-cut narrative, but it does so by dispensing with intimacy, and sometimes even justice; while, by its method of callous excision, it leaves the reader with a suspicion that a great deal has been left unsaid that ought to have been said." R: Church

— + Spec 132:677 Ap 26 '24 550w

"Dr Ossendowski and his collaborator have in the English telling found a style of classic effectiveness. A man of broad capacity and sharp ability is behind the tale."

+ Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p217 Ap 10 '24 650w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

OSTENSO, MARTHA. A far land. 70p $1.50 ^{2} Seltzer

811 24-31835

Written by a poet of the Canadian northwest, certain of these poems have already found their way into periodicals and reviews. Their quality is lyrical and their imagery drawn most often from nature.

"Her poems are not involved. On the contrary they are simple, clear and vivid. One can trace no affectations in them. It is tribute to her fluency as a writer that they seem easily achieved. Some of the stanzas give evidence of a keen creative imagination. Because the poems are easily assimilated and have a delightful flavor, one might prophesy popularity for them." L. W.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 3 '25 580w

"This volume is disturbing, like the performance of a singer whose voice and temperament are both curiously veiled. Yet Miss Ostenso's product is genuine and personal. She has her own way of listening to the world and of responding to it with a delicate falling music." James Rorty

+ — Nation 120:98 Ja 28 '25 320w

"Above the average in modern poetry; Miss Ostenso has what might be called lyric perception, and she carries this into nature and into life. But when she exercises her mind rather than her senses she gropes."

+ — N Y Times p19 D 28 '25 380w

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DAVID FOX, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseuds.). Annihilation. 310p $2 McBride [7s 6d Hurst & B.]

24-5455

Mystery overhung an exclusive residence block in New York known as New Queen's Mall. First, Hughes, Henry Orbit's valet, hurrying along the waterfront in the rain, suddenly dropped dead. The autopsy found that he was the victim of a powerful poison. Then little Horace Goddard mysteriously disappeared, and later, the pretty French bonne, Lucette, died as she sat in her chair listening to Mr Orbit playing the organ. But McCarthy, ex-special deputy of the police department happened to be on the spot when Hughes fell, and his sure instinct put him on the right scent of the arch villain to whom the taking of a human life was an exhilarating experience.

Booklist 20:340 Je '24

"Miss Ostrander has provided the admirers of her novels with a liberal evening's entertainment."

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 13 '24 220w

Lit R p694 Ap 19 '24 130w

"'Annihilation' will interest most followers of the criminal mystery in fiction. In one feature it far excels the average detective story. Miss Ostrander knows and tells well of the methods of the investigating branches of the New York Police Department."

+ N Y Times p24 F 17 '24 440w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e F 10 '24 280w

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DAVID FOX, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseuds.). Bright lights. 269p $2 McBride [7s 6d Hurst & B.]

24-5454

Fannie Gillespie was a gay and pretty little shop girl, very fond of jolly times and cheap jewelry. No one could imagine why she should have been murdered and left hanging to a bed post in her room at Mrs Horton's boarding house. Stevenson, the detective, was bound to find someone guilty and tried to prove that Henry Jordan, who lived in the same house and had been in love with Fannie, was the murderer. At the trial Henry was discharged for lack of evidence. Not satisfied with this Henry determined to run down the murderer and he succeeded.

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 9 '24 280w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p269 My 1 '24 140w

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DAVID FOX, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseuds). Dust to dust. 340p $2 McBride [7s 6d Hurst & B.]

"The latest Isabel Ostrander mystery and tragedy gives us the sequence of events following the discovery by Claudia Langham, a young heiress of New York, that the man she has married is a crook. It is at the very door of the church, on her wedding day, that Claudia gets her first intimation of something hidden in the life of the man she really has married for love. Death is pretty freely associated with the subsequent developments, and worse than death is the visitation upon Claudia in the last chapter."—N Y World

"An interesting if gruesome tale." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 12 '24 850w

Reviewed by H. L. Pangborn

Lit R p900 Jl 19 '24 300w

"Miss Ostrander is both daring and original in the conception of her story and the method by which it is unfolded. If she possessed equal skill and taste in the manner of its telling, her novel might be noteworthy among tales of horror. But her high-colored adjectives, her purple patches, her stilted conversations, her thousand offenses against good taste, make her novel irredeemably cheap."

— + N Y Times p18 Je 29 '24 320w

"A thriller with a new touch to the climax is this story." E. W. Osborn

N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 70w

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p269 My 1 '24 100w

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DAVID FOX, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseuds.). Handwriting on the wall. 313p $2 McBride

24-13130

A number roughly pencilled on the wall by the telephone in the room where De Puyster Monkton was found murdered is the only clue to the case which is placed in the hands of the Shadowers, Inc., a detective agency composed of a redoubtable group of ex-criminals. But it proves sufficient to trace the murderer and to free from suspicion young Richard Monkton, son of the murdered millionaire, against whom circumstantial evidence is so strong that nothing short of a miracle seems sufficient to save him.

Lit R p938 Ag 2 '24 340w

"To be candid, the mise en scène of 'The Handwriting on the Wall' is too elaborate—it makes the book topheavy from the start. Worse still is the yarn itself."
— N Y Times p16 Jl 13 '24 450w

"Harmless and thrilling fun."
+ N Y Tribune p23 Jl 13 '24 250w

"Lovers of the detective story will find in Mr. Fox's novel matter for their mettle." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 120w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 180w

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DAVID FOX, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseuds.). Liberation. 278p $2 McBride
24-29531

The story of an escaped convict whose witness to a secret marriage is the first step towards his exoneration. Fate thrusts him into the hands of Mary Greenough on the night she elopes with Wesley King. To the indignation of her husband Mary aids George Lorrin to prove his innocence and thus unsuspectingly involves her own destiny with his and uncovers the true character of the man she married.

"The story is an exceedingly good mystery tale, one of Miss Ostrander's best."
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 20 '24 260w

"It is melodrama, with some rather arbitrarily arranged situations, but very good melodrama, solidly entertaining." H. L. P.
+ — Lit R p11 Ja 3 '25 210w

"Somewhat simpler in form than most of the stories with which this author has entertained hosts of readers of mystery stories, 'Liberation' lacks nothing of the power of its predecessors."
N Y World p8e N 30 '24 210w

OSTY, EUGENE. Supernormal faculties in man; an experimental study; tr. from the French by Stanley De Brath. 245p $6 Dutton [15s Methuen]
134 Psychical research. Clairvoyance
[24-12921]

"A scientific enquiry into the whole subject of supernormal cognition, and a summary of the author's twelve years' study and investigation of this class of phenomena. The subject is treated in its two main aspects of Cryptesthesia and Metagnomy. Under the former are included such manifestations as telepathy, vision at a distance, discovery of hidden watersprings and any phenomena which may be referred to the perception of vibrations not appreciable by ordinary senses. Under Metagnomy the author considers phenomena of supernormal percipience which can not be referred to the action of vibrations, such as some forms of clairvoyance, the prediction of future events or the delineation of human lives."—Publisher's note

"Quite the most helpful book on the subject that has yet appeared." Mary Austin
+ Bookm 59:345 My '24 780w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 12 '24 900w

N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 40w

Outlook 136:489 Mr 19 '24 90w

Reviewed by E. B. Strauss
Spec 132:18 Ja 5 '24 920w

"Owing to the extent and complexity of the subject many interesting points are necessarily dealt with in a somewhat sketchy fashion yet nothing of real importance has actually been omitted. Dr. Osty is particularly to be congratulated on the care with which he attaches exact definitions to the terms used by this comparatively new science. Its inherent merit, assisted by the translator's conscientiousness and skill, renders the publication a noteworthy and welcome contribution to parapsychological literature."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p27 Ja 10 '24 300w

OTT, MRS OLGA, and OTT, ESTRID. We three; auth. tr. from the Danish by Albert Van Sand. 282p $2 Minton, Balch & co.
24-23289

A story told thru letters between a mother and her daughter. The girl, whose parents had separated when she was five years old and who had lived with her father ever since, began to feel an irresistible need for her mother. Acting on impulse she sent her a letter which out of a full heart her mother answered. Thus began an intimate correspondence thru which mother and daughter came to know each other and which was the means, eventually, of reuniting the mother and father.

"There is in the story a very deep depth of emotion, and it is exceedingly keen and comprehensive in its understanding."
+ Boston Transcript p9 D 13 '24 480w

Cleveland p84 N '24

"The story is charming, if rather too obviously sweet, and the letters are fairly spirited. Those who enjoy this sort of distilled fiction will find no fault with the execution."
+ — N Y Times p8 O 12 '24 550w

"There is considerable artistic skill in the representation of the girl's rapidly maturing ability to write, as well as of her developing understanding of life. The letters seem at times, however, rather heavily affectionate and the plot is not very convincing."
+ — N Y Tribune p11 D 14 '24 230w

OTTO, MAX CARL. Things and ideals, essays in functional philosophy. 320p $2.50 Holt
170 Philosophy. Ethics. Idealism 24-24075

The twelve essays in this book are devoted to elucidation of a social philosophy which recognizes equally the reality of things and ideals. The essays are addressed to "persons who are in search of a method of combining aspiration with loyalty to fact. To such persons they may open a way to the development of a form of idealism free from sentimentality, yet steadfast in the refusal to accept the material order as the pattern of life."

"Brilliantly written, they form a thinker's plea for a better representation of mind in the activities of man, whether these be social, industrial, political or religious."
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 29 '24 600w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 41:203 Ja 14 '25 1450w

N Y Times p11 N 2 '24 1450w

Reviewed by G. H. Busey
N Y Tribune p13 D 7 '24 850w

Reviewed by Rowland Thomas
N Y World p9e N 23 '24 850w

OURSLER, FULTON. Behold this dreamer! 320p $2 Macaulay
24-6026

Charley Turney was blue-eyed, red-haired and a dreamer of dreams. He wasn't sure whether he wanted to be an artist or a musician, but he was very sure he did not want to continue as clerk in his father-in-law's brush factory. His wife, Clara, who slaved for him day in and day out, was of a more practical, albeit a nagging nature. Charley's three joys in life were the public library, Constance, whom he met at a concert, and a musical instrument called an ocarino. When Constance failed him he dreamed on, but his relatives-in-law, unable to understand him, became convinced of his insanity. Finally they had him placed in an asylum. From here he escaped and went to New York to study art under an assumed name. When it was discovered that he had a gift for caricature he refused to commercialize it, but struggled on until he realized his dream and painted a masterpiece.

Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 500w

OURSLER, FULLER—Continued

"Despite minor defects, Mr. Oursler has written a novel which sweeps the reader onward to the conclusion. The prose is brilliant, tho sometimes fevered, and most of the characters enlist our interest immediately."

+ — Int Bk R p609 Jl '24 480w

"About one-half, or a little more, of the story from its beginning to the escape of the remarkable hero, is entirely successful—a striking series of realistic character studies, done with a rare keenness and subtlety of understanding, and not without humorous perception. . . But from that point onward the thing rather goes up in the air. It turns into a high-keyed, feverish affair which touches the fantastic at times, and is never very convincing." H. L. Pangborn

+ — Lit R p787 My 31 '24 480w

"The book is long and for the most part closely packed. It is interesting; it has ideas, vitality, an intensity which demands and wins something of response."

+ N Y Times p19 Je 1 '24 800w

"The most interesting piece of work the reviewer has come across for some time." Karsten Roedder

+ N Y Tribune p23 My 18 '24 560w

"The man tells a dramatic story, and the adventure and climaxes of this book should give it a wide popularity even among those who might fail to recognize their own prototypes. If the book may be criticised harshly it is in its very end, which falls upon the romantic note, but this, I think, is not the terminus." L: Weitzenkorn

+ — N Y World p6e Ap 6 '24 880w

"It is a good piece of special-pleading fiction, above mere mediocrity, but not attaining to deep and primary impressiveness, since its special purpose is manifest and its people and events are too manifestly hand-picked." R. W. N.

— + Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 16 '24 220w

OVERTON, GRANT MARTIN. Cargoes for Crusoes. 416p 50c Appleton; Doran; Little

820.4 English literature—History and criticism. American literature—History and criticism 24-22297

Like the "American Nights Entertainment," this book is written frankly in the interest of the wider distribution of the books discussed and three publishers have joined with the author in its production. The latest books of many authors, both English and American, are briefly described, sometimes with personal notes about the writers. To Philip Gibbs, Melville Davisson Post, Jeffery Farnol, Aldous Huxley, E. Phillips Oppenheim, G. Stanley Hall, Cosmo Hamilton, E. V. Lucas, Michael Arlen, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Frank L. Packard, Mary Johnston, J. C. Snaith and George Gibbs, whole chapters are devoted. Bibliographies and sources are given, and there is an index of authors and titles and one of prices.

Booklist 21:103 D '24

Boston Transcript p4 S 24 '24 100w

Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison

N Y Times p5 O 5 '24 700w

" 'Cargoes for Crusoes' is more than valuable as a handy reference volume for all who have anything to do with books." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p23 O 5 '24 100w

Reviewed by Burton Rascoe

N Y World p8e O 5 '24 1750w

OVERTON, GRANT MARTIN. Thousand and first night. 331p $2 Doran

24-2897

" 'The Thousand and First Night' is romance, well nigh fantasy. Its scene is almost within earshot of Broadway. Its time is our own. Its hero makes his entrance by airplane. But in essence it is as timeless and placeless as all fine romances. . . The immediate action occupies a single night. But there is a larger action which covers centuries, and involves the whole spirit and substance of romantic love. The theme of a doubled experience, through reincarnation, is a familiar one in recent fiction. The youth of the tale is descended from a Portuguese noble who has, centuries back, loved an English maiden-ancestress of our present heroine. Here for a second time the pair meet, recognize each other as predestined lovers, and are tragically parted by death. For the second time blundering age parts them in their purely flaming youth."—Ind

Booklist 20:301 My '24

"A piece of romantic embroidery, in which the design is rather too intricate to be entirely serviceable. One admires the neatness of the stitches—the threads of plot and characterization are most accurately disposed, yet there is a disconcerting lack of glamour in the finished work."

— + Dial 76:466 My '24 100w

Ind 112:127 Mr 1 '24 1000w

"Mr. Overton has written a plot-novel with ingenuity and skill, one in which suspense is maintained to the very end and one that is hard to put by once it is begun." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p575 Mr 8 '24 420w

Nation 118:566 My 14 '24 60w

"Mr. Overton has taken over the magic of Conrad, the ideas and the very soul of Conrad, but in the process he has done more than borrow." A. D. Douglas

+ New Repub 39:217 Jl 16 '24 280w

"There is unusual adroitness in the handling of this complicated narrative, and a very vivid sense of color and the picturesque. Mr. Overton has given his imagination a canter that must have been stimulating to him and will be no less stimulating to the romance-loving reader."

+ N Y Times p9 F 3 '24 1000w

OWEN, CAROLINE DALE, pseud. See Snedeker, C. D.

OWEN, JOHN. The hoarding. 370p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

23-14267

"Mr. John Owen has set himself to discover aesthetic and moral values in something which, to the general view, is at its best rather ludicrous, at its worst annoying—to wit, the practice of advertisement. We have for hero Richard Boxrider, advertising agent; for heroine, Lesley Senior, a young woman artist, his social superior, whose fate hinges upon the sale of an Academy picture in the service of 'Kingford's Cocoa'; for villain, Claude Coleton, a distinguished man of letters who pays heavily to have himself advertised as the sworn enemy of all forms of advertisement. . . Boxrider is a true knight of adventure, though he may only figure in the idylls of a Cocoa King. He is, in his own view, an artist, a dramatist, a philanthropist, a psychologist. He is, moreover, the soul of honour; he passionately believes what he says—that 'Kingford's' is 'the best.' "—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"We should be inclined to call this a very human story rather than a great novel of advertising. Mr. Owen's interest—and consequently our own—centres far more in Boxrider himself than in what he achieves." D. L. M.

Boston Transcript p6 F 13 '24 1100w

Cleveland p36 My '24

Ind 112:289 My 24 '24 200w

Lit R p676 Ap 12 '24 220w

New Repub 38:266 Ap 30 '24 50w

"Despite the overelaborate machinery used in the beginning of the book, the opening is interesting and contains some clever analysis. A good deal of the book is well written. But one grows very tired of the discussion regarding the use of Lesley's picture for advertising purposes."

+ — N Y Times p16 Ja 20 '24 600w

N Y World p6e Ja 20 '24 1700

"'The Hoarding' can be classified as simple and dignified. It purifies the modern literary atmosphere." Ruth Snyder

+ N Y World p7e Ja 20 '24 800w

"A competent and attractive piece of work but nothing like so good as 'Robert Gregory.'"

— + Sat R 135:778 Je 9 '23 120w

"This is a pleasant if not a brilliant novel."

Spec 131:19 Jl 7 '23 40w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p286 Ap 26 '23 420w

OXENHAM, JOHN. Cedar box. 44p 90c (2s 6d) Longmans

24-23615

The story of a writer who recovers from a long illness depressed in spirit. His doctor, a canny old Scot, perceiving his patient's melancholy, brings him a treasure to keep for three days. This is a wonderful cedar box damascened with gold. The beautiful box has a miraculous effect upon the invalid. For three successive nights he sleeps and dreams marvelous things about the treasure. On the third day, his strength regained, he writes the strange story of the box, whose origin he traces to the early Christians.

"It is a short story of unusual interest and a theme out of the ordinary. It is written with John Oxenham's power and passion."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 21 '25 160w

"To those who appreciate an exquisite thing whatever its source, the work may be recommended." G. E. H.

+ Lit R p11 Ja 3 '25 110w

"A fascinating story and perhaps an allegory."

+ Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 200w

"The story is quite short and Mr. Oxenham tells it with his accustomed skill, both simply and reverently."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 16 '24 120w

OXENHAM, JOHN. Wonder of Lourdes; what it is and what it means. 62p il 90c Longmans

282 Lourdes 24-10496

The author of this book visited Lourdes and gives here an impressive picture of the place and events which he witnessed. He describes graphically the endless processions, the enormous crowds of praying men and women of every class and type. There is also an account of the peasant girl, Bernadette Soubirous, who first beheld the vision of the Lady of the Grotte. The book contains fifteen illustrations.

"This is a startling testimony, from such a man and such a writer."

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 19 '24 200w

Cath World 119:711 Ag '24 240w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p11 Je 29 '24 1900w

OXFORD poetry, 1923; ed. by David Cleghorn Thomson and F. W. Bateson. 62p $1 Appleton [2s 6d B. Blackwell]

821.08 English poetry—Collections 24-5113

A collection of poems written by Oxford undergraduates during the year 1923. Twenty-seven young poets are represented, some of them by several poems each.

Bookm 59:481 Je '24 150w

"On the whole, this volume is far above the average standard of what we have come to think of as undergraduate verse. One or two of the young writers show real promise."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '24 350w

Reviewed by L. C. Woodman

Lit R p727 My 3 '24 100w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden

Nation and Ath 34:sup406 D 8 '23 30w

"Among the usual highly creditable intellectual exercises there are outstanding poems of true feeling, notably Katharine Monro's two poems." Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 136:649 Ap 6 '24 80w

"The most noticeable characteristics of the 'Oxford Poetry of 1923' are conventionality and it must be confessed, mediocrity."

— Springf'd Republican p12 Je 11 '24 140w

P

PACH, WALTER. Masters of modern art. 118p il $3.50 Huebsch

759.4 Painting, French 24-28130

Mr Pach's survey is limited to French painting, of the period from the French revolution to the World war—from David to Derain. He interprets "masters" to mean those artists who have given new direction to art or become leaders in its development.

Booklist 21:141 Ja '25

Reviewed by Elie Faure

Dial 77:509 D '24 1300w

"He writes smoothly, ingratiatingly. His case for contemporaneity in general, is good. He even mentions photography as a respectable craft. But the individual instances are all safe names: Delacroix, Cézanne, Renoir, Seurat, Redon, Matisse, Picasso, etc. And though he writes of Marcel Duchamp and frequently employs the word modern, one's net impression is of an academic and pedestrian, if amiable mind." H. J. Seligmann

+ Lit R p4 Ja 3 '25 620w

"In short, this volume is all that a book on art should be; for it adds its own worth to the treasures it portrays." L: Mumford

+ New Repub 41:99 D 17 '24 1000w

N Y Times p23 Ja 4 '25 1100w

"This well written book is an invaluable monument of the muddle and cramp that come respectively from thinking too little and from thinking too much without your eye on the subject. And since the warm blur of undisciplined emotionalism and the chill aura of overrationalized fanaticism are perhaps the oldest human experience, perhaps the Modernists are after all in their fashion traditionalists, but traditionalists who have renounced a long intermediate something—namely, civilization." F. J. Mather

Sat R of Lit 1:322 N 29 '24 880w

PACKARD, FRANK LUCIUS. Locked book. 320p $2 Doran

24-22005

While in command of a punitive expedition in the Malay archipelago, Kenneth Wayne saw his father, Old Man Wayne, cruelly murdered by a Malay pirate. Swearing vengeance in his heart Kenneth embarked on a trip up an unknown river where he suspected the pirates might live. There in a deserted shrine he found the "locked book" with the dragon cover which nearly cost him his life, but which in the end was really the means of saving him. And in a strange way the locked book also worked woe on the man who murdered Old Man Wayne.

Boston Transcript p4 N 1 '24 650w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p858 N '24 50w

Lit R p10 N 8 '24 200w

N Y Tribune p10 O 12 '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p852 D 11 '24 170w

PAGE, CURTIS HIDDEN. Japanese poetry; an historical essay with two hundred and thirty translations. 180p il $5 Houghton

895 Japanese poetry 24-197

"To explain the true Japanese lines of the originals of these little poems Professor Page has fashioned a running commentary in which the conventional but delicate symbolism of the poets is investigated and made clear, in which the curious (to English ears) syllabic construction is explained, and in which the customs and modes of the lyricists are discussed and commented upon. But such a commentary needs to follow the line of history and the development of Japanese poetry from the very beginning, and thus Professor Page's book has grown into what is actually a short history of Japanese poetry with translated examples."—Boston Transcript

"Mr. Page sketches the history of Japanese poetry from its first use, and he does it with a touch that pleases. His method of scattering the poems throughout the pages seems much more effective than grouping them at the end. There are pictures, too, to aid in creating an oriental atmosphere in this well made limited edition."

+ Bookm 59:226 Ap '24 300w

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 12 '24 1600w

"As 'an historical essay,' Mr Page's volume can be recommended. It will bring to the Western reader the first comprehensive history of Japanese poetry that has even been offered him. And he will get, thrown in for good measure, an extremely interesting interpretation of this alien art, as seen through the eyes of a sensitive enthusiast." A. D. Ficke

+ — Dial 76:457 My '24 580w

"The translations unfortunately do not add very much, since their rhymes and inversions destroy any illusion they might otherwise have created that they were Japanese."

— Nation 118:404 Ap 4 '24 80w

"We may quarrel over technical matters until we tire the reader who is not concerned with mechanics, and so prejudice him against Japanese poetry. That would be a pity. These vivid poetic miniatures, countless as the cherry-blossoms, as fragile and as fragrant, are delicacies not to be scorned by anyone." Glenn Hughes

+ New Repub 38:sup5 Ap 9 '24 1600w

"His book is a charming one from beginning to end, a quaint mingling of explanation and poetical examples that give an extremely clear and complete account of Japanese poetry."

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 13 '24 1500w

PAGE, THOMAS NELSON. Red riders. 338p $2 Scribner

24-21999

The period portrayed is that of the last few months of the Civil war and the first years of Reconstruction. The main character of the tale is Sinkler Ashley who lives with his mother and sister in South Carolina on the Sabina plantation. Too young to serve in the Confederate army, he joins the home guards, and when Sherman's troops ransack his mother's home, Sinkler incurs the enmity of a former slave-dealer. Mrs. Ashley, to avoid further trouble, sends her son to the Capitol to apply for an appointment to West Point. President Lincoln gives Sinkler an interview, but all plans are frustrated by the President's death. Ten years later, to save South Carolina from subjection to ex-slaves and carpetbaggers, Sinkler founds the Red Riders thru whose daring and courage the state gains her freedom. The book closes with the marriage of Sinkler to the lovely Diana McQuair.

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 3 '25 1500w

"Mr. Page knew his South intimately, loved it deeply and interpreted it faithfully. But his sympathy and understanding extended to the North as well. In this book he succeeded amazingly in the difficult feat of remaining absolutely impartial. The mood in which 'The Red Riders' is written is one of sympathy, mildness and equity, and the whole book is bathed in gentle tenderness." E. M. Jacobs

+ Int Bk R p140 Ja '25 370w

"The tale is certain of appeal to the very youthful, but is far removed from the requirements of the mature, sophisticated novel reader of the present." E. C. Beckwith

— + Lit R p14 S 27 '24 550w

"The story as a whole suffers from diffuseness and at times approaches the jerkiness of a chronicle of the times, rarely the self-contained integrity of a novel. One cannot doubt that had Mr. Page lived he would have revised his manuscript considerably."

— + N Y Times p8 S 21 '24 680w

"It is a smoothly moving, straightforward narrative almost, one might say, a boy's story rather than a novel for mature minds. It is well constructed and it will hold the reader's attention, but it remains uninspired."

+ — N Y Tribune p11 D 14 '24 250w

Reviewed by C. H. Gaines

No Am 220:383 D '24 700w

Outlook 138:376 N 5 '24 90w

Reviewed by H: C. Fuller

Sat R of Lit 1:160 O 4 '24 620w

PAGE, THOMAS NELSON. Washington and its romance; il. by Walter O. and Emily Shaw Reese. 196p $5 Doubleday

975.3 Washington, D.C.—History 23-17608

An account of the origins and early history of Washington. Mr Page tells how it came to be selected as the national capital and how the boundaries of the District of Columbia were fixed. The planning of the capital is described, especially the work of the young French engineer, Pierre Charles L'Enfant, who was chiefly responsible for the plan, the building of the city and the transfer of the government from Philadelphia to Washington. Early social life of Washington, and the capital under Jefferson's administration are the subjects of the concluding chapters. Illustrations are in color and half-tone.

Cleveland p38 My '24

"Throws interesting sidelights on social life and conditions in the United States during the thirty years immediately following the War of Independence."

+ New Statesman 22:712 Mr 22 '24 350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p114 F 21 '24 280w

PAINE, RALPH DELAHAYE. Four bells; a tale of the Caribbean. 337p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Hutchinson]

24-4862

A tale of the romance of the sea and treasure hunting as adventured on by Richard Cary, a fair-haired giant from New Hampshire with the blood of his sea-faring ancestors. At Cartagena his ship sails without him while he almost dies with a knife in his back. When recovered, he captains the decrepit Valkyrie on a thrilling hunt for buried treasure. A lively combat of wits and weapons awaits him at the treasure island, when Spanish knives and machine guns compete for the honors. His sweetheart, Señorita Teresa, has meanwhile been searching the ports for him, and following some hopeful clues, meets him at last clinging to the wreck of the Valkyrie near the island. They return for rest to his New England farm till the wind from the sea bids them sail on again.

Booklist 20:340 Je '24

"It is an excellent yarn, and no little detail bothers us any more than it would have Teresa and Dick." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 19 '24 1200w

Cleveland p35 My '24

"As a romantic novel of the sea and buried treasure it ranks among the most interesting that I have read."

+ Lit R p762 My 17 '24 220w

"'Four Bells,' serves a delightful end. It takes one into a world of brisk action, full-blooded adventure, and tender passion."
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 16 '24 720w

Outlook 136:612 Ap 9 '24 330w

"Readers will relish the details of this entertaining and thrilling narrative."
+ Springf'd Republican p9a My 4 '24 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p514 Ag 21 '24 180w

Wis Lib Bul 20:97 Ap '24

PAINE, RALPH DELAHAYE. Joshua Barney, a forgotten hero of blue water. 410p il $4 Century

B or 92 Barney, Joshua 24-20757

Mr Paine rescues from obscurity an almost forgotten hero of Revolutionary times and makes of his exploits a true narrative of adventure by land and sea. Barney began his seafaring life at the age of twelve and at fifteen, while technically only an articled apprentice, he took command of the ship when his captain died at sea. He was a conspicuously gallant naval officer during the Revolutionary war and in 1814 helped with his bluejackets and marines in the defense of Washington. Also he had no lack of peace time adventures.

Booklist 21:66 N '24

Bookm 60:505 D '24 280w

"Mr. Paine has done his countrymen a signal service in rescuing this superb old seadog from the obscurity into which he had fallen. And he has written a biography that is more fascinating than a romance and which every youth in the United States ought to have the privilege of reading." E. B. Smith
+ Lit R p6 S 6 '24 500w

"If any movie man wants a theme that will provide a rousing, thrilling picture full of the scenes and deeds and emotions that have universal appeal, he can find it in this story of the life of Commodore Joshua Barney."
N Y Times p4 S 14 '24 1000w

"Mr. Paine has done an excellent job in telling the story of a great sailor. The book is rugged and stimulating. It is unfortunate you could not read it when you were a boy." Morris Markey
+ N Y World p6e S 14 '24 370w

R of Rs 70:446 O '24 50w

Sat R of Lit 1:149 S 27 '24 140w

Springf'd Republican p14 O 24 '24 660w

PAINE, RALPH DELAHAYE. Privateers of '76. 316p il $2.50 Penn

23-14117

"Stephen Claghorn, a lad of 16, son of a Salem ship captain, jumps at the first available chance to follow in his father's wake. He enlists on a privateer, is captured and imprisoned in England, but escapes by strategy and has a succession of thrilling adventures by land and sea ere he gets back to Salem a year later. Sharing his adventures in part is Ben Gerrish, a schoolmaster, who demonstrates that a knowledge of mathematics is a big start for a land lubber toward a naval officer's rating. Aside from the interest in the leading characters, the reader gets a broad hint of the way in which New England mariners with their small ships played havoc with the proud British navy and did their part in winning American independence."—Springf'd Republican

"Aside from its unflagging interest the book performs a grateful service. For it tells the story of what the mariners of Salem of Massachusetts did, while the landsmen were enlisting in the armies of General Washington."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 9 '24 750w

"In his new book Ralph Paine has performed two difficult tasks. First, he has contrived to catch the fugitive spirit of the past and has made of this well-constructed romance of seafaring boyhood a chronicle which might well be the work of a contemporary writer. Secondly, he has written a sea story full of incident and adventure, and yet quite free from those nautical technicalities and dissertations that are so wearisome to the uninitiated."
+ Lit R p511 F 9 '24 230w

"A breezy, stirring tale."
+ N Y Times p12 F 3 '24 360w

"Should please every youngster who has ever thought of going to sea."
+ N Y Tribune p18 F 17 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a F 17 '24 200w

PALEN, LEWIS STANTON. White Devil of the Black sea. 298p $3 Minton, Balch & co.

947 Russia—History—Revolution 24-9682

White Devil was the name given by the Bolsheviks to a Cossack officer in the imperial Russian army whose experiences during the revolution are here narrated by the man who collaborated with Ferdinand Ossendowski in his "Beasts, men and gods." These adventures are equally thrilling. The White Devil, whose identity is not revealed, worked in Moscow, in the Ukraine and the Crimea rallying the White forces against the Reds, hunted all the time by the Bolsheviks but always escaping as if by miracle. When the forces at the front were no longer able to hold back the pressure of the Red army, the Black Sea ports were evacuated under the protection of the English and French naval detachments.

Boston Transcript p1 My 3 '24 160w

Cleveland p88 N '24

Ind 112:288 My 24 '24 300w

"'The White Devil' is preponderantly violent. It is a minor epic of the destruction of the old Russia, and its author sees no ray of hope in the new régime. It is frankly a backward-looking book—a fact which must be borne in mind, however much one may sympathize with the author; it is but one side of a terrible story, told by a man who suffered every imaginable hardship and loss." Kenneth Fuessle
Int Bk R p536 Je '24 850w

"The White Devil of the Black Sea, whose identity Mr. Palen conceals with over-elaborate terror and awe, is a painfully incredible figure, a sort of picaro, Munchausen, miles gloriosis, and Ossendowski all rolled into one. His endless and pointless pother to find another place and another time to die is rather trying on the reader's patience. To flirt with danger can often be wondrously thrilling; but to go off on a protracted liaison with it is quite insufferably tedious." L. B.
— New Repub 39:54 Je 4 '24 120w

"To say that 'The White Devil of the Black Sea' is an 'absorbing' narrative is to use a phrase as weak as it is trite. The narrative is more than absorbing; it is compelling. The tale is as thrilling as it is kaleidoscopic in its changes." P. A. H.
+ N Y Times p11 Ap 13 '24 2000w

"It is by the sheer force of a personality so arresting, so unique and so filled with certain old world dare-deviltry, that the narrative commands and captures the interest of its readers." S. T. Beach
+ N Y Tribune p26 Je 8 '24 850w

"It gives a sufficient amount of reckless daring and marvelous capacity for escape to stock a dozen novels of the swashbuckler type. The spirit of it is fair, too, giving an excellent and rather unusual inside view of Russian psychology."
+ Outlook 137:284 Je 18 '24 170w

St Louis p356 O '24

Spec 133:474 O 4 '24 120w

Springf'd Republican p7a Je 22 '24 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p742 N 20 '24 780w

PALEOLOGUE, MAURICE. An ambassador's memoirs; tr. by F. A. Holt; v 1, (July, 1914-June 2, 1915). 350p $7.50 Doran

947 Russia—History. European war, 1914-1919—Russia

Diplomatic and social memoirs, in diary form, of the last French ambassador to the Russian court, from the days just before the outbreak of the war until the revolution put an end to official relations between the two countries. In this volume we see the events of the first ten months of the war as reflected in diplomatic circles and from the French viewpoint—Russian mobilization, the wave of patriotic enthusiasm passing over the country, military operations on the eastern and western fronts, the growing ascendancy of Rasputin and the sense of impending revolution.

Am Pol Sci R 18:827 N '24 180w

"A more vivid portraiture of court life, with its kaleidoscopic succession of personalities and incidents, is not easy to conceive; a more stirring picture of the commotion which shook St. Petersburg after the assassination of the Archduke Ferdinand, to reverberate throughout Russia, was perhaps never penned." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 24 '24 1850w
Cleveland p88 N '24

"The Memoirs of Maurice Paleologue enjoy a greater popularity than the memoirs about Russia, published so far, by any foreign observer. The fact is easily explained. The author, well informed, thanks to his high official position, personal friendship with the Russian Foreign Minister, S. D. Sazonoff, and his association with numerous representatives of Russian society, has, besides, a rare thing for a foreigner, knowledge of Russian history and literature. Into this he looks for confirmation of his judgments, possessing the art of picking out from the vast material of his observations the most important and interesting features." A. M. Nikolaieff
+ Lit R p5 N 22 '24 750w

"The book is fairly crammed with interesting observations and deep reflections, both on men and on things. And it is all told in a masterly fashion. Paléologue is a man of artistic temperament and writer of high order who has won distinction in other types of literature. The figures in this drama are living beings, taken from every stratum of society, human actors who speak from the pages and leave a lasting impression on the mind." W: L. Langer
+ New Repub 39:128 Je 25 '24 2050w

Reviewed by C. G. Bowers
N Y World p8e N 9 '24 400w

"Here is a book remarkable alike in theme and art."
+ Sat R 135:633 My 12 '23 720w (Review of v 1)

"M. Paléologue is no novice at writing books. Reading his book, we are aware of a keen desire to put forward only those incidents that are of general interest; and lest facts alone should be too dull, we find included a certain number of those somewhat fantastic stories about Russian life and personages that always appear in such works. Yet the facts themselves are of such interest that no embellishment was really necessary."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p238 Ap 12 '23 1000w (Review of v 1)

PALMER, FREDERIC. Virgin birth. 56p 75c Macmillan

232 Jesus Christ—Birth 24-3291

A brief and temperate discussion of a question now vexing many loyal church people. Dr Palmer examines the two different views in regard to the birth of Jesus for which support may be found in the New Testament and follows the steps by which the doctrine of the virgin birth grew. His conclusion is that it is a detail of Christian tradition of no importance whatever to the Christian religion and that the article in the Apostles' creed was intended to assert the historic reality of the birth of Jesus rather than its unusualness.

Lit R p679 Ap 12 '24 160w

"Dr. Palmer's main purpose is not controversial but explanatory, and the exposition is both moderate and scholarly."
+ Outlook 136:403 Mr 5 '24 210w

"Rarely are the essentials of a controversy set forth more understandingly, or with better temper and more helpful suggestions, than in Rev Frederic Palmer's little book. In fact, it is difficult to see how any doubt as to the real place of this doctrine in the Christian church can remain after a reading of these thoughtful pages."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 12 '24 480w

PALMER, JOHN LESLIE. Looking after Joan. 304p $2 Harcourt [7s 6d Christophers] 24-13020

"This is the story of the girl who could not look after herself and of the people who tried to do it for her. There is the Diana-like Barbara who quotes Hamlet, and always orders the right brand of champagne; her friend, Hugh Royden, the brilliant artist, who shows, too obviously, the cloven hoof; and the guileless Nicholas, compiler of anthologies and expert in international law, who eventually marries her. The 'gay' atmosphere of a Peace Conference in Paris is an appropriate background."—Spec

"While by no means a novel of great power or literary excellence, 'Looking After Joan' is distinctly not commonplace in its treatment of an old problem after the modern manner, and the character-drawing of Joan, her friend Barbara and Nicholas the lover, poet and statistician, is admirable." F. A. G.
+ Boston Transcript p8 My 3 '24 250w
Cleveland p42 Je '24

"Mr. Palmer has moved his characters through logical and well-drawn situations, and in the restraint with which he has handled the biggest of them he shows himself a talented and finished writer." T. H. L.
+ Int Bk R p613 Jl '24 540w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Lit R p643 Ap 5 '24 300w

"The book fails in its most important aspect, that is, as a narrative, and the story, if not cheap, is at least no more than mediocre and uninspiring."
— Nation 118:538 My 7 '24 60w

"'Looking After Joan' is by no means the frivolous type of story suggested by its rather unfortunate title, but an interesting novel, showing much sympathy with the perplexities and problems of the younger generation."
+ N Y Times p27 Ja 27 '24 750w

"The plot is largely conceived and sensitively handled. The characters, incidents and dialogue are entirely convincing—with one exception. Especially profound is the understanding Mr. Palmer shows of how goodness can be latent in the selfish and the sensual and how it does not mitigate but increases their woe. An exceptionally fine book." Gerald Gould
+ Sat R 136:474 O 27 '23 290w

"Attractive people, and Mr. Palmer manipulates them with his customary skill."
+ Spec 131:1000 D 22 '23 80w

"It neither deviates into the commonplace nor flags from beginning to end. We are grateful for this kind of book, cheerful, witty and far removed from the sordid side of typewriting."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p668 O 11 '23 330w
Wis Lib Bul 20:98 Ap '24

PANTER-DOWNES, MOLLIE. Shoreless sea. 404p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Murray] 24-10302

The novel, which is the work of a girl of sixteen, is the story of a boy and girl romance which survived the years. Deirdre Bellamy and Guy Wyndham were scarcely more than boy and girl when they met one day in the Sussex woods. They had several meetings, then lost each other completely. Circumstances led Deirdre into marriage with Terence Liscarney, but the memory of Guy remained and when he came into her life again as Terence's best friend, the result could not but be tragic. For a time they fought their love, but it proved too strong for them, and Terence's trust in them made it the harder. After a month of happiness together, Guy drowned himself. Deirdre felt that she had forfeited Terence's trust—but in his love and generosity he forgave her.

Booklist 21:28 O '24

Reviewed by D. L. Mann
Boston Transcript p5 Je 21 '24 1150w

Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"The essence of the book is its fresh, clear-eyed, zestful youth. If it is indeed the spirit of the newer generation which breathes through 'The Shoreless Sea'; if in this book we hear it speak for the first time, then those who have deplored what seemed to be the 'passing of idealism may well take heart again." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p600 Jl '24 1050w

"It is a peculiarly interesting book, not because of what intrinsic merit it has so much as because of its unlikeness to most current fiction. For it 'dates' as very early Victorian, or pre-Victorian; its heroine could hardly have existed later than 1840. . . It is all very noble and all quite impossible, but none the less engaging." Harvey Parrish

+ Lit R p822 Je 14 '24 370w

" 'The Shoreless Sea' shows no sign of immaturity. But it does—and this is one of its chief virtues—show signs of youth. It bubbles over with a vigorous joy in life and in living. Its enthusiasms catch hold of one. Its freshness has an ever-compelling charm. A wholesome contagion breathes from its admirable and unaffected prose."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 8 '24 720w

"It is so largely imitative and borrowed, there isn't much to go by in judging the author's native talent, except that it is remarkable to find one so young even able to follow a formula and construct her story more or less correctly." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p23 Je 8 '24 1200w

"It carries in its pages the evidence of a precocious youthfulness behind its conception. But it carries as well something like a promise of more considerable accomplishments to follow in later years."

+ N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 90w

"It is silly, dreaming, pathetic sixteen—made articulate."

Outlook 138:63 S 10 '24 200w

"It is all curiously remote from life; yet as regards emotional values it is not wholly artificial. Although it is impossible to predict how Miss Panter-Downes will fare as a novelist when the knowledge of life drags her down to terra firma, one may safely say that in point of technique she will have had the start of most of her contemporaries."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p788 N 22 '23 570w

PAPINI, GIOVANNI. The failure; auth. tr. by Virginia Pope. (European lib.) 326p $2 Harcourt

B or 92 24-26387

This is the life story of a man "born with the disease of greatness" in his brain. It is an accurate picture of his innermost life—a record of one who in his own words is nothing because he tried to be everything. The author of the "Life of Christ," shows no restraint when writing about himself. Introspective to the point of abnormality, he reveals with absolute candor the experiences of his childhood, his struggle to find God, his insatiable greed for learning, his acceptance of each new philosophy, and always the disappointment which comes to him—the sense of failure.

Booklist 20:340 Je '24

Bookm 59:473 Je '24 120w

" 'The Failure' must be judged from the standpoint of psychology as well as literature. On the latter count it is truly a very effective contribution. So far as psychology is concerned there is an element of the hysterical throughout these intimate admissions. It is scarcely fair to Papini to publish in America a book like 'The Failure,' without explaining, dispassionately and calmly, exactly why its author felt moved to write these revelations." D. F. Gilman

Boston Transcript p13 Mr 29 '24 1250w

Cath World 119:424 Je '24 250w

"This is a remarkable book, a striking book; but a book that drives the exhausted reader away from itself into the most opposite temperamental camp."

Dial 77:173 Ag '24 120w

"It is the mental attitude of Papini as revealed in 'The Failure,' rather than its relation to any of the movements it describes, that makes this book one of the Bibles of contemporary Italian youth. . . For it is the story of a truly spiritual life attained by conquest." Arthur Livingston

+ Int Bk R p427 My '24 2000w

"Apart from its interest as the vivisection of an individual mind, 'The failure' is a strong light thrown upon modernism itself. The avid restlessness of the modern mind, its sense of isolation in the world and in the universe, its reliance upon the single power of human reason, and, in the process, its curious aberrations as it follows its restless course through all sorts of bizarre follies and fads, all this is expressed in Papini's book with an eloquence and a vividness that fascinates until it wearies you." Michael Williams

Lit R p663 Ap 12 '24 1100w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 118:483 Ap 23 '24 820w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris
N Y Times p6 Mr 30 '24 1600w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter
N Y World p6e Mr 30 '24 850w

"A book of youth—of furious defiance and nonconformity, of desperate lifting at the bootstraps, of disillusion and discouragement. And yet in the final chapter, with the consciousness of approaching maturity that defiance touches the note of resolve. This man has failed, but he is by no means finished, done for."

Outlook 136:610 Ap 9 '24 480w

Reviewed by James Young
Spec 132:sup795 My 17 '24 1050w

"In itself it is an absorbing, a breath-taking confession of an egoism so colossal that it would be termed madness but for the pitiless honesty and virile intelligence running through it." E. M. Jewett

Springf'd Republican p9a My 4 '24 900w

"The work bears evident signs of immaturity. Its vigour is undisciplined; so that what strength is gained in vehemence is lost in emphasis. Its style is too florid even for modern Italian prose. Yet it is a work of fine inspiration."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p249 Ap 24 '24 750w

Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

PARIS, JOHN, pseud. Sayonara (good-bye). 317p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-8162

Richard Aylmer, young and enthusiastic, goes to Japan as an Anglican missionary. Inexperienced but eager to understand, he is plunged into the life of Japan: its different moral standards, its customs strange to westerners and its deep-rooted religion. In his zeal he merges himself into Japanese life to the extent of marrying O Yuki, a pretty girl whom he had rescued

PARIS, JOHN, pseud.—Continued
from the licensed quarter. There follow misunderstanding on the part of his western friends and indifference on the side of his wife's family. An old sweetheart reawakens in him his need for love and when she leaves him, he returns for O Yuki, only to find her and her lover suicides. His tangled affairs force him to resign from his church, and while drifting aimlessly, he is rescued by Bibleman Baxter, an old sea captain who dispenses religion to the derelict and saves souls at every port. Richard's final decision is to work with him, with the promise of a happier love in the future.

"Mr. Paris's book is interestingly and competently written: it displays insight into the mind both of the Oriental and of the semi-Orientalized westerner."
+ Lit R p746 My 10 '24 420w

"Sayonara is less a depiction of the life of Japan than a recoil from the way it used to be depicted. As such it is a salutary and much needed book. Only, it should not be taken alone. It is no further from the truth than the lyrical rhapsodizings of the lesser Lafcadio Hearns. Also it is hardly nearer. . . For those who are interested in Japan and want to know a phase of Japanese life hardly ever presented, this is nevertheless an interesting novel, and one distinctly worth reading." Nathaniel Peffer
— + New Repub 39:137 Je 25 '24 820w
N Y Times p8 Ap 6 '24 580w

"The result is not particularly interesting." A. L. Hill
— N Y Tribune p25 Jl 20 '24 350w

"Like most current novels, this book contains some passages which would have been thought indecent a few years ago, but its realism in the main is of the higher type. The story makes concrete and visible the contrast between the manners and modes of East and West; and its people are more than commonly clean-cut, as men and women we have really met." H. W. Boynton
+ Outlook 137:33 My 7 '24 140w

"The plot, once one has resigned oneself to its conventions, is well-knit and even exciting, and the oriental colour is excellent." Gerald Gould
+ — Sat R 137:417 Ap 19 '24 100w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 100w

"We are confronted with situations which seem strained even though the local colour is accurate. The style in which he writes is simple and easy. Being without affectations it does not jar; but one cannot help feeling that its absence of colour does less than justice to the outward charm and quaintness of the scenery."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p174 Mr 20 '24 560w

PARKER, MRS CORNELIA (STRATTON). Jenny the joyous. 330p $2 Harcourt
24-11656

Jenny is a joyous being, finding much of beauty and adventure in life. In college her days are full; in marriage with Billy Lamar her heart and mind are content. For a time his death closes her gates of light, but two children and work to the limit help her to forget the grayness. First as secretary to a school principal, then as assistant manager to a factory-owner, she is able to satisfy her love of meeting new people and new problems, and true to her spirit of eternal youth, she again finds love. Ten years of waiting is her share, ten years to test that love till Jenny the Joyous again finds complete justification for her nickname.

"No novelist, even one so obviously well intentioned as is Mrs. Parker, ought to write so that the 'glad stuff' just sticks out of her story on the second page. . . Mrs. Parker writes with emotion, a superficial emotion. She glorifies the commonplace, the excessively commonplace. A great deal of wisdom, a fair amount of nonsense and a tremendous amount of sentimentality are blended carefully in this story. For those who admire the mixture, and there are many who do, this will prove a helpful and satisfactory book."
— + Boston Transcript p2 My 31 '24 320w
Lit R p953 Ag 9 '24 360w

"Any one who likes pages of this sort of thing will no doubt be delighted with 'Jenny the Joyous'; others will find that 'glad' person an unmitigated bore."
— N Y Times p19 My 18 '24 460w

"The extraordinary unreasonablesness and malevolence of every character whose interests run counter to those of Jenny are laughable, while the joyousness of the heroine appears to largely spring from her determination to pay no attention to the foibles of those about her, even when she has herself largely contributed to their just unhappiness." A. L. Hill
— N Y Tribune p23 Je 1 '24 560w

"'Jenny the Joyous' is a twisted tale which Mrs. Parker tells plainly enough, albeit with the fault lying in a rather exclamatory style that has its annoyances." E. W. Osborn
— + N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 160w

"The story of her business career and of her progress from Billy to Peter is related with sympathy and vivacity, if with little distinction or depth, and is likely to please many readers."
+ — Outlook 137:613 Ag 20 '24 80w
Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

PARKER, MRS CORNELIA (STRATTON). Ports and happy places. 310p il $3 Boni & Liveright
914 Europe—Description and travel 24-11335

Mrs Parker takes her two sons, eleven and thirteen, and little daughter aged five, to Europe. The first part of the book describes her stay in an old Kloster in Stein am Rhein while the boys were at school, but the greater part of it is devoted to descriptions of the holiday trips with them, mostly with rucksacks on backs, traveling in all manner of conveyances, in "Parker style," thru Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, ending with a trip to Spain, for once, in real tourist elegance, under the guidance of Cook's. The book also serves to illustrate some of Mrs. Parker's theories on the bringing up of children.

Booklist 21:21 O '24

"This volume with its excellent photographs and its delightful excerpts from the boys' diaries, is as much a human treatise on education as it is a thoroughly charming travel book."
+ Bookm 60:229 O '24 210w
Boston Transcript p5 My 31 '24 1050w

"In spite of defects many persons will enjoy 'Ports and Happy Places.' The work is by the same author as that charming book 'An American Idyl,' and many will be glad of the opportunity to deepen their acquaintance with her. In short everyone will like 'Ports and Happy Places' who likes just that kind of book." C. P. H.
+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 S 14 '24 480w

"Mrs. Parker has lost nothing of her blithe, brave and sensible view on life and her book of travel is a delight."
+ Lit R p11 D 27 '24 110w

"Mrs. Parker has written a charmingly informal and very companionable travel book." Martha Gruening
+ Nation 119:684 D 17 '24 340w

"She has gusto, forbearance, and resolution. Her book is something more than a delightful personal record. It is a document of exploration in regions which still for all their ruin and their shroud of history have something to yield to a brilliant young American and her brood. One feels that the young Parkers will be worth watching." Raymond Holden

+ New Repub 40:51 S 10 '24 130w
N Y World p8e O 19 '24 160w

"It is disagreeable to condemn so well-intentioned and amiable a book, but it is necessary. No doubt there is a charm of sorts, but if so, there's a surfeit of it. When you have finished the book, you seem to have eaten a ton of cream tarts."

— Outlook 137:445 Jl 16 '24 100w

"Unlike the conventional travel book packed with narrative and description, this book is written in the more intimate conversational style. From time to time appear extracts from the diaries of the author and her two sons, the former delightful, the latter highly entertaining."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 27 '24 310w
Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

PARKER, EDWARD HARPER. Thousand years of the Tartars. (History of civilization) rev ed 300p il $5 Knopf

950 Tartars. China—History

"Professor Parker has prepared a second and revised edition of his work on the Tartars, giving their history on the basis of materials furnished by Chinese historians. The period covered extends from early time down to the thirteenth century, taking in documents written prior to the conquests of Genghis Khan. The bulk of the narrative is given to the Tartar empires of Hiung-nu, Sien-pi, Jwen-Jwen, and to the empires of the western Turks and the Ouigours; there is also a description of Cathay as it was in the eleventh century."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 23 '24 290w

"Mr. Parker has given a powerful impetus to a further study of Tartar history and ethnology by making accessible contemporary Chinese sources." Emil Lengyel

Nation 119:525 N 12 '24 950w
+ N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 370w

"Professor Parker is colloquial, he is never an easy writer. Upon the confusion of strange names and unknown places he piles a fearsome array of details and comments. Yet it is fair to say that this book does no less for the whole of northern Asia than the 'Decline and Fall' does for eastern Europe during the same millenium." F. W. Williams

— + Sat R of Lit 1:350 D 6 '24 1000w

PARKER, WILLIAM BELMONT. Life and public services of Justin Smith Morrill. 378p il $5 Houghton

B or 92 Morrill, Justin Smith

Justin Smith Morrill, 1810-1898, entered Congress in 1854 and died in office as a senator during the presidency of McKinley, after the longest continuous term of service in our legislative history. He was a New Englander, a staunch Republican and one of the founders of his party, long known as the "Father of the Senate." His name is chiefly associated with the Morrill tariff act and the Land grant college act. He knew the men of his long day in Washington, and they appear in his pages—Webster, Lincoln, Sumner, Fessenden, Grant, Sherman, Andrew, Johnson, Thaddeus Stevens, Blaine, Edmunds and many others.

Reviewed by C: R. Lingley
Am Hist R 30:166 O '24 680w

"Generally careful and authoritative biography." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 5 '24 2000w

"Mr. Parker has done lovers of American history a friendly and valuable service by recording in pleasant, limpid fashion these most important years of our national life, composed around a figure who participated so largely in them. Morrill's career embraces the pre-historic days of the Republican Party." H. V. Wishnieff

+ N Y Times p6 My 18 '24 700w
Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 30w
R of Rs 69:558 My '24 150w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 880w

PARKS, LEIGHTON. What is modernism? 154p $1 Scribner

230 Modernism. Christianity. Miracles 24-6669

A brief, simple statement of the underlying questions involved in the controversy which is disturbing all the churches. A sermon preached last year by Dr Parks, who is rector of St Bartholomew's church, New York city, brought the Episcopal church definitely into the controversy. The hundreds of letters which Dr Parks has since received, running the whole range from violent abuse to sincerest appreciation but all revealing the existing confusion of thought and, in some cases, of panic about the subject, have led the author to write this simple explanation of what it is all about. A modernist himself he tells what modernism is, explains its purpose and its attitude toward the supernatural and miraculous—especially in regard to the resurrection of Jesus and the Virgin birth.

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 30 '24 650w

Reviewed by J. F. Newton, D. D.
Int Bk R p656 Ag '24 170w
J Religion 4:445 Jl '24 30w

"The book is a courageous and reverent presentation of the matter." G. B. Smith

+ J Religion 4:540 S '24 880w

Reviewed by A. Kevin
Lit R p13 N 8 '24 300w
Nation 119:128 Jl 30 '24 50w
N Y Times p11 Ap 6 '24 650w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
No Am 219:895 Je '24 1800w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Outlook 137:612 Ag 20 '24 470w
Pratt p9 summer '24
St Louis p335 O '24

"His statement is admirably free from aggressiveness of temper; it is written with the single and sincere desire of illuminating a principle; it is not a contribution to thought, but to public understanding—a clear, helpful, courteous presentation of a case which obviously still needs presenting."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 1 '24 500w
Wis Lib Bul 20:171 Jl '24

PARMELEE, MAURICE FARR. Blockade and sea power. 449p $3 Crowell

940.45 Blockade. Sea power. European war, 1914-1919—Blockades 24-22904

The book is devoted to a phase of the war about which little has so far been written. The first half is a history of the blockade, 1914-1918, showing how blockade measures were used and expanded during the war, the method of administration, the effect of the blockade on neutral and blockaded countries and the part it played in winning the war. The other half explains the significance of sea power, especially in the form of blockade, for world politics and the necessity of bringing it under control. "This book is a protest against nationalism, navalism, and militarism, and a slight essay towards the attainment of the supreme goal of the political evolution of mankind—the World State."

Reviewed by W: L. M'Pherson
N Y Tribune p8 O 12 '24 720w
R of Rs 70:671 D '24 40w

PARRISH, ANNE. Semi-attached. 288p $2 Doran
24-24809

Francie Gaythorn hated the idea of marriage. Her mother, sensitive and high strung, and her gifted but impractical father had loved passionately, but had been unhappy in their married life. Rosalind, her older sister, had died after one year of marriage and in another year her supposedly inconsolable husband had remarried. So when Bim Bennet proposed Francie refused to marry him, altho she loved him. Her idea was to live with Bim as his wife for three years; if at the end of that time they still loved each other, they were to marry. Bim came of a very conventional family and was horrified at the idea, but rather than lose Francie he finally consented. The experiment very nearly failed more than once but love and conventionality were too strong even for Francie "and so they were married."

"The theme is adroitly handled, giving an analysis of modern society with a blithe wit which prevents satire from becoming cynicism. We confess our irritation at times against Francie, so young, so ignorant and hence so pitilessly opinionated. But our involuntary anxiety—yes, in spite of our sophistication in affairs fictional—as to her solution of the problem she had created for herself and Bimbo proves the strength of the story." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 8 '24 720w

"What we mistook for cleverness in Anne Parrish's earlier novel seems to have lapsed into a kind of cheap smartness. 'Semi-Attached' is by no means the book we expected her to write for her second novel."
— Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '24 350w

Ind 114:106 Ja 24 '25 80w

Lit R p10 D 20 '24 350w

"It is lightly done but full of wisdom; a charming, tender and satisfying comedy of love and married life. A politely droll story, tickling gently the fashion and follies of life—withal a merry tale cleverly told."
+ N Y Times p8 N 23 '24 680w

"This story is told with a tactfulness and discretion which may go far to offset any fear that Miss Parrish has written with the idea of serving propaganda to her readers. In the book is discoverable much of the gentle humor which its author wrote into her earlier 'A Pocketful of Poses.'"
+ N Y World p9e O 26 '24 230w

"Light, bright, neat, thoroughly readable, this is an ephemeral novel of surface. It avoids any real unpleasantness. It remains content with superficialities. It does not actually explore the human heart."
— + Sat R of Lit 1:365 D 6 '24 400w

"The work is not significant as a character study, but deals intelligently with a somewhat artificial social problem."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 250w

PARRISH, ANNE, and PARRISH, DILLWYN. Lustres. 215p $2 Doran

A book of fanciful sketches and allegories, each signed with the initials of the author. The meaning of the parable, which is evidently the aim in most of them, is somewhat vague and labored. Partial contents: The bishop and the butterfly; The shopkeeper; The snare; The big blue cap; Off course; A picnic in Turkey; Grubb; Fame; "Whosoever shall receive this child"; Modest Jones; The little brothers.

"Lustres! They mean, we suppose, those delicate tintings which suggest and decorate largely by leaving to the imagination. It is a perfect name for these fantasies, which are fascinating airy flutterings."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 21 '24 400w

"'Lustres' is an unusual collection of essays whose beauty remains for days after the book is finished and returns on the wings of memory to the reader at unexpected moments; it is a book that grows more beautiful with the passing of time (like the rugs and carpets of the East) and its colors become mellowed in memory until they fade again into the title, and instead of sparkling brilliantly they become 'Lustres' to live eternally and to receive from the passing years added beauty." E. S. Alexander
+ Lit R p11 N 22 '24 240w

"There can be no more abysmal failure in writing than to attempt inefficiently those unworldly, fantastic, whimsical, allegorical sketches that make up portions of the achievement of Sir James M. Barrie and Kenneth Grahame, for instance. If the right touch is not in evidence at the precise moment, the result is either too heavy, too banal, or too innocuous. Anne and Dillwyn Parrish have attempted a series of these gossamer-like trifles in 'Lustres' and the result is hardly praiseworthy. It is true that they have their moments of grace, of poetical abandon, of airy persiflage that achieve their objective, but, for the most part, these fairylike tales miss fire."
— N Y Times p9 Ap 20 '24 420w

"The sketches are full of magic and fairies and human people who know wise things."
+ N Y Tribune p24 Je 22 '24 80w

"Fancy without imagination inspires the two authors of this series of attractively printed sketches, which could be called short stories only by courtesy. Both the perpetrators suffer distressingly from the 'little'-complex, employing the word 'little' on almost every page and many times on some, apparently hoping thereby to render more appealing the vapid, ineffectual, misunderstood, and dying characters of their vaguely wistful narratives."
— Outlook 138:240 Je 11 '24 220w

PARRY, EDWARD ABBOTT. Drama of the law. 319p $5 Scribner [21s F. Unwin]
343 Trials [24-14792]

Accounts of famous and sensational trials, by an English judge. "Under this title Judge Parry tells the stories of a number of cases which have arisen in the courts of England, America, and in one instance, France. He has rather fancifully treated them as if they were examples of drama; has grouped them under the heads of tragedy, comedy, farce and melodrama, and has endeavored to lighten them by using theatrical terminology in a playful way."—N Y Tribune

"Material for a hundred moving tales is contained between the covers of Judge Parry's 'The Drama of the Law,' and the plots could not ever justly be criticized on the ground they were not true to life—for they are life." E. H.
+ Lit R p986 Ag 23 '24 160w

"In these breezy little pen pictures of some thirty or so famous cases, there is plenty of humour and dramatic emphasis."
+ Nation and Ath 35:186 My 10 '24 550w

"There is humor as well as human interest in the law. Judge Parry blends them perfectly." W. B. Hayward
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '24 600w

Reviewed by E: B. Hill
N Y Tribune p21 Jl 27 '24 850w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Outlook 137:363 Jl 2 '24 80w

Reviewed by J: Carter
Sat R of Lit 1:8 Ag 2 '24 360w

"Judge Parry, who has a proper admiration for George Borrow, might have done better to have remembered his remarks on this matter of describing trials and refrained from 'embellishing' them."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p260 My 1 '24 650w

PARSONS, FLOYD W. Everybody's business; the story of America's assets and opportunities as represented by the nation's chief industries. 503p $3.50 Doubleday
604 United States—Industries. United States —Economic conditions 23-18087

"Aims to provide accurate information covering the industries of the nation. Covers agriculture, minerals, transportation, public utilities, electricity, foodstuffs, fabrics, etc. Author conducted a department in the Saturday Evening Post under the heading which gives title to this book."—Wis Lib Bul

---

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 26 '24 520w

"We would sound a warning against certain inaccuracies such as the entirely misleading picture of the potash situation given on page 88, but we keep in mind that the main purpose of the book is to stimulate thought, to waken interest, to induce to further study of the topics discussed. If this purpose is served, the defects will be overcome and the good which the book will do will warrant its appearance and our interest in it." E. W. Z.
+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 F 17 '24 700w

Lit R p581 Mr 8 '24 50w

"Mr. Parson's book is a thoroughly practical handbook and, if you wish only facts and figures you will find them in abundance. But you may find, too, if you wish it, a fine survey of industrial America, a panorama of might and power, a drama of human intelligence coping with titanic problems, tales of real giants and real dragons, and a romance of fact that puts fiction to the blush."
+ N Y Times p20 Ja 20 '24 720w

Springf'd Republican p10 F 20 '24 400w

Wis Lib Bul 20:23 Ja '24

PARSONS, HUBERT, pseud. of GERALD DU MAURIER and VIOLA TREE. The dancers. 232p $2 Knopf

23-16387

"The Dancers" is a novelization of the popular play of that name run in London and New York. As childhood playmates, Tony Chievely and Una Lowry break a twig and swear on it that they will never marry anyone else. Fate makes Tony a traveller, soldier and finally bartender in Canada. Always faithful to Una, he feels only friendship for Maxine, a beautiful dancer, who loves him. Meanwhile Una has also grown up and danced her frivolous way thru Italy and back to London night life. When Tony unexpectedly inherits both money and a title he hastens back to find Una. Their immediate marriage is his only thought, but a few hours after the wedding Una takes her life as the price of her one night's folly which she had kept from Tony. Unable ever to forget Una, Tony absorbs himself in his work, comforted by the true friendship of Maxine.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 16 '24 320w

Cleveland p35 My '24

"The book has been very wisely constructed. Nothing in the play has been left out, and enough new material has been added to make it worth the good-humored perusal even of the public that has seen it in the dramatic form. As a novel, it is not anything wonderful, being frankly unambitious, being, like the play, designed to please in a modest, serious, and sensible way."
+ Lit R p582 Mr 8 '24 280w

"A vivid story—undeniably theatrical, it is true, but with imaginative values above the ordinary."
+ Nation 118:376 Ap 2 '24 60w

"The attempt to novelize a popular play is one which rarely meets with any appreciable degree of success, and to this rule the attempt to novelize 'The Dancers' is no exception. Indeed, after reading the book one feels more than ever impressed with the extent of the debt the play owes to those acting in it, since it would seem to be the performance which 'makes' the play."
— N Y Times p9 N 18 '23 330w

PASCAL, ERNEST. Dark swan. 341p $2 Brentano's

24-3455

"Mr. Pascal takes for his theme the parallel careers of two foster-sisters, one of them, Eve, being extremely beautiful, but just as extremely selfish and emotionally cold, while the other, Cornelia, is plain of features but deeply intellectual and responsive to the urges of affections. Cornelia's life, viewed objectively, is one of frustration both mental and physical. She sees Lewis Dike torn from her by a woman incapable of deep love, and she herself, so passionately fashioned, must continue to desire frantically that positive love which the colder sister never feels. Later she sees Eve playing fast and loose with Lewis and eventually carrying on an affair with another man. When the moment comes when Lewis, weary of his unemotional and selfish-souled wife, turns to Cornelia, she is quite prepared for the event, and the child that results is welcomed by her as a positive symbol of her own vindication in life."—N Y Times

---

"For a time, as the story opens, it seems that perhaps Mr. Pascal is trying to be merely naughty. But he soon strikes his stride and leaves all such trumpery—(or bait!)—behind. His handling of character is assured, convincing. In 'The Dark Swan' character is indeed fate; and incident springs relentlessly and inevitably from situation. All these are hopeful signs. I think it is fair to say that 'The Dark Swan' possesses definitely the qualification of 'importance.'" L. S. Goldsborough
+ — Lit R p643 Ap 5 '24 500w

"The book reveals occasional unrealities and contains no penetrating analysis; but in the main 'The Dark Swan' is excellent reading and undeniably a book of much promise."
+ — N Y Times p8 F 24 '24 650w

" 'The Dark Swan' is an improper tale, but it is not true that impropriety need be so dull." E. W. Osborn
— N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 210w

"Mr Pascal's style is direct and uncompromising and his deductions are courageous enough. He never goes over the heads of his audience, but launches his ideas or his situations squarely at one. Ordinary honest individuals have small place in such sections of life as that shown here, and the types substituted for them are not perhaps worth the study that Mr Pascal has given them. There is some force in Cornelia, but no great human appeal."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 310w

"A first novel of considerable interest. 'The Dark Swan' is a promising achievement."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p418 Jl 3 '24 380w

PASVOLSKY, LEO, and MOULTON, HAROLD 2 GLENN. Russian debts and Russian reconstruction; a study of the relation of Russia's foreign debts to her economic recovery. (Institute of economics. Investigations in international economic reconstruction) 247p $2.50 McGraw

330.947 Russia—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (European War)—Russia. Debts, Public—Russia 24-12018

"A scientific inquiry, largely statistical, into the nature and volume of the pre-Soviet Russian debt and the ability of Russia to pay its war and pre-war debts in case the obligation to pay were assumed. The book has accordingly, a very direct relation to the question of how far Russia is a good business risk in the matter of foreign loans."—Lit R

Reviewed by E. A. Goldenweiser
Am Econ R 14:724 D '24 1100w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald
Lit R p894 Jl 12 '24 440w

Reviewed by E. M. Patterson
New Repub 39:277 Jl 30 '24 1300w

PATERSON, MRS ISABEL. The singing season. 304p $2 Boni & Liveright
24-15292

"A romance of old Spain which narrates the ancient feud between the two princely brothers, Pedro the Cruel and Henry the Bastard, for the war-torn kingdom of Castile. The fate and fortune of many rest upon the outcome of this struggle for dominant power. In the success of Henry the Bastard rests the destiny of Sigismund, the richest and most powerful merchant of Cordova, his daughter Isabella and the two brothers Roderigo and Alexander, and numerous other friends and retainers. Court intrigue in the person of Cardinal Ribera implicated Sigismund with the charge of treason. Subtly Ribera worked himself into a position of power. The downfall of Sigismund, taken by surprise, was complete. Roderigo, a young priest, who had in secret loved Isabella, the fascinating daughter of Sigismund, succumbs to the fate of the family. In the final parting of Isabella and Roderigo, gentleness, understanding and pity are written into a scene of passionate loveliness."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:69 N '24

"It is a brilliant costume novel, filled with beautiful writing and with scenes of color, magic, and power." J. F.

+ Bookm 60:86 S '24 300w

"Isabel Paterson's first novel, we can say in all sincerity is a thing of which she has reason to be proud." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 30 '24 1200w

Cleveland p67 S '24

"'The Singing Season' has all the essentials; it has a vivid and somewhat brutal plot; it has the color of a strange land and strange people who are yet not so strange but that we can understand them. It has above all strongly drawn and interesting characters." E: Speyer

+ Detroit News p12 Jl 27 '24 660w

"It would be the wildest folly, of course, to try to force a book upon any fiction-public with the argument that it is pure literature; but in this case it is quite possible to assure all sorts that 'The Singing Season' is intensely interesting, dramatic, picturesque, humorous and human. . . Is this rare orchid of any literature to be overlooked because the American public demands 'real American stories,' dull transcripts of 'real life,' stories of everyday people 'who might have been our own selves?' Surely there is an exclusive public at least to take pride in the fact that such a book was written by an American." Gertrude Atherton

+ Int Bk R p660 Ag '24 1600w

"Here are color and wit, vivid characterization, a full canvas of striking figures. . . For sustained illusion, Mrs. Paterson's story deserves nothing but superlatives. Her re-creation of milieu and atmosphere is astonishingly perfect, a fine example of the power of imagination playing upon a few dry historical facts. In style the book is charming, and here again there is sustained strength which causes wonderment that it can be so flawless." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p883 Jl 12 '24 600w

"Isabel Paterson has told an old treachery, against a glamorous and vividly detailed background, with provocative exuberance. Her flair for a long forgotten milieu rekindles for our realization a dead past of fierce beauty and life."

+ N Y Times p9 Je 29 '24 900w

Reviewed by Burton Rascoe

N Y Tribune p22 Je 29 '24 1000w

"Here certainly is a book that one should star upon his reading-list."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 190w

Wis Lib Bul 20:214 O '24

PATON, RAYMOND. Autobiography of a blackguard. 304p $2 Houghton

"The theme may perhaps be best described as one that Du Maurier might have handled—the life of a great 'genius,' a violinist of international importance; which also involves a good deal of apparently supernatural uncanniness. . . Michael appears first as a boy of ten or so, an orphan living with his drunken old grandmother, a Scotch woman who keeps a curio store in Marseilles. He is of very mixed ancestry: Scotch, French, Italian. He is a predestined musician. Early in his career, after his grandmother had nearly killed him by knocking him on the head with a brandy bottle, he sees a sort of vision, and believes that one 'Maliol,' who is an ancient god of music, has endowed him with supernormal powers—but on the proviso that he must never love anything or any one so much as his music. After he has become famous, the woman appears, and disaster follows."—Lit R

"This extraordinarily interesting novel is of a kind that defies adequate description in a brief review. It cannot be simply classified or assigned to any familiar pigeon-hole. It is quite out of the mode of the day, both in its subject matter and in manner. . . The artistry of the whole is masterly in its construction, and the movement has something of the quality of a symphony, the theme being that little Michael, the violinist, is willing to sacrifice everything to his art, even compelled to do so. . . . There are crudities of diction, some of which may be put down to the utter absence of any proofreading." H. L. Pangborn

+ — Lit R p5 D 20 '24 570w

"The author painstakingly undertakes to draw a portrait of a musician's soul, and succeeds only in depicting the mannerisms of a box office attraction. The book is tedious and vulgar in intention, clumsy and melodramatic in its unfolding, and banal and tiresome in its effect."

— N Y Times p9 D 14 '24 280w

"Entertaining, but by no means immortal, story."

+ — N Y Tribune p12 D 14 '24 600w

PATRICK, DIANA, pseud. (MRS HARRY J. WILSON). All to seek. 358p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-10845

There were two beautiful sisters, Melody and Harmony Page, whose father was organist of the church in the little Yorkshire town of Hailm Bay. The story follows their somewhat involved love affairs. Melody marries a philanderer, soon learns the truth about him and is the victim of a motor accident for which her husband is responsible. Harmony goes to London, Italy and the Riviera, and has various love adventures, coming back at length, somewhat bruised, to the faithful Sebastian who had always loved her.

"What makes this book more than an ordinary love story is first of all Miss Patrick's appreciation of beauty which communicates itself steadily and surely to the reader and it is secondly and more importantly her understanding of character. . . In Harmony Miss Patrick has captured the very essence of youth, at once lovable and cruel." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 24 '24 1000w

"Its mechanism is first rate and its people are definitely differentiated and quite alive, although we have met them all before in various earlier incarnations. . . It is honest, painstaking literary workmanship with occasional brilliant flashes." H. L. Pangborn

+ Lit R p883 Jl 12 '24 450w

N Y Times p9 My 11 '24 900w

"This is a pleasant enough little story, though a wandering one." A. M. L.

+ — N Y Tribune p24 Jl 27 '24 300w

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 70w

"A well-written novel, if over-written in certain chapters." J. L. Ford

+ — Outlook 137:576 Ag 13 '24 210w

"The chief characters make no real appeal to our sympathy, and the love-making throughout is the rhetorical love talk indulged in by novelists who do not apply the touchstone of reality in what they write. A long-winded rhetoric is, in fact, the fault of the book all through."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p773 N 15 '23 250w

PATTEN, ARTHUR BARDWELL. Can we find God? the new mysticism. 237p $1.60 Doran

248 God. Spiritual life 24-8803

The theme of the book is not the philosophy of mysticism but the mystic experiencing of God in the spiritual life—finding him thru our own personalities, in love and faith, prayer and fellowship, thru all the experiences of life.

Bookm 59:adv Ap '24 80w

"Exceedingly well-written and worth while." J. F. Newton
+ Int Bk R p359 Ap '24 60w
J Religion 4:333 My '24 30w

PATTEN, SIMON NELSON. Essays in economic theory; ed. by Rexford Guy Tugwell. 399p $5 Knopf

330.4 Economics 24-2489

"Professor Seager opens his introduction to this rich sheaf of hitherto uncollected periodical writings of the late Simon N. Patten by appraising their author as 'the most original and suggestive economist that America has yet produced.' Most economists of established reputation will agree with Professor Seager. Certainly no economist has had so far-reaching and dynamic an influence upon the development of social work. Many of the foremost leaders in the transformation of traditional charity into what has come to be recognized as inductive human engineering drew their inspiration from him. . . The essays in the volume are sufficiently informal, sufficiently occasional, to reveal the growth of the author's mind and ideas more intimately than his more comprehensive volumes."—Survey

---

"This volume makes available in convenient form many of Patten's signal contributions to economic literature. . . Patten can be found in a small way in the scattered articles here brought together. Bringing anything from or by Patten into form is valuable and entirely justified." C. H. Crennan
+ Am Econ R 14:287 Je '24 1200w

"Dr. Patten was a most inspiring teacher. There are hundreds of students scattered throughout the country who never had the opportunity of meeting Dr. Patten who will find in the reading of these essays some of the inspiration and stimulus which others of us got in the classroom." Carl Kelsey
+ Ann Am Acad 114:155 Jl '24 480w
Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '24 390w

"Mr. Tugwell has done a great service to students of economic theory, but he has done more than that. He has produced a volume that will serve as a powerful stimulus to thought in every live-minded reader, particularly if he be an American." H: R. Mussey
+ Nation 118:178 F 13 '24 80w

"What is here collected throws useful sidelights upon the workings of the most original mind that economic study in this country has yet attracted." W: MacDonald
+ N Y Times p25 Mr 2 '24 440w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:302 Je '24

"Professor Tugwell has placed under substantial obligation not only those who came directly under Simon N. Patten's inspiring influence, but all socially minded students of economic theory." R. W. Bruère
+ Survey 51:535 F 15 '24 900w

PATTERSON, AUGUSTA OWEN. American [2] homes of to-day, their architectural style, their environment, their characteristics. 401p il $15 Macmillan

728 Architecture, Domestic. House decoration 24-29522

Miss Patterson's book is devoted to the finer American homes of town and country—their gardens and outbuildings and something of their interior decoration. The text begins with a short history of the development of domestic architecture in America. The rest of the book deals with the forms this development has taken since the beginning of the present century, classifying the examples chosen under seven main types. The beautiful illustrations in half-tone number over 300, most of them full-page.

N Y World p9e D 28 '24 140w

"When the author deals with facts, the style is direct and the information apparently authoritative. When she generalizes, she drifts into 'fine writing,' into preciosity, and that kind of wellbred condescension toward learning which is sometimes found in the 'society' magazines."
+ — Outlook 139:37 Ja 7 '25 220w

"We believe that there are few readers who will not enjoy turning the pages of this book, filled as it is with illustrations of the magnificent larger homes of our country."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:398 D 20 '24 440w

PATTERSON, FRANK ALLEN, ed. Copy 1924. 227p $1.75 Columbia univ. press

810.8 American literature—Collections 24-10250

The stories, plays, poems and essays comprised in "Copy" are selected from the published work of students in the special courses of writing offered by Columbia university in its University extension department. They were written as classroom work and subjected to the criticism of the instructor and fellow students. All the selections, except one, which is pending publication, have appeared in various periodicals.

"There is a genuine purpose in the publication of this book. It stands as concrete proof that short-story writing can be successfully taught, that there is no need for men and women, either young or old—for many of the students who take these courses are men and women who have already done other work in the world—to stumble along unaided in their desire to express themselves and to market their writings. . . The special interest of 'Copy 1924'—outside its emphasis as proof of the success of the Columbia University extension courses—is that it evidences the variety of the work done there." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 2 '24 450w

" 'Copy' solicits stricter attention than the ubiquitous undergraduate volumes. It is the work of twenty-three mature students, several of whom have already published books of their own. For the most part, these writers have energy and honesty as their conspicuous merits. . . 'Copy' may achieve an unsuspected consequence in illustrating the homely apothegm that great oaks from little acorns grow." G. H. Carson
+ Nation 119:79 Jl 16 '24 320w
N Y Times p2 Jl 6 '24 300w
St Louis p381 N '24

PATTON, CARL SAFFORD. Religion in the thought of today. 159p $1.50 Macmillan

204 Christianity. Modernism 24-8575

A restatement of some disputed religions and philosophical questions by a modern-minded Congregationalist minister. The five lectures deal with evolution and its contributions to religious thought, Old and New Testament criticism, the trend of current philosophical thinking, and, very briefly, with the chief doctrines of Christian theology in the light of modern thought.

PATTERSON, F. A., ed.—Continued

"Altogether this book constitutes a lucid, fair and sane picture of the modernist's viewpoint in Christianity." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '24 300w

"A popular exposition, particularly intelligent and comprehensive."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 6 '24 320w

PATTON, CORNELIUS HOWARD. Business of missions. 290p $2 Macmillan
266 Missions 24-2331

The author makes it very clear that this is a business view of foreign missions and not a view of foreign missions for the sake of business. It is written to impress upon the minds of Christian business and professional men the colossal task which the church has on its hands today. Contents: A going concern; Doing business in China; Facing the problems; The great partnership; Business at headquarters; The new world era; Do we mean business?

"A very readable and convincing treatise."
+ J Religion 4:446 Jl '24 30w

"A book that should appeal alike to those already interested in missions and to those who might be, both to the enthusiasts of the mystic type and to the hard-headed business men who are supposed to know a good thing when they see it and to be keen for new opportunities."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 8 '24 650w

PAUL, ELLIOT H. Imperturbe; a novel of peace without victory. 313p $2.50 Knopf
24-10702

Lester Davis, as many another youth of modern fiction, avidly desires to probe the depths of life. The subject of the novel is the knowledge Lester gained during the fifteen years of his development and his subsequent reaction. Lester has no definite plan of life. Restless, vague and brilliant in a misdirected way he is powerless to work out his own scheme, being easily swayed by influences good and bad. There is his brother Charles, upright, clear thinking and eminently fine—a good influence as opposed to others with whom Lester comes into contact. Oscar Nelson, a musician and a ne'er-do-well plays his part. Lester, still seeking, continues to move from one job to another—and then comes the war from which he at last emerges with peace of mind—and singing with Whitman—Imperturbe.

"To tell his story, Mr. Paul resorts to many moods, many manners, many methods and many localities, dividing his book into five complete parts, and covering a space of some fifteen years. And as a result he manufactures the most uneven book we have read for months. He drops from the heights to the lowest depths of writing, of taste, of artistic work. He writes for many pages like a man inspired, and then stops short and drivels endlessly for chapters of disgusting clap-trap with no visible excuse. . . Percy Marks can make sex an adventure. Cabell can make it a religion. Ellis can make it an art. Anatole France can make it humorous. Elliot Paul can only make it disgusting; he knows no other side." C. B. O.
— + Boston Transcript p4 Ap 30 '24 1050w
Dial 77:171 Ag '24 100w

"In the unfolding of Lester's baptism by disease Mr. Paul creates the inner world of emotion and the outer world of nature by a series of pictures almost intolerable in vividness, abrupt and startling. Lester is not a man, but the successive movements of a symphony. Mr. Paul's love of music makes him expand all his moods and impressions like a complex combination of a symphony and a burst of rockets." A. D. Douglas
Lit R p738 My 10 '24 600w

"Imperturbe is brilliantly written. The earlier sections dealing with Lester's life in the sagebrush country, have a positive glamor. But the end of the book suffers from a progressive disorganization remotely analogous, perhaps, to the effects of the disease itself on the hero." J. G.
— + New Repub 39:191 Jl 9 '24 280w

"'Imperturbe' is a book which the critic recognizes as 'big' while reserving judgment as to its greatness. So much tribute at least is due to the scale on which it is conceived and to the sustained power which carried it through successfully."
+ — N Y Times p8 Ap 27 '24 1000w
Outlook 137:641 Ag 27 '24 80w

PAXSON, FREDERIC LOGAN. History of the American frontier, 1763-1893. 598p $6 Houghton
978 West—History. United States—History. United States—Frontier and pioneer life
24-23381

"America awoke with a start a generation ago to the fact that her frontier had all but disappeared. Up to that time our whole national history had virtually been the history of our frontier. Professor Paxson is the first author to attempt a complete history of the American frontier as such. He begins with the Colonies as they were in 1763, after the French and Indian War, and follows their Western development, the absorption of vast areas of new lands in the West, the building of railroads and the transformation of the wilderness into territories and from territories into States. This steadily advancing frontier spelled national unity and national growth. In short, it was the history of America."—R of Rs

"He has written a masterly treatise on the opening up of the whole country—the pushing back of the seaboard frontier from sea to shining sea—which includes political, economic and social reactions, and is human and readable as well as amazingly scholarly."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 3 '25 400w

"Dr. Paxson has given us days and dates, figures and facts, but best of all, his book contains the breath of the forests that are gone and the lure and charm of the sun dropping behind a distant mountain in whose shadow lurk mystery, adventure, wealth and the possibility of achievement for achievement's sake." E. A. H.
+ Lit R p10 D 20 '24 450w

"Dr. Paxson's book is too voluminous to make a strong appeal to the reader who takes his knowledge in 'outlines.' Rather is it a work to be carefully and slowly read by lovers of American history. Its principal value lies in its thoroughness. For this reason it is sure to interest all who want full but concise discussions of various aspects of frontier history set in their proper perspective." N: Roosevelt
+ N Y Times p3 F 1 '25 1500w
N Y World p8e N 9 '24 240w
R of Rs 70:670 D '24 130w

"A comprehensive survey—intelligently acute, readable and spirited."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 8 '24 1000w

PAYNE, MRS ELIZABETH STANCY. Lights along the ledges. 316p $2 Penn
24-7731

"The author specializes in motor launches and eligible young people with some cloud obscuring the heroine's happiness, and the present story runs true to form. From Marblehead to Monhegan and back the girl learns the lights that guide as well as warn, and learns the value of moral anchorage that holds in a storm. Just when it seems that romance is to be wrecked like the yacht on which two pairs of lovers cruise, the tide turns and the cloud that has overhung the summer of the runaway heroine is lifted and banished, so that one contentedly leaves the chief couple watching the light on Minot's Ledge and deriving much solace in its 1-4-3 flashes."—Springf'd Republican

"Fresh as the breezes of the ocean, whereon are the scenes of her story, bright as the days of which she relates such interesting and amusing events, this original and entertaining tale by Mrs. Payne adds another to her growing list of delightful novels."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 240w

"An entertaining, appealing love story, enlivened by the admixture of a mild mystery."
+ Lit R p779 My 24 '24 90w

"'Lights Along the Ledges' is prettily sentimental and it is young. Moreover, there is mystery enough to hold the interest to the end." Elizabeth Wyman
+ N Y Tribune p28 Je 22 '24 550w

"Anyone who likes the tang of the sea, even though it be but the edge of the ocean along the northern New England coast, will enjoy 'Lights Along the Ledges.'"
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 22 '24 140w

PAYOT, JULES. Conquest of happiness; ² auth. tr. by Richard Duffy. 421p $1.75 Funk
170 Happiness. Conduct of life 23-18109

Jules Payot lays down the following as the nine conditions of happiness—health, work, the conquest of moral liberty, society, money, power, the family, love of nature, intellectual culture. He devotes a chapter to each of these conditions and its attainment.

"This is a book of lay spirituality, and a very excellent one of its kind." W. P. H. K.
+ Cath World 119:425 Je '24 340w

"Dr. Payot's philosophy is as true as it is simple. His manner of conveying it has a certain monotony—he has no anecdotes to make it entertaining. But there are luminous bits of wisdom on every page. It is a book to be read a little at a time, rather than swallowed whole." E. L. Shuman
+ — Int Bk R p31 D '24 800w
Wis Lib Bul 20:171 Jl '24

PEAR, TOM HATHERLEY. Skill in work and ² play. 107p il $2 Dutton [4s Methuen]
152 Efficiency. Psychology. Physiological. Muscles

The professor of psychology in the University of Manchester here analyzes those mental and bodily processes which combine in the smoothly coördinated behavior called skill. More space is given to the discussion of skill in work than in play but the facts brought out are equally applicable to both.

N Y Times p21 Ja 11 '25 370w
N Y World p8m Ja 4 '25 40w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p842 D 11 '24 1000w

PEARSON, EDMUND LESTER. Studies in murder. 295p $3 Macmillan
343 Murder 24-15256

Studies of five celebrated American murder cases which are at the same time mysteries, since, with one possible exception, they have never been satisfactorily solved and elements of mystery surround them all. The first study, which takes up nearly half the book, is concerned with the famous Borden case—the double murder of Andrew Borden and his wife committed in Fall River in 1892, which Mr Pearson pronounces "without parallel in the criminal history of America." The next case is the murder of Benjamin Nathan in New York city, known as the Twenty-third Street murder, and the third is a narrative of the murders committed on the barkentine Herbert Fuller. The other two cases are more briefly treated.

Booklist 21:53 N '24
Reviewed by J: E. Lind
Bookm 60:88 S '24 1600w

"A book that will be read alike for its intrinsic interest and for the literary charm with which its author has invested his subject." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 2 '24 1000w
Cleveland p93 D '24

"As to presentation of the stories, it is superb. However Mr. Pearson may rank as a connoisseur of crime, he is an excellent story-teller. He has an easy and fluent style, shrewdness, penetration, a keen sense of dramatic values and humor." G. W. J.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 S 21 '24 380w
Ind 113:40 Ag 16 '24 550w

"I can not forbear recording the pleasure I have taken in Mr. Pearson's book because of the certainty with which he uses the English language. His is not the easy writing which is hard reading. He tells his tale simply, directly, clearly, cogently. He is impartial and thorough. He is never colorless, but he never revels in gore. And he enlivens his pages now and again with little touches of irony and of sly humor which relieve the somberness of his subjects." Brander Matthews
+ Int Bk R p722 S '24 2300w

"Mr. Pearson has done a great deal more than to bring back to life old stories; he has turned the searchlight of an unusually keen mind upon each until every detail stands out. . . His comment is unfailingly shrewd, dryly humorous, and ironical, the comment of a fine intelligence playing upon official stupidity and public hysteria. . . Judged merely as entertainment, Mr. Pearson's book takes high rank—there are few volumes of detective fiction that can equal it in interest." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p918 Jl 26 '24 350w
Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 36:267 N 15 '24 330w
New Statesman 24:308 D 13 '24 470w

"First, last and always it is as a man of letters that Edmund Lester Pearson of the New York Public Library, whose 'Books in Black and Red' of last year delighted many discriminating readers, approaches the outstanding American 'celebrated cases' of his selection. He weighs and analyzes the five murder mysteries presented in 'Studies in Murder' as material for fiction." A. B. Maurice
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 27 '24 1750w

"Perhaps the most delightful quality of the book is the charm and range of its literary allusiveness. Stevenson's 'Wrecker' illustrates an incident of the Bram case; Kipling casts more than a single ray on the turbid waters of crime. Wit and erudition are interwoven in all the 'studies.'" H. E. Haines
+ N Y Tribune p21 Jl 27 '24 1600w

"Murder lovers who accept his invitation and open the covers of his book will find themselves abundantly rewarded. Every murder, of course, is a pretty good murder. But some are better than others, and Mr. Pearson's are excellent." Rowland Thomas
+ N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 1200w

"The narratives of these five quite extraordinary criminal investigations are clearly told, and are made picturesque by irony and humor, when appropriate."
+ Outlook 138:65 S 10 '24 200w
St Louis p372 N '24

"It is in shading the fine human values of his situations that Mr. Pearson achieves his success. He sets forth his appalling subjects in a manner faintly reminiscent, say, of the leisured and allusive philosophy of Mr. A. Edward Newton; and we have the unique example of a book on murder mysteries which opens with a quotation from the 'Masque of Anarchy' and closes with the scholarly apparatus of a bibliography." Walter Millis
+ Sat R of Lit 1:42 Ag 16 '24 400w
Spec 133:391 S 20 '24 150w
Spec 133:474 O 4 '24 1250w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 700w

PEAT, HAROLD R. Inexcusable lie. 186p $1.50 Barse & Hopkins

172.4 War 23-17639

"'Private' Harold R. Peat, Canadian hero and author of a once famous war book, during the past few years has visited more than a dozen countries, always asking questions and always thinking. At last, in 'The Inexcusable Lie' he tells his conclusion: that war is bestial, cowardly, degrading, and encouragement to fraud and deceit, and (save in the compulsion of some actual emergency) a form of national treason; that men, boys at heart, go to war only because they have been swindled into believing that it is gallant, glorious, patriotic, a great deal of fun, and an ideal that calls forth emulation. This belief, skilfully imparted by home, school, and society, is the inexcusable lie, and the author calls upon these institutions, in the name of the doomed innocents, to tell the truth."—Bookm

Booklist 20:284 My '24

"Mr. Peat writes crudely but very clearly and with intense conviction. He touches upon sides of the question that only a soldier—a thoughtful soldier—could know about; but, in the opinion of this reviewer, he attributes too much influence over young minds to the teachings of the school, and far too little to those of the street, the ball field, and the barber shop."

Bookm 59:229 Ap '24 270w

"This is a very silly book."

— Boston Transcript p3 Ja 12 '24 120w

Survey 52:640 S 15 '24 60w

PEDLER, MARGARET (BASS) (MRS W. G. Q. PEDLER). Barbarian lover. 344p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

23-15032

The story of Patricia Luttrell, born in India and educated in England, who returns to India to help her adored father carry on his work after the death of her mother. Without knowing it, Patricia falls in love with Kerry Lorimer, her father's "mystery man." When her father also dies Patricia returns to England to her guardian. Kerry goes too, only to disappear as soon as Patricia is safe. When Patricia learns that Kerry is under suspicion of a crime committed ten years before, she refuses to believe it—and realizes that she loves him. In time Kerry's innocence is proved and when all seems going well Patricia's love of civilized life and Kerry's love of the wild places of earth cause another separation. But time and a generous lover heal this difficulty also.

"The unravelling of the mystery and the righting of old wrongs make an entertaining story, an inviting romance for those who like love tales of plausibly lifelike individuals, spiced with disasters and sweetened with homely affection—the pleasant middle path of 'normalcy.'"

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 20 '24 300w

"Margaret Pedler's new novel is dreary reading, not so much because her theme is old as because her handling of it is mediocre."

— Int Bk R p741 S '24 250w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman 21:500 Ag 4 '23 400w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p6e My 11 '24 40w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Outlook 137:443 Jl 16 '24 200w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 28 '24 380w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p534 Ag 9 '23 260w

PEDLER, MARGARET (BASS) (MRS W. G. Q. PEDLER). Waves of destiny. 288p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

24-25178

The book contains sixteen short love stories, the first of which, "Mrs Carrington's last chance" tells how a worldly widow, ambitious for social conquests, accepts the love of the wealthy young son of an English lord, but releases him from his vows when she is aware that she really loves him. Contents: Mrs Carington's last chance; The penalty; The death rocks; The little fool's wisdom; The madness of Sargenson; A dangerous woman; Grist to the mill; The straight game; The end of a rhapsody; Old sins; The letters of Rosemary; Comrades; The real thing; Akin to love; The third act; His brother's keeper.

Boston Transcript p6 D 27 '24 350w

"Each of the other stories has its good points. Mrs. Pedler has done her best in this volume." V. R. Bowker

+ Int Bk R p141 Ja '25 150w

"The sixteen short stories which make this volume are models of their particular type of fashionable fiction. It would be difficult to improve upon the construction of most of them from the standpoint of the rules so widely accepted for magazine acceptability." H. L. P.

+ — Lit R p10 N 1 '24 270w

"Good examples of tailor-made fiction: all neatly cut to fashionable magazine pattern. The workmanship is superior: its modishness is guaranteed."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:233 O 25 '24 80w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 19 '24 90w

PELSMA, JOHN REINDER. Essentials of speech. [rev ed] 326p $2 Crowell

808.5 Public speaking 24-5617

"Professor Pelsma, who is a member of the Faculty of the State Teacher's College of Pittsburg, Kan., deals first with the fundamentals of his subject, explaining the technique of speech, the reasons for the various kinds of faulty utterance and the methods by which they can be improved. He enters into all this with much care and with all the necessary detail, so that students can take the training without a teacher. In a similarly fundamental way and very practically he deals with public speaking, its essential elements, the usual faults and difficulties of the speaker and the methods by which he can improve himself.'"—N Y Times

"It is an ideal book for the student, teacher, business man, the salesman, and even the professional speaker may get a few points from this most practical book."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '24 250w

Cath World 119:862 S '24 50w

"Any one will find it useful who wishes to improve the voice and the method of using it, whether for public or private speech."

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 6 '24 300w

PENCE, RAYMOND WOODBURY, ed. Essays by present-day writers. 360p $1.60 Macmillan

824 24-27898

"About forty essays by living writers of England and America." (Outlook) The authors included are: William Beebe, Max Beerbohm, Hilaire Belloc, R. C. Benchley, Ralph Bergengren, Alexander Black, Margaret Bruening, C: S. Brooks, Heywood Broun, Thomas Burke, G. K. Chesterton, F. M. Colby, S: McChord Crothers, John Galsworthy, Ellwood Hendrick, Oliver Herford, R. C. Holliday, Burges Johnson; Winifred Kirkland, Stephen Leacock, E. V. Lucas, Robert Lynd, John Macy, Don Marquis, Brander Matthews, H. L. Mencken, A. A. Milne, Christopher Morley, G: J. Nathan, A. E: Newton, Meredith Nicholson, E. L. Pearson, W: L. Phelps, Agnes Repplier, S. P. Sherman, L. P. Smith, Simeon Strunsky, Henry van Dyke, Frances Warner, Elisabeth Woodbridge.

Reviewed by Richardson Wright

Bookm 59:742 Ag '24 320w

Boston Transcript p1 Je 14 '24 300w

Dial 77:348 O '24 70w

Ind 112:344 Je 21 '24 500w

"For the general reader the book would be of greater value if it contained some critical comment by the editor, with reference both to subject-matter and manner of treatment. In view of its purpose, Professor Pence's selection is admirable, although on such a question disagreement is inevitable." Dale Warren
+ — Lit R p953 Ag 9 '24 320w

"It is true that Professor Pence includes in his book certain serious, straightforward pieces of writing against which no exception could be taken, but often these are more in the form of short stories or literary sketches. I fear, however, for the rest, that this volume testifies only too clearly, too emphatically to the discouraging fact that a debased age given up to bourgeois and middle-class interests, and contented with such, cannot be expected to produce essays of delicacy and distinction." Llewelyn Powys
— + N Y Times p7 Je 1 '24 1150w

"A cheerful book, and one good for vacation use, as you do not need to read more than twenty pages at a time."
+ Outlook 137:578 Ag 13 '24 50w

Springf'd Republican p16 Jl 18 '24 250w

PENDERED, MARY LUCY. John Martin, painter. 318p $6 Dutton [18s Hurst & B.]

B or 92 Martin, John 24-17888

John Martin, 1789-1854, was an English painter highly renowned in his day but now almost forgotten. His themes were biblical and historical, somewhat in the manner of Gustave Doré. He was a painter of vast spaces and grandiose subjects and his pictures were crowded with detail. Kings and princes bought his paintings and lavished on him praise and presents. Among his best known pictures, engravings of which are sometimes found in the best rooms of old houses today, are Belshazzar's Feast, the Deluge, the Fall of Nineveh and the Day of Wrath. Miss Pendered's book is as much concerned with the character and strong individuality of the man as with his paintings. There are twenty illustrations, a folding map and an index.

Reviewed by Margaret Breuning
Lit R p12 S 6 '24 500w

"Miss Pendered's book is pleasantly written and worked out with considerable thoroughness; she does not allow her own great admiration of Martin to obtrude too much, but gives an excellent idea of the artistic life and celebrities of the early nineteenth century, and includes photographs of a large number of Martin's works." Angus Davidson
+ Nation and Ath 34:382 D 8 '23 240w

"The story of his life is entertainingly but somewhat diffusely told in this book."
+ — Outlook 136:650 Ap 16 '24 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p846 D 6 '23 800w

PENDEXTER, HUGH. Old Misery. 389p il $2 Bobbs

24-5198

"Here is a good old-fashioned adventurous tale dealing with California in the early fifties, handled with great attention to historical accuracy and local color. This so-called novel is, in fact, really a series of disconnected short stories, each one exciting and enthralling. At the end of the volume we learn that all these component parts have appeared in 'Adventure' and have, evidently, been rewritten as little as possible. Here they are bound together by the fact that certain characters are common to all." (Lit R) "Old Misery, from whom the tale takes its name, is vaguely reminiscent of Leather Stocking in his knowledge of Indian character and habits. There the resemblance ceases, for Old Misery is a Westerner through and through, a mountain man." (N Y Tribune)

"There is a flavor to Mr. Poindexter's recent novel that places it far above the average story of battle, murder and sudden death. None of the novelist's keenest admirers will have the temerity to claim that he has used any especial ingenuity in his plot." S. L. C.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 9 '24 700w

"The characterizations are excellent. 'Old Misery' himself is delightful, and the various episodes, especially the one in Martin's camp are thrilling and exciting."
+ Lit R p795 My 31 '24 200w

N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '24 520w

"In spite of minor defects the yarn is a good one. The author has taken considerable pains to make it accurate in historical background and characters. The latter are thoughtfully distinguished from the fictitious ones by means of an appended note." Elizabeth Wyman
+ — N Y Tribune p24 My 18 '24 600w

"Whatever charm attaches to Mr. Pendexter's style lies in its reminiscence of 'Nick Carter,' but the author is not attempting fine writing and it is enough that he leaves us with the desire to have trailed Old Misery around the California hills before Universal City perfumed the atmosphere." Malcolm Ross
+ N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 120w

PERCIVAL, ARTHUR BLAYNEY. Game ranger's note book; ed. by E. D. Cuming. 374p il $6 Doran [18s Nisbet]

799 Hunting—Africa. Zoology—Africa
24-27432

Mr Percival writes from an experience of nearly thirty years in Africa, most of which were passed in the game department of what is now the Kenya Colony. His book describes the most important species of African big game, their characteristics and habits and his adventures in hunting and shooting them. The book contains the closest of observation of animals and is filled with good hunting stories. The first hundred pages are devoted to the lion and the concluding chapter is on photographing game.

Booklist 21:139 Ja '25

"No story of wild animals has appeared in recent years, even from the most noted hunters which will appeal to the general public as more readable." F. P. H.
+ Boston Transcript p1 N 8 '24 850w

"This is a good book on a fascinating subject." S. E. White
+ Int Bk R p26 D '24 750w

"For the armchair hunter, or for one who wants the thrill of actual combat, it strikes this reader that Mr. Percival's volume of thirty years' experience at close quarters with everything from galloping lions to canoe-destroying hippopotami leaves little to be sought. It is the most hair-raising, thrill-shooting, and at the same time soul-satisfying book of this sort that this reader has found. . . Here is a hero-hunter, who is a brave man first, a sportsman second and third a man who can write about it all, with the ability to put upon paper the thrill which one experiences when a hippopotamus has opened his six-foot mouth and is about to close down again with the writer enmeshed in the process of closing. Such true adventures seldom come to print." C. R. Cooper
+ Lit R p4 N 8 '24 1900w

"It is to be sincerely hoped that this book, one of the best on its subject, will increase the photographers rather than the hunters."
+ New Statesman 24:sup7 O 11 '24 180w

"The modestly-written account of the observations of a clear-eyed and keen-minded sportsman, whose thorough acquaintance with a vast but diminishing fauna has been gained by years of close contact—frequently much too close for complete enjoyment." L. S. Crandall
+ N Y Tribune p16 D 7 '24 500w

PERCIVAL, ARTHUR BLAYNEY—Continued

"Mr Percival has succeeded admirably in striking the happy medium between the excessive use of the personal pronoun and the too drastic elimination thereof which is almost equally distressing. His chapters on lions are particularly interesting." Kermit Roosevelt

+ Sat R of Lit 1:346 D 6 '24 550w

Spec 133:784 N 22 '24 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p621 O 9 '24 350w

PERCY, WILLIAM ALEXANDER. Enzio's kingdom, and other poems. 140p $1.50 Yale univ. press

811 24-3556

The collection contains one long poem from which the book takes its title. Enzio, informed of the death of his father, King Frederick of Sardinia, soliloquizes upon the glory and power of that most imperial of emperors, whom he dearly loved. The other poems, many of which have been previously published in magazines, are mostly lyrics. There are several sketches that show the poet's love of nature, while a letter from John Keats to Fanny Brawne completes the collection.

"His sense of form is crude and he overwrites, yet in spite of these failings there is always apparent that constant touch that is authentic and that constrains the reader to pray fervently for the time, the place, and the technique all together. When Mr. Percy does hit upon those moments he is apt to produce more distinguished matter than many a more finished poet." H. S. Gorman

— + Bookm 59:468 Je '24 170w

"Taking this book of Mr. Percy as a whole, we may say of it what may be said of too few others, 'It lives!' There is about it an air of an indefinable something which lifts it from the level of the ordinary to the realms of lasting verse. It is one of the best books of poetry of the year." K. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 30 '24 700w

"There are tenderness and delicacy in much of the work; there is evidence of fine feeling and of fine taste; but only very rarely is there a truly memorable line."

+ — Lit R p584 Mr 8 '24 300w

PEREZ DE AYALA, RAMON. Fox's paw (La pata de la raposa); tr. into English by Thomas Walsh. 314p $2.50 Dutton

24-22265

The introductory note describes this novel as the third of a tetralogy in which the Spanish novelist takes as his theme the development of a modern Spaniard from school days to maturity. "The Fox's Paw" shows Albert in his early manhood, a young artist adrift, unable to fit himself into the society in which he has been brought up and seeking new and more worthy motives in life. "In these novels Ayala shows the whole coherent process by which, in his view of things, Spain fails to utilize the genius it creates in such great abundance. . . He chooses, in most of his novels, to analyze modern Spanish life from the viewpoint of education."

Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '24 550w

"It need hardly be said that the book is one of the best that has come from Ayala's pen. That it will be warmly welcomed by English readers there seems no reason to doubt; and it is to be hoped it will create a demand for more of this writer's work." E. B. Smith

+ Lit R p14 O 11 '24 520w

Reviewed by W. L. Fichter

Nation 119:683 D 17 '24 520w

"The novel has little of dramatic effectiveness, that being, it would seem, a thing the author has sedulously avoided. There are charm, a certain delicacy of touch and perception and no little interest in the point of view which makes it possible to speak without irony of the 'noble serenity' of such a hero as Albert."

N Y Times p14 S 21 '24 800w

"To be successful, this theme is one which requires a treatment at once poetic and psychological, and this Don Ramón de Ayala has accomplished in a quite extraordinary way. The bewilderment of the artist mind, paralyzed by the struggle between impulse and reason, and distrustful of its entire intellectual heritage, is very poignantly told." H: Beston

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 5 '24 620w

"Ramón Pérez de Ayala is not a great novelist, perhaps; but he is a substantial and honest writer in this age of small and intimidated men, and he possesses beside an exceptional variety of talents, an upright, inquisitive, an protestant mind. These are the qualities of permanence, though they do not make for immediate honor or excessive personal popularity." W: A. Drake

Sat R of Lit 1:343 D 6 '24 680w

PERKINS, MRS LUCY (FITCH). Colonial twins ^{2} of Virginia. 205p il $1.75 Houghton

24-28337

A new volume of Lucy Fitch Perkin's famous Twin series. The scenes are laid in the Virginia of the revolutionary days when pirates swarmed the seas. Tom and Beatrix Burwell and their cousin Archie Russell have an exciting encounter with some pirates from whose ship they rescue a valuable heirloom, and thus uphold the motto of the house of Burwell, "Virtus omnia vincit." The book is charmingly illustrated with pencil studies of childhood by the author.

Booklist 21:159 Ja '25

"A fine tale."

+ N Y World p9e D 21 '24 100w

"The story is not as stirring as one feels it ought to be. Perhaps the shadow of information falls too heavily across the pages, as it does in the case of so many holiday juveniles. The illustrations are plentiful and the author-artist is at her best in these simple pencil studies of childhood."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:420 D 27 '24 140w

PERRIN, CLYDE, pseud. Green scarf. 323p $2 McClurg

24-4698

Tommy Cass leaves college with the determination to earn his green scarf—a symbol of distinction worn by Mohammedans upon the completion of a successful journey to Mecca. He starts his business career at the foot of the ladder, launching out as a ten-dollar-a-week clerk for John W. Burroughs, paint manufacturer. In the office he meets the trim and business-like Anne Manard under whose tutelage Tommy learns the principles of business. His trials are many, one involving him in a serious strike. But Tommy fights valiantly and finally rises out of his difficulties as the owner of the Champion paint and varnish company with Anne Manard for a life partner. The green scarf was his.

"It is, at least, a fairly innocuous form of popular romance."

Lit R p811 Je 7 '24 130w

"The story is not only entertaining but is stimulating in its idealism. If these things are dreams, let us pray that the dreams come true."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 200w

PERRY, LAWRENCE. Touchdowns. (Fair play ser.) 264p $1.75 Scribner

24-22567

The six autumn sport stories contained in this book will warm the heart of all graduate players. They are all in the vein of some traditional foot-ball story ending with glorious victory, and having for a background some love or business theme. The first story tells of how young Jogger's last chance to play for his team brings victory and honor to Princeton, himself, and his mother to whom, by the way, the Tiger was indebted for some fine points of the game. Contents: The son of his mother; David Harmon's quarter-back; The coach at old Magenta; Man to man; "14-22-34"; Sentiment.

Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '24 280w

"To read Mr. Perry is not to have a comfortable seat on the sidelines, it is equivalent almost to the sharp personal contact of the game." Hugo Sonnenschein
+ Lit R p11 O 18 '24 300w

N Y Times p16 N 2 '24 310w

"It cannot be said that Mr. Perry writes fine literature. It cannot be said that he has style or subtlety. But it can and must be said that he knows football as few men do, that he has a passion for it and can transmit much of that passion in crisp, direct narration that bring Ralph Barbour up to date."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:211 O 18 '24 130w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 21 '24 130w

PERRY, WILLIAM JAMES. Origin of magic and religion. 212p $2.50 Dutton [6s Methuen]

290 Immortality. Religion, Primitive. Magic [24-13844]

A study of the beginnings of religion and of magical beliefs and practices which shows how our remote ancestors faced the eternal questions of life and death. In particular it deals with the ideas connected with the life to come which led men from the ends of the earth in search of the Earthly Paradise where immortal life and eternal youth were to be enjoyed and thus influenced a world-wide spread of culture. The idea of immortality is revealed as the direct outcome of the Egyptian practice of mummification.

Bookm 60:adv O '24 100w

"This study of comparative religion is a fascinating one, whether one agrees with all these conclusions or not." T. C. R.
Boston Transcript p6 Je 28 '24 300w

J Religion 4:553 S '24 70w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 41:235 Ja 21 '25 500w

"Mr. Perry's theories are so attractive that many people with meagre knowledge of anthropology have acclaimed them as proven; we hear of the 'New Ethnology' which has 'so revolutionised the older principles that they virtually disappear, and the new historical method reigns in their stead.' No one will suffer more from such irresponsible talk than Mr. Perry, to whom great respect is due for much that he has written. It is no discredit to him that he would gladly help in the warfare against war; but the very excellence of his aim demands the closest scrutiny of his weapons of attack. As a complement to this criticism we must add that some of Mr. Perry's work has been very interesting, even to scientists."
— + New Statesman 23:48 Ap 19 '24 450w

N Y Tribune p26 Ag 10 '24 180w

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley
Outlook 138:334 O 29 '24 850w

PERTWEE, ROLAND. Treasure trail. 346p $2.50 Knopf

Vernon Winslowe, beloved of all his friends because of his generous spirit, rises in mutiny against those who by having cleverly played on his sympathy, stripped him of a good round fortune. He deliberately plans to swindle others and so retrieve his lost fortune. The method he uses is an enticing ad in the Agony column calling for adventurers for a South Sea treasure hunt—with possibilities of a great fortune! From the avalanche of letters in answer to this alluring call, he chooses eight at random, and tho the crew which embarked on the Mascot was a singularly commonplace one, the spirit of adventure ran high. Of course, there was no treasure and thruout the voyage Vernon's conscience pricked him quite frequently—but even before the good ship touched the promised isle, everyone on board had discovered another kind of treasure—that which moth and rust could not corrupt.

"The tale is interesting and well written, with several dramatic scenes and more than one exciting moment. A leisurely, delightful romance, an alluring game of 'Let's pretend' arranged for people of any and all ages who still have in their hearts the spirit of youth."
+ N Y Times p14 O 19 '24 540w

"The author has given a vivid and sympathetic portrayal of the various characters, and the humorous style in which the book is written makes it pleasant reading."
+ N Y World p9e Ja 11 '25 220w

"About half-way through 'Treasure Trail' you wake up to find yourself sold for a mess of Pollyanna dialectic when you had been counting on pirates. For the rest of the book you keep on protesting that Mr. Pertwee isn't playing the game fair."
— Sat R of Lit 1:231 O 25 '24 440w

PETERKIN, MRS JULIA E. Green Thursday. 188p $2.50 Knopf

24-22568

Short stories all about negro plantation life in the South. The same characters appear in almost every story, Killdee and his wife Rose, and their children and Missie, the little girl they took to bring up. The patient struggle against poverty and disaster is evident in each story, lightened by the kindheartedness of the long suffering Killdee. Contents: Ashes; Green Thursday; Missie; Meeting; Mount Pleasant; Finding peace; The red rooster; Teaching Jim; Cat fish; Son; A Sunday; Plum-blossoms.

Booklist 21:153 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p4 N 1 '24 880w

Cleveland p86 N '24

"Haunting stories hauntingly told, and the first assembled collection of Mrs. Peterkin's excellent work." Dora Mulkins
+ Int Bk R p138 Ja '25 400w

"Mrs. Peterkin has shown herself in 'Green Thursday' as a literary artist, without any prejudice except the saving artistic predilection for unity and coherent form."
+ N Y Times p8 S 28 '24 630w

Reviewed by Margery Latimer
N Y Tribune p8 D 14 '24 550w

"The stories are pastorals, exquisitely wrought, of Negro farm life. 'Green Thursday' is peasant literature, just as much as is the Norman work of de Maupassant. I think it is great American work." Laurence Stallings
+ N Y World p8e N 16 '24 850w

"Although the author does not always manifest a mastery of the mechanics of writing and although she has a habit of irritating the reader by her jerky, staccato sentences, yet she has such control of her subject-matter that in several of the stories, and notably in the one from which the book takes its title, she achieves that genuine and compelling emotional effect which is one of the tests of good story-telling."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:186 O 11 '24 160w

PETERS, CHARLES CLINTON. Foundations
2 of educational sociology. 447p $2.50 Macmillan

370.1 Education. Sociology 24-15080

"The imposing title of Professor Peter's book may discourage all who are not fervidly academic from turning its pages. Reduced to its simplest terms, this volume discusses the reasons why boys and girls go to school. In the first part of his book Dr. Peters gives a detailed account of the various educational principles which are proven factors in determining

PETERS, C: C.—Continued
the lives of American boys and girls. He then takes up methods for determining scientifically the objectives of school education."—Boston Transcript

"The book is well written and adapted to text-book use by the inclusion of bibliographies and suggestive lists of research problems at the end of each chapter. It is worthy of wide reading among sociologists and will find a useful place as an introductory text in schools of education." W. R. Smith
+ Am J Soc 30:361 N '24 480w
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 19 '24 600w

"The book is perhaps the most complete and serious attempt that has been made up to this time to formulate the field of educational sociology." H. Y. McClusky
+ — School R 32:715 N '24 1050w

PETERS, LULU HUNT. Diet for children (and adults) and the kalorie kids. 313p il $2 Dodd
613.2 Diet. Children—Nutrition 24-7095

The book is addressed particularly to mothers, but it has a wider application because the proper diet for growing children is also the foundation diet for the adult members of the family. Dr Peters first lays down the general principles of diet. Next she gives directions for feeding infants and children after two and a half years of age, with menus. Part three gives the diet to be used in the different diseases of childhood. Part four deals with food poisonings and how to avoid them, with bad food combinations and with the dietary properties of different foods.

Booklist 20:328 Je '24

"Popular in tone, sensible, embracing, one cannot long withstand the book's persuasiveness."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 28 '24 180w

"This is a practical book and should be helpful in aiding parents to feed their children properly and to understand the various elements that go into food and their part in nutrition."
Outlook 136:748 Ap 30 '24 150w
Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 50w

PETRARCH, FRANCESCO. Life of solitude; tr. ² with introd. and notes by Jacob Zeitlin. 316p $5 Univ. of Ill. press
242 Solitude 24-28714

"As an illustration both of Petrarch's manner and of his enlightened intelligence Mr. Zeitlin has translated his discourse on the 'Life of Solitude,' a really important addition to our scanty stock of English versions of humanist literature. The book was composed originally in 1346, while its author was spending Lent in his beloved Vaucluse. It was addressed as a letter to the local Bishop of Cavaillon, a friend and quondam visitor at Vaucluse. It is in fact a eulogy, in easy, epistolary style, of the life of seclusion as contrasted with the life of palaces or cities."—N Y Tribune

"Although the argument is weakly bolstered up and the thread of discourse wanders feebly about, frequently losing itself in a labyrinth of matter not pertinent and an elaborate and excessive piling up of historic examples of the solitary life, there is yet enough individuality to this treatise to charm the modern reader and persuade him to the end. Any one, therefore, who imagines 'The Life of Solitude' to be a dull and pedantic affair of archaic theological arguments and refutations will be mistaken."
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 4 '25 2000w
Reviewed by L. R. Loomis
N Y Tribune p4 Ja 18 '25 1050w

"Petrarch wrote for scholars in the language of scholars; and his own ideas, when he expresses them, are so thickly overlaid with decorous circumlocution and rhetorical decoration, with concessions of every kind to orthodoxy, tradition and all the conventions of the learned, that even the few who profess to have read his book in modern times are not agreed as to what he meant by it. Mr. Zeitlin simplifies the problem by his translation and disposes of it in his careful and scholarly introduction."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p883 D 25 '24 600w

PETRIE, SIR WILLIAM MATTHEW FLINDERS. Religious life in ancient Egypt. 231p il $2 Houghton [6s Constable]
299.31 Egypt—Religion 24-26944

"In writing the present volume the author has confined himself to the part that the religion of the primitive peoples in the valley of the Nile played in their daily life. He has abstained from entering into either their theology or their beliefs and has confined himself to describing the influence of their religion as it shaped and influenced their social life. Beginning with the nature gods, which first received the devotions of the Egyptians, Mr. Petrie traces in chronological sequence the appearance of other deities that came to play an important part in the dynasties that ruled the land from the earliest to the comparatively recent eras."—Lit R

Booklist 21:92 D '24
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 23 '24 550w
Reviewed by Robert Hillyer
Ind 113:402 N 15 '24 250w

"Mr. Petrie writes with the firm hand of the scholar who knows his subject and who also is familiar with the discoveries that have been made by his co-workers in the same field. The result is a volume which is both interesting and instructive and will be welcomed by all who are interested in this subject." E. B. S.
+ Lit R p971 Ag 16 '24 200w
Reviewed by J: Carter
N Y Times p12 S 14 '24 800w
N Y Tribune p10 O 19 '24 130w
N Y World p6e S 21 '24 160w
Outlook 138:182 O 1 '24 70w

"Told in a simple straightforward manner that is at once readable and authoritative."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 26 '24 700w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p421 Jl 3 '24 40w

PFISTER, OSKAR ROBERT. Love in children and its aberrations; tr. from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. 576p $7.50 Dodd [24s Allen & U.]
130 Psychoanalysis. Love. Child study. Children—Management and training 24-11772

The author's purpose is to help parents and teachers to bring about the right development of love in children. Beginning with a history of the nature of love as treated by the philosophers, from earliest times to the present, and a sketch of love in children as treated in educational science, he goes on to study the normal and abnormal development of love in children, its psychology, the training of this love into right channels and the treatment of love's disorders. The book is illustrated with many cases from the author's experience.

Reviewed by E. v. B. Hansl
Bookm 59:739 Ag '24 200w
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '24 400w

"It is professedly 'a book for parents and teachers,' and in view of the way in which it is written we need not quarrel with that description. Nevertheless, we are by no means confident that the average parent or teacher will be a better parent or teacher for having read what the undoubtedly wise Dr. Pfister has to say."
New Statesman 22:582 F 23 '24 350w
Spec 132:608 Ap 12 '24 270w

PHELPS, EDITH M., and JOHNSEN, JULIA E., eds. University debaters' annual. 425p $2.25 Wilson, H.W.

374 Debating

This Annual contains reports of intercollegiate debates on the following subjects: Unemployment insurance; Soldiers' bonus; Compulsory arbitration of labor disputes in public utilities; French occupation of the Ruhr valley; Light wines and beer; Excess profits tax; Restriction of power of Supreme court to declare federal statutes unconstitutional; Organized labor in politics; League of nations. Briefs and a selected bibliography accompany each debate.

Booklist 20:200 Mr '24

"Our American college debates are worked up most thoroughly, so that this handbook really contains a remarkable amount of information. One or two of the topics, like 'organized labor in politics,' and 'restriction of power of Supreme Court,' are a little too large for comprehensive discussion. The expression in these debates particularly is quite arid—the speeches being those of young men who have just so many fleeting minutes to state a huge case and who fire off facts and arguments with the speed and mechanical clatter of a machine gun."

+ — Lit R p432 Ja 5 '24 160w

Survey 52:638 S 15 '24 30w

Wis Lib Bul 20:22 Ja '24

PHELPS, RUTH SHEPARD. Italian silhouettes; with an introd. by Ernest H. Wilkins. 227p $2.50 Knopf

850.4 Italian literature—History and criticism

The men and women portrayed in these essays are moderns, most of them contemporary Italians. Among them are several writers loved by Italians but little known outside of Italy. Contents: Giosuè Carducci; Giovanni Pascoli; Annie Vivanti; Guido Gozzano's book of youth; The poet in Papini; Ada Negri; Pirandello's plays; Renato Fucini; Amalia Guglielminetti; A Neapolitan sonneteer; Alfredo Panzini; Sibilla Aleramo; Renato Serra.

Booklist 21:144 Ja '25

"Her volume has, in addition to its value for students of Italian literature, a charm and an interest which will recommend it to all who care for the pleasant dissemination of knowledge and the charm of enthusiasm." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 113:400 N 15 '24 400w

"There is hardly a figure in the book that might not have been better familiarized to the reader by a more extended and intensive treatment. Yet there is much here for which one may be properly grateful. There is a clarity in the presentation of the genius and achievement of the various personages involved in Miss Phelps's scheme which is admirable and which conveys most clearly the essential personality of the Italian writers."

+ — N Y Times p5 O 26 '24 2100w

N Y World p9e O 19 '24 50w

N Y World p9e D 21 '24 450w

PHELPS, WILLIAM LYON. As I like it; second series. 282p $2 Scribner

814 Books and reading 24-25128

This is the second series of articles written by Prof Phelps, which appeared in Scribner's magazine from September, 1923, to August, 1924. They are primarily a discussion and criticism of books with an occasional digression into other fields of interest.

Booklist 21:144 Ja '25

Cleveland p69 S '24

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice

N Y Times p7 N 30 '24 500w

"It is because his mind never closes, and because of the gusto which illuminates it, that Professor Phelps is able to write a book so remarkable as this—a sort of American Bayeux Tapestry of literary gestes and jolly instances." G. H. Carson

+ N Y Tribune p9 O 19 '24 660w

"Prof Phelps's sense of humor has made him a publicly useful prophet of literature in a philistine land—or, at least, among college graduates and undergraduates. But is it not fair to exact of a professor of literature a sense of proportion as well? The desultory rambling chronicle and comment of 'As I Like It' were meant for a magazine department and have little utility outside it."

— + Springf'd Republican p6 N 17 '24 180w

PHELPS, WILLIAM LYON. Howells, James, Bryant, and other essays. 206p il $2 Macmillan

810.4 American literature—History and criticism. Authors, American 24-8587

Essays on seven American writers—Bryant, Whitman, Thoreau, Lowell, James, Howells and Harriet Beecher Stowe. The essays are both biographical and critical.

Booklist 21:62 N '24

Bookm 59:745 Ag '24 170w

Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '24 1050w

Dial 78:78 Ja '25 60w

"Mr. Phelps's books, like those of Howells in bygone years, are likely to be found where there is an open fire and a reading lamp. They make for sweetness and light—phenomena not always appreciated by the moderns of any period, but sure in the end to receive recognition." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p14 My 4 '24 170w

Outlook 138:102 S 17 '24 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:373 Jl '24

St Louis p350 O '24

Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 27 '24 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 19 '24 30w

PHILIPPE, CHARLES LOUIS. A simple story; from the French by Agnes Kendrick Gray. 196p il $2.50 Knopf

24-4618

"Like everything that Philippe wrote, this novel is composed of the simplest elements. It is the story of an old village blacksmith reduced by age, failing eyesight and the remorseless disintegration of a neglected body to destitution and finally suicide. Out of this humble and commonplace tragedy, Philippe has written the drama of poverty, in which there are tears but not a trace of maudlin sentiment."—Publisher's note

Booklist 20:340 Je '24

"It is a story of extraordinary singleness of thought and expression. Its purity of form is not disfigured by superfluities; every phrase, every gesture, is harmonious; every step forward inevitable." Eva Goldbeck

+ Lit R p899 Jl 19 '24 500w

"A story which by the justness and precision of its art becomes a classic."

+ New Repub 38:266 Ap 30 '24 120w

"There is no sentimentalism in the book. All is simply stated and unaffectedly presented. Frans Masereel is already known to American art lovers and the series of woodcuts which he has added to this book is a further testimonial to his genius and unique qualities as an artist." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p7 F 24 '24 650w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 20w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

PHILLIPS, GORDON (LUCIO, pseud.). Brighter intervals. 192p $2 Holt [5s Nisbet]
827

"Lucio" of Punch and the Manchester Guardian is the writer of these humorous trifles in prose and verse on such diverse topics as salad-making, catching cold, the need for a golfers' trade union, automatic machines, the admirable qualities of the daddy-long-legs, etc.

Lit R p10 D 27 '24 150w

"Mr. Phillips, in the volume at hand, gives a number of his verses, but he has done better things in this field. Over his pen-name of 'Lucio,' bitterly and cleverly satirical pieces have appeared in the columns of The Manchester Guardian. The choice for this book seems to have been limited by a desire to remain non-political." H. J. Mankiewicz
— + N Y Times p12 N 2 '24 520w

"'Brighter Intervals' is rich in variety, fashioned with the precise touch of cultivated semi-lunacy that makes the best English humor so regaling. We ourselves would rather read 'this sort of thing' than any quantum of 'significant books.'"
+ Sat R of Lit 1:251 N 1 '24 600w
Spec 132:130 Ja 26 '24 170w

PHILLIPS, HENRY ALBERT. Other people's lives. 389p $2 Boni & Liveright
24-7316

Duncan Wyatt finds that the "leading of other people's lives" may be an idealistic theory but an unhappy practicality, involving many complications. Young and full of the spirit of reforming, Duncan marries little Cynthia Burell. Helpless child that she is, she receives the full brunt of her husband's ideas. Not satisfied with converting her he attacks with his favorite slogan the entire Westminister estates, a community where the residents buy their homes on the instalment plan. Drawn into this suburbia, matters become complicated and others follow Duncan in sowing discontent. Yet they all believe they are idealists. Finally comes the crash of ideals, house and job for Duncan. From the débris, Duncan gathers the necessary courage to enable Cynthia and him to live as they desire—and let others do likewise.

"Through what crises of suburban rivalries and jealousies and even scandals the Wyatts go before the knowledge comes to Duncan, is told with that keenness of inward vision which, seeing all, and hence understanding—sympathizes." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '24 650w

Reviewed by J. M. Dorey
Lit R p851 Je 28 '24 600w

"The characters are shallow, hackneyed, and inconsequential; the book is—to scale."
— Nation 118:591 My 21 '24 80w

"Mr. Phillips, though this appears to be his first book, is already a skillful player with a deadly aim. His bowls go rumbling fast and furious, and do not cease till 'community feeling,' 'naborliness' and a good many other amenities with which real estate agents juggle, are lying in an untidy wreck."
+ N Y Times p8 Ap 13 '24 700w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Tribune p27 My 4 '24 1100w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 450w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Cheat-the-boys. 329p $2.25 Macmillan
24-2250

Gilyan, the lovely heroine of this story of the Devonshire orchards had by her inconstancies gained the name of "Cheat-the-boys," after the cider apple that looks so lovely and turns out so sharp. In spite of her name all men desired her. She chose the wealthiest among her lovers, Warner Lidstone, but had an immediate change of heart when his cousin Harold appeared on the scene. By deception she gained her desire and married Harold. Warner stood the blow manfully, forgiving both, and after a while turned to Betsy Neck, Gilyan's cousin and steadfast friend, who had always loved him. But when Gilyan's husband died and she was once more free, Warner's passion returned and Betsy, seeing the struggle going on within her lover, made way for Gilyan as she had done before. The tragedy with which the story ends has also an ironic twist.

Booklist 20:266 Ap '24
Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '24 1450w
Cleveland p24 Mr '24
Dial 77:347 O '24 100w

"The writing is almost too even. It betrays inattention to the urgency of life. This is the defect of the school to which Phillpotts belongs, just as its virtue (which he makes his own) is unstinted, satisfying craftsmanship." Stella Heilbrunn
+ — Int Bk R p554 Je '24 330w
Lit R p599 Mr 15 '24 320w
Nation 119:343 O 1 '24 40w

"It is a leisurely tale, with a certain mellow quality in its very leisureliness . . . interesting and sympathetically told."
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 27 '24 1100w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World F 10 '24 420w

"We admit with regret that 'Cheat-the-Boys' by no means measures up to the earlier books."
— Outlook 136:399 Mr 5 '24 120w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:294 Je '24
Sat R 137:274 Mr 15 '24 50w

"Cheat-the-Boys is a book that will repay anyone who has time and patience to spend on it."
+ — Spec 132:429 Mr 15 '24 270w
Springf'd Republican p9a My 4 '24 390w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p174 Mr 20 '24 400w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Cherry-stones. 69p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d G. Richards]
821 24-3102

"Mr. Phillpotts here carves his cherry stones with pictures in verse. He sings of the changing seasons in English woodland and wold, of the creatures of the forest and the heath, of an old woman at the fair, of life's grim humor and futility."—Publisher's note

Booklist 20:292 My '24

"'Cherry Stones' is too modest a title for these verses. Most of the poems possess the virtues of brevity and pungency—many of them are worth retaining in the memory."
+ — Bookm 59:475 Je '24 100w
Dial 77:347 O '24 100w
Ind 112:107 F 16 '24 300w

"Admittedly beautiful, quotable lines, here and there, star the murky dullness of this infirm collection; reprove us with a number of fine, even threatening gestures."
— + Lit R p764 My 17 '24 130w

"Unpretentious, uninspired verse."
— Nation 118:566 My 14 '24 10w

"'Singer Unknown' is in its way a perfect little poem, but for the awkward first line of the second verse; and 'Carving a Netsuke' an excellent and simple confession of faith." V. Sackville-West
+ Nation and Ath 34:549 Ja 12 '24 50w

"The fifty poems which make up the contents are for the few rather than for the many; but by those few they will be greatly prized."
+ N Y Times p11 F 24 '24 1250w
Outlook 136:402 Mr 5 '24 170w

"Mr. Eden Phillpotts continues in the modest vein which he has made his own. He compares his art to the carving of cherry-stones, but he is not really content to be only decorative; humanity is a common ingredient of his poems. He is always readable and sometimes memorable. The best example is the descriptive piece called 'Cider Makers,' a gallant theme which has waited long for a modern singer." Edgell Rickword

+ Spec 132:210 F 9 '24 70w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Human boy's diary. 188p $2 Macmillan [6s Heinemann]

24-7952

All Medlands had the diary habit, so when Teddy Medland went to Merivale school his father gave him a diary, hoping he would carry on the family tradition. The first thing Teddy discovered was that tho Merivale school was supposed to be a private school there was really "nothing whatever private about it." He was forced to keep his precious diary in Willoughby's room. Willoughby was the sixth form boy for whom Teddy was fag and who planned to return to India when he finished school and revolutionize the civil service. Then there were others who figured largely in the diary; Weston, who was of a naturalistic turn of mind and kept caterpillars in his desk to watch their habits; Briggs who wrote poetry and sold it to the other boys to tide himself over periods of financial depression and Blount from the Australian bush who was always in trouble. At the end of the year the family decided that the diary was a great success.

Booklist 21:31 O '24

"The book lacks the vitality and exuberance of the few great boys' books, but for all that it is a capital performance."

+ — Bookm 60:507 D '24 100w

Cleveland p91 D '24

"A very human book it is, and one that is likely to be appreciated by all who have ever been boys or the friends of boys. Yet one can hardly say that it is likely to take a high place among Mr. Phillpotts's collected works. It is written for the most part interestingly, sometimes amusingly, and always with a good knowledge of youthful psychology; yet one cannot put it down without feeling that the author has somehow failed to infuse into it a certain element of vitality for which a very few books about boys are memorable."

+ — Int Bk R p826 O '24 380w

Lit R p874 Jl 5 '24 240w

"There is not a trace of effort, not a trace of professionalism; it is all sheer pleasure, a pleasure which author and reader seem equally to share." Forrest Reid

+ Nation and Ath 35:210 My 17 '24 260w

"The psychology is always that of a boy, and the result is one of the few good school stories in the language. All schoolboys should enjoy it, and it is the duty of all schoolmasters to read it."

+ New Statesman 23:264 Je 7 '24 180w

"It is a mildly amusing little volume, this new book of Mr. Phillpotts's, the sort of thing one can imagine him as doing for a kind of holiday task. It is of course shrewd, observant, deftly handled, with many humorous moments and more than a little of clever comment skillfully implied."

+ N Y Times p9 My 4 '24 450w

"It is all very much in the accustomed manner and with nothing of the divine spark."

— + N Y Tribune p24 Jl 13 '24 180w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Outlook 137:362 Jl 2 '24 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p266 My 1 '24 450w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Lavender dragon. 200p $2.25 Macmillan [6s G. Richards]

24-3714

A piece of social allegory written in playful mood. Sir Jasper de Pomeroy and his squire, George Pipkin, in search of knightly adventure, set forth to free the hamlet of Pongley-in-the-Marsh of a melancholy scourge in the shape of a dragon of formidable proportions who from time to time descended on the village and bore off its most desirable citizens. What is Sir Jasper's surprise when he tracks the Lavender Dragon to his lair to find that he is a most kindly monster with a perfect command of "good, nervous English" and his domain a happy isle where the people whom he was supposed to have devoured are living in peace and content—a veritable Utopia. Instead of killing the dragon, Sir Jasper settles down as his faithful follower, marries the lovely maiden whose loss Pongley most mourned, and spends his time in philosophic discussion with L. D. who is an advanced thinker and a complete rationalist.

Booklist 20:340 Je '24

"The book is a pleasant, slightly saccharine, and fanciful little sermon for a quiet hour."

+ — Lit R p793 My 31 '24 220w

"Mr. Phillpott's arrow, though sharpened with an exquisite imagination, loses much as it leaves the bow. For one thing, such a grotesquerie should possess the indefinable charm of a work like 'Peter Pan'; it should also be touched fairly glamourously by humour; but there is, alas! scant relief in this flavoring accent."

— + N Y Times p8 F 3 '24 720w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Ja 27 '24 480w

Outlook 136:440 Mr 12 '24 10w

"Mr. Eden Phillpott's dragon is as fragrant in his philosophy as in his person. The air for miles around him is pervaded with the smell of lavender, and when he is moved to grief each tear he sheds is a quart of the purest lavender water. . . Mr. Phillpotts is quite amusing in his lighter mood; but he cannot long sustain it." Gerald Bullett

+ Spec 131:906 D 8 '23 420w

"A delightfully amusing fantasy which also has a pointed moral. . . The author's general philosophizing through the mouth of the mythical monster is very entertaining. The narrative emphasizes once more the versatility and mature art of Mr Phillpotts."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 16 '24 500w

"The author has ingeniously constructed a story of medieval chivalry, and humorously saddled it with a philosophy that is modern. Condemning the solemn and tedious, though more usual, devices of allegory, he has availed himself to the full of the possibilities for humour inherent in the method of moralizing adopted by the sober author of the 'Magnanime Mensonge.' The interviews of the knight, Sir Jasper, with the philosophically minded Dragon are as droll in effect as the delicious incongruities in Turpin's history of 'the War with Ferracute and of Orlando's admirable Dispute with him.' "

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p818 N 29 '23 420w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Redcliff. 477p $2.50 Macmillan

24-22272

" 'Redcliff' offers, rather than a continued story, a varied sequence of tales. It is a coast village of Devon which furnishes the scene of events. The love of the young folk, the gossip and wisdom of their elders, the going out of the fishermen, the waiting of the wives, these and the big and little incidents of the passing time furnish Mr. Phillpotts with this matter. Not a book for hurried reading, this 'Redcliff.' A volume to take up at any time of day and read as much and as far as one will."—N Y World

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz

Int Bk R p66 D '24 350w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN—Continued

"It is all so human. The story has no feverish straining after effect, but moves smoothly along the line of the inevitable. It should please many readers." J. J. McLaughlin

+ Lit R p14 N 8 '24 280w

"It is a big book, largely planned, rich in material, and rich in the beauty of its background." Forrest Reid

+ Nation and Ath 36:306 N 22 '24 600w

"In 'Redcliff' may be found the quiet humor, the love of the English countryside in all its moods, and the eye for character, which are typically Phillpottsian. For the most part the story moves with a leisurely pace. There is always plenty of time for things to happen and never any nervousness, any jerkiness, any attempt to skin the surface of events and scrape the bare bones of reality."

+ N Y Times p8 O 19 '24 650w

"A long, intricate and flavorless exposition of life in an English fishing village, relieved here and there by flashes of excellent description, is this latest work of Eden Phillpotts. It offers the same stimulus as lukewarm tea taken with a good deal of milk and sugar."

— N Y Tribune p16 D 7 '24 280w

N Y World p8e O 12 '24 150w

PICKETT, SARAH ELIZABETH. American national Red cross; its origin, purposes, and service. 210p il 50c Century

361 Red cross [23-18048]

"A simple, authoritative account of the society's origin, purposes, and services, sold at the cost of publication; includes description of the dietitians' service in the Army and Navy during the war and its permanent reserve of 2,589 women trained in home economics; also the present broader nutrition service which carries on educational and preventive work in time of peace."—J Home Econ

"Miss Pickett is to be commended for setting forth her case in an interesting way."

— + Boston Transcript p3 F 2 '24 380w

J Home Econ 16:95 F '24 60w

Survey 52:120 Ap 15 '24 120w

PIEPENBRING, CHARLES. Historical Jesus; tr. from the French by Lilian A. Clare. 224p $2.25 Macmillan [7s 6d Allen & U.]

232 Jesus Christ 25-588

The work of a French Protestant theologian, the book is an account of the ministry and teaching of Jesus based on the higher criticism of the Gospels.

Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '24 110w

"This is a modest but effective presentation of a view which is becoming almost orthodox."

New Statesman 23:580 Ag 23 '24 250w

"It is a scholarly work reflecting the spirit and temper of the most advanced European thought. Yet it is difficult even for so critical a work as this to bring forward much that is both new and sure. The subject has already been treated exhaustively."

Springf'd Republican p10 O 21 '24 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p491 Ag 7 '24 130w

PIERCE, FREDERICK. Mobilizing the midbrain; the technique for utilizing its latent power. 259p $3 Dutton

131 Autosuggestion. Mental hygiene 24-4877

The author, a practising psychologist, presents a method which he has worked out experimentally to prevent the development of neurosis, to raise the resistance of the body against the effects of fatigue and infections and to increase the capacity of the people who use it. The method is based on a combination of psychoanalysis, endocrinology and autosuggestion. The book is devoted in the main to an advanced method of autosuggestion, illustrated by many cases dealt with in the author's own clinical experience.

Booklist 20:321 Je '24

Reviewed by Hulsey Cason

New Repub 40:51 S 10 '24 500w

"The author of this book is, undoubtedly, a sincere, ardent and very capable student of the possibilities and the methods of turning to practical account those psychic powers possessed by what psychologists call the unconscious mind."

+ N Y Times p21 Mr 23 '24 800w

"A system worth trying for releasing and directing one's latent mental energy."

+ N Y Tribune p22 Je 15 '24 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:347 Jl '24

Pratt p8 summer '24

PIERREFEU, JEAN DE. Plutarch lied; tr. from the French by Jeffery E. Jeffery. 307p $2.50 Knopf

940.4 European war, 1914-1919—Campaigns. European war, 1914-1919—Strategy. European war, 1914-1919—France 24-1095

The Frenchman who wrote this book was attached to the French General staff during the war and had the task of writing the official communiqués. He maintains that the history of the war as written today depends upon material that has a military origin and that the truth, tho not entirely omitted, is so cleverly concealed as not to be discovered at first sight. His book is an indictment of the superstition of military genius. He goes thru the engagements of the war to discover whether there is such a thing as an art of warfare, and whether the victories were won by superior generalship or by chance and weight of numbers. By such analysis he purposes to demolish the legends of the Great war before they have become permanently fixed in history.

"The exposition of such a thesis requires much graphic illustration; there is not a map in the book."

— Bookm 59:351 My '24 70w

"If good print, startling and stimulating information, agreeable literary style, and blunt honesty and candor can make a book worth reading, 'Plutarch Lied,' is such." D. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 23 '24 850w

Cleveland p61 Jl '24

"His revelations are not the scandalous ones of a writer of 'secret history' or of flippant interpretations common to our most modern biographers. He merely attempts, and not without success, to analyze the war from the broad viewpoints of strategic principles and national effort, seeking profitable truth and avoiding adulation. His book, as a result of this frankness, made an enormous sensation in France upon its appearance." Capt. Elbridge Colby

+ Lit R p486 F 2 '24 900w

"A very clever, dogmatic, thought-provoking book which runs directly counter to the French tradition of military hero-worship, while it expresses with pungency and force much of the inarticulate criticism latent in the minds of the rank and file of all armies."

+ Nation and Ath 36:122 O 18 '24 950w

"It is only fair to observe that while M. de Pierrefeu primarily wrote this book in deadly earnest, and while it demands serious criticism, he also intended that his readers should never be bored. In this he has been eminently successful."

+ New Repub 38:103 Mr 19 '24 1000w

Reviewed by Laurence Stallings

N Y World p7e D 30 '23 600w

St Louis p417 D '24

Sat R 138:448 N 1 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p482 Ag 7 '24 900w

Reviewed by Theodore Stanton

Yale R n s 14:176 O '24 310w

PINKERTON, ROBERT EUGENE. Test of Donald Norton. 345p $2 Reilly & Lee [7s 6d Hurst & B.]
24-7477

"The hero is a white child, brought up to think himself part Indian. Donald is taken, at the age of fourteen, to his first real contact with white folk at a trading post of the Hudson's Bay Company and is taken in by the boss trader. His education and development make the rest of the narrative—running through the necessary love affair, intrigues among the Indians and traders, in which he finally has an opportunity to serve the company, to right wrongs, and to foil the villain properly."—Lit R

"In an exciting story but not a wildly improbable one, the contest to surmount barriers of blood and prejudice, as well as the clearing up of the mystery surrounding the hero's ancestory, is resolved to the full satisfaction of the reader. It is a rattling good woods yarn for all lovers of out-of-door tales, simply but comprehendingly told."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 14 '24 250w

Ind 112:268 My 10 '24 10w

"This is a good Canadian north wilderness story, with some novelty in its mechanism and more than the usual portion of naturalness in its characters." H. L. P.
+ Lit R p890 Jl 12 '24 180w

N Y Times p16 Ag 3 '24 500w

N Y Tribune p23 Ag 3 '24 450w

"There is plenty of action, which is not too extravagant, and the narrative holds attention. It is above the general average of its familiar family."
Sat R of Lit 1:34 Ag 9 '24 130w

Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p270 My 1 '24 40w

"Interesting plot, but rather long drawn out toward the end. Gives a degraded picture of the Indian."
+ — Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

PINSKI, DAVID. King David and his wives. 186p $2 Huebsch
892.42 David, king of Israel—Drama

Each of these five one-act plays is based upon a love episode in the life of King David. First, it is Michal, daughter of King Saul, who is the object of his love; again, the beautiful Abigail, wife of Nabal; then Bathsheba whose husband, Uriah the Hittite, David tried to make way with by putting him in the forefront of the battle. The scene of the fourth play is David's harem, with his wives and concubines. In the fifth, David is a worn old monarch who attempts to renew his youth with the lovely Abishag.

Booklist 20:259 Ap '24

Cleveland p20 Mr '24

"David Pinski is an artist in the most satisfying sense of the term. He has the potent imagination to seize upon meager material and transmute it into something golden and memorable; he has the insight and the sympathetic understanding to make dead substance glow with the variable fervor of life; he has the gift of analysis, the power of restraint, the sense of the beautiful." S. A. Coblentz
+ Lit R p706 Ap 26 '24 750w

"It is a piece of work that has much to commend it; and the peculiar manner in which it is conceived makes for more variety within the whole than could have been attained in any other way. Moreover, Pinski is the acknowledged master of the one-act play; each of the five love episodes is a unit, and could be acted by itself without reference to the others." P. A. Hutchison
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 6 '24 180w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 9 '24 250w

"As it stands it is unsatisfactory and does not add a cubit to the stature either of king or playwright."
— Theatre Arts Mo 8:352 My '24 90w

PIPER, EDWIN FORD. Barbed wire and Wayfarers. 291p $2.50 Macmillan
811 24-2346

Poems of pioneer days on the western frontier. "The title is neither a fancy nor a symbol; barbed wire won the land from the cowman for the homesteader. The 'Barbed Wire' country lies west of the Missouri; its years are the early eighties. 'Wayfarers,' later in the same decade, is about men walking through the settlement on the road to Denver. Bits of folk-song from their lips color some of the lyric refrains. 'Echoes from the War' and 'Hours in a Bye-Street' bring a miscellany of lyrics and sketches into the volume." (Preface)

Nation 118:sup454 Ap 16 '24 40w

"With the exception of some of the more striking of the long passages and of the shorter lyrics—it is rather in the light of dramatic narrative than that of poetry that we shall come to look upon this vivid setting forth of incidents and character sketches. Not all of it goes on wings—some of it limps heavily and, it may be, has not on the wedding garment. But to suggest inequalities in a work as unique in character and as varied in expression as this is not to disparage it. . . Edwin Ford Piper is happily a part of this West which he has taken for his province. Its song has beaten against him through many years." Mary Siegrist
+ — N Y Times p13 F 10 '24 1300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:94 Ap '24

PIRANDELLO, LUIGI. Each in his own way, and two other plays; tr. from the Italian by Arthur Livingston. 258p $3.50 Dutton
852 24-199

"In the originality of its form, 'Each in His Own Way' suggests the manner of 'Six Characters In Search of An Author.' If the latter was the drama of the writing of a play, 'Each in His Own Way' is the drama of the presentation of a play. Pirandello has tried to dramatize an Italian—a Latin—'first night,' with its claques, its critics, its partisanships, all that strange commotion which features new artistic events in nations that have a long tradition of art, and no tradition of parliamentary decorum. But this is only the external element. Deeper down, this play presents a general picture of life as Pirandello sees it." (Translator's note) The other plays are: The pleasure of honesty; Naked.

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield
Bookm 59:234 Ap '24 450w

"The fine Italian hand of Signor Pirandello is quicker than the eye of the reader; these plays need visual representation to bring out their full values. In the swift and subtle interplay of emotions and relationships by which the dramatist carries forward his theme, Pirandello's dramas resemble blackboard demonstrations in psychology; the manner is so intricate that some of the shifts and fine shadings are practically dependent upon the stage for their apprehensions."
+ — Dial 76:561 Je '24 160w

Reviewed by R. H. Wollstein
Int Bk R p193 F '24 1800w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Lit R p885 Jl 12 '24 340w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris
N Y Times p9 Ja 6 '24 2250w

"To the younger generation I strongly recommend the milder medicine of Pirandello's dramatic exposition of enigmas. His humor consists essentially in the dissociation of ideas, in a violent confrontation of the real and the ideal. For greater simplification of his method he has provided two plays in which the process is exteriorized by the device of having the liv-

PIRANDELLO, LUIGI—Continued
ing characters in a drama witness an attempt to give artistic expression to that drama on the stage, 'Six Characters' and 'Each in His Own Way.'" Ernest Boyd
+ N Y Tribune p17 Ja 20 '24 650w

"If Pirandello would stick to humanity rather than force his characters to develop along one line, each singing in the same key, his plays might lose their obvious theatricality which leaves one with the thought that the author's bag is empty." L: Weitzenkorn
— + N Y World p6e Ja 20 '24 1100w
Springf'd Republican p7a My 11 '24 100w

"Admirers of the volume of Pirandello plays that appeared last year may with this new volume, experience something like disappointment. There is less framework so far as concerns the outward form of the plays. No play in this new collection has the novelty of external design that we find in Six Characters in Search of an Author." Stark Young
— + Theatre Arts Mo 8:209 Mr '24 600w

PITT, FRANCES. Woodland creatures. 255p il $5 Dutton [12s 6d Allan & U.]

591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior

These studies of wild life consist of observations on the characters and habits of some of the shyest of the wild creatures of the woodland, both animals and birds. Contents: The badger—a creature of the night; The woodpeckers; The dormouse; The bullfinch; The fox; The "call of the wild"; The sparrow hawk; The kestrel; The common rabbit; Birds of the night; The squirrel; The magpie and the jay.

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 19 '24 320w
Lit R p10 S 13 '24 80w

"Miss Pitt has had many interesting experiences in the taming of wild animals, and some of her most charming chapters describe them. The illustrations, of which there are thirty-eight, are particularly good reproductions of interesting photographs."
+ N Y Times p17 Jl 27 '24 340w

PLAYGROUND AND RECREATION ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA. Camping out; a manual on organized camping. 636p il $2 Macmillan

796 Camping 24-10010

Based on a study of summer camps thruout the United States during the season of 1923, the book is a complete manual of organized camping. The general editor is L. H. Weir, field secretary of the association, who has contributed the chapters on selection and planning of the camp site, equipment, organization, program making and camp standards. The sections on camp sanitation, diet and nutrition, accounting, leadership and the training of camp leaders have been written by specialists in these fields. Each chapter has a bibliography and the book has many illustrations, including charts and forms.

Booklist 21:13 O '24

"Every prospective camper, especially every Boy and Girl Scout should own this authoritative little book."
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 31 '24 230w

"Likely to become the standard manual on the subject."
+ J Home Econ 16:399 Jl '24 70w
Nation and Ath 36:226 N 8 '24 90w
N Y Tribune p27 Je 15 '24 70w

"'Camping Out' is an exceptionally complete summary of information of the most valuable kind, thoroughly practical and lucid, and covering almost every possible question of importance likely to arise in any regular camp."
+ Outlook 137:401 Jl 9 '24 150w

"Mr. Weir has embodied in this compact manual practically every kind of information especially needed by individuals and agencies conducting camps in this country."
+ R of Rs 70:112 Jl '24 60w
St Louis p410 D '24

"The subject is treated in an exhaustive manner. Although intended primarily for those interested in establishing somewhat sizable camps, such chapters as those on sanitation and on diet and nutrition will interest readers who wish to maintain small family camps."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 120w
Survey 53:242 N 15 '24 190w

PLEYDELL-BOUVERIE, KATHERINE. January. 286p $2 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d Heinemann]

January, born so shortly after her father's death, realizes early the resentment her mother harbors against her and the indifference of the family towards her. But she is compensated in her loneliness by her Uncle Bill, whose friendship and understanding of her nature ripen as the years go on. It is Jan, in her early teens, who hastens from England thru France to comfort him when his beloved dies. Then the war and one brief moment of the realization of their love for each other. But Jan, in a mood of pity for his hopeless love and despair at her own problems, becomes engaged to Philip who returns crippled from the war and more than ever dependent on her. When it is discovered that Bill is not really her uncle she makes her final bid for happiness. She leaves Philip, in more loving hands than hers, and together with Bill returns to the little mountain village in France to forget the war and the past in their perfect companionship.

Booklist 21:69 N '24
Boston Transcript p4 S 20 '24 360w

"It is written in a polite, correct style—almost that of some leader of society. It moves very, very slowly and in spite of a gallant attempt in the last twenty pages, simply does not catch up to the schedule that one rightfully demands of an interesting novel." H. S.
— + Lit R p9 S 6 '24 270w

"Several times in the story the ordinary conventions go completely by the board, but the most indispensable social convention of all, that of good taste, never follows them. The same situations in less deft hands might easily become sordid and even objectionable."
+ — N Y Times p8 N 23 '24 550w

"Although it is handled with delicacy and without any leering or gloating over it, the theme of this rather unusual novel is not very wholesomely appetizing. And it is an essentially artificial affair."
— + N Y Tribune p17 S 21 '24 280w

"Unless perhaps a slight excess of sweetness, there is nothing that would lead the reader to suppose this the author's first novel. It is a pleasing and a promising one."
— + Outlook 138:558 D 3 '24 90w

"'January' has one most vital merit; it is readable: but, unfortunately, it has the double vice of conventional improbability and emotional inadequacy." Gerald Gould
— + Sat R 137:164 F 16 '24 280w
Spec 132:336 Mr 1 '24 90w

"The story is one that women will especially appreciate."
Springf'd Republican p7a S 21 '24 150w

"The book is throughout written in a conventional style, and its lack of humor mars somewhat the interest which the reader may undoubtedly take in the development of events."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p81 F 7 '24 140w

POCOCK, DORIS A. Secret of Hallowdene farm. 244p $1.75 Appleton [3s 6d Nisbet]
24-7320

Chris Gilmour was fourteen when her doctor father ordered a rest at her uncle's Devonshire farm. She was rebellious at first, for she thought life at her school was much more exciting. When she reached Devonshire and made the acquaintance of two young cousins, Molly and Pat, she began to enjoy herself immensely. And when it developed that there was a mystery connected with the farm she was content to stay and help to solve it.

Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '24 130w

"Doris Pocock has written a thoroughly good story in 'The Secret of Hallowdene Farm.' A natural and acceptable heroine is Chris Gilmour. There is nothing machine-made about her adventures. They are not of the forced variety which leaves the reader cold, and unmoved and apart. Rather are they so real that one has the feeling that they have been written because they happened." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p616 Jl '24 240w

"Girls are sure to like Chris Gilmour, the fifteen-year-old heroine."

+ N Y Tribune p25 Jl 20 '24 80w

"An interesting and plausible tale."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 20 '24 120w

POLLITT, ALAN ASHTON. Causes and prevention of corrosion. 230p il $6.50 Van Nostrand [25s Benn bros.]

691.7 Corrosion and anti-corrosives [23-18286]

"A fairly thorough work, with considerable attention to theory."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:199 Ap '24

"The purpose of this book is to collect some of the scattered information on corrosion and place it in a form that may be readily referred to. . . Since much of the original literature is inconvenient to obtain, a survey of the book should do much to assist the engineer."

+ Refrig Eng 10:352 Mr '24 290w

POOLE, DEWITT CLINTON. Conduct of foreign relations under modern democratic conditions. (Inst. of politics publications. Williams college, Williamstown, Mass.) 208p $2 Yale univ. press [10s 6d Milford]

327 International law and relations 24-8403

These are a series of papers contributed to a Round Table discussion at the Institute of Politics. The book is divided into two parts: "Organization and method in the conduct of foreign relations," and "Democratic control of foreign relations," with an index and two maps included.

Boston Transcript p5 My 7 '24 750w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p469 Jl 24 '24 30w

POOLE, ERNEST. Avalanche. 344p $2 Macmillan

24-12277

"The story of Llewellyn Dorr, a young neurologist who has command of deep psychic forces for healing sick minds and nerves and of his love for a restless, ambitious young woman with an incessant thirst for novelty and a genius for publicity. Dorothea loves Llewellyn because he is something different and because putting him across in a publicity campaign managed by herself seems a worthwhile outlet for her energies. Dorr likes recognition but insists that it must be slow and earned and real. He has a weak heart from the strain of the war but at each crisis of pain and exhaustion he can summon the sound and memory of rushing water on the mountain side where he has gained elemental power and peace in his youth, but, when he and Dorothea drift apart, his grief helps to lower his vitality. When he knows he can no longer fight he goes off to die. Dorothea, almost before he is out of her sight, resumes the relations and ambitions which were most potent with her before she met Llewellyn, and feels she will be fulfilled as the wife of the owner and manager of the biggest newspaper in America who promises her she shall fight with him to make the Chronicle a world newspaper—as he wanted her to do long before she married Dorr."—Cleveland

Booklist 21:69 N '24

"The story reveals Mr. Poole as novelist and philosopher, as a recorder and observer, and we are certain that few will be able to read 'The Avalanche' without finding in it something vigorous and stimulating, something that will awaken them, no matter what their prejudices in religion or political theories, to a realization that we are living in a world of ideas and ideals, and that we ourselves are powerful forces in the making and the remaking of the world about us." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '24 1600w

Cleveland p85 N '24

"The book is rather entertaining, but is not at all outstanding among the many similar novels of the day."

— + Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ag 10 '24 270w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

Int Bk R p673 Ag '24 600w

"Mr. Poole has written an energetic tirade against the numerous kinds of new thought whose mushroom-like growth he bewails. He has shown clearly and convincingly what a fake all new fads in medicine and mysticism are. He has also given vent to a belief in the possibility of a bigger and a broader spiritual and mental life, one that will come, not through miracles, but through constant work." Madelin Leof

+ Lit R p892 Jl 12 '24 360w

"The elements of a compelling story are there, but they remain lifeless and remote. Perhaps it is because the hero, half mystic, half scientist, is at times a little less, at times a little more than human. Perhaps it is because the texture of the plot is too thin to support the weight of such a hero. In any case, one perceives rather than feels these people, and the perception will leave many readers cold and unbelieving." G. F.

— + New Repub 39:191 Jl 9 '24 280w

"Mr. Poole has produced characters whose personalities and problems are real. . . He has realized them and makes his readers realize them. What his narrative lacks is the creative touch which might have given these lives significance—a touch which Mr. Poole achieved in two or three of his earlier novels and which no reader of those earlier novels can doubt he will achieve again."

+ — N Y Times p8 Je 8 '24 650w

"The triangle is absolutely Euclidean and abstract. One cannot quarrel with either Mr. Poole's premises or his conclusion; and unfortunately his people are equally untouchable by the high unreason of emotion. The method of narration has the sober competence of extraordinarily good reporting, of things seen and heard rather than felt or imagined." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p23 Je 15 '24 950w

"This last work of Mr. Poole falls in quality far below the earlier chapters of his first book, 'The Harbor.' The story seems frequently to drag. Sometimes Dr. Dorr seems fairly to be dragged into it. We read it with the interest of expectation and were disappointed." E. W. Osborn

— N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 270w

Outlook 138:298 O 22 '24 80w

PORRITT, ARTHUR. John Henry Jowett; with
2 a foreword by the archbishop of Canterbury.
304p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

B or 92 Jowett, John Henry

An account of the life and career of the distinguished English preacher who for seven years was minister of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York City. He was recalled to England in 1918, to become minister of Westminster Chapel, London.

PORRITT, ARTHUR—Continued
Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p22 D 28 '24 2400w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Tribune p9 D 21 '24 780w

"Mr. Porritt records the life of his friend in terms of real affection, and leaves us with the impression of a man entirely devoted to his ministry, giving to his work all the force of a sincere, energetic, and studious nature."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p604 O 2 '24 1000w

PORTER, ELEANOR (HODGMAN) (MRS JOHN LYMAN PORTER) (ELEANOR STUART, pseud.). Hustler Joe. 318p $2 Doran
24-20611

The book contains four short stories. The first is that of Hustler Joe, who under the impression that he has killed his father leaves home. In the mining town of Skinner Valley he is known as Hustler Joe. There he makes his fortune and becomes known to the world as Joseph Westbrook, the philanthropist. Then Joe falls in love with lovely Ethel Barrington—but he cannot marry her because of the heinous crime he has committed. The day comes when Joe decides to tell Ethel his miserable story, and leave her forever. But the result of the telling brings love and happiness again into Joe's life. The other tales are: Tangled, A vacation exchange, The twins' journey.

Boston Transcript p2 S 6 '24 580w

"A collection of four stories, all full of her characteristic stock of virtues, happy endings and innumerable recompenses for the pain we mortals suffer on this planet we call earth. Mrs Porter mixes with life her own wish to see the lives of her dream children happy and easy. She gives joy to many who find in her easy, fluent stories the pleasure with which their own daily drab routines can never, never provide them."
+ Lit R p10 Ag 30 '24 460w
N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 40w

PORTER, HORACE CHAMBERLAIN. Coal [2] carbonization. (Am. chemical society. Monograph ser.) 442p il $6 Chemical catalog co.
662.7 Coal. Coke. Gas. Coal-tar products
24-19649

"Comprehensive, unbiased treatment in which topics are treated in accordance with their relative importance as determined by the present status and trend of the industry. Concerned chiefly wih coking and gas making at high temperatures, approximately half of the book being devoted to by-product work."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:606 D '24

POST, LOUIS FREELAND. Deportations delirium of nineteen-twenty; a personal narrative of an historic official experience; with introd. by Moorfield Storey. 338p $1.50 Kerr
323.4 Deportation 24-356

"The word delirium in the title is descriptive of the mood which this book tries to record. After the armistice a kind of frenzy took possession of certain groups in the American community—and the 'Reds,' many of them innocent and kindly people, many of them women and young children, became the victims of a popular hysteria in which there was no discrimination and no sense of legal or constitutional protection of individual liberty. This book is a detailed study of the process of this delirium, of the agencies that were engaged, of the methods that were employed. It is written by a man who was himself the center of the struggle to stem the national frenzy and who in consequence had the frenzy turned upon him."—Survey

Cleveland p54 Jl '24

"In telling his story Mr. Post has done us a great service, but the service for which we are all inestimately in his debt is another. It is his official actions during the deportations delirium. In a time of great excitement, under enormous pressure, with a hail of ignorant criticism beating upon his head, he had the poise, the clarity of vision, and the courage not to be stampeded by a timid and vindictive Attorney General, and to protect the weakest and most despised of our population in the rights to which they were entitled under the law. The extraordinary bit of history which he now relates may shake the faith of some of us in the ways of government, but it will make us all unite in thanks that at such a time Louis F. Post was on the job." Albert DeSilver
+ Nation 118:317 Mr 19 '24 1200w

Reviewed by T: J. Walsh
New Repub 37:340 F 20 '24 2800w

"The book contains an admirable foreword by Moorfield Storey, of Boston. No better estimate of the volume under discussion can be given than by quoting his words: 'Mr Post's book gives the facts briefly and clearly, is very interesting and will repay careful reading.' "
+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 6 '24 600w

"Mr. Post has rendered a genuine service both to the present generation of American citizens who are interested in maintaining their constitutional liberties and to the future of America as an example of how and why a general attack upon constitutionally protected liberties was undertaken. The book is simply and well written and needs wide reading." Frank Tannenbaum
+ Survey 51:713 Mr 15 '24 250w
Wis Lib Bul 20:172 Jl '24

POTTER, PITMAN BENJAMIN. Freedom of the seas in history, law and politics. 299p $2.50 (10s 6d) Longmans
341 Freedom of the seas. Maritime law
24-3720

A study of this vital international problem as one of the causes of war. Part one treats of the controversy over the subject from ancient times to the present; part two traces the development of maritime international law; part three deals with the political problems involved.

"Admirable little book. An exhaustive bibliography, thorough documentation, a good index, and a lucid method of presentation, enhance the value of his study." L: F. Brown
+ Am Hist R 30:113 O '24 520w

Reviewed by C. G. Fenwick
Am Pol Sci R 18:815 N '24 650w

Reviewed by Clement Wood
Lit R p2 S 6 '24 300w

"There are many misprints, the references are sometimes grotesquely wrong, the historical information is at second hand, the bibliography is too general and too indiscriminate to be of much utility. The author's analysis of law is not particularly thorough. But the book's value lies in what is least doctoral about it, in the prompt and emphatic recognition of the fact that 'freedom of the seas' is a meaningless phrase behind which nations with weak navies have sought to check the rapacity of nations with strong ones." M. R.
— + New Repub 40:80 S 17 '24 200w

"By no means a great book nor to be commended in respect of style, but definitely useful. The appended bibliography deserves unqualified praise."
+ — Outlook 138:240 Je 11 '24 150w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:304 Je '24

POUCHER, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Perfumes and cosmetics; with especial reference to synthetics. 473p $6 Van Nostrand [21s Chapman & H.]
668.5 Perfumery. Cosmetics [23-17733]

"A practical work. Gives considerable information on sources and characteristics of natural perfumes, with formulas for synthetic substitutes. The material on cosmetics includes bath, dental, hair, and manicure preparations, rouge sticks, skin lotions, smelling salts, theatrical requisites, and toilet powders." —Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Nature 113:780 My 31 '24 180w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:207 Ap '24

POULSEN, ORNULF. Skiing. 199p il $2 Mac-
2 millan

796 Skis and ski-running

Written by a Norwegian authority with many years' experience of the sport, the book is a clear and readable description of the technique of skiing, with advice about the selection of skis and equipment, a chapter on ski history and one on snowshoeing.

"The chapter on the history of skiing brings together much interesting information. There are reminiscences scattered through the book that breathe the spirit of fir woods and snow-covered peaks and slopes. The illustrations and diagrams will be very helpful to the beginner."

+ N Y Times p21 Ja 11 '25 470w
N Y World p8e D 14 '24 90w
Outlook 139:117 Ja 21 '25 10w

POWELL, EDWARD ALEXANDER. Struggle for power in Moslem Asia. 389p $2.50 Century

327 Eastern question (Near East). Turkey. Asia Minor 23-17928

The book deals with political events in the Near East since the close of the war, in Turkey, Armenia, Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia, Arabia and Persia. Its avowed purpose is "to expose and attack the selfish, insincere, and dangerous policies which are being pursued by certain European governments in the Near East."

Booklist 20:200 Mr '24

"By his opening chapter Mr. Powell has greatly injured the effect of his book. He has the unpopular side of an argument to maintain and the chapter entitled 'Behind the Veil of Propaganda' seems a weakly indefinite promise upon which to base it. . . 'The Struggle for Power in Moslem Asia' will afford some basis for an understanding of the news despatches from that part of the world which to the average American have so often proved inexplicable." S. L. R.

— + Boston Transcript p6 D 26 '23 700w
Cleveland p23 Mr '24

"E. Alexander Powell relates in a vigorous and interesting way the history of this struggle for the lands formerly belonging to Turkey." C. P. H.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ja 27 '24 1400w

Reviewed by Bertrand Russell
Nation 118:sup440 Ap 16 '24 2200w

Reviewed by A. H. Lybyer
New Repub 38:131 Mr 26 '24 250w
N Y World p6e Ja 13 '24 330w
R of Rs 69:108 Ja '24 200w

"Mr. Powell's account is both fascinating and instructive. He presents facts which may well temper our knowledge of international relations, but at best his book is but one man's view." Alpha Buse

+ Survey 51:413 Ja 15 '24 340w

Reviewed by E: M. Earle
Yale R n s 14:189 O '24 750w

POWELL, RICHARD STILLMAN, pseud. See Barbour, R. H:

POWER, EILEEN EDNA. Medieval people. 216p il $2 Houghton [6s Methuen]

940.1 Middle ages

A series of sketches illustrating certain aspects of social life in the Middle ages. From various historical sources the author has reconstructed the life of a peasant on a country estate in Charlemagne's time; a Venetian traveller of the thirteenth century; Madame Eglentyne, fourteenth century prioress; a Paris housewife in a middle-class home; a merchant of the staple in the fifteenth century; an Essex clothier in the days of Henry VII. These people are all ordinary and unknown to fame except Marco Polo, who provides the picture of the Venetian traveller. Madame Eglentyne is drawn from Chaucer's prioress. Notes and sources are given and there are eight illustrations and a map.

Boston Transcript p4 N 22 '24 750w

"The suspicion that the whole truth about these harmless folk is not being revealed becomes increasingly fixed in the reader's mind, spoiling his wholehearted enjoyment of the narrative. A fascinating subject, one might say in conclusion, needing for successful treatment an author with a slightly freer rein." S. T. B.

— + Ind 113:319 O 25 '24 250w
Lit R p10 O 25 '24 250w

"Bright and scholarly book."

+ New Statesman 24:18 O 11 '24 1300w

"Miss Power's little volume presents a complete contrast. It can be put into the hands of any young person without danger or corrupting his style. Besides that negative virtue, it possesses a color, a dramatic touch that humanizes the dry bones of charters and documents." R. S. Loomis

+ N Y Tribune p4 D 7 '24 480w

"It is to be hoped that that elusive person, the general reader, really appreciates the efforts which are made to amuse and interest him. Here is a book which even a historian of Miss Power's ability must have found very difficult to write. It is pleasantly illustrated and enlivened with many touches of humour, and all signs of learning are carefully excluded from the text."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p551 S 11 '24 800w

POWERS, HARRY HUNTINGTON. Egypt.
2 (University travel ser.) 327p il $2.50 Macmillan

916.2 Egypt—Description and travel 24-23299

The president of the Bureau of university travel has written something more than a guide book in this record of the Nile tour. He touches upon nothing that is not accessible to the ordinary traveler on familiar routes but he interprets Egyptian history and civilization as he goes.

Booklist 21:147 Ja '25

"Mr. Powers's directions and suggestions followed, prospective travellers to Egypt will not only see the outward semblance of its stupendous historic memorials—tomb, temple and obelisk, pyramid, pylon and mastaba—but will understand something of the meaning of the message carved in their shrines with an infinite patience and skill, for the guidance of all succeeding civilizations."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 29 '24 380w

POWERS, HARRY HUNTINGTON. Hill of
2 Athena. 105p il $1.25 Macmillan

913.38 Athens 24-23297

This little book is not a consecutive history of Athens but a series of sketchy word pictures of the city at different important epochs in her history.

"This engaging sketch of the history of Athens, told with particular reference to the existing monuments, is a valuable contribution to the extensive literature of its subject, for its combines insight and imagination with fairly accurate knowledge."

+ Nation 120:49 Ja 14 '25 90w

"Mr. Powers presents these panoramic glimpses effectively, making the life and characters of each one, the manners and customs,

POWERS, H. H.—Continued
realistic and significant. His little book is really quite an achievement in the success with which he has packed so much into so small a space."
+ N Y Times p21 N 2 '24 320w

POWERS, HARRY HUNTINGTON. Japan. (University travel ser.) 278p il $2.50 Macmillan
915.2 Japan—Description and travel
23-17484

The first volume in the University travel series is written by the director of the Bureau of university travel. He disclaims any intent of writing a guide-book or of describing or even enumerating the places visited. The purpose is rather to interpret that which the traveler sees in the usual four or five weeks' trip thru Japan, and to help to an understanding of Japanese civilization thru a discussion of its familiar shrines and scenes.

Booklist 20:262 Ap '24
Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 120w

"If this first volume of the University Travel Series be an augury of the character of its successors, that series will make a valuable addition to the literature of travel. Mr. Powers has set a high standard. Among the many recent books relating to Japan, it is conspicuously notable." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 2 '24 850w

"The author, being a professional traveler, has the foundation for his ambitious aim, that of understanding and interpreting. This book will be of service to the traveler and will equally delight the stay-at-home, for whom it is especially adapted."
+ Springf'd Republican p9a My 4 '24 550w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p583 S 18 '24 100w

POWYS, LLEWELYN. Black laughter. 216p $2.50 Harcourt
916.7 Africa, East—Description and travel
24-15319

In these impressions of five years spent in the forest country of East Africa, the author reproduces with simplicity and evident sincerity the effect upon a receptive nature of the elemental quality, the "rank crude savour of the skin of this sinister continent." His place of observation was a high forest farm where he looked after thousands of sheep. He describes the daily occurences, the sights and sounds of his strange surroundings—the roaring of lions, the whoop of hyenas at night, a stampede of wild elephants, a Kikuyu riot, the moods and manners of the natives, experiences of drought and famine and plague.

Booklist 21:21 O '24

"'Black Laughter' is irritating. The recorded impressions and reactions lack spontaneity; the author is continually straining for his effects."
— Bookm 60:234 O '24 130w

"The point of view of the author, and the practical exigencies of his day by day experience, impart to the narrative a realism that is at least different from that imparted by the traveler, big game hunter, or motion picture adventurer. . . His book will widen a reader's mental horizon as well as entertain in the reading." R. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 28 '24 650w

"A grim book, this, of a grim country. If 'Black Laughter' has a serious flaw, it is, indeed, that of too much candor. The bitter and quite unnecessary arraignment of the late Paul J. Rainey, big game hunter of Pittsburgh, establishes a record for bad taste. Otherwise, Mr. Powys has done a book that will appeal to all who would know how life goes forward on one of the last of the world's frontiers." C. A.
+ — Ind 113:162 S 13 '24 420w

"The book is not melancholy. A dry, keen humor envelops it, a restrained, piercing irony, which is stimulating and has moments of drollery, a compound of naïveté and artistry which makes the pages scintillate in gloom. Most of all, one senses with delightful penetration the shy, modest, boyish, brave and loving ego of the author." F: O'Brien
+ Int Bk R p706 S '24 1450w

"As an observer Mr. Powys is excellently endowed: he has vigorous senses, an active and shrewd mind, and the courage to look at the pitiless, the disgusting and the inexorable." G. B. M.
+ Lit R p891 Jl 12 '24 250w

"A book dealing with primeval and primordial Africa, which is so gruesome that it will make the flesh of the reader creep, and so powerfully fascinating that he will be unable to put it from him until the last word has been read. Other books have been written about Africa, but none quite like this one."
+ N Y Times p12 Je 29 '24 1450w
N Y Tribune p24 Jl 20 '24 480w

"I find no lack of style in 'Black Laughter.' Indeed the simplicity of the sketches, little genre pictures of wild inner Africa, is masterly, and the book is exquisitely written."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:46 Ag 16 '24 230w
Springf'd Republican p6 S 1 '24 400w

POWYS, THEODORE FRANCIS. Black Bryony. 184p il $2 Knopf [6s Chatto & W.]
24-5349

"The scene of the fantasy is laid in rural England, the characters being various rural personages—a country schoolmaster, the rector, the inn-keeper, the undertaker, a 'carrier,' with his temperamental auto bus, the son of the rector and a Salvation Army 'lassie.' The kaleidoscopic changes of nature which form a background symbolize the changing mental states of the characters, and the black bryony plant, which the Army girl pulls up to twine around her neck, signifies the poison of her earthly nature overcoming the spiritual."—N Y Times

"The woodcuts by R. A. Garnett are fundamentally in accord with the writing, a tracery in black and white, real in detail, attractive, strange—and hopeless." Stella Heilbrunn
+ — Int Bk R p607 Jl '24 380w

"This novel has qualities of a dream. The persons about whom it is written might credibly exist in an English village like Norbury today. Their behavior and the situations in which they behave are acceptable from the standpoint of common human experience. The background against which they move is dim but by no means unreal. But the story has the lurid and spectral qualities of nightmare and a latent parable within it. Some inexpressible horror lurks through the action and finally leaps out like a hysterical shout from an overburdened spirit in the last pages of the book." E: T. Booth
Lit R p455 Ja 19 '24 800w

"'Black Bryony' is a little bewildering. There are a number of rustic characters and scenes sketched in a subtly sophisticated manner and there is a lurid rural melodrama casually indicated as a plot thread, but the parts do not fuse and it is a little difficult to know just what the author is driving at. 'Mr. Powys in Search of a Manner' we hazard as the best title for a book which is fine in spots but more freakish than impressive as a whole."
— + Nation 118:538 My 7 '24 100w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
New Repub 40:79 S 17 '24 400w

"He is still an uncertain artist, there are gaps in his work and occasional lapses. I imagine he will always remain narrowly limited. But from the rows of imitative, dull, accomplished novels which face the modern reader, his work stands out with the sharpness and definition of a real tree in a stage wood." Raymond Mortimer
+ — New Statesman 22:306 D 15 '23 450w

"It is a remarkable little book in many ways; and if not likely to enjoy any wide reading, those looking for something out of the ordinary, something to pique their literary taste, will do well to give 'Black Bryony' the attention of a few hours."
N Y Times p9 D 30 '23 700w

"Grimly realistic as many of his country scenes are, one is ever conscious, as one reads them, that it would only be necessary to scratch the surface ever so slightly of the actual daily life he presents to find under our feet cool, eternal springs." Llewellyn Powys
N Y Tribune p19 Ja 13 '24 880w

"Mr. Powys has humour, imagination, and narrative skill. But he is already, in his second book, threatening to become monotonous. It would be a pity if his reputation were left with only 'The Left Leg' to stand on; certainly 'Black Bryony' will not help it." Gerald Gould
— Sat R 136:632 D 8 '23 350w

"He has certainly not spared us brutality, and his lesson that sacrifice and resignation are the only virtues that can cope with the dark forces is a bitter and hopeless one. He may inspire some, but he will disgust others with his insistence on the element of mud in human life."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p788 N 22 '23 520w

POWYS, THEODORE FRANCIS. Mark only. 268p $2.50 Knopf [7s Chatto & W.]
25-815

"Mr. Powys's view, of rustic life at all events, is that Caliban is the normal man, and that the life of human beings is no better, and less simply ordered, than that of beasts. He displays with dispassionate simplicity a little community of farmers, labourers, and their women using their faculties, as wild animals do, for the satisfaction of desire and the destruction of the feeble. Mr. Charles Tulk, a lame pauper, having the best-developed faculties, is the chief destroyer, both of bodies and of souls. He is a Quilp without Quilp's melodrama, a masterly and quiet delineation of absolute and calculated wickedness. Tulk dominates the story, as he dominated the village, and pulled down, one after another, old man Andrews, half-witted Mrs. Andrews, Emmie Paine the servant, Nellie who was Mark Andrews's wife, and, last of all, the purblind, silly Mark himself, who ploughed alone on the high hills and left half his wits among them."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Mr Powys has written the life story of a beast of the fields, a gentle, inarticulate, darkly confused human beast who suffers, works, and feeds much like some patient but tormented ox. The tragedy of one whose responses to his environment are as mechanical as those of a farm horse." G. B. Munson
Lit R p914 Jl 26 '24 680w

"Mr. Powys in describing this negatively accelerated universe with sympathy and power has performed an amazing technical feat. He has synchronized the volatile motions of his brain with the unbelievably impeded tempo of the village of Dodderdown. His style is carefully graduated so as to approach monotony but never quite reach it. It is one of stark simplicity where the lacunae of human speech count for more than the words themselves, where omission lights up emotion." C. P. Fadiman
Nation 119:524 N 12 950w
Nation and Ath 35:266 My 24 '24 400w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
New Repub 40:79 S 17 '24 400w

"Whether genius or literary trickster, Powys is original. Those who find their palates jaded from too steady a diet of the ordinary fare are advised to try 'Mark Only' as an apéritif."
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 13 '24 700w

"Its realism appears impeccable, but something more than observation has gone into a book which brings full flower to the already great distinction shown in 'The Left Leg' and 'Black Bryony.' It may be anything you choose so long as you admit that it is a work of genius. Within his own begotten world of horror and beauty and sinister humor Mr. Powys has come to be unsurpassable." A. D. Douglas
+ N Y Tribune p23 Jl 13 '24 950w

"The main defect of the book, its formlessness, is partially atoned for by the almost disintegrating strength and sincerity of the details, the sensitive response of the author to every impression. And if nothing else gave it unity, the healing irony that Mr. Powys lavishes on all his characters, and particularly on the arch-villain, would provide it." L. P. Hartley
+ Spec 132:845 My 24 '24 650w

"This brutal story, magnificently told, would prove Dickens not partially but wholly false; and we are not convinced."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p302 My 15 '24 600w

PRAIGG, NOBLE T., ed. Advertising and selling. 483p $2 Doubleday
659 Advertising 24-523

Digests of the leading addresses made at the 19th International convention of the Associated advertising clubs of the world, 1923. There are nearly two hundred of these arranged under twenty main headings: retail advertising; mail advertising; financial advertising; public-utility advertising; posters; church advertising; community advertising; training in advertising, etc.

Bookm 59:adv My '24 130w
Wis Lib Bul 20:124 Jl '24

PRATT, WALDO SELDEN, ed. New encyclopedia of music and musicians. 967p il $6 (31s 6d) Macmillan
780.3 Music—Dictionaries. Musicians
24-3627

"The editor is musical Editor of the Century Dictionary. This reference volume in three parts contains (1) articles defining or describing about 2,000 terms and general subjects, (2) biographies, frequently including list of works, of musicians active since 1700 and (3) facts about institutions and organizations in the musical world. There are 3 appendices, including a classified bibliography, brief notes on musicians before 1700 and a catalogue of operas produced since 1900. Contains photographs of some musical instruments and a few recent composers."—St Louis

"There has long been a need for an abridged and up-to-date encyclopedia of music and musicians, one more international in tendency than that of the anglicized Grove's. Waldo Selden Pratt's work is an attempt to meet this need. The illustrations of instruments and musicians scattered throughout the volume seem to have been selected in a somewhat haphazard way, and might well have been omitted. But as the ideal encyclopedia has yet to make its appearance, one must, perforce, recommend this one in the meantime, for it is the best one of its kind that has come our way." Henrietta Straus
— + Nation 119:449 O 22 '24 650w

"The work is an extraordinary achievement of scholarship, intelligence and patience. Its like does not exist for comprehensiveness." R: Aldrich
+ N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '24 680w
St Louis p346 O '24

"Waldo Selden Pratt, in editing 'The New Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians' has succeeded admirably in his aim to be 'faithful, judicious and systematic,' and has brought together an amazing amount of information within the covers of a single volume. Here is a book which every musician, professional or amateur, should add to his library." E: Ballantine
+ Sat R of Lit 1:348 D 6 '24 450w

PRATT, W. E., ed.—Continued

"Although Dr. Pratt disclaims the intention, his encyclopædia is practically an abridgment of Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians. People who do not possess Grove or Messrs. Dent's new Dictionary of Modern Music will find the present work a solidly satisfying substitute."

+ — Spec 133:788 N 22 '24 250w

Springf'd Republican p10 F 20 '24 90w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p801 N 27 '24 550w

PRAVIEL, ARMAND. Murder of Monsieur Fualdès; tr. by Doris Ashley. 308p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d Collins]

24-6234

An historical mystery tale. M. Fualdès, a French magistrate who had served under the first republic and the Empire, went out on the evening of the nineteenth of March, 1817, never to return. With the throat cut, his body was found next morning floating in the river Aveyron. Feeling ran high at that time. The murder inflamed the imagination of the townspeople of Rodez, who saw in it a political plot, the work of White Terror avengers. Great names were involved in the inquiries and trials following the crime. The narrative works its way thru a tangle of family and political intrigue but leaves the case as much a mystery as ever

---

"'The Murder of Monsieur Fualdes' was written by a Frenchman of good, but by no means overpowering, talent, which means, of course, that it is a little absurd in the flamboyance of its rhetoric. It takes a very great Frenchman indeed to eschew theatricalism, and Mr. Praviel does not quite rise to that level. Nevertheless, he has written a decidedly unusual book, which is interesting to everybody and should be absorbingly interesting to lawyers." G. W. J.

+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p5 Ag 17 '24 450w

"It makes, in effect, almost a new variety of the historical romance, combining psychological study with the elements of mystery, and placing it all in a carefully finished stage setting."

+ Lit R p747 My 10 '24 400w

"Mr. Praviel has evidently made a thorough study of the case and has presented a gloomy, historical drama so vividly as to give the reader the feeling of being actually present in Rodez during the investigation and trials."

+ N Y Times p2 Je 15 '24 750w

"The affair affords a marvelous tale of fact which, in the book in question, is written by a master hand of fiction. M. Marcel Prevost has furnished an introduction to M. Praviel's work." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Jl 26 '23 520w

PRICE, LUCIEN. Prophets unawares; the romance of an idea. 172p $1.50 Century

378.73 Amherst college. Meiklejohn, Alexander 24-7198

"A well-written account of developments at Amherst College under President Meiklejohn during the ten years from 1913 to 1923. It describes the reactions of faculty, students and trustees to the new ideas which won vigorous support in the college during that decade."—R of Rs

---

Booklist 20:325 Je '24

"Mr. Price is a writer who can summon his thoughts through the medium of a lucid and intriguing style. His latest book should deservedly attract attention as an honest and straightforward narrative of an important chapter in the history of American colleges. Perhaps the key to this book and its author lies in the suspicion most readers will probably entertain: Mr. Price has awakened in surprise to find that numerous colleges have progressed since his day." W. E. H.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 19 '24 650w

"Mr. Price has rendered a glowing account of the high emotion which inspired Dr. Meiklejohn and his followers. It is difficult to read this book without a thrill. But he has avoided the more difficult task of analyzing patiently and in detail the Meiklejohn method and of discussing the practicability of its application in colleges and universities." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p13 Ap 6 '24 900w

"Sympathetic throughout with the lost leader, the author omits all maudlin argument, strengthening his case with a fine show of restrained feeling."

+ N Y Tribune p23 My 11 '24 100w

R of Rs 69:560 My '24 50w

"The volume, exultantly partisan as it is, is not blindly so. Though Mr. Price does not detail the failures which the Amherst experiment encountered, he does not deny that they exist. His thesis is that the successes outweighed them and outweighed them greatly."

— + Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 25 '24 500w

Wis Lib Bul 20:173 Jl '24.

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Figures in modern literature. 215p $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

820.4 Authors, English 24-28731

All but two of these papers on contemporary English writers appeared originally in the London Mercury. Mr Priestley presents his gallery of literary figures as a variation from the "usual set" of writers discussed in such volumes, some of his authors not having been treated at any length before. Contents: Mr Arnold Bennett; Mr De la Mare; Mr Maurice Hewlett; Mr A. E. Housman; Mr W. W. Jacobs; Mr Robert Lynd; Mr George Saintsbury; Mr George Santayana; Mr J. C. Squire.

Bookm 60:509 D '24 220w

"In this delightful collection Mr. Priestley has rendered a distinct service to the cause of contemporary letters. The book, attractive in format, may be approved without reserve." R. B. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 8 '24 570w

"A fine example of appreciative criticism, easy to read."

+ English J 13:685 N '24 100w

"Mr. Priestley is a good appreciator. He finds the best things he can in his subjects, and then describes them to the best of his ability, which is sometimes very good indeed. His literary enthusiasm is often the only congruous and unifying element in his work."

+ — Nation 119:578 N 26 '24 150w

"As an appreciator, Mr. Priestley has qualities that make him both admirable and trustworthy. He is a patient and careful exponent; he writes fluently and lucidly; he subdues, if he possesses, any wish to cut capers or shoot rockets of his own; and, above all, he is a born admirer. But there are no revelations in his pages, no surprises, none of those phrases which are, he says, 'keys to new treasure-chambers of literature'. . . The result is, therefore, that though we get a sense of his nine figures in outline, we get no sense of them in detail. They remain unrelated; praised, but praised provisionally."

+ — Nation and Ath 35:782 S 27 '24 600w

"Mr. Priestley does not write with the classical poise of Mr. Baring or with the religious fervour of Mr. Noyes. But he can see his way clearly through the tangled undergrowth of modern literature, and he can write a readable book of criticism illuminated with judgment and clear phrase."

+ New Statesman 24:sup10 O 11 '24 500w

"For those who share with the reviewer the conviction that the poetical work of A. E. Housman has not yet been entirely understood by any critic or handled in a way more than half adequate, Mr. Priestley's study is earnestly recommended." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p5 O 5 '24 700w

"He has attained in his little book more than volumes on literary appreciation could have done, for besides giving an insight into the soul of his individual subjects he has also granted a glimpse of what criticism at its best should be." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p9e O 12 '24 800w
Outlook 138:378 N 5 '24 250w

"The studies of A. E. Housman, W. W. Jacobs and George Santayana are brilliant. One is taken so intriguingly into the heart of their works that one longs to know a little of the writers themselves, to have a few of those biographical touches that make an essay a complete and living thing—the star itself in place of its spectrum. So shrewd a critic, so genial and wise a writer as Mr. Priestley ought to give us those critical portraits." A. E. Coppard
+ Sat R 138:364 O 11 '24 500w
Spec 133:391 S 20 '24 70w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p573 S 18 '24 1200w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. I for one. 248p $2.50 Dodd [6s Lane]
824 [24-6152]

The first of these essays by a new English essayist is an amusingly frank confession of the difficulties he finds in the practice of his art. In another he reflects on the stupidity and insensitiveness of optimists. Again, he makes a defence of dull company and describes the comfort and relaxation that it affords. Partial contents: On hating strangers; On vulgar optimists; The elusive letter; In praise of the normal woman; On haberdashers; Those terrible novelists; A defence of dull company; The cult of the revolver; On impressing acquaintances.

"There is a vein of cordiality and of genial good humor in 'I For One.' The essays in this collection have a turn of originality, a whimsicality of method and a substratum of seriousness that render them distinctive." S. A. Coblentz
+ N Y Times p15 My 11 '24 400w

"He is of the true breed, combining grace of form and leisure of mind with a certain suggested rather than displayed wisdom of life that seems indispensable to the essay at its best."
+ Outlook 137:365 Jl 2 '24 200w

PRITCHARD, FRANCIS HENRY. Training in literary appreciation. 237p $2 Crowell
801 Literature. Literary criticism 24-5615

The object of the book is to increase the enjoyment of reading and the appreciation of the more subtle beauties of literature. It shows that the reader's rôle is more than a passive one and that he should be able to judge correctly and confidently whether or not a book is a work of art. It lays down some of the principles by which a piece of writing is to be judged, illustrating thruout by example. Each chapter has a list of illustrative readings appended and a group of exercises.

Booklist 21:62 N '24

"Mr. Pritchard has done a workmanlike job, and, as a textbook for individual or class use, his book will doubtless prove helpful. From our standpoint, any conscious effort in the direction of making readers more discriminating is utterly futile. Admitting this bias, Mr. Pritchard's work seems as good as any on the subject—and far better than most."
+ — Bookm 59:478 Je '24 140w
Boston Transcript p6 Jl 23 '24 300w
Cath World 119:862 S '24 40w
Dial 77:348 O '24 80w

"It is the borrowed gems which enrich this book, the wealth of quotations of prose and poetry which must make it a delight to the casual reader. He has the gift possessed by men of wide reading and rich memories of summoning precisely the right line and verse to illustrate his points."
+ — N Y World p6e Ap 6 '24 340w

PRITCHARD, FRANCIS HENRY, ed. Essays of to-day. 261p $2 Little 824 24-5115

This collection of thirty-four essays is chosen as representative of the best work produced by English essayists during the last twenty years or so. Among the essayists are Richard Middleton, Kenneth Grahame, Joseph Conrad, Filson Young, Grace Rhys, A. A. Milne, E. V. Lucas, Robert Lynd, Vernon Lee, Hilaire Belloc, C. E. Montague, Alice Meynell, Holbrook Jackson, C. K. Chesterton, J. Middleton Murry and others.

Booklist 20:332 Je '24

"They are faithful to the best of their genre; but we cannot help wishing that they were also representative of their authors' work. For the most part they are too fragmentary to indicate in any way the stature of the writers."
+ — Bookm 59:479 Je '24 140w

"Anthologies at best are books of which there are enough, and when a new one comes along it has to be of more than ordinary interest to attract attention. In a schoolroom, however, if not on a library table, an anthology such as 'Essays of Today,' ought to find a welcome resting place."
Boston Transcript p4 Mr 1 '24 320w

"The purpose of making a genial and engaging collection of essays of the lighter meditative or whimsical kind with an admixture of literary or social criticism, has been well carried out."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 29 '24 300w
Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

PROUST, MARCEL. Within a budding grove; tr. by C. K. Scott Moncrieff. 2v 396:356p $5 Seltzer
24-15190

These two volumes are a translation of "A l'ombre des jeunes filles en fleurs" the second part of M. Marcel Proust's continuous autobiographical novel "A la recherche du temps perdu," an immense work which has not yet reached completion. The first part of this novel, "Du côté de chez Swann," has been translated and published in England and America as "Swann's way." A translation of the third and fourth parts of the novel is in preparation.

Booklist 21:70 N '24
Dial 77:523 D '24 150w

"In 'Swann's Way' Proust reveals 'things' of his childhood. 'Within a Budding Grove' invokes golden memories of his adolescence. The inexhaustible richness of his mnemonic material retards the movement of the story and dulls the interest of the reader who looks to plot for integration of episodes. Proust is suffering from an embarrassment of riches. Those who are not immediately repelled by the involved style, who love to come at grips with an idea, wrestle with it and make it their own, will find new delights with each re-reading." A. J. Levine
+ Lit R p979 Ag 23 '24 920w

"The English version of Proust is not the world's greatest translation, nor is Proust himself, for that matter, the greatest French prose writer of the age. He is, however, a fascinating and interesting chronicler and psychologist, with no sense of form, repetitious and careless, yet, the author of a work which promises to be for its epoch what Saint Simon's Memoirs were for the age of Louis XIV. There is no more delightful section than 'Within a Budding Grove.'" Ernest Boyd
Nation and Ath 36:220 N 8 '24 200w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir
Nation and Ath 46:220 N 8 '24 200w
N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 50w

Reviewed by Andrew Carey
Spec 134:19 Ja 3 '25 160w

Reviewed by Andrew Carey
Spec 134:52 Ja 10 '25 1050w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p648 O 16 '24 400w

PRUETTE, LORINE. Women and leisure; a
2 study of social waste; with an introd. by Harry Elmer Barnes. 225p $3 Dutton

396 Woman—Employment. Woman—Social and moral questions 24-23660

A study of women's place in the social order, their distribution in the various occupations, their preferences regarding home and career, etc. The study is based on careful investigation and questionnaires. Contents: The tendency to activity; The division of social labor; Women in the division of social labor; Occupational trends in the employment of women; Women who work for nothing; Shall the married woman work?—what three hundred men think about it; The choice: career versus home; Day dreams of the adolescent girl; Conclusions; Freedom to Adventure; Appendix; Index.

Booklist 21:137 Ja '25

Reviewed by G: MacAdam
N Y Times p15 Ja 4 '25 2200w

Outlook 139:38 Ja 7 '25 60w

"Unfortunately, Miss Pruette discloses a certain feminist or ultra-individualist bias in discussing the proper scope of women's activity. Despite skill and agreeableness in writing, lack of maturity is apparent. It is refreshing in these days of over-sexed literature—and even sociology—to find a young woman writer possessed of an ambition to eliminate sex attraction from the motives which influence human conduct. Nevertheless, one feels that she has entered upon the fulfilment of a rather large contract."
— + Springf'd Republican p8 O 14 '24 850w

PRYCE, RICHARD. Romance and Jane Weston. 322p $2 Houghton
24-25744

Jane Weston at thirty-six deliberately sets out on an adventure—to find the man whose image, tho she had seen him but once and then as suddenly lost him, she had carried in her heart for twelve years. It was on the pier at Brighton that she had seen him but it was to London that she went to find him and the story describes her quest.

Boston Transcript p4 D 10 '24 630w

"Outside of the story itself, the reader will almost certainly find delight in the vivid little sketches of life in London, as well as in the absurdities of the village life in Wales, and, always, in the evidence of the author's keen insight into character, and in his skill in the art of writing." M. T. H.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p35 N 23 '24 500w

Ind 114:106 Ja 24 '25 90w

"Mr. Pryce knows his people. He writes carefully and with no diffidence. He knows the power of sentences. He knows the pictures they suggest. And he is no niggard with pictures. I can't remember off-hand a novel which, without any showy pretensions, has given me so much in the color and movement of romance, and so little that outrages whatever sensibilities a reader of many novels has left." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p3 N 22 '24 500w

"A work of solidity and appeal. None the less, this novel is not altogether successful, for there is a jerky idiosyncrasy of style that reminds one of the worst oddities of 'If Winter Comes,' and the action is so slight that the structure is rent by a yawning gulf, filled with not particularly pertinent description."
— + N Y Times p8 N 9 '24 1000w

N Y Tribune p14 D 14 '24 200w

"At the moment we think of no author who could put so good a story together with so little. We found in reading Mr. Pryce's book never a page that dragged." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p9e N 16 '24 600w

Outlook 138:564 D 3 '24 130w

PURNA SIMHA (PURAN SINGH). Unstrung beads; prose and poetry from the Punjab; with an introd. by Ernest Rhys. 110p $2 Dutton [5s Dent]

891.4

"This is the second book in which Puran Singh has distilled his Indian essences for the English reader. The region that Puran Singh draws upon is that of the mighty and unknown Punjab. . . If we look for his immediate inspirers, we must turn first to the sacred poets and the saintly teachers among the Sikhs, the Gurus; and then to the influence of Rabindranath Tagore in India and Walt Whitman in America."—Introd.

"The author is clearly a disciple of Tagore, whom he reflects not only in his long flowing rhythms but in the mystical beads of his thought; yet he is by no means merely an echo of his master, but writes with a clear and individual note that is authentic. The book as a whole is composed in that unmetrical cross between prose and poetry which is popular nowadays."
+ Lit R p827 Je 14 '24 190w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman
Outlook 136:650 Ap 16 '24 80w

"Of course one does not look for consecutive ideas in these detached sentences, though in more than one section or chapter there is a certain continuity either of thought or of form. Many of the conceits too are pretty, and not a few contain ideas below the surface. Mr. Puran Singh would have been better advised to throw away some of his more worthless beads and to print the remainder."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 10 '24 380w

PUTNAM, ELIZABETH (LOWELL) (MRS WILLIAM LOWELL PUTNAM). Master lights. 117p $1.50 Houghton

814 24-5908

Brief essays on home and its relationships and the various aspects of every day living. Friendship, love, death, the bringing-up of children, mothers-in-law, grandchildren, twins, courage, citizenship, etc. are among the subjects treated.

"There is much talk of 'bed-side books' nowadays. It is scarcely just to relegate Mrs. Putnam's essays to that category. Rather we may call it an easy-chair book, a book to put us in a pleasant frame of mind when we are out of sorts with ourselves or with the world." E. F. E.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 2 '24 700w

"These little articles are of interest as a sincere and authentic reaction to some of the outstanding problems of life." S. A. Coblentz
+ N Y Times p15 My 11 '24 150w

"Common sense, well and wittily expressed, constitutes the charm of Mrs Putnam's little book that has come to the world of readers without any undue heralding and is therefore particularly welcome."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 20 '24 500w

PUTNAM, GEORGE HAVEN. Some memories of the Civil war; together with an appreciation of the career and character of Major General Israel Putnam. 301p $2 Putnam

973.7 United States—History—Civil war. Putnam, Israel 24-2363

"In this book he recalls for the benefit of the youngsters of to-day some of the incidents in which he figured as a Union soldier in the Civil War. There are interesting chapters on Abraham Lincoln, on Jefferson Davis, 'The Men behind the Guns,' 'The London Times and The American Civil War,' 'The Battle of Cedar Creek,' and a series of letters which the young officer wrote from Libby Prison, where he was confined as a prisoner of war sixty years ago. Major Putnam appends to these Civil War reminiscences an appreciation of the career and character of Major-General Israel Putnam, one of his ancestors, who was a leading figure in the American Revolution."—R of Rs

---

"We find a carelessness concerning non-essentials, which is the chief fault of the entire book. . . For the most part these papers are interesting. We generally feel in the same mood as Major Putnam, whether it be one of praise or blame." S. L. Cook

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ja 19 '24 1800w

"The temper of the book is bad but the ignorance of the author of the things he is discussing is worse. The writing of history, or even what purports to be history entails upon the writer a heavy responsibility. When he juggles with facts he commits a crime, one which is scarcely lessened by ignorance or lack of intention. The present author has not lived up to his responsibility in this case."

— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ap 27 '24 750w

"Tho made up of ten separate lectures or essays, the book has both narrative charm and atmospheric unity." E. L. Shuman

+ Int Bk R p433 My '24 900w

"This octogenarian sheaf is full of entertainment and instruction. General readers will find the chapters of military autobiography the most interesting, but they constitute less than a third of the whole."

+ Lit R p866 Jl 5 '24 680w

Reviewed by Augustine Birrell

Nation and Ath 35:87 Ap 19 '24 200w

"The book succeeds admirably in giving the atmosphere of the Civil War."

+ New Statesman 23:170 My 17 '24 260w

"He is as vigorous and resourceful as ever, equipped with a ready pen to offer advice or defend the views for which he contended in the past." C: De Kay

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 20 '24 1900w

Outlook 136:196 Ja 30 '24 20w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:334 Je '24

R of Rs 69:334 Mr '24 180w

"The incidental word portraits of the great men of the great struggle are exceedingly interesting." J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 132:sup422 Mr 15 '24 900w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 16 '24 1100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Ap 3 '24 800w

PUTNAM, MRS NINA (WILCOX). Easy. 269p $2 Harper

24-4868

Nancy Steerforth leaves her New England town to go to New York to develop a rather uncertain talent. Her experiences take her thru Greenwich Village poverty, eye-opening disappointments and finally, realization of her utter lack of genius. Meanwhile Easy, her childhood friend, becomes a federal prohibition agent hot on the trail of bootleggers and the chief of them in particular who turns out to be the mysterious and fascinating Russian who for a time held his spell over Nancy. In the adventurous days that follow Nancy returns to her home town to take part in the capture of the law-breakers and to prove to Easy her loyalty to him and his work. The background of the story serves as an illustration of the danger of unrestricted invasion of small towns by hordes of foreigners who maintain their own standards of living and submerge the original New Englanders thru force of numbers.

"Frankly, we do not care for the book."

— Boston Transcript p6 Ap 16 '24 400w

"If Nancy Steerforth and her brother Bobby are to be taken as representative Americans of the old stock one cannot feel that their displacement is either surprising or particularly regrettable."

— N Y Times p14 Mr 16 '24 450w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas

N Y Tribune p20 Mr 16 '24 380w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p7e My 18 '24 350w

PYESHKOFF, ALEXEI MAXIMOVICH. See Gorky, M., pseud.

Q

QUICK, HERBERT. Invisible woman. 488p $2 ^{2} Bobbs

24-27436

"Mr. Quick has carried his trilogy through to an end without a diminution of narrative interest, of skill in rendering character, or of historical fidelity. He began in 'Vandemark's Folly' with the westward movement of pioneers in the decade before the Civil War. In 'The Hawkeye' he treated the discontent of the prairie farmers and the slow growth of their Iowa community—materially, intellectually, and in civil decency—during the seventies and eighties. In this third novel he brings the story of the Gowdys, Vandemarks, McConkeys, and other good people of Monterey County down to 1900 or thereabouts; and he does it in such a way as to weave most of the original strands into a substantial fabric, with no loose ends."—Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 21:153 Ja '25

"One feels strongly in this novel the full tide of life in the Middle Western state during a period of wild speculation, of political machines, of invisible government, a vital period in the history of the West and a vital period also in the history of woman in public affairs. What 'The Hawkeye' was to the seventies and eighties, 'The Invisible Woman' is even more truly to the nineties. It is a very strong story." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '24 1150w

"Sometimes the incident and action upon which the author depends for the movement of history are a bit shopworn, but his scene is always vivid and colorful of the life of the time. His heroine is a vital creature, and he makes the reader realize her abundant endowment of spirit and charm; for love's sake, she makes herself a power behind the scenes, but still 'invisible' and her way of doing it is part of the book's success." F. F. Kelly

+ Int Bk R p136 Ja '25 830w

"It is a notable book. Herbert Quick knows the farm and something of politics. He knows even better the emotions and impulses that sway and swing the average man and the average woman. The Mid-West has found its real interpreter. The farm has its real novelist. Herbert Quick is giving the farm its genuine place in American letters." C. M. Morrison

+ Lit R p3 D 20 '24 750w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven

New Repub 41:265 Ja 28 '25 700w

"Mr. Quick's is a spacious canvas, pretty generously peopled with well-diversified types of character. And the story has a plot—something now considered out of fashion."

+ N Y Times p8 D 7 '24 930w

"Herbert Quick has everything that goes to the making of a great novelist except the selective faculty which gives the final form and finish. The raw materials are all in his possession; he has a broad grasp, a true apprehension of the elements of his subject; he presents it complete, root and branch and with the sap still in it, the color and flavor native to its locality. What he cannot quite do is to weed away the superfluous shoots and get the outline clear and graceful. His fidelity is a shade too literal. . . But, on the whole, this is a rich and rewarding novel, deeply felt and stoutly woven." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p4 D 7 '24 850w

Reviewed by L. R. E. Paulin

N Y World p9e D 14 '24 680w

Outlook 138:690 D 24 '24 240w

QUICK, HERBERT—Continued

"His trilogy is not so 'epic' as we thought it might be in reading 'Vandemark's Folly' and the first third of 'The Hawkeye.' It lacks the promised scope and has some decided faults. But it is by far the best historical presentation of the Middle West yet attempted in fiction, and it repeatedly touches greatness. It is worth every one's reading." Allan Nevins
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:341 D 6 '24 860w

QUICK, HERBERT. The real trouble with the farmers. 214p $2 Bobbs

631.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects 24-7221

"The author's main thesis is that high land values are the bane of the present day farmer, although high tariffs and exorbitant freight rates also come in for strong condemnation."—Wis Lib Bul

"Besides suggesting a remedy and strenuously urging it, Mr. Quick's book should awaken greater recognition of the seriousness of the agricultural situation and the necessity of some solution." W. K. H.
Boston Transcript p6 Ap 16 '24 1000w

"This author stands out conspicuously as the first distinguished champion of farming interests to identify the speculative land-value vampire as the farmers' economic enemy." L. F. Post
Lit R p756 My 17 '24 1200w

"Those who prefer not to think seriously about grave problems will do well to avoid this book. For having read it, no one can possibly dismiss its arguments by the mere exercise of our national self-complacency." Alvin Johnson
+ New Repub 38:264 Ap 30 '24 1500w

"As a farmer and a son of farmers Mr. Quick seems to know whereof he speaks. He is eloquent in the cause of the agriculturist, and clear, if not always convincing, in his analysis of various farming evils and their possible remedies."
+ N Y Tribune p23 My 11 '24 130w

Reviewed by C. F. Ansley
Survey 52:466 Jl 15 '24 80w
Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

QUICK, OLIVER CHASE. Catholic and Protestant elements in Christianity. 118p $2 (6s) Longmans

270 Christianity 24-4315

"This book is an attempt to penetrate to the fundamental differences in thought which underlie the theological controversies and ecclesiastical divisions of the modern church. The author endeavors to trace throughout various fields of Christian belief and practice the fundamental contrast between two ways of thinking. In relation to such subjects as the Sacraments, the Kingdom of God, and Religious Experience, his aim is to define more closely the more or less opposite values which Catholicism and Protestantism represent, and to suggest the need and the possibility of combining them in a full Christianity."—Publisher's note

"Canon Quick has contributed in the brief space of a hundred pages a thorough and dispassionate estimate of the elements of opposition between Catholic and Protestant points of view." W. K. H.
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '24 1100w
Cath World 119:568 Jl '24 160w
Lit R p766 My 17 '24 150w

"Canon Quick's philosophic scheme breaks down precisely because it is too schematic. The construction was well worth attempting; failure is better than acquiescence in unsystematic thinking. His analysis, though faulty, will have cleared the air. What he has conclusively shown to be needed is the synthesis of religious types which are now divergent."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p186 Mr 27 '24 1050w

QUILLEN, ROBERT. Path Wharton found. 257p $2 Macmillan

24-24346

"A young and brilliant clergyman loses his faith together with the loss of his father, his money and his fiancée. He goes to a small country town to bury his sorrow and is there persuaded to accept the simple and wholesome philosophy of the country and finally becomes converted in a revival meeting. He in turn becomes an Evangelist and the climax is reached when he brings to the fold the town villain against whom he had vowed severe revenge before the revival meetings."—N Y World

"Before Wharton finds his salvation there is action a-plenty. The book has no dazzling or brilliant lights, but it leaves one with the warm, soft touch of a southern sun." L. W. Frank
+ — Lit R p11 N 22 '24 330w
N Y World p9e N 16 '24 180w

"A good enough, conventional story, hampered neither by originality nor brilliancy."
— + Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 160w

QUINN, VERNON. Beautiful Mexico. 398p il $4 Stokes

972 Mexico—History. Mexico—Description and travel 24-23163

"The book is a history, narrated with a background of legend and scenery. There are many illustrations and an index. The whole epic sweep of the tale, from its mysterious beginnings at Palenque, Cholulu, Casas Grandes, to its temporary conclusion on the eve of a new presidency, is followed."—Sat R of Lit

"The story of Mexico is more fascinating than any romance, and Mr. Quinn has told it so admirably and so completely that he seems to have left little more to be said." E. B. S.
+ Lit R p13 N 8 '24 380w

"Every chapter is gravid with a full hundred-weight of diverse information. Legend and history, descriptions of scenery and Indian folk customs, a few thrilling passages from Spanish pirate tales, populations and industries are set down in a heap, all very painstaking, blameless and uninspired." K. A. Porter
— N Y Tribune p9 N 2 '24 320w
N Y World p8e O 5 '24 120w

"Rare is the single volume on Mexico which is at once so widely informative and so gracefully written as this." Marian Storm
+ Sat R of Lit 1:146 S 27 '24 500w

R

RADCLIFFE, WILLIAM HIRAM. Magic for amateurs. 149p $1.50 (4s) Appleton

793 Conjuring 24-5824

Fifty tricks which can be performed without long practice and with the simplest of apparatus are carefully explained. Each trick is illustrated by diagram.

Booklist 20:330 Je '24

"This little book doubtless will be very useful for any one who wishes to know how to furnish this kind of entertainment to his friends."
+ N Y Times p12 Mr 16 '24 250w
Outlook 137:112 My 21 '24 50w
Wis Lib Bul 20:93 Ap '24

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Desert's price. 354p $2 Doubleday

24-7108

A story of the cattle range, a tale of feud and romance. For years the McCanns and the Starks have openly carried on a bitter feud. When Julia Stark comes home from school in Los Angeles and sees Wilson McCann, there is the call of youth to youth. Then old Stark is found dead with a bullet hole in his temple and young McCann standing by. Almost simultaneously there is a shot and McCann falls. Enemies tho they are, Julia nurses him back to life. Despising him for what she believes he did, yet loving him for himself—she works out her own romance.

Booklist 20:341 Je '24

"This is an exciting story, very well told."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '24 500w

"William McLeod Raine has given us a story of a desert feud, of lives filled with active living, with great hates, great adventures, great loves—a story which holds the reader to the interest of the rapidly developing plot, but which, even more certainly, pleases him with the beauty of words and phrases." M. T. H.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ap 27 '24 250w

"Mr. Raine has written some twenty-four Western novels. He loves the old frontier. He has a keen dramatic sense and knows the country and the time of which he writes. His style is stripped for action and he can be counted upon to spin a good yarn without unnecessary flourishes and to hold the average reader's interest if he likes good stories of the West."
+ Lit R p762 My 17 '24 110w

"William MacLeod Raine is one of the few writers of the West who can tell a gripping story and knows what he is writing about."
+ N Y Times p9 My 18 '24 800w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p9a My 4 '24 250w

"An outstanding story, and one of the most original romances of the Wild West we have met with."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Je 26 '24 240w

RAMSAY, JANET. High road. 352p $2 Century
24-6232

"A novel by a musician about a musician. . . Peter Adams of 'High Road' is as 'Anglo-Saxon' as his name, and of long American descent. This is the story of him as a person, and also as a type of the American musician of high powers, struggling for development and recognition in an unfriendly or indifferent atmosphere. Peter's father, a college professor, gives him no encouragement. All his musical nurture comes from overseas—in Brandt the violinist; Krause, the musical conductor; and finally, Menoffsky, the great teacher in Berlin. And in the end (the end of this narrative) his ambition to be conductor of the excellent orchestra of his native city is denied, not because he isn't worthy of the post, but because he is Peter Adams, American."—Outlook

Booklist 21:28 O '24

"As a first novel, 'High Road' is warmly to be commended; as a capital picture of an intelligent and normal person's hard-working ambition to gain distinction as a musician, it has decided charm and intrinsic interest."
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '24 310w

Cleveland p42 Je '24

"Janet Ramsay has written a first novel which makes up in sincere and intelligent objectiveness what it lacks of twentieth-century self-consciousness. The story ends with a dramatic situation that is crystal clear, both as to plausibility and skill of treatment."
+ — Nation 118:688 Je 11 '24 60w

"The love scenes do not come off as well as they might, but withal it is a notable novel, written with great understanding and sympathy. The finest and most touching account of a high aspiration since 'The American Idyll.' "
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 30 '24 1000w

"For some reason not easily explicable this book leaves only a faint and blurred impression in the reader's mind. It is a good book: the hero is specious and likable, the story moves humanly, the style is simple and clear cut. The reader is credulous and interested in the book, but when he closes it—well, he has done with it. There is no post-mortem examination nor any living memory." Eva Goldbeck
— + N Y Tribune p28 Ap 20 '24 700w

"This is a sensitive and intelligent 'first' novel."
+ Outlook 136:746 Ap 30 '24 270w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:345 Jl '24

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 340w

RANKIN, HENRY BASCOM. Intimate character sketches of Abraham Lincoln; with a foreword by Ida M. Tarbell. 344p il $3 Lippincott

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 24-6259

Henry B. Rankin was a youth under twenty when he entered the law office of Lincoln and Herndon in Springfield, in 1856. For four years he watched with a young man's enthusiasm and reverence the growing powers of Lincoln and he saw him with the eyes of an idealist. His book is a collection of sketches and character-revealing incidents drawn from his own memories and the recollections of others who knew Lincoln. There is a chapter on Mrs Lincoln in Lincoln's life and one on Walt Whitman and Lincoln.

Booklist 20:298 My '24

Cleveland p46 Je '24

Lit R p982 Ag 23 '24 150w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p17 F 17 '24 560w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:327 Je '24

"While not of prime importance in a Lincoln collection, being not much unlike other books, it is the testimony of an eye-witness of Lincoln's life for four years and a consistent worshiper at his shrine ever since. He tries to dispose of alleged misjudgments and misstatements by some other authors."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 7 '24 230w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p357 Je 5 '24 300w

RANSOM, JOHN CROWE. Chills and fever. 95p $1.50 Knopf

811 24-21606

The author of these poems is a Tennesseean who was educated at Vanderbilt university and Oxford where he was Rhodes scholar from his state. His recent poetry has appeared in the Fugitive, a periodical of verse which he was instrumental in founding.

"He is daring of thought, dramatic, 'civilized' (I apologize for using that worn word, but it belongs here), erudite, and, one might add, esoteric in places, requiring study and considerable time from his readers for the full appreciation of what he has to say." B. L. Kenyon
Bookm 60:346 N '24 180w

"By all means let us be different. If you delight in the esoteric, read these verses. They will not touch your heart; but they pay court to any incipient longing you may have for the unexpected."
+ Boston Transcript p5 S 20 '24 250w

"This is a curious, charming, and irritating little book, and well-named." E. A. Niles
+ — Ind 113:347 N 1 '24 380w

"Precise in his expression, he is unusually successful in this crisp and cunning development of both idea and word melody. He is never glib, never reminiscent. His manner of thought and expression are individual, and his verse is fresh as green apples and invigorating as old wine." W. Y.
+ Lit R p15 S 27 '24 80w

RANSOM, JOHN CROWE—Continued

"There is a certain sardonic humor in Mr. Ransom's work, a twist of thought that is phrased in measures that cleverly escape colloquialism and yet suggest it. He does not depend upon poetical artifice, although he employs time and again an artifice that is his own and which seems to be compounded of sly humor and an agreeable pedantry." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p14 S 14 '24 580w

"Written in the manner of a fantastic dream, they have no meaning to which immediate logical reference can be made: yet their powerful persistence in the memory suggests that they have a meaning all right but one which the mind has grasped by other than logical routes of thought." Robert Graves

+ Sat R of Lit 1:412 D 27 '24 1300w

RATH, E. J., pseud. Dark chapter; a comedy of class distinctions. 306p $2 Watt, G. Howard 24-20556

Mrs Kilbourne's pet hobby is to convert tramps into respectable men—so Wade Rawlins one day finds himself to be the protegé and chauffeur of this benevolent woman. At first the entire household treats him with disdain, except fifteen year old Marian who becomes his staunch friend. Hilda, her attractive sister utterly disregards Wade until in an hour of dire need she is grateful for his assistance. The same is true of young Kane Kilbourne who uses the services of the tramp in an emergency, and even Mr and Mrs Kilbourne become his debtors. When a last minute "regret" threatens to ruin a dinner party, once more Wade renders a service to the Kilbourne family. It is evident he has all the traits of a gentleman and a scholar and none of those of a tramp. Who is he? Wade nonchalantly plays his game to a finish and ultimately becomes a respected member of the Kilbourne household.

"If ever there was an annoying piece of fiction it is 'The Dark Chapter.' Here is a whimsical bit of excellent fooling, which runs along honestly enough until the next to the last chapter. Then what has hitherto been a comic delight runs wild, becomes impossible and absolutely silly."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 6 '24 180w

Cleveland p85 N '24

"There are moments when [the characters] have a musical comedy flavor, but on the whole they are credible and appealing. One can spend a very agreeable afternoon with 'The Dark Chapter.' "

+ Int Bk R p825 O '24 340w

"A very amusing yarn."

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 13 '24 500w

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 50w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p7e Jl 27 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 150w

RATHBONE, CORNELIA KANE. Darkened windows. 265p $1.75 Appleton 24-8041

Flint, famous as a detective, had never had a more baffling problem than the Hurst murder. Mr Hurst is found dead at his writing desk, a bullet in his head. His beautiful young wife receives the news with too much composure, his daughter cannot be found, while Denis, an old family servant, acts strangely. Miss Smith, Mr Hurst's secretary, is also under suspicion. It is only thru a network of details that Flint comes across the pathetic reason for it all.

"Offers not only a plot in which the finger of suspicion points elusively to several characters but also affords an entertaining study in psychology." Blair Moody

+ Detroit News p14 S 14 '24 100w

"The story moves swiftly, with many devious twists and windings. It is an entertaining tale, with plenty of suspense and more than one surprise, concocted with no small degree of skill."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 13 '24 500w

"Fie upon this puny stuff!"

— N Y Tribune p23 Jl 13 '24 500w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 80w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p466 Jl 24 '24 50w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

RATHBONE, ELEANOR FLORENCE. Disinherited family; a plea for the endowment of the family. 324p $2.50 Longmans [7s 6d E. Arnold]

331.25 Family. Mothers' pensions [24-11230]

This study of the economic status of the family is a thorough examination of the present method of providing for families, and a discussion of alternate methods. The author traces the growth of the present system and its social effects—on the distribution of wealth, the character of national expenditure, the efficiency of the workers, the well being of their homes, wives and children, and the status of women as mothers and wage-earners. The second part of the book is given to a description of the experiments which other nations are making in the endowment of families and to a consideration of how these experiments may be applied to conditions in England. The proposal developed by the book is to provide for children, not, as now, by attempting to pay a living wage sufficient for an imaginary normal family but by family allowances for actually existing children, paid either by the state or by employers.

Int J Ethics 35:94 O '24 240w

"This is a very challenging and competent book. It deserves to be very widely read and discussed." D. H. Robertson

+ Nation and Ath 35:326 Je 7 '24 800w

"Miss Rathbone does her best—and it is a very good best. She is an enthusiast, but she can argue temperately; she not only expounds the case for endowment, but meets as fully as she can, if not always quite adequately, the objections that are brought against it."

+ New Statesman 23:132 My 10 '24 1100w

N Y Times p22 Je 22 '24 1000w

"The book deserves to be very widely read, and must be described as one of the most important contributions to social economics which has appeared for many years." A. J. Best

+ Spec 132:807 My 17 '24 400w

"Miss Rathbone's own proposals are set forth with the same mastery of detail as the rest of the book, the same judicial consideration of issues raised, and with the close reasoning that she commands in an uncommon degree. They deserve, and will receive sooner or later, general attention."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p215 Ap 10 '24 2000w

RAUSHENBUSH, HILMAR STEPHEN. Anthracite question. 165p $1.50 Wilson, H. W.

338.2 Coal industry

"The demands of the public, operators and miners in the anthracite industry conflict because they are based on radically different ideas about the place of the industry in the nation's life. The extent to which the present organization of the industry can give good service, decent wages and fair profits, and the possibility of improvement under nationalization, regulation, cooperative ownership, or the miners' plan of liquidation of ownership are considered, together with the effect of superpower development on the price of coal in the future. The book is based on the work of the United States Coal Commission and its recommendations are analyzed, bringing out all the essential facts of the industry. It will appeal to all who are interested in a change for the better in the price of coal and in labor relations in the industry."—Publisher's note

Am Econ R 14:536 S '24 70w
Wis Lib Bul 20:172 Jl '24

RAWLINSON, ALFRED. Adventures in the Near East, 1918-1922; introd. by Admiral Sir Percy Scott. 353p il $3.50 Dodd [25s Melrose]

940.4 European war, 1914-1919—Near East. Near East. Turkey—Description and travel 24-18775

Colonel Rawlinson was a British soldier who kept in action in the Near East for four years after the war was over. His adventures, gaily described, were of a most unusual and hazardous kind. They began in Mesopotamia in the Hush-Hush army, so-called, which went to the East in 1918 to engage in some rather desperate service. The second part is a description of his experience in Trans-Caucasia which throws an interesting light on the political conditions which existed in 1919 in Armenia and on the Russo-Turkish frontier. The third part, concerned with his experiences in Turkey, includes an account of his twenty months' imprisonment in Erzeroum.

Booklist 21:19 O '24

"Condensed with some selective skill to about 250 small pages, it might become an exceedingly interesting and informative exposition of the delicate problems that England has been attempting to solve in those restless regions around the Bosphorus. That it could, with any amount of revision, become something more than an exposition, remains highly doubtful."

— + Bookm 59:607 Jl '24 150w
Boston Transcript p6 Ag 6 '24 130w

"Colonel Rawlinson writes with precision and felicity—with an occasional discursiveness that is a part of his style. There is a wealth of material to claim one's interest. Careful attention to detail is perhaps the only quality that makes books dealing with unknown countries in any sense comprehensible; this and a thorough knowledge of them on the author's part. When both elements are present, as in this case, the reader is indeed fortunate." Kenneth Fuessle

+ Int Bk R p536 Je '24 660w

"Of the merit of this book as pure narrative it is difficult to say too much. Here is revealed, in a manner not too common in modern literature, the personality of a man who actually loved danger as the English Admirals, the great explorers of Elizabethan days, and the great fighters of medieval times seem to have loved it. Difficulties and perils are meat and drink to him; he loves travel, deserts, mountains and hardship. Much as he has suffered one doubts, as one lays down the book, whether Rawlinson would willingly blot out a word or an hour." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 My 4 '24 1550w

"The volume tells of war and peace in outlandish settings with a rush of incident."

+ N Y Tribune p22 Je 15 '24 80w
N Y World p6e My 11 '24 200w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Outlook 137:362 Jl 2 '24 60w
R of Rs 70:223 Ag '24 40w
St Louis p357 O '24

"Praise will not be lacking to this book for its many incidental merits and instead of superfluously joining in eulogies that will commend it to the less discriminating public, we should like to direct the attention of the critical to the rarest of the qualities it possesses. The exceptional harmony of actor and event by virtue of which the book, amateurish as it may sometimes be in what is commonly called style, has style in the higher sense, and produces finally the effect of a work of art. These, we feel, were exactly the experiences necessary for the character undergoing them, and just so would such a man meet them."

+ Sat R 136:167 Ag 11 '23 800w

"Colonel Rawlinson asks the reader to bear with his inexperience in writing, but there was no need for any such plea: the author has that gift of unaffected yet spirited narration which seems to come naturally to those who have lived through great experiences. Colonel Rawlinson makes plain words do their duty as well as he did his, which is the highest praise that can be given him."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p448 Jl 5 '23 1050w

RAWLINSON, ALFRED EDWARD JOHN. Authority and freedom. (Bishop Paddock lectures for 1923) 189p $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans

230 Authority (in religion) 23-18955

"The tutor of Christ Church College, Oxford, gave the Paddock Lectures in 1923, and met the timely problem of the compatibility of individual freedom with the recognition of authority. The author makes it very clear that there is no remedy for the spiritual sickness of the modern world in a régime of authority without freedom, but he counters with the claim that there is no solution of our problems in a mere insistence on freedom without authority. We cannot dispense with corporate historical tradition, we cannot overlook the tested and criticised experience of the past. Sacramental and institutional religion is a normal and in general a necessary means to genuine Christianity."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 26 '24 200w
Cath World 120:282 N '24 170w

"The reader will find much of inspiration in some of the more glowing passages of 'Authority and Freedom.' "

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 9 '24 500w
St Louis p367 N '24

"In some points Mr. Rawlinson's thought seems to need more precision, if it is to give practical guidance. But the little book is full of good things, admirably said."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p276 My 8 '24 1700w

RAYLEIGH, ROBERT JOHN STRUTT, 4th
2 baron. John William Strutt, third baron Rayleigh. 403p il $8 Longmans [25s Arnold]

B or 92 Rayleigh, Robert John Strutt, 3rd baron

An account by his son of the scientific career of the great English physicist, 1842-1919, whose investigations have filled up gaps in nearly every part of the field of physics. The book dwells at considerable length on his Cambridge professorship, his friendship with Lord Kelvin, his laboratory at Terling and the domestic and social life there, and his discovery of argon which his biographer describes as the most dramatic event in Lord Rayleigh's scientific career.

Reviewed by Edmund Noble
Boston Transcript p3 N 29 '24 2100w

"His son's description of Lord Rayleigh's work is a triumph of lucidity, but his aim has been 'to depict him as a man,' and he has succeeded; the picture is unremarkable and uninspiring."

+ — Nation and Ath 36:372 D 6 '24 340w

"This book has itself the qualities most appropriate to its subject: integrity, lucidity and order. It is a book for the general reader."

+ New Statesman 24:111 N 1 '24 1350w

"Lord Rayleigh has performed the task of writing the life of his illustrious father with great skill. His own distinguished career as a physicist enables him to appreciate his father's great services to the scientific world at their true value, and to explain them in a fashion which even the non-scientific reader can understand."

+ Sat R 138:449 N 1 '24 620w

RAYLEIGH, R. J: S.—Continued

"In the 'Life' a quiet, restrained, but effective, account of his researches is given. And though filial restraint prevents anything in the nature of over-emphasis, leads indeed to a certain amount of under-emphasis, a reader can hardly fail to allow for this, and to be impressed both with the magnitude and with the modesty of the great man whose life and work is being described." Oliver Lodge

+ Sat R of Lit 1:413 D 27 '24 1500w

"The biography is intended to depict him not as a scientist but as a man, and those who are willing to watch the even flow of a useful and industrious life, without much adventure or surprise, will find in this book a sympathetic study of a very remarkable mind." Philip Morrell

Spec 133:sup690 N 8 '24 1150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p619 O 9 '24 1850w

RAYMOND, MRS DORA (NEILL). Political career of Lord Byron. 363p $3 Holt

B or 92 Byron, George Gordon Noël Byron, 6th baron 24-10051

Wherever Byron travelled on the continent he threw himself with ardor into the cause of liberty and championed revolutionary movements. In Spain, in Italy, and particularly in Greece he endeared himself to those who were struggling to be free. It is with the part he played in the revolutionary politics of Europe that this book is chiefly concerned and with the influence of these activities upon his verse.

Reviewed by J: Donelson

Bookm 59:741 Ag '24 50w

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 30 '24 220w

"An excellent piece of monographic work which can also be read with enjoyment." W: MacDonald

+ Int Bk R p791p O '24 450w

"It is the personality, rather than the poet whom Miss Raymond, with a zest of phrase and sweep of narrative art brings home to our imagination and our critical intelligence. . . The story of Byron in Greece has never been so well told." W: E. Leonard

+ Nation 119:50 Jl 9 '24 550w

"Miss Raymond has written her book in a clear succinct fashion and with a high degree of effect. The narrative moves swiftly and coherently. This is a book that was needed, for it brings out in more explicit fashion a side of Byron's nature and activities that forms but a subsidiary portion of the various 'Lifes.'"

+ N Y Times p2 Je 1 '24 950w

"What Mr. Chew does for Byron's literary and social career in England, Miss Raymond does for his political experiences at home and for the political influence he exercised abroad during the sinister days of the Holy Alliance. She shows some rather overwrought touches of femininity at her start, and perhaps also at her finish, but in the main she keeps the solid and sober tone best approved by history." H: B. Fuller

+ — N Y Tribune p23 My 4 '24 980w

"This study is charming in its vivid presentation, and instructive as well, because it brings back to our minds some facts mostly overlooked or forgotten."

+ Outlook 137:444 Jl 16 '24 300w

St Louis p387 N '24

"Sympathetic, often humorous, cogent, and at all times well-written, 'The Political Career of Lord Byron' is a book not only to be valued by the student of the period, but by all those who have a flair for either poetry or statesmanship." H. G. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 900w

RAYMOND, ERNEST. Damascus gate. 324p $2 Doran [7s 6d Cassell]

23-17844

"Its theme is a strong one: the battle between sexless love and sexual passion in two cousins, boy and girl, who are drawn together by a binding companionship of soul and aptitudes, while driven apart in their need to find sex-mates elsewhere. Oscar Shattery, the self-made inventor, a fascinating creature for all his Nietzschean hardness and self-confidence, is never happy without the sympathy and encouragement of his cousin Lella Pool, nor she unless she can be giving him from her large, loyal nature the support he relies on. Yet she must needs marry the handsome worldly priest, Henry Guard, and he the poor pretty doll, Dorothy Byron; Oscar and Lella do not thus love each other. This is the deep-lying conflict that gives rise to many others: conflicts between rival ideals of ambition and service, surrender to passion and asceticism, trust in self and trust in God."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The happy augury of Mr. Raymond's earlier novel, 'Rossenal,' is fulfilled in this notable character study of two arresting temperaments, alike as much by their even more marked similarities." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 30 '24 1000w

Cleveland p66 S '24

"'Damascus Gate' is one of those thoroughly satisfactory English novels that hold one's attention until read and about which it afterwards is somehow difficult to say much. That is to say, the book has form and content; its end is an end; all points are scored below the line; its characters seem all present or accounted for. . . As an analysis of an original and virile man impaled on a cruel dilemna the book is an excellent piece of characterization, but better than that, it tells a story and eschews pointing the moral of its tale."

+ Lit R p693 Ap 19 '24 400w

"In spite of a looseness in construction and a theme that often sags out of sight under the weight of extraneous circumstances; Ernest Raymond has created an unusually entertaining and pleasing novel in 'Damascus Gate.'"

+ — N Y Times p24 F 3 '24 720w

"The story is a patchwork, but bright and brisk, even in the first and weakest half." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p22 Ja 27 '24 1100w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Ja 27 '24 450w

"Written in a vein of sentimental flamboyance which almost makes us believe, in the teeth of common sense, that the author takes the ass seriously. Even so, he need not have made him such a cad." Gerald Gould

— Sat R 135:811 Je 16 '23 180w

"This book marks an advance on 'Rossenal,' and we think also on 'Tell England,' in strength and firmness of characterization."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p402 Je 14 '23 500w

RECHT, CHARLES. Rue with a difference. 318p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

24-23486

"The story concerns an advertising copywriter by the name of Homer Satterlee, who falls madly in love with a beautiful chorus girl who, however, is mentally and spiritually incapable of returning his love, although she finds his society quite pleasant. His intense jealousy of other and richer men coupled with his rather childish mortification at being unable to make her love him, drives him almost insane. He flees to Europe from Gloria, the chorus girl, thereby hoping to conquer his infatuation. Despite the fact that, while abroad he takes advantage of the youthful longings of a Nebraska college girl and, later, accepts the complete surrender of an old sweetheart, who has been recently divorced and is deeply in love with him, his passion for Gloria does not wane."—N Y World

"Mr. Recht seems to have killed his book by a lack of originality and an amount of pedagogic detail." R. D. G.

— Boston Transcript p7 S 27 '24 450w

Reviewed by E. E. Cummings
Lit R p12 S 13 '24 720w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 119:382 O 8 '24 1050w

"Lest it be thought that Mr. Recht's story lacks interest by reason of seriousness and social criticism, we hasten to add that it is unusually rich in fictional values. Its action would supply material for a moving picture drama, and Herbert Satterlee's mind would show up well on the screen." R. M. L.
New Repub 40: 54 S 10 '24 320w

"'Rue With A Difference' is an intense novel that is sustained to a difficult, but well-wrought, conclusion. It is brilliant, but uneven. At times it reaches distinctive heights of power, only to sink to bathos. In places it suffers much from wordiness and overwritten scenes. But it is probing, colorful and powerful."
— + N Y Times p8 S 14 '24 900w

N Y Tribune p9 S 21 '24 340w

"On the whole, the story is a rather labored and improbable patchwork piece of psychological study which, while attempting originality, brilliance and a clever analysis of the hero's mentality, achieves little but pedantry, unnecessary frankness and absurdity." G. H. S.
— N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 320w

"It is efficiently managed, though considerably overdone. Mr. Recht can be witty, and neatly epigrammatic, and sometimes he attains a grim humorousness, though his sense of humor does not keep him from dropping into extended passages of versification that are not altogether happy."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:150 S 27 '24 460w

REDFIELD, WILLIAM COX. With Congress and cabinet. 307p $3 Doubleday
353 United States—Politics and government
24-6006

The chapters are based on a series of ten articles by the Secretary of commerce during the Wilson administration which appeared originally in the Outlook during 1923. They form, not an autobiography or even a connected narrative, but rather a series of impressions gained during eight and a half years in Washington, of the government and particularly his own department at work, and of the cabinet in session. He gives a brief characterization of each member of the cabinet and a chapter to President Wilson.

Am Econ R 14:732 D '24 100w

"This simple, unadorned tale of a successful manufacturer, exporter and production expert, who has traveled widely and observed clearly, will be interesting and instructive reading for any citizen." J: L. Conger
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:632 Ag '24 370w

Boston Transcript p6 My 24 '24 430w

Cleveland p54 Jl '24

"It is timely and interesting in the light it throws upon the history of these past few years, but it is of far greater value in the light it throws upon the government of the United States during the Wilson administration or any other administration. In that respect, it is worth any number of textbooks on the subject. No better statement has been written in regard to the relation of the legislative branch of the government to the administrative system. . . The chapters abounding in references to President Wilson show that Mr. Redfield retained to the end his confidence in, and affection for, his chief."
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 11 '24 2300w

"Mr. Redfield's book is too disconnected in subject-matter to hold a permanent place in the literature of the science of government, and it is too casual and impersonal to be ranked as biography. It will decidedly interest, however, those who have lived or served in Washington." Hamilton Holt
+ — Int Bk R p508 Je '24 1050w

"Mr. Redfield's book concerning his experiences in Washington as a Cabinet officer and a Congressman is disarmingly naive. His comments are sometimes the insignificant platitudes of the average industrial magnate which we have become accustomed to take for much more than they are worth in the form of newspaper interviews and statements." M. R. Werner
— Lit R p721 My 3 '24 650w

"Taken as a whole Mr. Redfield's book seems hardly worthy of publication in such admirable format. It contains, to be sure, interesting sidelights and observations on Washington affairs, but they touch only on matters that have been revealed more thoroughly in many earlier books." H. E. Barnes
— + Nation 119:378 O 8 '24 280w

"His views on this and that are set down brightly and independently, with enough anecdotes and reminiscences to keep up the narrative interest throughout and enough criticism to feed the thoughtful student."
+ N Y Tribune p28 Jl 13 '24 120w

"Had the author been a natural-born writer of memoirs he would have given us a more vivid picture of the Cabinet in action, and more satisfactory portraits of his colleagues about the Cabinet table. Of Wilson we are given less than would be expected—a few high lights—but these are interesting and suggestive." C. G. Powers
— + N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 550w

"It is a constructive contribution to public understanding of our problems of governmental administration. It is a pungent and outspoken yet essentially judicious analysis of those problems as Mr. Redfield encountered them when secretary of commerce."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 21 '24 1200w

REDMAN, BEN RAY. Masquerade. 53p $1.50 McBride
811
23-18295

Mr Redman, critic and translator, has put into this little volume the best of his poems. They vary greatly in style and theme. The book is divided into two sections—the first part entitled Men, women and words, has a slight touch of satire, which is quite apart from the serious beauty of the second part, The owl's heart.

"There is a robustness about the book despite its simple construction and its slender form, which makes much of the current poetical output seem colorless as plants raised without sunlight."
+ Bookm 58:227 Ap '24 80w

"Pleasant reading. They describe familiar people, amusingly, with an irony not too profound, and unsubtle melodies, and are much more successful than the ambitious lyrics with which the volume closes."
+ — Dial 76:289 Mr '24 80w

Freeman 7:622 Mr 5 '24 220w

"Clarity alone does not make poetry, and finality is essentially a virtue of prose. Mr. Redman's perceptions at the present stage are more interesting than his art."
+ — Nation 118:95 Ja 23 '24 80w

"Mr. Redman has been acclaimed as a satirist—and there is no question of his gift. But this collection of his poems proves him more than that,—one 'on fire for beauty' and 'ensnaring' it, although transmitting it tarnished with bitterness." D. B. W.
+ — New Repub 37:345 F 20 '24 320w

"One finds in Mr. Redman's poetry a fine irony, light, glancing, always nicely shaded to the subject, and too aloof to be damaging, even when, as is frequently the case, the subject is some false ideal of his generation. This irony of his is, indeed, of a kind not too common nowadays, and being less a matter of style and mood than of a natural and permanent turn of mind, it is really the essence of Mr. Redman's verse." Hunter Stagg
+ — N Y Tribune p24 Ja 20 '24 1300w

REED, THOMAS HARRISON. Government and politics of Belgium. 197p $1.60 World bk.
354.493 Belgium—Politics and government

This little volume in the Government handbook series provides a brief outline of the essential features of Belgium's governmental organization and party system. Contents: Land, language, and people; The beginnings of the Belgian state; The constitution; Electors and elections; The chambers; King, ministers, and administration; The administration of justice; Local government; Political parties; Index.

"Since the book is meant to be only an introduction to the subject it is to be regretted that there is no 'selected bibliography' at the end of each chapter, and that no 'critical bibliography' has been appended. The book has one merit which should not be overlooked; it is extremely readable. Morever, Mr. Reed seems to have caught the spirit of the Belgian people, which lends added value to his work." F. E. Willis
+ — Am Pol Sci R 18:634 Ag '24 600w

"Every student of political history will necessarily be interested in this volume, which was written after first-hand study of conditions in Belgium and after discussions with numerous Belgians of all ranks and parties."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 19 '24 140w
R of Rs 69:448 Ap '24 100w

"This book is written after first hand study of conditions and discussions with numerous Belgians of all ranks and parties."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 24 '24 350w
Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 19 '24 350w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p467 Jl 24 '24 40w

REESE, LIZETTE WOODWORTH. Wild cherry. 68p $1.50 Norman, Remington co.
811 23-15950

A book of short poems, nearly all of which have appeared in periodicals. The themes of most of the poems are nature or death.

"Miss Reese is a born lyrist and in one or two instances she has fused emotion, inspiration, and phrasing into achievements that possess as much enduring quality as any work of this generation. 'Wild Cherry' exhibits her at her best, although there appear to be no sudden high peaks in it. Here are musical lyrics with poignant twists in them, lucent sonnets, and gentle portraits, all done with an unlabored art that is unquestionably part of the older tradition." H. S. Gorman
+ Bookm 58:667 F '24 100w

"The majority of poems in 'Wild Cherry' are nature poems. The note is never forced and never false. Courage and Honesty, the mainstays of the human spirit, have carried Miss Reese through life and through poetry with a faith as beautiful as it is true." J. L. McL.
+ Boston Transcript p13 Mr 29 '24 650w

"A collection of old-fashioned poems which possesses a certain mild quality of its own. Miss Reese's reactions are for the most part ordinary, but now and again one comes upon very charming lines which seem to carry with them an authentic personal note."
+ — Dial 76:372 Ap '24 120w

"America should be proud that in this materialistic age it can still contain a singer so aloof from the clamor of jazz and motors. Miss Reese has held her fort through perilous days. May she long continue to sing her haunting songs for us all." C: H. Towne
+ Int Bk R p599 Jl '24 620w

"Lizette Woodworth Reese continues to write delightfully and delicately and lyrically as she has been doing for the past thirty years, and her steadiness, covering so long a period, is something to be envied by the many meteor writers of the day. 'Wild Cherry' is fragrant with blossoms and flowers and just as fresh as if blossoms and flowers had never been put in poems before."
+ Lit R p568 Mr 1 '24 150w

"If there is no diminution of freshness or clarity in 'Wild Cherry,' the latest volume from this poet, neither is there perceptible increase of maturity, though there is no disparagement in such a statement, since her early work was as finished, as perfected as it well could be, and on the other hand, time can only clarify an element where there is no pollution." E. M. Berelt
+ N Y Tribune p19 F 17 '24 500w
Reviewed by D: Morton
+ Outlook 136:439 Mr 12 '24 800w

REEVE, ARTHUR BENJAMIN. Atavar; a Craig Kennedy novel. 360p $2 Harper
24-11233

"A Craig Kennedy story of murder and mystery. This tale begins with the killing of Guy Hawtry, who is found dead in his house in New York the morning after his supper at a jazz palace with Natalie Lisle, a lovely dancer. The story leads the reader through strange hidden places in Manhattan, and reaches to a pirate cave in the West Indies. Even bootleggers find a place in it."—N Y World

Boston Transcript p4 Je 4 '24 380w

"All in all it ranks well with Mr. Reeve's former work. It has all the virtures of the novel of plot, and in this case the added one of a deal of sophisticated and sane comment on present-day social conditions."
+ N Y Times p24 Je 8 '24 720w
N Y Tribune p24 Jl 13 '24 260w
Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e My 18 '24 100w

REEVES, JEREMIAH BASCOM. Hymn as literature. 369p $2 Century
245 Hymns 24-6671

Dr Reeves's study of the hymn begins by giving it its rightful place in literature as the most popular form of English poetry. He analyzes the qualities which make a great hymn, sketches the history of hymnody, the development of the native English hymn and of English psalmody. Chapters are given to those great hymn-writers, Isaac Watts, the Wesleys and Reginald Heber and to some of the modern hymnists. The concluding chapter sums up the meaning of the hymn-book and its teaching. Bibliography and index.

"A fascinating and discriminating study. Students and general readers will find here a mine of absorbing information." E. E. F.
+ Bookm 59:adv My '24 100w
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 12 '24 950w

"Without detracting in any way from this helpful and interesting book, it is to be regretted that Dr. Reeves did not also stress the importance of the relation of music to the religious lyric." W. C. Stevens
+ — Lit R p772 My 24 '24 2050w

"A valuable addition to the study of the history and the social significance of literature."
+ N Y Times p23 Ap 6 '24 650w

"Dr Reeves makes a welcome contribution to the literature of hymnody with this comprehensive treatise."
+ N Y Tribune p27 Je 15 '24 80w

REID, ANNETTE. Off the high road. 187p il $2 Appleton
24-7109

Simple stories of English village life, illustrated by C. E. Brock and with twelve photographs of English country scenery. Contents: The beacon; William's sweetheart; A summer idyll; Lena's love story; Autumn sunshine; Purple and fine linen; Martha's treasure; At the white gate; A war hero; Beyond the hills.

"Miss Reid not only describes but interprets English village life, her sympathy making even more appealing a unique charm."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 23 '24 130w

"They are very simple and very conventional, and the slightest of them are the best. The book has been charmingly illustrated with sketches by C. E. Brock, and with twelve photographs which will surely give nostalgia to any one who loves the English countryside."

+ — N Y Times p16 Ap 13 '24 350w

Outlook 137:110 My 21 '24 140w

"Mr. Brock's lovely little pictures give grace to the stories, and the book as a whole is fragrant with country content, and redolent of peace. It is also charmingly produced."

+ Sat R 136:1036 D 29 '23 110w

"The book is just a quiet look into the lives of quiet people 'off the high road' as the title suggests. It is typically English and has the charm of the countryside which still does charm a considerable school of readers."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 90w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p854 D 6 '23 60w

REID, EBENEZER EMMET. Introduction to
^{2} organic research. 343p $4.50 Van Nostrand

542 Chemistry, Organic 24-28865

"A well written book on an important subject hitherto inadequately treated. Will be serviceable in a much more extended field than indicated by the title. It will be invaluable to research workers, and the discussion of laboratory and plant research should be suggestive to all chemists. Approximately one-third of the book is devoted to chemical literature, the use of libraries, and the writing of papers and reports. The information given on these latter topics should be of value to scientists and technical men in general."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:591 D '24

REPPLIER, AGNES. Under dispute. 334p $2 Houghton

814 24-12777

Twelve essays reprinted from periodicals. Contents: The masterful Puritan; To counsel the doubtful; Are Americans a timid people? The happiness of writing an autobiography; Strayed sympathies; The divineness of discontent; Allies; They had their day; The preacher at large; The battlefield of education; The American laughs; The idolatrous dog.

Booklist 21:17 O '24

Bookm 60:354 N '24 100w

"One thinks of the book as a plea for sanity and truth; for an acceptance of the world as it is, and things as they are." A. B. De Mille

+ Ind 113:162 S 13 '24 310w

"She has not a little of Lang's sanity and common sense, of his wit and humor and irony. Like Lang she has a retentive memory to retain the results of her wide reading. Like him, again, she has a well-nourished mind; and like him she does her own thinking, sharing his hearty distaste for sham and humbug and affectation in its myriad masks." Brander Matthews

+ Int Bk R p780 O '24 1100w

"As inevitably as day follows night does Agnes Repplier find a specious justification for the orthodox attitude toward any given set of circumstances. With all the air of a discerning impartial observer she, at every new turn, with the utmost regularity adopts and defends the least enlightened and least philosophic point of view. Courageous, unbiased thinking is not, to use her own phrase, her long suit." Llewelyn Powys

— Nation 119:76 Jl 16 '24 950w

"There is one annoying feature of the essays which go to make up 'Under Dispute.' Miss Repplier's method is not to go directly at her subject, and for this reason she cannot—in this volume at least—be truly classed as an essayist. All considered, however, Agnes Repplier is one of America's most delightful magazine essayists. Her wit never turns acid; her urbanity does not become flattery; and her light, if not full-orbed, like the sun, nevertheless burns with a steady, ingratiating glow."

+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 6 '24 800w

"Miss Repplier is forthright, incisive, witty; but she lacks the whimsicality, she does not give us the nuances, the bouquet, of a Stevenson or a Lamb."

+ — Outlook 138:64 S 10 '24 320w

St Louis p350 O '24

Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 28 '24 500w

Wis Lib Bul 20:210 O '24

REUTER, BERTHA ANN. Anglo-American relations during the Spanish-American war. 208p $1.75 Macmillan

327.73 United States—History—Spanish-American war. United States—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—United States 24-13250

This study of diplomatic relations between Great Britain and the United States is based not only upon an examination of official documents but on contemporary public opinion as expressed in the periodical literature of the time and other source material showing the relation between such opinion and governmental action. The book opens with an analysis of the anti-British feeling which had its roots in colonial times. It traces the gradual growth of a better feeling and shows how Anglo-American ties were strengthened during the war.

"It is a piece of scholarly work well done."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 2 '24 200w

"It is the more valuable because Miss Reuter has gone for her material not only to Government archives and diplomatic records but also to the periodical literature of the time. From this she has gained not only color and interest but also an insight into a vital factor of the subject."

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 6 '24 440w

REUTER, EDWARD BYRON. Population problems. (Lippincott's sociological ser.) 338p $2 Lippincott

312 Population 23-15357

The purpose of the book is not to advance a general theory of population but to consider in a simple, non-technical way some of the practical related problems—the composition and distribution of populations, the relation between immigration and the native birth rate, race mixtures, the problem of quality and of inferior and superior individuals in the population. There is a reading list at the close of each chapter.

Booklist 20:249 Ap '24

Cleveland p12 F '24

R of R's 69:224 F '24 80w

"Population Problems is a book warmly to be recommended wherever people are trying to understand what they are and what are likely ways out instead of merely seeking rational support for their preconceived notions. For college students, more particularly, a course of study based upon it should prove valuable." B. L.

+ Survey 52:104 Ap 15 '24 780w

REYMONT, WLADYSLAW STANISLAW. Autumn; tr. from the Polish [by Michael H. Dziewicke] (v 1 of Peasants). 261p $2.50 Knopf

The award of the Nobel prize for literature to the Polish novelist Reymont for his four-volume peasant epic "The Peasants" has called wide attention to that novel. This is the first of its four parts, each of which is called by the name of a season. The novel is the chronicle of a Polish village under the old Russian rule. It follows the daily round of peasant life through the circle of the year—toils and pleasures and customs and the drama of human loves and hates. Tragedy centers in the person of the heroine who comes between father and a son, rivals for her love.

REYMONT, W. S.—Continued

"The life depicted is without purpose as it is without hope—photographically true and artistically unintelligible. There is a certain lyric brevity in the descriptions of season and country which serves as a relief to the squalor of the characters. Yet the book ought to be read, all four parts of it, for it uncovers some of the roots of Slavonic discontent." G. C.
Ind 113:494 D 6 '24 250w

"Had 'Autumn' been one-half as long as it is now, it might have been read not only with profit but with great pleasure. I, for one, should like to know what happens to Boryna and his Yagna in the remaining three volumes, but I know in advance that if those volumes show the same 'breadth' of treatment as the first one I shall never be able to read them." Edwin Bjorkman
— + Lit R p3 D 6 '24 900w

"It is an extremely clever and carefully documented revelation of life in a Polish village."
+ N Y Times p19 N 16 '24 530w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 50w

"'Autumn' is not merely a narrative of Polish lands and men; the same emotions, the same impulses are alive in the breasts of the tiller everywhere. Yet in spite of this universal aspect, there is still that wealth of local color, full of vivid detail and sometimes morbid contrast that makes 'Autumn' essentially Slavonic." F. V. Roman
N Y World p9e N 23 '24 650w

"Not so much a novel as a prose epic, elemental, undidactic, and primitive, full of a natural poetry, narrating the life and adventures of a village rather than telling the story of a hero and heroine. The very order of the volumes is significant, for the rural year begins in autumn, and ends in summer with the harvesting, which is the final splendid picture upon which Reymont closes." Ernest Boyd
+ Sat R of Lit 1:317 N 29 '24 1700w

REYNOLDS, GERTRUDE M. (ROBINS) (MRS LOUIS BAILLIE REYNOLDS). His second venture. 317p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
24-22566

Gallant Colonel Caron, a widower from India with three wilful children, is forced by the designing Rita Knight, a widow, to marry her daughter Valery, an overgrown school-girl. The Colonel on his wedding day leaves on an expedition for South Africa and does not return for two years. Meanwhile, Valery has become a scholar and a beauty. The rest of the story concerns itself with the difficulties Col. Caron encounters in wooing and winning his beautiful wife.

Ind 113:401 N 15 '24 250w
New Statesman 24:182 N 15 '24 330w

"This is frankly a sentimental story based on the familiar plot of a fascinating man who marries a woman he dislikes and later sues for the love he has scorned."
— Sat R of Lit 1:384 D 13 '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p633 O 9 '24 220w

RICE, CALE YOUNG. Pilgrim's scrip; poems for world wanderers. 172p $1.50 Century [5s Hodder & S.]
811 Poetry of places 24-26943

A collection of Mr Rice's poems relating to places. Contents: The British islands and Gibraltar; America and Honolulu; Japan; China; The Straits settlement and Burma; India and Thibet; Persia, Afghanistan and Arabia; Egypt; Palestine and Syria; Greece; Italy.

Booklist 21:104 D '24

"The book has praiseworthy points and has some pleasant or entertaining things to recount about all these lands; yet somehow it fails to be stirring or provocative." B. L. Kenyon
— + Bookm 60:345 N '24 150w

"Lyrics to lift the heart, melodies to haunt the brain. We are tempted to quote them all. He will miss much who does not know them."
+ Boston Transcript p5 S 20 '24 500w

"Although the quoted opinion, 'the first and most distinguished of modern American lyrists,' is injudicious praise, Mr. Rice controls a vivid verse that makes a magic carpet for those whose far-journeying must be done in dreams." J. T. Shipley
+ — Lit R p13 O 4 '24 300w

"Mr. Rice's verse is not poetry of the highest order. Too often the thought or emotion fails and the poem drops inadequate at the end. Nor are his lines tuned in rhythm and sound quality to the feeling which is there. Too many are commonplace—fail to sink stinging into the reader's consciousness—although he has some clear, pleasing figures." G. H. Busey
— + N Y Tribune p9 O 19 '24 400w

"Its infectious lilt, its quite astonishing verve, will speed the traveller across continents and serve well enough when he has the local substance to set beside the song; but for others so much of it must seem to lack just that 'quintessence of experience' which Mr. Rice rightly claims it to be poetry's function to distill."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p342 My 29 '24 400w

RICE, GRANTLAND. Songs of the open. 227p $1.50 Century
811 24-21795

These are not only songs of the outdoors, but poems of courage and contest, of the sporting field and the battle line.

Boston Transcript p6 N 1 '24 200w

"Grantland Rice's new book, 'Songs of the Open,' is a sturdy clarion of fellowship, humor and work." H. B. A.
+ Lit R p11 O 25 '24 210w

RICHARDS, MRS CLARICE (ESTABROOK). Tenderfoot bride. 226p il $2 Doubleday
917.8 Ranch life A24-713

Clarice Richards tells her own story of her early days on a ranch. Coming as a bride, bred in the ease and luxury of the East, she finds that ordinary daily living upon a ranch is a thing of adventure. With briskness and enthusiasm she tells how she and her husband conquered that western wilderness. Her story, as varied in experiences as any thriller, has the advantage of being a true narrative.

"This little narrative is an unusually readable example of a type of book not uncommon in recent years. It is autobiographical in substance, but it has much of the effect of fiction. It is 'a good story' as well as a true one."
+ Lit R p841 Je 21 '24 320w

"'The Tenderfoot Bride' should be a welcome addition to the files of Americana, for it contains within its covers a truer picture of ranch life in the West than a dozen or more 'Western stories' bearing all too plainly the 'dime novel' brand."
+ N Y Times p25 Mr 30 '24 600w

RICHARDS, GERTRUDE MOORE (MRS WALDO RICHARDS), comp. Magic carpet; poems for travellers. 510p $3 Houghton
821.08 Poetry of places. English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections
24-11574

"An anthology for travellers. Poems are arranged by countries, so forming an interesting and useful index to poems of places."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 21:18 O '24

"There has seldom been launched a book bearing more precious literary cargo than this group of travel poems."
+ Bookm 59:748 Ag '24 150w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Bookm 60:167 O '24 30w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 21 '24 200w

Cleveland p70 S '24

"It is a delight to come upon a book of the fascinating quality of Mrs. Richards's 'The Magic Carpet.' A reader with half an eye, and less than half an adequate heart for beautiful images and melody, can readily appreciate Mrs. Richards's sensitive and happy selection." W. Y.
+ Lit R p875 Jl 5 '24 120w

"A book that is not at all a hodge-podge, but an excellently coordinated effort."
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 6 '24 90w

Reviewed by B. S. Wagstaff
N Y Tribune p22 My 25 '24 150w

St Louis p381 N '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:175 Jl '24

RICHARDSON, DOROTHY. Book of Blanche. 358p $2 Little 24-6156

Blanche Walska, a poor and obscure young violinist undergoes an operation for cancer. In her delirium her past life, with its romantic, vagabond childhood and girlhood of struggle against overwhelming odds, is revealed to the reader as well as to the young house-surgeon, Eugene Sevier, who becomes deeply interested in her. His interest deepens into infatuation and, as he discovers too late, into love. Blanche realizes that the genius of her father, the great Polish violinist, Arpody, is hers at last, and leaving the hospital secretly, by an accident gains a chance to play in Carnegie hall where her success is instantaneous. The next day, undergoing a second operation, she dies under the anesthetic. The most notable feature of the book is its study of the strange half-world of illness in which delirium and reality are merged. The author is not to be confounded with the English novelist, Dorothy M. Richardson.

"Miss Richardson has devised an unusual situation, uncommon characters and a strangely touching conclusion. She has a keen insight into the mainsprings of conduct of men and women, a skillful pen in depicting the facts of existence, a flair for the exceptional, and marked ability in making the supernatural plausible." F. A. Goell
+ Boston Transcript p3 F 9 '24 1900w

Int Bk R p679 Ag '24 150w

"She can give a charming picture in a fragmentary way, having a swift imagination and a keen eye for color. In spite of its occasional brilliance, however, there is no music in her style, none of that inherent sense of the right relation of words which makes a poet, whether he writes in verse or in pose."
+ — Lit R p618 Mr 22 '24 280w

"The ability which has gone into the fashioning of this novel is evident but not sufficiently disciplined. The author has drawn a clear portrait and left out the shadows. Written with a greater measure of repose, the book would have gained in strength."
+ — Nation 118:662 Je 4 '24 70w

"A first novel of promise, an arresting piece of work that is quite out of the ordinary."
+ Nation and Ath 35:420 Je 28 '24 220w

"Dorothy Richardson's first novel shows a sense of drama, the ability to portray character, imagination, intelligence and a feeling for style, for the use of words. She is a little inclined to let her imagination run away with her . . . but, taken as a whole, the novel has much of interest and of vitality; 'The Book of Blanche' is a book of unusual promise."
+ N Y Times p9 F 10 '24 750w

"The appeal of the book will be for readers who do not mind taking their romance with mixtures of rhapsody in love and sorrow." E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e My 18 '24 200w

"Too much emotion, too much music, and much too much surgery are to be found in 'The Book of Blanche.' The fumes of ether do not form a literary atmosphere either pleasant or wholesome."
— Outlook 136:360 F 27 '24 110w

"A clear and self-contained narrative displays itself against a consistent and unified background. The language, though at times overloaded and never achieving distinction, has fluidity and some force."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 360w

"The outstanding quality of this novel is a sincerity which claims for it more consideration than its actual achievement merits. To deal with her theme sentimentally, as Miss Richardson does in spite of her unquestionable good faith and earnestness, is to make us feel that we have been lured into one of the most dismal regions of human fate without gaining the artistic profit which alone could reconcile us to such an excursion."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 19 '24 180w

RICHARDSON, LESLIE. Things seen on the Riviera. 158p il $1.25 Dutton [3s 6d Seeley, Service]
914.4 Riviera 24-4057

This little book in the Things seen series is of pocket size and provides a pleasant description of the Riviera towns, both French and Italian. It has excellent illustrations and an index.

"While there is but little to be said, Captain Richardson has dared the improbable like a good soldier, and has contrived to make an agreeable little book which may help the expectant traveler, be a vade mecum for the visitor, and be entertaining to the world-girdler who sits at home."
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 1 '23 190w

Reviewed by H. J. Massingham
Nation and Ath 34:sup406 D 8 '23 60w

"Is pleasantly written and illustrated by a profusion of admirable photographs."
+ Spec 131:564 O 20 '23 70w

"This account of one of the world's most famous beauty spots is unmannered and pleasantly observing."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 23 '24 100w

RICHARDSON, NORVAL. That late unpleasantness. 314p $2 Small 24-24692

"An impecunious painter struggling in Paris finds himself the heir to a considerable fortune, provided he returns to Mississippi to live for five years in the former home of a cousin. Returned to Cottonville, the expatriate discovers his neighbors to be still living over the 'late unpleasantness' of the Civil War, still bitter over Yankee errors, true to the memories of their own heroes. Intermingled with a pleasant romance is a grewsome relic of the past, a pitiful flotsam of the scarring conflict. The growth of interest in the young American in his country's history is largely due to his admiration for one of the prettiest of his countrywomen and an ardent patriot. His winning of her transforms him into a contented householder and American citizen."—Boston Transcript

---

"Rather pleasant if a trifle obvious is the plot and manner of 'That Late Unpleasantness.' A pretty tale, if not a particularly brilliant one."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 22 '24 250w

"The book is not mainly a mystery novel, but rather a novel of sentiment and setting; as such, it possesses a great deal of charm." G. C.
+ Ind 113:346 N 1 '24 180w

RICHARDSON, NORVAL—Continued

"Hardly likely to create any furore in critical circles. But for the most part it is well written, and many novel readers will find it a sweet story." H. B.

+ — Lit R p10 N 1 '24 240w

"There is nothing particularly startling about Mr. Richardson's book. It does move with a certain comfortable indolence, not unlike a Southern gentleman's drawl, and it has its happy ending. Best of all, its charm lies in genuine atmosphere."

+ — N Y Times p20 D 28 '24 700w

RICHTER, CONRAD. Brothers of no kin, and other stories. 340p $2 Hinds

24-2251

Twelve short stories reprinted from magazines. The writer is neither afraid nor ashamed of sentiment. The title story tells of the strange friendship between Ebenezer Straint, a puritanical country deacon, and Jeremiah Ritter, adventurer. After thirty-five years of wandering Jeremiah came back to his friend, a prodigal, confessing unpardonable sins, sick and in terror of death. To secure his salvation Ebenezer, in church and in the presence of a hushed congregation, took upon his own head Jeremiah's sins. Contents: Brothers of no kin; The laughter of Leen; Forest mould; The old debt; Wings of a swallow; Tempered copper; Over the hill to the rich house; Suicide! Smokehouse; Bad luck is good luck; Swanson's "Home, sweet home"; The sure thing.

Reviewed by B. C. Williams
Lit R p974 Ag 16 '24 460w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko
Nation 119:240 S 3 '24 100w

"Mr. Richter's one good story is considerably above the popular level; the others are equally far beneath it." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p19 Ja 6 '24 500w

"The tale which gives its title to the book was selected by Edward O'Brien, for his summary in the Boston Transcript, as the best story of its year of publication. For ourself, we confess a preference for the tale of an engineer who carries on his courtship over the rails by playing 'Home, Sweet Home' on the whistle of his locomotive. But all of Mr. Richter's stories are worth the reading." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e Ja 27 '24 180w

RICKWORD, EDGELL. Rimbaud: the boy and the poet. 234p $3.50 Knopf [12s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92 Rimbaud, Jean Arthur

"The story of Arthur Rimbaud is a fascinating enigma. Rimbaud died in 1891, and it is remarkable that Mr. Edgell Rickword's study should be the first English attempt to present a fairly complete account of his life and poetry. While he continued to write, Rimbaud's poetry was his life. He was thirty-seven when he died, but, as is well known, his last poems were written before he was eighteen and his last line of prose before he was nineteen. Mr. Rickword tells in detail the story of Rimbaud's early years, and his chronicle shows careful and industrious research."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The ordinary reader will not be able to understand the 'revolts, visions, and valedictions,' into which his work naturally falls. One cannot understand his 'plastic genius' without a pretty thorough familiarity with the high tension vocabulary of the Post-Parnassian School. Even without such a knowledge any reader will find food for thought in the delineation of the Poetry-life and the wander-years of Arthur Rimbaud." N. H. Dole

Boston Transcript p5 O 18 '24 900w

Reviewed by L: Galantière
Dial 78:54 Ja '25 1000w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation 119:682 D 17 '24 250w

"Mr. Rickword's enthusiasm for his subject has enabled him to write an attractive and indeed, a lovable book, although, partly because he confines himself to Rimbaud's artist period, we hardly think that he has got to the root of the matter." Sidney Waterlow

+ — New Statesman 23:352 Je 28 '24 1400w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman
N Y Times p20 D 21 '24 2100w

"Mr. Rickword's Rimbaud, different as it is in style and substance, is an admirable companion volume to Mr. Nicolson's Verlaine. It completes our understanding of a relationship which was for a time complimentary." H. I'A. Fausset

+ Spec 133:294 Ag 30 '24 1050w

"Mr. Rickword brings ardour and insight to his task of interpretation, and his study, save for a few surprising judgments, commands whole-hearted praise. The part of his book devoted to actual literary criticism is admirable."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Je 19 '24 1650w

RIDDELL, FLORENCE. Kenya Mist. 300p $2 Holt [7s 6d T. Butterworth]

24-23490

The scene of this story is laid in the Kenya colony in Africa where two young women settle; Michaela Dundas, after having been jilted at the altar, and Glenison Ross, who had made an unhappy marriage. Here they assert their independence of men by running their own coffee farm. The strong-willed Michaela is obsessed with the longing for a child—but not a husband. With this want in mind she inveigles Richard Carr into an affair. When her son is born she denies that Carr, who has fallen in love with her, is the father of the child. But a crisis comes into Michaela's life when she realizes her love for the man whom she had so deliberately trapped, and a reconciliation is inevitably made.

"The writer has some literary ability and considerable new local color; but her story is lacking in dramatic power. Most important of all, the author seems to have little sense of the fitness of things; and she lacks a sense of humor."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Ja 14 '25 250w

"The plot itself shows originality and less regard for straitlaced morality than do most best-sellers. The story, however, is marred in many ways: by lack of good taste, by awkward construction, by characters having not a trace of humanity and by a style abounding in the most incredible clichés."

— + N Y Times p24 D 14 '24 260w

"It has little value as literature. Its psychology is purely schematic, all the chief characters being wooden symbols of an idea. Its plot is more or less improbable."

— Sat R of Lit 1:232 O 25 '24 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p422 Jl 3 '24 20w

RIDGE, WILLIAM PETT. Story teller; forty years in London. 306p il $4 Doran [15s Hodder & S.]

B or 92 London—Social life and customs

24-5009

"Among the various minor men who have divided between themselves the mantle of Charles Dickens, none is more genial, or has a more intimate knowledge of London, than Mr. Pett Ridge. . . In his present volume he has thrown open the gates of his memory, and allowed quips and cranks, after-dinner stories, whimsies, and caprices, to pour in upon each other pell-mell. He has just canalized them, as it were, along certain main directions, such as 'Public Dinners,' 'Gentlemen of Leisure,' 'London Youngsters,' 'Charles Dickens' (as we might have expected), 'Songs of the Street,' and 'Streets that Were.' "—Sat R

Bookm 59:228 Ap '24 120w

"It is an easy, pleasant notebook of a life well spent; of his start in life, of characters who very soon began to come into it and strike sparks from his ready tinder. An extraordinary throng of people cluster in his pages and each one leaves an impress that has been worth recording. Yet this book stands not merely as a collection of pleasant yarns. Running through its pages is a more serious undercurrent." F. V. Morley
+ Lit R p837 Je 21 '24 620w

"Mr. Ridge is a humorist, and his ready wit and happy comment lighten every page. As a result his memoirs, called simply 'A Story Teller,' lack all traces of formality and possess in abundance the charming casual quality which one finds in conversation at its best." F. F. Bond
+ N Y Times p15 Je 8 '24 1900w

"His anecdotes concerning famous men are entertaining in themselves, but too rarely illuminative of the special and unique character he is for the moment concerned with. They can be interchanged and reshuffled without doing violence to anybody. For the rest, the reader can settle down to a few diverting hours."
+ — Sat R 136:407 O 13 '23 650w

"Mr. Pett Ridge's manner is deft and easy, and his matter is light without being entirely superficial; and his book will be chiefly enjoyed and remembered as a fine treasure-house of good stories, many of them quite new."
+ Spec 131:660 N 3 '23 360w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p632 S 27 '23 650w

RILEY, EUGENE BONIFACE. Economics for ^{2} secondary schools; under the editorial supervision of Allyn A. Young. 318p $1.60 Houghton
330 Economics 24-9577

A high school text covering the usual topics and using many illustrations and applications easily grasped by young students. The appendix gives questions taken from Regents' examinations and arranged by chapters.

"Practically all of the material has been used in high school classes, and it is the opinion of the reviewer that the volume will prove one of the most popular high school texts on the market. There is no pretense to originality, except in the manner of presentation. The style is clear and simple, and the organization such that the book should be more than usually teachable. In spite of its brevity and simplicity, it covers a surprising number of questions." J. I.
+ Am Econ R 14:723 D '24 300w

"The use of example and the simplicity of diction deserve commendation; the text can be read with understanding by the young people for whom it is intended. Unfortunately, the volume contains no illustrations, no suggested readings and, aside from questions in the appendixes, no pedagogical aids." H. C. Hill
+ — School R 32:796 D '24 650w

RIMSKII-KORSAKOFF, NIKOLAI ANDREEVICH. My musical life; tr. from the rev. second Russian ed., by Judah A. Joffe; ed. with an introd. by Carl Van Vechten. 389p il $6 Knopf
B or 92 Musicians 23-18104

"The most surprising thing about Rimsky's autobiography is that it covers practically the whole history of art-music in Russia—1844 to 1906. He was intimate with all the great ones from Glinka to Stravinsky; many of them were his pupils, and of nearly all of them he gives vivid pen-portraits; notably of Borodin and Moussorgsky."—Int Bk R

Booklist 20:208 Mr '24
Reviewed by H: T. Finck
Int Bk R p285 Mr '24 450w

"Among its other distinctions is that its pages are not adorned with the romantic fiction which abounds in the memoirs of Berlioz and Wagner. Rimsky obviously always adheres strictly to facts, even when they are luridly Russian, as when he tells about Mussorgsky's indulgence in the habit of 'trans-cognacing' himself, which led to his downfall and death." H: T. Finck
Lit R p440 Ja 12 '24 1000w

" 'My Musical Life' is not a personal autobiography, it is a dry, matter-of-fact record of work. It is, therefore, not a book for the general reader but it is an invaluable and truthful record for the musical student of the first great period of Russian musical art."
+ Nation and Ath 35:513 Jl 19 '24 780w

Reviewed by M. E. Opdycke
New Repub 37:102 D 19 '23 500w

"In it we have a real musician talking about music—his own principally, but also others'. Also, we have some light thrown on almost every name we know in Russian music, and a good deal on those we know best."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p369 Je 12 '24 1250w

RINEHART, MARY (ROBERTS) (MRS STANLEY MARSHALL RINEHART). Temperamental people. 338p $2 Doran 24-20550

"Eight short stories of temperament and its effect on lives. 'Her Majesty' is a story of a royal marriage where love has been given somewhere else and of the tragedy of thwarted motherhood. 'The Altar on the Hill' shows the blind devotion of a young secretary to a coming politician and the way in which it almost wrecks his wife's happiness. 'Cynara' gives the secret power of love over art, and of the sculptor's inability to be really unfaithful in spirit to his wife and keep his art. 'The great success' is the struggle between love and home, and a career as a singer and the singer's final and absolute renunciation of her art. 'The secret house' is the story of a happily married woman being confronted by the knowledge that her child born of a youthful indiscretion was alive when she thought it dead." (Cleveland) The other stories are: A midsummer knight's dream; Lily; "Ca ne fait rien."

Booklist 21:113 D '24
Reviewed by S. L. Rich
Boston Transcript p3 Ag 30 '24 1300w
Cleveland p86 N '24

"Entertainment there certainly is in all the stories in the present volume—Mrs. Rinehart probably couldn't write anything unreadable in the range of her industrious versatility. Some of them are of lighter texture than others, but most of them are as deeply good as well as externally adroit as any short stories the magazines are showing." W: R. Murphy
+ Lit R p12 Ag 30 '24 300w

"If this is all fiction of a somewhat stereotyped order, it is clean, amusing and pleasantly told."
+ — N Y Times p18 Ag 31 '24 600w
Outlook 139:151 Ja 28 '25 90w

RINEHART, STANLEY MARSHALL. Commonsense of health. 307p $2.50 Doran
613 Hygiene 24-18280

Optimistic articles by a well-known doctor on the commoner ailments and the care of the body. The articles are written for the layman. Partial contents: On catching cold; Concerning coughs and coughers; Pneumonia, the Apache; T. B., the criminal; Why this headache? Symptoms and symptom hunting; Eating to live; Exercise; How old are you? How hard should we work? Your nerves and your job; What are you afraid of? The birthright; What is wrong with our young men?

Booklist 21:11 O '24

RINEHART, S. M.—Continued

"He talks from the expert's point of view of body and health and the way to keep fit, but he manages to talk entertainingly and to keep the interest unflagging. His book, indeed, constitutes in itself a tonic that can be recommended to all who want the cobwebs of ignorance and of fear blown away."

+ Bookm 60:102 S '24 140w

"Throughout the pages is a delightful spirit of optimism, of good cheer and hopefulness, and with all is commonsense, a quality that is not always present in some of the technical and semi-technical volumes that are offered to the public." J. D. Haag

+ Detroit News p14 S 14 '24 300w

"In the free and easy style, Dr. Rinehart converses on the hygiene of eating, exercise, work, nervous control, and so on, and his precepts prove the aptness of the title of his book." J. R.

+ Ind 113:402 N 15 '24 280w

"If one wants an adequate and readable, even if somewhat diffuse, presentation of the sensible hygienic regimen of life, here it is." J. A. Tobey

+ Int Bk R p37 D '24 750w

Reviewed by Van Buren Thorne

N Y Times p14 Ag 10 '24 1100w

N Y Tribune p28 Je 29 '24 180w

Outlook 138:65 S 10 '24 20w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 14 '24 100w

RISING, LAWRENCE. Proud flesh. 317p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-15291

A story of San Francisco, which opens just before the earthquake and fire of 1906 with the birth of a daughter to Ferdinand and Emma Borel. In rebellion against the death of his wife in childbirth Ferdinand Borel refused to look at his daughter. She was put in the care of a nurse and governess with whom, when she was four years old, she went to Spain. Her father was killed shortly after in the earthquake and the little Fernanda was brought up in Spain. The book jumps the interval of almost twenty years between Fernanda's going away and her return to San Francisco, a wealthy and beautiful heiress, to enter into possession of her estate. The story of her amazing love affair in which this finished product of a continental education finally surrenders to the caveman methods of a masterful Irish plumber, Patrick O'Malley, makes up the rest of the book.

Ind 113:160 S 13 '24 340w

"'Proud Flesh' is a notable novel and a worthy successor to 'She Who was Helena Cass'; moreover, a great improvement on that charming and unusual story in craftsmanship. There is a thickness, a solidity, a warmth and glow about it, generally absent from the work of the younger American writers. It entertains and absorbs and provokes and spurs the imagination of the reader." Gertrude Atherton

+ Int Bk R p591 Jl '24 900w

"The book opens like a masterpiece and closes like motion picture melodrama." R. M. Lovett

New Repub 39:307 Ag 6 '24 90w

"'Proud Flesh' is in many ways an interesting book. It is embellished by nice descriptive powers, a sure touch in characterization, and a good sense of that effective style that does not attempt to be anything but straightforward, sensible narration. But the book suffers from uneven construction, the writer seems to be somewhat at a loss as to what to do with all his characters, and the latter part of his story is marred by crude suggestiveness, bad taste and a snobbish preoccupation in the material trappings of great wealth."

+ — N Y Times p9 Je 29 '24 560w

"It is vividly and ably done." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 160w

"The author deals with splendid literary material rather vividly but certainly melodramatically. He is, perhaps, 'steeped in California tradition' but he writes carelessly, and his strength is neither in syntax nor spelling. The trail of the Sheik is across his tale, despite the fact that the atmosphere of the story is occasionally arresting."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:17 Ag 2 '24 70w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 130w

RITCHIE, ANNE ISABELLA (THACKERAY) (MRS RICHMOND RITCHIE). Thackeray and his daughter; letters and journals; selected and ed. by Hester Thackeray Ritchie. 340p il $5 Harper [15s Murray]

B or 92 Thackeray, William Makepeace

24-5957

This selection covers the period 1837-1919 and includes letters of Lady Ritchie, many hitherto unpublished letters of her father, W. M. Thackeray, and some letters of her mother, Isabella Thackeray. Besides the letters there are extracts from Lady Ritchie's journals and many notes by her on Thackeray family history, including a definite statement about the frequently mentioned request of her father's that no biography of him should ever be written. The whole not only forms a valuable contribution to our knowledge of Thackeray and his talented daughter but also gives much interesting information about people in the literary and artistic circle—the Tennysons, Brownings, Oliphants, Trollopes, etc.—with which the Thackerays were associated.

Booklist 20:336 Je '24

"The volume is an indispensable addition to nineteenth century literary history." H. L. Pangborn

+ Bookm 59:465 Je '24 600w

"Anne Thackeray was herself a writer of some skill and distinction, and the volume has thus a double interest to all who are interested in the personal side of the English literature of the nineteenth century." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 22 '24 900w

Cleveland p46 Je '24

"Miss Ritchie has fulfilled her task as assembler and editor of her precious family material with good judgment and right feeling. Altogether hers is a book to have and to hold." Amy Loveman

+ Lit R p644 Ap 5 '24 750w

Reviewed by Virginia Woolf

Nation and Ath 34:836 Mr 15 '24 1000w

Reviewed by Virginia Woolf

New Repub 39:304 Ag 6 '24 1000w

"When you come to lay down this delightful and well-edited book, so full as it is of the affection and melancholy of life, and so reminiscent of the many things that at once sweeten and sadden existence, it is almost forced upon you to consider how many advantages there are in escaping from the grip of one of those formal, and as the foolish phrase runs, 'definitive' biographies that usually follow so quickly upon the death of a notable man. A word of thanks must be given to the granddaughter, who has done her dutiful task with such skill and judgment. This book is, we believe, her first experience of the art and craft of book-producing, and it proves her to be in the family tradition." Augustine Birrell

+ New Statesman 22:702 Mr 22 '24 2100w

"The book is an anti-climax, since it is difficult to get up any great enthusiasm over the writings of Lady Ritchie. Thackeray's daughter wielded a facile pen, and she maintained epistolary contact with many of the literary luminaries of her day. But she neither inherited the narrative skill of her father nor had any well developed critical sense of her own hence her journals are uninteresting and her letters to authors unimportant. On the other hand, she sheds a further, if not very intense, light on William Makepeace Thackeray."

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 30 '24 1400w

"What Americans will most wonder at in this recital, after enjoying the many laughable sketches which remind us that Thackeray first planned to be an artist, is the picture it gives of rude conditions of life and travel in the United States in the not remote past."

+ N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 580w

Outlook 139:115 Ja 21 '25 850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:327 Je '24

"In this delightful memorial, we have new letters of his. Censured for cynicism and sentimentality, once more he exhibits himself playful, tender-hearted, courageous, and essentially simple, while for the first time—the family allowing publication—he briefly refers to his own domestic tragedy."

+ Sat R 137:390 Ap 12 '24 200w

"The forty-two letters from Thackeray himself are a most valuable addition to this book both as a fragment of the biography which can never be written, and as stressing the close affinity of temperament existing between father and daughter." H. I'A. Fausset

+ Spec 132:506 Mr 29 '24 900w

Springf'd Republican p14 My 2 '24 750w

"Formally this is indeed, a biography of the 'Miss Thackeray' whose inherited gift has given her a niche in English letters of which criticism will not rob her. Actually it is also a contraband fragment of the greater life that must not be written, which means that the first hundred pages or so have a glamour which the latter half cannot recapture."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p157 Mr 13 '24 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 20:170 Jl '24

RITCHIE, ROBERT WELLES. Stairway of the sun. 280p $2 Dodd

24-3535

"A story of Hawaii and of the struggle of the Americans there to keep the islands from becoming, in fact if not in name, a colony of Japan. But more than that, it is the story of the making over of a coward into a hero. Coates Blanding is an American who, when the call to arms came in 1917, fled to escape the draft. When the story opens five years later, we find him a beachcomber on the Island of Ponapé, midway between the Philippines and Hawaii. He has lost, apparently, the last shred of self-respect and has become an outcast and a beggar. He has one friend, a Hawaiian named Kimo Kawehei. But deep down underneath his innate cowardice there is still a spark of manhood. How this spark is fanned into flame and how Blanding becomes a man again is the main theme of Mr. Ritchie's novel. Interwoven with it is the story of the Japanese problem in Hawaii."—N Y Times

"A romance which makes both thrilling and delightful reading."

+ Boston Transcript p8 F 27 '24 300w

"It is an earnestly meant, carefully thought out book, far more successful as a novel than most such heavily loaded stories."

+ Lit R p618 Mr 22 '24 260w

"As a novel, 'Stairway of the Sun' has some faults and many good qualities. There is a slight tendency to over-florid description which the author would do well to curb, but on the other hand, the narrative moves swiftly, and the adventures recorded in it are thrilling enough without being wildly impossible."

+ — N Y Times p25 F 10 '24 650w

"Too much patriotic earnestness mars the telling of what is otherwise a lively tale of adventure."

— + Outlook 136:440 Mr 12 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 23 '24 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Jl 17 '24 90w

RITTENHOUSE, ANNE, pseud. (HARRYDELE HALLMARK). Well-dressed woman. 216p $2 Harper

391 Clothing and dress 24-19911

A sensible treatment of the troublesome clothes question which lays its emphasis on the principles to be applied, no matter what may be the fashion of the moment. An opening word by Jean Worth on the art of good dressing is followed by chapters in which the needs and clothes problems of various types of women are considered—the stout and the thin, the blonde and the brunette, the wage-earner, the small-town dweller, and the society woman with limited means.

Booklist 21:97 D '24

J Home Econ 17:44 Ja '25 60w

N Y Times p23 S 7 '24 420w

"Perhaps in no other book has the stout woman, the emaciated woman or the florid woman found herself dealt with in such patient detail. And the thin woman will find that she is the heroine of the book—if only she will take the trouble to dress her part."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:132 S 20 '24 170w

RIVERS, WILLIAM HALSE RIVERS. ^{2} Medicine, magic, and religion; the FitzPatrick lectures delivered before the Royal college of physicians of London in 1915 and 1916; with a preface by G. Elliot Smith. (International lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 147p $3.75 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]

Medicine, Primitive. Magic. Religion, Primitive 24-16805

"Dr. Rivers's book deals with the relations which formerly obtained between medicine, magic and religion, as shown in the numerous cases which he cites; it then goes on to describe how these relations came into being and finally to explain in what ways religion, magic and medicine, related in one part of the world, gradually became distinct and self-contained departments of social life."—Boston Transcript

"An important contribution to the history of human thought."

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 20 '24 760w

"Dr. Rivers writes somewhat heavily; he has no gift of style, no power picturesquely to present his plot; and there is never a purple patch to lure our imagination. But always, as we read, we feel we are in close contact with a mind that is really thinking, really pushing and shouldering through to some new truth, and we are braced in spirit." Jane Harrison

+ — Nation and Ath 35:147 My 3 '24 1200w

"The reader of this work must certainly come away with the feeling that had Rivers lived for another ten years, so as to have been able to gather together the treasures which he had won in so many departments of knowledge, the science of anthropology would have been incalculably the richer. It is a tragedy that he should have gone just when his powers were coming to their full maturity, when he was at least coming into his own." W. J. Perry

+ — Nature 114:563 O 18 '24 1650w

"We must not expect too much of the posthumous works of a scientist, and it is certain that had he lived Dr. Rivers would never have allowed these lectures to be republished in their present form. Nevertheless, something of the author's remarkable mentality is to be found in them, and though the problems suggested are more numerous than those solved, the subject matter is fascinating."

+ — New Statesman 23:230 My 31 '24 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p569 S 18 '24 1350w

RIVERS, WILLIAM HALSE RIVERS. ^{2} Social organization; ed. by W. J. Perry. 226p $4 Knopf

Sociology. Society, Primitive. Social psychology 24-16623

"Had Rivers lived, his definitive work on social organization would have been little short of an event in ethnology. As it stands, the fragmentary treatise presents a carefully reasoned and lucidily written summary of some of the outstanding facts and theories in the field of primitive society and politics. Unfortunately it is only too apparent that the piece

RIVERS, W: H. R.—Continued
is but a skeleton of the much more comprehensive work for the writing of which Rivers was so splendidly equipped."—Nation

---

"He has defined, classified. explained. Nothing is left to chance, nothing is vague. With a directness almost French in its exactness and singleness of meaning, he gives a vivid interpretation of primitive society and of its relationship to our modern, more complicated cultural life."
+ Bookm 60:234 O '24 350w

Reviewed by Alexander Goldenweiser
Nation 119:644 D 10 '24 800w

" 'Social Organization' is the first volume of the series of authoritative works on the whole range of human activity. May the present book be of good augury for the rest! To maintain so high a standard of originality and thoroughness will be no easy task." Jane Harrison
+ Nation and Ath 36:445 D 20 '24 880w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p11 S 7 '24 1000w

ROBBERS, HERMAN. Fortunes of a household; tr. from the Dutch by Helen Chilton and Bernard Miall. 344p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Allen & U.]

"This is a translation from a novel by a well-known Dutch novelist, and its scene is in Holland, the inner life in fact, of a Dutch family—that of a well-to-do Amsterdam printer-publisher. It is not so much a connected story as a closely detailed intensive study of his domestic, social, and business life with its ups and downs, his family of young people, and his friends. There is not much in the way of striking events, though the story begins with a strike and closes with a surprising and to the parents incredible love affair on the part of the son."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"If you have plenty of time, this novel will probably interest you, though not excessively."
— + Boston Transcript p4 Ap 23 '24 300w
Lit R p810 Je 7 '24 250w

"Regardless of comparisons, this is a novel which has a significant place in any survey of modern fiction. Its importance lies, not in any meticulous setting forth of the details of Dutch life in the early twentieth century, but in an unflinching, undeviating facing of issues which do not depend upon the accidents of environment."
+ N Y Times p8 Ap 13 '24 1100w

"The whole is well worth reading. All the incidents and details are well devised and well given, and never give the impression of mere padding."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p162 Mr 13 '24 150w

ROBERTS, CECIL EDRIC MORNINGTON. Sails of sunset. 357p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Heinemann]

24-22459

The picturesque Italian fishing village of Chioggia furnishes the setting for the love story of a beautiful Italian fisher-girl and a young English aristocrat. When Peter Neville, a dilettante of art and women, first beholds Lucia Delfino poised on her father's boat, he is instantly swept into love of her. There follows a stolen romance which Paolo, the envious fleet-master to whom Lucia has been unwillingly betrothed, makes frequent efforts to destroy. The hatred of Paolo is not the only obstacle which the lovers face. There is also the pride of the house of Neville to be considered. But the result of Paolo's last desperate attempt to remove his rival solves the more serious problem and the story closes with Peter and Lucia happily married.

"The entire mood of the book is colorful. It has not in certain ways the power of Mr. Roberts's earlier novel, 'Scissors,' but there is more poetry in it, more magic, more of the alluring strangeness of setting and incident which makes this story." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 22 '24 1300w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p858 N '24 90w

"Ruskin petulantly described Whistler's work as canvases at which the artist had thrown a pot of paint; the description would more accurately fit Sails of Sunset. It would seem that the gorgeous colours of Venetia had dazzled Mr. Roberts, leaving him frantically articulate. The plot of the story is uninteresting, the characterisation feeble."
— New Statesman 24:150 N 8 '24 250w

"In spite of the triteness of action and the safety of Mr. Roberts's theme he manages to hold the reader. This is chiefly because of a gentle skill in writing, the power to visualize characters in the most convincing manner, a workmanlike control of suspense, and, above all, a consistent sensitivity to the colorful and poetic nuances of Italy."
+ — N Y Times p16 O 12 '24 380w

"The setting of this book is so delightful that the fact that the story is not very original will hardly be noticed by the reader."
+ — Spec 133:654 N 1 '24 70w

"The writing throughout is on a high level but in his former novel 'Scissors' there was more scope for Mr. Roberts's clever and sympathetic character drawing."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p632 O 9 '24 150w

ROBERTS, CHARLES GEORGE DOUGLAS. They who walk in the wilds. 212p $2 Macmillan

24-6860

A collection of nine stories of wild animals. There are the stories of Mish, a puma cub that becomes domesticated, and the big moose, that having lost her own baby, takes under her care a red calf. Ah-Wook, king of the walrus tribe, confirms his kingship by land and sea. A huge lumbering bear adopts a lost woodsman and saves him from death. Contents: Mishi of Timberline; Wild adoption; The king of the floes; Bill; Mixed breed; Queen Bomba of the honey-pots; A gentleman in feathers; The cave of the bear; In the moose-yard

Booklist 21:31 O '24

"It is a book to enjoy and to admire and to possess." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p682 Ag '24 480w

"Sensitively planned and vividly written."
+ New Statesman 23:626 S 6 '24 800w
N Y Tribune p26 Je 15 '24 90w

"A group of really engrossing short stories whose animal people provide excitement and arouse emotions not to be outdone by any 'human interest' tales." G. M. Goldman
+ N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 140w
Outlook 138:64 S 10 '24 30w

"While some tragedy is inevitable in the clashing of hungry beasts, this element is minimized by Maj. Roberts without impairing the charm or realism of his stories."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 1 '24 160w

"Mr. Roberts makes his readers feel the fascination of the wilderness, and knows how to heighten the battles of its denizens with the sense of its underlying calm."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p242 Ap 17 '24 300w

ROBERTS, KENNETH LEWIS. Black magic. 250p $2.50 Bobbs

945 Italy—Politics and government. Italy—Fascisti movement. Bavaria—Politics and government 24-5915

A sketch of the Fascisti movement in Italy and its reflex in Bavaria.

Booklist 20:334 Je '24
Bookm 59:475 Je '24 210w

"'Black Magic' is an interesting story of ills of modern government, and their remedies, all told in the conversational style of Mr. Roberts' Saturday Evening Post articles." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '24 750w

"Mr. Roberts depicts the extraordinary social and industrial movement managed by Mussolini much as if he were describing a baseball game."

N Y World p6e Mr 16 '24 40w

ROBERTS, MORLEY. W. H. Hudson; a portrait. 310p $5 Dutton [16s Nash & G.]

B or 92 Hudson, W. H. 24-6038

Morley Roberts was a young man in his early twenties when W. H. Hudson, then a man of forty, took him into his friendship and kept him there for life. Very little is known of Hudson's life between the last chapter of his youthful autobiography, "Far away and long ago," till 1880, when Roberts first met him and from that time on, too, it is an almost dateless story with little detail which his biographer has to tell. A life "of one who had no story," he calls it, and the result is described by the title—a portrait—drawn with sympathy and deep affection, but not lacking the touches to make it truthful and living.

"With fidelity and devotion he has shown us the Hudson likeness, and if his work is incomplete, he has given us a clearer understanding than we had before of that profound and many-sided nature. At least he conveys to us a sense of the authentic qualities of Hudson, his complete independence, his insatiable curiosity as to all forms of life, his sympathy for birds and animals, his courage, his strange, wild spirit, his power to hate and to love." R: E. Danielson

+ — Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '24 450w

"It was Mr. Robert's design, by an accumulation of intimate impressions of his subject in varying moods and at intervals over many years, to evoke a veritable personality—Hudson in his habit as he lived, so to say. Indubitably he has succeeded, triumphantly succeeded in his aim." H: A. Lappin

+ Bookm 59:469 Je '24 770w

"Doubtless the biography of Hudson remains to be written, but until it is written, Mr. Robert's book will serve as an excellent substitute." E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p15 Mr 29 '24 1950w

"Mr. Roberts has done a notable piece of writing—notable also for its crystalline beauty of style—in the way he has caught the spiritual and intellectual lineaments of a great soul and put them into his pages. It is a great biography as well as the biography of a great man." F. F. Kelly

+ Int Bk R p601 Jl '24 1050w

"The W. H. Hudson of 'Green Mansions' and 'The Purple Land' is not the Hudson of Morley Robert's biography. And that is by no means the fault of the biographer. It is in fact no one's fault that Hudson was one of those inaccessible personalities who live through the written word and offer to the external world only the husks of reality. . . The worth of Robert's endeavor lies not so much in the nature of the portrait he has drawn as in the loyalty by which he has been inspired." L. G. S.

+ — Lit R p878 Jl 5 '24 230w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren

Nation 118:589 My 21 '24 800w

"It must be said that nobody but Mr. Morley Roberts could have written it, inspired by forty years' intimacy and by a passionate admiration for Hudson the man of genius. The book is valuable, first for rescuing from oblivion certain data of Hudson's London life in the 'eighties, and secondly for recording a variety of intimate glimpses of Hudson at work and at play." E: Garnett

+ Nation and Ath 34:800 Mr 8 '24 1200w

New Statesman 22:703 Mr 22 '24 2050w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman

N Y Times p5 Ap 6 '24 2200w

Outlook 136:704 Ap 23 '24 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:328 Je '24

"In his new work Mr. Roberts has devoted his remarkable power of describing what he sees with simple and almost childlike directness to the task of portraying his old friend W. H. Hudson, an 'inheritor of unfulfilled renown' who is only now coming into his own. It has evidently been a labour of love, and we are grateful to Mr. Roberts for so striking a presentation of a singular individuality."

+ Sat R 137:184 F 23 '24 720w

"Mr Roberts has written a book that will go far toward making his name a lasting one among present-day biographers, for he has achieved a singularly original portrait that, despite its obvious repetitions, lack of pattern and rhythm, and the exasperating self-consciousness of the biographer himself, gives an effect of completeness such as few biographies achieve." S. A.

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p124 F 28 '24 1400w

ROBERTSON, ANNIE ISABEL. Guide to literature of home and family life. (Lippincott's home manuals) 284p il $5 (25s) Lippincott

016.64 Home economics—Bibliography 24-12833

"An extensive bibliography covering all phases of home making and family life. Helpful annotations. Should prove useful to home economics teachers, club members, and as a general reference work. Includes lists of fiction poetry and general literature in addition to special and technical lists."—Wis Lib Bul

"Home economists have long been looking for some such compendium, and this volume has great possibilities for usefulness to several groups of professional workers. One and all we wish to congratulate Miss Robertson on her courage in undertaking such a task and even more on her perseverance in carrying it through to the end." Ruth Van Deman

+ J Home Econ 16:397 Jl '24 600w

Wis Lib Bul 20:91 Ap '24

ROBERTSON, ERIC SUTHERLAND. Old St Andrews. 210p il $3 Dutton

941.33 St Andrews, Scotland

A history of this ancient university town of Fifeshire, Scotland, and its buildings—cathedral, priory, castle and university. St Andrews was the site of an early Columban settlement and is rich in relics and antiquity. At present its activities center in education and golf. Its university dates from the fifteenth century and its Royal and ancient golf club, founded in 1754, is the legislative authority of the game. The book is illustrated from drawings by the author.

Boston Transcript p7 Mr 12 '24 1300w

"This is a book to delight readers of an antiquarian turn of mind, but its appeal is not narrowly limited. Dr. Robertson is an essayist of mellow, genial quality, master of a beautifully clean and simple English style, and with much to say, in passing, of things in general as well as of the detail of his beloved town and university." Harvey Parish

+ Lit R p857 Je 28 '24 250w

N Y Tribune p22 Je 15 '24 70w

ROBINSON, ARTHUR WILLIAM. Christ of the Gospels. 207p $2 Doran [4s 6d Student Christian movement]

232 Jesus Christ [24-24265]

A series of studies of the Gospels which emphasize the life and character of Christ. Each chapter is followed by notes on the modern literature of the subjects with which the book deals. Partial contents: The function of the

ROBINSON, A. W:—Continued
Gospels; The first evangelist; The second evangelist; The third evangelist; The fourth evangelist; The wonderful life; His place in development; His teaching about God; His teaching about the individual life; The fact of the resurrection; The departure and promise of return.

Nation and Ath 35:sup254 My 24 '24 50w

"An excellent book for general readers and younger students."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p255 Ap 24 '24 100w

ROBINSON, DANIEL SOMMER. Principles of reasoning; an introduction to logic and scientific method. 390p $2.50 Appleton
160 Logic 24-19431

An introduction to logic and scientific method which, tho intended primarily as a text book for an elementary course in logic, is easily readable. The book falls into two main divisions: first, the traditional Aristotelian logic; second, induction or scientific methodology. To these is added a brief sketch of the development of logic with special reference to contemporary schools. The author takes into account recent significant contributions to logical science and uses many practical illustrations. Exercises are included and a bibliography.

"So clear, interesting and informative that one regrets the book isn't longer and more comprehensive. It is such interesting reading that one forgets it is a textbook." C. N.
+ Lit R p13 O 25 '24 250w

"Mr. Robinson's book has the merits of being comprehensive, simple, and well grounded in a knowledge of the history of thought. Nothing that is essential to a course in logic is omitted, and much that bears on other fields of philosophy is included; so that the book is an introduction not only to logic and scientific method but to philosophy in general. On the whole, 'The Principles of Reasoning' is one of the sanest, most thorough and useful textbooks of logic with which the reviewer is acquainted and if its metaphysics is somewhat hazy, this is no more than could be expected in a volume designed for those who have no knowledge of technical philosophy." R. M. Eaton
+ Sat R of Lit 1:228 O 25 '24 1300w

ROBINSON, EDWIN ARLINGTON. Man who died twice. 79p $1.25 Macmillan
811 24-4331

A powerful psychological poem which tells the story of a man's unpardonable sin—the conscious waste of his genius. Fernando Nash was a musician who knew from boyhood that he had but to wait, to hear the music of his symphony "blown down by choral horns out of a star." But he sold his birthright, sank himself in dissipation for twenty years and at forty-five he was beating a bass drum for the Salvation Army and waiting for death.

Booklist 20:332 Je '24

"Here is undoubtedly the best of Mr. Robinson's narratives of modern life, a more inspired revelation than 'Roman Bartholow' and a subject more pregnant with objective color." H. S. Gorman
+ Bookm 59:467 Je '24 300w

"In a day of much shallowness, muddy technique, and self-defended mystery, one is grateful for this highly developed obedience to a sensibility which is a matter not only of the nerves, but of the whole man." Marianne Moore
+ Dial 77:168 Ag '24 1200w

Reviewed by E. A. Weeks
Ind 113:20 Jl 5 '24 160w

Reviewed by Robert Nichols
Int Bk R p66 D '24 270w

"It is seldom or never that a good poem can legitimately be considered to need music for its fuller expression. 'The Man Who Died Twice' is especially complete within itself; it is a symphony of most gorgeous content, and yet it is authentically a poem; the music is unheard. At the same time, one rather wishes that a competent composer would attempt something with these lines, and these ideas for its basis." Mark Van Doren
Nation 118:sup445 Ap 16 '24 1200w

"If this were a first book, it might be regarded as promising but it is a twelfth, and very depressing. The theme, treated with extreme directness by Robert Frost or with some music and some imagination by Conrad Aiken, might have passed; but here, related in lines alternately grandiose and pedestrian, it seems a poor, flat, unconvincing little story. There is a great deal of mud stirred up; but the puddle remains shallow." E. B. C. Jones
— Nation and Ath 35:sup248 My 24 '24 300w

"The blank verse in which 'The Man who Died Twice' is composed, is musical and restrained, and yet revelatory of the most delicate and difficult aspects of the human mind. There is, perhaps, not so much color (in the pictorial sense) as there is in 'Merlin,' but in 'Merlin' Mr. Robinson was the artist in poetry and in 'The Man Who Died Twice' he is the musician in poetry. This interrelation of the arts is not so apparent in Mr. Robinson's work at a first glance as it is with a little study. But attention will show that he is reticently doing just those things that many of our younger poets attempt so loudly and do so feebly."
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 23 '24 2100w

"The poem, although it contains fine passages, is unfortunate in its resemblance to the average street parade; it is late in getting started and is far too long in passing a given point." Arthur Guiterman
— + Outlook 136:649 Ap 16 '24 420w

"It is not good enough. There must be in the actual narrative of any poem a certain narrowness. There will be fewer minor characters, for instance, and less worldly detail. For this the characteristic qualities of verse—epigrammatic and emotional—are to compensate. But in Mr. Robinson's poem we are defrauded. Yet in prose and with all the additions proper to a prose form the story might have been made most acceptable." A. Williams-Ellis
— + Spec 131:1044 Je 28 '24 1050w

"The story is clear, cold, vivid, told with deep insight and a careful pen."
Springf'd Republican p10 S 5 '24 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p582 S 18 '24 200w

ROBINSON, EDWARD STEVENS, and ROBINSON, FLORENCE (RICHARDSON) (MRS EDWARD STEVENS ROBINSON), eds. Readings in general psychology. 674p il $4.50 Univ. of Chicago press
150 Psychology 23-11134

A collection of readings in general psychology chosen for the beginning student. There are about 240 excerpts, ranging from one page to nine pages in length, and forming an ample and representative supply of reading material. Exercises are included with the readings. There is an index of subjects and one of names.

"Carefully arranged, with sources clearly indicated and supplemented by study exercises."
+ Booklist 20:121 Ja '24

"The chapters on the nervous system are exceptionally commendable for being more adequate than is customary, for being more informing on points of great neurological importance and significance, and withal for being clear and assimilable for the beginner. It may be added as another merit of this volume that it salvages and makes available rare and novel passages from books which for other reasons are passing into general disuse as the science advances." M. J. Adler
+ J Philos 21:80 Ja 31 '24 800w

"My chief criticism of the volume is the too generous inclusion of abstracts from articles of but temporary or controversial bearing; these have the further disadvantage that they emphasize points of limited interest, and fail to furnish the larger outlines which form the standard need of the standard reader. Considering the shifting state of opinion in many of the problems and issues in contemporary psychology, much of this is inevitable; a source-book, however, aims at a moderate longevity." Joseph Jastrow

— + Nation 118:36 Ja 9 '24 350w

ROBINSON, KENNETH ALLAN, comp. Con-
2 temporary short stories. 497p $2.50 Houghton
Short stories—Collections 24-24459

A collection of representative short stories by contemporary English and American writers. Contents: Mother, by Sherwood Anderson; The idiot, by Arnold Bennett; The sign of the lamp, by Thomas Burke; Portrait of a philosopher, by Dorothy Canfield; Paul's case, by Willa Cather; The smart Aleck, by Irvin S. Cobb; The lagoon, by Joseph Conrad; The second choice, by Theodore Dreiser; The gay old dog, by Edna Ferber; Defeat, by John Galsworthy; The bird in the bush, by Katherine Fullerton Gerould; Bread, by Joseph Hergesheimer; The good provider, by Fannie Hurst; Katie wins a home, by Ring W. Lardner; The daughters of the late colonel, by Katherine Mansfield; Rain, by W. Somerset Maugham; The woman at Seven Brothers, by Wilbur Daniel Steele; The big, fat lummox, by Booth Tarkington; Lois Drake, by Hugh Walpole; The truth about Pyecraft, by H. G. Wells; Xingu, by Edith Wharton.

Reviewed by Kenneth Fuessle
Int Bk R p99 Ja '25 160w

"It is obvious that in choosing twenty-one stories from all the rich store of contemporary tales, many individual favorites must be omitted, but lovers of the best in short stories will find these engaging tales artistically done and with a pleasing freedom from artificial restraint." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p16 D 6 '24 130w

ROBSON, VIVIAN ERWOOD. Fixed stars and constellations in astrology. 264p $2.50 Lippincott [7s 6d C. Palmer]
133.5 Astrology [24-13848]

The book brings together as complete and systematized an account as possible of all that has been written about the stars from an astrological viewpoint since the middle ages. Contents: The fixed stars in astronomy; The influence of the constellations; The lunar mansions; The fixed stars in natal astrology; The influence of fixed stars, nebulæ and clusters; The fixed stars in mundane astrology; Stars and constellations in mediæval magic; The fixed stars in astro-meteorology; Appendix: Mathematical formulæ; Index.

N Y Tribune p25 Jl 20 '24 70w

"Readers who wish for a thoroughly untrustworthy guide to mediæval magic will find it here."

— Sat R 136:687 D 22 '23 220w

ROCKEFELLER, JOHN DAVISON, jr. Personal relation in industry. 149p $1.75 Boni & Liveright
331.1 Industrial relations

The book contains six addresses delivered on various occasions, on cooperation in industry, the relations of labor and capital, and representation in industry. The Appendix gives the industrial constitution of the plan of representation of employees in the Colorado fuel and iron company.

Reviewed by G. S. Watkins
Am Econ R 14:345 Je '24 260w

"The reader will be impressed with the cogency of the author's style, the intensity of his belief in the power of moral principle to improve industrial relationships, and the courage with which he is willing to discard some of the economic and legal powers of the owner and employer in order to replace them with what he regards as a source of great strength—mutual understanding." O: T. Mallery

+ Ann Am Acad 114:166 Jl '24 300w

Reviewed by Arthur Pound
Atlantic's Bookshelf Ap '24 650w

Booklist 20:250 Ap '24

"Mr. Rockefeller really places himself on record in a clear cut and forcible way. In a physically detached manner he has made a sincere effort to enter into the lives of those who work for him, and the result while it has cost him no personal inconvenience, has brought forth conclusions which should be of value to those who are interested in the coordination of two antithetical forces." J. G.

+ Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 120w

"Throughout, the book manifests the honesty and fairmindedness that people everywhere are coming to recognize in Mr. Rockefeller, and it deals with subjects of grave and immediate common concern. That one in Mr. Rockefeller's position should have written it makes it all the more valuable as a contribution to the literature of industrial democracy."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '24 300w

Cleveland p56 Jl '24

Management and Adm My '24 100w

— New Repub 37:234 Ja 23 '24 1500w

"His exposition of his ideas in the several papers collected here is always simple, clear and direct."

+ N Y Times p20 F 10 '24 600w

"Mr. Rockefeller thinks and writes and speaks with clarity and force and the book is in consequence readable and, if at times provocative, usually persuasive." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p10m Ja 6 '24 1200w

Outlook 136:402 Mr 5 '24 30w

R of Rs 69:335 Mr '24 80w

"His bias as an employer has not prevented him from viewing the subject in a broad-minded way. The volume is a collection of addresses and not an economic textbook, but it is of interest in itself and because of the author's prominence."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ja 18 '24 600w

Reviewed by H: S. Dennison
Survey 52:108 Ap 15 '24 450w

Wis Lib Bul 20:92 Ap '24

ROCKEY, HOWARD. This woman. 317p $2 Macaulay
24-5103

A story of New York society life which stresses the attitude displayed in regard to marriage and prohibition. Carol Drayton, with her dismissal papers from a reformatory school in her handbag, has the misfortune to have her bag taken. This leaves her absolutely penniless, and to keep from starving she sings on the street. She comes under the protection of the wealthy Rhinebeck-Sturdevants and Baptiste Stratini, a great music master. Charmed with her voice they sponsor her until she shall become an operatic star. Carol never reveals her identity even when the bag is returned with its evidence missing, so all the world wonders about her. The man she loves believes in her and waits thruout her time of study. Finally the greatest night of her life gives her the opportunity, not only to clear herself, but to expose the man who brought about her prison experience.

"In spite of a certain awkwardness in construction and melodramatic exaggeration in its situations there is some vitality in this, largely in the author's earnestness and his indignation with shams. The unhappy lady in the case is rather a feverish exaggeration, but she stands for something. The author's performance is amateurish but the book has some solid substance."

— + Lit R p779 My 24 '24 130w

ROCKEY, HOWARD—Continued

"It seems to me this book should be a big success among the drug store trade and with the movie patrons. The author's lively imagination and athletic plot almost make one forget his manifold errors." Bruce Gould

— N Y Tribune p25 Jl 13 '24 500w

ROE, ROBERT. Here you have me! 189p $1.50 Doran

811 23-17903

"What a frank title for a first book of verse is Here You Have Me! The title poem and a few others in the Whitmanesque tradition are followed by a group of poems derived from experiences as a sailor, verses that break free of any tradition known to me; and by poems ripened out of an intimate contact with the Arizona desert."—Grant Overton

---

"In 'Marines' and in 'A Sailor's Notebook' Mr. Roe reproduces with startling beauty the crude dreaming quality of a sailor's imagining. In this section of his book he is reminiscent of Whitman, yet with a vigor and a breadth of imagery that is entirely his own. It is the poetry of ego. It is essentially male; but it is grandiose in conception and execution. The vigor of life, the joy of love, the tenderness of friendship are in these extraordinary poems." J. F.

+ Bookm 58:679 F '24 280w

"Mr. Roe, like many another present day writer, shouts his wares, shouts about the silent spaces of California and Arizona, and is no less vociferous concerning the sea. . . The admirers of Mr. Roe's work will continue admiring; new admirers may not be had for the asking. Probably Mr. Roe would not send in his card when about to call upon you, but would fist the door open."

— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '24 130w

"Robert Roe, whose sensitive, unconfined, loud speaking, humorous personality colors the present book, has something to say not very different from but very inferior to the message of the hoary bearded Walt Whitman. He has written some fine clear-sighted things; he is one of the Western voices that should be heard. Yet we think him not very important."

— + Lit R p481 Ja 26 '24 120w

"Robert Roe gives us poems of distinction and marked originality. They have exuberance and intensity, and there is an Attic nudity, a spareness and clarity of contour which is almost like sculpture. The sea poems written before the mast, on a long cruise, flame with life and vivid feeling. Mr. Roe has the faculty of capturing fleeting emotions and crystallizing them in brief lines, as only a true poet can. His tools are polished and his art is keen and fecund." B. S. Wagstaff

+ N Y Tribune p18 Ja 6 '24 300w

ROGERS, ARTHUR KENYON. What is truth? an essay in the theory of knowledge. 184p $2.50 Yale univ. press [10s 6d Milford]

121 Truth. Knowledge, Theory of 23-8863

"Chapters I and IV consist, with numerous changes, of articles previously published in the Philosophical Review and this Journal. The chapters entitled, 'The Nature of Certainty,' 'The Nature of Belief,' 'Knowledge of Other Selves and of the Past' (with the exception of the part on Memory), 'Some Competing Theories,' 'Relations,' 'Some Metaphysical Implications,' are new. The volume is intended to supplement Mr. Rogers' contribution to Essays in Critical Realism. The problem of truth, here discussed, is not that of the metaphysical status of truth, but that of the conditions which are necessary for a belief or idea to be true."—J Philos

---

"The book is not always easy reading, but it is worth reading." F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 5 '24 650w

"Certain passages of the book are best explained on the supposition that the author has a sense of humor; this is especially true of his discussion of the 'problem of the existence of existence,' which is really very amusing. Then, too, the book has a subtle excellence from the dramatic point of view. The seemingly innocent question: What is Truth? is squarely approached at first and yields quite willingly, but a little skepticism about reality serves to draw attention from the main question until the reader is almost imperceptibly carried away from truths to certainties, from certainties to beliefs, from beliefs to ideas, from ideas to essences, from essences to feelings, from feelings to the self, from the self to other selves, and thence on to space, to time, and ultimately to God, where all questions vanish in the divine wonder." H. W. Schneider

J Philos 20:552 S 27 '23 4200w

"It is of particular interest to the philosophically minded. It is a closely reasoned and straightforward argument that can be read by the untrained layman, but not without careful concentration."

Lit R p568 Mr 1 '24 230w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p801 N 29 '23 700w

ROGERS, LEIGH WILLIAM. Wine of fury. 340p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Richards]

24-12283

A novel dealing with the outbreak and progress of the Russian revolution as seen thru the eyes of David Rand, a young American banker. At first taking no heed of the impending events, he builds up a successful branch bank in Petrograd, only to see it wrecked by the Soviet government. His activities bring him into contact with a select group: General Dukharin whose daughter Natalie he loves; the Countess Borovskaya, an America; Peter Radkin, visionary and radical; and Naritza, the dancer, whose vengeance he so narrowly escapes. At the very moment that happiness seems to be within their reach David and Natalie are separated again, he thru banishment from Russia and she thru the urgent call of her own people for her help. Out of the strife and terror of the revolution emerge the figures of Rasputin, Kerensky, and Lenin, and a host of lesser lights.

"Melodramatic as it may appear, this novel rises head and shoulders above melodrama as it is commonly known. In the manner in which the Revolution was melodramatic so is this story." K. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 4 '24 780w

Nation 119:221 Ag 27 '24 60w

Nation and Ath 34:846 Mr 15 '24 200w

"This happens to be a first novel; it is that in name only; for it is a capital performance. The management of narrative is excellently contrived with its vast cyclorama of teeming activity. 'Wine of Fury' gives an illuminating, clear cut, plausible interpretation of Russia during the great upheaval."

+ N Y Times p22 My 25 '24 700w

N Y Tribune p24 Jl 27 '24 250w

"It is a story powerful, thrilling and thought compelling. The wine of its title is, of course, that of which those men drink deep who turn the streets of great Russian cities into ways of ambush and destruction." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e My 25 '24 300w

"It is well told, it is exciting, and I find justifiable the publisher's bold claim that if you read so much as the first two pages you will want to read the whole." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 137:135 F 9 '24 420w

"Wine of Fury is a book dealing worthily with a great theme. It should be read by all who take an impartial interest in the welfare of Russia, and is specially interesting at this moment, when the sudden death of Lenin turns our thoughts once more to the problems which confront her."

+ Spec 132:164 F 2 '24 1350w

"The reader must be prepared for a lumpy voyage over the story's prose. But it is a voyage worth making."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p94 F 14 '24 480w

ROGERS, MARY COCHRANE. Glimpses of an old social capital. 93p il $10 The author, Copley sq. hotel, Boston

974.2 Portsmouth, New Hampshire. Browne, Arthur 23-15932

"A sketch of the social life of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, during the eighteenth century, chiefly as it may be illustrated by the life and career of the Reverend Arthur Browne, his family, and the circle of his intimate friends. He was Rector of the Church, and was for many years the recognized leader of the local aristocracy—gentlefolk who carried on the gracious traditions of the stately English society of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The book is built up largely from old letters and extracts from family documentary records. It is thus first-hand data, and contains a good deal of curious historical interest." —Lit R

"Carefully prepared and beautifully printed volume." E. J. Carpenter
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 8 '23 1700w

"Mrs. Rogers has supplied data of interest and of some historical value, in filling up this comparatively blank place in colonial history. The book is a carefully documented, painstakingly minute sketch."
+ Lit R p780 My 24 '24 230w

"The illustrations are particularly interesting, as they are chiefly reproduced from portraits painted by Copley, Blackburn and other artists of the Colonial and later periods."
+ N Y Times p26 Ja 6 '24 550w

ROGERS, WILL. Illiterate digest. 350p $2 A. & C. Boni

817 25-2371

"Cow-puncher, lariat thrower, writer, after-dinner speaker and above all a humorist, Will Rogers is known to the public through a multiplicity of activities. In 'The Illiterate Digest' there are personal sketches of various celebrities and a number of dissertations on timely themes, such as 'Income Taxes with the Follies Girls' and 'Mr Ford and Other Political Self-Starters.' The book closes with the sketch, 'Taking the Cure by the Shores of Cat Creek,' in which the author explains his numerous refusals to boost things—a commendable habit from which he here breaks away."—Springf'd Republican

"In a Sunday paper his remarks may bring laughter, but when collected in book-form, no longer timely, they sometimes come close to bringing tears."
— Boston Transcript p5 Ja 3 '25 190w

"It is hard to find one part of the book noticeably better than another part. It is all good." J: Crawford
+ N Y Times p2 D 14 '24 1200w

Reviewed by Frank Sullivan
+ N Y World p8e D 28 '24 450w

"The humorist's keen philosophy and satire shed light upon many controversies, and Mr Rogers is not often caught napping where a question of fact is involved."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 4 '25 160w

ROGET, PETER MARK. Roget's treasury of words; abridged by C. O. Sylvester Mawson assisted by Katherine Aldrich Whiting. 444p $1 Crowell

424 Synonyms 24-4999

"Abridged from Roget's Thesaurus. By omitting obsolete, rare and bookish terms, and by cutting down the number of adverbs, the work has been condensed and simplified. Good for school use as less confusing than the larger work. Introduction on the growth of English synonyms and word formation and appendix of foreign phrases."—Wis Lib Bul

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 23 '24 60w
Wis Lib Bul 20:92 Ap '24

ROHMER, SAX, pseud. (ARTHUR SARSFIELD WARD). Brood of the witch-queen. 278p $2 Doubleday

The prefatory notice says: "The strange deeds of Antony Ferrara, as herein related, are intended to illustrate certain phases of Sorcery as it was formerly practised (according to numerous records) not only in Ancient Egypt but also in Europe during the Middle Ages. In no case do the powers attributed to him exceed those which are claimed for a fully equipped Adept." The scene of Antony's evil deeds changes from England to Egypt and back to England. The story of his career of horror and how it was finally brought to an end by Dr Cairn and his son Robert is one long series of diabolically planned terrors.

"The discovery of the truth about the terrible 'Curse of the House of Dhoon' is a thrilling, ingeniously handled episode, and, indeed, all the adventures which befell Robert Cairn and his father are at once entertaining and conducive to the production of goose flesh."
+ N Y Times p9 F 17 '24 500w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas
N Y Tribune p20 F 17 '24 420w

Springf'd Republican p11a Mr 2 '24 200w
Wis Lib Bul 20:69 Mr '24

ROHMER, SAX, pseud. (ARTHUR SARSFIELD WARD). Grey face. 331p $2 Doubleday

24-24142

As Douglas Carey sits writing out a confidential police report in his own apartment he suddenly loses consciousness. When he awakens his report is missing and Douglas is filled with terror at the memory of a ghastly grey face. The same thing happens again and Douglas consults Sir Provost Hope, famous consultant and more than an amateur in hypnotism and the mystic sciences. Over and over the grey face appears and to many people, from a woman in the Limehouse district to Sir Provost's own beautiful daughter. Aided by a young physician Sir Provost finally solves the mystery of this ghastly power for evil, just as the power passes forever from the earth.

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p56 D '24 300w

"This time he has fairly outdone himself, especially in the elaborateness of his stage setting and its 'properties.' His audience will not be disappointed in this." H. L. P.
Lit R p10 O 25 '24 250w

"Mr. Rohmer rears his structure with the ease and confidence of a past master at this sort of thing. He knows exactly where to make a semi-explanation, how to keep his readers' interest highly sustained, and when to indulge in a little rationalizing in order to drug their skepticism."
+ N Y Times p16 D 14 '24 500w
N Y World p9e N 16 '24 150w

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. Mahatma Gandhi; the man who became one with the universal being; tr. by Catherine D. Groth. 250p $1.50 Century

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand

Romain Rolland describes Gandhi as "the man who stirred three hundred million people to revolt, who has shaken the foundations of the British Empire, and who has introduced into human politics the strongest religious impetus of the last two thousand years." The book is a sympathetic study of the man and his creed and of the non-cooperation movement in India of which he is the leader.

ROLLAND, ROMAIN—Continued

Booklist 20:336 Je '24

"The convincing prose of Rolland, utilized to explain a character he loves, gives an exceptional quality to a book on a Messianic figure."
+ Bookm 59:352 My '24 90w
Cleveland p80 S '24
Dial 77:268 S '24 80w

Reviewed by Alma Newton
Int Bk R p368 Ap '24 1300w

"Rolland's very obvious sympathy with Gandhi's aims and his means of achieving them do not lead him into the folly of unstinted praise; he is careful to present both sides of the question and to make clear the fact that not even Gandhi is always able to control his followers."
+ Lit R p675 Ap 12 '24 200w

"A pacifist thinker writes the biography of a pacifist man of action. The book is a milestone at historic crossways. Romain Rolland's 'Mahatma Gandhi' can be read through in two hours. But it contains material which can hardly be assimilated within the span of a single life-time. For it is packed with the germ-ideas of a new age and a new order of humanity." Lucien Price
+ Nation 118:658 Je 4 '24 850w
Nation and Ath 35:326 Je 7 '24 130w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 39:162 Jl 2 '24 320w

"In so far as it presents Gandhi the man and the Mahatma, it is a fine example of M. Rolland's feeling and skill. But its historical basis is, of necessity, a matter of controversy."
+ — New Statesman 23:324 Je 21 '24 550w

"On the whole, it would be difficult to find an interpreter more sympathetic to Gandhi's aims and ideals than Rolland, or one better equipped by personal conviction to reveal them with insight and understanding. The result is a book consistently appreciative in spirit, often partisan and only occasionally critical in attitude, which none the less sustains an unflagging interest throughout. Romain Rolland has by no means produced a dispassionate study of Gandhi or a critical estimate of his ideas. The book is written from vigorous feeling and sincere intellectual conviction; it is a document in proselytism rather than a record of contemporary history." Lloyd Morris
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 27 '24 2600w

"This book is valuable not only for what Rolland writes but also for what he permits Gandhi to reveal of himself. Incidentally, the humble discipleship of Romain Rolland will confer a dignity upon the name of Gandhi to thousands in the Occident who may have dismissed him as an illiterate and fantastic creature." H. S.
+ N Y World p6e F 24 '24 1100w
Outlook 136:485 Mr 19 '24 180w
Pratt p37 summer '24
R of Rs 70:222 Ag '24 60w
St Louis p355 O '24
St Louis p416 D '24
Sat R 137:639 Je 21 '24 220w

"M. Rolland exalts Mr. Gandhi as the apostle of a new and better humanity, whom a weary, blundering British Government has carried through the floods of absolutism and set on the shore of a liberated India, to draw all men unto him. The theme is developed with rhythmic eloquence."
+ — Spec 132:713 My 3 '24 1550w

"Roman Rolland's account of Gandhi is just, as well as sympathetic; he launches no tirades against the government but lets facts speak for themselves. His 'Mahatma Gandhi' is a scholarly as well as interesting book."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 6 '24 310w

"This is the best study of the great-souled Gandhi which has appeared. The spirit of the author is in tune with his subject. Though lacking in critical analysis, the book portrays the essential elements in the Mahatma's character and presents the salient features of the Gandhi movement." F. B. Fisher
+ Survey 52:243 My 15 '24 750w
Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. The Montespan; tr. from the French by Helena Van Brugh De Kay. 130p $2 Huebsch
842 24-6669

In this three-act drama Romain Rolland portrays the soul of an ambitious woman who had been for fifteen years the favorite of Louis XIV. Mme de Montespan is represented at the moment when the realization is forced upon her that she has lost her youth and that her power over the king is slipping away from her. In her rage and despair the most ignoble passions of her heart are unloosed.

Cleveland p20 Mr '24

"The play is dramatic by virtue of emotional scenes rather than through any continuous structural growth, yet the succession of stirring episodes keeps the reader tense."
+ — Lit R p544 F 23 '24 400w

"Praise belongs more to the conception of the piece than to its execution. The play reads better than it would act, owing to the argumentative nature of many of the speeches; although these are redeemed in part by some highly dramatic scenes." P. A. Hutchison
— + N Y Times p8 Ja 6 '24 600w

"The play, as read, is a dramatic piece of work; acted, its occasional lengthy, somewhat introspective passages would undoubtedly require all the powers of personal magnetism possessed by really great actors."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 27 '24 250w

"A play of remarkable interest throughout."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:140 F '24 120w

ROLLINS, HYDER EDWARD, ed. Cavalier and Puritan. 532p il $6.50 N. Y. univ. press
821.08 Ballads, English. Political ballads and songs, English. Broadsides, English. Great Britain—History—Puritan revolution, 1642-1660 24-8835

"Ballads and broadsides illustrating the period of the great rebellion, 1640-1660. Seventy-five ballads and verse broadsides, of which not more than half a dozen have ever been reprinted since the days which called them forth. The introduction with its history of broadsides during the English Civil War and the Commonwealth, is a first-rate piece of erudite investigation."—Nation

---

"This volume fills a gap in the printed ballad literature illustrating English history, and the ballads, besides being well selected, are admirably edited." C. H. Firth
+ Eng Hist R 39:437 Jl '24 1000w

"These ballads are both interesting and entertaining, and they cast a light on the customs and manners of their day, one of the most significant periods of English history. New York University is to be congratulated on this volume, prepared by a member of its faculty and published in such handsome form by its press." E: B. Reed
+ Lit R p900 Jl 19 '24 600w

"The verses are edited in a manner to excite and aid all antiquarians and collectors."
+ Nation 118:sup455 Ap 16 24 60w

"We may not all fully appreciate the relentless thoroughness of the editing, which will not permit the most obvious misprint to be corrected without a footnote; but that is a matter of taste. We can all rejoice in the ballads themselves, sometimes for their own intrinsic merit, always for their sidelights on current popular opinion and on the strivings of journalism to be born. The selection is admirable in its variety."
+ — Nation and Ath 34:640 F 2 '24 500w

"It must be evident how greatly Mr. Rollins has obliged the public by this admirably chosen collection of (for the most part) hitherto unknown or unreprinted ballads. As an editor he is careful to a fault, and if we venture to indicate where the fault lies, we do so because Mr. Rollins is well able to bear criticism, and because the fault is symptomatic. He is a prey to conscience and timidity."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p101 F 21 '24 4700w

ROLT-WHEELER, FRANCIS WILLIAM. Gem-hunters. 362p $1.75 Lothrop

553.8 Gems 24-11572

"In 'The Gem-Hunters' there is a description of the early days around Kimberley, in South Africa, where diamonds were to be found. The book then develops into a study of gems, interspersed with the author's sidelights on Lord Roberts, Lord Kitchener, Cecil Rhodes, and administrative policies in South Africa."—Int Bk R

Boston Transcript p5 Je 21 '24 500w

"Most of the book is written in much too technical language for any one unfamiliar with the science of precious stones. For whole pages, in chapters such as 'Imprisoned Lightnings' and 'Where Science Rules,' there is hardly a paragraph intelligible to the lay reader. I should fancy jewelers or a jeweler's apprentice would like this book." M. G. Bonner

— + Int Bk R p746 S '24 100w

Outlook 138:380 N 5 '24 20w

Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 20 '24 60w

ROLT-WHEELER, FRANCIS WILLIAM. Magic-makers of Morocco. 232p il $1.50 Doran

24-9668

Another book in the "Round the world with the young journalists" series. Ali and Hassan, sons of the famous magician, Abd el Kher, help their father in his white and black magic. Abd el Kher, by his knowledge gained in uncanny ways is an important figure in Moroccan affairs. At last Ali gives up his magic for a journalist's career.

"A well-written book, teeming with magic, reality, horror and excitement." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p617 Jl '24 90w

"This is excellent vacation reading for the adventure-loving boy, with plenty of African thrills compounded of black and white magic." G. M. Goldman

+ N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 80w

ROMAINS, JULES, pseud. (LOUIS FARIGOULE). Eyeless sight; a study of the extra-retinal vision and the paroptic sense; tr. by C. K. Ogden. 251p $2 (5s) Putnam

612.84 Sight 24-13599

The theory here advanced is the possibility of seeing without the use of the eye. The human skin has sensory organs which he believes may be made to serve as visual organs, so that one may actually see by means of the skin. He explains the steps by which he came to this discovery and the experiments he used in developing his theory. The appendices give reports of demonstrations the authenticity of which are attested by physicians and other eminent men, including Anatole France.

"The skeptic within us argues (very possibly fatuously) that telepathy can explain away a lot of this 'world-revolutionizing' discovery. But since Henri Bergson feels it wise to reserve final judgments as to its authenticity, perhaps it will not be foolish for us to do the same."

— Bookm 60:103 S '24 100w

"The description of the experiments by which M. Romains has come to his extraordinary conclusions are exceedingly interesting. . . . The more regions engaged, the more easy and satisfying are the results. For example, if the hands are bare, the sleeves lifted to the elbows, the forehead clear and the chest uncovered the subject reads easily and at normal speed, a page of a novel, or an article in a newspaper, printed in ordinary print."

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 9 '24 280w

N Y Tribune p11 O 26 '24 170w

"He must be acquitted at once of what might have been the graver aspects of a possible mystification. His thesis is exposed without extrinsic allurement; it is written with the grave reserve of a genuine scientific report."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p184 Mr 27 '24 700w

RONALDSHAY, LAWRENCE JOHN LUMLEY DUNDAS, earl of. India: a bird's-eye view. 335p il $5 Houghton [18s Constable]

915.4 India—Description and travel. India—Social life and customs [24-25312]

"The Earl of Ronaldshay is an authority upon India, for he has traveled widely over the country, has spent many years there, and was formerly Governor General of Bengal. This volume he offers to meet the needs of the general reader who wants some knowledge of the outstanding features of India, its people and its life, and wants them presented in a way that will illuminate their significance. Therefore his work is something more than what is generally understood by a 'birdseye view,' which usually is concerned chiefly with material aspects."—N Y Times

"Considering the immensity of the subject, it is doubtless 'a bird's-eye view.' But seldom has one so comprehensive, so clear and so impartial, been given, or one so logically interpreted. Vast—condensed as it is—as are its data, it does not confuse." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 19 '24 1100w

"Despite the difficulty of making a book of this sort readable as well as sound and authoritative Lord Ronaldshay has managed very well to keep his work from becoming too heavy." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p14 Ag 30 '24 330w

"Lord Ronaldshay is a little irritating. There is in him a tendency to 'fine writing' and a distinct, if faint, flavour of the superior person. His book is, however, both readable and instructive."

— + Nation and Ath 35:326 Je 7 '24 160w

"The book is not a mere patchwork. Lord Ronaldshay has handled his material so cleverly that it all works into an organic whole. He writes with a graphic pen and with such a comprehensive knowledge of his subject that his easy, flowing narrative presents an immense amount of significant information in a picturesque and readable manner. He is, however, inclined to a deplorable indulgence in verbosity."

+ — N Y Times p13 Jl 13 '24 1400w

N Y Tribune p26 Ag 10 '24 180w

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 30w

St Louis p415 D '24

Reviewed by W. G. Tinckom-Fernandez

Sat R of Lit 1:126 S 20 '24 600w

"His description of the Karma doctrine, and of its results in religion and politics, is admirable, but, in fact, the whole book is interesting and sympathetic." E. M. Wrong

+ Spec 133:327 S 6 '24 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p275 My 8 '24 550w

"A panorama of India too material, too gross. In such a bird's-eye view where objects naturally lose their height, the author has failed to present India in true perspective. The book reminds one of a landscape in which the artist painted only the deeper shades while the subtler nuances and tints defied his brush and palette and the sky found no place at all." Hari Govil

— World Tomorrow 7:381 D '24 550w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE. Letters from Theodore Roosevelt to Anna Roosevelt Cowles. 323p $2.50 Scribner
B or 92 24-24147

The letters contained in this volume were selected from a large number written by Theodore Roosevelt to his older sister, commencing in 1870, when he was a boy of eleven years, and ending with a note dated a few days before his death. Written in his usual frank style, the letters include several to his mother and father and one or two to his brother-in-law, Admiral Cowles. There is also a reproduction of a four-page picture letter such as Roosevelt was fond of sending his children.

Booklist 21:150 Ja '25

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett
Boston Transcript p5 N 1 '24 1250w

Cleveland p95 D '24

"Letters always need editing. These have had almost none. Very many of them are brief notes containing nothing."
— New Statesman 24:274 D 6 '24 180w

"The letters will be read for their unpremeditated pictures of family life. In their reading those who dislike him will sneer, and those who love him will love him all the more."
N Y Times p4 O 19 '24 950w

R of Rs 70:667 D '24 80w

Reviewed by Gamaliel Bradford
Sat R of Lit 1:225 O 25 '24 490w

Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 680w

ROOT, HARVEY WOODS. Tommy with the big tents. 202p il $1.75 Harper
24-5804

A tale of circus days, for boys and girls. Tommy Baxter, in search of a job, joins a circus. In this busy world he meets with all kinds of unexpected adventures. He drives off a lion, fights with a crowd of toughs, chases a runaway mule, escapes from a gorilla, and is finally in a train wreck. Doing his work well, Tommy is liked by all and is given many an opportunity to see the inside workings of a circus.

"Mr. Root knows the story of the circus. It is alluring in any form, but for the complete enjoyment of children Mr. Root has given it the fascinating quality of fiction. While every chapter is filled with instruction, the descriptive matter is interwoven with the story in such an interesting manner that no youngster will want to miss a page."
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '24 140w

"Tommy will be liked by all boys. If he isn't, it will be their fault and not Tommy's." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p616 Jl '24 200w

"Mr. Root has purveyed some solid information in an attractive way, and he has written a rattling narrative that will hold the attention of any real boy."
+ Lit R p731 My 3 '24 70w

"The story is full of interesting, exciting incident, for mischances and accidents are frequent, and Tommy, in a very boylike way, manages to be in the midst or close upon the edge of all of them."
+ N Y Times p16 My 4 '24 450w

N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 80w

"The boys will like it and adults will find information and entertainment in its well written pages."
+ N Y World p6e Ap 13 '24 70w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 160w

ROSE, WILLIAM. From Goethe to Byron. 210p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Routledge]
830.9 German literature—History and criticism

The author looks to the forty years or more in German literature preceding the age of Byron for the explanation of his great reputation in Germany and his influence on its literature. The quality of Weltschmerz, which was epidemic in German literature during this period is a psychic state arising from the conflict between the ideal and the actual and expressing itself in disillusion and despair. This discord is common to all great poets and was especially manifest in Byron. The book follows the development of this quality during Goethe's time, which made German literature particularly receptive to the later influence of Byron.

"Encouragingly psychoanalytical for a 'doctor's dissertation,' this volume is both readable and illuminative unto our own—as the author argues, somewhat similar—days of Sturm und Drang."
+ Bookm 60:99 S '24 100w

"Dr. Rose, perhaps, claims too much for his book; he seems to regard his researches as having more of originality than they in fact possess. But he has happily combined research with a pleasing clarity and an engaging simplicity of exposition. The book is illuminating."
+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 27 '24 1500w

Outlook 138:65 S 10 '24 100w

"Mr. Rose skillfully guides us through the long narrow defile of 'the vale of tears,' which leads from Goethe to Byron." C. F. Schreiber
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:30 Ag '24 350w

Reviewed by R: Church
Spec 133:200 Ag 9 '24 750w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p342 My 29 '24 90w

ROSENBERG, JAMES NAUMBURG. Punchinello, a ballet. 92p $1.50 Kennerley
812 24-8394

"The central character [of the play] is the eternal tragic clown, Punch, who wears an enormous hump which he dreams in vain of having magically removed; who falls in love with a beautiful lady, only to lose her to one of more attractive physical build; who manoeuvers merrily and sadly through a filmy fairyland with the aid of a strange assortment of men-at-arms, goblins, elves, gnomes, pirates, puppets, Indians, gods, &c. All this affords excellent material for fantasy."—N Y Times

Reviewed by Robert Graves
Nation and Ath 35:sup252 My 24 '24 160w

"Mr. Rosenberg's play, which the author designates 'a ballet,' is ostensibly intended for acting rather than for reading; it abounds in rollicking scenes, in moments of song and action that are obviously designed for the stage rather than for the library. . . He has not worked to the last ounce; for his style which is a rambling vers libre, is not sufficiently packed with poetic images to create the necessary illusion; and his plot is so ambulatory and discursive as to produce in places only a nebulous impression when a distinct, unified effect would be desirable." S. A. Coblentz
— + N Y Times p10 Ap 13 '24 380w

N Y World p7e My 25 '24 130w

ROSENBERGER, JESSE LEONARD. The Pennsylvania Germans. 173p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press
974.8 Germans in Pennsylvania

"A descriptive account of the life, customs, and religious practices of the German settlers in Pennsylvania, written by a man whose ancestors belonged to this group."—J Religion

"Himself a descendant of the German pioneers in Pennsylvania, Mr. Rosenberger brings to his study of a somewhat peculiar people that most persuasive of all qualities in a historian—sympathy. From the proverbs and superstitions of the austerely conservative 'Pennsylvania Dutch' and from their old records, Mr. Rosenberger has gathered many historical mosaics, fitting them deftly into a picture which, if lacking in color, is one of strength and of a reserved appeal."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 9 '24 380w

J Religion 4:335 My '24 30w

ROSENFELD, PAUL. Musical chronicle (1917-1923). 314p $3 Harcourt

780.4 Music 23-26930

A collection of articles, mostly reprinted from periodicals, dealing with the varied chronicle of a New York musical season—concerts, operas, composers, compositions, musicians, conductors, programs, and the dazzling succession of premières, revivals, guest conductorships, festivals, etc. Among the composers discussed are d'Indy, Bloch, Strawinsky, Casella, Szymanowski, Milhaud, Bruckner, Saint-Saëns, Ornstein, Franck and Bartók.

Booklist 20:93 D '23

Bookm 58:482 D '23 100w

Cleveland p8 Ja '24

"My feeling is that Mr. Rosenfeld should write no more magazine articles about music, but a magnum opus of some sort. I would back him to write a history of music which would become a popular classic. For one of the most remarkable things about Mr. Rosenfeld is his cosmopolitan intelligence. I have said that he lives in touch with the great world, but what is most striking is that he does it without effort. For most Americans to apprehend Europe costs much struggle and self-consciousness. But it all comes easily to Mr. Rosenfeld." Edmund Wilson

+ Freeman 8:594 F 27 '24 2200w

"Mr. Rosenfeld brings to the serious American artist the thing he needs most and has had least of, sympathetic and intelligent understanding. . . It is obvious that Mr. Rosenfeld's greatest interest is in modern music, and it is fortunate, too. But he is entirely orthodox and well behaved in his appreciation of Palestrina, Bach, Beethoven, and Mozart. . . Discriminating as is his praise for the moderns, reverent as is his love for the holy fathers, Mr. Rosenfeld's greatest triumph as a critic comes in his fair and just appraisal of those luckless individuals the ex-moderns. Mr. Rosenfeld's literary style at times approaches great eloquence." Douglas Moore

+ Lit R p689 Ap 19 '24 1000w

"Mr. Rosenfeld denominates his book a 'chronicle,' but it deals far less with the actual experience of the concert room and the opera house than with the musical bookshelves. Since his opinions are expressed with great positiveness and little nuance, his readers will have sport aplenty agreeing or disagreeing with him." Pitts Sanborn

Nation 118:144 F 6 '24 160w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 9 '24 600w

"There are few books in which is packed so much that is strange and only half understood in the realm of music. . . Mr. Rosenfeld's book is well worth reading as any capable handling of a new rapier is worth watching. No one will agree with him on all points, and more than one will be irritated with a certain monotony of metaphor; but he is on the lookout for the new and interesting, and he is eager to impart his enthusiasm to others." Bruce Simonds

+ — Yale R n s 13:820 Jl '24 600w

ROSENFELD, PAUL. Port of New York. 317p il $3 Harcourt

814 American literature—History and criticism. Painters, American 24-10498

"Mr. Paul Rosenfeld writes of a group of artists who are connected by personal associations which found a centre in Mr. Alfred Stieglitz's studio at 291 Fifth Avenue. He gives delightfully intimate sketches of them; but he fixes his attention on what they have brought forth from the material on which they have been engaged through the media which they employ, the oils and pastels of Ryder and Kenneth Hayes Miller, and Marsden Hartley, the water colors of John Marin, the criticism of Van Wyck Brooks and Randolph Bourne, the fiction of Sherwood Anderson, the poetry of William Carlos Williams and Carl Sandburg, the music of Roger Sessions, the teaching of Margaret Naumberg, the camera work of Alfred Stieglitz. These artists are united in his choice, not by any casual association but by their possession of a single quality which is his test of their significance. He conceives that they give their work not only life but the power of reproduction, of communicating that life to the world of which they are part."—New Repub

---

"In 'Port of New York' we have found much that is the best in criticism, well written, thoughtful, balanced. It is a valuable notebook on contemporaries—moderns who may die, elsewhere unsung, or who may live eternally. None knows which until they are no longer modern." K. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 14 '24 370w

Cleveland p69 S '24

"No other American writing to-day could well have attempted the difficult problems Paul Rosenfeld set himself. He has captured not alone something of the flavour of painting, music, poems, and persons; he has set down sharp pictures that are part of American cultural history. Paul Rosenfeld's book, amidst the timid, tepid, and ill-informed writing known among us as criticism, is a warm and generous gift of himself, delineating our realities with something of the fervour and richness they deserve. Together with those of whom he writes he is discoverer and creator of America." H. J. Seligmann

+ Dial 76:544 Je '24 1800w

"There is something about Mr. Rosenfeld's work that is extremely reassuring. One may be irritated by his partiality, by a certain self-indulgence in his style, but one cannot fail to recognize his critical writing as a very rare and valuable influence upon the life of America today." Llewelyn Powys

+ — Nation 118:sup448 Ap 16 '24 900w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 39:23 My 28 '24 800w

"The book as a whole is impressive. It is tastefully arranged, with excellent pictures and an appendix full of biographies. Its essays are held together consistently by a single idea, and they display Rosenfeld's powers, critical and dithyrambic. But when he tells how the paintings of Dove and O'Keefe typify the sex-mechanism of the painters, he reduces art to the level of sympathetic magic." Rose Lee

+ — N Y Times p12 Ap 20 '24 1250w

— + N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:175 Jl '24

ROSNY, J. H., pseud. (BOEX, J. H. H.). Giant cat; or, Quest of Aoun and Zouhr; tr. from the French by Lady Whitehead. 242p $2 McBride

A tale of prehistoric days, being the wanderings of Aoun, son of Urus, and Zouhr, last of the Men-without-shoulders, in search of a new country free from affliction and peril. In threading jungles and vast forests they have numerous encounters with ferocious beasts from which only their valiance and cunning save them, and they also come upon a strange race of men and wolf-women. A peculiar friendship develops between Aoun and Zouhr and a huge feline, which they call the "Giant cat" whose cave is close to them.

Cleveland p84 N '24

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p57 D '24 70w

"One of the most exciting and piquant books of fiction that has appeared in some time. It is easy to see why this story has gone through forty editions in France. It is a thriller in the best sense of the word."

+ N Y Times p8 N 2 '24 600w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 90w

ROSS, EDWARD ALSWORTH. Russian soviet republic. 405p il $3 Century

947 Russia—Politics and government. Bolshevism—Russia. Communism—Russia
23-16678

"This is the third and concluding volume of Professor Ross's studies of the Russian revolution. Supports the author's belief that the Russian experience is a vindication of orthodox economics and sets forth his reasons for believing that it will not be repeated elsewhere."—Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by A. J. Todd
Am J Soc 29:754 My '24 280w

"It is a refreshing survey of one of the most significant movements in the twentieth century. The author shows wide familiarity with the sources of information now available to the western world. His spirit is scientific and critical, and the fidelity with which he attempts to set forth a true picture of the facts, his unwillingness to distort the recital, and his cautious yet highly stimulating conclusions, all mark the book as one in which the reader can place larger confidence than has been his wont in recent years." R. M. Story
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:195 F '24 1000w

"One is amazed at the painstaking care with which evidence has been accumulated, and while one may be disappointed that there is not more sociological analysis, one cannot help being stimulated by this crusade for truth, which will make it easier soon to evaluate the social significance of the Russian experiment." H. A. Miller
+ Ann Am Acad 114:165 Jl '24 180w
Bookm 59:227 Ap '24 100w

Reviewed by Oliver McKee, jr.
Boston Transcript p4 D 29 '23 2000w
Cleveland p23 Mr '24

"A fascinating narrative in which events of world-wide significance are presented at cinematograph speed, with the author's comments for captions. He has sifted great quantities of material, documents, propaganda, newspaper clippings, accounts by 'eye-witnesses,' and government reports. His story is not going to please everyone." W. W. Pettit
+ Nation 117:527 N 7 '23 1000w
Nation and Ath 35:268 My 24 '24 450w

"Whether scientific history or not, Professor Ross's book, conceived in the spirit of fair play, and instinct, as is all his work, with an intense and militant earnestness, is a well-aimed thrust at ignorance, error and falsehood, a valiant attempt to clear the way for a sane and candid attitude toward Russia and its revolution." Theodore Collier
+ New Repub 38:25 F 27 '24 1050w

"It is only when he tries to turn into history that which is not yet history—tries to describe the end before the end has come—that he fails as a trustworthy guide to events which are still in process of development. To this category belong, in large measure, his arraignments of the allied press in the chapter called 'The Poison Gas Attack.' His protest is weakened by its amplitude, by the citation of untrustworthy witnesses." Walter Littlefield
— + N Y Times p13 Ja 27 '24 1650w
N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 110w
Sat R 137:510 My 17 '24 520w

"With a will 'to hack his way through the thicket of falsehood' which has surrounded the events in Russia, and small regard for where the chips may fall, he has succeeded as no other writer in English in getting at the truth which has been obscured alike by deliberate falsehood and unintentional misrepresentation." Phillips Bradley
Springf'd Republican p7a Je 15 '24 920w
Wis Lib Bul 20:24 Ja '24

ROSS, WILLIAM DAVID. Aristotle. 300p $3.75 Scribner [12s 6d Methuen]

185.1 [24-10076]

"Mr. Ross explains [the book's] purpose clearly in a short preface; not a criticism or a historical disquisition, but an attempt to present and sum up the philosopher's doctrine in a single manageable volume. It would be difficult to name any other thinker for whom the task has been carried out. It is not a little book about Aristotle, but Aristotle himself boiled down, clarified, and arranged in readable and logical shape."—Nature

"Throughout the volumes Mr. Ross has achieved a clarity of exposition which happily bridges the twenty-three centuries which separate Aristotle from the present day."
+ Boston Transcript p1 My 31 '24 80w

"Students of philosophy will consider Professor Ross's Aristotle to be an unusual find and extremely valuable." Joseph Ratner
+ J Philos 21:357 Je 19 '24 1550w

"Mr. Ross is quite extraordinarily successful. To this task Mr. Ross brings a wealth of erudition which entitles him to be reckoned as one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of living authorities on his subject. But the erudition is never obtruded; it is carefully tucked away in copious footnotes and references, and Mr. Ross writes like a master who has ceased to work at his subject and begun to be at play with it. He is at once scholarly and illuminating; his own views on theories or disputed passages are lucidly given, and cogent reasons advanced for the rejection of alternative interpretations." C. E. M. Joad
+ Nation and Ath 34:550 Ja 12 '24 1150w

"It is eminently successful. An excellent idea to apply to the works of other great men who are too voluminous to be properly digested in the original in our overburdened age." F. S. Marvin
+ Nature 113:776 My 31 '24 900w

"Like Aristotle with the universe, Mr. Ross has laid a rather glacial hand upon his material, and he has reduced it to order. The labour involved must have been immense, and the result is of the very greatest value, for he has produced a volume which is of use, not only to the classical student, but, to a perhaps greater degree, to the laity as well."
+ New Statesman 22:486 F 2 '24 550w
N Y Times p14 Je 8 '24 1000w

ROSSMOORE, EMERSON EMANUEL. Federal income taxes, principles and practice. 864p $6 Appleton

336.2 Income tax 24-1993

A general statement of the law and its regulations is given as an introduction to 467 carefully stated problems which show in detail the actual application of the law to specific facts. The first 356 problems illustrate current (1923) questions; the remaining 111 illustrate questions arising under the Act of 1921 and, in certain cases, 1922. These problems with their solutions are intended to cover all questions likely to arise in the preparation of the income tax statement of any individual, partnership or corporation.

ROTHERT, OTTO ARTHUR. Outlaws of Cave-in-Rock. 364p il $6 Clark, A. H.

977.3 Cave-In-Rock, Illinois. Frontier and pioneer life. Brigands and robbers. River life
24-2486

"Mr. Rothert has here made a book of the historical accounts of the famous highwaymen and river pirates who operated in the pioneer days upon the Ohio and Mississippi rivers and over the old Natchez Trace. He tells graphically the terrible frontier story of the Harpes, the story of Samuel Mason—soldier, pirate and highwayman, of the illegal coiners of Cave-in-Rock and of the Ford's Ferry mystery. . . Cave-in-Rock is in Hardin County, Ill., a famous landmark still. Its position commands a long view up and down the Ohio. In the flatboat days it was the haunt of genuine robbers who levied a heavy toll upon the flatboat traffic."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p3 F 23 '24 600w

"The Outlaws of Cave-In-Rock contains enough thrilling material to fill many reels of movie films."
+ Dial 76:562 Je '24 150w

"As a whole this book is of decided historical value. Here, accurately and graphically treated, is an important phase of pioneer life, a dark and a bloody aspect, perhaps, but of decided value in fully getting the atmosphere of the time. Mr. Rothert has made a distinct addition to estimable Americana."
+ Lit R p731 My 3 '24 300w

"It is an excellent work of local history, and the result of much research."
+ Outlook 136:442 Mr 12 '24 210w

ROTHERY, AGNES EDWARDS (MRS HARRY ROGERS PRATT) (AGNES EDWARDS, pseud.). High altar. 285p $2 Doubleday
24-21147

"From an uncouth boyhood to an Episcopal bishopric goes James Ashmead Shelly and 'The High Altar' narrates the transition in detail. Jim Shelly is helped to escape from farm work in an obscure hamlet in New York State through the unselfish efforts of the little milliner who has once been a school teacher. She perceives the boy's possibilities, persuades his father to permit him to study and makes his college education an actuality by the most untiring of labor. When the boy believes he loves her, she permits him to cherish the notion of their future together convinced that thus he will have less desire to waste his time in philandering. Once he has graduated and dutifully stands prepared to keep his vows to the woman who appears before him in the disenchantment of middle-age, this unselfish Lucia disappears, leaving the young clergyman to pursue his career unhampered."—Boston Transcript

---

Booklist 21:154 Ja '25

"Miss Rothery has done some effective character drawing in 'The High Altar'; her vision is pitilessly clear for human frailty."
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 8 '24 270w
Cleveland p91 D '24

"Never, in the handling of any one of these characters, do we feel that Miss Rothery is doing anything but the artistic, objective creating of the detached novelist; and we are glad to see that she can do this with power just as she did in her earlier novel." Lawrence Lee
+ Int Bk R p905 N '24 320w

"The writing of 'The High Altar' is so able as to stand as an achievement for its own sake; that is, it is a work of art, and this is a second merit which groups Miss Rothery with an even more exclusive class. Finally, it is one observer's sincere portrayal of the Church's position in our present civilization, and as this is a living issue the book will be read eagerly by those who seek significance as well as enjoyment." T. M. Longstreth
+ Lit R p12 S 27 '24 520w

"There are streaks of good writing in this novel, and much that is very bad."
— + N Y Times p24 S 14 '24 270w

"This book is a sincere and powerful study of a sincere and weak man."
N Y Tribune p10 N 16 '24 240w
N Y World p8e S 7 '24 120w

ROWE, HENRY KALLOCH. History of religion in the United States. 213p $1.75 Macmillan
277.3 United States—Religion 24-23151

Prof Rowe's history emphasizes the social significance of religion in American history and its importance in the shaping of the nation. He shows, too, its gradual liberation from old world institutionalism.

Boston Transcript p6 N 15 '24 260w
Springf'd Republican p5a N 2 '24 1400w

ROYDEN, AGNES MAUDE. Christ triumphant. ^{2} 150p $1.25 (3s 6d) Putnam
230 Christianity

In these addresses Miss Royden strikes the triumphant note of the Christian faith but without ignoring the suffering and the cross which are the price of power. In her first group of addresses she shows the power of the spirit of Christ in business and industry, in international relations and in the treatment of criminals; in the second part she brings out the meaning of the cross.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 10 '25 220w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p467 Jl 24 '24 200w

ROYDEN, AGNES MAUDE. Friendship of God. 138p $1.25 (3s 6d) Putnam
252 Sermons 24-6670

Among these ten sermons of Miss Royden is the first one she ever preached. The theme of this sermon is that the operation of God's love in the spiritual world is as unfailing and constant as the working of the laws of the physical world. On this foundation, the "trustworthiness of God," she rests our friendship with Him, and this is the underlying thought which links together her series of sermons.

"She does it all in such a sane and cheery style that we feel she must be right."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 30 '24 360w

Reviewed by J. F. Newton
Int Bk R p656 Ag '24 40w

"This is a book to feed souls that have been overdosed with theology or sociology and still hunger and thirst after God." H. J. C.
+ Lit R p845 Je 21 '24 220w

Reviewed by B: Stolberg
Nation 119:603 D 3 '24 380w

"A book which will confirm the reader's belief in Miss Royden's magnetism as a preacher, and increase his astonishment that the Churches find themselves unable to make use of her exceptional gifts." A. F.
+ Nation and Ath 34:744 F 23 '24 50w
St Louis p401 D '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p83 F 7 '24 90w

RUBINSTEIN, HAROLD F., and GLOVER, HALCOTT. Exodus. (Contemporary British dramatists) 110p $1.50 Stokes [3s 6d Benn]
822

A dramatic sequence in five episodes. The first episode, The dreamer, shows Joseph at the height of his power ruling over Egypt. In episode two, The ark of bullrushes, Moses is found by the Egyptian princess Meris and adopted as her own son. Episode three, Moses the Egyptian, shows the dawning of race consciousness in Moses as he realizes the hardships of the Jews under their Egyptian taskmasters. Episode four, The Passover, portrays the first Passover and the departure of the children of Israel from Egypt. In episode five, Prophecy, the children of Israel are encamped in the wilderness, filled with doubt and fear, but in their hearts the hope of better things still lives.

"There is no continuous thread in the way of a single character or story, and the minor novelties in the treatment do not atone for the lack of a new philosophical vision or historical interpretation." Theresa Helbrun
— Lit R p932 Ag 2 '24 220w

"The scenes contain eloquent moments of high and sombre prophecy, though it was, perhaps, a more than prophetic liberty to make Moses, setting out into the desert, point up to 'Orion striding across the heavens.'"
+ — New Statesman 22:490 F 2 '24 120w
N Y Tribune p26 Ag 3 '24 30w

RUBINSTEIN, H. F., and GLOVER, H.—Cont.

"It is stiff, dull, perhaps a little affected, to read, as historical plays, at pains about their diction, are apt to be. But it might be splendid to look at, if some stage-artist of great talent could make us see what the ordinary, uninstructed imagination can but vaguely and shadowily sketch. And, such is the spell of the theatre that fine staging and good acting might give the play the life that it lacks in the book."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p36 Ja 17 '24 180w

Theatre Arts Mo 8:348 My '24 140w

RUCK, BERTA (MRS GEORGE OLIVER). Clouded pearl. 336p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

24-23921

From her mother's modest little seashore cottage Margaret Verity steps out into the fast social whirl when she is suddenly left a fortune. She is beautiful and admired, but blasé and neurotic. To save her from wasting away altogether, her uncle plans a sea trip which ends in a wreck on a desert isle, or so it seems, with Margaret and young Archie Mount the sole survivors. Margaret suspects nothing, the while she regains health and enthusiasm in the simple life of castaways. And just before she discovers the deception and the nearness of towns to her desert isle, she and Archie discover a mutual capacity for love.

Reviewed by Dorothie Bobbe

Lit R p12 N 22 '24 360w

"Mrs. Ruck digresses a great deal, and digresses to moralize. Yet this does not appear to lessen her popularity: why, one cannot say." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 35:782 S 27 '24 110w

"For all its fustian and frumperies, the book has a fresh, zestful spontaneity and a smooth, unhurried flow of narrative."

— + N Y Times p8 N 30 '24 720w

N Y Tribune p12 D 14 '24 170w

"A tale written with all the sentimental charm to which this author's followers are happily accustomed." E. W. Osborn

N Y World p8e O 19 '24 130w

"For those who have followed Berta Ruck's previous books and been pleased by them, 'The Clouded Pearl' will doubtless have a strong appeal; but to those who have not been fascinated by the author's work (and among these the present reviewer must be included), the novel will seem little more than a compound of claptrap and tinsel."

— Sat R of Lit 1:233 O 25 '24 150w

Spec 133:706 N 8 '24 40w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p598 S 25 '24 60w

RUCK, BERTA (MRS GEORGE OLIVER). Leap year girl. 279p $2 Dodd

24-26492

The story of a little Welsh country girl who dared to propose rather than wait. Nesta Pritchard finds nothing amusing in her secluded village till Hal Hewitt, sailor, turns up. In her despair at losing him at the end of his leave, she proposes. Hal is so taken by surprise that he says the wrong things. There follows a period of separation and suffering for both, since Hal's letter to her never reached her. Accidental meetings in London and at a country house furnish opportunities for the solution of the mystery of the missing letter, and before long affairs take a turn for the better for all concerned.

"This is such a sweet young story, that we wish we were still young enough to enjoy it."

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '24 400w

"This is the lightest kind of froth, beaten up expertly enough, to stretch over 279 pages, although the whole thing could have been better told in the 5000-word, short-story form. The story has some neat comedy situations and the dialogue is good."

— + Lit R p795 My 31 '24 130w

"The tale wags merrily along and every one marries at the end, the numerical residuum of unattached youths and maidens at the beginning of the last chapter tallying with an accuracy unfortunately not to be invariably met with in similar circumstances in real life. If you wish to be mildly amused and to have to think as little as possible in the process, we cannot but repeat the advice suggested at the beginning of the review and assure you of real enjoyment if you will take this book with you on your summer vacation."

+ — N Y Tribune p24 My 11 '24 600w

"While characteristic, this is not among the best stories by this author. But the generally gay tone and healthy sentimentality will please her following."

+ — Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 280w

RUIZ, JOSE MARTINEZ (AZORIN, pseud.). Don Juan; tr. from the Spanish by Catherine Alison Phillips. 144p $2 Knopf

"Although this slender volume is entitled 'Don Juan,' and its prologue declares that 'It came to pass that Don Juan del Prado y Ramos did not die; but his spirit emerged from his grave infirmity profoundly changed,' while the epilogue emphasizes this transformation, it is more a series of short sketches of life in a small Spanish city than a study of any one character. There are some thirty-nine of these brief sketches, and few of them cover more than two or three pages. Each gives us a glimpse of some aspect of the town, or shows us one or more of its inhabitants, sometimes, though by no means always, in their relation to Don Juan."—N Y Times

"For finished grace of style it is the most delightful thing that has been given to this country since the same publisher brought out Katherine Mansfield." Byron Dexter

+ Int Bk R p554 Je '24 600w

"It will not be a very wise or thrifty generation which forgets a writer of so pure and limpid a style and of sympathies so vital and catholic." M. F. Weeks

+ Lit R p575 Mr 8 '24 850w

"The English version leaves nothing to be desired. All the subtle poetry of Azorin's prose, all the weary nostalgia that escapes from his pictures, have been preserved in this version." Eliseo Vivas

+ Nation 118:320 Mr 19 '24 800w

New Statesman 22:376 Ja 5 '24 170w

" 'Azorin,' has a gift for compressing the history of a lifetime within a couple of pages; doing it, moreover, with a distinction of style, a sensitiveness to beauty, as unusual as they are admirable."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 27 '24 600w

Reviewed by W: L. Fichter.

N Y Tribune p24 Jl 13 '24 620w

Reviewed by L. L. Cline

N Y World p7e Ja 27 '24 1500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p238 Ap 17 '24 260w

RUNCIMAN, SIR WALTER, 1st bart. Before the mast—and after; the autobiography of a sailor and shipowner. 300p il $4.50 Lauriat [18s Unwin]

B or 92 [24-21896]

"Walter Runciman, grandson of a veteran of Nelson's fleet, son of a ship's captain, ran away to sea at twelve and rose to the command of ships at an early age. When the end of the sailing era came Runciman switched over to steamers, and after some very fortunate years as captain and manager laid down his command because of ill-health and went ashore to begin a phenomenally successful career as owner of steamers which won him wealth, fame, a 'handle to his name,' and great political and business influence—he sat in Parliament with his only son, the Right Honorable Walter Runciman, member of several Liberal governments. No romance written of nineteenth century sea conditions ever had more stirring material."—Nation

"The quiet beauty of old-time piety and faith gives an unusual tone to Sir Walter Runcimen's tale of a hard course gallantly sailed. It is the most modest autobiography we have ever read." I. W. Lawrence
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 9 '24 1150w

"This is a delightful human narrative of irresistible attraction for all who love the sea as well as true stories of adventure and daring. Every American who is concerned with the problem of building an American merchant fleet ought to read this volume because it explains better than all the dry treatises on the rise of the British merchant sea power, how English sailors won and have kept their mastery of the sea." O. G. Villard
+ Nation 119:242 S 3 '24 600w

"The fascination of Sir Walter Runciman's book may best be conveyed by saying that, if one of Mr. Conrad's sea captains had possessed a gift for writing, this is precisely the book he would have written. Here is a Conrad novel in the rough, before the master has thrown his cloak of many-coloured words over it."
+ Nation and Ath 35:490 Jl 12 '24 200w

"Sir Walter writes with such modesty and with so obvious an esteem for less successful men, that there is not a touch of smugness in the whole book."
+ New Statesman 23:318 Je 21 '24 500w

"A cheerful book, a manly account of an energetic, inspiring life upon which the author has every reason to look back with pride."
+ Sat R 137:612 Je 14 '24 900w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p347 Je 5 '24 1000w

RUNG, OTTO. Shadows that pass; tr. from the Danish by Grace Isabel Colbron. 226p $1.75 Appleton
24-14018

The book pictures a group of thirteen young Danish students, of whom Frank Thauma was the center. He seemed the very spirit of youth, goodness and genius and was the strongest influence in the lives of his friends. Shortly after their graduation from the university Thauma was tragically drowned. He left a will making provision that any one of them who after an interval of twenty years could "prove satisfactorily that financial assistance would determine the course of his whole future existence" was to be aided with the legacy he left. The chapters that follow are the narratives of these men each of whom tells the story of his life, seeking to qualify for the award. The book thus becomes a collection of human documents.

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield
Bookm 60:240 O '24 210w

"Mr. Rung's technique, while not absolutely unique in the field of the novel, is distinctive enough to make it enhance the art it supports." L. L.
Int Bk R p740 S '24 250w

"This book is charmingly written. The translation by Grace Isabel Colbron reveals this capably. All the subtleties of a compact and carefully organized poetic fiction are here and it proves to be quite a change from the usual level that comes out of the ruminating and self-analyzing Scandinavia."
+ N Y Times p24 Je 8 '24 400w

"The plan of his book is unique and a welcomed one in the midst of so many fourth rate novels. . . It is an unusual novel."
+ N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 450w

"It is a curious, fanciful work marked by poetic feeling and observation and displaying a sensitive knowledge of human idiosyncrasies, but lacking in vitality."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p476 Jl 31 '24 480w

RUSK, CLAUDE EWING. Tales of a western
2 mountaineer. 309p il $2.50 Houghton
917.9 Rocky mountains. Mountaineering
24-26932

"Mr. Rusk has a story of thirty years' mountain climbing on the Pacific Coast to tell. He is one of the few men who have climbed the eastern face of Mount Adams, in the State of Washington, which had for many years been regarded as unscalable. He writes also of other ascents of Adams, and of Mounts Hood, Baker, Stuart, Rainier and Shasta."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:107 D '24

"His book is written with sensitiveness and imagination. The descriptions are very beautiful. However, it is primarily a book for the mountaineer. The lowland reader will find it lacking in human touches, in humor and small appealing incidents. The book has no variety, its descriptions are uniformly of such grandeur and complexity that we are crushed."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 D 20 '24 500w

" 'Tales of a Western Mountaineer' will be read with interest by any one who delights in climbing. Even the expert mountaineer who has scaled difficult peaks in the Alps and the Canadian Rockies will find in it experiences worthy of his mettle, for the man who seeks hard climbing can find it on the peaks of the Pacific Coast. The book is full in its descriptions of these mountains and replete with stirring episodes."
+ N Y Times p7 O 12 '24 300w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e O 5 '24 280w

Outlook 138:607 D 10 '24 120w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM. Icarus; or, The future of science. 64p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]
504 Science. Civilization 24-11905

This little essay sets forth some of the dangers inherent in the progress of science while we retain our present political and economic institutions. Science has increased men's power to gratify their desires but it has not given them more self-control and kindliness. "Men's collective passions are mainly evil; far the strongest of them are hatred and rivalry directed towards other groups. Therefore at present all that gives men power to indulge their collective passions is bad. That is why science threatens to cause the destruction of our civilization. The only solid hope seems to lie in the possibility of worldwide domination by one group, say the United States, leading to the gradual foundation of an orderly economic and political world-government."

Booklist 21:11 O '24

"Mr. Russell is highly fascinating reading, even if occasionally he cuts rather pompous capers, makes exceedingly bold statements, and repeats ordinary newspaper information with the air of letting out a secret." W: K. Holland
+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 31 '24 500w

Cath World 119:705 Ag '24 250w

Int Bk R p810 O '24 450w

Lit R p11 S 13 '24 120w

"Frankly, it is a rather disappointing little book, from one of whom we expect so much."
— Nature 113:740 My 24 '24 350w

New Repub 40:206 O 22 '24 550w

"Thin and spiteful politico-economic anticipations."
— New Statesman 22:640 Mr 8 '24 270w

RUSSELL, B. A. W.—Continued

"Whether you agree with Russell or not, no more thought-provoking book has been published in a long, long time. It should be passed around to the gentlemen at the Democratic Convention. Yes, and they should be made to read it before they cast their vote." B: Harrow

+ N Y Times p14 Je 22 '24 1100w

Outlook 138:465 N 19 '24 90w

R of Rs 70:112 Jl '24 30w

St Louis p375 N '24

Springf'd Republican p6 My 12 '24 250w

RUSSELL, C. F. Religion and natural law. 186p $1.25 Appleton [5s Oxford]

230 Theology

In the Hulsean lectures delivered before Cambridge university the writer addresses those who cannot reconcile Christianity with the scientific point of view. He considers certain fundamental Christian doctrines—the Trinity, providence, punishment and forgiveness, the atonement and the problem of suffering—and shows how a man may hold them today without sacrificing his intellectual honesty.

Boston Transcript p3 My 3 '24 100w

"Some appendices serve to add to the value of a series of lectures which have a distinction of their own in their freshness and vigour of thought."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 3 '24 450w

RUTHERFORD, MARK, pseud. See White, W: H.

RUTLEDGE, MARYSE, pseud. (MRS GARDNER HALE). Sad adventurers. 315p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Constable]

24-20380

To Anita Moffett, part of the joy in marrying Major Brassington-Welsh lay in the prospect of a residence in England—Brassington Hall—and the possibility of traveling. And travel she did—not as the wife of the distinguished heir to Brassington Hall but as the sadly disillusioned wife of one of the most dexterous adventurers in the country. His daring schemes take them to the gayest cities in Europe where several times Anita's quick-wittedness saves them from total dishonor, and they are finally forced to return to America. Anita's disgust for this deceptive life reaches its peak when her husband plans to inveigle a friend of the family in his affairs. There is a violent quarrel, and Major Brassington-Welsh goes out upon his last great adventure alone.

Boston Trancript p4 S 20 '24 300w

"Miss Rutledge displays with a fine modulation some rare gifts, such as the ability to create one rememberable and credible character—a thing which few modern novelists have been wholly successful in doing—and the ability to sustain throughout her book a clear and luminous prose." Howard Weeks

+ Detroit News p14 S 14 '24 310w

"Profit or not, there is a great deal of fun, prettily mixed with pathos, to be got from The Sad Adventurers." J: Franklin

— + New Statesman 23:548 Ag 16 '24 450w

"It is in great measure the author's ability to present these two 'Sad Adventurers' of hers at once truthfully, and yet with sympathy and pity, that lifts this novel to a higher plane than tales of such swindlers usually occupy."

+ N Y Times p9 S 28 '24 420w

N Y Tribune p12 D 7 '24 200w

"On the whole, 'The Sad Adventurers' is a well-written book, consistent in its characters and inventive in its schemes, though it is sometimes a little too feminine in its awkward thinking beyond the confines of quotation marks." F. V. R.

+ — N Y World p8e S 7 '24 280w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 138:221 Ag 30 '24 60w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Spec 133:200 Ag 9 '24 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p478 Jl 31 '24 160w

RUTTER, FRANK V. P. Poetry of architecture. (Doran's modern reader's bookshelf) 236p $1.25 Doran [2s 6d Hodder & S.]

720 Architecture 24-4785

This little book is concerned with the spirit rather than the letter of architecture, with discovering what beautiful buildings mean both to the builder and to us and with analyzing the pleasure that is to be derived from them. The author shows how architecture arose from man's need and how, thru the centuries, it has expressed his emotions and ideals.

"In some 220 pages architecture is dealt with from many points of view, some of them just and sufficient, but I cannot honestly feel that the 'poetry' of architecture is one of them." R. A. C.

— Cath World 120:128 O '24 1250w

Nation 119:423 O 15 '24 150w

"No one could read the book without getting some fresh viewpoint or new understanding of some portion of its widely inclusive subject, while for the beginning student and the ordinary lay reader it will be an invaluable help in the understanding and appreciation of architecture."

+ N Y Times p23 My 25 '24 520w

"Thoughtful essays by an English writer who finds poetry in the architecture of to-day as well as in that of the storied past, and who has an appreciative spirit as regards American literature."

+ Outlook 137:548 Ag 6 '24 130w

S

SABATINI, RAFAEL. Bardelys the magnificent. 286p $2 Houghton [3s 6d S. Paul]

A24-714

"The hero, a handsome, reckless favorite of the French monarch Louis XIII, wagers his estate with a rival for the king's favor that he can win a beautiful heiress in the province of Languedoc whom his opponent has courted in vain. How he goes to Languedoc and is promptly snared in the web of rebellion that has been woven against the king, how he is wounded in battle and seeks shelter in the castle of the girl's father, who welcomes him as one of the rebels, how he woos the girl, overcomes his rival, and escapes from a charge of treason, makes a swiftly moving story of love, intrigue, and adventure."—Publisher's note

---

Cleveland p43 Je '24

"Sabatini is simply up to Stanley Weyman's old tricks. His remainders and left-overs from Stevenson seem lamentably old and rusted and without any meaning." A. D. Douglas

— New Repub 39:217 Jl 16 '24 280w

"Not only does Rafael Sabatini know the recipe for the making of a good tale, but he has the touch of a French chef in mixing his ingredients. There is nothing heavy and indigestible about Sabatini; his offering is always light, graceful and pleasant. If it does not last, well, neither do any sweets. At least it serves a moment's pleasure, and when that moment is gone the author is ready to mix another dish."

+ N Y Times p9 My 11 '24 950w

Outlook 137:548 Ag 6 '24 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:345 Jl '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:149 Je '24

SABATINI, RAFAEL. Mistress Wilding. 345p $2 Houghton
24-26320

A romance of the days of Monmouth's rebellion. Richard Westmacott, desirous of securing to himself his sister's fortune, plots against her lover, Anthony Wilding, and finally insults him openly. Wilding takes advantage of the situation to force Ruth, who hates him, to marry him in order to save her brother. In espousing Monmouth's cause, Wilding is imperiled again and again. Ruth finally comes to learn that she loves him and to see her cowardly brother in his true light.

"Its action is rapid, its style is spirited, its plot is convincing, and every admirer of the incomparable Sabatini will find in it several hours filled with undiluted pleasure." E. F. E.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 26 '24 80w
Cleveland p35 My '24

"It is vivid, glorious romance. The reader knows with certainty from first to last that the characters are but Sabatini stock, that the unwilling bride will be willing enough before the tale is done; but the knowledge can't spoil the fun." R. B. H.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 18 '24 400w

"In content and construction the tale is a conventional historical romance, but it is told with so much spirit, and worked out with so much skill, that it becomes exceptionally entertaining."
+ Int Bk R p467 My '24 150w

"'Mistress Wilding' for all its profusion of color and action and despite its excellent prose, is stupid in the sphere of character. The characters are all ready-made stock figures. The author's facility in ticketing these dummies could surely have been put to better use than in reintroducing the old familiar faces of the melodrama."
— + Lit R p739 My 10 '24 500w

"Young people who have not yet reached the age of sophistication will like it, and so will those who have passed that age. The others will pass it by with an air of superiority, not seeing that it takes as much mastery to weave a stirring tale that rings true as it does to write 300 pages of soul searchings."
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 30 '24 950w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 140w

"This story is not on so ambitious a scale as 'Scaramouche,' showing less experience in handling large scenes and dramatic incidents. But it is a vivid picture of the time, the characters are not inert, and the action moves swiftly from the opening scene."
+ Springf'd Republican p9a My 4 '24 280w
Wis Lib Bul 20:99 Ap '24

SABATINI, RAFAEL. Saint Martin's summer. [new ed] 331p $2 Houghton
24-25419

M. Martin Marie Rigobert de Garnache was in a difficult position. He had been sent by the queen-regent to escort to Paris Mlle Valérie de La Vauvraye who had appealed to the queen for aid. Valérie was being held a virtual prisoner by the Marquise de Condillac until she should consent to marry her son. Now M. de Garnache knew very little of women and cared about them less. But he was a keen-witted man and a good swordsman and against all odds he determined to carry out his orders. And by the time M. de Garnache was ready to set out for Paris he had changed his mind on the subject of women.

Booklist 21:154 Ja '25
Boston Transcript p5 D 10 '24 600w

"The Sabatini formula is by now familiar. In 'Saint Martin's Summer' it shines with a bright conventional radiance." A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p857 N '24 350w

"If you would go back in French history and spend a few days in a land of color, danger, action and romance, take 'Saint Martin's Summer' for your guide. Mr. Sabatini will lead you to a land of thrilling romance in a style that is peculiarly and picturesquely fit to the setting." M. L.
+ Lit R p9 N 1 '24 330w

"While the details of the plot, the motivation of the action, might not always bear close analysis, yet the author carries one along with such a swift and uninterrupted flow of narration that one scarcely pauses to inquire whether the subject-matter be plausible; once having plunged into the central current of the story one is almost certain to follow it with interest until the end; and since this is doubtless all that the author intended it would be ungenerous to harp upon the minor defects of the book as opposed to its one outstanding merit."
+ — N Y Times p22 O 26 '24 500w
N Y World p9e N 16 '24 70w

"The story is slenderly constructed, but it does not lack thrill."
+ — Outlook 138:340 O 29 '24 50w

SABIN, EDWIN LEGRAND. City of the sun. 316p $2 Jacobs
24-3401

When Robert McClung of Kentucky sets out to help a beautiful Spanish girl, Doña Felisa, he finds adventure in plenty. The unscrupulous guardian of Felisa takes her upon a journey, the destination of which is unknown to her. In truth, however, it is to the City of the Sun, a stronghold of the Indians. There every year a maiden is sacrificed at the Sacred lake of gold in which is a mammoth snake. This year the maiden is to be Felisa since the guardian needs gold with which to gamble. Robert learns the dreadful truth and with a Yankee cobbler, Tom Dougherty, follows after her. They enter that mysterious desert of old Mexico where many things happen, and finally enter the City of the Sun. They kill the snake and rescue the maiden with amazing celerity.

Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '24 900w

"The chief value of the story is that it need not be taken seriously. The characters are vividly drawn. The rogues, and they are many, are picturesque in their villainy, the hero is resourceful and has skillful allies, and the heroine is a beautiful damsel in distress. What more could one ask to while away an evening's time?" Elizabeth Wyman
+ N Y Tribune p24 My 11 '24 900w

SACHS, MRS EMANIE N. Talk. 286p $2 Harper
24-18674

It was the fate of Delia Morehouse to be all her days the victim of talk. When she was left an orphan thirty years ago in a little Kentucky town, circumstances forced her to become an advanced woman, since her only inheritance was a tiny bookstore which she decided to run herself. She loved it and made a success of it, but the town buzzed about the unwomanliness of keeping a shop. When her lover's pleadings were added to the town's criticism her resistance broke down and she gave up her shop. She had a genius for bookselling but was helpless as a housekeeper. Then the town talked about her inefficiency, while her husband's digestion revolted and the ardor of his love cooled. And in the end, when she had made a mess of her life and was scorned by her husband and flapper daughter, the town continued to talk. She would better have stuck to her shop, they said.

Booklist 21:70 N '24

"'Talk' is a notable début. Its clarity, its pungency, and Emanie Sachs's gift of compression set it depart." Sidney Williams
+ Bookm 60:348 N '24 150w

SACHS, EMANIE N.—Continued

"The author is gifted with a lively invention and a shrewd insight into the human heart. Real people walk through this book, and talk a real language, sometimes a little too cleverly." Silas Bent

+ Int Bk R p819 O '24 450w

"Both in the period opening and the modern conclusion the illusion is perfect; we live through a whole generation with the representative group of small-town people whose lives are scrambled so drably by their own limitations. The book rings with essential truth throughout; more than that, the telling is masterly. It is an astonishingly successful first novel; if the author has something still to say on other themes, she will achieve no mean rank among our contemporary novelists." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p931 Ag 2 '24 400w

"Emanie Sachs's novel is a remarkably acute and amusing study of the real relation of public opinion to the individual. In a book distinguished by deft characterization, a broad sense of social atmosphere and a good deal of sound feminine wisdom, she shows most public opinion to be a background for the individual, a diversion, not meant to be taken seriously, but when literally accepted a monster that unknowingly crushes the object of its wayward attention." J: Carter

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 10 '24 1300w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p24 Ag 10 '24 750w

"A book as accurate as 'Main Street' in its portraiture, and even more sweeping in its hopeless tragedy." F. V. Roman

N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 180w

"Mrs Sachs has made her book human and alive. There are no entangling skeins of propaganda to retard the action, there is none of the senseless sound and fury that so often surrounds these studies of what is vaguely known as 'woman's sphere.' The grace of humor saved Mrs Sachs, but not her heroine." Alison Smith

+ N Y World p7e S 14 '24 380w

"Seldom is a first novel so well balanced and at the same time so deft. Offhand it is difficult to recall a better picture of small-town life in America—particularly male life. So, at least, the book strikes a male writer of reviews."

+ Outlook 138:560 D 3 '24 450w

"It is an extremely good book, not merely in its subtle and ironical characterization, although that is its chief claim to goodness, but in the development of the fable." W: L. Phelps

+ Sat R of Lit 1:44 Ag 16 '24 800w

"The story is delicately and agreeably sketched, with a good understanding of characters."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 31 '24 350w

Wis Lib Bul 20:214 O '24

SACKVILLE-WEST, VICTORIA MARY (MRS HAROLD GEORGE NICOLSON). The heir: a love story and other tales. 250p $2 Doran [23-16324]

There are five tales in the book, but the first and title-story fills nearly half the volume. In calling it a love story, the author gives that term a new and delicate meaning, for it is not the love of a man for a woman but of a man for a beautiful old house that is here told. Other stories; The Christmas party; Patience; Her son; The parrot.

Booklist 20:266 Ap '24

"Miss Sackville-West is an artist throughout. Her touch is deft and quiet. Her creative power is unusual. Even the slightest of these stories is instinct with life. 'Patience' is exquisitely done, as is also 'Her Son.' She is at her best when she is touching the deepest wells of emotions, but she does it quietly, skillfully with a power which is rare." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 16 '24 1050w

Cleveland p44 Je '24

"A collection of stories in which theme and treatment are mutually exacting; they have been handled with delicacy and artistic indirection. People are sketched with swift and sympathetic strokes; there is not a blurred or wavering line from cover to cover. In conception and technique, these tales stand at a refreshing distance from the market-place of popular fiction."

+ Dial 76:288 Mr '24 50w

Reviewed by T. H. Lewis

Int Bk R p400 Ap '24 550w

Lit R p599 Mr 15 '24 200w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko

Nation 119:241 S 3 '24 50w

"Of the other stories [beside the first] only one, Her son, emerges from the strained mediocrity which seems to us the result of the author's struggle against her inheritance for a 'dramatic realism' wholly unnatural to her. When, instead of resisting her tradition, she consents to become its devout interpreter she is at once more charming and more convincing." D. B. W.

+ — New Repub 38:159 Ap 2 '24 160w

"It is an unusual volume, thoughtful, finely written, showing deep feeling, a love of beauty, an exquisite perception of the less easily defined values which lie beneath the outward, self-evident appearances and a rare ability to put this perception into words."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 27 '24 1100w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Ja 27 '24 180w

ST JOHN-LOE, GLADYS. Beggar's banquet. 290p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d Duckworth] 24-4261

Ten years of office drudgery have left Shirley Hodson bereft of all the zest of living and resigned to spinsterhood. Her mother's death leaves her free, with a thousand pounds in her pocket. She decides to take a year's holiday—a beggar's banquet where she will be able to feast on the things she has dreamed about. Her first sojourn takes her to Kent in summer-time, where she meets Brodie Maitland. Their congenial tastes lead to close friendship, which ripens into love. But Maitland's ill-fated marriage keeps them apart, so Shirley leaves for her travel tour. As she passes thru Italy, Switzerland, and Egypt she feels she has lost the power of enjoying to the full the beauty of far places. Then, hearing of the production of Brodie's play, she hastens back to England, and to him who is soon to be free to marry her.

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Lit R p643 Ap 5 '24 420w

"It is an entertaining and pleasant story."

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 9 '24 280w

"'Beggar's Banquet' offers no sensations to its readers. It is a tale quietly but sympathetically told. We commend it to all whose fancy in the springtime turns seekingly to the fiction of unrestrained romance." E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 260w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 130w

SAINTSBURY, GEORGE EDWARD BATEMAN. Collected essays and papers, 1875-1920. 3v 433;358;383p $12.50 Dutton

824 English literature—History and criticism

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"His critical range is wider than that of any English book taster past or present. His massive learning and manysided sensibility compel our veneration hardly less than the intellectual vigor of appreciation which has constantly urged him to draw out the soul and truth from book after book throughout the whole territory of half a dozen literatures, ancient and modern." H: A. Lappin

+ Bookm 59:217 Ap '24 720w

"Saintsbury is the last of the great critics. No living man who writes English can equal him." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 119:130 Ap '24 750w

Outlook 136:194 Ja 30 '24 170w

"Whatever his limitations of sympathy, he stands forth as a champion of excellence. He writes with a certain raciness and savor that are seldom obscured even by frequent cumbersomeness of language, and that make it possible to skim over the 1100 pages of these three volumes and find shrewd, piquant and substantial judgment on every page on which one chooses to alight."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 27 '24 1100w

SAINTSBURY, GEORGE EDWARD BATEMAN. ² Last scrap book. 344p $3 (7s 6d) Macmillan

824

Like Mr Saintsbury's previous scrap books this is a collection of odds and ends of reflection and opinion on a wide variety of subjects, ranging from politics to fish and from wine to grasshoppers. There are nearly fifty of these jottings, including three essays on conservatism, several critical papers, some good stories, a recipe for "sweet butter" and a few vigorous pages on the "grinning she" by which he means the fashion for showing the teeth in photographs.

"Mr. Saintsbury's scraps, as all good readers know, are full of pith and point. He is the most erudite and various reader of today, a polymath whose long course of teaching and writing has not dulled his gusto. He differs from other admired critics in possessing full enjoyment of life, and no desire to be gloomy about it." Vernon Rendall

+ Sat R 138:632 D 20 '24 580w

"Admitting, as the genial author himself avers, that the indescribable complex called personal 'taste' is at the bottom of all criticism, and that some of his unrepentant pronouncements, considered coldly as printed words, may strike some tastes as perverse, the reader who is pained or annoyed might surely reflect that these opinions are not buzzings in the inane by an anonymous abstraction, but the confessions of an eminent and delightfully human man of letters who has lived longer, experienced more and read more than most of us, and, in the course of seventy years, has thought at least as much. It is always wise to listen to Nestor; and it is foolish to accuse him of perversity."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p792 N 27 '24 780w

SALEEBY, CALEB WILLIAMS. Sunlight and health; with an introd. by Sir William M. Bayliss. 198p $2 Putnam

613.19 Hygiene. Heliotherapy 24-3902

The author of this book is known as a strong advocate of the importance of sunlight to health, and has devoted himself to the investigation of its effects on the tissues. He has also worked hard for smoke abatement in cities and the abolition of coal fires in houses. While his book is chiefly devoted to the curative effects of sunlight as they have already been abundantly demonstrated in such diseased conditions as tuberculosis and rickets, he has much to say of the general tonic effects of the sun. In Dr Saleeby's opinion the ideal hygienic combination is cold and sunlight—a condition existing in a high degree in Canada, where the people are among the healthiest in the world.

Booklist 20:253 Ap '24

"Dr. Saleeby's suggestions for the betterment of public health are simple and effective. His book should be stimulating to the lay public, and useful to medical practitioners as indicating the most recent helio-therapeutic methods." A. K. L.

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 23 '24 1350w

"A very free and excellent discussion of the whole theory of the preventive and curative uses of sunlight as far as it is known at present." W. L. Murphy

+ Nation and Ath 34:466 D 22 '23 800w

New Repub 41:124 D 24 '24 620w

"Dr. Saleeby's book should be read by doctors; but it should be read even more by laymen who can apply its lessons to their own lives, to the great advantage of their health and their tempers."

New Statesman 22:578 F 23 '24 780w

"No one who has read any of Dr. Saleeby's previous books will need to be told how freshly forthright, how vigorously unconventional, is his method in his preaching of this gospel. His pungent Scottish humor, always rooted deeply in serious conviction, frequently breaks out in some unusual phrase, or unique viewpoint, or characteristic expression, and his ardent enthusiasm glows brightly through all his presentation of his subject. It is, in short, a strongly individual and energetic personality that animates his pages and makes them always interesting, even aside from the importance of the crusade upon which he has started."

N Y Times p26 F 17 '24 600w

"It is regrettable that so interesting a subject as the relation of sunlight to health should be treated in so diffuse a fashion. If the subject were treated in more direct fashion, with fewer of the author's personal and irrelevant reminiscences and utterly needless repetitions, the subject should receive wider attention, both from the general public and from the medical profession."

— N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 550w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p226 Ap 10 '24 80w

SALIERS, EARL ADOLPHUS, ed. Accountants' handbook. 1675p $7.50 Ronald

657 Accounting 23-17511

"A reference work, assembling much of the working data needed by the accountant. Presents problems and their solutions, and includes many forms, organization charts, etc."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:204 Ap '24

SALISBURY, EDWARD A., and COOPER, MERIAN C. Sea gypsy. 289p il $3.50 Putnam

910.4 Voyages and travels 24-24633

The sea gypsy was a little yacht in which the roving authors and a motley crew wandered up and down the strange waters of the world, thru the South Pacific and Indian ocean, the Red sea and Suez to the Mediterranean. Their gypsying was mostly done on land and among the ports they made were Murderer's island of the Andamans, French Somaliland, Abyssinia, Sumatra, the Solomon islands, Samoa and Jidda on the Red sea. Their last port was Sovona, Italy, and there, while waiting to be made seaworthy, the yacht was burned.

Reviewed by Sidney Greenbie

Bookm 60:501 D '24 240w

Ind 113:325 O 25 '24 50w

N Y Times p20 D 21 '24 950w

Sat R of Lit 1:422 D 27 '24 380w

"Even though the plans of the gypsyers called for the inclusion of a motion picture photographer in the party, 'The Sea Gypsy' is good reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a O 19 '24 250w

SAMMS, A. L. As it happened. 257p $1.75 Hyman-McGee

24-16569

In her ambition to esape small town life Hetty Trent determines to marry money. She mistakenly chooses Julian King, who, tho grandson to the wealthiest woman of the town, is stingy and selfish even while he adores her. In a short while Hetty becomes bored with her home and Julian and leaves him for the musical comedy stage. By virtue of her own beauty and thru the influence of Bob Ballantyne she becomes immensely popular in Chicago. But where once her heart rebelled against a home and all it signified, she is now willing to sacrifice her career to her love for Bob, in doing which she finds happiness, as Julian finds it also with a girl of similar tastes to his.

SAMMS, A. L.—Continued

"If Hetty were a little bit better or a little bit worse, the story would gain infinitely. As it is, however, the author, in his effort to produce a tale of effortless reading has made her a nondescript figure—a pretty, kitteny sort of girl with no power to strive, but power only to scheme."
— Boston Transcript p6 Ag 13 '24 400w

"Occasional lapses from the best usages of his Majesty's favorite tongue do not materially spoil Mr. Samm's story for you. In the hammock one can be mercifully uncritical." W. L. O.
— + Lit R p937 Ag 2 '24 180w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 31 '24 90w

SAMPSON, EMMA (SPEED) (NELL SPEED, pseud.). Masquerading Mary. 297p $1.75 Reilly & Lee 24-22008

"Mrs Sampson has added to her well trained company of serio-comic negroes a wandering English lady of title who has fled from her husband because of a misunderstanding and who masquerades as a nursery governess in Richmond."—Sat R of Lit

"If the literary appetite be for something light, but not vapid, something easily digested, but with a flavor all its own, the fare set forth in 'Masquerading Mary' will be found pleasantly satisfying." L. LeB. W.
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 12 '24 600w

"It is good comedy material, neatly handled. The chief values, however, as in her preceding books, lie in the presentation of negro character, especially in the case of the women. They are done very well indeed: without any caricaturing and with a friendly understanding of their humors and their amiabilities but without any undue sentimentalizing over them. It is a pleasantly amusing tale."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:233 O 25 '24 120w

SAMUEL, ARTHUR MICHAEL. Mancroft essays. 287p $3 Harcourt
824

"In this volume is concentrated the pleasure given readers of the London Saturday Review, 1917-1921, where the essays were from time to time first published. The scope of their survey is reminiscent of that classic conversation relative to 'shoes and ships and sealing-wax, and cabbages and kings.' Only the range of Mr. Samuel's desultory discussion touches, among other equally alluring subjects, owls and wigs and walking-sticks, and weathercocks and—if not kings by birth, men as 'royal' by virtue of their genius. Of the last class are the subjects of those historical essays of which are 'Recollections Concerning John Flaxman, R. A.,' 'Schola Regia Novicensis,' 'The Soane Museum,' 'Roubiliac,' 'Historical Bastards,' 'Socinus,' 'The Author of the American Constitution,' 'A Great Elizabethan,' 'Admiral Vernon,' 'Sir Kenelm Digby,' and others equally brimmed with literary, as well as historical and archæological treasure."—Boston Transcript

"Comparisons may be—usually are—ungrateful. But sometimes they are inevitable. This is one of the times. Both in style and scope the essays are delightfully reminiscent of those of Lamb." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 5 '24 780w
Dial 76:373 Ap '24 70w

"His essays on almost everything under the sun have a tang and savor."
+ Lit R p793 My 31 '24 100w

"Delicate detail impinges on delicate detail, and together with the archaic commonplaces of past times the carefully fashioned prose combines, to suggest just that degree of whimsical remembrance that is needed for the success of the essay. Together with the lighter aspects of these essays goes a clearly defined scholarship, the results of a deal of research and intimate living with the past splendors of Norwich in particular and England in general."
+ N Y Times p11 Ap 20 '24 900w

SAMUEL, MAURICE. You gentiles. 221p $2 Harcourt
296 Jews 24-20067

Written by a Jew, the evidently sincere intent of this book is to arrive at the fundamental difference between the Jew and the gentile. It is the author's belief that this difference lies in their totally opposed conceptions of life, a difference not merely in dogma and philosophy but in the essential quality of their mental and spiritual being. The essence of this difference is that the Jew is serious and the gentile is not. The Jew's relation to God is a primal instinct and determines all his acts. Having stated his thesis, the author goes on to show how this characteristic difference governs the relations of Jew and gentile and to the universe at large. It is his belief that the chasm between the two cannot be bridged.

Booklist 21:92 D '24

"Abounds in generalizations which, though brilliantly stated and arresting in their aggressiveness, still remain sweeping assertions. Mr. Samuel's book is the result of much thought and sincere conviction, but it offers no solution to the vexing problem." E. E. F.
+ — Bookm 60:adv D '24 150w

"As the writer of a serious work, Mr. Samuel would be entitled to serious consideration, if he did not adopt by turns throughout its pages the plaintive wail of the underdog and the boastful unconvincing manner of the social destructionist. His effort, if intended as a foil for anti-Semitism, is weak, and if written for any other purpose is unworthy of consideration as an accurate representation of fact." R. D. G.
— Boston Transcript p3 Ag 30 '24 300w

"Something permanent is contributed in this book. It is too soon, perhaps, to estimate how much. But to this reviewer in his fresh, naïf enthusiasm, 'You Gentiles' appeals as the most original contribution, the most interesting and most arresting document which has appeared of late." D. R.
+ Ind 113:261 O 11 '24 1350w

"Whether the reader agrees or disagrees with the author's concepts, he must confess that Mr. Samuel presents the case in question sincerely, graphically and with compelling force. 'You Gentiles' is 'a voice crying in the wilderness "Prepare ye the way,"' and the very despair in its utterance to me is the promise of a dawn. By voicing his despair Mr. Samuel has unknowingly presented his natural gifts to the world in the form of a challenge to consider an age-old problem—the problem of living in peace by means of love. The writer by his sincerity has given his challenge force and robed it in power, quickening it with the breath of life at the cost of self and public opinion." Elsie Alexander
+ Lit R p990 Ag 23 '24 420w

"In the hands of an intelligent Gentile Mr. Samuel's book will provoke nothing but a smile at the author's naive invasion of the scientist's field. In the hands of a Klansman it will serve to underscore the second word of that most un-American motto—White, Gentile, and Protestant. A scientifically sound and truthful study which incidentally provokes anti-Semitism may be defended on the grounds that truth is the highest goal, and, moreover, that in the long run only truth can nail the anti-Semitic lies. But a book that meets anti-Semitism with new false statements, conducive to more anti-Semitism, sins doubly." Bertha Wallerstein
Nation 120:48 Ja 14 '25 750w

"The most striking quality of Mr. Samuel's book is its exceptional frankness. He is full of earnest conviction, and he obeys its injunctions, wheresoever they lead him. It may be that his very earnestness sometimes leads him astray, and that his generalizations, which are arrived at by a really acute faculty of discernment, are sometimes too broad, but his book nevertheless contains much that is soundly reasoned and much that is provocative of thought." J. D. Adams

+ — N Y Times p21 S 7 '24 950w

Reviewed by L. S. Gannett
N Y Tribune p3 S 28 '24 1400w

"Mr. Samuel's book is remarkable for its courage, sincerity and honesty. Worth being read and pondered upon by Jews and Gentiles alike." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p8e S 7 '24 680w

Reviewed by Garry Baldwin
Sat R of Lit 1:124 S 20 '24 820w

"This is a good book even when the Gentile believes it wrong. It is not polite, but racial differences never are. Every page challenges to discussion with the hope of rebuttal. There are blind spots, but they arise from fervor, not from indolence; and the author's vigor sweeps fresh air into an arena long filled with dust and chaff from straw men belabored with journalistic slap-sticks." L. W.
+ — Survey 53:360 D 15 '24 800w

SANBORN, GERTRUDE. Veiled aristocrats. 241p $1.50 Associated publishers
24-1182

Rod Roscoe came of poor and mediocre parents; he himself was of a higher mental type. When he made friends with Carr McClellan, a mulatto sculptor of fine education and ideals, his mother forbade him to bring Carr to the house. They continued friends, however, and when Carr returned to Chicago Rod followed him. Working as a painter and living with some of Carr's friends who were almost white in color and decidedly so as to soul, Rod began to be really happy. By accident Rod discovered that he could dance and decided to take up that profession and in a few years was known the world over. Early in his career Rod fell in love with Natalie Cartwright, daughter of a famous engineer. Altho Natalie did not love Rod she remained his friend and became interested in his negro friends. When she met Carr McClellen it was a case of love at first sight, and when it was discovered that Natalie too had colored blood, they were married.

"It is to be hoped that this book will be read by a larger audience than that which is composed of supporters of the negro, because there is a finely-written story here and an excellent presentation of a vital problem." W. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 2 '24 650w

"The fault to be found with Miss Sanborn's novel is artistic, not sociologic. One cannot help but note throughout the icy narrative the tactics of the explorer, the passion to iterate and reiterate." E. D. Walrond
— New Repub 39:53 Je 4 '24 450w

SANDY, ISABELLE. Andorra; tr. from the French by Mathilde Monnier and Florence Donnell White. 346p il $2 Houghton
24-12282

"'Andorra' presents a study of life in the heart of the Pyrennees Mountains. The Xiriballs are a picturesque family. Tragedy comes to them with the mysterious murder of Cisquo, Joan's eldest son and heir to his land. This crime leaves the child, Angelo, as logical successor to his father, for the second son, Nyerro, a wall-eyed weakling of twenty-five who can scarcely scrawl his name, would not grace the role of master. Nyerro, however, has other plans. Having killed Cisquo, he plots a similar fate for Angelo in order to assure the inheritance. Thwarted, he betrays himself as a murderer first to the girl Concepcion, Cisquo's betrothed, then to his father, Joan, who sends him to his doom."—Lit R

Booklist 21:28 O '24

Reviewed by Byron Dexter
Int Bk R p740 S '24 250w

"The book is well constructed and beautifully written with a directness and warmth which well reflect the characters of the simple peasants with which it is concerned."
+ Lit R p876 Jl 5 '24 250w

"Mlle. Sandy has written a beautiful book, a worthy addition to that line of French fiction from Colomba to Maria Chapdelaine, in which the passion of romance is subdued to classic dignity and grace, and in which nature forms a noble and enduring background to the heroic quality of mankind." R. M. L.
+ New Repub 39:336 Ag 13 '24 200w

"It is a new (geographical) scene that Isabella Sandy offers in 'Andorra.' Its theme is, as the publishers suggest, 'earth-old.' But to this earth-old theme of 'the eternal tragedy of the peasant, the struggle for the soil, brother against brother,' the author adds only a fresh background. The theme therefore emerges just as she found it, Mme. Sandy having merely applied a piece of thin glass to its new locale. The 'view' through the spotless, almost too impersonal, glass is not bad."
N Y Times p12 Je 15 '24 900w

"It is a powerful and primitive tragedy of a group of people under an ancestral doom, the slaves of custom bound by the fibres of their being to the rockbed of their native soil." Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p25 Je 22 '24 300w

"The novel is well balanced and bold, strengthened with chapters of weird, brutal fatality that raise it above mere picturization." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 120w

"The tang or accent is fresh, and enables the story-teller to give a new force to the ancient tale of greed and mother love, passion and pride, cruelty and devotion, and stoic endurance. A little place, a little people, and in their trivial history summed up the story of all mankind."
+ Outlook 138:62 S 10 '24 200w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 400w
Wis Lib Bul 20:214 O '24

SAPPER, pseud. See McNeile, C.

SARAWAK, SYLVIA (BRETT) BROOKE, ranee of. Toys. 308p il $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Murray]

"This is described by the publishers as 'a story of East and West and of strong psychological interest.' The title is of course figurative, for the author looks upon the world as a toy-shop and the people in it as toys. The idea is carried out by treating the different 'toys' in separate tales, with a prologue which indicates the general plan and purpose. The author has strongly in mind the wish that her readers would in the world of imagination and human nature lay aside prejudice of race or color, as those, she says, are but the dresses of the toys."—Outlook

"This story is transfused with the fatalisms of the Far East. It is exotic—unconvincing."
— Boston Transcript p4 Ja 16 '24 400w
Outlook 136:154 Ja 23 '24 150w

"The novel fails to interest us."
— Springf'd Republican p7a F 10 '24 150w

SARG, TONY. Tony Sarg's book for children from six to sixty. 144p il $3.75 Greenberg, inc., 15 E. 40th st., N.Y.
24-25187

"The book begins with the adventures of Mary and her dog Freckles in Nantucket. The quaint old houses, with their 'Widow's Walks,'

SARG, TONY—Continued
the tall church steeple, the busy wharf, the cobbled streets, all are pictured delightfully. Mary and Freckles bring a great deal of life to the old town, and the pictures of their doings are most amusing. The latter half of the book is called 'Little Moments in the Lives of Great Men,' and consists of a series of comic sketches of Sir Walter Raleigh, Columbus, Napoleon, Demosthenes, and Sir Isaac Newton."—Outlook

"No writer of a children's book has ever been so prodigal in an effort to entertain mind and eye together. Mr. Sarg has scattered hundreds of pictures through the text. He cannot mention a whale or a fly without drawing it, and always with animation. But Mr. Sarg's book must be seen, not read about. Its comic quality cannot be detached from the page."
+ N Y Times p5 N 9 '24 880w

" 'Tony Sarg's Book for Children' looks as though its author-artist had had an immensely good time doing it. From the miniature theater on the cover, which is worked by moving a series of cartoons on the inside, to the charming sketch at the end, in which the author takes leave of the children, the book has an air of fun that will capture every child who sees it." L. St J: Power
+ Outlook 138:412 N 12 '24 330w
Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 600w

SARGENT, PORTER EDWARD. Handbook of
2 summer camps. (Sargent's handbooks) 671p il
$5 Porter Sargent, 14 Beacon st., Boston

796 Camps—Directories

A valuable reference book intended primarily to be a guide and counselor to parents in the selection of summer camps for boys and girls. Introductory chapters give a general view of the beginnings and development of the summer camp movement and the chief ends and activities of camps. The main section of the book is given to a list of summer camps geographically arranged and critically described. This is followed by classified directories of firms, agencies and periodicals serving summer camps, a list of camp directors with their winter addresses and a list of camps to fill special needs. There are also maps and an index.

Booklist 21:141 Ja '25

"The first edition of this projected 'annual survey' constitutes a reference work of helpfulness to parents and of almost inestimable value to newspapers, Boy Scout directors, Y.M.C.A. and similar executives, school teachers, etc. The material has been amassed over a period of nine years and the book is a model of condensation and accessible compilation." W. R. M.
+ Lit R p874 Jl 5 '24 130w

SARGENT, WALTER. Enjoyment and use of color. 274p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Scribner

752 Color 23-16280

"This volume is arranged primarily as a text-book in color for art departments of secondary schools and colleges, but also as a book for general reading. In it I have endeavored to present a definite and practical method of approach to the study and appreciation of color, which will be helpful to that large class of people who do not expect to be artists but who would like to know more about color and its use, and to increase their own enjoyment of color in nature and in art."—Preface

"Amid its many useful suggestions and experiments there is something of interest for everyone from the amateur decorator to the lover of landscape. Its appeal, however, is narrowed by the fact that it is cut and dried on the lines of a formal textbook." L. M.
+ — New Repub 38:106 Mr 19 '24 60w

"As a text-book it will be a useful introduction to the handling of colour, but even so it might have been half its length without missing a single point."
— + New Statesman 23:74 Ap 26 '24 270w

"It has much value for anyone and should be in the library of everyone interested in color, either in Nature or in art."
+ School Arts M 23:640 Je '24 110w
Wis Lib Bul 20:93 Ap '24

SATOMI, KISHIO. Japanese civilization. (Trubner's oriental ser.) 238p $4.50 Dutton [10s 6d K. Paul]

294 Japan—Civilization. Nichiren. Buddhism 24-7814

Written by a Japanese scholar, the book is an exposition of the doctrine of Nichirenism, a Japanese sect of Buddhism, and its relation to the national principles of Japan and its spiritual civilization. Nichiren, its founder, was born in 1222, seven centuries after Buddhism made its way into Japan. A sketch of Nichiren's life is given and many of his writings are summarized.

Am Pol Sci R 18:650 Ag '24 70w
Boston Transcript p3 My 24 '24 660w

"The book is trite, dogmatic, obscure. But one is tempted to conclude that much of Mr. Satomi's triteness is the triteness we are all conscious of when restricted to a foreign idiom and a limited vocabulary and must, perforce, repeat the familiar: that his dogmatic air derives from his inability to present his reasons adequately, and one does not conclude that his many hopeless obscurities are due to his not knowing what English words convey." F. S. Barr
— + Lit R p12 O 4 '24 380w

"The author describes it as intended mainly for general readers, but it is scarcely to be recommended to the casual student as an easy introduction to Buddhism."
New Statesman 22:430 Ja 19 '24 120w
Outlook 137:517 Jl 30 '24 150w

SATYANANDA ROY. When I was a boy in India. (Children of other lands ser.) 218p $1.25 Lothrop

915.4 Children in India. India—Social life and customs [24-7814]

" 'When I was a boy in India' is one of an unusual series which aims to teach children the similarities and good points of other nations. Interesting chapters deal with home life, school, games, markets, etc., with tradition interwoven. The illustrations are photographs, and the fact that the author, after finishing his studies in India, was sent to the United States for further work forms a pleasant connecting link."—N Y World

"He tells us a simple story of a boyhood filled with interesting experiences, and in this survey there is much valuable information of food and dress, town and country, marriage customs, weddings, temples, home customs, festivals, etc."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 28 '24 140w

" 'When I Was a Boy in India,' by Satyananda Roy is filled with information of a kind that makes pleasing reading. It has value, too, because the author's information has grown up with him, so he has not had to record mere hasty impressions." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p617 Jl '24 70w
N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 70w

"Satyananda Roy is a native Hindu of high caste and a personal friend of Rabindranath Tagore. The facts are therefore true, and the spirit fine." G. M. Goldman
+ N Y World p7e My 25 '24 140w
Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 20w
Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 27 '24 130w
Wis Lib Bul 20:170 Jl '24

SAUNDERS, KENNETH JAMES. Epochs in Buddhist history. 243p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press [16s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

294 Buddhism 24-4908

The Haskell lectures for 1921 form a history of Buddhism in India, Ceylon, Burma, Siam, China, Korea, Japan, Nepal and Tibet. The book is an attempt to describe the process by which the stream of Buddhism which had its source in the complex system of Brahmanism spread out over the eastern world.

"The author expresses a sincere desire to help Christian and Buddhist scholars toward a friendly and frank discussion, and his scholarly and helpfully illustrated book is evidence that he has done so. The book contains much that is instructive and beautiful. Hereafter all who wish to be well informed on Buddhism will surely consult this author who has given the best years of his life to the study of the subject."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 30 '24 240w

"For the layman, untroubled by too much knowledge of Buddha lore and Buddhist lands, it will be a valuable introduction to one of the most important religions in the modern world." A. E. Haydon

+ — Int J Ethics 35:98 O '24 150w

"The author is a Christian with eye and heart open to see and praise all that appears admirable in the religion of the Buddha."

+ J Religion 4:329 My '24 40w

"It is a delightful narrative and the uninitiated reader, happily untroubled by the tormenting problems which beset the specialist, will be free to yield to the lure of the author and gain that most desirable thing, an admiration for the achievements of the most comprehensive and most accommodating religion of human history." A. E. Haydon

+ — J Religion 4:543 S '24 620w

"His book abounds in useful references, and though it is not original in thought or scholarship, it gives a good popular account of certain landmarks in Buddhist history."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Je 26 '24 260w

SAUNDERSON, HENRY HALLAM. Power of an endless life. 114p $1.25 Century

218 Immortality. Christian life 24-3496

The power which the conviction of immortality has to dignify and give meaning to life is the central theme of the book.

"It is an effective call to faith. The book is to be commended and recommended." E. E. F.

+ Bookm 59:adv My '24 70w

Reviewed by J. F. Newton

Int Bk R p656 Ag '24 260w

N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 70w

SAUNDERSON, H: H., ed. See Bible. Whole —Selections

SAURAT, DENIS. Blake and Milton. 74p ^{2} $2 Dial press

B or 92 Blake, William. Milton, John

"This study of two English poets, by the Director of the French Institute of the United Kingdom, betrays many traces of its French origin. It piles up comparisons and contrasts unweariedly, following a precise outline with intellectual fervor. It probes sharply and confidently into temperament and environment, cause and effect. In the end it achieves a surprising catalogue of likenesses and differences between Milton and Blake, including various hitherto unnoticed parallels."—Sat R of Lit

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 3 '25 460w

"Concerned chiefly with their philosophy, this compact, vigilant, poetically brilliant exposition of 'the resemblance in difference between Blake and Milton,' illumines anew, the 'harmonious world' of the one, the 'wild and populous soul' of the other."

+ Dial 78:78 Ja '25 80w

"Dr. Saurat, in what he says of Milton, refers chiefly to Milton's own clear text and to Masson. He is not so fortunate in the sources of his material on Blake. It is unfortunate that he could not have seen Mr. Foster Damon's recent book on Blake. It is equally unfortunate that he had not seen Mr. Geoffrey Keynes's 'Bibliography of Blake,' so much more exhaustive and helpful than Mr. Conner's which he calls 'complete.' It is even more unfortunate that he should have relied apparently implicitly on a biographer of Blake so irascible and naïve as E. J. Ellis."

— Sat R of Lit 1:185 O 11 '24 220w

SAVI, ETHEL WINIFRED. Mock majesty. 338p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam

"Prince Rasul Ismet Khan is hero of this story of modern India. Ten years at one of the great English schools and at Oxford have turned the Prince into a cultivated man of the world with Western tastes and a Western viewpoint. . . On his return from England, Rasul Khan, already engaged to a girl he has never seen, falls in love with a young English flirt on her way to India to be married. She contents herself with playing with his affections. Upon arrival, they part. She breaks her engagement to the man for whom she left England, and accepts a post as governess to a young Indian princess. Of course it turns out that the young princess is Rasul Khan's preordained affinity; of course he comes incognito as chauffeur to see for himself her reputed charms; of course he meets once more the girl that so attracted him on the voyage out; and of course the plot thickens."—N Y Times

"Miss Savi, as her earlier novels also prove, knows well the racial characteristics and the environment of present-day India. All its paradoxical charm, its glamor, its squalor, its inscrutableness, are vividly recreated. Moreover, the novel is written from a point of view, especially grateful, regarding that policy of Non-Cooperation and of Indian Home Rule now being agitated in India. For Miss Savi believes loyally in the beneficence, economic, political and religious, of the British rule in India. For her the sophistries of Gandhi have no appeal. She knows her India too well."

Boston Transcript p8 F 27 '24 250w

Cleveland p42 Je '24

"The writing is careless; no single real character is developed; no novel situation is offered, the whole performance is unconvincing and hurried."

— Int Bk R p481 My '24 250w

"The story itself has its leanings toward the melodramatic, but not to the extent of improbability. It can fairly be said of 'Mock Majesty' that E. W. Savi knows conditions in modern India and has used them as a background for an interesting if not outstanding yarn."

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '24 500w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 300w

SAVILL, MRS AGNES FORBES (BLACKADDER). Music, health and character. 240p $2.50 Stokes

780.1 Music—Psychology [24-12224]

A discussion of music and its effect, from a new angle. It is an account by a physician of her personal musical history and the stages thru which it passed. Beginning with an active dislike and scorn of music, her interest was gradually awakened till step by step she came, in middle life, to a keen enjoyment and appreciation. In the second part of the book she treats the physical and psychic effects of music and its practical value to the individual and the community.

SAVILL, AGNES FORBES—Continued
"A work of vital interest to the average reader and full of suggestions for the physician." K. C. Mead
+ Int Bk R p86 Ja '25 600w
Lit R p939 Ag 2 '24 150w

Reviewed by E: J. Dent
Nation and Ath 34:498 D 29 '23 1000w
St Louis p408 D '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p117 F 28 '24 1500w

SAYCE, ARCHIBALD HENRY. Reminiscences. 485p il $7 (18s) Macmillan
B or 92 23-18963

"Dr A. H. Sayce, sometime professor of Assyriology at Oxford, proves himself a witty raconteur. The book is a running comment upon people and places all round the world. The intrinsic biographical interest is subordinate to the anecdotal. Following the author in his travel takes one into all manner of interesting nooks off the beaten path in and out of Europe."—Springf'd Republican

"Among the many autobiographies of this autobiographic age, this of Dr. Sayce must take a foremost place, both as a story of human accomplishment of vivid interest and appeal and as literature." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 19 '24 1200w

"If Dr. Sayce had schooled himself a little more strictly in the arts of composition, what a book he might have written! He persists in writing a book as if he were jotting down notes or capping stories with dons at the High Table. The effect is disjointed and fragmentary, but the materials are first-rate."
— + Nation and Ath 34:354 D 1 '23 150w

"The contacts made by one with as great a genius for friendship as Dr Sayce's and with opportunities for such extensive travels make this Odyssey of an archeologist of extreme interest to a wide public."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 950w

SAYLER, OLIVER MARTIN. Our American theatre. 399p il $4 Brentano's
792 Theater—United States 23-18293

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Booklist 20:330 Je '24

"In some ways, the most informative book on our present day theatre obtainable. From a definite viewpoint, from a rich store of information gathered in intimate contacts, Mr. Sayler gives a rapid fire survey of the entire field of dramatics. Often and often I disagree with him; so will you. But he is, in the main, fair, and this volume is one which any drama library must include." J. F.
+ — Bookm 58:678 F '24 100w
Cleveland p21 Mr '24

"His book is not only a notable contribution to letters, it is also, and more importantly, a work of such definite and constructive worth as a thesis that no one interested in the theater, or in the theater's influence upon our social relations should neglect an opportunity to make its acquaintance." Elwyn Barron
+ Int Bk R p350 Ap '24 1300w

"Because of his intense admiration for the Russian theatre, and possibly his official connection with the American tour of the Moscow players, his book on the American theatre is woefully deficient in critical balance, in native sympathy, even at times in common sense. It is also disfigured by glaring errors of fact regarding our theatrical history." W. P. Eaton
— Lit R p609 Mr 22 '24 880w

"Mr. Sayler is contemporaneous. Today suffices. And intensive. Just one small field. The persons and ideas within it. All under one little lens. Theatre Guild; Provincetown; Neighborhood Playhouse. Jones; Norman-Bel Geddes; Simonson. Round and round in the squirrel cage. And a diction to match. No verbs. Courte haleine. Snippy. Affected. In the long run rather irritating." H: B. Fuller
— + New Repub 37:235 Ja 23 '24 950w

Reviewed by Maxwell Anderson
N Y World p6e F 10 '24 650w

SAYLER, OLIVER MARTIN, ed. Max Reinhardt and his theatre; tr. from the German by M. S. Gudernatsch and others. 381p il $7 (£2 2s) Brentano's
792 Reinhardt, Max. Theater—Germany 24-3101

"This is a symposium which an American critic, Mr. Sayler, has edited in honour of the great Austrian dramaturge. The contributors are from all over the world, and include authors, critics, dramatists, artists, actors, and musicians. Side by side with intimates and fellow-workers of Reinhardt's are detached and even severe judges. Among names less familiar in England we find those of Maximilian Harden, Hugo von Hofmannsthal, Hermann Bahr, Mr. Kenneth Macgowan, and Mr. E. J. Dent, the well-known music critic. Some, as Mr. Dent, are clear and incisive; others, especially Herr Harden, are fearfully obscure."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Reinhardt cannot be dismissed as a negligible quantity, and it is well that we should know something about him. This book, however, does not much encourage one to pursue the acquaintanceship. It is composed of a series of short essays, most of them rather dithyrambic in character, divided by notes inserted by the editor. There prevails an air of pious rejoicing, not very instructive in itself, and somewhat annoying to enquirers who would be glad of a good critical estimate. Too much praise is apt to lead one into scepticism. It is a relief when for a few moments the chanting stops and we find ourselves listening to the cultivated voice of Mr. E. J. Dent."
— + New Statesman 23:390 Jl 5 '24 800w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock
N Y Times p3 Ja 20 '24 2700w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:375 Jl '24

"A confusing, though handsome, volume. Our bewilderment is due, no doubt, to the number and variety of the contributors."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p301 My 15 '24 1900w

Reviewed by Stark Young
Theatre Arts Mo 8:347 My '24 700w

SAYLOR, HENRY HODGMAN. Tinkering with tools. (Useful knowledge books) 248p il $2 Little 680 Handicraft. Carpentry 24-22285

The one-time editor of Country Life and House and Garden writes this practical book for the man who tinkers about the house. He describes in detail the home workshop, tools and their care, the various operations in woodworking and wood joinery, exterior and interior painting, varnishing and enameling, plumbing, electric wiring, masonry, and odd jobs. Fully illustrated with numerous diagrams in the text.

"Clear, simple, dignified and agreeable in style."
+ J Home Econ 16:658 N '24 220w
Lit R p10 S 13 '24 180w
St Louis p407 D '24

"A book of value to have in the household."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 7 '24 280w

SCARBOROUGH, HAROLD E. Immortals. 280p $2 Appleton [7s 6d Unwin]
23-7950

A lightly told tale of immortal life, with the wandering Jew moving thru the pages as a dreadful warning to those who live beyond the allotted three score and ten. Dr Brusilov, a Russian scientist, discovers a serum which will prevent old age. So successful does it become that undertakers, insurance men and patent medicine sellers combine to kidnap the discoverer. However, lured by the desire for immortality they release their prisoner, who encounters once more the wandering Jew. The old Jew shows so clearly the weariness of living that Dr Brusilov, defeated, succumbs to a paralytic stroke. In the meantime his daughter and the young doctor who assists him have been indulging in a romance. They prefer to die in the glory of their living, so with complete abandon they destroy all the serum that makes humans immortals.

"If Mr. Scarborough had been able to write a story which was the equal in interest to the ideas which his characters discuss, he would have given us an exceedingly fascinating tale. Unfortunately as a story, 'The Immortals' is not as good as it should be. He has been so entirely absorbed in the ideas which were suggested by Brusilov's discovery and by what the discovery would mean that everything in the book is subordinated to his theories." D. L. M.

— + Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '24 800w

"Unfortunately the theme has been developed along unconvincing lines. The characters are more or less puppets, marionettes moved at will by the author's whims, not necessarily by their own volition."

— + Lit R p778 My 24 '24 170w

N Y Times p19 My 18 '24 500w

"An amusing story."

+ Spec 132:430 Mr 15 '24 30w

"There is some clever writing in it. But it lacks any real live drama, and the handling of the situations is not such as to make the career of Brusilov (who dies at the end from a stroke of paralysis) at all engrossing."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p113 F 21 '24 140w

SCARBOROUGH, HAROLD E. Stephen the well-beloved. 324p $2 Appleton [6s Unwin]

Stephen Palmer, telegraph editor of a Philadelphia newspaper, is summoned to England to become Viscount Beauwitte. His grandfather, the old viscount, had died and Stephen was apparently the next in line. Three weeks later he learns that an uncle has appeared and that he, Stephen, is no longer a viscount. So Stephen goes to the continent to learn more of a charming princess he had met on shipboard. In the little country of Versailia great adventures befall him and when he comes back to reclaim once more his estates he does not come alone.

Cleveland p92 D '24

"The book has a wit of its own, and will be worth attention not only as an exposé of European post-war conditions but as a reductio ad absurdum of a vogue that flourished in our literature a decade or more ago." H. A. J., jr.

+ Lit R p9 N 1 '24 220w

"One never finds the adventures of Stephen convincing, nor does the author intend that one should. The book is something of a burlesque, a burlesque that is little more than the mantle of much pointed political and economic comment."

+ N Y Times p25 S 21 '24 550w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p8e O 5 '24 150w

SCHARTEN-ANTINK, E., and SCHARTEN-ANTINK, M. House full of people; [tr. from the Dutch by J. Menzies Wilson]. 349p $2.50 Small [7s 6d J. Cape]

24-4265

"We can hardly call 'A House Full of People' a novel. American novelists would balk at the thought of devoting 350 pages to the occurrences of a city apartment that housed only thirteen small families, and then limiting their observations to one year. If the major part of the interest centres in Aristide the young artist who lives on the top floor with Jozette, it is well to be tolerant: such may happen in the best of well regulated houses. The other characters, from the senator and the physician down to Carpentier, Monsieur and Madame, the vigilant concièrges, all have their tales to tell, their lives to live. The Scharten-Antinks are mimeographers of human nature."—Bookm

---

"It is a rare pleasure to recommend this story of Parisian life not merely because it is a work of marked æsthetic value, but because these are new names on our spiritual horizon." A. W. Porterfield

Bookm 59:234 Ap '24 350w

Boston Transcript p6 F 20 '24 340w

"The Scharten-Antinks are technicians of the first rank. They have produced neither a novel nor a series of stories or sketches. Theirs is a cross-section of life, all too rarely attempted and, more rarely still, attempted with success. Yet this is the sort of essay to which the true historian must turn and the sort of work from which the literary craftsman, whatever his special field, derives the maximum of pleasure and profit." Allen Schoenfield

+ Detroit News Je 5 '24 550w

"There is a fine quality of aliveness in the book, which kindles even the minor figures with reality."

+ Dial 76:466 My '24 90w

"It is a pleasure to recommend it to any one who wants about six hours of unique entertainment and who wants to know how about half of Paris lives."

+ Lit R p676 Ap 12 '24 200w

"The talk is racy and the character drawing swift and competent—altogether a novel of more than ordinary power."

+ Nation 118:539 My 7 '24 50w

"Although it is quite distinctly not the conventional story of Paris, yet, withal, this novel has its artists. The artists here are but one of numerous general types that make up this series of realistic studies. There is much more to these people than the sketchy portrayals of Merrick. A more natural reality is realized that suggests that the book has kinship to that great human comedy of Balzac."

+ N Y Times p24 F 3 '24 850w

N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 650w

"If one cares for people, character and human nature, let him read 'A House Full of People.' Here they are, and a slice out of the true life of Paris. In embryo there are a score of novels in these 350 pages."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 180w

SCHEFFAUER, HERMAN GEORGE. New vision in the German arts. 274p $2 Huebsch [12s 6d Benn]

830.4 Art, German. German literature. Expressionism 24-11214

In these chapters an American who has lived in post-war Germany for several years and watched the ferment of new ideas in art passes in review the chief personalities of the expressionist movement and their experiments in several of the arts, especially in literature. He discusses the dramas of Ernst Toller and Georg Kaiser; the literary remains of Otto Braun, a young genius quenched by the war; the "absolute" poetry of Rudolf Blümner and the lyrics of Johannes Becher; Walter Ruttmann's visible music; the "Tinsmithy" of Arna Holz, a Rabelaisian satire in verse; activistic architecture and Count Keyserling's School of wisdom.

"Here and there hyperbole and the exclamatory style defeat their object of vividness; but on the whole the book is glowingly lucid."

+ — Bookm 60:234 O '24 80w

Dial 78:80 Ja '25 110w

"The effect is often that of special pleading, for Mr. Scheffauer is too positive that expressionistic Germany is the cultural hope of the world and too blind to the romanticist movements in other countries." G. B. Munson

— Lit R p930 Ag 2 '24 650w

SCHEFFAUER, H. G:—Continued

"'The book is really intended for the American public. Certain passages in which Mr. Scheffauer exhorts his countrymen to follow Germany's lead may have too much of the American 'uplift' ring about them for English taste. But for the rest of the book we have nothing but praise.'"

+ — New Statesman 23:504 Ag 2 '24 300w

N Y Times p17 Je 22 '24 1650w

"No one can put aside 'The New Vision in the German Arts' without being made aware of the electric, or the fevered energy with which Germany's poets, dramatists, painters are pouring new wine into old bottles, or rather, destroying the old bottles and creating curious receptacles to contain their concepts. Mr. Scheffauer takes up forty pages to describe the form of one of these new receptacles, Expressionism. Subsequent chapters make us aware of what Expressionism is in its application."

N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 250w

Outlook 137:400 Jl 9 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 4 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p447 Jl 17 '24 1100w

SCHELL, ERWIN HASKELL. Technique of executive control. 133p $1.75 (8s 9d) McGraw

658.3 Executives 24-10224

"The Assistant Professor of Business Management, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, here offers a constructive analysis of executive conduct to take the place of the vague statements of personal magnetism and similar attributes ascribed to those who make a success of executive work."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Management and Adm 8:98 Jl '24 70w

"Inflexible standards are avoided by Mr. Schell, but in his analysis he suggests and stimulates thought, which should appeal to men charged with the responsibility of production. Mr. Schell has done a good and wise thing by the publication of this little volume."

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 31 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p421 Jl 3 '24 30w

SCHELLING, FELIX EMMANUEL. Summer ghosts and winter topics. 182p $2 Lippincott

814

A group of light and familiar essays by the professor of English literature in the University of Pennsylvania. Some of them play about such subjects as the poor relation, bringing home the cow, rubber plants, and moving, while others deal with somewhat more weight and seriousness with the author's special interests —books and reading and the English language.

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 5 '24 950w

"The essays cover a wide range of topics, and, while some hardly rise above mediocrity, we found the book as a whole much more readable than its predecessor, Appraisements and Asperities." F. H. McC.

+ — Cath World 119:571 Jl '24 200w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko

Nation 119:169 Ag 13 '24 50w

"Professor Schelling is amusing quite often; his prose is always neatly put together: it is patent that here is a cultured intellect indulging its lighter side in reveries. But the distinguishing touch that is to be observed all through 'The Mancroft Essays' is missing."

+ — N Y Times p11 Ap 20 '24 320w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 10 '24 350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p581 S 18 '24 100w

Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

SCHERMERHORN, ELIZABETH W. Benjamin Constant; his private life and his contribution to the cause of liberal government in France, 1767-1830. 447p il $5 Houghton [25s Heinmann]

B or 92 Constant, Benjamin [24-14143]

"Benjamin Constant as lover of Mme. de Staël, Benjamin Constant as politician, jurist, apostle of freedom, above all Benjamin Constant as the writer of 'Adolphe'—all those phases have attracted writers. Benjamin Constant as man from birth to death, with all his vagaries, inconsistencies and futilities is a subject before which a stout heart might well quail. And, considering his stature and importance in the early history of the last century, the needful courage has been seldom found. M. Bourget may have read 'Adolphe' a hundred times, but he has repaid his debt with considerable less than a hundred pages. Miss Schermerhorn has the courage. She has not only carried out the task but done so very completely, in the exact and thorough modern style. Her bibliography is long and supplemented by manuscript letters bequeathed by Charles de Constant to the Bibliothèque de Geneve."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Miss Schermerhorn writes intelligently, generally with clearness but also with a certain affectation of style perhaps not her own. But she endeavors to be fair, and she is quick to see a vital point and emphasize it. Her monograph is a real addition to French history and biography." N. H. Dole

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 12 '24 2000w

Reviewed by J. L. Weiner

Lit R p989 Ag 23 '24 450w

"We cannot but note in Miss Schermerhorn's detailed biography an imaginative inability to grasp the spiritual significance of her subject. Her book is chock-full in every page of accurate information, laboriously acquired, but still she has failed to give that long-delayed interpretation of which she spoke. Happily, this has already been supplied by her hero himself." F. B.

+ — Nation and Ath 35:208 My 17 '24 1150w

"What one cannot quite understand is Miss Schermerhorn's apparent failure to see the psychological interest in her subject. She misses the fine shades. Still, the book has merits. It is honest and it does contain an immense amount of information. But the wise man after reading it will turn back to Constant's own writings."

— + New Statesman 23:230 My 31 '24 1200w

"Miss Schermerhorn strives bravely to give a touch of enthusiasm to her account of his public life. The task is a hopeless one. But in her treatment of his personal adventures she has much better success. Indeed the story carries itself." James Luby

+ — N Y Times p7 Jl 6 '24 1500w

"His development is clearly traced, from its deepest sources. At the close of the recital the reader knows him as his intimate friends must have known him, and appreciates him as his co-workers appreciated him; while the weaknesses which exposed him to his enemies are neither concealed nor extenuated." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p21 Je 8 '24 1600w

Outlook 137:613 Ag 20 '24 20w

"Miss Schermerhorn has obviously a complete grasp of her period. She writes clearly and pleasantly. Her dispassionate style is admirable. If she has written for the student of the period 1767-1830, heedless of the human foibles of the general reader, she has been perfectly successful." Val Gielgud

+ — Spec 132:966 Je 14 '24 350w

"The key to Constant's character is not revealed in this book. He was a strange mixture, well worth studying, but requiring for character portrayal a sharper and more imaginative synthesis than is attained in this book."

— Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 750w

"It is the fullest biography in either French or English and the author is evidently a warm admirer of her subject; but it is hard even for her to make of Constant a sympathetic character."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p247 Ap 24 '24 2000w

SCHIEREN, HARRIE VICTOR. The quitter. 285p $2 Small 24-19017

"The story deals with the transference of the love of a wife from her husband to her child, and the effect this has upon him. The quitter is the hero who accepts the change in his wife and her neglect of him with no effort of resistance. He makes no contact with his child and falls back on self pity and love of another woman for comfort. How his problem works out, and how his son grows up must be left to the reader."—Lit R

" 'The Quitter' is a first novel and a promising one. It is well told, although a bit too briefly in spots, and makes one guess at the feelings and reactions of the characters, rather than covering these matters fully. This may not be accidental. One feels that with a more active tale Mr. Schieren will do better."
+ — Lit R p9 S 13 '24 200w

"Mr. Schieren's knowledge of men and women and his understanding of the problems of married life are greater than his present ability to tell a story. When he has learned more of the technique of his art he should be able to produce a much better novel than 'The Quitter.' "
— + N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '24 400w
Sat R of Lit 1:170 O 4 '24 350w

SCHILLER, FERDINAND CANNING SCOTT. Problems of belief. (Library of philosophy and religion) 194p $1.25 Doran [3s 6d Hodder & S.]
121 Belief and doubt 24-17716

This little book takes belief out of the realm of theology and treats it as a problem of psychology and logic and its metaphysical relations. Contents: Introductory; The nature of belief; Implicit beliefs; Debatable beliefs; Half-beliefs; Appendix on the belief in immortality; Dishonest beliefs; Make-believe and fiction; The logic of belief; The will to believe; Belief and action; Belief and survival-value; Truth and survival-value; Index.

"Like all Pragmatists, he cannot help, for all his ingenuity making the subjects with which he deals seem fruitless and arid. All imagination, all intuition is banished, all confidence that we are treading unalterable and ideal regions, the Aryan, the noble, path. And with them goes incentive." Alan Porter
+ — Spec 132:714 My 3 '24 950w

"It is a pity that when he wishes to illustrate his arguments he sometimes inflicts theological, political, and social stings which are apt to antagonize readers and distract them from his main contentions. But those who do not let themselves be troubled by such briars in the path will find these chapters a vigorous and acute criticism of the sentimentalities, illusions and impostures that mimic fruitful and conscientious belief."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p314 My 22 '24 1200w

SCHINKE, NORMA S. Devil Wolf. 345p $2 Small 24-3400

"The story chronicles the adventures in romance of a certain highwayman, a Western Claude Duval, who, masked and cloaked in black, commits the most daring robberies. His identity is a mystery. And when Eugenia Appleton, the young and exceedingly attractive professor of philosophy in Dearborn College, comes to Willowlake, the people of that community are not yet recovered from his last exploit of holding up the cashier of the American Security Bank in broad daylight. In Willowlake, for his health, is one Sir Mortimer Paige, adored by all the women of its most sacrosanct social set. Before Eugenia has arrived, his sister, the redoubtable Jane Wilbur, has decided that Sir Mortimer is to marry her (the Philosopher). So when Eugenia finally appears, already in love with the reprehensible Devil Wolf, and Sir Mortimer falls madly in love with her, or as madly as his apparently indolent temperament will permit, complications rapidly—well, complicate."—Boston Transcript

"For those readers who like melodrama, and are not critical of its methods, the story will doubtless have appeal. But the author would do well to guide her fertile imagination into less lurid paths."
— + Boston Transcript p4 Ap 9 '24 500w

"A tale of mystery and adventure, dished up sentimentally with the livelier condiments missing and soaked in sugar syrup."
— Outlook 136:650 Ap 16 '24 80w

"The story begins like a romantic light opera plot, reads on like the same thing and ends as it would on any stage. An excellent tale to have at hand on a lazy day on a summer veranda." E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 150w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Jl 10 '24 90w

SCHNITZLER, ARTHUR. Dr Graesler; tr. by E. C. Slade. 180p $2.50 Seltzer
23-17113

Dr Graesler was forty-eight when his older sister, who had kept house for him, committed suicide. As he was sailing back to Germany from the health resort where he was official physician, he was stirred by vague memories of a woman's face. Arrived in Germany he fell mildly in love with Sabine, a charming girl, but thru his lack of decision he lost both her love and respect. Overwhelmed with a desire for companionship Dr Graesler went to a distant town, determined to marry a girl, Katharina, with whom he had had an affair. Only a few days after his arrival Katharina died of scarlet fever, contracted from one of the doctor's patients. Then the doctor married a young widow and with her returned to the health resort.

"The story is simple, rapid, economical. It is a novel of fate, for all that happens to Dr Graesler is brought about by his temperament and is inevitable, the man being what he is. It is not one of Schnitzler's major works, but it is one of his most perfect, more convincing than 'Casanova's Homecoming,' which, in spite of beautiful episodes, is not indisputably the real thing. Schnitzler's treatment of love is here, as elsewhere, at once frank and without Schwärmerei. The translation is good." Edwin Muir
+ Freeman 8:396 F 27 '24 1350w

"The story is overwhelmingly sad, the treatment almost cruelly sympathetic, the sequence of events inevitable and clear." Edwin Muir
Nation and Ath 36:334 N 29 '24 350w

"The art catches neither facile gayety nor black despair. Like a Viennese waltz it is more than just a jolly tune, and also like a Viennese waltz it is more melancholy than gay and more haunting than (as they say) tuneful. It is Vienna. That is all you can say exactly of Schnitzler, and all you need to say." Donald Douglas
+ N Y Tribune p22 Ja 20 '24 850w

"A narrative simple, human and in many ways affecting."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 29 '24 200w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p728 N 13 '24 520w

SCHREINER, OLIVE (MRS S. C. CRONWRIGHT-SCHREINER) (RALPH IRON, pseud.). Letters of Olive Schreiner: 1876-1920; ed. by S. C. Cronwright-Schreiner. 410p il $5 Little [21s Unwin]

B or 92

Olive Schreiner's letters are a complement to the recently published biography by her husband. The first half of the book consists almost wholly of her letters to Havelock Ellis from her first meeting with him in 1884 to 1889. They constitute a diary of her life for these years, and are full of revelations of herself and the things she was thinking and doing at the moment.

"Her obsessions and her egotism are perfectly obvious in her letters; but so, too, are her convictions, her ruthless sincerity, and the masterly sanity which so often contrasts on the same page with childish outbursts of unreason. Olive Schreiner was half of a great writer; a diamond marred by a flaw."
Nation and Ath 36:473 D 27 '24 980w

"One finishes the reading of this volume, to which there is no parallel in English, with the feeling that it was undoubtedly right for the actual Olive Schreiner to be revealed, but that the selection of letters should have been more rigorously made and should have been accompanied by an adequate interpretation of her emotional history."
New Statesman 24:398 Ja 10 '25 520w

"This companion volume to 'The Life of Olive Schreiner' does much to reveal what no amount of biographical history and criticism could hope to explain. It is a strangely unpremeditated record of her beliefs, aspirations, and suffering; and in many ways it offers a better understanding of her personality than the biography. Olive Schreiner was not a good letter-writer; so much we must grant without further argument. Yet we are tempted to say that she wrote good letters."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 8 '25 1950w

SCHUYLER, ROBERT LIVINGSTON. Constitution of the United States; an historical survey of its formation. 211p $1.50 Macmillan

342.73 United States—Constitution
23-16154

The five chapters which compose the book contain the substance of lectures delivered at Cambridge university and the London school of economics and political science in 1921. They show the American constitution in its historical setting. Following an account, by way of introduction, of some of the plans and projects for federal union among the American colonies, the chapters deal successively with the Articles of confederation and with the framing, adoption and launching of the constitution.

"The book is satisfying because it is a well-balanced, well written and well-printed story of 'a human achievement which has not grown less significant with the passing of the years.'" B: F. Shambaugh
+ Am Hist R 29:609 Ap '24 350w
Am Pol Sci R 18:211 F '24 80w
Cleveland p54 Jl '24

"Seldom has light been thrown more judiciously and fairly on dark crevices in the hallowed past of a great work of man than in 'The Constitution of the United States.'" B. E. Meyers
+ Detroit News p16 F 3 '24 750w

"An admirable piece of work, concise and interesting in style, broad and scholarly in its view, and sufficiently comprehensive in its treatment. Though it makes no original contribution to the knowledge of the subject, it organizes and unifies for the reader all the results of modern historical research." A. R. N.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ja 27 '24 660w

"In general the volume is an interestingly written, well proportioned, and highly successful attempt to sum up the best that has appeared within recent years about the framing of the Constitution and the work of setting it going. Some of its verdicts, nevertheless, are not altogether beyond cavil." E: S. Corwin
+ — Lit R p4 S 13 '24 310w

"A concise and eminently readable account."
+ Nation 118:538 My 7 '24 50w

Reviewed by T: R. Powell
New Repub 37:262 Ja 30 '24 1050w

"His book presents as human and convincing a picture as has ever been drawn of that significant period."
+ Outlook 136:232 F 6 '24 850w
R of Rs 69:110 Ja '24 30w

"A better-balanced, more penetrating, or more instructive treatise within the chosen limits could hardly be imagined. Not a single contemporary propaganda will be promoted by this book; that is one element of its value."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 18 '23 2000w

"This is the sober judgment of a scholar who proves by every sentence that he writes that he has no other object than interpreting the history of the constitution as research and honest analysis warrant."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 24 '24 780w

SCHWOB, MARCEL. Imaginary lives; tr. by Lorimer Hammond. 256p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

920 Biography 24-22298

Twenty-three brief and unconventional biographies in which are sketched with a few bold strokes lives famous and infamous, but each one illustrating something individual or eccentric. The sketches include Empedocles, supposed god; Erostrat, incendiary; Crates, cynic; Lucretius, poet; Clodia, impure woman; Fra Dolcino, heretic; Ceoco Angiolieri, poet of hate; Katherine the lacemaker, girl of the streets; Gabriel Spencer, actor; Pocahontas, princess; William Phips, treasure hunter; Captain Kidd, pirate.

"This is not a book for those who shrink from plain speaking. It is terrifying, frank, brutal, outspoken. Its stories are of all types of persons, of muckers, degenerates, poets, princes, priests; yet for all its frankness it has a robust quality that, for me at least, seems to make it healthy." J. F.
— + Bookm 60:220 O '24 230w

"'Imaginary Lives' here translated is a unique and delicious book. It is as beautifully written as those 'Imaginary Portraits' of Walter Pater, but is wholly unlike them in its fantasy and simplicity. Schwob is a more playful person; at times he is more than mischievous, he is sadistic." Matthew Josephson
+ Lit R p4 S 6 '24 900w

Reviewed by R. F. Dibble
Nation 119:500 N 5 '24 500w
Outlook 138:382 N 5 '24 90w

"We are told that this book has made a sensation in France. It is workmanlike and not without subtlety. But its material is not commanding. All will admit, however, that it is keen, original, artistic."
— + Springf'd Republican p10 S 16 '24 220w

SCOFIELD, CORA L. Life and reign of Edward the Fourth, king of England and France and lord of Ireland. 2v 595;526p $16 (52s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Edward IV, king of England. Great Britain—History—Lancaster and York

"Dr Cora Scofield has written the most detailed study of the reign of an English king which has appeared for several years. In some ways a tedious and revolting tale of intrigues and battles, the period is full of picturesque figures; Edward himself, the half-witted saint Henry VI, Warwick the Kingmaker, the tragic and courageous termagant Margaret of Anjou, and Elizabeth Woodville. Her book is particularly valuable in its treatment of the relations between the protagonists in England and the protagonists in the duel which was being fought across the Channel between Louis XI and Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, who tried to set up between France and Germany that 'middle Kingdom' whose baleful spectre has haunted the whole of European history." —Nation and Ath

"The reader of Dr. Scofield's book is conscious throughout of the author's careful, long-continued research in the London and Paris archives, bringing to light the details of English and French political life during some three decades and combining them into a straightforward chronicle." R: A. Newhall
+ Am Hist R 29:541 Ap '24 800w

"There can be no doubt that, whatever criticisms may be launched, it will find a welcome for the world of scholars on both sides of the Atlantic and a high and permanent place in the historiography of the fifteenth century."
+ — Lit R p583 Mr 8 '24 400w

"Dr. Scofield has ample learning and the merit of a clear and dignified style. She is content, however, simply to write the annals of her period. She has done that, probably, as well and as efficiently as it could be done." H. J. Laski
+ Nation 118:260 Mr 5 '24 650w

"Although Dr. Scofield's book suffers from restriction in its scope, it must readily be admitted that as a political history after the old style, it is a learned, well-documented, and judicious piece of work."
+ — Nation and Ath 34:356 D 1 '23 300w
Pol Sci Q 39:545 S '24 200w
Sat R 136:577 N 24 '23 200w

"There is a distinct need for a brief, well written account of the romance of Edward IV; there was little need for a rambling narrative, which leaves one confused on all points."
— Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 450w

"This is a long piece of conventional political history, written by an alert, competent, and very laborious American scholar. Any educated man or woman who is fond of detail and has an old-fashioned taste for patient, leisurely reading would be well advised to get hold of it and find a quiet pleasure in the orderly pages."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p34 Ja 17 '24 2000w

SCOTT, ERNEST FINDLAY. Ethical teaching of Jesus. 133p $1.50 Macmillan
232 Jesus Christ—Teaching

Dr Scott believes that Jesus Christ's ethics and his religion are everywhere so bound together that they cannot be separated, but "since today as never before Jesus stands out as the moral leader of humanity," the book sets out to discover what he actually taught about renunciation, social and personal motives, non-resistance, political relations, man's duty to his neighbor, the family, and personal virtues.

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 24 '25 200w
Int J Ethics 34:305 Ap '24 150w

"It is great art to produce a work in which profound critical scholarship, transparent simplicity of style, and worthfulness of material are so thoroughly blended that no one obtrudes itself above the others, yet all are deeply felt. That great art Professor Scott has here again displayed. If anyone is writing more helpfully on New Testament themes, we do not know it. You must have a book on Jesus' ethical teaching; this is the book to have." C. R. Bowen
+ J Religion 4:549 S '24 280w
J Religion 4:659 N '24 50w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:298 Je '24

"To the list of genuinely illuminating books about religious origins, with or without emphasis on the religious problems of today, may be added Prof Ernest F. Scott's work on 'The Ethical Teaching of Jesus.' Prof Scott combines impartial treatment of texts and records with a desire to expound Jesus's ethical inspiration and principles in the light of modern demands. In fulfilling the latter aim he reveals much insight and subtlety and rarely an excess of dialectic."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 8 '24 650w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p548 S 11 '24 600w

SCOTT, JAMES BROWN. Robert Bacon; life and letters; introd. by Elihu Root; foreword by Earl Haig. 459p il $5 Doubleday
B or 92 Bacon, Robert 23-18095

Robert Bacon, 1860-1919, was assistant and later, Secretary of state during Roosevelt's administration, ambassador to France by appointment of President Taft and during the war, chief of the American military mission to the British headquarters of Sir Douglas Haig. The excellent relations which prevailed between the British and American armies owed much to his influence. His biography is told largely thru his letters.

Reviewed by Elihu Root
Boston Transcript p2 N 17 '23 1300w
N Y Times p4 Mr 30 '24 1100w
Reviewed by W. N. C. Carlton
N Y Tribune p18 F 17 '24 920w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p80 F 7 '24 400w

SCOTT, SIR JAMES GEORGE. Burma from the earliest times to the present day. 372p il $6 Knopf [21s Unwin]
959.2 Burma 24-16420

"The book begins with the legendary past and an ethnological survey of the people, telling of the growth of Burma from Suvarnabhumi through the early pagan monarchy and successive dynasties, up to the time of King Thibaw and the annexation by the British. It touches also the Shan kingdoms, in Upper Burma; the contacts, hostile and otherwise, with neighboring empires; the various missions that have been a part of Burmese history; the earliest travelers—such as Patavino and Nicolo dei Conti—and, in short, gives a brilliant summary of internal affairs."—Lit R

" 'Burma' by Sir J. G. Scott is a valuable addition to the few really excellent volumes on that country and should have a permanent place on the shelf of histories of the kingdoms of the Far East." Harry Hervey
+ Lit R p12 N 1 '24 500w

"He has written a book inspired throughout with gentle and kindly sympathy." C: Johnston
+ N Y Times p26 Ja 11 '25 920w

"An excellently devised book."
+ N Y World p8e Ag 3 '24 70w

"His knowledge of the country and its people is beyond dispute, and his deep sympathy with the latter is apparent in all the many things he has said about them. It is decidedy a lightly written book, and it tells a story unavoidably confused, and much of it sombre, in a bright, taking way that should prove attractive to an inexpert public desirous of learning something of a people made up of personalities pleasant to deal with and charming to know." R: C. Temple
+ Sat R of Lit 1:162 O 4 '24 950w

SCOTT, ROBERT FALCON. Scott's last expedition; the personal journals of Captain R. F. Scott; with a biographical introd. by Sir J. M. Barrie; and a preface by Sir Clements R. Markham. 519p il $3 Dodd [7s 6d Murray]

919.9 Antarctic regions A24-65

This edition of Scott's journals in one volume instead of two and at a moderate price, is published (according to the introduction by Barrie) to make available to boy readers the first-hand account of this tragic and noble adventure. Besides the extracts from Captain Scott's own journals, the appendix includes quotations from journals of other members of the expedition and very complete notes.

Cleveland p63 Jl '24

"Few books on the subject of exploration have won the peculiar place achieved by Scott's record of his last trip, with its tragic ending. Its many and varied merits, aside from the tragedy, make it a classic of its kind."

+ N Y Tribune p24 Ja 6 '24 130w

"The writings of most explorers appeal to a limited public, but this journal of Scott's should appeal to every one who loves drama." Gregory Mason

+ Outlook 136:482 Mr 19 '24 600w

SCOTT, WALTER DILL, and CLOTHIER, ROBERT C. Personnel management; principles, practices, and point of view. 643p $4 Shaw, A. W.

658 Employment management

The book takes up in a thoro, scientific way the actual problems of the adjustment of the individual to the work he is best qualified to do. Step by step the authors explain proven methods of using an effective rating scale. They show by actual examples how to conduct mental alertness tests as well as special ability tests. They describe what must be done to develop the right incentive and outline the use of personnel instruments in salary control. Much of the material in the book is drawn from the authors' professional experience with the Scott company in their work with more than forty industrial and business concerns, including meat packers, banks, manufacturers, department stores, insurance companies and public service corporations. Charts, diagrams and photographs bring out clearly the actual working principles to follow and rules are given for applying these principles.

"A volume complete in detail, enlightening in purpose. . . The chapters treating labor supply and turnover, placement and promotion, mental alertness and special ability tests, the graphic rating scale, and educational agencies for the advance of employees are especially meritorious." C: L. Stone

+ Am Econ R 14:334 Je '24 200w

"Messrs. Scott and Clothier bring to their task a peculiarly valuable and attractive equipment, and they are wisely content to make their volume significant in its clear and forceful presentation of a point of view and of methods which have had extensive trial at their hands."

+ Pol Sci Q 39:185 Mr '24 450w

SCOTT, WILFRED WELDAY. Technical methods in analysis of metallurgical and allied products: a manual of analytical methods and useful data for the chemist and the college student. 875p il $6 Van Nostrand

543.7 Metallurgical analysis 23-17698

"Based on the author's 'Standard methods of chemical analysis.' The elements are arranged alphabetically, general procedures being given under the headings 'Gravimetric methods,' 'Volumetric methods,' and 'Industrial products and raw materials.' Includes also short chapters on coal, gas, and water analysis."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:69 F '24

SCOTT-MONCRIEFF, CHARLES KENNETH, comp. Marcel Proust; an English tribute. 148p $1.75 Seltzer [6s Chatto & W.]

B or 92 Proust, Marcel

Beginning with a character sketch by Stephen Hudson, the most intimate English friend of Proust's later years, the book contains tributes and critical interpretations by Francis Burrell, Ralph Wright, Compton Mackenzie, Catherine Carswell, Clive Bell, A. B. Walkley, J. Middleton Murry, Arthur Symons, Joseph Conrad, Arnold Bennett, and others.

Reviewed by Laurence Stallings

Bookm 59:467 Je '24 240w

"The degree in which Proust extended the boundaries of the novelist's art is interestingly reflected in these papers. An adventurer in that art himself, he has set the critics to grubbing at its roots, to re-examining its origins and its growth and its possibilities."

Dial 76:288 Mr '24 90w

"The volume is a masterpiece of literary snobbism, and an appropriate comment upon the whole cult of Proust by people who show no signs of having read him and most of whom would be horrified if they had." Ernest Boyd

— Lit R p574 Mr 8 '24 1200w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller

New Repub 38:22 F 27 '24 1500w

"Mr. Scott Moncrieff's enterprise in collecting on all hands 'a body of critical opinion' as an English tribute to the art of Marcel Proust seems at first sight an admirable enterprise. And if some of the faithful only drop buttons in his bag, these ought not to diminish the value of the sterling coins beside them." Raymond Mortimer

+ — New Statesman 22:244 D 1 '23 2400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:323 Je '24

Sat R 136:640 D 8 '23 350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p817 N 29 '23 700w

SCOVILLE, SAMUEL, jr. More wild folk. 184p il $2 Century

24-9008

Short stories in which all the actors are wild animals. Contents: Puck; White death; Birdbeast; The flittermouse; The reef; The sky pirate; Black beaver; Death-in-the-dark; The sea king; Moonshine; Nanook; The abyss.

Booklist 21:31 O '24

"Here is another book to own." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p682 Ag '24 150w

"Mr. Scoville's fascinating book reveals a wide and varied knowledge of the ways of animals by sea and land and air."

+ N Y Times p12 Je 22 '24 240w

N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 70w

"Will furnish youthful readers healthy thrills and renew for older readers the atmosphere of the outdoors."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 20 '24 120w

Wis Lib Bul 20:179 Jl '24

SCROGGS, WILLIAM OSCAR. Century of banking progress. 333p il $3.50 Doubleday

332 Banks and banking 24-28464

A comprehensive, non-technical history covering the whole period of American banking from its simple beginnings to the highly organized and efficient system of today. The author is a member of the financial staff of the New York Evening Post.

"The book apparently is the result of deep research; the publishers have put it out in a very readable form; and it is not technical." J. G.

+ Bookm 60:adv D '24 120w

"The brevity of this little book, its hardly more than three hundred pages, do credit to the author's command of the subject and his skill of presentation. One must know volumes and volumes about banking before one can judge which volumes to leave out. One is almost tempted to wish that this little history had included another chapter or so, to cover the rise of the trust company and the history of our foreign banking. As it stands, it is a fine union of brevity, readableness, and grasp." Philip Coan

+ Sat R of Lit 1:322 N 29 '24 950w

SEABURY, DAVID. Unmasking our minds. 2 429p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

150 Psychology 24-29776

This book is an attempt to popularize the new psychology and apply its resources to answer the questions human beings ask about, to open up man's inner nature and explain the forces within which move instincts, emotions and purposes and determine character.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 10 '25 510w

"Some are of the type of practical optimism of the well known 'sales talk,' while others are downright inspirational tosh. Mr. Seabury's religion is material success, and he seeks, and seems to find, in all his hostile masters, instruments which may be applied to that end. The work has a splendid bibliography and a remarkably intelligent and useful index." J: W. Crawford

— + N Y World p8m Ja 4 '25 500w

SEAL, ETHEL DAVIS. Furnishing the little house. 200p il $2 Century

749 House decoration 24-9901

The author of this little book has for many years been contributing articles to current magazines and is at present editor of the interior decorating department of the Ladies' Home Journal. She describes in simple language the basic principles of correct furnishing of the little house, or apartment—just what to do to create a beautiful interior even with the least expensive furnishings. Contents: Walls and ceilings: the friendly backgrounds of your rooms; Floors of dignity and beauty; Curtaining the house; Creating color schemes; Foundations in good furniture; Furnishing the hall; The living-room as the heart of the house; Dining-rooms may be formal or gay; The bedrooms; The all-important accessories; On dress-parade behind the scenes.

Booklist 21:57 N '24

"A highly educated artist, Miss Seal has brought her mature taste to the service of the troubled army of women who are trying to make a home out of a house. From the decoration of ceilings to the staining of floors and the choice of rugs and furniture, the whole subject is treated with unfailing good sense." E. L. Shuman

+ Int Bk R p737 S '24 100w

"The combination of practical and elementary advice which she has gathered between the covers of so small a book without appearing didactic or condescending cannot but impress the reader, trained as well as untrained."

+ — Lit R p796 My 31 '24 450w

N Y Tribune p23 My 25 '24 120w

"A pleasing book of good advice and good taste, well illustrated with halftones."

+ Outlook 137:578 Ag 13 '24 40w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:369 Jl '24

St Louis p345 O '24

"The material is hardly organized in the form and weight of a treatise, and, as a popular exposition, it has no particular merit."

— Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 40w

SEAMAN, AUGUSTA (HUIELL) (MRS ROBERT REECE SEAMAN). Edge of Raven pool. 242p il $1.75 Century

24-8790

When Antoinette Hewston, left an orphan at sixteen, found that her money was gone and she would have to live with her Aunt Adelaide in Georgia, she was desolate. Aunt Adelaide was a lady of the old school, and her home in Savannah a beautiful old southern mansion, so that was a little light in the darkness. Then almost as soon as she reached the South Antoinette scented a mystery in a beautiful unoccupied room in her aunt's house. Add to this the fact that she discovered a girl cousin almost her own age who lived on a fascinating island plantation near Savannah, and life began to be worth living. Just in time to save the beautiful Savannah home the cousins solved the mystery and found a long buried treasure.

"The story is engagingly told, its traditionally picturesque Southern setting adding to its charm."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 500w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p907 N '24 20w

"Mrs. Seamen has excellent narrative skill, unfolding her plot simply, naturally, and without too much artificial suspense. Her sentiment does not slop over and her girls are genuine, though markedly unlike the sixteen-year-old 'flappers' of the lip-stick variety."

+ Lit R p763 My 17 '24 210w

"A notable fact about the book is that it is virtually without a love element. This is not to imply, however, that Mrs. Seaman's story is particularly effective, for the reader never becomes really interested in the mystery, and the plot is no less commonplace than our synopsis would seem to imply. The novel, indeed, appears designed for the entertainment of adolescent girls rather than of the adult reader, and all that one need remark is that it undoubtedly fulfills its purpose."

— + N Y Times p9 Ap 27 '24 500w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 140w

SEARS, CLARA ENDICOTT. Days of delusion; a strange bit of history. 264p il $3 Houghton

289.3 Miller, William. Second advent 24-4876

An account of the religious excitement of 1843 and 1844 in New England when William Miller was predicting the end of the world and carrying thousands with him on a wave of religious hysteria. He not only prophesied the Second coming of Christ but also the destruction by fire of the earth and the wicked that were upon it. The author tells what kind of man Miller was, how he became "Prophet Miller," how Millerism spread and how the mysterious hysteria gradually subsided so that the memory of it has now almost passed away. The story is told thru the testimony of writings and reminiscences of that day and the recollections of living persons whose information had been received from parents or grandparents.

"Of all these misguided people Miss Sears writes with a tender, compassionate sympathy. A story with such merits and so interestingly told need not be censured because it is not done in the pattern of academic research. Nevertheless the student of religious history is left without full gratification and may wish he were provided with a satisfying study of origins and results." F. A. Christie

+ — Am Hist R 29:809 Jl '24 350w

Booklist 20:321 Je '24

"It is a thoroughly interesting and dramatic account of an extraordinary period in American history." E. E. F.

+ Bookm 59:adv My '24 80w

"The book lacks something of imagination. The illustrations drawn largely from prints and woodcuts of contemporary sources are picturesque and valuable. For students of social phenomena and for the general reader who is interested in strange tales of the past the book holds a good deal of value." W. E. C.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 11 '24 550w

"Clara Endicott Sears has presented with diligence all the material she could find concerning this interesting spectacle, but her pre-

SEARS, CLARA E.—Continued
occupation with the details of survivors' stories detracts somewhat from the interest of the main episode, and she devotes too much space to what happened to other people and not enough to an analysis of William Miller." M. R. Werner

+ — Lit R p704 Ap 26 '24 900w

"'Days of Delusion' offers much valuable material to a student of the rise and decline of religious cults in America. It lacks, however, a certain historic perspective. . . This book has but a slight historic background. Its merit lies chiefly in its collection of anecdotes." Woodbridge Riley

+ — Nation 119:22 Jl 2 '24 1400w

"Her book, which is so rich in facts and incidents and has been produced out of such wide and conscientious research and is valuable even as it stands, would have been far more interesting if its narrative had been strengthened with a better knowledge of psychology and informed with a larger historical sense. Many of its illustrations, which add not a little to its value, are from contemporary prints."

— + N Y Times p12 Mr 30 '24 1750w

"A book of unusual interest." E. L. Pearson

+ Outlook 136:608 Ap 9 '24 750

St Louis p334 O '24

"Clara Endicott Sears has industriously and successfully gathered the available testimony concerning the extraordinary episode and has assembled and presented it with the skill characteristic of her excursions into the strange byways of American life."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 18 '24 850w

Wis Lib Bul 20:91 Ap '24

SEDGWICK, ANNE DOUGLAS (MRS BASIL DE SELINCOURT). Little French girl. 508p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Constable]

24-20383

The contrasting social standards of French and English, in particular their different views about love and marriage, form the background of this story. Alix, the little French girl, is sent to England to find the suitable marriage which her mother's mode of living had made impossible in France and at the same time to free Maman from her daughter's innocent and embarrassing presence while she is pursuing the latest of a succession of love adventures into which her dangerous beauty and charm had led her. Unable to give up her own way of living, Mme Vervier wished something different for her tenderly loved daughter. Fortunately, the exquisite Alix falls into kind hands in England. She steers her sure and delicately balanced course, never failing in loyalty to her beautiful mother or in appreciation and understanding of her English friends, and in the end she finds the best kind of Englishman for husband and a true love marriage instead of the mariage de convenance her mother had planned.

Booklist 21:29 O '24

"If the ultimate consumer really is interested in learning what writers mean by technique, 'The Little French Girl' affords a palatable demonstration. The style is exactly adapted to the substance; and the construction exemplifies that satisfying economy which can only be practiced upon an abundance of means—an orderly richness, a choice liberality." Isabel Paterson

+ Bookm 60:495 D '24 420w

"The book is sparkling with pieces of brilliant and suggestive writing. They are not of the nature of 'purple patches' which may be detached, but are all of the warp and woof of style and story." H. E. Hersey

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 30 '24 5000w

"A thoughtful piece of work, excellent in characterization and healthy in tone." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 120:279 N '24 380w

Cleveland p91 D '24

"Mrs. de Sélincourt's hand is subdued to what it works in; she knows her France as she knows her England, and loves each for what it is."

+ English J 13:684 N '24 230w

"There is an interesting, consistent story, flawlessly constructed, developed with genuine subtlety, its complications the natural, apparently inevitable result of one personality upon another, one nation upon another. There is a style delicately sure, flexible, dignified, restrained, at once fresh and superbly, richly, mellow, a style before which a fellow writer can but bow in mingled joy of admiration and despair at the all but unapproachable perfection of attainment it shows. And most important of all, even the minor characters are real people, clearly seen and presented." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p818 O '24 1000w

"'The Little French Girl' is 508 pages long—long, not because the story does not move swiftly enough after its start, but because it is a fullbodied tale, and because its character drawing is done carefully and with a knowledge of the value of each stroke that forbids too hasty a use of the brush. The characters are made to live almost without exception; several portraits even of the minor persons of the drama, are done brilliantly." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p3 S 6 '24 650w

"Miss Sedgwick has not kept her problem in solution. She has allowed it to crystalize too early into judgment and as soon as that has occurred the rest, however interesting, has lost one of the elements of its fascination. We have left only the story of the anglicization of a French girl—interesting enough as a story but no longer a spiritual adventure." J. W. Krutch

— + Nation 119:447 O 22 '24 1000w

"Given its fundamental weakness, 'The Little French Girl' is a very well-managed, if an over-managed, novel. It is full of secondary merits of the kind which serve to reveal a lack of fundamental merit. If one could accept the characters at all, one would say that some of the scenes are marvellously well rendered. But, in spite of Mrs. Sedgwick's laborious attempt to achieve verisimilitude—a losing fight which retards the movement of the story—the characters are impossible, for they have no passions." Edwin Muir

— + Nation and Ath 35:669 Ag 30 '24 260w

"In The Little French Girl Miss Sedgwick's chief preoccupation is with the symmetry of structure and elegance of style appropriate to literature. Yet more abundantly than its predecessors it lives. Miss Sedgwick apparently cultivates life for the sake of literature, and we shall not dispute her method, the fruit thereof being so pleasant."

+ New Repub 40:53 S 10 '24 330w

Reviewed by J: Franklin

New Statesman 23:648 S 13 '24 700w

"The excellence of characterization, the sparkle and depth of the dialogue, the clever building up of scene from scene, the surprising yet logical and expected climaxes—above all, the vivid sense of the mind and manner of approaching life and its problems of two countries, all combine to fashion a book that is highly distinguished. The detail is generally flawless."

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '24 1000w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 950w

"Anne Douglas Sedgwick's latest novel, 'The Little French Girl,' displays the distinction, discrimination, skillful portraiture, and beautifully limned background her readers have learned to expect."

+ Outlook 138:134 S 24 '24 400w

"Miss Sedgwick, for the most part, lets her thesis appear in her plot; the result is an essay, not a novel. All the people behave, not as people do behave, but as they would behave if their function were to illustrate national and social characteristics. The little

French girl herself is a devastating prig, but is loved at sight by everybody. That the book is well worth reading, that it contains a thousand touches of subtlety and wisdom, that it is exquisitely written, goes without saying: it is by Miss Sedgwick. But the breath of creation has not been breathed into it; it is not a novel, but a study of disembodied ideas." Gerald Gould
— + Sat R 138:370 O 11 '24 400w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Spec 133:298 Ag 30 '24 700w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 21 '24 1100w

"One or two phrases betray that the author is not English (and one that she is not perfect in her German); and a writer who knows France and the French mind as well as Miss Sedgwick could surely have given the French atmosphere without this lavish use of easily translatable French words; but on the whole it is as great a pleasure to read this prose, in description or dialogue, as it is to follow the plan, to feel the emotion, and to catch the thought in a very good novel."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p500 Ag 14 '24 700w

SEELIG, RAYNER. Eternal huntress. 229p $2 Knopf

The eternal huntress is woman in her quest for a mate. Isabel Rayburn is madly in love with Richard Du Maurier, but he does not reciprocate her affection. Her father, Captain Rayburn, who had been horribly maimed years before while hunting big game, now spends his days in retirement in their Washington Square apartment, drinking whiskey and making sardonic remarks. It is he who foresees that there is no escape for Richard Du Maurier. For a time a Titian-haired friend of Isabel's holds Du Maurier's attention, but eventually he marries Isabel as her father predicted.

"Here is in up-to-date form the kind of fiction that used to beguile the leisure of cooks in the days of my youth, when a periodical entitled 'The Family Herald' lightened the basement gloom of the stately homes of old England." Ernest Boyd
— Ind 113:317 O 25 '24 500w

"The book reads easily enough and if the reader is willing to accept the rather primitive fashion in which the dénouement of the theme is brought about some slight pleasure may result. Miss Seelig, however, has much yet to learn."
— + N Y Times p20 D 28 '24 380w

"She reveals, at times, both perception and insight. But, for all that, she has preferred a rather trite plot and a thesis to a study of manners among her own generation. It is for this reason that her book, technically firmer, seems less vivid and more superficial than the work of most other young intellectuals. One cannot, of course, object to an author's choice of subject-matter, one can only estimate the result."
— + N Y Tribune p13 D 14 '24 300w

"The effort to encompass a breadth of sophistication, which our author has not yet perfectly achieved, has affected visibly the style of the narrative."
— N Y World p8e O 26 '24 200w

SEITZ, DON CARLOS. Braxton Bragg; general of the Confederacy. 544p $5 State co.

B or 92 Bragg, Braxton. United States—History—Civil war—Campaigns and battles
24-2434

Braxton Bragg, 1817-1876, was a Confederate general who commanded at Murfreesboro, Chickamauga and Chattanooga. Considerable controversy has gathered about him, and he was at times bitterly criticised by the South. The book is based on printed war records, Bragg's own private and public correspondence and the published reminiscences of other generals. It is almost wholly concerned with his Civil war career, and his various campaigns are followed in detail.

"The book gives evidence of having been hurriedly written. By better organization and more careful use of the material available, the book could have been shortened by some one hundred pages or more, at the same time making Bragg's case stronger and the fact of his long retention in his command less blameworthy." T: R. Hay
— Am Hist R 29:782 Jl '24 1250w

"To the everyday reader the book may seem almost top-heavy with citations, a circumstance which seems to limit it largely to the purview of the historical student and investigator. For one thing we are very grateful to Mr. Seitz. He has written a book without any special pleading. He is fair and candid. He is never a partisan to the extent of blindness to the defects of his subject, nor have we discovered any bitterness toward the historical figures with whom Bragg comes into comparison." S. L. Cook
+ — Boston Transcript p2 F 16 '24 1700w

"Disappointment awaits the reader of this book. Certainly it is not the definitive, authoritative, critical study of this important Confederate military leader." A. R. N.
— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 O 12 '24 650w

"It is gratifying that he has written with such insight and such unassailable fairness. The appearance of his book adds another to the long list of authoritative works on Confederate history that have come from the hands of understanding men who have caught the spirit, even though they do not have the blood of the South." D. S. Freeman
+ N Y Times p16 Je 8 '24 1900w

Outlook 137:365 Jl 2 '24 180w

Springf'd Republican p8 D 26 '24 550w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p214 Ap 10 '24 1000w

SEITZ, DON CARLOS. Joseph Pulitzer; his
² life and letters. 490p il $5 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Pulitzer, Joseph

"Mr. Seitz, a newspaper man, has written the life of a newspaper man. The biography is presented wholly from the newspaper point of view, and considers nothing else. Every calling has its field and its limitations, its code, its conduct and its place in the wider judgment of society as a whole. To this Mr. Seitz gives little heed, but his record of this newspaper life is vivid, covering its whole course with picturesque accuracy."—N Y Tribune

"The skill of the journalist has united with the painstaking accuracy of the historian to sketch the career of one of the greatest newspaper directors that ever lived; and this, withal, with an impartiality and frankness which omits none of the mistakes inevitably incident to a great personality or large journalistic undertakings nor, on the other hand, seeks to glorify the subject." W: E. Brigham
+ Boston Transcript p1 N 29 '24 6000w

"Mr. Seitz has turned out one of the most convincing portraits of the year. He has brought to the work a reporter's brutal accuracy. He was close to his subject. He watched him with judicial eye. He doesn't spare the foibles and conceits, yet all is put down with lenient pen, behind which is seen true affection for his generous yet irascible chief." Horace Green
+ Int Bk R p93 Ja '25 260w

"It is with reluctance that a reviewer records the fact of an only partial success. Don Seitz has worked conscientiously, the information is all there, but the differences of temperament between biographer and subject are visible on every page and prevent the book's being as interesting, by a long way, as its hero. The busy journalist, impatient publisher, dictatorial invalid, luxury-loving million-

SEITZ, DON CARLOS—Continued
aire are properly paraded; but the essential man behind these facets of a career remains blurred if not obscured." Bruce Bliven
+ — New Repub 41:175 Ja 7 '25 1750w

"Eighteen years of personal association with the late Joseph Pulitzer and thirty years spent in the service of The World are not the only qualifications which Mr. Seitz has brought to the writing of this admirable biography. Mr. Seitz, to judge from internal evidence, has enjoyed the additional advantage of a temperament fairly opposite to that of the man he describes. A vivid, highly colored, tumultuous personality has been subjected to appraisal by a clear, cool and humorous eye, and the result is much more successful than if Mr. Pulitzer's life had been written as intensely as it was lived." Simeon Strunsky
+ N Y Times p1 D 7 '24 2400w

"Mr. Seitz in the range and current of his work has been fair, just and impartial. He has written one of the most valuable and instructive books ever published about the journalist's craft. No man, however experienced in news and editorial writing, but will learn new lessons from Mr. Seitz's life of Joseph Pulitzer." Talcott Williams
+ N Y Tribune p1 D 7 '24 1100w

"Mr. Seitz has done an admirable piece of work. Although he was and is bound to Mr. Pulitzer and to his memory by ties of friendship and admiration, and by financial favors received, he has been able to write critically and with genuine detachment. He has given us a clear biography which makes easy a complete understanding of the character of a man who will remain one of the most interesting figures in American journalism." O. G. Villard
+ Sat R of Lit 1:393 D 20 '24 1400w

SELDES, GILBERT VIVIAN. Seven lively arts. 398p il $4 Harper
792 Theater—United States 24-9374

A merry monograph on modernism by a man who has been closely associated with books, music, the theater and painting. Mr Seldes, former editor of the Dial, has always been a disciple of the present age. Believing that what he terms the "lively arts" are the true expressions of the American people, he discusses their virtues and potentialities. Such subjects as Charlie Chaplin, Al Jolson, Fannie Brice, jazz and its composers, the modern stage and cartoons of the day come in for his respect. He wants the people to acknowledge that which appeals to them and not assume a false air of intellectual superiority.

"It is an extremely shrewd and entertaining book. . . He has applied a lively mind to a lively subject." W. P. Eaton
+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Jl '24 500w
Booklist 21:13 O '24
Cleveland p53 Jl '24

"Mr Seldes has written a valuable and enormously entertaining book. He has tried to do for the field of popular entertainment very much what Mr Mencken has done for philology in his treatise on The American Language. Unfortunately, Mr Seldes has not to the same degree as Mencken the gift of lucid presentation." Edmund Wilson
+ — Dial 77:244 S '24 2200w

"Apart from its arguments, or rather its appeals, to those who find comic strips vulgar, and jazz music cacophonous, 'The Seven Lively Arts' is nothing but a humorless and prolonged effort to explain a joke." Ernest Boyd
— Ind 112:260 My 10 '24 750w

"The lowbrow has found a champion armed with the engine of intellectuality, newly caparisoned with æsthetics. But his adventures are too much among the insignificant; one longs for the air of higher altitudes. And for a prophet of immaculate purity in expression, oppressed by bourgeois taste, there is far too much of careless writing and benign tolerance of the mediocre in his pages." H. J. Seligmann
— + Lit R p770 My 24 '24 700w

Reviewed by T: Craven
Nation 119:290 S 17 '24 650w

Reviewed by Clive Bell
+ Nation and Ath 35:179 My 10 '24 2100w

"With the lively arts Mr. Seldes is admirably equipped to deal, being sensitive, intelligent, well educated and an American: only an American could have written this book. Only an American could have written with the unaffected gusto without which it would have been a glittering tour de force, and, at the same time, with the first-hand knowledge without which it would have been silly. Add, that by some of the alertest minds in Europe these lively arts which are generally recognized as America's contribution, are hailed as the new ingredient which is to vivify Western civilization, and you will perceive that a book of this sort well done—as this is—must be of interest to all students of the present and future on both sides the Atlantic." Clive Bell
+ New Repub 38:263 Ap 30 '24 2100w
(Same as in Nation and Athenaeum)

"In this book 'as delightful to the eye as it is to the senses' Mr. Seldes writes with an engaging candor, an undisguised enthusiasm and a wealth of reference that is both refreshing and instructive. It is when he is most personal, when he is setting down his particular reactions to the Lively Arts that he is at his best. Here there is an unassumed sincerity and, what is more, a positive convincingness that should fashion the book into no slight weapon for those intelligent youngsters who find in the Lively Arts a running contemporaneous fulfillment of the joy of living." H. S. Gorman
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 27 '24 2050w

Reviewed by H. W. Van Loon
N Y Tribune p25 Ap 27 '24 600w
Outlook 138:466 N 19 '24 180w
St Louis p347 O '24

"Though some of these sketches are interesting enough as contemporary comment, it is doubtful whether any of them possesses a permanent artistic or critical value."
— + Springf'd Republican p10 My 7 '24 200w
Theatre Arts Mo 8:574 Ag '24 260w
Wis Lib Bul 20:174 Jl '24

SELFRIDGE, THOMAS OLIVER. Memoirs of Thomas O. Selfridge, jr., rear admiral U.S.N.; with an introd. by Dudley W. Knox. 288p il $2.50 (12s 6d) Putnam
B or 92 United States—Navy—History. United States—History—Civil war—Naval operations 24-16957

" 'The Memoirs of Thomas O. Selfridge Jr.' contains the salient events in the life of an American Rear Admiral who is the embodiment of the old navy man. Rear Admiral Selfridge began his career with the battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac. He was one of the first to survey the upper reaches of the Amazon, was a junior officer of conspicuous excellence in the war between the States, and a typical sailor who bridged the gap between the wooden frigate and the Super-Hood type of ship in commission to-day."—N Y World

---

"A simple, direct, unaffected personal narrative of a finely lived life, full of achievement. The book is well illustrated but one misses an index." H. L. P.
+ — Lit R p9 Ag 30 '24 400w

"Naval officers will find in this volume an inspiring record of the varied career of one of their most respected Admirals."
+ N Y Times p23 S 21 '24 350w

"The book should interest navy folk greatly, but contains little beyond a certain blunt morality and loquacious recounting to commend it either to popular reader or historian."
+ — N Y World p8e Ag 10 '24 150w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p567 S 18 '24 1050w

SELIGMANN, HERBERT JACOB. D. H. Lawrence; an American interpretation. 77p 75c Seltzer

B or 92 Lawrence, David Herbert 24-5686

This volume contains interpretations of the poems and prose of D. H. Lawrence and devotes chapters to his travels, his philosophy, and criticism. There is included also, a biographical note and a bibliography.

Booklist 21:62 N '24

"Seligmann has the rare faculty of ascertaining with nicety the pitches of works of art. No piece of critical writing done by him is without some swift perceptions of the sort from which sharply living pictures of things are to be developed; and his monograph on D. H. Lawrence, perhaps the most elaborate writing done by him, parallels momentarily with a closeness that is dazzling the creative gesture of the English agonist."

+ — Dial 77:82 Jl '24 120w

"This attempt to trace the 'pilgrimage of a human soul in the modern world' follows the journeyer rather as an admirer charting his course than as an observer noting whether the journey be a wandering or a progress." J. T. S.

— Lit R p857 Je 28 '24 250w

Reviewed by Edith Rickert

New Repub 41:181 Ja 7 '25 130w

"Something of Herbert J. Seligmann's unconditional surrender in D. H. Lawrence must inevitably be communicated to even a hostile or indifferent reader. In this he does a service. . . Mr. Seligmann, however, has not really come to grips with Lawrence."

+ — N Y World p6e Ap 13 '24 120w

SELLS, ELIJAH WATT. Natural business ^{2} year; and thirteen other themes. 276p $4 Shaw, A. W.

657 Accounting. Corporations—Finance 24-13943

The author, long a member of the firm of Haskins & Sells, accountants, had a large part in the rise and development of accountancy in America. Most of the essays in this volume have to do with accounting or with the profession of accountancy. The first paper deals with the proper time for taking inventories, two essays discuss corporation finance. The last and longest paper is an outline of a proposed plan for handling interline freight claims.

Am Econ R 14:757 D '24 80w

"Mr. Sells' services to the comparatively young profession of accountancy were probably not surpassed by any other man either in scope or originality, and these fourteen random papers and addresses derive an increased interest when his labors are remembered."

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 24 '24 160w

SELTZER, CHARLES ALDEN. Way of the buffalo. 318p $2 Century

24-19416

Just as the buffalo fought for its existence so does old Ballantine, a rugged, picturesque Westerner, fight against the forces of civilization which are backed by the dynamic personality of Jim Cameron. The little town of Ransome is one day aroused out of its lethargy by the lightning-like speed with which Cameron starts to overhaul the place. Among his plans there is included the building of a railroad adjacent to Ballantine's property, even tho Ballantine threatens to kill him the day he runs it. But Cameron, to the consternation of Ransome and the fear of pretty Virginia Ballantine, who secretly admires him, goes on with his work. The day he defies his opponent by running the first engine, Ballantine admits defeat—so Ransome takes Jim Cameron to its heart as does also Ballantine—and Virginia.

Booklist 21:113 D '24

"For a hero we like a man a bit more unpleasantly greedy, a bit less like a cartoon of a Wall Street magnate, taken young. As to Virginia,—oh well, he was a millionaire, and girls have no sense, at all."

— Boston Transcript p6 S 3 '24 210w

"The story moves, clean and swift. Mr. Seltzer has facility. With a yarn to tell, he tells it simply, directly, emphatically. And for background he paints with deft strokes an aspect of the dying West." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p988 Ag 23 '24 350w

N Y Times p17 S 14 '24 400w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 160w

N Y World p7e S 14 '24 130w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 14 '24 110w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p580 S 18 '24 100w

SELVIDGE, ROBERT WASHINGTON. How to teach a trade. 111p $1 Manual arts press

607 Technical education 23-9786

"Briefly outlines a plan devised specifically for trade training and not for technical, industrial, or training schools. Examples are from various trades, including plumbing, printing, electric wiring, and machine-shop work."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 20:325 Je '24

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:199 Ap '24

SERGEANT, PHILIP WALSINGHAM. Life of Anne Boleyn. 319p il $5 Appleton [18s Hutchinson]

B or 92 Anne Boleyn, queen consort of Henry VIII, king of England, [24-26388]

The story of the second wife of Henry VIII and mother of England's greatest queen. Her biographer represents her as a woman of brains and force of character and maintains that the "subtlety of Queen Elizabeth's character stamps her as a true daughter of her mother, whatever she may have inherited from the Tudors." Tho he is obliged to disentangle Anne Boleyn's history almost entirely from the writings of her enemies he finds her brave, loyal and generous and sincere in her religious opinions. Some of the King's love letters to her are quoted and there are sixteen portraits in illustration.

"His book is not a five-foot shelf biography: it is not heavily incrusted with footnotes and source references. But its pages do contain a faithful, painstaking, and extremely interesting record of Anne Boleyn." D: M. Little, jr.

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '24 300w

Booklist 20:334 Je '24

Bookm 59:474 Je '24 130w

"A careful and exhaustive study." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 10 '24 1000w

Cleveland p62 Jl '24

"The author writes with conviction and warmth concerning a greatly abused lady. Perhaps he relies too much on the reader's knowledge of the period and does not paint the backgrounds of the English and French courts with enough detail." C: de Kay

+ — N Y Times p11 Je 8 '24 1300w

"Soberly written and with clarity."

+ Outlook 136:568 Ap 2 '24 350w

Sat R 137:38 Ja 12 '24 580w

"Mr. Sergeant's book is carefully reasoned, and unemotional, so to speak. There is indeed little in his theme to rouse enthusiasm or provoke panegyric."

Spec 132:298 F 23 '24 480w

"Well written and interesting. The crispness of his style is refreshing. He never introduces extraneous material."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 6 '24 1000w

SERGEANT, PHILIP W.—Continued

"No new facts are brought to light in this rereading of the old authorities for the life of Anne Boleyn. The author is more generous to her than were Martin Hume and some of the earlier historians, but he attempts too much when he seeks to prove that Elizabeth owed many of her great qualities to her mother."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p878 D 13 '23 250w

SERNER, GUNNAR. See Heller, F., pseud.

SERVIER, ANDRE. Islam and the psychology of the Musulman; tr. from the French by A. S. Moss-Blundell; with a preface by Louis Bertrand. 287p $3.75 Scribner [15s Chapman & H.]

953 Mohammedanism. Civilization, Arabic. Arabia [24-14464]

"The abolition of the Caliphate by the Angora Assembly, and the question thus raised throughout the Moslem world, with probably serious repercussions elsewhere, make the publication of this book opportune. The book delivers an . . . opinion on the organs, history, and the achievements of Islam, particularly on the Arab civilization it induced, which differs very greatly from that popularly held and expressed by historians generally. M. Servier admits that the Arabs have left a few original works of history and geography, but he demonstrates that Arabian science, astronomy, mathematics, chemistry and medicine are all copied from the Greeks. He shows that Arabian philosophy is derived from the School of Alexandria, and its literature from Greece and Persia in the East and from Latin inspiration in the West. He finds that in the fine arts, sculpture, painting, and music the 'nullity of the Arab is absolute.' "—Sat R

"His book is not a work of learning or a dispassionate inquiry, but a political pamphlet, designed to further the interests of French Imperialism." Bertrand Russell

— Nation and Ath 34:704 F 16 '24 750w

"It is hard to understand why a book of this sort is ever written, let alone translated into foreign tongues. It purports to be an honest and conscientious study of the Arab, set down primarily to guide France in her colonial policy. Actually it is a sweeping and vicious attack on anything and everything immediately or remotely related to the Arab and his creed." L. B.

— New Repub 39:166 Jl 2 '24 150w

New Statesman 22:608 Mr 1 '24 350w

N Y Tribune p27 My 18 '24 100w

"M. Servier has produced a profoundly interesting book which is certain to cause a good deal of controversy."

Sat R 137:301 Mr 22 '24 700w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p152 Mr 13 '24 1000w

SETON, GRACE (GALLATIN) (MRS ERNEST THOMPSON SETON). Chinese lanterns. 373p il $3.50 Dodd

915.1 China—Social life and customs. Women in China 24-7126

The swinging lantern which is inseparable from the life of China is taken by the author as the symbol for her impressions. The imperial yellow lantern lights up the wedding of the boy emperor of China, celebrated with great pomp and ceremony, and witnessed by her as an invited guest. The democracy lantern casts its light on the president of the Chinese republic, on Dr Sun Yat Sen and his wife and on five days of revolution in China. Mrs Seton's most illuminating lantern flashes upon the new woman of China, in society, in business, professional and industrial life and in politics. Finally, the light of a traveller's lantern reflects her ascent of historic Tai Shan, the sacred mountain of Confucius, and a trip to a Chinese coal mine. There are many and interesting illustrations.

" 'Chinese Lanterns' covers a wide range of most interesting matter." S. F. Reavis

+ Int Bk R p528 Je '24 80w

"Mrs. Seton's book furnishes us with a clear, interesting and colorful picture of present-day conditions in China, especially with regard to the place of the modern woman in the young republic."

+ Lit R p812 Je 7 '24 200w

New Statesman 23:448 Jl 19 '24 280w

"A book which is both entertaining and informative." I: Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 20 '24 1450w

N Y Tribune p26 My 25 '24 250w

Outlook 136:748 Ap 30 '24 30w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:331 Je '24

"The most interesting and informing chapters of her book are those devoted to Chinese women."

+ R of Rs 69:559 My '24 120w

"Her book is a valuable contribution not only to the literature of travel but to the history of the feminist movement in one of its most picturesque and unexpected localities."

+ Sat R 138:46 Jl 12 '24 220w

Spec 132:976 Je 14 '24 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p333 My 29 '24 750w

Wis Lib Bul 20:177 Jl '24

SEYMOUR, WILLIAM KEAN. Caesar remembers, and other poems. 56p $1.50 Seltzer

821 23-17207

"This volume is an unassorted reprint of poems from various epochs in the life of a British poet. There are a few poems that create a sense of the weird and supernatural, and some that are grotesquely laden with exotic detail; parrots, monkeys, ivory, ebony, jade, silver, peacocks. Two of the poems are bitter denunciations—notable for concentrated directness—and one, after which the volume is named, expresses how little the author values any success which does not mean the creation of beauty."—Lit R

Reviewed by Margaret Widdemer

Int Bk R p645 Ag '24 200w

"He preaches the religion of beauty far more successfully than he is able to practice it. Perhaps it is this very habit of preaching that desiccates parts of his verse. Perhaps it is a curious infelicity, an occasional choice of banal, prosaic, even ridiculous words that sometimes spoils the harmony of his effects. Fortunately these errors are few, and certainly the dignity and earnestness of some of his poems are fitly clothed."

+ — Lit R p498 F 2 '24 220w

"English poems of varying skill and charm by a twentieth century Marvell."

Nation 118:486 Ap 23 '24 140w

"His sonnets are like his ballads, all grace and craftsmanship, but with nothing bitter or gripping in them." Milton Raison

+ — N Y Tribune p18 Ja 13 '24 150w

SHADWELL, ARTHUR. Drink in 1914-1922; a lesson in control. 245p $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

178 Liquor traffic 23-18094

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Booklist 20:282 My '24

"Written in the spirit of science rather than of partizanship. Students of the subject will find it an impartial and excellent monograph." E. L. Shuman

+ Int Bk R p253 F '24 80w

"The book is one which should be studied by everyone who proposes to reflect, speak, or write on the subject."

+ Nation and Ath 34:388 D 8 '23 80w

N Y Times p21 Ja 6 '24 1050w

Survey 51:720 Mr 15 '24 150w

SHANE, ELIZABETH. By bog and sea in Donegal. 64p il $1.25 Appleton [3s 6d Selwyn & B.]
821 24-6682

Verses about Irish scenes and people, by an Irish poet.

"Miss Shane is a true poet. She has a sense of perception that can grasp the essence of a beautiful thing, and the skill wherewith to depict it gracefully and poignantly. In the present book she mingles humor and lightness, pathos and melancholy; and vignettes alternate with etchings."
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 24 '24 300w

"Lullabies that recall the best in the English language (Robert Southwell's, Nicholas Breton's, George Wither's, Robert Greene's); bubbling song-tunes with a grip upon the human affections; things which, in our day and generation, seem almost curiosities. Here are simplicity, sensuousness, true passion. This poetry has a sharply 'local,' yet a universally understandable quality." L. C. Woodman
+ Lit R p614 Mr 22 '24 850w
Wis Lib Bul 20:175 Jl '24

SHANKS, EDWARD BUXTON. Richest man. 294p $2 Knopf [7s 6d Collins]
24-15677

"The richest man insists upon being known as a moderately wealthy person named Williams. His identity is discovered by Hollis, an amusing soldier of fortune. Hollis blackmails Williams. The millionaire refuses to part with £10,000. The narrator, a Cambridge professor, who has accidentally made Hollis's acquaintance and is traveling with him, is called upon to save the situation. Williams is at the moment engaged in preventing a European war by prohibiting the re-establishment of a German monarchy. The solution would seem to be to give Hollis the sum he demands. But Williams's psychology makes this impossible. He has mental courage and obstinacy; he refuses to be bullied. Finally, Professor Daubney holding off Hollis, Williams defeats the Hohenzollern pretender. At the end there is an attempt to murder the richest man and the wrong person is killed."—N Y Tribune

"It is a fascinating and readable hammock romance." C. W.
+ Lit R p954 Ag 9 '24 200w

"'The Richest Man' is a melodrama, fantastic in conception, leisurely in action, true to its proposed end of providing us with a thrill, but often looking wistfully towards milder methods and less sensational events." L. P. Hartley
Nation and Ath 34:380 D 8 '23 120w

"There is both imagination and suspense in this story. The imagination is centered in the individuality of the characters, who turn out to be rather unusual persons."
+ N Y Times p24 Je 22 '24 500w

"The volume is a two-fold disappointment; it has no touch of the daintiness used in 'The Isle of Youth' lyrics, and the strength of the author's critical essays does not find expression in his adventure book. This seems especially unfortunate in that the story is not particularly adventuresome. The book is easy and light reading; it fills an afternoon." Dorothy Borg
— + N Y Tribune p23 Jl 20 '24 440w

"The background of the tale has charm and the style, with its hints of Stevenson and Conrad, carries one along pleasantly. Mr. Shanks is a good deal better at creating atmosphere than at constructing a plot of really ingenious thrills. What plot the story has is neither carried off with a high hand as pure fantasy or made thoroughly plausible as a straight mystery story."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:33 Ag 9 '24 210w

"Mr. Shanks has done his very best to entertain us, and indeed, the present writer was entertained—up to a point. But he would have been more entertained if either Mr. Shanks had written in a more serious way, or if the book had been written by some less serious person than its author. The present writer can enjoy low-brow literature with the best of them; it is only the imitation low-brow which he finds sticks ever so slightly in his throat."
— + Spec 132:296 F 23 '24 280w

SHANNON, MARTHA A. S. Boston days of William Morris Hunt. 165p il $5 Marshall Jones
B or 92 Hunt, William Morris

William Morris Hunt, 1824-1879, was an American portrait, landscape and figure painter and an inspiring teacher of large classes of students. This book relates to his years in Boston where he settled down in 1862, to remain for the rest of his life and exercise a great influence on the development of American art of that day, an influence which made Boston for a time the leading art center. Some 40 reproductions of his paintings illustrate the book.

Reviewed by H. A. Read
+ Bookm 59:75 Mr '24 1500w

"The most interesting part of Miss Shannon's narrative is that which has to do with the setting in which Hunt carried on his work here. She has ingeniously and successfully recreated the atmosphere of his environment, giving a tableau of the Boston of the sixties which is obviously quite veracious and as certainly most entertaining." W: H. Downes
+ Boston Transcript p1 D 8 '23 2400w
Nation 118:sup453 Ap 16 '24 80w
New Repub 38:106 Mr 19 '24 150w

"The present study is charmingly and sympathetically written, it is profusely illustrated with examples of Hunt's best known portraits, groups and landscapes, some apparently now reproduced for the first time, and forms an adequate and fitting memorial of an unselfish and brilliant life that will not cease to be an inspiration to artists, in and out of America, for years to come." H: L. Stuart
+ N Y Times p1 F 3 '24 2300w

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Saint Joan; a chronicle play in six scenes and an epilogue. 163p $2.25 Brentano's [6s Constable]
822 Jeanne d'Arc—Drama 24-16535

"Saint Joan itself, not only its authorship, is a surprise. Mr. Shaw's heart has been touched; and he has surrendered. Joan of Arc bowled him over. The effect upon him has been to make him do two things which he has never done in a play before. In his quality as dramatic artist he has created a living being, a woman, of profound and endearing beauty: a tomboy, a madcap, a saint. Is she the historical Joan of Arc? There is no telling; and it does not matter. She is, we prophesy, henceforth as much alive and as real as Imogen or as Becky Sharp. Secondly, in his quality as philosopher Mr. Shaw has acquired and been able to reveal the one quality that he chiefly lacked: the quality that is most conveniently called reverence, but which includes pity and good will."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 21:18 O '24
Bookm 59:729 Ag '24 420w
Cleveland p86 N '24
Dial 77:524 D '24 100w

"Nothing could be simpler than the plan which Mr. Shaw laid out. But within its slight compass range ideas fraught with meaning for subsequent generations and having the most poignant bearing on human relationships." H. de W. F.
+ Ind 112:54 Ja 19 '24 600w

"Effective, ironic, intelligent—a strong satire and a noble piece of work. Yet, somehow, failing to be more than that. The deeper irony, the profounder vision, the nobler language which might have built on this keen, clean framework a great work of art, a monument of enduring literature—these Mr. Shaw does not and cannot give us. He remains original, clever in the best sense, wiser than most, and honest in his craft, but without the greatness of the inevitable artist. The story of Joan is still to be written in its ultimate form."

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD—Continued
+ — Ind 113:106 Ag 16 '24 600w

"After the dreariness of 'Back to Methuselah' I confess that I, too, found 'Saint Joan' more than usually interesting, but neither as a stage play nor in book form did it impress me as much as 'Heartbreak House.' The reason is that Shaw's attempt to rationalize the figure of Joan, while preserving at the same time her saintly and heroic character, does not awaken any response in me. One may either reduce the Maid to such terms as Anatole France did, or emotionalize her; but Shaw tries to do both, and his peculiar form of rationalized sentimentality leaves me cold. It is this sentimentality, however, which has clearly captured his English critics, who declare that at last Bernard Shaw's heart has been touched." Ernest Boyd
+ — Lit R p978 Ag 23 '24 1150w

"The background of his play and his characters is intellectual and, in a sense, universal. That does not convert his characters into sermons or arguments, and is itself, I think, one reason why his play is a work of art." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 35:511 Jl 19 '24 1200w

Reviewed by Stark Young
New Repub 37:205 Ja 16 '24 1250w

"There are scenes and speeches in some of Mr. Shaw's plays which gain through exposure to the more deliberate process of reading. 'Saint Joan' is not one of those plays. It is from beginning to end magnificently actable." D. M.
New Statesman 23:444 Jl 19 '24 1450w

"The reasonability of his long preface to 'Saint Joan' is both consistent and maintained. There is a deal of sound biographical research in it and while the Maid is stripped of her supernatural elements she yet remains a saint. No more light is thrown on her actual character than may be found, to note a random but excellent essay, in C. MacLaurin's 'The Problem of Jeanne D'Arc.' "
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 20 '24 2000w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky
N Y Times p4 Ag 10 '24 1300w

"In 'Saint Joan' Shaw has written one of the greatest prose dramas in the language; he has chosen materials for the first time which he thoroughly understands, and in commenting upon his play he has achieved a happy pleonasm; so happy, indeed, that I, for one, was sorry when he wound it up after eighty-four pages of elaboration." Burton Rascoe
+ N Y Tribune p21 Jl 13 '24 1650w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses
Outlook 138:510 N 26 '24 180w

"The eager critics who wrote that the lash of England had grown soft at last, were wrong, so much the reading of the play quickly demonstrates. There is not a trace of sentimentality in 'Saint Joan,' and very little sentiment." H: S. Canby
+ Sat R of Lit 1:4 Ag 2 '24 1700w

"Mr. Shaw gives us the delight of a poignant and well-ordered style, and at the same time stimulates and reinforces our minds." J. St L. Strachey
+ Spec 133:18 Jl 5 '24 2050w
Spec 133:652 N 1 '24 180w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 14 '24 700w
Springf'd Republican p5a O 19 '24 600w

"For the first time he has taken hold of something positive and shows that he knows how to handle it, and how to give it artistic life and form. He has a great deal to learn: first of all the advantage of avoiding flicks and flouts which distract from the force and movement of his story; and next the danger of excessive explanation. He can do what no other writer of his time can do; and that is write a tragedy naturally. He has the power of presenting character at once noble, beautiful, and unmistakably human."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Jl 3 '24 1800w
Wis Lib Bul 20:211 O '24

SHAY, FRANK, ed. Iron men & wooden ships; ² deep sea chanties. 154p $7.50 Doubleday
811.08 Chanties. Sea songs 25-2871

A collection of the deep-sea songs and chanties which sailors sang to enliven and give rhythm to their work. The chanties were never written out but handed on from one sailor to another. They belong in a special way, says the foreword, to the men of the clipper-ship era but they did not die out entirely with the coming of the steamer. These chanties have been gathered from many sources and authenticated by old sailors. The decorations and woodcuts are by Edward A. Wilson, and there is an introduction by William McFee.

"The tone of the book is rollicking. It makes no claim to be a scholarly study of chanties. It is intended frankly to entertain, and it does. . . The collection cannot be passed, indeed cannot properly be mentioned, without an enthusiastic word for Mr. Wilson's colored woodcuts and decorations. They are finely and gaily done in the spirit of the chanties." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p4 Ja 24 '25 700w
N Y Times p3 D 21 '24 450w

"The collection, as a whole, is decidedly interesting, though Mr. Shay has included one or two rather sophisticated ballads which seem a little out-of-place, especially when there is a wealth of material from which to chose." H: Beston
+ — N Y Tribune p2 N 16 '24 450w

SHENTON, EDWARD. Gray beginning. 300p $2 Penn
24-10840

" 'The Gray Beginning' is a biographic novel which depicts the childhood and the adolescence of a lonely youth who is potentially an artist. He is brought up in a little town of Pennsylvania; he goes up to Philadelphia, studies painting at the Academy of the Fine Arts, and finds a friend or two; he is caught up in the war and sent to France; he comes back to Philadelphia and marries; his marriage breaks up and leaves him lonely once again; and we part from him just as the public exposition of his first important picture gives promise of the dawn of his career."—Sat R of Lit

"Mr. Shenton has style and feeling and imagination, and, when he gets over a certain youthful feeling that it is necessary to bathe in sex, he will really write."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 21 '24 350w
Cleveland p66 S '24

"The author may be congratulated upon having carried through this book without any recourse to heroics. He is unsentimental and unpretentious, and pictures his hero honestly, without attempt to cast over him the glamor of the unusual. But by these very tokens he indicates an ability more suitable to a wholly objective, a maturer type of fiction." Eva Goldbeck
+ Lit R p926 Jl 26 '24 280w

"After reading a novel as true and as well written as 'The Gray Beginning,' one naturally wonders about the author. However, Mr. Shenton does not appear in the general books of reference and his name is not familiar—at least to this reviewer. Let it suffice that he is the author of at least one very good novel, and if it is his first, the more credit to him."
+ N Y Times p9 Je 1 '24 600w

"This novel is just a series of preliminary sketches; but there is a sure touch evidenced in it here and there. It is limited and incoherent, and permeated with a sense of exasperation at the rawness of raw material and the inartistic quality of nature; but it is genuine, fresh to the point of naivete. The author has got it off his chest. He can now proceed unhampered to a larger and less personal subject." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p24 Je 15 '24 680w

"This man, whoever he may be, is an artist and I know that he can write. He has sympathy and insight, he has culture and taste, he has poetry and charm, he has a wistful feeling for that joy of life whose hand is ever at his lips, bidding adieu; he has a keen sense of characterization, a proper appreciation of proportion, a decent reverence for form and order, and, above all, he is endowed with educated ears." Clayton Hamilton
+ Sat R of Lit 1:27 Ag 9 '24 450w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 10 '24 400w

SHEPARD, ARTHUR MACCARTNEY. Sea power in ancient history; with a foreword by Rear Admiral William A. Moffett. 286p il $5 Little
359 Greece—Navy. Rome—Navy. Sea power 24-10231

In his history of the navies of classic Greece and Rome the author shows the similarity of the problem of sea power in ancient times to the question of maritime supremacy today. He describes the ancient warships, the tactics and strategy of naval warfare and the chief events in Greek and Roman naval history from the time of the Graeco-Persian war to the fall of the western Roman Empire. The concluding chapter summarizes the influence of sea power on ancient history and civilization.

Reviewed by J. W. Pratt
Am Hist R 30:119 O '24 570w
Am Pol Sci R 18:828 N '24 240w
Booklist 21:64 N '24
Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '24 580w

"Mr Shepard is one of those hard-headed realists who harp on the connection between a strong navy and the greatness of a nation. He shows the enormous influence of sea power on the history of Greece and Rome, and dwells on the relation between the supremacy of the Athenian navy and the 'golden age' of Greece, and how the 'Pax Romana' was due so largely to Rome's naval strength in and after the battle of Actium." N: Roosevelt
N Y Times p12 Je 8 '24 1150w

"A close study of ancient exploits on the sea that will reward the reader."
+ N Y World p7e My 18 '24 140w

SHEPARD, FREDERICK JOB, comp. Index to illustrations. Preliminary ed 89p $1 A.L.A.
016 Pictures—Indexes 24-26753

The outgrowth of a suggestion to form a picture index by combining the lists already made by various reference librarians, this index is made up of references furnished by eleven of our larger libraries to pictures actually asked for or likely to be asked for. The references are to artistic as well as common and popular subjects.

Booklist 21:5 O '24

SHEPHERD, WILLIAM GUNN. Boy's own book of politics. 215p il $2 Macmillan
329 Politics, Practical 23-14937

" 'American boys ought to be experts in politics. . . They ought to understand politics both good and bad.' If they read this book carefully they certainly will understand much more about politics than most boys do. Here are some of the questions which it raises and answers: Why are political parties? How do men get into politics? Who picks your candidate? What is a political boss? How are the ballots counted? How does a man run for President? How shall I mark the ballot?" —Boston Transcript

"The information is presented in a thoroughly live manner and should stimulate an interest in civic affairs."
+ Booklist 20:223 Mr '24

"The writer knows politics and he knows boys, and he has done much to bring both together to the advantage of both in the future."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 17 '24 70w
R of Rs 69:222 F '24 60w
Wis Lib Bul 20:99 Ap '24

SHERMAN, STUART PRATT. My dear Cornelia. 281p $2.50 Atlantic monthly
814 24-24601

This volume records the conversations of Cornelia and Professor Sherman, some of which were published in the Atlantic Monthly. The subjects discussed are of keen interest. The volume is divided into the following five books: Book One: Challenging the idea of chastity; Book Two: An eligible young man; Book Three: Treating of modern girls; Book Four: Cornelia and Dionysus; Book Five: Approaching religion and other grave matters.

Booklist 21:104 D '24
Bookm 60:343 N '24 90w

"The book will be considered liberal by some, and straightlaced by others, which speaks well for its essential sanity."
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 1 '24 190w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Ind 113:373 N 8 '24 750w

"These conversations seem to me an unusually successful attempt to turn current controversy to something at once, clear, humane. and entertaining." Erwin Edman
+ Nation 119:641 D 10 '24 1050w

"In conception it strikes one as a trifle sentimental; there is a thinness to which he has not accustomed us; and we have a haunting sense that not a little contained in the pages Professor Sherman has said before and said more effectively. Notwithstanding this, there is no inconsiderable display of sagacity and what in the broadest and best sense may be called uprightness." P. A. Hutchison
— + N Y Times p23 O 5 '24 180w

"A searchlight, deftly fingering among the unnecessary confusions of this immediate time, picking out distinctive and important features, sweeping to a glittering level of dust much that some imagine of great and novel value—that is the impression given by this enjoyable book. On religion the author is less convincing, and there is one weak spot in this agreeable book, a really inexcusable breach of taste on the part of the impeccable Cornelia." C. P. Gilman
+ — N Y Tribune p4 N 2 '24 870w
N Y World p8e N 30 '24 550w

"The subjects themselves are of unlimited 'human interest,' and they are treated by Professor Sherman with characteristic wit, humor and good sense."
+ R of Rs 71:112 Ja '25 100w

"Mr Sherman's wisdom and equanimity, while he makes it clear that nothing but love of ugliness could have prompted the exploitations of sex associated with such writers as Ben Hecht, Waldo Frank and Sherwood Anderson, are somewhat hard pressed in the airy conversational style that he elects in 'My Dear Cornelia.' "
Springf'd Republican p6 N 17 '24 390w

SHERMAN, STUART PRATT. Points of view. 363p $2 Scribner
814 American literature. Literary criticism 24-27630

In this group of critical studies Mr Sherman discusses present-day standards, literary and social, in America. Contents: Towards an American type; Forty and upwards; Unprintable; For the higher study of American literature; W. C. Brownell; On falling in hate; On falling in love; American style; An apology for essayists of the press; The significance of Sinclair Lewis; Where there are no Rotarians; Mr. Tarkington on the midland personality;

SHERMAN, S. P.—Continued
Oscar S. Straus; Brander Matthews and the Mohawks; A note on Gertrude Stein; Samuel Butler; Diogenes of the Victorians; The Disraelian irony; George Sand and Gustave Flaubert.

Booklist 21:144 Ja '25

"Mr. Sherman has kept his sanity and is growing to understand what is worth while in the new, and there is something, as well as what was worthwhile in that which is now classic. The author of 'Points of View,' however, in his development has not sacrificed his earlier beliefs, but he has widened his sympathies, and these essays are, in the reviewer's opinion, the best that have come from his pen." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 29 '24 600w

"In his new book, the same curious inconsistency and indifference to real values are noticeable, as in each of his previous volumes." Ernest Boyd
— Ind 113:457 N 29 '24 1350w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman
Nation 119:641 D 10 '24 280w

Reviewed by H: B. Fuller
New Repub 41:204 Ja 14 '25 700w

"Professor Sherman writes with ease and reasonability. He employs dialectics to good purpose. He is good-natured and urbane and suave and witty."
+ N Y Times p6 N 16 '24 600w

"This is indeed an impressive array of dominant ideals, and he would be a bold fellow who would undertake to belittle cleanness and intelligence and swift mobility. It cannot be denied, however, that he is an essayist of quite exceptional vigour and versatility, and some of the essays reprinted in this volume are among the best he has written." Newton Arvin
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a D 7 '24 1050w

SHERRILL, CHARLES HITCHCOCK. Purple or the red. 318p il $3 Doran

321.7 Bolshevism. Kings and rulers. Europe—Politics and government 24-9017

The author, an American who denies any belief in the divine right of kings, looks upon the few sovereigns now left in Europe as useful factors in the struggle against Bolshevism. He believes that republics lack the antidote to Bolshevik ideas which is provided in a kingdom by loyalty to the crown as symbolized by the king. He goes thru the kingdoms of Europe, outlines the activities of the reds and describes the personalities of the sovereigns and the new use which he has discovered for them. He concludes with a chapter on the Japanese royal house as a bulwark against Bolshevism on the Pacific.

Am Pol Sci R 18:656 Ag '24 40w

Reviewed by Howard Devree
N Y Times p10 Ap 6 '24 1300w

"Gen. Sherrill's utter cocksureness occasionally mars the logic of his argument for Kings and against the Red. If he could manage to be less certain at times, he probably would be more convincing." M. M.
N Y World p7e My 25 '24 400w

"Fascinating volume, instinct with both subjective and objective personality." W. F. Johnson
+ No Am 220:177 S '24 380w

"The book is pleasant enough reading, and not without a certain value." H: W. Bunn
+ — Outlook 136:567 Ap 2 '24 1150w
R of Rs 69:559 My '24 120w
St Louis p370 N '24

SHERRILL, CHARLES HITCHCOCK. Stained glass tours in Spain and Flanders. 245p il $3.50 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]

748 Stained glass 24-12869

A guide to the best stained glass windows of Spain and its one-time province of medieval Flanders. No finer windows exist than some in Seville, Toledo, Leon, Avila, Granada, etc. and since the Low Countries were provinces of Spain during the heyday of Renaissance glass some of the finest specimens are to be seen there. There are seventeen full-page illustrations and two maps.

Boston Transcript p3 Je 28 '24 200w

"Spain is rich in beautiful windows, and Mr. Sherrill has hunted them out and presented them to us in a charming manner. The traveler interested in cathedrals will find the book of value." S. F. Reavis
+ Int Bk R p530 Je '24 110w
Lit R p17 N 15 '24 420w
New Statesman 23:104 My 3 '24 500w

"Were we to eliminate from this volume all that its author says about stained glass we would still have a most readable book about the countries he visited in his quest of specimens of this noble branch of art, for Mr. Sherrill has an eye for the beauties of nature and a cultivated taste for splendid architecture, and knows how to paint vivid pictures of the things he sees." Ryan Walker
+ N Y Times p15 My 25 '24 820w
Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 20w

"It becomes a little tiring to read successive enumerations of warm hues, blushing colours and strong rich tones; the reader soon finds himself exclaiming against such superficiality and regretting that his author, with so wide and varied an experience, had not delved deeper into such an interesting subject. Yet within its compass, the book is a good one."
— + Spec 132:510 Mr 29 '24 200w
Wis Lib Bul 20:174 Jl '24

SHIEL, MATTHEW PHIPPS. Lord of the sea. 299p $2.50 Knopf

24-28226

Carl Van Vechten, in his introduction, tells of the literary accident which brought about the republication of "The Lord of the sea" after twenty-three years. He also gives a sketch of the author's life and a list of his works. The central character of this story is Richard Hogarth, who is a Christian peon on the estate of his Jewish overlord, located at Thring, Norfolk. Hogarth, on the charge of disobedience to a Jewish law is cast into prison, and altho his friends several times attempt to aid in his escape, he makes no effort to leave his cell, for he is imbued with an idea which, if materialized, would revolutionize society. The execution of his plans involve him in most hazardous escapades—but events move swiftly and Richard Hogarth finally becomes "the Lord of the sea."

"Mr. Shiel is an imaginative writer. His imagination has but few limits and he knows the trick of telling a tale. But he is a poor grammarian and his style is so utterly lacking in beauty or character that to read this book, at least, is a task indeed." K. S.
— + Boston Transcript p2 N 15 '24 650w
N Y Times p9 O 5 '24 1100w

"I firmly believe that the escape from prison in the first half of 'The Lord of the Sea' is one of the great romantic things in our literature. . . He is just about the best Romantic writer we have alive in England to-day." Hugh Walpole
+ N Y Tribune p3 S 28 '24 850w

SHIPLEY, SIR ARTHUR EVERETT. Life. 204p il $2.50 Macmillan [5s Cambridge univ. press]

570 Biology

A simple, readable text on biology, for the elementary student or the layman, written by the master of Christ's college, Cambridge. The book emphasizes the unity of life, whether it be plant-life or animal life, and the interrelation of living organisms one with another and with their surroundings.

"The author writes with rare skill and sympathy. His absorption in the subject enthralls his readers. This book would be wasted on American schoolboys, unless they possessed as cultivated a teacher as the author evidently appears to be. Readers who are sufficiently mature to appreciate the clarity with which so vast a subject is offered them will find this a remarkable book."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 1 '24 150w

"It is not only lucidly but engagingly written."
+ Nature 114:6 Jl 5 '24 800w

"About its interest there can be no doubt, for it not only presents leading principles and facts in an eminently readable way, but illuminates these with a great variety of literary allusions not usually pressed into the service of natural science."
+ New Statesman 23:106 My 3 '24 300w

"A small, popular, entertaining, well-illustrated, and attractive introductory book on biology."
+ Outlook 136:404 Mr 5 '24 20w

"Literary and humorous."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p68 Ja 31 '24 40w

Wis Lib Bul 20:173 Jl '24

SHOWERMAN, GRANT. Eternal Rome, the city and its people from the earliest times to the present day. 2v 332;335-650p il $10 Yale univ. press

945.6 Rome (city)—History 24-13041

"Professor Grant Showerman has chosen the history of the city itself as the subject of his work, 'Eternal Rome.' But, inevitably, the two entities, the empire and the municipality, are so intertwined that no account of the one can be made complete or clear without a parallel indication of the fortunes of the other. It is equally impossible to dissociate altogether the history of modern Italy from that of its great and growing capital. This book, therefore, becomes at one stage almost a history of the world of antiquity and ends by telling in summary the cruel, brave struggle for Italian unity and independence, which was only ended by the sacrifices of the great war."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 21:64 N '24

"Stupendous as is his subject, Dr. Showerman neither halts nor hurries his clear, concise method of survey and of analysis. Its absolute clarity, in spite of the multitudinous detail of its data has not been excelled in any previous study of Rome, and not often has it been equalled. This is saying much. But the reader will agree that it is not over-statement." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 21 '24 1050w

N Y Times p1 Jl 20 '24 1750w

"Professor Showerman's style is level with his theme; his English is nervous and exact; he is a master of the necessary noun and of the inevitable adjective; and now and again he falls from grace. It grieved me greatly to find him guilty of retaining the Latin plural of nouns long solidly established in our hospitable tongue." Brander Matthews
+ — Outlook 139:133 S 24 '24 1300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p542 S 4 '24 100w

SHURICK, ADAM THOMAS. Coal industry. 383p il $3.50 Little

553.2 Coal 24-16204

A complete history of the coal industry from the mine to the coal bin, divided into four parts: The coal fields; Mining methods; Distribution of coal; Economic and sociological conditions. The book contains illustrations, an appendix of statistical tables and an index.

Booklist 21:95 D '24

"There are many able works in literature on coal, dealing with the different problems of the industry from a technical point of view. This is perhaps the first attempt to cover the entire field in a single volume, in language intended specifically for the layman. It is at once a thorough history and description of the industry." J. G.
+ Bookm 60:adv D '24 200w

"Engineers will find in this book much information of value to them because it is written by an engineer of experience in the field of coal mining. What he has gathered under one cover could not be obtained otherwise except by a painstaking search through the many books, periodicals, and documents dealing with the subject."
Eng N 93:310 Ag 21 '24 180w

"An attempt to present to the non-technical reader an accurate, comprehensive, unprejudiced picture of the characteristic phases of the coal industry without too much detail and statistical material."
J Home Econ 16:657 N '24 100w

Reviewed by C. M. Morrison
Lit R p972 Ag 16 '24 130w

"Mr. Shurick does not write vividly or skilfully, and the absorbing human interests in the story of coal mining are implicit rather than expressed. Fortunately much is accomplished by a generous use of pictures." W. D. Lane
— + Nation 119:472 O 29 '24 1000w

"Mr. Shurick with admirable clearness and simplicity describes the coal industry in all its phases. Based on long years of familiarity with the subject, his book is full of instructive information." N: Roosevelt
+ No Am 220:189 S '24 380w

R of Rs 70:223 Ag '24 60w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 31 '24 50w

SIBREE, JAMES. Fifty years in Madagascar; personal experiences of mission life and work. 359p il $4 Houghton [12s 6d Allen & U.]

266 Madagascar. Missions—Madagascar [24-21954]

"Beginning work in Madagascar in 1863 as the architect of the memorial churches to be erected by the London Missionary Society, the author of this work provides a vivid account of varied experiences as a missionary for fifty-two years. He gives a full and interesting narrative of Malagasy religion and the efforts of the Society with which he has been so long associated."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"To anyone interested in missionary work this will be an astounding revelation of the divine which dwells in man."
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 10 '24 500w

"Interesting in itself as the volume is, numerous illustrations make it much more so. Some of these pictures would cause you to imagine yourself in a village of Merrie England or modern Virginia. Many others, by their diversity and contrast, reveal the great vicissitudes which Madagascar has experienced." W. C. Stevens
+ Lit R p14 O 4 '24 650w

New Statesman 22:710 Mr 22 '24 100w

"Dr. Sibree has written a most interesting and illuminating book. I wouldn't have missed it for anything."
+ N Y Times p7 N 23 '24 640w

"It is all, at best, piecemeal writing. The most valuable portion of it, we should hazard, is the enlightenment on superstition and primitive worship, the accounts of martyrdom before and during the last half century, native abilities in oratory and music, and further matters appealing to those of an anthropological turn of mind. For the merely curious layman, there is considerable akin to apathy." D: McCord
— + Sat R of Lit 1:146 S 27 '24 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p131 F 28 '24 200w

SICHEL, WALTER SYDNEY. Sands of time, recollections and reflections; a meeting with people of note. 343p il $7.50 Doran [18s Hutchinson]

B or 92 [24-4529]

"It is page 142 of these memoirs before Mr. Sichel leaves Oxford and begins life, but he succeeds in making each of these pages most interesting. Early days in London; Harrow in the 'sixties, with the author exchanging pert verses with Andrew Lang; Balliol under Jowett, of whom he gives a goodish portrait—enough happened to and around the author in the days of his exuberant youth for him to fill 142 pages to-day from a memory unaided by diaries, yet to fill them with only first-class fare. Then early journalism and the Bar. Mr. Sichel was brilliant and prolific as a journalist. . . His circle of friends has been wide: George Eliot, Matthew Arnold, Ruskin, Browning, Swinburne, Irving, Miss Ellen Terry, John Toole, Millais, Leighton; Trollope, Mrs. Humphry Ward, Cardinal Manning, Lord Chief Justice of Cockburn—these by no means exhaust the list of eminent Victorians whom he has personally known. His pages literally blossom with stories, many of them new, and nearly all worth telling."—Sat R

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence
Boston Transcript p5 My 10 '24 1200w

"To say the truth, we are not very much impressed by Mr. Sichel's political opinions. His heroes among statesmen are Disraeli and Mussolini. He will have no truck with the modern spirit in diplomacy. . . There is no doubt about his being a Victorian, but that, we cannot help thinking after reading these pages, was a very pleasant thing to be." Arnold Whitridge
+ — Lit R p788 My 31 '24 700w

"With elaborate perambulation, and no sign of embarrassment, and often without the slightest justification, he tells the most bewhiskered jokes."
— N Y Times p11 Ap 27 '24 1100w

"Here is a superlative example of that English Dulness which is so precious because so exotic." Guy Eglington
— N Y Tribune p23 Ag 10 '24 950w

"Anecdote and incident abound on every page of this interesting volume; retorts by Sarah Bernhardt; notes by Whistler and Oscar Wilde; quips by Barrie and Tree. A most agreeable melange!"
+ N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 260w

"We heartily recommend these memoirs to those who relish crisp, enthusiastic, and witty writing."
+ Sat R 136:445 O 20 '23 650w
Spec 132:372 Mr 8 '24 300w

SIDGWICK, ETHEL. Laura; a cautionary [2] story. 474p $2.50 Small [7s 6d Sidgwick & J.] 24-29189

"It is essential in attacking a novel by Miss Ethel Sidgwick to have a mind at leisure and all attention; if it is preoccupied or hurried, the intricate pattern of the web she weaves will bore and irritate it, and the delicacy of her gradual completion of a subtle design will never be realized. [This novel] treats of the effect of seventeen-year-old Laura, orphaned, on two schoolboys and a country doctor; and the mass of implication, cross-suggestion, and what looks like irrelevant statement, is tremendous. Still, with patience, a story—we feel ashamed to mention such a thing—and well-defined characters emerge from the mist and blether, and reward the reader. Laura, brilliant and firm, emerges, the eternal tormentor of man, herself from infancy and for ever the centre of the universe, a universe arranged to suit her purpose and set her off. She is the woman of imagination, of pose, of deliberate as well as of unconscious seduction, able to leave no male alone, playing off one against the other, remaking each in the image she prefers at the moment."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"There is this to be said for her quiet, digressive manner of narration; one has leisure to learn to know Laura, and it is no small incidental pleasure to watch the novelist 'developing' the girl, bringing out the essential heartlessness, rendering the character more vivid and more appalling. Thus the latter half of the story is by far the more interesting. Had the rest of the book been on a level with the last two hundred pages, 'Laura' would have been a 'big' novel. As it is it remains a 'cautionary' story in more senses than one." J. F. S.
+ — Boston Transcript p6 N 5 '24 500w

"It is a delicately worked out, subtle study, done with a fine restraint that makes it the more convincing. . . The complex structure of the plot is handled in masterly fashion, and the story will hold any one's attention, simply as narrative. But its chief importance remains in the brilliant study of character; especially that of Laura herself." H. L. Pangborn
+ Lit R p14 D 13 '24 460w

"The author asks us to believe Laura did these things. Intending no rudeness, I simply don't. It is not convincing. At moments it becomes absurd. Miss Sidgwick wrote two or three extraordinarily appealing novels, dealing with people one wanted to believe in. I thought she would slough off her mannerisms. She has instead hugged them to her, elaborated them until they are apparently her chief concern. The result is words—words—words. It is more than disappointing; it is exasperating." Isabel Paterson
— N Y Tribune p14 D 14 '24 800w

"'Laura' is a delightful book, but if you are given to 'skimming' steer clear of it, because every word must be read. If once you lose touch with the current, you are certain to be lost forever. It is an ample, leisurely book through which it is possible to wander slowly with a keen and twinkling pleasure." L: Bromfield
+ Sat R of Lit 1:376 D 13 '24 760w

"Laura emerges from this cautionary tale a triumph for Miss Sidgwick; but this is by no means her best book."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p820 D 4 '24 350w

SIEMENS, HERMANN WERNER. Race hygiene and heredity; tr. and ed. by Lewellys F. Barker. 178p il $2 (5s) Appleton

613.94 Eugenics 24-21105

A brief introduction to the biological foundations of race hygiene. The book gives an outline of the facts of inheritance as established by biological research, explains the causes of race degeneration and the factors which influence race hygiene, and, finally, suggests economic and legislative measures looking toward race improvement.

"This small, compact, forceful study by Dr. Siemens of Munich has done much to focus the attention of the thoughtful upon the problem in Europe. It has had very wide circulation, especially in Sweden and the Scandinavian countries as well as in Germany. Dr. Barker renders an excellent service in providing a good English version." H. L. Pangborn
+ Lit R p6 S 27 '24 720w

"A popular treatise on human heredity and eugenics. The author, Dr. Siemens, has not, so far as I am aware, made any noteworthy contributions to knowledge in these fields by dint of his own researches. The result is that the wares offered seem a trifle second-hand and shop-worn. While there seems to be nothing positively wrong about the little treatise there are certainly better books than this on the subject of eugenics, already at hand in both German and English. The translation is excellent." Raymond Pearl
— + Sat R of Lit 1:262 N 8 '24 180w

"Part of the book is excellently written, and the translation is above reproach. But readers must remember that the last chapters are speculative and, to some extent, propagandist." J. K. H.
+ Survey 53:242 N 15 '24 80w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p803 N 27 '24 220w

SIKES, EDWARD ERNEST. Roman poetry. 280p $3.50 Dutton [8s 6d Methuen]
871 Latin poetry [23-18649]

The book is not a history of Latin poetry but rather a group of essays on the theory of Latin poetry as revealed by its critics and the place of the poet as an interpreter of Roman life. The essays discuss also the influence of nature and of philosophy on Roman poetry, language and style in Latin verse and its ornaments—repetition, alliteration and assonance.

"The chapters are uneven in value. Mr. Sikes is sound so far as he goes, but he chooses only to dip into the theme." Tenney Frank
+ — Lit R p665 Ap 12 '24 650w

"It does not catalogue the well known facts of Roman literary history, but assumes the reader's familiarity with them, and interprets them. It does not fail to appreciate, but its chief effort is to lay better foundations for appreciation. It goes to the roots of the matter." Grant Showerman
+ New Repub 38:345 My 21 '24 500w

"A very charming feature is a series of the author's own versions, in fluent verse, of many of the more familiar poems of Virgil, Horace and Lucretius, as well as the work of some of the later and less known writers. His appreciations are essentially intrinsic." H: L. Stuart
+ N Y Times p13 Je 29 '24 1450w

"Wit, scholarship, and warm humanity conspire to produce a readable and instructive sort of book under this not very exciting title."
+ Outlook 136:615 Ap 9 '24 130w

SILLARS, JOHN. Gavin Douglas. 317p $2 Small [6s Blackwood]
24-17902

James Douglas, K.C. hated all women because he fancied his divorced wife had been unfaithful. Determined that his young son should be brought up free of their influence he retired with him to a lonely island off the coast of Scotland. Gavin grew up in this strange womanless Eden, but when one day a beautiful American girl came to the island he fell in love with her and wooed her so violently that she shot him in order to make her escape. Gavin, now as bitter against women as his father, went to Egypt to live with an uncle. Five years later Gavin met the same girl and this time the meeting had a happier ending.

"Mr. Sillars tries nobly to be just like Scott; but somehow it doesn't sound quite right." A. D. Douglas
— Int Bk R p858 N '24 100w

"The story is deftly written, the plot is unhackneyed, the language vigorous and spirited, the characters drawn with bold, convincing strokes." E. B. S.
+ Lit R p985 Ag 23 '24 300w

"It is a wildly improbable yarn that Mr. John Sillars tells in 'Gavin Douglas,' but none the less entertaining for that. The manner of its telling is such that there are times when one quite forgets that the characters are all but impossible and the plot is based upon a series of coincidences so incredible as to strain one's powers of belief to the utmost."
+ — N Y Times p22 N 2 '24 600w

"The whole narrative is a series of disjointed episodes; the sequence is purely chronological. It might be better read in snatches; there are many sparkling paragraphs and pretty colored words; but the structure of the whole goes dead against the best architectural principles, which are applicable to all the arts." Isabel Paterson
— N Y Tribune p25 Ag 10 '24 1200w

SILVERS, EARL REED. Barry the undaunted. 263p $1.75 (6s) Appleton
24-7951

"The story concerns school-life in the United States and is a tale of the energetic campaign of a popular girl in Cranford High School. She is the recognized and avowed leader of the girls of her class and of the school. Naturally, the boys assumed a monopoly of athletics, though accepting the girls in the association as sustaining members. Waking up to their own capabilities and the possibilities of athletic activities for them, the girls, under the aggressive leadership of Barry Browning, organize their basketball team, and demand their rights and privileges in the membership of the athletic association." —Boston Transcript

"It is an excellent story for American school girls, and any boy who enjoys the advantage of co-education in the high grade, will suffer no loss of manly prestige if he also reads it."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 11 '24 120w

"It is the clear portrayal of school life, written from the points of view of the participants, and there is an abundance of dialog." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p616 Jl '24 180w
N Y Tribune p26 Jl 20 '24 60w

SIM, FRANCES M. (MRS W. A. SIM). Robert Browning, poet and philosopher, 1850-1889. 251p $3 Appleton [10s 6d Unwin]
B or 92 Browning, Robert

This volume continues the biographical criticism of the poet begun in "Robert Browning, the poet and the man, 1833-1846." (Book Review Digest, 1923) As in the earlier volume the author reads the story of Browning's life thru the poems of the period covered, presenting the poems in chronological order in their setting of personal history and public events.

Reviewed by Robert Graves
Nation and Ath 34:493 D 29 '23 160w
Reviewed by Llewelyn Powys
N Y Times p12 Mr 23 '24 350w

SIMONDS, ALVAN TRACY. Business fundamentals. 221p $2.25 Ronald
658 Business 23-17949

"The president of the Simonds saw and steel company presents, under one hundred general headings, the principles of successful business as conceived by him after analysis of the methods of successful men."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Boston Transcript p3 F 23 '24 100w

"Mr. Simonds takes himself very seriously in his formulation of theories which have done good service during the last half century. But he puts forth the various lessons which make up his book with so much modesty and good sense that the reader is apt to forget that he has traveled the same ground over and over again."
— + N Y Times p24 F 24 '24 400w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:367 Jl '24

SIMPSON, PATRICK CARNEGIE. Church principles. 208p $1.75 Doran [5s Hodder & S.]
260 Church 24-5095

The book, which has grown out of the discussion in which the author has been engaged in connection with the Lambeth appeal for church unity, is neither controversial nor denominational. It emphasizes some fundamental principles of the church's life and order and the vital relation of Christ to his people and of his people to each other.

J Religion 4:331 My '24 60w

SIMPSON, PATRICK C.—Continued

"It is a vigorous statement of the leading elements of the Church's life and organization written by a Presbyterian divine who knows how to express his conviction clearly and attractively."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 3 '24 120w

SIMPSON, ROBERT. Eight panes of glass. 301p $2 Stokes

24-4871

"Eight panes of glass—a cottage window overlooking a country crossroads, half a dozen homes and a bit of the heather and sky beyond—frame the stage of the drama. The story unfolds under the eyes of Janet Cromarty, a canny, warmhearted old Scotchwoman, helpless in body but a moving force in the lives about her. Indeed, all Strathdarr brings its joys and sorrows, opinions and gossip to Janet's bedside, but it is the young people in whom she most delights. When handsome Roderick McKay returns from America with his pockets full of money and sets at least four hearts beating, it is Janet who is wise enough to know which heart should be his and which belong to three other youths of the village. By a bit of encouragement here, and a shrewd piece of maneuvering there, she manages to make the course of true love run smooth at last for four couples who find living not so simple as it appears."—Publisher's note

Booklist 20:341 Je '24

+ Boston Transcript p13 Mr 29 '24 1700w

"A brilliant study of the rural Scotland of which Barrie used to write." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 112:156 Mr 15 '24 300w

Int Bk R p742 S '24 280w

Lit R p618 Mr 22 '24 180w

"For those who possess a deep-seated antipathy to dialect stories, one can report that 'Eight Panes of Glass' boasts no glossary and does not need to. By an idiomatic juxtaposition of words and phrases, Mr. Simpson manages to impart to his prose the flavor, as it were, of the pungent Scots that his characters must in reality have talked. This effect seems a distinct advance, artistically, over the literary mosaic that resulted from a jumbling together of English and Gaelic colloquialisms, which writers so often resorted to in the past."

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 9 '24 850w

"An amazingly captivating and fascinatingly human story." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p6e Mr 23 '24 350w

Outlook 136:568 Ap 2 '24 250w

Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p598 S 25 '24 50w

Wis Lib Bul 20:127 My '24

2 SIMS, NEWELL LEROY. Society and its surplus; a study in social evolution. 581p $3 Appleton

301 Sociology 24-25811

Professor Sims presents an interesting study of social evolution in the physical world. He defines social surplus as "that residue of social energy possessed by any group after its mere existence demands have been provided for and satisfied," and it is this surplus which determines the extent and direction of social and economic progress. The subject is divided into three parts: Part I, Social power; part II, Social process; part III, Social progress.

Boston Transcript p5 D 13 '24 900w

"The book is more than ordinarily stimulating and challenging. Its chief defects are a certain academic quality in the style and treatment and a verbosity that is at times wearisome. Professor Sims is better in analysis and diagnosis than in prescription. He has, however, set down a theory of human development which requires attention." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p24 D 28 '24 1100w

Springf'd Republican p5a O 9 '24 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p803 N 27 '24 70w

SINCLAIR, BERTHA MUZZY. See Bower, B. M., pseud.

SINCLAIR, MAY. Arnold Waterlow. 446p $2.50 Macmillan

24-21511

"Arnold Waterlow" is a companion piece to "Mary Olivier." Beginning with the sensations and impressions of early childhood the book carries Arnold from his second year to middle life. He is a sensitive boy, devoted to his mother and often hurt by her preference for her older son Richard. The story is chiefly concerned with Arnold's relations to three women—his mother, Rosalind Verney and Effie Warren. Rosalind is a violinist whom Arnold has loved for years. He waits patiently for her infatuation for another man to spend itself, has a few brief years of married happiness with her, and when her pianist friend reasserts his power over her yields her up graciously, pledging himself to take her back when she desires to return. During her absence he finds the perfect companion in Effie Warren and lives with her for five years. When Rosalind signifies her readiness to return, Effie makes no protest, having accepted Arnold's terms, but dies of grief. Arnold appears to have been able to keep his love for two women and his loyalty to them.

Booklist 21:70 N '24

"The working of a child's mind, a sensitive child's mind, has never been better shown. Arnold is a mystic; and as a child mystic he is both believable and attractive. But when he becomes a man, it is a pity that he does not put off this mysticism—or, better perhaps, this variety of mysticism." J. F.

+ — Bookm 60:489 D '24 230w

"However much we may invariably look for great things from Miss Sinclair, it is impossible to say that 'Arnold Waterlow' is one of her best. She is fond of telling life histories, and stories that cover a long period of time, but she is also too fond of emphasizing sex relations, especially those of the extra marital order. Take away these from 'Arnold Waterlow' and of course little would remain of the story, but nevertheless we are inclined to say that the residuum would be complete, and that we should in it see a more desirable May Sinclair than too frequently appears in her latest novel." E. F. Edgett

— + Boston Transcript p4 O 4 '24 950w

"Beautifully written, with much of insight and philosophy and truth." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p899 N '24 870w

"It is a good story, about people slightly abnormal. . . The book is thought-provoking and distinguished." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p4 S 27 '24 580w

"The people in this book have the touch of reality upon them. In a sense, and it helps to make them more real, they have the touch of unreality. For what we ordinarily call reality is not the only reality to May Sinclair; her people do not become wholly real until, as an affirmation and extension of this dimensional world, they experience a contact with a world of more mystical consciousness." Angus Burrell

Nation 119:548 N 19 '24 780w

Reviewed by J: Franklin

New Statesman 24:17 O 11 '24 400w

"If Miss Sinclair is a psychologist she is also a novelist and in the form she has created she has complete mastery. Her story moves unerringly. There are no bungling touches, no unabsorbed lumps, no vague unnecessary incidents." L: Mumford

+ N Y Times p7 S 21 '24 1300w

"Miss Sinclair has explored the psychology of her situations with such remarkable thoroughness that what would otherwise sound like romancing rings like truth. If she hasn't proved her thesis, she has discussed it ably and at an unusually high level of intelligence and feeling. She has demonstrated furthermore, the general conditions on which the old morality may be experimentally disregarded with at least some possibility of happiness to somebody." S. P. Sherman
N Y Tribune p1 O 5 '24 2200w

"Whatever your reactions to Arnold himself, the development of his story is true and absorbing. The book is etched with fine, sensitive studies which remain with you long after the central theme has faded." Alison Smith
N Y World p8e O 12 '24 760w

Reviewed by C. H. Gaines
No Am 220:378 D '24 780w
Outlook 138:461 N 19 '24 260w

"That a novel should give rise to so many controversial questions is, however, itself a tribute to the ability with which it is written; and indeed Miss Sinclair never fails in ability—only in probability." Gerald Gould
+ — Sat R 138:292 S 20 '24 900w

"Here is an elaborate, highly finished, sincere, and challenging work of fiction." L. W Dodd
+ Sat R of Lit 1:179 O 11 '24 950w

"One cannot sufficiently praise Miss Sinclair's management of her narrative. It moves with an inevitability that perhaps revenges itself upon the characters later on, but at the moment satisfies utterly one's sense of order and completeness." L. P. Hartley
+ — Spec 133:394 S 20 '24 1050w

"If Miss Sinclair let herself be led simply by her intuition and her tenderness, she might be brought farther than her metaphysicians can take her. . . In drawing Effie, particularly in the scene of her death, Miss Sinclair shows how much easier it is for a fine artist than for an acute philosopher to pierce to truth. It is a noble climax to a study into which a cornucopia of subtle observation and illuminating detail seems to have emptied itself; for at the end of its three hundred pages we feel as if we had read a thousand—feel it with the sense not of exhaustion but of enrichment."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p538 S 4 '24 650w

SINCLAIR, MAY. Cure of souls. 324p $2.50 Macmillan
24-2249

A pitiless character sketch of an English parish priest, the Reverend Canon Clement Purcell Chamberlain. Stroke by stroke the damaging portrait grows till he stands revealed for what he is, a monster of self-indulgence, loving his ease and comfort above all else and removing from his path everything which threatens the smoothness and peace of his ordered life. Marriage to a rich widow adds materially to his comfort. In the closing pages he is lending a ready ear to her blandishments to give up his living of Queningford, with the worries and responsibilities which even his excellent planning could not entirely remove and to retire to some delicious sleepy place where he can rest and dream to his soul's content.

Booklist 20:266 Ap '24

"A most uncomfortable book, this, all in all; but an exceedingly clever one!" J. F.
+ — Bookm 59:210 Ap '24 260w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p3 Ja 26 '24 1300w
Cath World 119:282 My '24 320w
Cleveland p24 Mr '24

"The book falls between two unharmonized moods; the comedy is not quite rich enough, and the tragedy has a pinchbeck element about it which makes the novel appear, on the part of so authentic an artist as Miss Sinclair, a rather trivial performance. She is an excellent example of a really good writer whose very brilliant facility causes her on more than one occasion to write too much and hence to write herself down."
+ — Dial 76:560 Je '24 200w

"Intensely interesting, the book is well written, real; but it is never pleasant. It might be called a long, vigorous sermon against the Pharisee. The pity is that the type exists." R. B. H.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 25 '24 360w

"If the book drags a little toward the end, it is perhaps because Miss Sinclair has already revealed Canon Chamberlain to us so completely that there is nothing left for us to discover about him. Should the year bring many novels as good as 'A Cure of Souls,' it will have a strong claim to be considered exceptionally happy in its fiction." L. M. Field
+ Int Bk R p329 Mr '24 1000w

"Like the specialists in science, each time Miss Sinclair seems to choose for investigation an area more and more minute. Well, that is her art, and if her books lack size and impressiveness they accomplish their purposes with nice skill and unfailing interest. They are, in fact, long short stories, and Miss Sinclair is slowly moving from her position as a good if restricted novelist to become a leader in a new literary genre, where women especially, Miss Gale, Miss Cather, among others, excel. It might be called the long shrewd look at life." H: S. Canby
+ Lit R p471 Ja 26 '24 650w

"Here she returns to her own field and, seizing upon a perfectly definite character, she reveals its every turn and traces out its effects with a skill and finality which are completely satisfying to the mind." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 118:535 My 7 '24 500w

"A strained situation handled with an art so sure that with all its emphasis A Cure of Souls remains realism."
+ New Repub 38:266 Ap 30 '24 120w

"Miss Sinclair is a most competent producer. There is no confusion on her stage, it is as neat as a parlour, there is never a word wasted or out of place, and no one is ever known to miss his cue. Life isn't like that. If Miss Sinclair had her way with us, it would be." Raymond Mortimer
New Statesman 22:574 F 23 '24 350w

"If in its all but complete restriction to the outlook and point of view of a selfish and sensuous man, this novel necessarily lacks some of the breadth and richness to be found in other of Miss Sinclair's books, that does not make it any the less a notable, even remarkable study of a type whose traits are rooted deep down in certain fundamental human instincts."
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 27 '24 1350w

"The book is delightful. . . Miss Sinclair's portrait of Canon Chamberlain is of a character achieved—finished. He could never in his spoiled boyhood have been more selfish; he could never in a pampered old age become less so. That such a man should have it in his power selfishly, carelessly, or incompetently to mishandle souls and misdirect lives is of course horrifying; that we feel; that is made abundantly and tragically clear, but the book remains delightful." Ethel Parton
+ Outlook 136:193 Ja 30 '24 850w
St Louis p399 D '24

"From beginning to end the reader is kept charmed, amused or thrilled by a sequence of ever varying effect: luscious passages on exquisitely cooked meals or those unrivalled peaches produced by the Rectory garden, passages of humour, pathos, pointed sarcasm, all presented in clean, simple, economical prose." Martin Armstrong
+ Spec 132:466 Mr 22 '24 600w

"'A Cure of Souls' stands out for singleness of artistic purpose and concentration of energy. The reader's attention never wanders off down alluring side-paths, because there are none. The sole and single theme of the novel is Canon Chamberlain. And when one shuts the book on his dreaming prospect of the future, one understands him mercilessly and thoroughly."

SINCLAIR, MAY—Continued

+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 24 '24 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 7 '24 450w

Wis Lib Bul 20:68 Mr '24

SINCLAIR, MAY. Dark night. 126p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d J. Cape]
821 24-12234

A mystical poem in free verse of the dark night of a woman's soul thru which, being without sin, she passed clear-eyed and unhurt. The poem tells of the love of Elizabeth for the poet Victor—its first raptures, its wreck thru Victor's faithlessness, its rescue and final sublimation.

Booklist 21:62 N '24

"It is not a pretty story. Nor has it any deep significance. It is a tale of uncontrolled feeling, narrated with an equal lack of control. Miss Sinclair lacks a sense of the fitness of things. She lacks decency in bringing the preoccupations of a morbid mind to the attention of her readers." D. F. G.

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '24 700w

Dial 77:266 S '24 100w

"On the whole, a futile performance." D. R.

— Ind 112:346 Je 21 '24 650w

"A magnificent poem. . . The notable thing about this work of Miss Sinclair's is that you no sooner read it than you feel instantly subject and medium to be in perfect harmony. Free verse appears as the only possible form for this theme, and the free verse in itself seems to receive a new dignity from treatment and theme. Aside from the success of the narrative in this poem, there are single passages of a haunting, heart-stirring beauty that the reader is not likely soon to forget." H: J. Forman

+ Int Bk R p584 Jl '24 1600w

"It holds the tone and the style of her 'Mary Olivier'—much shorter, however, and shredded. It slips into the consciousness of a reader with all the crispness of a story well told. In addition, it carries the magnificence of sustained glamour. . . A moody poem, flashing out its purple here and there, humorless, a bit theatric." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p814 Je 7 '24 250w

"Miss Sinclair, the author of novels in prose, remains a novelist in prose throughout the present tale in spite of the fact that it is printed in uneven lines and is called free verse. She writes as always with beauty and speed, but her language never quite leaves the level ground; it is not verse." Mark Van Doren

Nation 118:712 Je 18 '24 120w

"I doubt whether Miss Sinclair will find her new path leading her very far. Her verse has, it is true, much of the economy and poignacy of her prose, but the intrinsic difficulties of her task are great; the happy mean between the poetic and the realistic is not easy to strike when the subject is, as in her book, the perfectly commonplace story of a wife betrayed for another woman; it is so much the fabricated story of fiction that its relation in verse adds only to its obvious artificiality, and we come to the end resentful of the gratuitous difficulties Miss Sinclair has put in her own way and ours, without any gain to our sense of dramatic reality." V. Sackville-West

— Nation and Ath 35:484 Jl 12 '24 220w

"'Dark Night,' besides being profoundly affecting, and in many parts exquisitely beautiful, is a revelation of what may be done by a skillful wielder of the free-verse line in that hitherto generally closed borderland into which the clumsy novelist stumbles and which the wise novelist shuns." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p6 Je 1 '24 1100w

Reviewed by D: Morton

Outlook 137:318 Je 25 '24 100w

St Louis p381 N '24

"Miss Sinclair is a serious artist, with talents both notable and noted. 'The Dark Night' is of great interest as illustrating what happens when even such a one does something which isn't her 'Fort.'" Gerald Gould

— + Sat R 137:614 Je 14 '24 700w

"Miss Sinclair's diction is delightful in its purity and her rhythms are nearly always appropriate. . . A dignified and memorable achievement."

+ Spec 132:926 Je 7 '24 100w

"There is in it an atmosphere of beauty too poignant to be altogether wholesome, of bitterness and sorrow, presaged in an almost mystical fashion; a feeling of darkness and inevitability varied by a sense of ecstatic exaltation, and this atmosphere which has been present in many of May Sinclair's prose works, is here intensified by the mournful rhythm of the verse which is like the wash of sad waters at sea."

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 3 '24 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p448 Jl 17 '24 550w

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL. The goslings. 454p $2 The author, Pasadena, Cal.
379.73 Public schools 24-5791

Upton Sinclair's thesis is that the invisible government of big business owns and controls the public schools of America, and that the children are not getting education but propaganda. He shows in detail how this power is being used in Los Angeles, New York and Chicago and in a more general way surveys conditions in many other cities from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast. He instances the specific organizations which have gone most aggressively into education, considers the Catholic church in relation to the schools and represents the National education association as a political machine run by big business.

"He is probably wrong in a hundred details, but perhaps not entirely so in his conclusions."

Bookm 59:609 Jl '24 160w

"Like a piece of fly paper in summer weather, it has more of the collection spirit about it than that of research." D. R.

— Boston Transcript p5 Ap 19 '24 450w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

Nation 119:340 O 1 '24 700w

"On the destructive side, Mr. Sinclair is a courageous and useful critic of the schools. On the constructive side, he has little to offer." J. K. Hart

— + New Repub 38:343 My 21 '24 1400w

"The 'interlocking directorates,' the hundred-per-cent., honest-to-God Americanism, the graft and political jobbery, are as usual unerringly detected by Mr. Sinclair's all-too-accustomed eye. And the reader may take these exposures at whatever value he attaches to the evidence of this gloriously undiscriminating radical. But admittedly eighty-nine chapters of this become too nightmarish to be altogether convincing as pure argument."

— New Statesman 23:50 Ap 19 '24 100w

"Mr. Sinclair appears to have within himself three irreconcilables which must take part in his single-handed combats with a deplorably imperfect world; there seem to be, judging by internal evidence of 'The Goslings,' a romantic novelist in search of thrills, a most indefatigable statistician, and a victim of wholesale persecution. The reader timidly wishes that they would get together before they permit Mr. Sinclair to bust into print." J: W. Crawford

— N Y Times p10 Ap 6 '24 680w

"Had Mr Sinclair possessed the methods of a real investigator, he might have given a telling analysis of the machinations of school book publishers in promoting sales and their efforts even to control the appointment of administrative officers in the schools. But he goes little beyond general accusations."

— Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 4 '24 800w

SINGH, PURAN. See Pūrna Simha.

SINGH, SADHU SUNDAR. Reality and religion; with an introd. by Canon Streeter. (Little books on religion) 80p 75c (2s 6d) Macmillan

242 Spiritual life

Brief meditations on prayer, the future life, love, free will, conscience, repentance, humility and other concerns of the spiritual life.

"It is interesting and illuminating to hear Christianity which was born in the East interpreted and preached by an Oriental mind and soul." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '24 80w

SITWELL, EDITH. Sleeping beauty. 96p $1.75 Knopf [5s Duckworth]

821 [24-13856]

"The romantic nostalgia which lies very deep in human nature inspired Miss Sitwell's new poem. The principal theme may be said to represent the subjection of the youthful vision, personified by the princess, to the necessities of age and its accompanying malice in the figure of the evil fairy Laidronette. There are, of course, many undertones which can only be heard in the verse itself, and it is not the mortality of beauty which is mourned, but the impossibility of retaining the perceptions in their early purity. It is a profound theme, and one to which Miss Sitwell has brought her accustomed thoughtfulness, and uncommon intellectual awareness, though the persistently fantastic treatment does not permit her to do full justice to her own inspiration."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"A lengthy narrative or interpretative poem, interspersed with lyrics, which is silly, remote, difficult to understand, and yet filled with a certain magic of stanza and phrase."

— + Bookm 60:227 O '24 270w

"Magic she has, and lyricism, and color. If she would but cease to juggle her materials like the bright, hard candies in a glass bottle, but use them rather like chosen jewels on just such a golden thread as this legend of the sleeping beauty, Miss Sitwell would achieve something rarer and finer than anything she has yet attempted." Babette Deutsch

— + Lit R p980 Ag 23 '24 280w

Reviewed by Robert Graves

Nation and Ath 35:88 Ap 19 '24 300w

"There are passages here, where her sense of the tragic transience of beauty, of the bitter passage from the wise innocence of youth to the horrible wisdom of frivolous old age, finds for itself in its sincerity an expression, clear of impertinences, that is really admirable. If it were all like that! But the ghost of 'Wheels' if he could not destroy all the poetry, has destroyed the poem by his incoherent interpolations. It is a pity." F. L. Lucas

— + New Statesman 23:288 Je 14 '24 600w

"Here is no great mind, and no considerable creator of beauty. Instead we have merely a spoiled child of the Muses, behaving with words as some spoiled beauty poses and postures before her admirers. Steeped in all forms of exotic and fantastic literature, she employs her poetic reading in imitative decoration without design and without any decorative result, not to speak of anything like 'truly poetry.'" R: Le Gallienne

— N Y Times p10 S 7 '24 1200w

"The story is told with a great wealth of interlude and description; at times it is hard to remember what point the progress of the story has reached, and it would have been simpler to read if Miss Sitwell had written marginal comments like those to The Ancient Mariner. But a second reading will dispel such difficulties." Alan Porter

Spec 132:599 Ap 12 '24 500w

"In a passage describing the world after the disaster to beauty, the intellectual content is imaginatively realized; and this combination of qualities is characteristic of Miss Sitwell's metaphysical lyricism. But her ardent mind is defeated of its full attainment by the technical faltering which can be noticed in the same lines and which pulls this poem as a whole, in spite of isolated successes, below the standard of achievement she has already set herself."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Ap 3 '24 500w

SITWELL, SACHEVERELL. Southern baroque art. 319p $6 Knopf [20s G. Richards]

709 Art, Baroque [24-15650]

"The book is an attempt to recreate certain aspects of the Southern culture and civilisation of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, in Mexico as well as in Spain and Italy: it pictures that gaudy, hectic, extravagant dance of amateurs which—with tightened laces and mincing steps—marched decorously into the Victorian period of the Northern countries. Nearer to us than any of the greater epochs of art, the Baroque has been for this reason the object of contempt and misunderstanding, and Mr. Sitwell's book adds bravely to the growing literature which seeks to place the Baroque in a more sympathetic light."—New Repub

Reviewed by G. B. Munson

Lit R p990 Ag 23 '24 650w

"There is nothing bad about this book, save the title, which gives but a feeble indication of the pleasures to be found between the covers. . . He has written more than a treatise round the baroque. 'Southern Baroque Art' has also great value as a guide-book. Though the chief feature of the book may be its store of little-known history and its artistic unity, travellers in Southern Italy and Spain will find their daily pilgrimages enriched by taking 'Southern Baroque Art' with them in their bag." Francis Birrell

+ Nation and Ath 34:923 Mr 29 '24 650w

New Repub 40:397 Ag '24 240w

"His book gives us information that has never previously been collected, and more than this, the freshness of the ground intensifies the reactions to it of writer and reader alike." R. M.

+ New Statesman 22:636 Mr 8 '24 700w

"It is a wonder-book, exquisitely revealing a creative intellect that can draw from a passing epoch the emotion for 'a new thrill' of beauty." F. V. Roman

+ N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 650w

"The atmosphere of baroque art is evolved in a wholly unmitigated form, and Mr. Sitwell does full justice to the occasion by producing, what is not so much a critical survey as an actual presentation in literary form, of the impression intended by the baroque artist to be conveyed by his works. With such conscientious fidelity is this accomplished that the study may even be said to have a definitely moral value as satire in addition to its literary merits which are of no common order."

+ Sat R 137:461 My 3 '24 600w

"The whole book is composed of vivid realizations of the extravagant and glowing splendor of baroque art and architecture. It is no surprise to learn that the book is being read with enthusiasm in France, Italy, and Germany or to hear that there are already proposals to translate it into the languages of those countries." R: Aldington

+ Sat R of Lit 1:3 Ag 2 '24 800w

"Taken as a whole, the book is an extraordinary tour de force, a truly remarkable achievement for so young an author. Indeed its faults appear to arise solely from his incomplete mastery of particularly difficult material, and to be faults which experience may well enable the author to remedy in subsequent work. The book is delightful to read,

SITWELL, SACHEVERELL—Continued
and its strangeness, originality and richness cannot be praised sufficiently." A. Williams-Ellis

+ — Spec 132:639 Ap 19 '24 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p139 Mr 6 '24 1150w

SKAGGS, WILLIAM HENRY. Southern oligarchy. 472p $5 Devin-Adair

917.5 South—Politics and government. South—Social conditions. South—Economic conditions. United States—Race questions 24-16956

"The name 'Southern Oligarchy' is only a synonym for the Democratic party in general and the 'Solid South' in particular. Mr. Skaggs devotes the first four chapters to an outline of the peculiar history of the South, the discussion of general political principles, and a comparison of the result of their application at home and abroad. He discusses official corruption, convict leasing, peonage, criminality, lynch law, and the Ku Klux Klan. By way of summing up, there is a discussion of Southern finance, pacifism, and sectionalism. The South's advocate concludes with a secular Dies Iræ, auguring portents which America must not ignore."—Lit R

"It is doubtful if any treatise, commenting on historical facts and present conditions, will be published for many years which, if seriously read and digested, will give honest Americans more reason to reflect and 'take account of stock,' than Mr. Skaggs's careful, honest and fearless elucidation of conditions in 'the solid South' since the Civil War." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 29 '24 850w

"Whatever may be the faults in style or in the treatment of the subject matter, these defects are purely superficial. They are fully counteracted and counter-balanced by the unquestionable merits, virtues and general excellence of the work. The diligence with which Mr. Skaggs has toiled is shown by the dignity and comprehensiveness of the authorities cited in his argument. The bibliographic index serves also as a concise catalogue of the masters of political science." W. C. Stevens

+ — Lit R p6 O 11 '24 1400w

"He has brought to his work wide reading, a formidable array of statistics and praiseworthy industry. If he could have presented his material temperately he might have written a great and much-needed book. He might have left an imperishable monument to a wise Southerner." Silas Bent

— + N Y Times p3 N 23 '24 2400w

"His study is profound, and if his premises are not all sound, the volume contains an immense amount of carefully gathered material arranged to support the author's indictment of his own people."

+ — N Y World p9e N 16 '24 240w

"It is an inestimable service, to the South and to the whole nation, to have the whole story completely, instructively and authoritatively told; and to have it told not in a spirit of railing or censorious denunciation, but rather in one of sympathy and generosity, and of unquenchable faith in the great masses of the Southern people." W. F. Johnson

+ No Am 220:178 S '24 380w

"The most regrettable thing about the book is not its imperfection of organization and analysis but the absence of an impartial and conciliatory temper. Not only southerners of conscience and cultivation but northerners who have a friendly interest in the South, while recognizing its remaining social and political backwardness, will regretfully come to the conclusion that the book is lacking in sociological adequacy and helpful purpose."

— + Springf'd Republican p8 N 11 '24 550w

SKINNER, OTIS. Footlights and spotlights. 366p $5 Bobbs

B or 92 Actors and actresses 24-10951

"Otis Skinner's recollections of forty-six years on the stage. Mr. Skinner confesses to having played 325 parts. And as he has acted with Edwin Booth, Mme. Modjeska, Ada Rehan and John Drew—to carry the list no further—and was a member of the famous Augustin Daly company, his theatrical contacts were (and are) with the best and most enduring in American stage history."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:25 O '24

"A stalwart actor of the old school, a battle scarred trouper thick with the dust of the road, has here set down the print of his remembrance. It is the good story of a good life, simply and agreeably told." Alexander Woollcott

+ Bookm 59:594 Jl '24 760w

Cleveland p63 Jl '24

"This is one of the most interesting theatrical autobiographies that have been offered to the public for a good many years. Mr. Skinner writes well, with pleasant vivacity and humor and considerable descriptive power, and naturally in the course of a long, varied and eventful stage experience has collected a rich fund of incident and anecdote from which he has known how to make judicious selections." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p854 Je 28 '24 700w

"He writes not only with considerable charm but with a genuine modesty as well; his book is as amusing a volume of theatrical memoirs as has been seen in some time."

+ Nation 119:450 O 22 '24 130w

N Y Times p12 My 11 '24 2150w

"The whole narrative is pervaded with unforced humor and good humor. Besides which, Mr. Skinner can really write, and as he has something to write about, the result is highly satisfactory." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p22 Je 1 '24 500w

N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 510w

"The volume resembles others of its kind in that it is primarily a history of the author's professional career, of the many parts he has played and the dramas in which he has appeared. But it contains also much that is unusual and of far greater value in the shape of stage history and shrewd comments on the art of acting. Of the many distinguished persons, professional and otherwise, with whom he came in contact he speaks with fairness and discrimination." J. L. Ford

+ Outlook 137:109 My 21 '24 1400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:378 Jl '24

"Mr. Otis Skinner has reviewed his years on the stage with no purpose to deceive or to pose; he has been downright honest and delicately charming. With the result that he has produced a book which is full of entertaining anecdote and true portraiture." M. J. Moses

+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:866 D '24 450w

SLOANE, WILLIAM MILLIGAN. Greater France in Africa. 293p il $3 Scribner

916.4 French in Africa. Morocco. Algeria

The author made a tour of Morocco and Algiers as a member of the group invited by the Committee France-America to visit those parts of France's colonial empire. His book is a summary of Morocco as to its history, politics, religion and art, its race and color problem as the French are encountering it and the administration of the French protectorate. There is also a brief account of inland Algeria.

N Y World p8e O 5 '24 250w

"An interesting and valuable book, though, it has reluctantly to be said, sadly lacking in style. Well illustrated."

+ — Outlook 139:69 Ja 14 '25 110w

SLOSSON, EDWIN EMERY. Chats on science. 273p il $2 Century

504 Science 24-4609

Eighty-five short articles on scientific subjects, written in popular style for the layman. The articles, which were originally syndicated to the newspapers, are on such varied subjects as: The singing crystal; The super-rats; Einstein in words of one syllable; Perfumes from poison gas; Scientific factors in history; The fight for the food and fuel of the future; Soda-water; The sun-cure; The science of keeping cool; The advantage of tan; From complexes to glands; How old is disease? Gasolene and alcohol; The inefficiency of agriculture.

Booklist 20:289 My '24
Bookm 60:353 N '24 100w

"The scientific information is given us with a simplicity yet picturesqueness of expression, spiced withal with witty comment and anecdote, which make the book simply irresistible, not only to the scientifically elect but to that vast company who, while knowing little, technically, about science, are intensely interested in its development, and who too often are withheld from reading books upon its different phases by the use of technical terms."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 15 '24 600w

Reviewed by James Stokley
Lit R p924 Jl 26 '24 260w
New Statesman 24:supxvi D 6 '24 40w

"Dr. Slosson goes a long way ahead of most retailers of scientific small change. It should be difficult for any one to read him without wanting to know more about the subjects he discusses."
+ N Y Times p12 Ap 6 '24 850w

"Dr. Slosson unfailingly entertains while cramming his readers' heads with facts that may or may not come in handy. The volume is distinguished by the qualities of authority, interest and style which make 'Creative Chemistry' a best seller."
+ N Y Tribune p26 Je 15 '24 130w

"Suggests an annual mind clearing season, in which one should get rid of his rubbish of antiquated ideas. On the whole, his new volume is an excellent broom for this purpose."
+ N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 480w
Outlook 136:443 Mr 12 '24 40w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:307 Je '24
Pratt p16 summer '24

"No one has succeeded so well as Dr. Slosson in 'popularizing' modern science. As the publishers announce, this is a book to be read for entertainment—the profit will take care of itself."
+ R of Rs 70:112 Jl '24 80w

"Young people of any intellectual curiosity should thrive on this book."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 8 '24 140w
Wis Lib Bul 20:122 My '24

SLOSSON, EDWIN EMERY, ed. Keeping up with science. 355p il $2.50 Harcourt
504 Science 24-19931

A collection of miscellaneous notes and articles intended to help the unscientific reader who desires to keep abreast of the results of modern science. Among the 140 subjects discussed are such topics as How baby plants know the way up, How the Horse lost its toes, Why corn has silk, Where water kindles fire, Beaver engineering, Why jellies jell, Don't quarrel at meal-time, Worry as an indoor sport, etc.

Booklist 21:57 N '24

"The articles are catchy of title, lucid of diction, fertile of allusion, and astonishingly ingenious of illustration. They bring all manner of complexities down to the level of everyday 'chattability.'" K. M. Gould
+ Bookm 59:597 Jl '24 700w

"There is not a topic in this book that cannot be read in ten minutes. Every one of them is of such absorbing interest that it seems impossible to pass one by, and most of them contain information too valuable to neglect. Science Service is serving the public in a most pleasing and valuable way in publishing such a volume." F. W. C.
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 13 '24 500w

"'Keeping Up with Science' is the sort of volume which you can hand to your nonscientific friend and be sure that he will find in the titles something to excite interest and in the text useful scientific information in an easily assimilated form. It contains enough of chemistry to recommend it to the chemist and it contains enough of other sciences to make it advisable for him to read it."
+ Ind & Eng Chem 16:1292 D '24 220w

"It would interest any bright boy with a dawning greed for scientific knowledge. No half truths, no nature faking, no scientific heresies are introduced merely because such things are often quite interesting." A. G. Ingalls
+ Lit R p11 S 20 '24 110w
New Statesman 24:supxvi D 6 '24 50w

"The most pleasing thing about Dr. Slosson's fascinating collection of 140 topics with which science in one or another of its varied aspects has an intimate connection is that one may open it at any page and find something to engage one's attention." Van Buren Thorne
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 11 '25 2600w
N Y Tribune p11 S 28 '24 150w

Reviewed by D. C. Seitz
N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 420w
Outlook 138:380 N 5 '24 60w

SMALL, ALBION WOODBURY. Origins of sociology. 359p $3 Univ. of Chicago press
309 Sociology—History 24-17822

A study of the sociological movement from the beginning of the nineteenth century to the present. The inquiry to which the study devotes itself is thus expressed by the author: "What have the social sciences done in the nineteenth century toward working out a reliable method of interpreting human experience?" The book centers attention on the German attempts since 1800 in this direction.

Booklist 21:137 Ja '25

"Students of sociology are accustomed to look to Chicago University for some of the newest as well as the most stimulating deliverances in this field, and the present volume by Professor Small well sustains the traditions of that institution. Especially should American readers be interested, for though the work is largely general in character it also traces out in high instructive fashion the course of sociological thought and method in the United States." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 25 '24 900w

"Professor Small has developed his thesis in a most able way, and his analysis is one that more advanced students will find exceedingly fascinating. Beginners and those with inadequate background will find the logic hard to follow, but those who can read carefully and critically will see that the book gives to sociology a much more substantial basis than it had before." M. M. Willey
+ Lit R p12 Ag 30 '24 700w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p812 D 6 '24 520w

SMALL, AUSTIN J. Frozen trail (Eng title Frozen gold). 305p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Heinemann]
24-12284

"A story of gold-seeking in the far North, unique, perhaps, in that it deals with a post-war Klondyke. Two men, a white man and an Indian, stagger into the little settlement of Cedar Falls, more dead than alive, with specimens of raw gold from a 'location' that leaves Bonanza, Eldorado, and the rest of the old strikes dwarfed. The old 'gold fever' sets in, stampeding kits are prepared, all is ready for the biggest rush of all time as soon as the white man comes to and gives the locality. But when he recovers his memory has gone, and the Indian has disappeared! The excitement rages from first page to

SMALL, AUSTIN J.—Continued
last, and although the rightful finder gets his claim pegged in the end, the issue is always in doubt."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"There is always a fascination about life in the raw, especially in books. One can read so comfortably about freezing to death. Then, too, if you are not acquainted with Sitka Charlie and the Magains, how can you tell whether they are true to life, or not. At least, we give the author the benefit of the doubt. They are sufficiently unpleasant so that we should not care to meet them, unless, indeed, we had at least two hair trigger revolvers, and a portable automatic radiator."
Boston Transcript p4 Je 28 '24 300w

"Mr. Small has an adequate vocabulary, but places it to an inadequate use, or perhaps an overadequate use. Imagine a third-rate, lowest-down bad man saying 'supercilious.' Moreover, slang is forceful when it is not too evidently manufactured stuff. But Mr. Small's free coinage of slang from the steel of a concise dictionary is a trifle too strenuous to be enjoyed." H. A. P.
— + Lit R p922 Jl 26 '24 200w

"It is an average novel of its type, neither better nor worse than the majority of the innumerable other yarns of the same general kind."
+ — N Y Times p24 Je 8 '24 360w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p241 Ap 17 '24 110w

SMALL, SIDNEY HERSCHEL. Fourscore. 376p $2 Bobbs
24-22565

"A young German, fleeing conscription, and a young Welshman, fleeing the hangman's noose, land together in New York. From then on through the lives of three generations, the story portrays the development of character, the influence of heredity, the effect of environment, and the growth of American ideals in alien souls."—Ind

Boston Transcript p5 O 25 '24 400w
Ind 113:409 N 15 '24 50w

"The book is a glimpse of a great swath of life. It suggests all the intermittent glamor and dullness of life. It discloses a number of personalities that are memorable. It is well worth the reading." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p14 D 13 '24 460w

"'Fourscore' is not perfect by any manner of means, but is far more satisfying than the great run of novels and eminently more convincing and sincere."
+ — N Y Times p9 N 23 '24 780w
N Y Tribune p10 D 7 '24 350w

"There are passages of excellent description throughout this work, hardly notable enough, however, to leaven so much dough."
— + N Y World p9e N 9 '24 220w

SMITH, ARTHUR DOUGLAS HOWDEN (ALLAN GRANT, pseud.). Porto Bello gold. 330p $2 Brentano's
24-30617

"A good old-fashioned pirate story, a tale of tall ships and lawless men on the Spanish Main back in the days when New York owed allegiance to King George. But it has an additional interest, for it includes many of the characters made famous by Robert Louis Stevenson in 'Treasure Island.' The action takes place a few years previous to Stevenson's classic thriller, and tells, in fact, how Captain Flint and Murray sacked the Spanish gold galleon and buried their stolen treasure on the Dead Man's Chest and on Treasure Island."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:113 D '24
Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p857 N '24 100w

"It can hardly be said that Mr. Smith was altogether happily inspired in this attempt to provide an introduction to 'Treasure Island,' but it must be admitted that he has made a better job of it than might have been expected. For it is a good yarn of its kind." H. L. Pangborn
+ — Lit R p12 S 13 '24 400w
N Y Times p16 S 14 '24 650w

"Mr. Howden Smith has done an excellent piece of work. It is a little bewildering at first to meet the old characters so full of abundant deviltry, God-provoking fellows saturated with fascinating braggadocio; but a good craftsman handles them so ingeniously that the two stories, Stevenson's and this, dovetail prettily and the joints escape detection." C: J. Finger
+ N Y Tribune p10 O 12 '24 600w

"Every boy—and grown man, too—will find this highly entertaining reading wherein he may renew his acquaintance with the fearless men and virile life of the eighteenth century." G. H. S.
+ N Y World p6e S 14 '24 100w

"Mr. Howden Smith has attempted the impossible, but with so engaging a humility and frankness that it is impossible to find fault with him." Gerald Gould
Sat R 138:958 D 27 '24 180w

"One of the most congenial writers of adventure stories has found the courage to write a pirate story that is also a deliberate attempt to add to the sum of known literature. It is regrettable that the author, presumably to run the gauntlet of public library censors and the guardians of what are humorously known as 'Christian homes,' resorted to so many 'blanks' to give the illusion of piratical vocabulary." J: Carter
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:375 D 13 '24 850w

SMITH, CHARLES FREDERICK. Games and recreational methods for clubs, camps and scouts. 463p il $2 Dodd
790 Games. Boy scouts 24-18467

Mr Smith, instructor in scouting and recreational leadership at Teachers college, Columbia university, presents a handbook of games for the Scout leader, camp director or the social committee of a club. The introductory chapter "The leadership of games" is contributed by Elbert K. Fretwell, associate professor of education, Columbia university, and chapters on Camp fire dramatics, Life saving, Swimming, and Trees, are also contributions by experts on those subjects.

Booklist 21:13 O '24

"This is an indispensable book for leaders of hiking and camping parties which include young people. It is unbelievably complete."
+ Lit R p10 S 13 '24 130w
N Y Times p20 Ag 10 '24 450w

"Mr. Smith's handbook will prove delightful reading to everyone who has spilled the cocoa at a campfire supper, and will serve as a mine of suggestions for the recreational worker with young people whether in camps or clubs or homes." C. D.
+ Survey 53:242 N 15 '24 70w

SMITH, CICELY FOX. Book of famous ships. 181p il $2 Houghton [6s Methuen]
623.8 Ships. Merchant marine 24-26754

"Stories and anecdotes of such splendid vessels as the clipper ship Lightning, the American packet Dreadnought, the Blackwaller Newcastle, the Thermopylæ, Cutty Sark, City of Agra and Cimba, and of such captains as 'Bully Forbes' and his compeers. Record runs, oceanic races, perils of ice and storm and fire throng the crowded pages. The illustrations are by Phil W. Smith."—Lit R

Booklist 21:11 O '24

"One cannot help but enjoy the easy style of the author as she relates all these closely interwoven stories. A book of the sort fills in the gaps of the cold facts gained in the reading of other books on the clipper-ship era. Miss Smith does not repeat the long worn-out yarns, but brings forth new material and carries the reader into the period about which she is writing. It is a brief descriptive history of facts about a few of the old-timers which would otherwise be lost to coming generations." T. P. M.

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 16 '24 380w

"In the little volume, which is delightfully illustrated by Phil W. Smith, the subject has been handled so well that a reader regrets it is not fully twice as large. Vivid, pulsating tales, not the dull records that smack of prosaic logs or the narratives of unemotional skippers."

+ Detroit News p14 S 14 '24 210w

"This is a fascinating book."

+ Lit R p955 Ag 9 '24 130w

"Her little book abounds in good stories and half-forgotten nautical lore; it is marked also, in many passages, by a grace and delicacy appropriate to the history of ships that, above all others, 'wedded the transient beauty of man's handiwork to the eternal beauty of the sea.' "

+ Nation and Ath 35:490 Jl 12 '24 200w

"A volume of excellent small-talk on the voyages and the captains and the relative merits of such ships as the Cutty Sark, which of those described is perhaps best known to landsmen."

+ New Statesman 23:448 Jl 19 '24 300w

"Whoever reads this book will soon be aware that it was written out of a great passion for ships and the sea. There is not a perfunctory passage in it; often its mood is almost lyrical."

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '24 1600w

Spec 133:512 O 11 '24 440w

"A collection of brief sketches—spirited, entertaining and sane, if sketchy."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 24 '24 680w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p380 Je 19 '24 1050w

SMITH, CICELY FOX. Sea songs and ballads. 136p il $1.75 Houghton [6s Methuen]

821 A24-665

This volume contains—as well as some poems not before published in book form—selections from four previous volumes: Rovings, Ships and folks, Rhymes of the red ensign, and Small craft. They sing of the sea and sailors, of ships in harbor and in the yards, of docks and cargoes. They are rightly called songs and ballads for the singing quality is in them all.

Booklist 20:292 My '24

"So salt are these verses to the taste and so boldly do they sing themselves out, that one is willing enough to overlook the occasional slips in metre. Not one of them has the least touch of sentimentality; they are bluff, hearty, masculine—and written by a woman."

+ — Bookm 59:351 My '24 120w

Boston Transcript p6 F 23 '24 400w

"Kipling and Masefield could not have bettered some of these songs and ballads. The terminology of seafaring old and new is at Miss Smith's fingers' ends. Her staves have just the right roll and swing to vivify her material." W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p918 Jl 26 '24 70w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden

Nation and Ath 34:sup406 D 8 '23 90w

"Those who enjoyed the lively prose sketches Miss Smith gave us in her recent Sailor Town Days, will find here a companion volume of verse that is full of the same charm and sympathetic insight into the moods and men of the sea."

+ New Statesman 22:224 N 24 '23 240w

"Several pieces have the humor and the humanity and the harshness and the pathos that are woven into the lives of men who go down to the sea in ships. Those with a love of the sea will be glad of this compact selection."

+ N Y Times p25 F 24 '24 230w

"Most readable volume."

+ Outlook 136:360 F 27 '24 300w

"They are brinier than the most crusted old salt and more rollicking than the jolliest tar."

+ Spec 131:661 N 3 '23 60w

"Miss Fox Smith has great talent for lusty, hearty rhymes about ships and shipmen and their ways; the lively beat of her long lines is something to dispel the megrims, and runs us gallantly through the doldrums."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p694 O 18 '23 320w

SMITH, EDWARD CONRAD. Dictionary of American politics. 496p il $2.50 Burt

329 United States—Politics and government 24-12425

"Dr. Smith's book is more than a mere dictionary of political slang. It is a compendium of political information and a convenient reference handbook for voters and students of politics. It contains brief histories of the various political parties that have arisen from time to time, with their leading policies, biographical notes of men who have been prominent in the political history of the nation, and descriptions of election methods in the present and in the past. There is a table showing the electoral and popular votes for candidates in Presidential elections down to and including that of 1920."—Int Bk R

"It is a handy volume for quick information about politics, much of which would be difficult or impossible to find elsewhere."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 13 '24 260w

Int Bk R p689 Ag '24 400w

"The book may be commended to those for whom it is designed. It will not help any voter to mark his ballot wisely in the coming election. It ought, however, to add appreciably to his information, and any book that will do that is entitled to be praised." W: MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p12 Jl 27 '24 900w

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 30w

R of Rs 70:223 Ag '24 40w

SMITH, ERNEST. Fields of adventure; some 2 recollections of forty years of newspaper life. 319p il $6 Small [18s Hutchinson]

B or 92 Journalism [24-15099]

"Mr. Smith began in Paris as assistant correspondent of the Daily News. He was in the thick of the Boulanger crisis and later of the Dreyfus affair. Within a few days of witnessing the final scenes at Rennes he was on his way to South Africa with French and Haig. He was captured by de Wet, and went through the siege of Ladysmith. He was in Russia during the great famine of 1891-2, and 'witnessed similar scenes in the stampede from Thrace in October, 1922.' He was in Jerusalem at the end of the war. He was at Stockholm during the famous 'Conference' of 1917, when Kerensky was still in power in Petrograd. He was in Athens during the revolution of 1916 and again during the revolution of 1922. He talked to Bismarck and had correspondence with the famous Moltke. He has been personally acquainted, casually or intimately, with H. M. Stanley and Coquelin ainé, Lord Kitchener and Bernhardt, Tolstoy and Cecil Rhodes, Anatole France and Dumas fils, Zola and Oscar Wilde, Renan and Sienkiewicz, Lombroso and Verestchagin, Venizelos and Jules Verne. Such is the fortune of a roving Journalist!"—New Statesman

"For those interested in the trend of European art and politics during the past forty years or more, these interviews will provide absorbing reading." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 13 '24 840w

SMITH, ERNEST—Continued
"The worst of it is that [the experiences] chase each other a little too quickly and too lightly across the screen. We are whisked from land to land, from war to war, from one crowned head to another. And the interviews of a special correspondent are not apt to be intimate. To compensate, however, the stretch is wide and the variety vast."

+ — Nation and Ath 34:522 Ja 5 '24 250w

New Statesman 22:372 Ja 5 '24 680w

"Mr. Smith has compiled a very agreeable book out of some of his many adventures, and, incidentally and quite unintentionally, he has left us with a very pleasant impression of himself as a man and a brother journalist."

+ Sat R 137:16 Ja 5 '24 250w

"This book is full of matter of real interest; and many people will be glad of so many vivid sketches of the scenes and great personalities of European politics during the last thirty or forty years."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p910 D 27 '23 450w

SMITH, EUGENE RANDOLPH. Education moves ahead; a survey of progressive methods; with an introd. by Charles W. Eliot. 145p il $2 Atlantic monthly

371 Education of children 24-4319

In a series of informal talks to parents and teachers an experienced educator and innovator discusses new methods of training children to take their place in the world. He writes of such advances as freer handling of classes, the study of individuals and the adaptation of school methods to their needs, co-operative school government, using the school as a health factor, etc.

Booklist 20:325 Je '24

"The language throughout is in good style and non-technical, as befits the author's purpose to meet the needs of the average reader." P. V. West

+ El School J 25:151 O '24 1000w

Ind 112:268 My 10 '24 10w

Reviewed by W. S. Hinchman
Ind 113:105 Ag 16 '24 460w

Reviewed by Agnes de Lima
New Repub 40:sup23 N 12 '24 700w

N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 70w

Pratt p16 summer '24

"Its brevity, clarity, and freedom from technical language should insure the book a favorable reception among lay readers. Such a volume should do a great deal toward increasing the co-operation of parents, teachers, and the public in promoting the general welfare of the children of the public schools. Various illustrations aid in the interpretation of the reading material." C. V. Good

+ School R 32:547 S '24 550w

"While this book is a sympathetic explanation of modern methods of teaching, the author evidently has every intention of being fair and impartial. It may err through excessive enthusiasm or optimism, but is not unduly dogmatic."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 S 5 '24 180w

Survey 52:469 Jl 15 '24 130w

"A readable little book. Will be of interest to parent-teachers' associations and mothers' clubs."

+ Wis Lib Bul 20:92 Ap '24

SMITH, GRAFTON ELLIOT. Elephants and ethnologists. 135p il $6 Dutton [15s K. Paul]

913.72 Mayas. Ethnology. Central America—Antiquities 24-29197

The author, a British archeologist, is convinced that the Mayan civilization of Mexico and Central America was not due to the independent invention of the aborigines but was derived from Asia and brought over by immigrants who at various times during the first twelve centuries A.D. crossed the Pacific to Central America. The figures carved on the huge monoliths at Capan, in Honduras, especially the elephant which is not indigenous to the New World, is the chief subject discussed in support of this thesis. The book is illustrated with fifty-two woodcuts.

Reviewed by Jane Harrison
Nation and Ath 35:446 Jl 5 '24 1000w

"Professor Elliot Smith's book brings fresh evidence, which seems to the lay mind conclusive, in favour of the derivative nature of widely separated civilisations."

+ New Statesman 23:316 Je 21 '24 520w

Outlook 139:72 Ja 14 '25 50w

Sat R 137:620 Je 14 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p365 Je 12 '24 1700w

SMITH, GRAFTON ELLIOT. Evolution of man. 168p il $2.85 Oxford [8s 6d Milford]

575 Evolution

"In the first of the lectures reprinted in this book the author describes briefly his researches and conclusions about ancestors of ours so remote as to make the apes seem close indeed in comparison. The second chapter is equally comprehensive: in ninety pages human fossils are described in some detail and at the same time paleolithic implements, culture diffusion and the relation between stone age and modern primitive man are all discussed. The third essay is an address on the human brain delivered lately at the Imperial Institute: it discusses the visual and olfactory senses in man and man's ancestors, the spectral tarsus and the tree shrew. There are photographs of these animals and clever diagrams representing man's place in Nature and his affinities with apes and lower beings."—New Statesman

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 12 '24 550w

"Why Professor Elliot Smith, once he steps over the borders of pure anatomy, should throw restraint and logic to the winds it is hard to explain, but those who want to use the scientific method in ethnology will be grateful to him as a sort of advocatus diaboli, who stimulates and invigorates through the very quality of inviting protest."

+ — New Statesman 23:527 Ag 9 '24 700w

"Dr. Smith is not infallible and he is capable of committing errors of fact or carelessness which even the veriest numskull in science could detect. Nevertheless, Dr. Smith's 'The Evolution of Man' is the most lucid and readable account of the theory of evolution that I have read since Huxley. It is spirited and entertaining." Burton Rascoe

+ — N Y Tribune p21 Jl 20 '24 330w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Je 26 '24 800w

SMITH, HARRIET (LUMMIS) (MRS WILLIAM M. SMITH). Pollyanna of the orange blossoms. 313p il $2 Page

24-12285

"Pollyanna's experiences during her first year of house-keeping in a tiny New York apartment. In spite of the fact that she has in Jimmy Pendleton an adoring and adored husband, Pollyanna has her troubles. Besides, she has the troubles and problems of the new friends she makes added to her own. For being Pollyana, she cannot help winning the confidence of these new friends, especially of Judith, the young housekeeper who hates housekeeping. But the troubles are all met and the problems solved for the most part in true Pollyanna fashion."—Lit R

"Pollyanna's new sponsor is Harriet Lummis Smith, and it is not extravagant praise at all to say that she is a most worthy successor to Mrs. Porter. There is a certain dignity of restraint with which she carries on the Pollyanna legend that makes her work not only entirely acceptable, but, if one may say so without being accused of lèse-majesté; even more enjoyable reading than the two books that preceded it." R. M. B.

+ Lit R p940 Ag 2 '24 400w

"All in all, 'Pollyanna of the Orange Blossoms' is considerably more true to life and a better book than its predecessors. Revolting as is professionalized optimism, it is no worse than chronic pessimism. Both are vices. The message of Pollyanna will assuredly not be literally adopted by its readers." J: Carter

+ — N Y Times p10 Je 22 '24 750w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Tribune p25 Jl 20 '24 850w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 80w

SMITH, HENRY JUSTIN. Josslyn; the story of an incorrigible dreamer. 252p $2 Hyman-McGee

24-10843

The story is a character study of a dreamer and poet who is also a born newspaper man, The son of a professor who had taught him his love of literature, Josslyn is plunged when a mere youth into the maelstrom of a big Chicago daily, almost sinking at times but kept afloat by the power of his spirit. His two-sided nature is always in conflict, sensitiveness and self-doubt with courage and a certain "flame of authority" which his parents had put in him, shyness and timidity with an unusual capacity for loving and making friends, love of country with the pull of the city. And thru all his soul goes marching on.

Booklist 21:70 N '24

"Out of Josslyn's dreams, his fancy and his tenderness Mr. Smith has woven the firmness and charm of his 'Josslyn,' a distinguished piece of character drawing, a tale of distinction in the telling." F. A. G.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 21 '24 580w

Nation 119:221 Ag 27 '24 50w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 39:307 Ag 6 '24 60w

"It is so clearly realized, with many fine lines and delicate touches of color, that the reader sees Josslyn as a very real figure and understands him as if he were an intimate friend. It is a creative portrayal of vitality, done in a realistic manner that is none the less realistic and successful although it is so finely, delicately and elusively pictured. . . Josslyn is a figure that almost any novelist might be proud to have achieved."

+ N Y Times p13 Je 15 '24 250w

SMITH, PAUL JORDAN-. On strange altars. 340p $2 A. & C. Boni [8s 6d Brentano's, ltd.]

804 Literature—History and criticism

24-3503

"A collection of essays by an American critic on writers old and new, which are strictly individual in their outlook." (The Times [London] Lit Sup) "He has written of writers as different as Rabelais and Henri-Frederic Amiel or Walter Pater and Walt Whitman. His range is from James Joyce to Ambrose Bierce, and he writes with equal penetration and enthusiasm of Thomas Hardy and Casanova. In addition there are also sacrifices and incense for the altars upon which are inscribed the names of Anatole France, Oscar Wilde, Mark Twain, Havelock Ellis, Samuel Butler, Cervantes, and in an essay on 'Bibles for Skeptics,' a number of others." (Lit R)

"The book is sometimes sophomoric, sometimes marked by over-emphasis (which two characteristics may be the same thing), but it is always entertaining if not taken too seriously."

+ — Bookm 59:356 My '24 100w

"He has written well and entertainingly of some old and new writers. His appreciation of Cabell is a particularly fine one."

+ Lit R p577 Mr 8 '24 330w

"His critical impressions are solidly, although at times a trifle elaborately, presented; his style, as well as his philosophy, seems to owe something to each of his favorites, but possibly this may simply be out of compliment to them."

+ — Nation 118:617 My 28 '24 60w

Pratt p31 summer '24

"Mr Jordan-Smith's viewpoints are all of them interesting, and not infrequently provocative. The volume is not ephemeral, and while it is not scholastic criticism, it offers to readers an opportunity to view certain authors in the most refreshing of lights; the appreciative. In these days of analytic criticism such an opportunity should find a real welcome."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 25 '24 210w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p210 Ap 3 '24 430w

SMITH, SAMUEL CALVIN. How is your heart? 208p $1.75 Boni & Liveright

616.12 Heart—Diseases 24-16198

A doctor talks informally about heart disease and its prevention, faulty habits and unhealthy conditions of the body by which it is induced, heart signs which should be looked into and how to regulate one's life when damage has already been done.

Booklist 21:11 O '24

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 30 '24 100w

"The author writes in easy, flowing vein, using plain everyday language, and eschewing difficult medical terms. The use, ad libitum, of numerous aphorisms and trite sayings is very refreshing, but they detract from the cogency of the professional advice. Aside from these slight idiosyncrasies, which make the book 'different,' the seeker after reliable information will find the little volume quite useful. To aid him is a good index." W. C. S.

+ — Lit R p11 S 6 '24 230w

New Statesman 24:248 N 29 '24 260w

"A comprehensive, small volume and within its pages can be found many other interesting things, mostly practical suggestions as to the management of the body."

+ N Y Times p6 Je 29 '24 500w

N Y Tribune p10 N 16 '24 160w

SMITH, WALLACE. On the trail in Yellowstone. 105p il $1.50 Putnam

917.87 Yellowstone national park 24-13349

A happy little book about a three weeks' packhorse trip in the Yellowstone, with many sketches by the author. There were eight people in the party but the mules are introduced first and are prominent thruout in text and pictures. The party hunt big game, fish for trout and talk and sing around the campfire "in an undisturbed fairyland of mountains, rivers and forests, all populated with wild life like a vast unfettered zoo."

"A thoroughly joyous little volume." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 14 '24 580w

Cleveland p96 D '24

"Taken all in all, 'On the Trail in Yellowstone' seems to me as delightful a breath of out-of-doors as I have yet encountered between the covers of a book." H. M. Albright

+ Int Bk R p455 My '24 680w

"Unaffected, unpretentious and thoroughly delightful little book."

+ N Y Times p13 Je 8 '24 780p

"One of the most charming little volumes that has come my way in many a day. There is no age limit on this book; on the contrary, it was undoubtedly written for adults. The sketches are by the author and are at least as good as the text." G. M. Goldman

+ N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 130w

St Louis p416 D '24

SMYTHE, GEORGE FRANKLIN. Kenyon college; its first century. 349p il $5 Yale univ. press [23s Milford]

378.7 Kenyon college 24-9352

The author in his preface states that this book does not pretend to be a complete history of the college. "It is only a sketch drawn chiefly to show in outline the features and expression of Alma Mater as they have changed through the century." The book contains portraits of those men who contributed to the welfare of the college, and there are also appendices, a list of sources and an index.

"This is a well-rounded and convincing outline of the struggles and achievements of a college which has attained a recognized place in the religious and educational life of the country. Apparently the work is unusually free from errors." A. L. Cross

+ Am Hist R 30:185 O '24 280w

"It is a long story and he tells it with much detail, but picturesquely also; with graphic backgrounding of the social life, the manners and customs, the distinctive characteristics of the successive phases of college life and of its presidencies."

+ N Y Times p7 My 11 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p466 Jl 24 '24 160w

SMYTHE, JOHN ARMSTRONG. Lead; its oc-
2 curence in nature; the modes of its extraction, its properties and uses; with some account of its principal compounds. (Monographs on industrial chemistry) 343p il $5.25 (16s) Longmans

669.4 Lead 23-18287

"Deals rather briefly with history, occurrence, metallurgy, properties, uses, and important compounds."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:437 O '24

SNAITH, JOHN COLLIS. There is a tide. 374p $2 Appleton

24-7947

A sprightly story of an American girl, a product of the Middle West, and her attempt to be a "go-getter." Mame Durrance lands in England with the sole idea of being successful, but the gods plan otherwise and poor Mame, who now prefers to be called Miss Amethyst Du Rance, has a hard time of it. Her letters to the home papers are constantly rejected. When all seems lost "there is a tide in the affairs of men." Mame knows that and thru a chance acquaintance with Lady Violet, success comes. They write society letters at fabulous sums. Lady Violet's brother falls for the little "go-getter" and just as it seems that she is to secure for herself a title, she nobly gives him up so that he may marry an heiress and save the titled family. Virtue is rewarded.

Booklist 21:70 N '24

"When it is so easy for things to end happily why don't writers see to it oftener? Possibly because they want things true to life, and that seldom worries Mr. Snaith now. When he wrote such stories as 'The Adventurous Lady' we did not care. There was a splash and a dash to them. This time we are washed in upon his tide, and feel somewhat stranded on the shore." I. W. L.

— Boston Transcript p1 My 3 '24 500w

Cleveland p68 S '24

Lit R p730 My 3 '24 300w

"It is a leisurely novel, a little too leisurely at times, perhaps, but interesting and entertaining, full of clever touches and excellent bits of description, a lightly, gayly told tale of Anglo-American relations."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 13 '24 850w

"Mr Snaith does his best to assemble all the American slang of the past one score and ten years in order that his heroine may appear to the world as an American, and no mistake about it, in every word. Like other serious British novelists he supposes that every time an American employs ten words, at least nine of them are slang." Donald Douglas

N Y Tribune p24 My 11 '24 800w

Reviewed by Malcolm Ross

N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 200w

"The story is none too good at the best, but the excess of supposed Yankee diction spoils what fun there is."

— Outlook 137:319 Je 25 '24 130w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:294 Je '24

"The story proper is impossible and inconsequential."

— Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Ag 14 '24 100w

SNEDEKER, MRS CAROLINE DALE
2 (PARKE) (CAROLINE DALE OWEN, pseud.). Theras and his town. 252p il $1.75 Doubleday

24-10212

"The home life and school life of Theras was passed in Athens in the days of Pericles. One exciting adventure he had with a slave trader, from whose clutches he was rescued. The revolt of Samos called his father off to war, and then word came back of his father's death. Necessity led Theras to Sparta to the house of Hippias, where for a time he labored and suffered under the Spartan system. Finally the Spartan hardness became too much for him, and with a little Perioceic boy, Abis, he escaped from Sparta, and made his way, in an exciting trip, back to Athens, where he found a ready welcome and the best of news."—Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News

"For fourth or fifth grade reading although younger children will enjoy it if read aloud to them."

Booklist 21:31 O '24

"The style of the book is simple, and it is easily understood by the children for whom it is intended. It is even interesting for those older as well."

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 S 14 '24 300w

SOHON, JULIAN ARELL, and SCHAAF, WILLIAM L., comps. Reference list of bibliographies. 100p $1.50 Wilson, H. W.

016.66 Chemistry—Bibliography. Chemical technology—Bibliography

This reference list of chemical bibliographies is mostly confined to bibliographies published since 1900, a few earlier ones having been included because of their importance or historic interest. They are chiefly from English, French and German publications, with a few from Italian, Swedish and Spanish sources.

Booklist 20:320 Je '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:91 Ap '24

SOLANO, SOLITA. Uncertain feast. 336p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam

24-28670

"In this novel Miss Solano has attempted to depict the struggle of a very human man, both in business and in love. The scene is laid in New York, and Daniel Geer is the hero. He has fought against extreme odds to get to the top, and he has arrived there. He is the editor of a thriving newspaper, a strong and determined worker, but weak and neurotic in his affairs with women. The story concerns itself with the unrequited love of Daniel Geer for Amy Fiske. While taking tea at her home his emotions carry him away, and he proposes marriage to her. Just why Amy accepts him remains a mystery to the reader. Both are strong-willed and selfish. They lack harmony, and whereas Amy is indifferent and lazy, Daniel is selfish and even brutal. His efforts to get from life everything he can without regard for others are unsatisfying.

His triumphs are bitter and his successes without rewards. Daniel Geer is a figure of strength to the world, but a failure in his home. Paradoxically speaking, he is both a giant and a pigmy."—Int Bk R

"Impeccable in its psychology, and written with vigorous sophistication, this is a story for readers past their freshman year." Sidney Williams
Bookm 60:349 N '24 170w

"The average reader may fail to understand certain of the many classical allusions with which she diversifies her pages. Like other self-educated persons, she displays her information too eagerly, and she regards the world as her oyster. She has conspicuous talent. But, like her hero, she does not seem to understand the meaning of good taste."
— + Boston Transcript p4 O 8 '24 230w

"In spite of some disagreeable elements in the book, the reader feels that it contains a great deal of truth about a certain type of American. Miss Solano has made her characters live—all except Rose Elliot, Mr. Geer's temperamental secretary. The story holds one's attention to the very end." R. L. Kurzman
+ — Int Bk R p826 O '24 300w

"Miss Solano writes for the sophisticated, omitting no amorous or even obstetrical details, but one can hardly question the sincerity of her artistic purpose." Herschel Brickell
+ — Lit R p4 S 20 '24 470w

"A clever piece of work."
+ New Statesman 24:246 N 29 '24 260w

N Y Times p8 S 21 '24 340w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p1 S 21 '24 500w

"Miss Solano has written her story of Geer and his tragedy of weakness bound to raw strength in a series of hurriedly laconic phrases doubtless intended to convey an impression of vividness. To us the style is abhorrent." E. W. Osborn
— N Y World p7e S 21 '24 130w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould
Sat R 138:315 S 27 '24 160w

"Miss Solano is the first of our feminine realists to be absolutely ruthless, in the sense that Theodore Dreiser and Ben Hecht are ruthless. She has written a powerful, ugly, photographic book, with passionate passages quite in the approved modern style." W: R. Benet
Sat R of Lit 1:243 N 1 '24 600w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p580 S 18 '24 100w

SOMMERVILLE, FRANKFORT, pseud. See Story, A. M. S.

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH. Leaves from a Russian diary. 310p $3 Dutton

947 Russia—History—Revolution, 1917. Bolshevism—Russia 24-25543

The diary begins in January, 1917, with the outbreak of the Russian revolution and closes in September, 1922, with the writer's banishment from Russia and his coming to America. Sorokin was Kerensky's secretary, editor of the Revolution's official newspaper and a member of the provisional government. When the Kerensky régime gave way to the Bolsheviki, Sorokin was proscribed as an enemy of the Revolution. The story of his experiences with the Red terror—his wanderings, poverty and starvation, his arrests and escapes—and his commentary on the Soviet régime, makes up the diary.

Reviewed by C: Recht
Nation 119:577 N 26 '24 1050w

"A remarkable human document—a tale of the Terror, of prison tortures, of wanderings, half-starved and shivering through forests and living in huts and garrets. We have nothing so vivid of the French Terror. Here we see the intelligentsia and witness their martyrdom." C. G. Bowers
N Y World p8e N 9 '24 750w
R of Rs 71:109 Ja '25 180w

SOUTHWART, ELIZABETH. Brontë moors and villages; from Thornton to Haworth. 190p il $4 Dodd [15s Lane]

914.274 Yorkshire, England. Brontë family

A description of the Yorkshire country, home of Patrick Brontë, minister, and his three daughters, Emily, Charlotte and Anne. Intermingled with descriptions of the little villages known to the Brontës and the surrounding moors are legends and ghost stories, anecdotes of the villagers, and reminiscences of the Brontë sisters, culled from numerous sources.

"This is more than just another book about the Brontës. It provides in combination a delightful account of Yorkshire moors and villages, together with sympathetic sketches, in perfect taste, of real Brontës who lived in them. . . Altogether, it is a work considerably above the average of topographical writing, and the illustrations, by Mr. McKenzie, though varying somewhat in execution, convey the spirit of the moors very well." F. V. Morley
+ Lit R p850 Je 28 '24 650w

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz
N Y Times p5 F 17 '24 1650w

"A capital book about the Yorkshire scenes associated with the Brontë sisters. Illustrated beautifully in color and in black and white. The legends and anecdotes of the region are well told; these, and the lonely atmosphere of the moors which is suggested, make a fascinating book."
+ Outlook 136:403 Mr 5 '24 110w

"She has given an admirable description of the whole district, with sketches of its inhabitants, which is both interesting in itself and highly valuable as a commentary on the works of the Brontës."
+ Sat R 136:702 D 29 '23 300w

"Miss Southwart is a mine of memories and has an eye for her scene."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p890 D 20 '23 550w

Wis Lib Bul 20:93 Ap '24

SOUVESTRE, PIERRE, and ALLAIN, MARCEL. Long arm of Fantômas; tr. into English by A. R. Allinson. 320p $1.75 Macaulay [7s 6d S. Paul]

24-5504

"One of a series of French crime stories by these authors. In the present volume Fantômas has just succeeded in convincing the authorities of his identity with Juve, the police inspector, who is his most dangerous antagonist; and poor Juve is in gaol, while the police are looking for the journalist Fandor, who is Juve's greatest ally, and therefore under suspicion. When Fantômas gets to work again and first kidnaps the Minister of Justice in broad daylight and afterwards kills him, while Juve is still in gaol, it is evident that a mistake has been made, and he then contrives to make the blundering authorities think that Fandor is the real man. He deals still more effectively with a celebrated American detective, who comes over uninvited to 'wipe the eye' of the Paris police and is cordially welcomed by them."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is impossible to skip a page, for the entire story is admirably and ingeniously conceived and might be used as a model for those who write the unprepossessing novels of the day."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 23 '24 120w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
N Y Tribune p27 My 4 '24 360w

Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 110w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p54 Ja 24 '24 200w

SPADONI, ADRIANA. Mrs Phelps' husband. 428p $2 Bobbs
24-6687

"The plot is unfolded through an interesting interplay of character. First there is Stuart Phelps, a drifter and dreamer, waiting for some one to sweep him off his feet emotionally. To him comes the teacher, Elinor Harrison. She quite deliberately deceives herself into thinking that his investigating interest is love, and they are married. Elinor had been brought up in a smoothly running household where convention, virtue and material comforts were the staples of existence. Phelps was perfectly in tune with his easy-going Greenwich Village environment. However, the sincerity of Elinor's love might have bridged the gap and reached Phelps's questing spirit, had she not found it impossible to abandon her inherited instincts. She attempted to manage him into her way of living, and, attractive as she was, he came near to hating her for it."—Int Bk R

"It isn't the subject matter that makes her story weak and futile; it's the way she handled her materials. Had she used the same material to write a short story, she might have done something clever and sparkling. It might at least have been interesting." D: H. Fink
— Detroit News p14 O 12 '24 600w

"Stylistically (odious word) 'Mrs. Phelps' Husband' is almost perfect. The style is simple in the extreme and there is a free use of unusually apt figures of speech; the story is told just as it should be told, and that is the most sincere compliment which we can pay any author." S. M.
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p5 Ag 17 '24 210w

"In her study of the delicately adjusted relationships between a man and a woman, the author of 'Mrs. Phelps' Husband' has steered a skilful course between Victorian sentimentality and unnecessary vulgarity. In the main the book is honest and decently reticent. Moreover, husband and wife are drawn with such skill and humanity that even to the last the reader's sympathy is not wholly with either the one or the other." Elizabeth Wyman
+ Int Bk R p554 Je '24 350w

"There are too many inconsistencies. Stuart Phelps is merely a sounding board for the erudite observations of the writer. Not until toward the end of the book does he become a convincing character, then his creator consents to bring him out of his detachment and show him a being of human qualities and impulses."
— + N Y Times p14 Mr 23 '24 620w

"A novel which must be reckoned high on the year's latest lists of fiction." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 440w

SPAETH, SIGMUND GOTTFRIED. Common sense of music. 375p il $2 Boni & Liveright
780 Music 24-15685

"Through his writings, lectures, and recent talks over the radio the author has taken the forbidding reputation away from the musical 'classics' and made it possible for many to appreciate music that previously had seemed little more than a rather too-long-continued series of sounds. The heart of his theories has been put into 'The Common Sense of Music.' "—Outlook

"An imperfect but entertaining and illuminating volume." J. T. Shipley
+ — Lit R p987 Ag 23 '24 400w

"Dr. Spaeth has achieved two impossibilities: he has written a low-brow textbook, and he has covered—thinly—the subject. . . His book will not lack the enormous sale he planned for it among women's clubs and public schools. If he is very lucky he will succeed in persuading his thousands of readers to listen to the music first and the player second, and to like what they like instead of what they ought to like."
Nation 119:605 D 3 '24 300w

"Those who enjoy hearing music, even the most blatant jazz, will find their enjoyment greatly increased by the common sense of this thoroughly enjoyable book."
+ Outlook 137:517 Jl 30 '24 200w

"May seem flippant to those who take their music too seriously, but will help others."
+ — Wis Lib Bul 20:174 Jl '24

SPEAKMAN, HAROLD. This above all. 374p
2 $2 Bobbs
24-21399

"Garrison Spaulding, twenty, arrives in Greenwich Village from Paris, where he has been studying art. He takes quarters in Washington Square South and, after many hardships, goes to Chicago to instruct in an Art School. There he meets, and falls in love with, Stella Brooke. The war comes and he enlists. He returns again from France to the Square and begins to gain some success as an advertising artist. After a nervous breakdown he goes to a little village in the interior of China, where he finds himself. He achieves paintings which, upon his final return to New York, meet with immediate acclamation and sale: he marries Stella."—Sat R of Lit

"Characters lack intensity but it is a readable account of the struggle of a young painter to achieve absolute honesty in his art."
+ — Booklist 21:113 D '24

"This is his first novel. It should not be his last, for it is a notably fine performance." H. L. Pangborn
+ Lit R p6 O 4 '24 540w

"Mr. Speakman inclines to bombast and lofty moralization. For this reason, chiefly, his characters fail to convince."
— Sat R of Lit 1:383 D 13 '24 300w

SPEED, HAROLD. Science and practice of
2 oil painting. (Universal art ser.) 275p il $7.50 Scribner [21s Chapman & H.]
750 Painting [24-19308]

"This biggish book of English make is at once more and less than its title indicates. It discusses quite thoroughly if discursively the practice of oil painting, while the science of the art is virtually neglected. There is incidental discussion of Modernist painting, weighing of the advantage and disadvantage of old and present procedures, with constant useful reference to great paintings of the past."—Sat R of Lit

"He gives a great many hints of a purely technical nature, with regard to pigments, oils, &c., and his lists of the colours used by certain eminent Academicians, and the order in which they place them on the palette, will no doubt be interesting to artists. This technical instruction occupies rather more than half the book, and it is a pity that Mr. Speed did not content himself with so much. Unfortunately he has considered it necessary to preface it by an excursion into the morasses of æsthetics and art criticism, where he is not even very sure of the familiar stepping-stones on which he strives to support himself."
— + Nation and Ath 35:670 Ag 30 '24 580w

"Mr. Speed's book should appeal almost as much to the sincere picture lover as to the student painter. By its lucid, witty and economical exposition of the craft of oil painting, it will not only help the practitioner but sharpen any man's perceptions. . . We may find ourselves in partial or even complete disagreement with Mr. Speed's estimate of modern art, but we must recognize his sane and fair point of view. He does not, with most older painters, misrepresent modern art. He honestly dislikes it, but he understands what has caused it, and he confesses the measure of good which he sees in it."
+ Sat R 138:362 O 11 '24 620w

"The book is agreeably written and will interest a thoughtful student."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:329 N 29 '24 120w

"When Mr. Speed comes down from the cloud-cuckooland of æsthetic theory to the solid ground of painting he is an admirable guide. . . Nothing could be more illuminating than Mr. Speed's chapter, with illustrations, on 'Elementary Tone Exercises,' Equally good are his notes, again with illustrations, in the chapter on 'Painting from the Life,' on the methods of individual great painters."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p521 Ag 28 '24 1100w

SPEED, MRS MAUDE. Through central France to the Pyrenees. 245p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

914.4 France—Description and travel 24-12767

An account written in conversational style of a simple tour thru central France which begins on board the S. S. Homeric crossing the channel. There are many points of interest described including the volcanic region about Clermont-Ferrand, the Tarn Gorge and the eastern Pyrenees. Illustrated with sketches by the author.

"While Mrs. Speed's experiences have not, as she admits, anything specially new or thrilling about them, they are delightful and are told delightfully from a refreshingly unconventional viewpoint." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 12 '24 850w

"She gives very full descriptions of her experiences, and to the prospective traveller through this part of France her book will be useful."
+ Sat R 138:123 Ag 2 '24 140w
Spec 133:263 Ag 23 '24 130w

"Her work has some value in its power of suggestion, but it would be of little use as the sole guide of an inquiring traveller."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p452 Jl 17 '24 140w

SPEED, NELL, pseud. See Sampson, E. S.

SPENDER, JOHN ALFRED. Life of the Right Hon. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman. 2v 350;444p il $10 Houghton [42s Hodder & S.]

B or 92 Campbell-Bannerman, Sir Henry [24-765]

The work is based on a diary kept by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and also upon a mass of papers, correspondence and other documents, some private, others official. The author, who was for years editor of the Westminster Gazette, had close contacts with British politics and hence was well fitted for the task of interpreting the life of this premier.

"This work more than sustains the author's literary reputation. It is in most respects an admirable example of what a biography ought to be. Throughout the two volumes the author is careful to keep his own views and judgments well in the background and to present the personality and policy of his subject in proper relations to the events and philosophy of his own day. He has shown rare discrimination in the selection of his original material and in fitting it into his interpretation of the life and character of the deceased statesman." C. D. Allin
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:805 N '24 1250w

Reviewed by Edmund Noble
Boston Transcript p4 Ap 19 '24 1800w
Canadian Hist R 5:69 Mr '24 140w

"In Mr. Spender, who was for many years closely associated with him and who was the ablest exponent of his policies in the London press, Campbell-Bannerman has found an ideal biographer. The book, one must add, has the advantage of a marvelous index." H. W. Horwill
+ Nation 118:711 Je 18 '24 750w

"It is possible that he is overemphatic on detail. There is much to be said for the analytic rather than the narrative biography. Be that as it may, we have in these lucid and well arranged volumes the material on which to base a judgment of a decisive epoch in British history." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p3 My 4 '24 1600w

"The work is adequately done. More than that, it is done with gusto, insight, and humorous appreciation of a humorous personality."
+ Outlook 137:69 My 14 '24 300w

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler
Pol Sci Q 39:506 S '24 1050w

"The appearance of this notable work at this time may be taken as a good sign in so far as it indicates a willingness on the part of the English reading public to return to a consideration of things that occurred in their history before the fateful year 1914."
+ R of Rs 69:558 My '24 180w

"A most interesting book, full of substance, understanding and wise comment; admirably planned and very deftly and pithily written; never tedious and never flashy; in the truest sense critical, and, at the same time, giving the reader so strong an impression of reality and lifelikeness that when he closes it he feels as if he had actually been speaking to 'C.-B.' and had seen him with his own eyes." Noel Skelton
+ Spec 132:54 Ja 12 '24 1650w

SPERO, STERLING DENHARD. Labor movement in a government industry; a study of employee organization in the postal service. (Workers' bookshelf) 320p $2 Doran

353.4 Postal service—United States. Trade unions 24-19314

The book deals with the organization movement among a group of American public employees—those of the Postal service, "the largest single employer of labor in this country, if not in the world." After a short survey of the character and status of unionism in the civil service, the author gives a full account of its history among United States postal employees.

"It is a timely book, directly written and representing no little research." J. G.
+ Bookm 60:adv N '24 120w

Reviewed by W. D. Lane
Sat R of Lit 1:184 O 11 '24 700w

SPIEGEL, JULIUS, comp. Standard business ^{2} dictionary; a reference book for the modern business and professional man, containing definitions and elucidations of terms common to individual vocations, but not in the ordinary dictionaries. 447p $4 Malkan

658.03 Business—Dictionaries [23-6279]

"The publication has no counterpart either in the range of contents, or the thorough treatment given the language of the various vocations."—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:604 D '24

SPINGARN, JOEL ELIAS. Poems. 143p $1.75 Harcourt

811 24-9912

The poems are divided into the following sections: The secret; Hell and purgatory; Young love; Vision of youth; The new Hesperides. The earlier poems are grouped in the last three sections, and the later poems in the first two. "The New Hesperides" has already appeared in an earlier volume.

Bookm 59:607 Jl '24 80w

"Spingarn's reputation as a critic makes it difficult to understand why he has not been more exacting in the case of his own output as a verse-writer."
— Dial 77:172 Ag '24 100w

"The fabric of the poems, content and technic, is decidedly usual—harmless rhyme and unsounded reason. Awkwardness is a sign of health in a young plant, but in a plant that should have reached maturity it is not inviting." H. A. P.

SPINGARN, JOEL ELIAS—Continued

— Lit R p923 Jl 26 '24 120w

"The results of almost twenty-five years of effort in poetry might have been richer and more varied, but Mr. Spingarn's urge has steadily been toward freedom and beauty, and his work, if somewhat thin, has an impressive integrity."

— + Nation 118:591 My 21 '24 50w

"Mr. Spingarn has in some magical way, not unrelated to a poetic sense, been able to inject a charm and naivete into his bare, uninspired verses which carry the reader on beyond a casual appraisal. But that, alas, is all there is to it." Milton Raison

— + N Y Tribune p22 Jl 27 '24 250w

"Dr. Spingarn versifies suavely, rhymes gracefully, and phrases tritely. He produces nothing startling, largely because his ideas, which work upon conventional and unconventional love themes and patriotic religious tributes, turn up nothing very poignant or satisfying in ideas old or new."

— + Outlook 137:28 S 3 '24 150w

"The poems vary markedly in worth but there are fire, sincerity and personality on every page."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6 Je 16 '24 260w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p662 O 23 '24 560w

SPITTAL, JOHN KER, comp. and ed. Contemporary criticisms of Dr Samuel Johnson, his works and his biographers. 412p $6 Dutton [16s Murray]

B or 92 Johnson, Samuel 24-2032

The papers collected by Mr Spittal were written some hundred and fifty years ago and published in fifty-two volumes of the Monthly Review, one of the two important critical periodicals that existed during Johnson's day. The collection which for the first time is being published in volume form gives the reader an idea of how books by and about Johnson were received.

"This volume adds infinitesimally little to the portrait which we already possess of the argumentative Sam; nevertheless it will be pounced upon by all Johnsonians as a welcome addition to the literature of their hero." Hugo Sonnenschein

— + Lit R p974 Ag 16 '24 450w

"It is a substantiation of the figure already enshrined in the minds of Johnson lovers that will be found in John Ker Spittal's painstaking book, a work of editing that has long been necessary to complete one's shelves of Johnsoniana." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 13 '24 1900w

Outlook 137:613 Ag 20 '24 30w

SPITZER, MARIAN. Who would be free. 319p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-21924

At fifteen Eleanor Hoffman definitely feels the urge to be free—free from the bonds of Jewish family tradition to which her mother adheres so strictly, and from the limitations of her group of family friends. After an exhausting struggle she wins out to the extent of living an independent artist life in a studio of her own. The man she loved is killed in the war, but in time she forgets and loves again. She is on the verge of marrying Steve Sayre when her life-long habit of complete independence proves itself stronger than her love, which of the two, she prefers to lose.

Reviewed by Sidney Williams

Bookm 60:348 N '24 140w

"She knows so much of her race that Miss Spitzer compels us to pay attention when we do not know what she is driving at. It is a novel to create discussion. Freudians and followers after the submerged complexities of human nature will devour it with appreciation. But those who are fed up with Main Street, be it of New York or Gopher Prairie, will pass it by. And others, like us will sigh for wasted talent, and wonder why the book was ever written." K. S.

— Boston Transcript p4 S 20 '24 780w

"We admire Miss Spitzer's book just as we admire her heroine. We found 'Who Would Be Free' and Eleanor Hoffman equally interesting and equally alive. Never for a moment did we doubt that we were looking at life itself." Madelin Leof

+ Lit R p3 O 4 '24 430w

"The whole affair of this novel is bound to nettle the reader excessively, for it is difficult to tell exactly what it is all about and whether, after all, this bit of silliness was not intended as a subtle burlesque to follow in the wake of the self-confessed amateurish writing of Daisy Ashford."

— N Y Times p9 S 28 '24 430w

"As a first novel the book is, on the whole, worth the reader's attention. After all, it does take some courage to write a book nowadays where sex is disdained and deemed unworthy." Milton Raison

+ — N Y Tribune p8 O 19 '24 680w

N Y World p8e N 9 '24 100w

"Miss Spitzer thinks clearly. Her social ideas are balanced, ordered and poised, and in her book she has refused to let herself be stampeded into over-sophistication. Yet one single fault almost destroys the quality of her entire work: her characters speak in so artificial and strained a phraseology that many of her pages are positively annoying."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:209 O 18 '24 200w

SQUIRE, JOHN COLLINGS (SOLOMON EAGLE, pseud.). Essays on poetry. 228p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

821 English poetry

The essays in this volume deal almost exclusively with English poets—Tennyson, Matthew Arnold, Alice Meynell, Robert Bridges, Thomas Hardy, A. E. Housman, W. B. Yeats and Edmund Blunden. There are two papers on Subject in poetry and a chapter on eighteenth-century verse.

Bookm 59:352 My '24 70w

"We have for a long time given up expecting to read anything very original or very distinguished from Mr Squire's pen. He is a kind of Prof. Saintsbury of the Georgian poets, orthodox, conscientious, and very tame. The most interesting essay in this particular collection is the piece on Edmund Blunden's poetry."

— + Dial 77:83 Jl '24 70w

"When this man of many pursuits writes essays upon poetry, the reader is assured of opinions by one who is at once both artist and critic. In a word, he will expect, and he will find, penetrating discussion of poetry set forth in excellent prose." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p14 My 4 '24 350w

"Although a number of these were published in the form of book reviews they transcend the occasion. The least of these favorably challenges comparison with the best in the 'Books in General' series. The essays on A. E. Housman, Hardy and Yeats are understanding, intelligent and sympathetic." H. S.

+ N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 600w

STACPOOLE, HENRY DE VERE STACPOOLE. Golden ballast. 314p $2 Dodd

24-21805

What more can a red-blooded young man want than a huge treasure, beautiful girl, danger and the land of buccaneers all rolled in one? All these things befell Richard Sebright in a very curious way. He started with the treasure which was the golden ballast of the dilapidated mystery ship "Baltrum." The girl, Sheila Dennis, was on board when the ship was purchased and when the ballast was discovered by Dicky. But the danger lay in converting these blocks of gold into money without arousing the suspicions of the government. So Dicky consulted his lawyer who gave a vague hint as to what could be done in a case like this. Dicky immediately acts and in a few days the Baltrum is southward bound on a hazardous journey, ostensibly to seek a hidden treasure. The journey is almost completed when a traitor is discovered on board but his plans are frustrated by the timely interference of Dicky and his friends.

Booklist 21:154 Ja '25

"There is poetry in its style. There is an almost rapturous note occasionally in the mood of its creator. He knows how to write. He knows how to enthrall us. He does it gloriously." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 27 '24 580w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p56 D '24 420w

"It is quite an achievement to write a tale of treasure and of the sea in which no one is slain, except perhaps off stage. The excitement is founded on less usual motifs. And the book is far too bright and amusing to require a really heavy dose of mere excitement." Philip Coan

+ Lit R p9 O 4 '24 260w

"The tale has humor, more than a touch of satire, several clearly drawn characters, good descriptions, plenty of action and an ingenious plot, with an excellently devised and really exciting climax."

+ N Y Times p27 D 21 '24 360w

N Y Tribune p12 N 2 '24 190w

"Altogether a jolly and exciting tale."

+ Outlook 138:258 O 15 '24 40w

St Louis p399 D '24

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 139:13 Ja 3 '25 420w

STALLINGS, LAURENCE. Plumes. 348p $2 Harcourt

24-19532

The Plumes were all fighters from the first Jabez in 1685 to Lieutenant Richard Plume in 1918. When the United States entered the war Richard left his instructorship in a small southern college and his charming wife Esme and sailed for France. In due time he returned, a battered piece of human wreckage, to spend months in hospitals. As soon as he was able to get about with the aid of canes and a heavy iron brace he found a position in a Washington laboratory and Esme and little Richard joined him. Tortured by his sufferings and the knowledge that Esme, too, suffered Richard went back on the creed of the Plumes. He learned to hate war and his life became a burning protest against its crime and futility.

Booklist 21:70 N '24

"His final picture is clear and terrifying. I can remember no recent novel with a more vivid opening chapter, and the climactic scene of the story has such psychological power that I shall not attempt to dull it by description. If only there were some new way of saying that here is a book that every American should read." J. F.

+ Bookm 60:219 O '24 370w

Boston Transcript p3 S 6 '24 700w

"Written for the most part with the utmost economy in words, it is flooded throughout with dramatic energy. Painfully fair and quite relentless in emotional accuracy, it constitutes, I believe, the first real contribution to a hitherto unwritten page of contemporary life—American war history since 1918." C. R. Walker

+ Ind 113:290 O 18 '24 850w

Int Bk R p900 N '24 550w

"With one possible qualification, it is not an intemperate, overstrained book. Indeed, in its main lines the case is proved; it is hardly possible to question the general rightness of the writer's attitude toward war and toward the selfishness, and, above all, the vast stupidities that make war continuingly possible. And regarded simply as a story, as a moving narrative of fierce emotion, the book must be given high rank. His angry young hero and the valiant wife and mother are brilliantly presented figures; realities of the day, not imagined or invented, but soundly perceived and shown truthfully." H. L. Pangborn

+ — Lit R p979 Ag 23 '24 550w

"Neither Mr. Stallings's style nor his manner is particularly original or distinctive, but they furnish a clear medium by means of which his thought and passion are communicated." J. W. Krutch

— + Nation 119:644 D 10 '24 1050w

"If Plumes, by reason of its narrowness, its singleness of suffering is not an interesting book, nor it characters very real, except in that core of themselves which feels and suffers really deeply, it is far harder to forget than many a more interesting book. Plumes, since it is an almost undiluted record of personal anguish so absorbing and terrible as easily to affect the reader, is the kind of book that makes wars permanently less interesting." Robert Littell

+ — New Repub 40:394 Ag 27 '24 1150w

"Mr. Stallings has recorded this tale with sympathy and with burning conviction. His ideas, however, do not flow smoothly in the form of a novel."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 24 '24 550w

"When a novel written obviously because the author could not contain the resentment consuming him against an evil of life, contains workmanship so exquisite and so sensitive that one knows not whether to regard the book as criticism or as beauty, there has been a great achievement. Such an achievement is Laurence Stallings's 'Plumes.'" Leonard Cline

+ N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 500w

Outlook 139:36 Ja 7 '25 600w

STANFORD, ALFRED B. City out of the sea. 343p $2 Appleton

24-12278

A sea-going narrative with Michael Ballard, a criminal lawyer by profession, but also an artist and dreamer, playing the principal rôle. Ballard, with an inordinate love for sea-faring folk, frequents Big Dick's floating bar. One night the old hull sets out for sea having on board Ballard with a group of strange companions. Life on shipboard teems with episodes emphasizing these grotesque characters. However, the influence of beautiful Guilda with whom he falls in love brings with it the hope of the realization of his dream which rises like "a city out of the sea."

"A sea yarn offers more opportunity than others for realities and beauties, but of these there are few in this story."

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 25 '24 300w

Cleveland p84 N '24

"Mr. Stanford has a story to tell and he manages his narrative with dramatic skill throughout a complex plot, which it would be unfair to explain, since the tale depends largely upon its suspense; but the whole thing is so high keyed that it leaves one with a certain sense of strain." H. L. P.

+ Lit R p938 Ag 2 '24 100w

"The atmosphere of the sea and of cities by the sea is well depicted, and one cannot but regret that the author has allowed elements of conventional melodrama and a laxness of workmanship to mar what might otherwise have been a highly pleasing book."

+ — N Y Times p9 Je 8 '24 340w

Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p580 S 18 '24 120w

STANISLAVSKY, CONSTANTIN. My life in art; tr. from the Russian by J. J. Robbins. 586p il $6 Little

B or 92 Actors. Moscow art theater. Theater—Russia 24-11643

The director of the Moscow art theater whose productions won such hearty response and appreciation in America tells the story of a life wholly devoted to his art. Making his début on the stage at the age of three, he has given all his thoughts, his time and his wealth to dramatic art. A contemporary of Chekhov, he lived the life of the old Russia which that dramatist painted and he gave an incomparable reproduction of it on the stage. It was a full cup of life from which he drank and his book is a panorama of the stage and its artists. The second half of it is occupied with the foundation and development of the Moscow art theater. There are numerous illustrations.

Booklist 21:22 O '24
Cleveland p80 S '24
Dial 78:77 Ja '25 120w

"How simple the book is, how modestly written, and how wise, appears in the first chapter. . . Here is a writer of memoirs who dares to stand in the open and say what he has to say in full daylight. For this reason Stanislavsky, among authors who attempt to write about their art, is sui generis. His book teaches as well as entertains. Without magnifying the success of his experiments, he pans the gold out of them and freely hands it over to his successors." Willis Steell

+ Int Bk R p578 Jl '24 1750w

"The student of dramatic art, the actor, and the theatregoer may read these reminiscences with profit, for his theories have a practical basis. European and American authorities unite in praising the superior stagecraft of the Russian players. . . If at times the style appears awkward it is none the less masterful, and, one feels, natural to the man whose great contribution to the art of acting is sincerity." Drake De Kay

+ Lit R p834 Je 21 '24 550w

"One of the most fascinating of autobiographies." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 40:sup1 O 1 '24 2100w

"It is a volume full of human interest, of humor and pathos, of life and art. It is modest, it is simple and unassuming, and it throbs with life and with idealism." Herman Bernstein

+ N Y Times p1 My 25 '24 3300w

Reviewed by J: W. Crawford
N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 1050w

"A notable biography that will interest amateur as well as professional students of the drama."

+ Outlook 137:548 Ag 6 '24 200w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:378 Jl '24

Reviewed by R: Boleslawsky
Theatre Arts Mo 8:572 Ag '24 800w
Wis Lib Bul 20:174 Jl '24

STANLEY, ALBERT AUGUSTUS. Greek themes in modern musical settings. (Univ. of Michigan studies. Humanistic ser.) 385p il $4 Macmillan

780.9 Music, Greek and Roman. Greek drama—Incidental music 24-12222

"In his introduction, Professor Stanley, composer, teacher, conductor, and for many years director of the School of Music, University of Michigan, discusses the perplexing questions concerning the music performed in the theatres of ancient Greece. The full scores of the incidental music to MacKaye's 'Sappho and Phaon,' the 'Alcestis' and the 'Iphigenia in Tauris' of Euripides composed by Professor Stanley for the stage are published here with his arrangement of two fragments of ancient Greek music, his score for the Cantica of the 'Menaechmi' of Plautus, and his own symphonic poem 'Attis' which has been performed at orchestral concerts in Ann Arbor and Chicago. The volume also includes comments on the music for the various plays, with chapters on the stage setting and the dances for 'Iphigenia in Tauris' by Herbert A. Kenyon, while the costumes are described by Orma F. Butler."—Ind

"In this work Mr. Stanley has made a notable contribution both to the cause of classical education and to the history of music." L. N.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 14 '24 650w

Reviewed by Philip Hale
Ind 112:345 Je 21 '24 750w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p358 Je 5 '24 300w

STANNARD, HAROLD MARTIN. Fabric of Europe. 260p $3.50 Knopf [10s Collins]

940.2 Europe—Politics. International law and relations. Eastern question. European war, 1914-1919—Influence and results 24-4205

"A historical survey of international relations during the era before the War, together with concluding chapters on the treaty and the covenant." (Am Pol Sci R) "Mr. Stannard reduces the difficulties of Europe to two problems: the western question, that is the conflict as to whether Latin or Teuton shall unify Europe under its leadership; the eastern question, or the criss-cross of national paths in trying to reach the Mediterranean or to keep open the way to India." (Survey)

"The author displays a broad grasp of modern European history in all is phases, and writes with exemplary clearness."

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:427 My '24 50w

"Rich in thought and richer still in metaphor and historic allusion, this readable volume offers some interesting academic philosophizing as to the causes and consequences of the World War." S. B. F.

+ New Repub 40:80 S 17 '24 400w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:301 Je '24

"Sometimes, though rarely, we doubt the inevitability of results that Mr. Stannard proves very plausibly, especially when he seems too self-conscious about the great length and breadth of his views of history. But he certainly justifies his claim to interpret the course of events that built up Europe, to criticize the treaties dictated by the Allies, and even to make some prophecies upon their results. We wish, by the way, that he had taken the trouble to make an index."

+ — Spec 132:sup416 Mr 15 '24 600w

"The book is delightfully written and for the most part, penetratingly analytical. If Mr. Stannard's discussion of Germany had been mellowed throughout by a greater degree of sympathy, it would have made valuable reading. But unfortunately the author loves the Latin and is contemptuous of the Teuton. His discussion of the American temper is excellent. It is shrewdly critical, tempered with sympathy and respect for our national development and difficulties." A. B.

+ — Survey 52:250 My 15 '24 300w

STANNARD, HAROLD MARTIN. Rome and her monuments. 379p $5 Stokes [15s Unwin]

914.56 Rome (city)—Description [24-4553]

"Mr. Stannard has tried to do for the spirit of Rome what Baedeker does for her monuments and to analyze the subtle, historical atmosphere of the city. The first section contains descriptions of the various panoramas which Rome affords and notes the peculiar quality of each. The second part of the book discusses the general conditions of life in the Rome of the Emperors, the third section the conditions of life in the Rome of the Popes. The greater number of monuments of this period make it a long section. The fourth section discusses Christian architecture in Rome from the days of Constantine to the latter part of the Renaissance."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 20:335 Je '24
Boston Transcript p3 Mr 15 '24 350w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:329 Je '24

"Out of the long and difficult subject of Rome Mr. Stannard has made a book that is short and easy. It is also alluring, because his learning is salted with wit and illuminated by imagination."

+ Sat R 137:88 Ja 26 '24 550w

Spec 132:722 My 3 '24 250w

"He does himself some injustice when he says that 'like Baedeker, the book is not meant for light reading'; for it is not overcrowded with facts and dates, and the easy flow of its style carries the reader down the stream of history with a maximum of comfort."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p168 Mr 20 '24 750w

STARK, HAROLD (YOUNG BOSWELL, pseud.). People you know. 340p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

920 United States—Biography 24-13374

Brief interviews with about a hundred celebrities, which appeared originally in the New York Tribune during the winter of 1922-1923. As a columnist and by devices all his own Young Boswell gained access to the writers, painters, architects, sculptors, musicians and actors who are contributing most to the artistic achievement of New York. He sketches the appearance and personality of each and the questions he asks and the replies as he presents them convey a real impression of the artist.

"His interviews are fresh, stimulating, eager." J. F.

+ Bookm 59:591 Jl '24 90w

"His little thumb-nail sketches contain humor, swift drawing of scenes and lightning characterization. Each one is just short enough to make the reader long for more." R. W. Thompson

+ Lit R p990 Ag 23 '24 510w

"In writing up his interviews Young Boswell uses the style which we call impressionistic when we are too polite to call it patchwork. And since he has no skill in synthetic portraiture or flashing characterization, the results are tiresome. And that, for a columnist, is the Unpardonable Sin." Rose Lee

— N Y Times p12 Je 1 '24 640w

"The book is without blood and sand, to paraphrase one of Mr. Ibanez's popular titles. The sketches contain almost nothing of personalia in which the people who like this sort of literature are chiefly interested." D: Karsner

— N Y Tribune p22 Je 29 '24 850w

Outlook 138:27 S 3 '24 30w

STAUFFER, RUTH MATILDA. Joseph Conrad: his romantic-realism. 122p $2.50 Four seas

823 Conrad, Joseph 22-16773

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Booklist 19:248 My '23

Cath World 117:417 Je '23 240w

"A conscientious attempt to encompass the technic of Conrad, which fails, as most criticism fails, by mistaking properties for essences. The method is strictly classroom: comments on plots, characters, and settings in a vague, trademarked prose of zero candle power. The bibliography is thorough."

— + Dial 74:634 Je '23 90w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter

Nation 116:670 Je 6 '23 550w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 28:300 Je '23

STAYTON, FRANK. Passionate adventure. ^{3} 347p il $2 Century [7s 6d Nash & G.]

24-21508

"Adrian St. Clair, returning from the brutal realities of the World War, finds the artificiality of his London setting intolerable. Wealthy, the husband of a beautiful and attractive woman, the aristocratic formality of his home life, the chatter of former associates, awaken nothing but discontent and boredom. He loves Drusilla, but conventions stand between them. As a means of escape and with golf as an alibi he seeks adventure in the slums of London, where life is real and pretensions are unknown. There he meets a woman who in a later meeting teaches the over-fastidious Drusilla the meaning of love and whose sacrifice brings about complete understanding between the St. Clairs."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p7 N 19 '24 620w

"Altogether the story is good entertainment and worth reading."

+ Lit R p10 O 4 '24 260w

"The quality of the story is much finer and richer than usually happens with tales of mystery and adventure, for the author is a student of life and human nature and his comments are interesting, his characterizations do not lack vitality, his psychological interpretations are plausible and his frequent shafts of ironic humor are entertaining."

+ N Y Times p9 S 21 '24 460w

N Y World S 21 '24 80w

"The melodramatic quality of the plot of this novel gives it a striking resemblance to a movie scenario. But even the most ardent devotee of the screen would find cause to rebel at some of the forced situations and the obvious lack of plausibility in the book."

— Sat R of Lit 1:233 O 25 '24 140w

"The psychology is not very convincing, but the book ends with several chapters of breathless adventure."

— + Spec 132:510 Mr 29 '24 50w

"Will hold the reader's excitement to the end."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p209 Ap 3 '24 100w

STEAD, ROBERT JAMES CAMPBELL. Smok- ^{3} ing flax. 301p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

24-24808

The scenes of this story are laid in the prairie land of Manitoba. To the little town of Plainville comes Calvin Beach, a young Canadian student, whose sole possessions are a dilapidated Ford and a dear little boy, his sister's illegitimate child. Calvin finds work on Jackson Stake's large farm and a welcome in the farmer's home. The dominating force of Calvin's life is his love for little Reed, and he is infinitely happy when he also wins the heart of Minnie Stake, Jackson's pretty daughter. At this juncture comes the unheralded return of Jackson Stake, junior, a ne'er-do-well whose immediate dislike for Calvin and the child prophesies calamity. Stake proves to be the betrayer of Reed's mother. His price for silence incites Calvin to murder but a nobler way of solving the problem proffers itself, one which brings peace and good-will to Calvin and his friends.

"The book is interesting and thoughtful; it has several very likeable characters, including Calvin Beach, its hero, some gracefully done pen-pictures of the countryside and a generally fair-minded point of view."

+ N Y Times p17 D 21 '24 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p828 D 4 '24 130w

STEED, HENRY WICKHAM. Through thirty ^{3} years, 1892-1922. 2v 426;424p $5 Doubleday

940.28 Europe—Politics and government. European war, 1914-1919 24-29216

"Wickham Steed is one of the few journalists who have definitely affected the international relations of Europe. By his persistent labor in Europe, mainly for the Times, he unquestionably made himself an international figure, and his influence upon the course of European history can never be overlooked. . . Wickham Steed has stood on the inside, often at the very centre, and has watched, or even guided, the entangled threads of diplomatic intrigue of which wars and revolutions have been the hideous outcome. The first of these two ex-

STEED, H: W.—Continued
plicit and carefully written volumes is taken up with tracing the course of those intrigues; the second with the history of their terrible result in the Great War."—Sat R of Lit

"It is a history of a great personage and a great paper through great days and years." Karl Schriftgiesser
+ Boston Transcript p6 D 6 '24 1950w

" 'Through Thirty Years' sparkles with incidents and is full of personal and historic interest." N. P Stedman
+ Int Bk R p21 D '24 950w

"The pages are crowded with pictures of personalities, records of journalistic adventure which gradually become essays in international diplomacy. . . The most fascinating pages of his book deal with the new nations carved out of Austria-Hungary." L: S. Gannett
— Nation 120:46 Ja 14 '25 1000w

"Extremely full and vivacious and characteristic chronicle. . . With its report of conversations with monarchs and statesmen, and international gossips, its accounts of the diplomatic game, its vivid portraits of the old practitioners incessantly active in their fantastic world, Mr. Steed's first volume is assured of a place among the indispensable documents of the period. The second volume, which opens with the war, covers ground that has become familiar to the whole world of readers, but there is no need to say that Mr. Steed pours out a stream of fresh personal reminiscence in every chapter."
+ New Statesman 24:342 D 20 '24 1150w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis
N Y Times p3 N 30 '24 3000w

"Mr. Steed has contributed some of the raw material from which, long hence, when all the stories have been told, and all the contents of all the archives have been revealed, something like a definitive history of the latest crucifixion of mankind will be written." C. G. Bowers
+ N Y World p8e D 14 '24 600w

"Mr. Steed has given us a book which will be read with very great interest by all who wish to be taken behind the scenes of European diplomacy, and the great war in which it culminated."
+ Sat R 138:634 D 20 '24 650w

Reviewed by H: W. Nevinson
Sat R of Lit 1:414 D 27 '24 1550w

"We have here not merely, as in so many reminiscences, a mere collection of anecdotes and disconnected episodes, but a real book: one which is an important contribution, not only to information, but also to the thought of the time."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p719 N 13 '24 3050w

STEEL, MRS FLORA ANNIE (WEBSTER). Law of the threshold. 310p $2.25 Macmillan [7s 6d Heinemann]
24-24952

A tale of modern India in which east meets west only to separate again. Maya Day, a beautiful Hindu girl educated in the west, returns to India to purify the Tantrik cult of which she is a member. She meets and falls in love with Captain Hastings, a young English officer stationed in India. Captain Hastings is already engaged to a clever but rather cold English girl and the oriental girl appeals to him mightily. Trouble arises in which Maya becomes involved because she is one of the "sacred widows" of India. Hastings attempts to save her, but it is Maya who thru a supreme sacrifice saves him for his fiancée.

"Artless melodramatic writing, but a picture strangely giving the same impression as E. M. Forster gives. In her way she understands Indian religion and Indian feeling as well as he." J: Franklin
+ New Statesman 24:205 N 22 '24 300w
N Y Times p16 N 2 '24 660w

"She never forgets her plot for a moment. She develops it with a fine skill in creating suspense and a shifting mysterious background."
+ N Y Tribune p8 O 26 '24 400w

"It is not Mrs. Steel's veracity that we question, but the verisimilitude of the picture as a whole—and that, in a book which sets out to lighten the general reader's profound ignorance of Indian conditions, is a serious matter. . . The story is extremely readable, crammed with characters and incident, with sufficient local atmosphere to carry off some rather flesh-creeping effects."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p614 O 2 '24 250w

STEELE, FLETCHER. Design in the little garden. (Little garden ser.) 124p il $1.75 Atlantic monthly
716 Gardens 24-5820

The fourth volume of the Little garden series deals with the principles and practice of gardening as an art and has little to do with planting problems, which have been treated in the earlier volumes of the series. Mr Steele is interested in landscape design in limited space, gardens planned for privacy and comfort, small enclosed lawns or green gardens, rock, wild and wall gardens, garden walks and furniture, arbors and fences. Three chapters are given to a discussion of three different plans for a garden on an average suburban lot.

Booklist 21:14 O '24

Reviewed by H: T. Finck
Lit R p774 My 24 '24 130w
N Y Times p26 Ap 6 '24 400w

"As useful as pleasant are the chapters dealing with the details of three attractive lots on Maple Cove Avenue."
+ N Y Tribune p27 Ap 27 '24 60w

"From his studies abroad, especially of the small English place, the author has brought home a valuable perspective on the American problem, for the English way in gardens, rightly interpreted is our most congenial prototype."
+ Springf'd Republican p16 Ap 18 '24 350w

STEELE, WILBUR DANIEL. Isles of the ² blest. 403p $2 Harper
24-25743

"Robert Ling and Helen Jaynes have been living together on an island in the Caribbean sea for more than a year, after running way from New York and from Helen's husband. Life and love have wilted, not bloomed. A cable comes, announcing that Helen's husband has divorced her; and the same day, an unusual occurrence, two ships call at the port, one northbound, the other south. Ling and Helen go through a hasty marriage service, and Ling contrives to send Helen aboard the ship bound for New York, saying that he will follow. He takes passage in the southbound vessel, and discovers that Helen is aboard, trying to escape from him. Hepar, an unsophisticated youth and a confiding one, on his way to take over the management of an oil company agency in British Guiana, falls in with them. The story takes up the working out of the problems of the three in the foresaken tropic town in Guiana. . . How Ling and Helen are reawakened to each other's need through this callow youth is a story which Mr. Steele tells in a far from commonplace way."—Sat R of Lit

"There is an atmosphere of the platitude about the ending of this story. The story as a whole, however, is exceptionally finely and cleverly handled." D. L. M.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '24 1050w

"On the whole, Mr. Steele's book seems to strike a high level of style-ish and conscious sensationalism."
— Ind 114:106 Ja 24 '25 100w

"He is not always happy in transcribing the endless dialogs between the two halves of a self. But he can write entertainingly and provocatively, he can play with his theme and characters without becoming trivial, and he is serious at all times without being tedious. He is entitled to no inconsiderable position among American novelists." J: W. Crawford
+ — Int Bk R p140 Ja '25 650w

" 'Isles of the Blest' has none of the ineptitudes that commonly brand a first novel. It is an acute and arresting study of temperaments." H. A. Jaggard
+ Lit R p10 Ja 24 '25 320w

"Mr. Steele has accomplished a real feat in keeping the emotional tensity of his tale at so high and constant a pitch through so long a novel. The tropic background is richly colored, and the author makes it so vivid that the reader sees and feels it in both its material and spiritual aspects. The character depiction of the four or five principal actors is clear, vigorous and convincing."
+ N Y Times p8 N 9 '24 660w

"The emotional level is sustained without flagging. These are no weak people whom Mr. Steele has created. Mr. Steele's style is rapid, staccato, when the action quickens, and easily flowing, resilient at other times. One feels always that the story is in the hands of a competent handler of character and narrative."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:420 D 27 '24 400w

STEESE, EDWARD. Storm in harvest, and other poems. 93p $1.50 Brick row book shop
811 23-16566

"Here is a first volume of published verse by an undergraduate of Princeton University of the class of 1924, fifty-one lyrics, some of which have appeared in The London Mercury and in the Nassau Literary Magazine, of which latter publication Mr. Steese is editor-in-chief." —Boston Transcript

"There will be others besides the professors at Princeton to speak enthusiastically of this work."
+ Bookm 59:353 My '24 90w

"Varying and uneven in quality, they are characterized by a high level of thought. In their expression, however, there is frequently the note of immaturity, and sometimes a too-studied reaching for the mot juste is apparent."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ja 5 '24 150w
Dial 77:524 D '24 60w

"While somewhat imbued with an undue preoccupation with death and the ephemeral nature of happiness, hope, and love, this side of poetry is really very little represented. The book as a unit is colored with a just and wholesome feeling for nature, human and so-called inanimate. The author as well has an excellent variety of music in his vèrse forms."
+ Lit R p549 F 23 '24 400w

Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison
N Y Times p11 D 23 '23 250w

"There is much promise in Mr. Steese's collection . . . but there is much that is immature." B. S. Wagstaff
+ — N Y Tribune p18 Ja 6 '24 250w

STELLA, ANTONIO. Some aspects of Italian immigration to the United States; with a preface by Nicholas Murray Butler. 124p il $2.50 Putnam
325.7 Italians in the United States 24-3632

"Developed from an address delivered by Dr. Stella before the New York Society of Medical Jurisprudence, this volume presents a study of the more important of the phases presented by the problem of Italian immigration and how it can best be controlled and treated for the highest benefit of the country. Its basis is furnished by statistical data obtained from census reports, but these are analyzed and discussed with acumen and in a scientific, judicial spirit. In addition to these chapters there are several in which Dr. Stella, who is consulting physician to Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane and holds a high position in the medical profession, deals with the general aspects of Italian immigration, historically, socially and economically, and makes an eloquent plea for a better understanding on the part of Americans of native ancestry of the qualities which the Italians bring to the national character."—N Y Times

Cleveland p54 Jl '24
Ind 112:157 Mr 15 '24 20w

"Dr. Stella's work is scientifically as sound as most of the anti-alien books now so eagerly devoured by a credulous public. In spirit it is wholly admirable. One closes it, however, with a feeling of regret that Dr. Stella did not associate with himself persons who could have handled the economic, social and psychological problems involved with a fair degree of professional skill." Alvin Johnson
+ — New Repub 38:24 F 27 '24 900w

"An interesting and valuable study."
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 2 '24 650w

"On the whole Dr. Stella presents a convincing brief, though at times the argument he uses in defense of the Italian immigrants' qualities are reduced ad absurdum." F. V. Roman
+ — N Y World p6e Mr 16 '24 350w

"A clear-cut and intelligent statement."
+ R of Rs 69:447 Ap '24 140w
St Louis p336 O '24
Survey 52:120 Ap 15 '24 80w

STEPHENS, JAMES. In the land of youth. 288p $2.50 Macmillan
24-24943

Here are two Irish legendary tales. The first tells the story of the adventures of Nera who is promised King Ailill's gold-hilted sword as a prize if he dares to go to the hill where the outlaws were hung and tie a withy round the foot of one of the swinging men. The second is the story of Etain, the beautiful wife of Midir, lord of the Shí.

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Lit R p2 D 13 '24 780w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir
Nation and Ath 36:270 N 15 '24 300w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:336 D 20 '24 180w
N Y Times p14 N 9 '24 920w

"James Stephens follows his best vein in 'In the Land of Youth.' But his work in the new volume is not the rich picture and flashing wit of his 'Dierdre' or 'The Crock of Gold.' There are two stories in the new volume, which at times reach the heights of his cunning, but they are nothing so evenly fine as his best. Yet his best or worst is so much better than the best of others that the readers of this singular, highly gifted Irish story teller will find the book to their liking, willy nilly." Laurence Stallings
+ — N Y World p8e N 9 '24 530w

"Mr. Stephen's new story 'In the Land of Youth' is clear as a bell, imaginative in conception, a true fairy story for grown-up readers." R. D. Townsend
+ Outlook 138:602 D 10 '24 150w

"As for what Mr. Stephens offers us now, it is impossible even to guess what he himself imagines to be the point of it. He used to have a vein of genuine simplicity: he would tell difficult and profound things with a comical or gracious ingenuousness, and so invest them with laughter or tears. But now he does not seem to distinguish between the apparent artlessness of art and the sheer ugliness of awkward and inadequate writing." Gerald Gould
— Sat R 138:498 N 15 '24 680w

"In the Land of Youth, being really a loosely-knit collection of stories, is inconsequent and a little jerky, there is no cumulative power or dramatic form there; but all through it is

STEPHENS, JAMES—Continued
fine, care-free, vivid entertainment, and Mr. James Stephens is our Treasure." Philip Carducci
+ Spec 133:704 N 8 '24 780w

"A shining web of words are all James Stephens's tales, reflecting often the light that never was on sea or land, and always revealing through their shining meshes the authentic emotions. The rare loveliness of his style proves once more that beauty is truth, truth beauty."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 31 '24 850w

STERLING, ADA. Jew and civilization. 330p $3.50 Aetco pub. co.
296 Jews 24-2180

"Miss Sterling's book starts out with authoritative answers to the various anti-Semitic onslaughts on the Jewish people, both in ancient times and today. She analyzes these charges and proves how unfounded they are in most instances. She pays her respects to Chamberlain, Belloc, Burton J. Hendrick and Henry Ford, and proves how they are merely repeating the old, outworn myths and legends about the Jews. But Miss Sterling is at her best when she records the positive achievements of the Jew and his contributions to civilization as citizen and patriot, in industry, in commerce, in finance, in philanthropy, in literature, in art, in music, in mathematics and physics, in medicine, in agriculture, in jurisprudence, in statesmanship, and particularly as a moral force."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p4 My 28 '24 380w
Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky
N Y Times p4 F 10 '24 2650w

"It is a painstaking work, written by a historian who also possesses the art of the novelist. While adhering to the truth, she has succeeded in making her work popular and fascinating, authoritative, dignified yet absorbing. And above all, the book is permeated with sincerity and nobility of purpose." Herman Bernstein
+ N Y Times p14 Mr 30 '24 3200w

"It reveals a knowledge of too recent an origin to possess either completeness or integration. The book, toward which this is but a trial effort, awaits the hand of some member of the race itself (Miss Sterling is not) who, without expressing the limitations of sectarianism, will yet be master of the facts and aware of his sources. Even the meager and jumbled list of books, which Miss Sterling calls bibliography, reveals the feebleness of her knowledge." Harry Salpeter
— N Y Tribune p22 Jl 13 '24 700w

"For a writer engaged in the defense of the modern Jew, it seems love's labor lost to mull over the fact that ancient Jews wrote the Old Testament and the Talmudic books. Upon a point on which there is such universal agreement there need be no more harping. As an advocate Miss Sterling should have considered only the disputed points. A book such as this would have more concentration if, at the same time, it had more affirmation and less denial." Harry Salpeter
— N Y World p6e F 10 '24 520w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS GEOFFREY LISLE HOLDSWORTH). Smoke rings. 262p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Chapman & Hall]
24-5508

"A volume containing twenty-six short stories. . . G. B. Stern explores dozens of quarters of ordinary life in her tales. The reader will find here country girls, literary persons, tramps, clerks, actresses, uneasy married couples—in short, a cross-slice of the substance of middle-class life in England. The plots themselves vary from tragedy to broad comedy, but the very best of G. B. Stern's stories seem to be fashioned from a keen ironic observation of the pecadilloes of life."—N Y Times

Cleveland p86 N '24
Int Bk R p287 O '24 400w

"Many are just clever trickery. But there is also a deal more than that. It is a pity that the first story in the book, 'A Modern Elaine,' is so inferior to most of the others—a meringue with nothing inside. But here, we need hardly say, is a short story talent worth watching."
+ — Lit R p677 Ap 12 '24 300w

Reviewed by Forrest Reid
Nation and Ath 34:434 D 15 '23 40w

"If the reader will sample these drops of life one at a time, removing them from their context of general excellence, he will discover that there is nothing particularly extraordinary about them and that their excellence is due primarily to structural ability and a keen eye for dramatic effect."
+ — N Y Times p9 F 24 '24 580w

"The collection is far above the level of short stories, though people who seek for pleasant reading in fiction will not find it to their taste."
+ — Spec 132:20 Ja 5 '24 400w

STERN, WILLIAM. Psychology of early childhood; supplemented by extracts from the unpublished diaries of Clara Stern; tr. from the German by Anna Barwell. 557p $5 Holt [16s Allen & U.]
150 Psychology. Child study 24-25816

"Parents, teachers and physicians are here provided with a new edition, revised and enlarged, of a standard German work first published in 1914. The author studies the child's psychic life from birth to the sixth year, supplementing his theories with many findings from the observation of his own children. Excerpts from the unpublished diaries of his wife are included. Mr. Stern is neither much concerned nor very sympathetic with the psychoanalytical point of view."—N Y Tribune

"Since I am no psychologist, I cannot review the book critically. I can only record that I have found it fascinating reading, and warn all prospective readers that, before they have finished it, if they haven't a "child-under-six' in the house they will feel impelled to procure one at all costs in order to find out if what Herr Stern says is true!" E. v. B. Hansl
+ Bookm 59:739 Ag '24 380w

"Although it is desirable that readers of this book should have some acquaintance with the elementary principles of psychology, its usefulness is not limited to persons who are so equipped. In its main essentials the book can be grasped readily by any intelligent reader, and parents will find it a source of great helpfulness in the mental and moral training of children."
+ N Y Times p8 Jl 13 '24 550w
N Y Tribune p22 Je 8 '24 60w

"It cannot truthfully be asserted that works on either psychology or education have, as a rule, much attraction for the general reader, whose vague interest in these subjects is seldom proof against that technical phraseology affected by specialists. When both themes are, as here, combined, and treated with thoroughness of a truly German type, the case becomes more unpromising. Still, as a manual for teachers, the book may stand a better chance, but differences of language form a grave handicap."
— + Sat R 137:355 Ap 5 '24 200w

"Though the most complete text book on the subject, it is sadly incomplete and out of date in many sections. . . The book is thunderously dull." D. A. Laird
— Survey 52:639 S 15 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p211 Ap 3 '24 50w

STEUART, JOHN ALEXANDER. Robert Louis Stevenson. 2v 419;352p $8 Little
B or 92 Stevenson, Robert Louis 24-28259

The latest life of Stevenson is described in its sub-title as a "critical biography." Writing thirty years after Stevenson's death the author draws upon new material which has accumulated since Graham Balfour's biography and he is able to speak with a candor and absence of restraint which were impossible in a family portrait by an official biographer. He writes with no less sympathy and appreciation but with greater independence and a desire to show the real Stevenson under the legendary one. The weaknesses in his character and in his writing are not concealed and some new facts about his ancestry and early life are brought out.

Booklist 21:150 Ja '25

"Mr. Steuart brings to his chronicle a biographical sense that forces him to stick to the facts, a critical faculty that enables him to analyze them, a facile style that is neither too heavy nor too light, a keen sense of humor, and the ability to discriminate between adulation and appreciation of his hero. In his biography he has made a living, human personality of Stevenson." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 8 '24 2400w

"At last we have a modern biography of Robert Louis Stevenson which is in line with the ideas of the present generation." Ernest Boyd
+ Ind 113:520 D 13 '24 1350w

"Mr. Steuart erects a new image of R. L. S., fully rounded, with all his faults and virtues properly proportioned—a statue that is worthy to stand in the market-place and to be studied, critically and appreciatively, from every point of view. It destroys a legend, but it recreates a man: and it presents to the public a figure that is more inspiriting, because it is more real, than the 'barley-sugar effigy' of Sir Graham Balfour's gracious contribution to the family portrait gallery." Clayton Hamilton
+ Int Bk R p110 Ja '25 3000w

Reviewed by Paul Neumann
Lit R p8 D 13 '24 1750w

"The faults which have forced themselves on my notice in this bulky and pretentious book are many, and many the superfluities, while the virtues I have found are few. For a final life of Stevenson the time in my judgment is not ripe." Sidney Colvin
— Nation and Ath 36:268 N 15 '24 2550w

"Mr. Steuart has had access to unpublished and privately printed documents; he has talked with old friends of Stevenson's, he has made some valuable investigations of his own, yet he has written a life which does not seem to us to add much to our understanding of the real Stevenson. Nor is Mr. Steuart's lack of matter atoned for by any felicity of style or skill in portraiture." R. E. Roberts
— New Statesman 24:173 N 15 '24 2500w

"Mr. Steuart has aided materially in the removal of the papier-maché angel, but he has left in its place a vivid and demonstrative man." H. S. Gorman
+ N Y Times p3 N 9 '24 2300w

"I have read nearly every one of the more than seven hundred pages in which Mr. Steuart tells 'the truth at last' about Stevenson, and although hardly anything about him could ever bore me, and although there is certainly some news in this work and much interesting elaboration of detail, it is a question whether the book is not superfluous, after his own letters and the biography of Balfour." E. L. Pearson
— Outlook 138:689 D 24 '24 320w

"The manner of Mr. Steuart's book is displeasing. Quite unintentionally, no doubt, Mr. Steuart has throughout the air of disparaging Stevenson. He is, in fact, the hero of his own book, as one may see in his little essays upon Edinburgh, Literary contrasts, etc." Frank Swinnerton
— Sat R of Lit 1:344 D 6 '24 1650w

"The accumulative effect of Mr. Steuart's book is such that Stevenson surely can never again be misjudged. The display of facts here —result of untiring devotion—is masterly. And in criticism of Stevenson's work the author has the detachment of unprejudiced enthusiasm. The only fault I find with the book is that especially in the beginning, its style is rather full-blown and literary, in the grand biographical manner with copious citations from the poets. But that falls away as he warms to his subject, and the result is a work which compels admiration." R: Church
+ — Spec 133:sup696 N 8 '24 1100w
Springf'd Republican p6 D 1 '24 450w

STEVENS, C. L. MCCLUER. Famous crimes and criminals. 263p $3 Duffield [12s 6d S. Paul]
923.4 Crime and criminals [24-21534]

Among the criminals whose stories are here told are an underworld queen who headed an international gang of crooks; a female Bluebeard reputed to have murdered a hundred victims; Madame Rachel, beauty specialist; Madame Humbert, notorious French adventuress; Frank Kent, counterfeiter; Jim the Penman, prince of forgers; and Mrs Chadwick, of more recent fame.

"This is not a very good book. Somehow or other his accounts too often just misfire." Leonard Woolf
— Nation and Ath 35:178 My 10 '24 100w
N Y Times p21 O 12 '24 350w

STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER. Boyhoods of our navy heroes. 282p $1.75 Harper
923.5 Naval biography. United States—Navy 24-10200

"William O. Stevens, who is professor in English in the United States Naval Academy, tells in his book some thrilling tales of the youthful experiences of boys most of whom afterward became famous officers in the American Navy. Among those of whom he writes are Admiral Farragut, Commodore Joshua Barney, 'Fighting Bob' Evans, Admiral David D. Porter and half a dozen others renowned for their heroic services in the navy. The tales are all true stories of events in the youth of these men, and many of them have not heretofore been printed."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 21:73 N '24
Boston Transcript p1 My 31 '24 90w

"It is a book to be read with enthusiasm by every son of a sailor and every lad with naval potentialities, with the glory of war's heroic sacrifices strest to the full." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p617 Jl '24 120w

"Professor Stevens writes his narratives in admirable style, with sympathy for his youthful heroes when they had to face baffling problems, with thorough knowledge of the historical events, the conditions and the men that figure in his tales and with a well-balanced judgment that makes his stories dependable presentations of important occasions in our naval history. They are fine, gallant tales that will be good for the minds and hearts of the young people of today."
+ N Y Times p12 Je 22 '24 320w

Reviewed by G. M. Goldman
N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 70w

"Such a book as this, written by a man of literary training who knows his material and loves his theme is one of the encouraging signs. If the boys want adventure and action, 'stories with a punch,' they need not go to the movies or read poor stuff. Every yarn is true, and most amazing truth at that."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:171 O 4 '24 390w

STEVENSON, BURTON EGBERT. Famous single poems and the controversies which have raged around them. 340p $2 Harcourt

821.08 English poetry—Collections 23-15704

The book brings together fifteen poems, mostly the work of one-poem men. They are for the most part sentimental or semi-religious, literary curiosities without claim to greatness but with something in them which has touched peoples' hearts and made them remembered. Among these poems are the familiar There is no death, Casey at the bat, Kaiser & Co., A visit from St Nicholas, If I should die tonight and Beautiful snow. Mr Stevenson settles their authorship, if it is in debate, tells something of the authors of the poems and the occasion of their writing.

Bookm 58:669 F '24 200w

Cleveland p70 S '24

"A by-product of Mr. Stevenson's labors in compiling 'The Home Book of Verse,' this is a work of real research into the more obscure corners of common literature. . . Incidentally one of the best commentaries in existence upon popular taste."

+ Nation 117:562 N 14 '23 80w

N Y Tribune p19 Mr 16 '24 130w

"Attractive and readable little volume."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 420w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p476 Jl 31 '24 600w

"Contains interesting bits of literary miscellany, but is not essential."

Wis Lib Bul 20:24 Ja '24

STEVENSON, BURTON EGBERT. Storm-center. 327p il $2 Dodd

24-1644

O'Neill, an Irish-American, dropped from the consular service in France owing to a change in administration, decides to take a vacation in Africa before returning to the United States. His adventures begin when he is about to board the Marseilles express, which train meets the African boats. A polite Frenchman gives O'Neill his seat on the crowded train. While O'Neill is at dinner a stranger slips into the seat and is murdered. Threatening messages begin to arrive but O'Neill calmly goes his way. He joins an archeological expedition and proceeds to assist in the excavation of some Roman ruins. Dangers of a new order arise when Patricia, the daughter of the archeologist, is captured by a fanatical Arab ruler. Thru all the hectic adventures which follow O'Neill comes safely, due to his talisman, "the luck of the Irish."

Booklist 20:266 Ap '24

Lit R p650 Ap 5 '24 300w

"The author has woven the threads of his story into a unique and highly colored pattern. Plot and counterplot are combined in such a workmanlike way that the interest never flags. But Mr. Stevenson has done more than that. He gives his characters conversation that is at once racy, suave and informative. 'The Storm Center' has a certain air about it that lifts it above the general run of 'thrillers.'"

+ N Y Times p25 Ja 27 '24 720w

N Y Tribune p22 Ja 20 '24 350w

"'The Storm Center' is rather better in its written style than the average book of its lurid sort." E. W. Osborn

+ — N Y World p6e Ja 13 '24 360w

Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 180w

"Mr. Stevenson writes with pleasant ease, and with the touch of style and polish natural to a writer who has mastered his literary medium."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p80 F 7 '24 150w

Wis Lib Bul 20:149 Je '24

STEVENSON, LOUIS LACY. Big game. 332p $2 Brentano's

24-6732

"In the days of his hard boyhood on his grasping father's farm in Ohio, John Forsythe despises squirrels as creatures on which it is not worth while to waste his shot. As he grows up the instinct to turn from small fry in the hunt grows with him. We find him a hunter of men with dollars, and always aiming for the big fellows. John speeds on from small city and grocery clerkship to Chicago and the big stock markets. His career becomes a wicked romance of unscrupulous dealing. But just when his game-bag promises fullness, his own lack of scruple brings him to his downfall."—N Y World

"His everlasting weighing of values, desperately and at length, tires rather more than it stimulates the reader, while succeeding crises merely deaden. Indifference shades the interest awakened at first by the theme, and against this the author struggles, rather unhappily."

— Boston Transcript p4 Ap 23 '24 80w

"From beginning to end, the story is told interestingly, realistically, and convincingly. The theme may not be exactly a new one, but the author succeeds in dealing with it from a fresh and individual point of view."

+ Lit R p843 Je 21 '24 300w

"The book is marked by a beauty of structure, a precision of action, a nice symmetry, a sense of form that becomes fascinating. What criticism may be leveled against 'Big Game' must ignore both the moral conception and the structure of one of the most able pieces of literary craftsmanship that has appeared this year."

+ — N Y Times p8 Ap 6 '24 600w

"This is a crude and uneven novel, but the narrative has something of the single-mindedness and 'drive' of its hero, and the reader finds himself following large sections of it breathlessly." Eva Goldbeck

— + N Y Tribune p26 Ap 20 '24 850w

"Mr. Stevenson has written a feverish story of greed and its penalty." E. W. Osborn

N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 130w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p574 S 18 '24 300w

STEVENSON, ROBERT LOUIS. Short stories. 540p $2.50 Scribner

23-15584

Stories printed in the order of their publication, each introduced by a brief note stating its origin and the facts of its first appearance. Contents: A lodging for the night; The Sire de Malétroit's door; Providence and the guitar; Will o' the mill; The pavilion on the links; Thrawn Janet; The merry men; The treasure of Franchard; Markheim; Olalla; The bottle imp; The beach of Falesá; The Isle of voices; The body-snatcher; The waif woman.

Booklist 20:233 Mr '24

"'Markheim' and 'Thrawn Janet' showed what Stevenson could do when he deliberately tried to produce a maximum of effect with the greatest possible economy of means; but such an exercise was not natural to his ambient, uneconomic mind. He was much more at his ease in the more fluent and less constricted medium of the novelette; and the best of his briefer tales, after 'The Treasure of Franchard' are such novelettes as 'The Merry Men' and 'The Pavilion on the Links.'" Clayton Hamilton

Int Bk R p271 Mr '24 200w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 27 '24 500w

STEVENSON, SYLVIA. Surplus. 319p $2 Appleton

24-9437

This is the story of a girl who believed there was such a thing as perfect friendship. Sally Wraith and Averil Kennion, both exponents of modernism and careers for girls, decide to make a home of their own and throw their luck together. To Sally, who feels that marriage is not necessary to happiness, yet who has that insidious fear of being alone this is satisfying. She, the unusual, showers upon Averil, the more normal, all the affection and loyalty of her nature. But it is not enough. Averil is annoyed by her intensity of devotion and absorbing jealousy, and when love comes, she leaves Sally. To Averil the friendship has meant little, to Sally all that is fine and beautiful in life. And at the end, tho years have passed, a chance glimpse of Averil is enough to make Sally send away forever the man to whom she is betrothed. We leave her going up the empty road alone—surplus.

"Miss Stevenson writes rather well, but she is mistaken in thinking that the mere characterization of a more or less perverted woman is sufficient content for a good novel." S. M.
— + Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Ag 10 '24 400w

Lit R p906 Jl 19 '24 350w

"The book is absolutely, almost fiercely, clean. In its way I should think it is unique. Certainly, as an analysis of an emotion that, though not common, is doubtless much commoner than we believe, it deserves high praise for its skill, its sanity, its courage, and its insight." Forrest Reid
+ Nation and Ath 34:637 F 2 '24 500w

"In point of characterization Miss Stevenson is consistent enough, but large portions of her book are written in a rather slipshod prose and this militates somewhat against the realistic qualities of the story."
+ — N Y Times p19 My 4 '24 400w

Outlook 137:516 Jl 30 '24 80w

"One of the most interesting and promising 'first novels' that I have read for a long time." Gerald Gould
+ Sat R 137:89 Ja 26 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p39 Ja 17 '24 420w

STEWART, DONALD OGDEN. Mr and Mrs Haddock abroad. 267p il $2 Doran
817 24-29073

A really humorous book satirizing American manners and family life and the ways of travellers. It takes Mr and Mrs Haddock and their daughter Mildred from their home in Legion, somewhere in the Middle West, to New York and across the ocean and lands them in Europe. The Haddocks are American types and the episodes of their journey light up almost every form of "Babbittry".

"It is, I am confident, the funniest book of the year. As a read-aloud book it is likely to cause more laughter than any sustained attempt at provoking mirth since the publication of 'Three Men in a Boat.' In the all too narrow field of mad humor it is the only book I ever read that challenges comparison with 'Alice in Wonderland.'" Al Weeks
+ Detroit News p20 N 30 '24 350w

"Mr. and Mrs. Haddock Abroad is far better than any of Mr Stewart's previous books and the next will be as much better again if he will become self-conscious enough to give his style more consideration, for the sake of pointedness and economy and emphasis. He needs that discipline; but I hope that in acquiring it he will not become so self-conscious as to spoil the quality of his wit, for he has the spontaneous, gigantic crudity which is essential to our native humor and one of its grandest distinctions." H. P. Putnam
+ — New Repub 41:152 D 31 '24 750w

"Mr. Stewart's new book, let cautious readers be informed at once, is by far the funniest he has written. With 'Aunt Polly's Story of Mankind' Mr. Stewart emerged from the pack of automatic humorists, and in his new volume he has left most of them behind." H. J. Mankiewicz
+ N Y Times p6 N 16 '24 1100w

"First and last 'Mr. and Mrs. Haddock Abroad' is funny, at times excruciatingly funny. A regular fandango danced over an earthquake!" W: R. Benet
+ Sat R of Lit 1:340 D 6 '24 1350w

STEWART, P. M. Round the world with rod
2 and rifle; with an introd. by J. L. Sleeman. 296p il $6 Doran [21s T. Butterworth]
799 Hunting. Fishing

The author during the last twenty years has made seven journeys around the world. His book introduces the reader to the various kinds of sport to be had in each country, and also to the people and customs of each. He writes of elephant hunting in Africa, shark fishing in the Pacific, hippopotamus and crocodile hunting in Africa, tarpon fishing in Mexico, travel and sport in Canada and deer stalking in New Zealand.

"The time which has elapsed between the author's adventures and their setting down has probably dimmed some memories and affected the clarity of the tale. Certainly hunting conditions in most of the game regions treated have altered vastly with the years. Yet, this hunting and fishing book holds much that will interest the insatiable reader of big game tales."
— + N Y World p9e D 21 '24 180w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p661 O 23 '24 1050w

STEWART, WILLIAM RHINELANDER. Grace church and old New York. 542p il $10 Dutton
283 Grace church, New York city. New York (city)—Churches

Grace church is notable not only for the beauty of its structure and works of art but for its historic past, which is interwoven at many points with the history of the city, and for its succession of distinguished rectors, four of whom became bishops. Several chapters descriptive of the life of the city and the neighborhood of the church in its early days give the book a general interest. It is illustrated with over fifty full-page plates, some of them reproduced from rare originals.

"Mr. Stewart has done his work well, not only because of the painstaking labor he has put into it, but because his very being is impregnated with the feelings of the old time New Yorkers, so few of whom, even in the person of their descendants, walk the streets of Manhattan today." S. L. Cook
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '24 1400w

"Mr. Stewart is master of an excellent narrative style, and has a good sense of proportion, of the relative values of detail. This is not a dry, matter of fact record. It is an eminently readable chronicle, covering an enormous mass of details but orderly in arrangement and fluent in its story."
+ Lit R p780 My 24 '24 320w

"In his volume Mr. Stewart gives many interesting sidelights on the growth of the cfty. It is this, together with the heretofore unpublished material from the records of the church, which gives this book its historical value."
+ N Y Times p12 Je 8 '24 300w

"The book abounds in colorful description and allusion, and constitutes one of the most welcome additions to its historical literature that New York has enjoyed in recent years." H. C. Robbins
+ N Y Tribune p21 My 18 '24 1750w

"In connection with the story of Grace Church, Mr. Stewart's book will show New York City growing and developing all through the last century and leaving behind it forever the most picturesque, charming and endearing stages of its life."
+ N Y World p6e F 10 '24 100w

STEWART, W: R.—Continued

"It has long been customary to sneer at the 'fashionable' church and to look upon those who worship there as smug hypocrites. Let those fault-finders read for themselves of the magnificent work done by Grace Church and cease their shallow and ignorant criticisms."

+ Outlook 137:549 Ag 6 '24 380w

STILLMAN, JOHN MAXSON. Story of early [2] chemistry. 566p $4 Appleton

540.9 Chemistry—History 24-24036

The late professor emeritus of chemistry, Leland Stanford university, tells the story of the development of chemical knowledge and science, from the earliest times to the close of the eighteenth century. The book is readable for those whose knowledge of the science is not profound and for professional chemists who need an account of the early history of their science. The story is told in a connected way, omitting unimportant names and placing its emphasis on the really significant discoveries and speculations which have marked the growth of the science.

" 'The Story of Early Chemistry' is an authoritative compilation of data on the chemical formulæ and theories of ancient and medieval times, and, as such, is to be welcomed as a valuable addition to the library of any chemist." F. F. Yntema

+ N Y Tribune p11 D 21 '24 580w

STILSON, CHARLES B. Ace of blades. 293p $2 Watt, G. Howard

24-19469

A stirring tale of adventure in the days of Louis XIV. In the province of Picardy lived Philibert, a broken down swordsman. He spent his days giving fencing lessons to Denys, the nameless lad he had bought years before in a gypsy camp. One day the king chanced upon them during a bout and was so impressed with the lad's swordsmanship that he resolved to make use of him. By the time the king's call came Denys had learned all that Philibert could teach him. He was sent on a perilous journey and so wonderful was the power of his swordsmanship that he won for France safety from the Spaniard and for himself a name, fame and a beautiful wife.

"With a catchy title, and written in a very lively manner." J. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 20 '24 360w

Cleveland p50 Jl '24

"Mr. Stilson has the knack of simplicity and directness; he has many a well-turned phrase, and he avoids exaggerations that have marred countless historical romances. His characterization is apt, the dialogue natural, and his story has a love interest which adds to its charm. A right bonny tale!" J. J. McL.

+ Lit R p922 Jl 26 '24 180w

N Y Times p9 Jl 27 '24 500w

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 50w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 80w

"A well written historical romance is perhaps the most alluring form of fiction and the rarest, but Charles Stilson has written such a one in 'The Ace of Blades.' "

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 10 '24 150w

STIMSON, FREDERIC JESUP (J. S. of DALE, pseud.). American Constitution as it protects private rights. 239p $2.50 Scribner

342.73 United States—Constitution 23-15830

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"Mr. Stimson does not here concern himself with international relations. On constitutional questions he is, like Professor Burgess, a strong individualist, but his arguments are tolerant and scholarly." H. A. Yeomans

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:399 My '24 400w

Reviewed by E: S. Corwin

Lit R p4 S 13 '24 350w

"Whether one agrees or no with his narrow interpretation of the function of the Constitution and with many of his minor premises and conclusions, there will be general appreciation of Mr. Stimson's skill in putting a well-reasoned and legally accurate argument into readable, even popular terms." Phillips Bradley

+ — Nation 118:482 Ap 23 '24 900w

"Mr. Stimson gives us learning and law and a sort of philosophy, but he leaves us impressed with the need for other lenses than those through which he looks." T: R. Powell

— + New Repub 37:262 Ja 30 '24 430w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

N Y Times p3 F 17 '24 1700w

"Mr. Stimson's book is far from satisfactory. It is lamentable that a lawyer, when he writes a book for laymen, should be as inaccurate as Mr. Stimson has been in stating the ratio decidendi of important cases."

— Outlook 136:232 F 6 '24 720w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 19 '24 650w

Wis Lib Bul 20:92 Ap '24

STOCK, ALFRED EDUARD. Structure of atoms; tr. from the 2d German edition by S. Sugden. rev and enl ed 88p $2.50 Dutton [6s Methuen]

541.2 Atoms [23-7078]

"A moderately technical work on the constitution of matter. The original German work appeared under the title 'Struktur-chemie.' "—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:70 F '24

STOCK, RALPH. Uncharted waters. 256p $2 Doubleday [6s Heinemann]

A collection of eighteen short tales dealing with the life of the South seas. Contents: What for? The rivercomber; The lady killer; Dawn of day; "It"; Dead reckoning; The exile; Queer cattle; The rat; The wet blanket; An argument on the beach; Choice of weapons; Over there; The eyes of Monsieur Renaud; Promotion; Live and let live; The mangrove man; Worth while.

Booklist 21:154 Ja '25

"Mr Stock is fully qualified to write of the islands, having lived there several years on a plantation of his own. Secondly, he has the skill to give us all the local color and distinctiveness without ever intruding vague geography or bald, needless description. We see the real islands with him." L. S. K.

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 8 '24 600w

Lit R p10 N 8 '24 230w

"There are no frills on these stories; the narrator dashes straight for his object, and having got his dramatic conflict going, brings it to a swift conclusion. There is little to choose between the eighteen stories which make up the book, but if there is one better than the others it is the opening tale called 'What For?' "

+ New Statesman 23:528 Ag 9 '24 150w

N Y World p8e D 7 '24 100w

Sat R of Lit 1:232 O 25 '24 340w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 19 '24 120w

STOCKLEY, CYNTHIA. Dalla the lion-cub; a story of South Africa. 168p $1.50 Putnam

24-21512

Dalla Brand, a beautiful young Boer girl was spoken of in Bloemhoef as "the lion cub" because of her fiery nature and her unusual kinship with beasts of the jungle. The pride of this high-spirited girl receives a severe blow when she overhears some smart English men and women remark upon her strange manners and clothes. The determination to be their equal leads her to marry Berend de Beer, a wealthy but ill-educated man of fifty, and eventually his influence and money bring the social world of Africa to Dalla's feet; so she meets again the people who once scorned her. In this group is Colonel Valentia, a famous lion hunter whose love for Dalla is very evident to the envious Clodah Kerrison. Valentia conducts a lion hunt; a horrible tragedy occurs, and thru Clodah's artfulness Dalla finds herself ostracized from social circles until with the assistance of a friend her honor is reestablished, and love and happiness are at last hers.

"The story is short and the plot slender, not comparing with earlier work. Nevertheless, it probably will interest Mrs. Stockley's followers and its African background attract others. Her craftsmanship is deft and not displeasing." Robert Crane
+ — Lit R p10 N 1 '24 400w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e S 14 '24 180w

STOCKLEY, CYNTHIA. Garden of Peril; a story of the African veld. 141p $1.50 Putnam
24-1973

The garden was in Rhodesia and it formed a natural setting for the heroine, Peril Kelly, who from its rocky terrace watched the people of Umtété go by. She was chiefly interested in Mounted Policeman Punch Heseltine who each day passed by her garden on horseback on his way to his cousin's bungalow at Marshways, coming back half an hour later with his cousin's beautiful wife Doria riding beside him. Doria was a lovely woman on the wane, who was turning the full battery of her charms on Punch as a means of relief from her invalid husband, but something fine in Punch's nature kept him loyal to his cousin. Balked in her designs, Doria seized more deadly weapons. All the while Peril was looking on at the drama, clear-eyed, and gradually taking the leading part in it.

"Told in Miss Stockley's customary, agreeable and soporific manner."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '24 100w

Int Bk R p678 Ag '24 200w

"A really good story of its kind."
+ Lit R p565 Mr 1 '24 350w

"The whole book is written with a sensitive feeling for atmosphere and romance and a sense of brevity that is unusual."
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 27 '24 720w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Ja 20 '24 400w

STODDARD, CHARLES COLEMAN. Shank's mare. 217p $2.50 Doran
796 Walking 24-9710

A book largely composed of reminiscences of days spent out-of-doors—of interesting walks both within the city's limits and in the open country. His notes on suitable equipment, on choosing a companion, and on worth-while books of great walkers are interspersed with bits of philosophy on the ancient art of sauntering. Contents: By the way; Companions; Historic places; Great walkers; In town and out; Weather; A walk I know.

Boston Transcript p4 My 14 '24 300w

Cleveland p69 S '24

"If his meditations on things in general . . . are never very profound let it be understood that one does not go a-walking with too solemn an intent, but to loaf along and invite one's soul. He makes a welcome companion."
Lit R p732 My 3 '24 220w

"'Shank's Mare' is the commonplace book of one who has been much on little and big journeys on foot. It is written with skill in many places, with a faltering pen in others, but always with love and with the freshness of one who has chanced upon something new."
+ — N Y Times p10 Ap 20 '24 1700w

St Louis p348 O '24

"Out of the experience gained from perhaps a thousand consecutive week-ends out of doors, Charles Coleman Stoddard distills wisdom, beauty and charm for every reader who will in spirit at least journey afield with him."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 O 3 '24 250w

STODDARD, THEODORE LOTHROP. Racial realities in Europe. 252p $3 Scribner
572.9 Race. Ethnology—Europe. Europe—Race question 24-27818

In the belief that the racial factor lies behind most of the world's problems the author, champion of Nordic supremacy, makes this survey of the present racial make-up of the European nations. He shows the distribution of Nordics, Alpines and Mediterraneans and studies those parts of central and eastern Europe where racial mixtures produce the most complex and unstable conditions. In the last chapter he turns to America and applies there his arguments for maintaining Nordic supremacy.

Boston Transcript p5 N 26 '24 700w

Ind 113:409 N 13 '24 100w

"Dr. Stoddard renders a really great service in such a popular book as this, in bringing home to the lay reader the significance of the basic racial difference."
+ Lit R p13 N 1 '24 380w

Reviewed by H. W. van Loon
— Nation 119:642 D 10 '24 820w

Nation and Ath 36:476 D 27 '24 550w

New Statesman 24:346 D 20 '24 460w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky
N Y Times p4 O 26 '24 2550w

"Commonplace or crude cultural analyses, then the eternal refrain—race, race, race. Apparently Mr. Stoddard feels that whatever proof there was to offer has been provided in his former works, for no such attempt is made to prove anything in 'Racial Realities.'" Alexander Goldenweiser
— N Y Tribune p4 N 2 '24 1050w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y World p8e N 9 '24 1600w

"A spice of humor in the discussion of these matters would not be amiss; it is lacking here. But, with the warning to the reader that the basis of the book is 'questionable,' it has to be said that it is very readable and contains much valuable information and sound comment."
— + Outlook 138:653 D 17 '24 220w

R of Rs 70:672 D '24 270w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p784 N 27 '24 1100w

STORY, A. M. SOMMERVILLE (FRANKFORT SOMMERVILLE, pseud.). Dining in Paris; a guide to Paris à la carte and table d'hôte. 220p $1.50 McBride
914.436 Paris—Restaurants. Cookery, French 24-26755

"In Dining in Paris, the only book in English on the subject, Mr. Story describes in a series of sketches the restaurants of Paris, past and present, night and day, the specialties of their cuisine, their habitues, their atmosphere. Here also are chapters on the preparation of the best-known French dishes, on the chief French wines, whether vintage or ordinaire, and on French customs in eating and drinking. It is, moreover, a book for the fat purse as well as the lean."—Publisher's note

"Now we are told (in probably the only English book upon the subject) how and where best to dine. And if anybody imagine that the subject could not be made as interesting in its way as are the others he is advised to read this attractive little book, not only packed with shrewd gastronomical advice but gleaming with wit and that anecdote which adds a historic and often romantic atmosphere to so many of the famous cafés and restaurants of Paris."

STORY, A. M. S.—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 16 '24 400w

Cleveland p63 Jl '24

N Y Times p7 Jl 20 '24 350w

Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 20w

STORY, MARGARET (MCELROY-FROST) (MRS CHESTER B. STORY). How to dress well. 478p il $3.50 Funk

646 Clothing and dress 24-22282

The book covers with almost encyclopedic thoroughness and detail the whole subject of dress and appearance and the underlying principles governing these. It gives practical information on clothes suitable to different ages and occasions, colors to choose and avoid, principles of design, accessories of dress, the qualities of different fabrics, care in buying clothes and keeping them in repair. A full chapter is devoted to the care of the person.

Booklist 21:140 Ja '25

J Home Econ 16:714 D '24 200w

"The amount and variety, the comprehensiveness and detail of the information about feminine clothes contained in this volume make it almost an encyclopedia of the practical here and now phase of dress."

N Y Times p12 O 26 '24 500w

"The book is valuable for its suggestiveness and inherently interesting."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 3 '24 480w

STOW, EDITH. Boys' games among the North
2 American Indians. 126p il $1.50 Dutton

796 Games. Indians of North America—Games

The Indian tribes spent a large portion of their time in amusements and athletics which ranged all the way from child's play to intertribal ball games. A few of the games that were considered as belonging especially to boys are described in this volume. Contents: Indian athletics; Football shinny; Quoits; Hoop and spear; Bounce-on-the-rock; Kicking-the-stick; The tossing games; Games of the bowed head; Snow-snake; Some Indian winter games for boys; Indian games for small children.

"This book is to be specially recommended." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p895 N '24 50w

"Boy Scout masters and teachers will find this book a help in reviving these old games and sports, but it is a pity that it has not been made more readable for the boys themselves. Both writing and illustrations bear too much the stamp of text book to make a wide appeal."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:436 Ja 3 '25 60w

STRACHEY, JOHN ST LOE. River of life.
2 346p $5 Putnam [20s Hodder & S.]

824 24-29338

"Mr. Strachey's new volume is described as 'the log-book of his mind during a two-years' voyage on the River of Life.' It is, indeed, only in form a diary, which the author began in order to amuse his son's convalescence in the autumn of 1922. He continued it for his own pleasure—the habit of journalizing grows on those who once taste its fascinations. The books which Mr. Strachey has been reading furnish a larger proportion of his material than the persons or places that he has seen during these eventful years. . . A large part of the allurement of these pages lies in the intellectual agility with which their writer skips from Shakespeare to the musical glasses, from cats to Cicero, from Siena to Limericks. Nor will most readers like these brief essays any the worse for having already made the acquaintance of parts of them in the pages of the Spectator, from which Mr. Strachey has selected the most permanently interesting passages of his well-known articles on 'books of the moment.' "—Sat R

"A book to be taken up at any time and read anywhere, a page or ten pages at a draught, with amusement and profit." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 10 '24 1250w

"A well-rounded man, humorous, scholarly, appreciative, his book is alive with his personality. It will be read with delight by those who enjoy the companionship of an English gentleman."

+ Ind 113:491 D 6 '24 220w

"His ideas are seldom arrestingly original or profound, but he has, in the words which he quotes from Shakespeare, the faculty of looking upon the world 'askance and strangely.' He has the true essayist's individuality, and an immense zest for life."

+ Nation and Ath 36:160 O 25 '24 660w

"The River of Life is half a commonplace-book, half a reflective diary. Its attractiveness as a commonplace book is that the quotations are out of the way; its merit as a reflective diary, that the writer is candid and animated."

+ New Statesman 24:235 N 29 '24 1350w

"The great difficulty with Mr. Strachey's diary is that he has all too seldom anything pregnant to say." Lloyd Morris

— N Y Times p15 D 21 '24 1000w

"With the exception of Havelock Ellis's 'Impressions and Comments: Third Series,' also issued this year, it is the best diary of a curious and reflective mind that has been published this season. 'The River of Life' has a mild, pervasive, charm."

+ N Y World p9e D 14 '24 140w

Outlook 138:607 D 10 '24 120w

"The author is inclined to apologize for the 'digressive and desultory' nature of his book, but few readers will agree that any apology is needed."

+ Sat R 138:395 O 18 '24 680w

"A diary desultory as the pollen-bearing wind, the sport of time and place and inclination." Walter de la Mare

+ Spec 133:457 O 4 '24 2750w

STRAUS, RALPH. Unseemly adventure. 305p $2 Holt [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

24-19422

Humphry Dorsett, commonly known as Dear Humphry, was a shy young English squire who had never been known to answer his mother back or to drink a glass of ale in the village inn. The summer his mother went to Norway marked the turning point in his life. The absence of a managing mother and the presence of the Reverend Dr Pettworth, started the ball rolling. Then there appeared Mr Appleby Magnus, a bibulous gentleman, with a taste for classic literature. With Appleby Magnus, Jane Oak and her baby, and a young man from a shop, Humphry went on a jolly gypsying adventure and came back much more of a man. And of course Appleby Magnus turned out to be somebody very important.

Booklist 21:113 D '24

"Not since 'The Beloved Vagabond' have I read a story that swings along with such wholesome vigor and downright amusement. Certainly not a book for highbrows; but one that should be enjoyed by anyone who reads to be entertained." J. F.

+ Bookm 60:87 S '24 100w

"Mr. Straus possesses a refreshing and remarkable gift of sweeping us along through Wessex and Southshire, from village to town and from town to village. A delightful journey, with a glorious finale." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 11 '24 410w

"The author is roguish with a refreshing gusto, but his wickedness is not contagious; the reader is conscious of only mildly satanic impulses as he pursues his vicarious adventures."

— + Ind 113:202 S 27 '24 300w

"Mr. Straus is generous with his personalities—most of them ripe and quaint and charming. He allows them to gambol about in the sunshine of his own good humor—his satire is very mellow and his philosophies are unobtrusive." Sumett Gawn
+ Lit R p4 Ag 30 '24 300w

"Perhaps it is the unrelieved chatty facetiousness of 'The Unseemly Adventure,' as hinted in the title, which makes it such a labour to read." E. B. C. Jones
— Nation and Ath 34:740 F 23 '24 100w

N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '24 960w

"The central idea of this amusing fantasia is excellent, the characters are well conceived and many of the episodes are carried through with a fine swing, but it needs a lighter, surer movement than the author's to make such a tale entirely a success."
+ — N Y Tribune p10 O 5 '24 240w

"Mr. Straus is tolerably ingenious and scholarly, but intolerably arch. And his theme has the infinite remoteness of the day before yesterday; it is dull with the incomparable dullness of that which has recently been hailed as bright." Gerald Gould
— Sat R 137:135 F 9 '24 100w

"Mr. Straus makes the utmost of the situation without seeming to work for effects, and he has brought this type of fantastic comedy to the level of excellence."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p39 Ja 17 '24 320w

STREET, GRANVILLE. Peter was married. 371p $2 Putnam
24-20152

The parishioners of the mining-town of Westrock admire Peter Remington, their minister, for the fearless way in which he handles their social and political problems. But Peter has a bitter antagonist in his beautiful and accomplished wife, Laura, who ridicules him at every turn. Thru the agency of gossiping tongues Peter is made aware of a flirtation which Laura is conducting with a neighbor. Peter and Laura go to England, and there their marital problems come to a climax. The war intervenes and Peter, wrecked of body and scarred of soul, meets the charming Faith Lorimer whose spirit of love and truth gives him a new lease of life. He purchases his divorce from Laura at the price the law exacts—then he and Faith start their new life together.

"Although Peter is a good deal of a 'silly ass' and rather painfully lacking in humor and common sense, he succeeds in being interesting. Some of the minor characters are very well done, and, although the book is awkward in construction and very much too long, the story holds one's interest fairly well." H. L. P.
— + Lit R p970 Ag 16 '24 260w

"The book is neither well written nor well constructed; no one of the people in it is ever made real or interesting, and the moments in the story which should be dramatic fail of their intended effect. The best thing in this very long novel is the description of the sordid arrangements for Peter's divorce."
— N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '24 260w

"Mr. Street has written his story rather well in a strongly reportorial fashion. But we cannot for the life of us find in the Peter of his late pages a recognizable soul or character likeness to the Peter of Chapter I." E. W. Osborn
— + N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p557 S 11 '24 150w

STRIBLING, THOMAS SIGISMUND. Red sand. 325p $2 Harcourt
24-8567

Mr Stribling has turned from his intense story of negro life, "Birthright," to one of lighter theme. Yet again he has stressed the consequences that result in stepping from one's social class. The scene of this tale is laid in colorful Venezuela, where bull-fights are the national sport and the matador the central figure. Angelotti, a peon, and the most skilful follower of the "red sand" of the arena falls in love with Socorro de Jiminez, daughter of the oldest aristocratic house of Spain. This lovely sheltered Socorro, infatuated by his strength and sheer primitiveness, throws aside all the traditions of her family and becomes his fiancée. For a time, Angelotti knows ecstatic happiness—love, social position, and his game—but a bull wrecks all. Angelotti is put in the grave of his peasant ancestors, and Socorro is betrothed again to the aristocrat she deserted.

"'Red Sand' proves that he is genuinely possessed of artistic ability on no small scale." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 7 '24 800w

Cleveland p50 Jl '24

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Je 15 '24 600w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter
Int Bk R p823 O '24 500w

"Mr. Stribling has written two good novels of Latin America, a field that has been little exploited by North Americans. He sees with a sympathetic and understanding eye, which lends interest to his stories, and he is growing in artistic stature. His style is not yet the most felicitous in the world, but it is improving. He has a quiet sense of humor and a gift for story telling, which altogether should take him a long way among the younger novelists of the day." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p741 My 10 '24 120w

"'Red Sand' is more than mere adventure. The novel has much more merit than that, for its detachment savors of wise reflective observation and sound psychology."
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 20 '24 650w

"There is witty yet gentle philosophy developed in connection with the unfolding of the story; there are many vivid snap shots of South American life and there is, first of all, a stirring and romantic plot, to serve as a framework." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p29 Ap 27 '24 750w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter
N Y World p6e Ap 27 '24 800w

"To the superficial, 'Red Sand' may be a romance with a tragic ending; to the discerning it is a work of art."
+ Outlook 138:176 O 1 '24 250w

"In a way, the subject is old: Mr. Stribling, however, gives it more than a new setting. He does not merely transplant the old pathos and humour of the situation to an admirably described world of colour and sunshine: he makes his people individual and universal. He moves us with their passions. He creates. And the irony is even subtler than that of 'Fombombo.'" Gerald Gould
+ Sat R 137:540 My 24 '24 330w

Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 120w

"Mr. Stribling is a romantic with his tongue in his cheek. But he is also a sensitive observer, alive to the beauty as well as to the comedy of things. For those qualities, even though in this tragi-comedy of punctilio his irony is largely thrown away, his progress is worth following."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p338 My 29 '24 300w

STRONG, ANNA LOUISE. First time in history. 249p $2 Boni & Liveright

947 Russian—History—Revolution. Russia—Economic conditions

Miss Strong went to Russia in the summer of 1921 as a relief worker and remained there to engage in journalistic work, till December, 1923. She evidently accepts the revolution and its methods in the sense explained by Trotsky in the preface: "History is not all guided in its movements by the rules of morals and beauty; it follows the logic of its inherent forces, the classes and material factors underlying the bases of all society. Ethics and æsthetics are already phenomena of second or third place. . . . The author of the present book approached the Revolution not from the æsthetic, or contemplative point of view, but from the point of view of action." Contents: How Russia is "different"; The communists' new plan; The battle-front of industry; The money power in Russia; The story of Russian oil; The bread basket of Europe; How Moscow keeps house; The war with alcohol; Do the Jews rule Russia? The church revolution; Education in soviet Russia; Forces in conflict.

STRONG, ANNA LOUISE—Continued

Booklist 20:334 Je '24

Cleveland p63 Jl '24

"Her two years in Russia seem to have merged the author almost completely with her environment. She has the 'revolutionary psychology.' Stay-at-home Americans who want to know what that is may find here, briefly put, what it would take many months of hard living, travel, and study to dig up for themselves on the spot." Arthur Ruhl

+ Lit R p644 Ap 5 '24 1100w

"A clarifying of much that is bewildering on the surface, and a renewed conviction of a purpose still intelligently and stubbornly at work, directed toward the organization of a society different from any we have yet seen—that, to one who has had a mere look-in on Russia, is the result of reading Miss Strong's book." Dorothy Brewster

+ Nation 118:350 Mr 26 '24 750w

Nation and Ath 35:386 Je 21 '24 400w

Reviewed by Theodore Collier

New Repub 39:248 Jl 23 '24 800w

Outlook 136:442 Mr 12 '24 110w

Pratt p29 summer '24

"This book is vibrant with the impact of experience. After two years in the very thick of Russia's ferment, Miss Strong writes with all the vigor and dramatic quality which flash from contact with stirring events. Vivid picture and concrete incident follow each other in rapid succession, fresh from the note book of a quick and keen reporter." G. R. T.

+ Survey 52:243 My 15 '24 1000w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p307 My 15 '24 240w

Wis Lib Bul 20:96 Ap '24

STRONG, LEONARD ALFRED GEORGE. Lowery road. 143p $1.75 Boni & Liveright [3s 6d Blackwell]

821 24-11354

There is little of Ireland or of the manner of "Dublin Days" in Mr Strong's second collection of poems. Most of these poems are inspired by the Dartmoor country, which the poet has known and loved from childhood.

Dial 77:524 D '24 60w

"Mr. Strong mingles the good and the bad, the poetic and the non-poetic, so inextricably that final judgment on him must be deferred. He will either advance from 'The Lowery Road' or retrograde. But the good seems to outweigh the bad; and if he can collect himself, and obtain greater mastery of his medium while disciplining his mind, Mr. Strong has it in him to reach an enviable position." P. A. Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 1 '24 600w

"It is impossible not to like the rustic lyrics and ballads of L. A. G. Strong in 'The Lowery Road.' The book has exactly the charm, mood and content of 'Dublin Days,' his earlier work. There are the same humorous epitaphs, the same shrewd caricatures of country folk drawn in four lines." Milton Raison

+ N Y Tribune p22 Jl 27 '24 120w

"It is, primarily, a book of cryptic wit and hard-won wisdom, packed in compressed particles. It has beauty, not loveliness, either of thought or language—the beauty of glittering edges, sharp points, and acute angles. It speaks to the intellect and to the intellectual imagination." D: Morton

+ Outlook 137:318 Je 25 '24 280w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 400w

Wis Lib Bul 20:211 O '24

STRONG, LEONARD ALFRED GEORGE, ed. Best verse for 1923. 225p $2 Small

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections

"A few English and many American poets are represented, with a strong leaning toward queer, 'modern' verse, which naturally makes the biggest noise. The quality varies from Gertrude Robinson Ross's beautiful lyric, poorly named 'I was Made of This and This,' and Stephen Vincent Benét's big bow-wow prize poem, 'King David,' down to the amorphous composition of E. E. Cummings."—Outlook

---

Booklist 20:293 My '24

Boston Trancript p6 F 13 '24 700w

"As a collection of verse the small volume cannot be said to be either very impressive or very inspiring."

— Dial 77:83 Jl '24 120w

"The English editor of the book has paid fine tribute to the renaissance of poetry in America by allowing two-thirds of the parnassian chorus to be made up of American voices. And yet, so completely have we been convinced, little by little, that there is real poetry in America that this tremendous proportion of Americans in an English collection seems entirely natural and the thing to be expected." R. A.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p10 F 17 '24 600w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet

Lit R p774 My 24 '24 120w

"Nothing could more invite the attack of time than the title which he has given to his small volume, and nothing is surer than that eighty-eight poets are too many for anything except a periodical largess of laurel."

— + Nation 118:566 My 14 '24 60w

"Many of the items in the book are interesting, a few are even beautiful; a considerable number are not even interesting enough to warrant being called ugly."

+ — Outlook 136:234 F 6 '24 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:94 Ap '24

STRONG, LEONARD ALFRED GEORGE, ed. By haunted stream; an anthology of modern English poets. 112p $1.50 Appleton

821.08 English poetry—Collections 25-2885

A small anthology of English verse. A few of the poems of this collection first appeared in Mr Basil Blackwell's annual publication, Oxford poetry. It represents some minor poets not well known in America, and a few of wider fame.

"His anthology is one of the most delightful published in recent months. If British poetry was crippled by the war, as he hints in the preface, it has come a long way toward recovery when the half hundred and more poets here represented show so high an average of excellence." B. L. Kenyon

+ Bookm 60:346 N '24 150w

"The average of these poems is high, though few rise far above it. They are richer in images than in thought or emotion."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:132 S 20 '24 150w

STRONG, THOMAS BANKS. Religion, philosophy and history. 78p $1.20 Oxford [3s 6d Milford]

204 Religion [24-15088]

"I have endeavored to put forward the view that the element in man's effort to interpret the word which expresses itself later as religion is a primary and necessary element in his reaction to his environment; or at least that it has the same kind of claim to vitality that is allowed to those elements which express themselves as philosophy, art, and ethics."—Preface

Boston Transcript p6 My 3 '24 70w
Nation and Ath 34:744 F 23 '24 230w

"If there are many people into whose hands one could not put the Bishop's little book with any confident hope of their getting from it stimulus or enlightenment, there are others to whom this carefully argued statement will be just what they want, to give their own attitude to the universe firmness and precision."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p366 Je 12 '24 830w

STRUCK, FERDINAND THEODORE. Construction and repair work for the farm. 382p il $2.90 Houghton

631.3 Agricultural engineering. Agricultural machinery 23-10678

Written primarily for agricultural students in colleges and secondary schools the book is arranged on a basis of projects correlating shop instruction with agriculture. The directions are easy to follow and very fully illustrated with plans and diagrams. The subjects cover a wide range—tools and their sharpening, materials, all kinds of construction work from butter paddles to concrete foundations, the use of rope on the farm, belt and harness repairing, and repair and construction work related to the farm home.

Booklist 20:205 Mr '24

"Drawings and detailed plans are given in every case. It is a valuable agricultural handybook."
+ Lit R p376 D 15 '23 180w

"A very practical work treating its subject in a popular manner."
+ Wis Lib Bul 19:479 N '23

STUART, ELEANOR, pseud. See Porter, E.

STURGIS, HENRY SPRAGUE. Investment; a new profession. 210p $2 Macmillan

332.6 Investments 24-9344

The book outlines a scientific method of investing and describes the service which the investor should receive and the investment banker and broker should give as a part of his job. The study covers the methods of financing industry, the care of invested funds, analysis of general conditions and of company reports, and the principles to follow in selecting securities. A chapter on speculation is included and one on English methods of distributing securities.

Am Econ R 14:757 D '24 50w
Booklist 21:9 O '24

"Mr. Sturgis's method of discussion is to show how the investor would be benefited should the investment business adopt a professional attitude. It describes in detail the cooperation necessary between investor and banker, if both are to obtain the best results." J. G.
Bookm 59:adv Jl '24 120w
Cleveland p94 D '24
N Y Times p14 My 25 '24 600w

"Furnishes very valuable hints to him who would invest."
+ Outlook 138:564 D 3 '24 100w
Pol Sci Q 39:727 D '24 200w
R of Rs 70:110 Jl '24 50w
St Louis p337 O '24

SUCKOW, RUTH. Country people. 213p $2 Knopf

24-12281

The chronicle of three generations of a sturdy German-American family. The first Kaetterhenrys came to this country from Pomerania in 1850 and settled in Iowa. They went thru all the hardships of pioneer life and by hard-working, money-saving habits became prosperous farmers and substantial citizens. The story, which develops without plot or striking incident, follows their steady healthy progress in material things, but the spiritual side remains barren. Told with the utmost simplicity and directness the narrative has the truthfulness of a photographic record.

"As we look over this whole story we find it little short of remarkable that Ruth Suckow has been able to make it all so vivid and so interesting when not once has she deviated from her plan, from her faithful portrayal of the life of these country people of the Iowa farmlands. Only a very high degree of talent could have accomplished the unforgettable vividness of this picture from the materials with which she works." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 1 '24 900w
Cleveland p50 Jl '24

"It would be difficult to imagine duller, less interesting lives and duller, less interesting people than those Ruth Suckow has chosen to describe in her first novel, 'Country People.' Yet there are moments, such as that of Carl's departure for the war, when one feels that Miss Suckow is perhaps not entirely without a sense of the dramatic, and some of the descriptions are well written."
— + Int Bk R p904 N '24 340w
Lit R p970 Ag 16 '24 400w

"No more unprejudiced record has been written of this particular epoch and this particular region. It gives an impression of completeness without being either ponderous or dull." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 119:194 Ag 20 '24 180w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 39:307 Ag 6 '24 120w

"One feels a certain resentment that 'Country People' have been presented as so poor-spirited a lot. There may be a glory of courage, a pity of frustration, a fruitful significance of life, behind so bare a façade, but if there is the reader is not informed. In consequence, it is a poor and disappointing book. . . Miss Suckow brings a sure sense of character, an admirably simple style, a talent for direct narrative. The book progresses with the even flow of a Government report. The monotony of the lives she describes is so perfectly transferred to her pages that the reader marvels that she finds her present subject worth writing about at all." J: Carter
— + N Y Times p7 Je 1 '24 700w
Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

SULLIVAN, JOHN WILLIAM NAVIN. Atoms and electrons. (Doran's modern readers' bookshelf) 188p $1.25 Doran [2s 6d Hodder & S.]

541.2 Atoms. Electrons 24-7668

A little book which simplifies and condenses its subject as far as possible for the general reader. The theory of the atom is treated historically. Contents: Units and notation; Atoms and molecules; Constituents of the atom; The structure of the atom; Quantum theory; The grouping of atoms; The inner regions; Index.

"If the 'man in the street' wishes to know all about the new theories of matter he should read this little treatise on the subject, for it is big with information he needs and can assimilate."
+ Boston Transcript p7 My 24 '24 300w

"On the whole, it fulfills every requirement of the reader who wishes the latest facts and their meanings without undue mental effort."
+ Lit R p782 My 24 '24 170w

"An excellent account of the atomic theory."
+ Nation and Ath 34:522 Ja 5 '24 240w

"Mr. Sullivan has written a very lucid and accurate little book which covers sufficient ground to make it almost a handy reference work to modern physical ideas. The book is very interesting, very clear, and the information given is quite trustworthy."
+ Nature 113:378 Mr 15 '24 1550w

SULLIVAN, J: W: N.—Continued

"The reader of these 187 small pages would carry away an intelligent conception of the whole situation regarding the atom and what we know about it, without more than perhaps six total hours of careful reading."

+ Outlook 137:444 Jl 16 '24 250w

R of Rs 70:112 Jl '24 50w

"It is a volume which reflects great credit on 'The People's Library.'"

+ Sat R 136:552 N 17 '23 70w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p104 F 21 '24 1050w

SULLIVAN, LOUIS HENRY. Autobiography of an idea. 329p $3 Press of the Am. inst of architects, inc., 250 W. 57th st., N.Y.

B or 92 Architecture 24-8157

"The Autobiography of an Idea traverses Mr. Sullivan's childhood, adolescence, and early maturity; the mixed parentage, the New England landscape, the first stirrings to boats and bridges and brawny men, the fine discipline of Moses Woolson, the early program of an architectural career, and the young apprentice's encounter with Philadelphia, Paris, and Chicago." —New Repub

Booklist 21:150 Ja '25

"A book of invaluable cogency in these our times which does not preach, yet does challenge an alluring appeal to the powers within us which most of us timidly deny." W: L. Steele

+ Lit R p6 S 6 '24 1000w

"This unusual and revealing book is the spiritual confession of an American architect whose philosophy of life is imbedded in its pages as deeply as in his brick and stone." Harry Hansen

+ Nation 119:147 Ag 6 '24 650w

Reviewed by L: Mumford

+ New Repub 39:132 Je 25 '24 1550w

SURTEES, ROBERT SMITH, and CUMING, EDWARD WILLIAM DIROM. Robert Smith Surtees (creator of Jorrocks) 1803-1864. 339p $5 Scribner [15s W. Blackwood]

B or 92 [24-18670]

[The book is] "largely an autobiography of Surtees the famous sporting novelist. Characteristically, for Surtees was pleased to be a landowner and a magistrate with a 'taste for scribbling' as he put it, his fragment of autobiography was mixed with notes taken on the bench, and thus escaped notice until Mr. Cuming went into his papers. The fragments tell us how he came to London in 1825; how he hunted in Sussex and France; how he pretended to practise as a solicitor; how to beguile the dead winter of 1829, he began to write a semi-sporting novel, which was laughed at by his friends; how he got the 'New Sporting Magazine' to accept him; how he created Jorrocks; inherited Hamsterley Hall, hunted the county at his own expense, stood for Parliament and failed; and was in every way the model of that peculiarly British breed, the well-bred, well-read country gentleman who by some freak of nature conceals a vein of genius in the seams of his mind."—Nation and Ath

"It is an impartial tribute to the creator of 'Jorrocks,' to the man who wrote the first and best satirical novels of the English landed gentry of his day."

+ Bookm 60:353 N '24 100w

Nation and Ath 35:392 Je 21 '24 200w

N Y Times p11 S 14 '24 700w

"Mr. Cuming has arranged his material in a most readable and entertaining manner, and the book is one which cannot fail to appeal to all who have appreciated Surtees's work."

+ Sat R 137:592 Je 7 '24 1000w

"This is a bad book, with much new and welcome biographical and autobiographical material. It contains no criticism and no index, but it reminds us that Surtees was no mean purveyor of character, incident, colour and costume." J. Isaacs

— + Spec 132:883 My 31 '24 1050w

"Mr. Cuming has produced a very interesting book but one feels in setting it down, that one might have expected something more. The time is ripe for a critical study of Surtees, and he had an exceptional opportunity to provide one. He could have said all that was wanted in another fifty pages, and, had he added these, would have increased vastly the value of his work."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p282 My 8 '24 1900w

SUTHERLAND, MRS JOAN (COLLINGS). Outsider; adapted from the play of that name by Dorothy Brandon. 299p $2 Brentano's

24-11137

"The remarkable hero, a child of the slums, begins his wonderful invention while he's still a youngster. It is a 'rack' intended for use in corrective surgery, or, rather, the miraculous curing of deformities. When he finally gets it done the conservative orthodox doctors will have none of it and Ragatsky is 'persecuted' and refused recognition by haughty Harley Street. But he manages to work a marvelous cure in the case of the daughter of an unbelieving doctor and, naturally, marries the girl, is duly welcomed and becomes famous."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p3 Je 21 '24 320w

"There is a certain undercurrent of criticism of medical men in general, though it hardly amounts to 'propaganda.' But the whole thing is quite apart from the realities of life." H. W.

— Lit R p938 Ag 2 '24 120w

Nation 119:343 O 1 '24 60w

"Joan Sutherland has made an entertaining if not altogether plausible book out of Dorothy Brandon's drama."

— + N Y Times p19 Je 1 '24 450w

SUZZALO, HENRY. Our faith in education. 108p $1.25 Lippincott

370 Education 24-15406

The president of the University of Washington addresses to teachers this little book on the relation of education to our democratic life and government and exhorts them to have faith in themselves and their calling.

Booklist 21:53 N '24

Cath World 119:849 S '24 780w

Cleveland p95 D '24

"Simple and dignified treatment. This volume is a large public service admirably well done."

+ Educ R 69:50 Ja '25 950w

Reviewed by C: H. Judd

El School J 25:147 O '24 350w

"The little book is vibrant with the finest kind of spirit and breathes the warmest faith in the beneficent function of our school system in the successful working out of democratic philosophy."

+ N Y Times p17 Jl 20 '24 500w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 16 '24 100w

SVEDBERG, THEODOR. Colloid chemistry; [2] Wisconsin lectures. (Am. chemical soc. monographs) 265p il $3 Chemical catalog co.

541.345 Colloids 24-7670

The text of this monograph is based upon a series of lectures given at the University of Wisconsin in 1923. The book is a general survey of colloid chemistry, giving special attention to colloid chemistry technique and placing its emphasis on quantitative investigations.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:424 O '24

SWEENEY, WALTER CAMPBELL. Military intelligence; a new weapon in war. 259p $2.50 Stokes

355 Military intelligence 24-18202

A discussion of military intelligence based on Lt. Colonel Sweeney's personal experience, observation and study. In stating exactly what military intelligence is and what it does, he has avoided the use of technical terms for the benefit of the general reader who is unacquainted with military phraseology or organization. Contents: Development of military intelligence; Military intelligence defined; Organization; Problems of modern war; Intelligence service in the World war; Functions of personnel; Collection of information; Evaluation of information; Distribution of intelligence; Secret service and maps; Censorship; Requisites of personnel.

"No military writer in a generation has had Colonel Sweeney's opportunity. A new field; a vital subject; preëminent experience in the subject; and a whole new citizen army needing knowledge of the subject. He has made good use of his opportunity."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 16 '24 480w

"An intelligible and compact little book."

+ N Y Times p5 S 21 '24 500w

R of Rs 70:334 S '24 50w

SWENSON, RINEHART JOHN. National government and business. 475p $4 Century

351.82 Industry and state—United States. Trusts, Industrial—Law 24-16202

"Professor Swenson has collected and arranged some hundreds of extracts from legal documents and treatises on Government or Administration, illustrative of the many-sided relations between business and the Federal Government. [He leaves] the extracts, as far as possible, to speak for themselves, but he has nevertheless contrived, by judicious comment or summarization, to weave the selections together here and there into a semblance of readable form. While, accordingly, the book has the form of a historical or legal source-book and is designed in part for use as such, it is also a handbook for the business man who is concerned about the growing encroachment of Government upon the domain of business affairs, and for the student who is interested to observe what happens when politics sets out to take a hand in economics."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 2 '24 1050w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

N Y Times p1 Ag 24 '24 2500w

"The extracts from decisions and standard discussions of government or political theory are intelligently made, though not comprehensive, and where the point is somewhat obscured through conflicting opinions, finality is not attempted and the citations may even seem confusing. The book is not the less informing or helpful on this account, and it is of convenient compass for the student or other reader who desires some grounding in American business law and the larger principles of public control."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 S 26 '24 650w

SWIFT, HELEN. Where green lanes end. 84p $1.50 Huebsch

504 Nature 24-12932

A group of delicate little nature sketches, to which are added two short stories, The chicken-woman and the hen-man, and Zachariah Jones.

"Like exquisite water colors are the verbal pictures Miss Swift paints, delicately sensing their spirit, delicately interpreting."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '24 650w

Wis Lib Bul 20:210 O '24

SWINBURNE, JAMES. Population and the social problem. 380p $5 Macmillan [15s Allen & U.]

304 Social problems. Population 24-18349

Discursive chapters expressing the personal opinions of an English engineer on social problems. They are loosely held together by the author's conviction that "population pressure is the basic principle in sociology," and that only by a thorough study of this fundamental principle can the social problem, by which he means poverty and its accompanying evils, be solved.

"This book is interesting not so much because of the information it contains, but because of the man it reveals. It is of little consequence as a scientific study of either population or social problems, for it is made up largely of personal opinions cut out of the whole cloth of broad generalizations; but it is pungent with the human flavor of an original and inquiring mind, and of an irascible yet kindly disposition." Evans Clark

— + N Y Times p5 N 23 '24 2200w

"Mr. Swinburne wields a sharp lance and impales on it innumerable cherished beliefs with great vigour, but he lays himself open to many counterstrokes for those who care to enter the fray. His pages bristle with smart but dubious paradoxes, which rather amuse than enlighten. He is equally severe with orthodox economists and with Socialists, but seems insufficiently acquainted with either; and these portions of Mr. Swinburne's book cannot be taken very seriously."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Jl 10 '24 2250w

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. Young Felix. 439p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

23-16461

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay

Atlantic's Bookshelf Mr '24 300w

Cleveland p15 F '24

"There is such artful innocence in this presentation of idealized human nature that it becomes stimulatingly credible. The illusion of verisimilitude is deftly safeguarded by the homely but ingratiating traits of the characters and by an accumulation of slight, plausible incidents."

+ Dial 76:92 Ja '24 100w

"'Young Felix' is much the best of Mr. Swinnerton's full-length novels." H. W. Boynton

+ Ind 112:23 Ja 5 '24 470w

"It is not what Felix does, but what he is, that holds us captive, and it seems more than likely that in this respect he is identical with the author himself. It is not the story told by Mr. Swinnerton that wins our attention and approval, but the richness and mellowness of his own store of human insight. What 'Young Felix' has to give us, it gives us in spite of the simplicity and essential commonplaceness of its so-called plot." Edwin Bjorkman

+ Int Bk R p138 Ja '24 1700w

"Certainly one of Swinnerton's best achievements, fresh, vigorous, full of humour, and always living. I put it second only to his little tour-de-force 'Nocturne.'" J. D. Beresford

+ Nation and Ath 34:sup403 D 8 '23 180w

New Repub 38:346 My 26 '24 100w

SYMONS, ARTHUR. Dramatis personæ. 358p $3 Bobbs

804 Literature 23-17450

"Obviously, Mr. Symons is an interpreter and impressionist, and his subject matter is limited by what he finds congenial to himself. Like Huneker, he has played at steeple-jacking

SYMONS, ARTHUR—Continued
among the seven arts. Like George Moore, he has aspired to take his color from 'all that is delicately depraved, all that is beautifully, curiously poisonous, in modern art.' Hence the astonishing diversification of 'Dramatis Personæ,' which ranges thus in its contents: The Decadent Movement in Literature, Edgar Saltus, On Hamlet and Hamlets, Conrad, On English and French Fiction, The Rossettis, Emil Verhaeren, Leonardo de Vinci, Impressionistic Writing; and touches in addition upon the English romantic poets, upon critical theory, and the memories and recollections, artistic, Parisian and literary, which the author retains of the more spacious days of his youth." —Nation

"The author is above all an interpreter of the arts, revealing hidden beauties and subtleties by penetrating analysis and illuminating phrase."

Booklist 20:211 Mr '24

"If his latest book lacks something of the flame of his earlier work, there is still the same grasp of the significant, the impatience at the unessential. Mr. Symons writes criticism in a prose which is lovely to the ear."

+ Bookm 59:351 My '24 100w

"Breadth of interest is apparent. Good writing is evident. Critical faculty is keenly developed. If we value these essays because they are the work of Symons that is one thing. If we look upon them as the last word in serious criticism that is an entirely different matter. Mr. Symons has always been impervious to the opinions of others. Quite in the same way he is impervious to the truth about any work of art, examined from an unprejudiced standpoint." D. F. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 F 9 '24 450w

"Mr. Symons's style is subtle and undulating. He burdens it with elaborate involutions of thought and 'multiplied distinctions.' Yet it remains picturesque and colorful by virtue of his device of concreteness and his special faculty for figured language." G. H. Carson

+ — Nation 118:93 Ja 23 '24 650w

N Y Times p6 Ja 13 '24 1650w

Theatre Arts Mo 8:282 Ap '24 150w

SYNON, MARY. McAdoo, the man and his times; a panorama in democracy. 355p $3 Bobbs

B or 92 McAdoo, William Gibbs 24-10717

"Miss Synon confines herself almost entirely to an account of McAdoo's activities as secretary of the treasury. There is a brief review of his early life, and more detail upon his triumph in building the Hudson tubes and linking them up with the traction system of the metropolis; but the emphasis is upon the establishment of the federal reserve system, the creation of the merchant marine, the beginnings of rural credits, the floating of the Liberty Loans, the loans to the Allied countries, and government administration of railroads."—Nation

"It is rare that a man can survive a campaign biography, but Mr. McAdoo emerges fairly creditably even from this rather gushy eulogy." H. E. Barnes

— + Nation 118:741 Je 25 '24 1000w

Reviewed by N: Roosevelt

N Y Times p1 My 11 '24 1050w

"Larger quotations from documents and a less effusive and laudatory treatment of the subject would have been essential if a book of genuine value were to be produced. . . The book, which might have been history, is, like other biographies of political inspiration, mainly press-agenting, and, as that, one sadly fears it will fail of its purpose."

— Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 23 '24 600w

T

TABER, CLARENCE WILBUR, and WARDALL, RUTH AIMEE. Economics of the family. (Lippincott's unit texts) 224p $2 Lippincott

647.1 Home economics. Domestic finance 24-1825

A text-book of household accounting and budget-making intended for the use of high school students in home economics classes. Each chapter is provided with problems, exercises and questions for review and the project method of teaching is frequently used in presenting topics. The appendix gives additional projects and questions and there is a bibliography.

Booklist 20:253 Ap '24

"As a practical guide in all departments of household economics this book must be accepted as reliable and suggestive. It does not dodge the hard questions; it seems to welcome them. Special illustrations and applications are given in generous measure. Its gospel of efficiency is thus proved rather than preached." M. H. Abel

+ J Home Econ 16:36 Ja '24 550w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Ag 14 '24 20w

Wis Lib Bul 20:146 Je '24

TAINE, JOHN. Purple sapphire. 325p $2 ^{2} Dutton

24-23174

With a superb disc of purple fire the only clue to the abduction, twelve years before, of General Wedderburn's eight-year-old daughter, John Ford, gem-trader and world famous pathfinder thru the deserts of Central Asia, begins his search for the girl. He is accompanied by his niece Rosita, a singularly courageous young woman, and Captain Montague Joicey, the "lost" Englishman. Disguised as Tibetans they penetrate the depths of the Himalayas, and crossing a purple phosphorescent desert, come upon an obscure kingdom of an ancient great race. Here they discover Evelyn Wedderburn being worshipped as one of the "Wise Women" of these strange people. Evelyn's rescuers are condemned to a torturing death when a timely earthquake affords them means of escape.

"The word 'purple' could be applied equally as well to the story. Only Sir Rider Haggard, that we can remember, has so piled Ossa upon Pelion as regards adventure and lurid description."

— Boston Transcript p6 D 27 '24 300w

"If the story does not always sustain the illusion, it has its interesting moments and is ingeniously contrived."

+ — Int Bk R p62 D '24 380w

"The author is better when writing about scenery than the mysteries of love." Robert Crane

Lit R p10 N 22 '24 250w

"It is a book of action, brushed with color and tinted with love."

N Y World p8e N 30 '24 120w

"We can readily forgive the story for being improbable; but what we cannot forgive is the author's elephantine attempts at humor."

— Outlook 138:691 D 24 '24 100w

TALBOT, FREDERICK ARTHUR AMBROSE. Moving pictures; how they are made and worked. (Conquests of science) new and rev ed 429p il $3.50 Lippincott [10s 6d Heinemann]

778 Moving pictures

The technical and mechanical side of the moving picture art is very thoroughly covered in this book, first published in 1912, which has been almost entirely rewritten for its second edition. It tells of the beginnings of motion photography, of the rise and development of the picture play and the business of making and projecting the pictures. Chapters are given to the making of trick-pictures, pictures in color, moving and talking pictures, the making of elaborate sets and studio equipment and the camera artist and his work. Index.

"A very complete and thorough study of the Cinematograph in all its aspects. It is extremely readable for the amateur, who can, if he is bored, easily skip the purely technical passages. Yet even these are made interesting and almost romantic by Mr. Talbot, whose style, otherwise inclined at times to the florid journalese, is at its best when he is writing of the workings of a machine." Angus Davidson
+ — Nation and Ath 34:896 Mr 22 '24 880w

"This is the best book on the film that has yet appeared in English and will interest anyone who is not too much of a prig."
+ New Statesman 22:610 Mr 1 '24 700w

Reviewed by Quinn Martin
N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 1850w

Outlook 136:403 Mr 5 '24 250w

TANNENBAUM, FRANK. Darker phases of the South. 203p $2 Putnam

917.5 South—Social conditions. Prisons—United States. Ku Klux klan 24-2302

In his consideration of social conditions in the South, the author studies the reasons for the significance and dominance of the Ku Klux klan; the conditions of mill villages and workers; southern prisons and chain gangs; the curse of the single crop—cotton—which is not only king but tyrant; and the race problem.

"There is no rancor and little fault-finding. Both northern and southern readers will profit from a careful reading of this challenging study."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:654 Ag '24 50w

Booklist 20:296 My '24

"Disagreeing as we do with the author's philosophical conclusions, we must give him credit for being a close student of Southern conditions and of presenting much fresh evidence of the troubles which should bring the blush of shame to the cheeks of every true Southerner." F. P. H.
— + Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '24 440w

Dial 76:467 My '24 140w

Ind 112:80 F 2 '24 20w

"It is a thoughtful study, and one infinitely more informative than a thousand columns of newspaper controversy upon the subject. The fogs and mists of prejudice and emotion must be cleared away before we can see the Klan clearly, or before, for that matter, we can visualize any such problem intelligently." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p488 F 2 '24 780w

"Mr. Tannenbaum offers no solution. What is still more to his credit, he had no concealed solution in his pistol pocket when he set out to make this study. His equipment consisted in a mind well trained in modern psychology—and therefore open and observant—a great stock of genuine human sympathy, and a well balanced judgment. It has enabled him to discover a great deal that is both new and true." Alvin Johnson
+ New Repub 37:316 F 13 '24 1500w

"Much of Mr. Tannenbaum's material is sensational, and his brilliantly incisive style may readily be called sensational; but to say that his book is sensationalism and nothing more would be far from the truth. Whatever its shortcomings, it is unmistakably a fair-minded book. It was written by a sensitive and fair-minded man." Silas Bent
+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 23 '24 2400w

Reviewed by S: M'Coy
N Y World p7e F 3 '24 1550w

"The book is written in earnest and deserves attention. The chapter on prisons is both painful and important."
Outlook 136:234 F 6 '24 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:330 Je '24

"His interpretation of the South in its industrial and race relationships is full of understanding for the way in which different attitudes have arisen and survive the social and economic changes now taking place. He does not condemn, he explains; and, for the most part, his explanations are historically and psychologically convincing. The last chapter of the book, containing suggestions for solutions of some of the outstanding problems of the South, is most stimulating but not altogether satisfying." B. L.
+ — Survey 52:106 Ap 15 '24 800w

TANZER, HELEN H. Villas of Pliny the younger; with a foreword by James C. Egbert. 152p il $2.50 Columbia univ. press

728 Architecture, Domestic—Rome. Pliny (Gaius Plinius Caecilius Secundus) the younger

Pliny's two letters describing the Laurentine and the Tuscan villa are "almost the sole authority on the difficult subject of Roman houses." The text and translations of these two letters is here given but the greater part of the book is devoted to the reconstructions made by various architects from Pliny's descriptions. These are illustrated with 56 plates. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 26 '24 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:321 Je '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Ap 10 '24 150w

TARBELL, IDA MINERVA. In the footsteps of the Lincolns. 418p il $4 Harper

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 24-3279

Miss Tarbell begins Abraham Lincoln's story in Hingham, Massachusetts, in 1637, when the first of his family line came to America as a pioneer and she follows the Lincoln migrations from there to New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and into Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois. She makes this story of vigorous independent pioneering account in large measure for the man Abraham Lincoln, shows that his rise to power from these influences was thoroughly logical and that his rigorous training coupled with his strong imagination and purpose naturally brought him to the presidency of the United States, where her book leaves him. Under her study many traditions that have grown up about Lincoln break down.

Booklist 20:298 My '24

"'In the Footsteps of the Lincolns' is carefully planned, well written, and possesses a charm that the most blasé reader cannot deny. Miss Tarbell knows her subject thoroughly (there is evidence of a vast amount of research), and what is far more important, knows how to present the subject in highly interesting manner."
+ Bookm 59:355 My '24 130w

Cath World 119:421 Je '24 320w

Cleveland p63 Jl '24

"The book is not merely a refutation of old myths, it is a well constructed biography, detailed and light of touch, but valuable perhaps chiefly for its emphasis on Lincoln's character and his work, rather than on the tragedy of his death."
+ Dial 77:207 S '24 60w

Lit R p982 Ag 23 '24 350w

Reviewed by N. W. Stephenson
New Repub 39:306 Ag 6 '24 1000w

"She has made it all into one of the most important and most fascinating of all the scores of Lincoln books."
+ N Y Times p5 My 4 '24 800w

TARBELL, IDA MINERVA—Continued

"I think that Miss Tarbell in part defeats her object by excess of zeal. She is too much the devotee, insisting upon a trivial perfection, a conformity to superficial standards, in the antecedents and conduct of Lincoln. A gentle but none the less fanatical partisan spirit imparts the flavor of sentimentality to her championship." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p17 F 17 '24 1150w

N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:328 Je '24

"Much of the information in this book has come to light very gradually as the result of studies inspired by the more recent Lincoln literature to which Miss Tarbell herself has made so large a contribution. . . This is the first connected story of the Lincoln family."

+ R of Rs 69:333 Mr '24 220w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 7 '24 580w

Wis Lib Bul 20:96 Ap '24

TARKINGTON, BOOTH. The midlander. 493p $2 Doubleday

24-5810

A Middle west story the hero of which is typical of the city whose growth he helped to shape. Opening in the comfortable nineties of the last century in an unnamed city, the story centers in the Oliphant family and especially in the older son, Dan. As a city-booster he was something of a Babbitt, yet thru all he was a man with a vision. "Ornaby Addition," his real estate project, became the dream of his life, and all of life to him, for his marriage with an eastern girl brought him no happiness. Thru years of failure his hope and faith never faltered and at last his dream was realized. The city went out to Ornaby. Dan juggled with money and land and factories. No one knew how much he owned. Then suddenly the great thing he had built turned and mastered him. He died in eclipse and with a sense of failure. But tho he did not live to see the fruition of what he had planted, a new generation found it beautiful.

"Mr. Tarkington never writes a dull story, but in The Midlander he has produced one that is neither convincing nor significant." A. S. Pier

— + Atlantic's Bookshelf Ap '24 450w

Booklist 20:220 Mr '24

"It is a fine study of a period, a fine development of characters. It reminds one of Galsworthy. And it seems to me, somehow, to lack the quick movement, the rare gaiety of the real Tarkington." J. F.

+ — Bookm 58:679 F '24 220w

"In spite of its shortcomings, 'The Midlander' is a notable novel, a series of faithful pictures of American life, and character. Most of all in it should its author be commended for recording the fate of Dan Oliphant without bowing to the demands of those readers of fiction who insist upon a happy ending." E. F. Edgett

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ja 19 '24 1400w

Cleveland p35 My '24

"If one considers 'The Midlander' merely as Dan Oliphant's biography, it is dismal enough, for Dan is a failure at home and abroad. But a book about a great economic upheaval is larger than any individual character. Dan comes to a melancholy end but he is a sort of burnt offering." R. J. McLaughlin

+ Detroit News p16 F 3 '24 650w

"The Midlander is somewhat epic in intention, but slightly commonplace in execution. Mr Tarkington, when he turns from his genre studies of adolescence, is inclined to adopt facile classifications: not all Westerners are noble and not all Easterners are vapid. The romance of the old generation being supplanted by the new is here retold skilfully, but not memorably."

— + Dial 76:288 Mr '24 70w

Ind 112:53 Ja 19 '24 1500w

Ind 112:130 Mr 1 '24 50w

"The changes which took place in what Dan called 'my city' are of course typical of those which have been occurring all over the United States, from New York westward. They are well and vividly described, and provide what may be called the backbone of this very long novel. That the atmosphere of the town is admirably reproduced goes without saying, while the early crudities of the 'Ornaby Addition,' merging at last into the comfort of a place of homes almost out of the reach of the smoke-curse, are equally convincing." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p237 F '24 700w

"What they do and say is all real enough, plausible enough: yet there is no mordancy or bite in their total effect. Nothing unexpected ever falls from their dusty lips. They never burst or blurt or blunder into any arresting actuality. All there is to their lives is on the surface: the inside, if there is an inside, is without distinction and without charm—it is devoid of interest. It neither rejoices one nor hurts one—much." S. P. Sherman

Lit R p455 Ja 19 '24 1300w

"Many novelists have made pioneering the material of moving novels, but always they have shown what pioneering did to the pioneer, making him a great and heroic figure, whereas Mr. Tarkington attempts to write an epic around a central character who never rises above the level of the enthusiastic realtor. The building of a suburb to a midland city may possibly be as important in the history of the nation as the opening up of the West, but it cannot be made satisfactory material for heroic art unless it can be shown to have molded great men, and this Mr. Tarkington never attempts to show." J. W. Krutch

— Nation 118:318 Mr 19 '24 1000w

New Repub 38:266 Ap 30 '24 30w

"The high position that Mr. Tarkington occupies in the history of contemporary American fiction is hardly warranted by such a book as 'The Midlander.' Yet we must not underestimate Mr. Tarkington's talent. What he has done is a difficult proceeding. In novel writing he has facility and resourcefulness. It is what he has not done and yet suggested that he might do that troubles the reader." H. S. Gorman

— + N Y Times p7 Ja 20 '24 1900w

"This story of Dan Oliphant, the Midlander, is a tragic conception which fails to touch the inner core of a reader's sensibility. Instead of pity, Dan arouses a mild but cumulative impatience. The man's simplicity and blundering persistence become faintly tedious. . . 'The Midlander' is not discreditable even to so practiced a pen; but it is far from being Mr. Tarkington's best, simply because it is not entirely characteristic of him." Isabel Paterson

— + N Y Tribune p21 Ja 20 '24 1450w

"'The Midlander' is an imperfect and incomplete piece of sketching rather than a rounded novel with balance between situation, character, and theme." R. D. Townsend

— + Outlook 136:192 Ja 30 '24 550w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Spec 132:564 Ap 5 '24 130w

"Mr Tarkington has caught and pictured and analyzed the modern spirit of materialism which is called progress. It is a true picture not of one section, but of the country as a whole. . . The story is conceived with Mr Tarkington's deft and easy but not profound craftsmanship. There are dashes of humor, individualized character and a supporting strain of human relationships which savor of romance, but which do not come within the popular conception of the term here."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 17 '24 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Mr 27 '24 220w

Wis Lib Bul 20:47 F '24

TASSIN, ALGERNON DE VIVIER, and MAURICE, ARTHUR BARTLETT. Child's story of American literature. 353p il $2.25 Macmillan

810.9 American literature—History and criticism 23-15293

Traces American literature from the days of the Puritans to modern times, the "century of short stories." The chapters are arranged chronologically and with the development of literature is woven the history of the United States. Whole chapters are devoted to the following authors: Franklin, Byrant, Irving, Cooper, Poe, Emerson, Hawthorne, Longfellow, Whittier, Lowell, Holmes, Whitman, Howells and Mark Twain.

"An excellent review of American literature."
+ Booklist 20:147 Ja '24

"Will be most helpful to the teacher of literature, and boys and girls will enjoy such a study, as the book is entertainingly written." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p231 F '24 80w

"It is almost a question whether the book is not as valuable for children as a work of history pure and simple as it is as a study of the growth of our literature." G. M. Goldman
+ N Y World p7e Mr 23 '24 120w
Wis Lib Bul 20:69 Mr '24

TAUSSIG, CHARLES WILLIAM, and MEYER, THEODORE ARTHUR. Book of hobbies; or, A guide to happiness. 318p il $3 Minton, Balch & co.

790 Hobbies. Collectors and collecting
24-27660

In this book enough different hobbies are presented to offer a real choice to the would-be hobbyist. The diversions include sports, collecting, handicrafts, amateur radio, etc. Each chapter is devoted to a separate hobby and contains sufficient information to enable the reader to tell if the hobby will please him and how to pursue it. Bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 21:141 Ja '25

"This superficial, frothy book on hobbies is worth having, if one has not a hobby to start with. For the introductory chapter advocating hobbies contains some wisdom which ought to be set before the man who has no business in life except his vocation." G. H. S.
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ja 3 '25 750w

"A unique book, quaintly illustrated, rich in a variety of information on many topics, well-assembled, and well-indexed." H. B.
+ Lit R p16 N 15 '24 200w

"The same unusual and distinctive quality marks the illustrations that characterize the text. It is a book that one can enjoy whether or not he intends to ride any of the prancing steeds that decorate it, while for any one who thinks of mounting a hobby it will be a valuable guide, philosopher and friend."
+ N Y Times p18 N 9 '24 1900w

"You will learn a number of things from this rather unusual book without feeling it at all. It is surprisingly thorough in detail, historical synopses and bibliographies. And the illustrations are charming." Kathleen Millay
+ N Y Tribune p9 N 2 '24 550w

"The man or woman who is beating about for some interest in life other than the earning of a livelihood can hardly do without this hobby book. It presents enough subjects to cover almost any sort of taste. It turns up many hidden pleasures in each that might by chance be overlooked by the novice."
+ N Y World p8e N 2 '24 340w
Sat R of Lit 1:331 N 29 '24 200w

"An interesting and unusual book."
+ Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 400w

TAYLOR, BERT LESTON. The East window, and The car window. 225p il $2.50 Knopf

814
24-11645

B. L. T.'s "East window" faced Lake Michigan but his look is not directed at Chicago's water front. Rather, it searches the "rarely beautiful country of his mind." The brief essays, some of them no more than a page in length, reflect the poet and the dreamer, seldom the humorist. They are mostly meditations on literature, poetry especially, on nature, music and life itself. Thru the "Car window" he views the American and the Canadian scene. Here there is more of his accustomed humor.

Booklist 21:18 O '24

"The essays are like tiny bottles of an exquisite and potent essence. They are very brief and of a lustrous clarity, and doubly effective because their thoughts are quietly harbored in perfect simplicity."
+ Bookm 59:611 Jl '24 110w

"This is the book of Bert Leston Taylor, essayist—not B. L. T., 'columnist'—for it is difficult to dissociate the latter from his medium and his audience. . . These essays will come to many who never heard of B. L. T., and who, escaping the glamour that surrounds his name in the West, will find here a gentle writer, a keen-witted, but well-poised and tempered soul." Harry Hansen
+ Lit R p883 Jl 12 '24 550w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko
Nation 119:168 Ag 13 '24 60w

"Taylor shows himself an expert at a form of writing rarely attempted in America—the construction and the execution of feuilletons. Taylor's pieces in this volume are all short, all direct and all comprehensive. Save for his humorous work, he is at his best in his treatment of nature." H. J. Mankiewicz
+ N Y Times p10 My 4 '24 1100w
St Louis p383 N '24
Wis Lib Bul 20:175 Jl '24

TAYLOR, HENRY OSBORN. Freedom of the mind in history. 297p $2.25 (7s 6d) Macmillan

901 Progress. Intellect. Civilization

The general course of history is, in the author's conception, the result of the free action of the human mind, working thru increasing knowledge and strengthened by the creative and loving mind of God. From a survey of man's evolution out of his animal instincts into the realm of free intelligence and will he turns to specific examples of human progress and examines the parts played by various peoples and great thinkers in the drama of mankind's advance.

"However judgments may differ with regard to the conclusions to be drawn from this survey of human activity, it is well worth the while of those who habitually think chiefly in the terms of physical sequence to reflect upon the broader aspects of life. For those willing to do so Dr. Taylor's book cannot fail to be both stimulating and suggestive." D: J. Hill
+ — Am Hist R 29:525 Ap '24 1900w
Am Pol Sci R 18:208 F '24 80w
Booklist 20:294 My '24

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
Int J Ethics 34:303 Ap '24 850w

"As is, of course, inevitable in so small a book, the historical part is very sketchy, containing but little that is not already well known even to superficial students of the subject. The author, however, is well aware of this fact, and constantly refers his readers to the larger works for more detailed accounts of the subjects dealt with. The important part of this volume, then, is the philosophy set forth in it, especially in the first and last chapters, but which is also behind the whole of the historical sections, which serve to illustrate it." J. W. Swain
+ J Philos 21:441 Jl 31 '24 1300w
J Religion 4:335 My '24 50w

"It is a gallant effort to see them all as parts of a whole, and he ends with a fervid address to his contemporaries to pursue knowledge and prevent the spread of a flood of folly which might submerge civilisation." F. S. Marvin
+ Nature 113:885 Je 21 '24 550w

"One who has neither ample time [nor] serious inclination to read modern biology, physics and metaphysics will get a peep at some of their accomplishments which will be both pleasurable

TAYLOR, HENRY OSBORN—Continued
and profitable. Here the author reveals his comprehensive grasp of the minds and materials of the days when that which is called Hellenism dominated the world and of the forces that led to the upheavals of the Middle Ages from which our civilization and its colossal materialistic progress has flowed." Joseph Collins

+ N Y Times p16 F 3 '24 1400w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:332 Je '24
Pol Sci Q 39:718 D '24 430w
Sat R 136:552 N 17 '23 70w
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p889 D 20 '23 1300w

TAYLOR, HUGH. Conditions of national success. 351p $3 Appleton [10s 6d Blackwell]

320.1 Political science. Progress. Civilization [24-9349]

An inquiry into the causes of the rise and fall of nations and the reasons why some nations have fulfilled their possibilities more completely than others. Among the various factors discussed are the influence of religion, of different forms of government, of war and the probable effect of its abolition.

Boston Transcript p3 Je 7 '24 410w

Reviewed by A. S. Will
N Y Times p1 Je 15 '24 1650w

TAYLOR, HUGH STOTT, ed. Treatise on
[2] physical chemistry; a cooperative effort by a group of physical chemists. 2v il $12 Van Nostrand

541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 24-28603

"Written primarily for the advanced student in physical chemistry, the research student, and the research man in industry. Each of the topics has been treated by an authority on the subject. A valuable reference work."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:591 D '24

TAYLOR, KATHARINE HAVILAND. Tony from America. 286p il $1.75 Harcourt 24-3916

"This is the story of Antoinette Cintas (Tony) who, after spending most of her nineteen years on her uncle's ranch in Texas, is suddenly sent to London on a mission of importance. The title to the ranch is threatened in a series of mysterious letters and Tony decides that the only way to prevent her from being ousted is to search London for the records which will prove her uncle's right to his beloved ranch. Tony's adventures in London and her final triumph make up the major portion of the book, which is evidently designed to be instructive as well as entertaining for young girls."—N Y Times

"A really charming little story. The heroine is a delightful combination of energy and naïveté, and is convincingly drawn, leaving the reader with a real feeling of having lost a most likable little friend when the book is closed."

+ Lit R p811 Je 7 '24 120w
N Y Times p22 Mr 2 '24 400w

TAYLOR, MORGAN. Thrings of the dark mountain. 122p il $1.60 Minton, Balch & co. 24-23138

Mr Taylor introduces a new sprite to Fairyland, a tiny, quaint figure with wrinkled face, beady-beady eyes, long nose and flowing beard. He wears a brown cape and peaked hat and calls himself a Thring. This tiny Thring plays an important part in five of the seven stories contained in this book. The first story tells how the good people of the peaceful town of Blamdang become panic-stricken when they are told that a whole army of Thrings would decend upon them if they did not forfeit their hidden treasure. But one sturdy youth, the butcher's boy, bravely investigates and discovers that the army consists of one lonely Thring who wanted only friendship from the good folk.

Boston Transcript p5 D 13 '24 370w

"The stories are all deliciously whimsical, not only in their general conception, but in their details, and there is much dry humor—usually quite applicable to human affairs and the people of real life—that will be relished by adults."

+ N Y Times p4 N 9 '24 450w

TAYLOR, RACHEL ANNAND. End of Fiammetta. 224p $3 Holt [10s 6d G. Richards]

821

"The book is divided into three sections, of which the first and last are headed respectively, 'Fiammetta's Feverish Fancies' and 'Fiammetta Forgives—and Forgets?' There is, perhaps, a dramatic unity in the volume, but it is not made plain. Love is expressed in many forms from that of sentimentality to that of mystic rapture, in verse which varies from overfluency to a male harshness most expressive of the latter quality."—Spec

"One wearies a little of the restless passion, about which the suspicion lurks that it is partly histrionic." G. H. Busey

— N Y Tribune p9 O 19 '24 500w
Sat R of Lit 1:438 Ja 3 '25 470w

"One of those books which may, without dispraise, be called exasperating. It is dominated by the kind of passion which, with Rossetti and Browning in mind, might be called Florentine. If Miss Taylor obscures her own best qualities among inferior verses there is yet enough in view among these nearly 300 pieces to create a strong impression of individuality." Edgell Rickword

— + Spec 132:209 F 9 '24 150w

"Long before we reach the end of these poems we are tired of Fiammetta. In spite of the decorative beauty of some of her songs, and the voluptuous fluency with which the single theme is incessantly developed, Fiammetta becomes almost a nuisance. It is a thousand pities that Mrs. Annand Taylor did not choose some other persona for her temperament. For Fiammetta strikes us as intolerably conceited."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p140 Mr 6 '24 1000w

TEIGNMOUTH, HENRY NOEL SHORE, baron, and HARPER, CHARLES GEORGE. Smugglers; picturesque chapters in the history of contraband. 2v 240;239p $12.50 Doran [42s C. Palmer]

336.26 Smuggling [24-3183]

"Some people collect stamps, others collect Dresden china shepherdesses, or Toby jugs, and one, at any rate, collects matchboxes; but Lord Teignmouth and Mr. Harper have a more exciting hobby. For years they have collected smugglers, from Admiralty records, from living testimony, and from the evidence of tombstones in ancient seaside places. In these two volumes they share the best things in their collection with the public. Here, for the first time, set down with the impartial justice of history, we may read the biographies of those heroes, Jack Rattenbury, George Ransley, the fairly patriotic Johnson, and the occasionally pious Harry Carter. . . The book is illustrated with demure drawings of such rendezvous as the 'Red Lion,' the 'Green Man,' and still existing houses of smugglers by the authors, and 'fancy' pictures by Mr. Paul Hardy."—Nation and Ath

Reviewed by Harvey Parrish
Lit R p12 S 13 '24 600w

"Excellent reading." A. M. Ritchie
+ Nation and Ath 34:674 F 9 '24 500w

"This is a really admirable book, interesting on almost every page. It is full of adventures and bloody encounters, and at the same time it contains the most comprehensive and authentic account of English smuggling that is ever likely to be printed."

+ New Statesman 22:671 Mr 15 '24 850w

"The book is written in a popular style and has many illustrations. The historic interest would be greater had more care been taken in arrangement and in the collation of authorities."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p114 F 21 '24 280w

TENNANT, A. E. Studies in Polish life and history. 254p $3.50 Brentano's [10s 6d Allen & U.]

943.8 Poland—History [24-28459]

"With sympathetic insight into the Polish character and with scholarly arrangement of matter, the author here presents the history of Poland up to, and including, the present day; and, when he has reviewed the many centuries of her bitter struggle and drawn our attention to the tenacity with which she has clung to her individuality he asks, 'Is not that of good augury for the future?' "—Sat R

Boston Transcript p4 N 22 '24 450w

"Accepting the scheme of the book, with its inherent weaknesses and difficulties, we may still place the author among the more critical and discriminating writers of his class." A. J. Toynbee
+ — Nation and Ath 35:567 Ag 2 '24 1100w

" 'Studies in Polish Life and History' is a book that fills a considerable want in the literature about Poland. It provides a history that, while it is scholarly and exact in all its details and traces back to furthest sources, is never dull or pedantic. Dark as necessarily the colours are in which so tragic a history is painted, they are true; and the story of the Polish peasantry striving to keep its individuality and its faith to the end provides the canvas with a brighter tone."
+ Sat R 138:122 Ag 2 '24 750w

TERHUNE, ALBERT PAYSON. Tiger's claw. 262p $2 Doran
24-22003

A mystery story with two dogs, a powerful German police dog and a noble collie, among its chief characters. The plot is a blend of murder, rum running, secret service, sea planing, love and revenge, reaching its climax in a fight between the two dog enemies.

"It is a super-thriller, and entitled to be listed as a 'bully good yarn' of its cheerful family."
+ Lit R p9 S 20 '24 350w
N Y Times p21 D 28 '24 350w
N Y Tribune p17 D 7 '24 200w

"The novel is rather above the average conglomeration of the 'sure-fire' elements. This superiority exists because Mr Terhune is a better writer and knows more of human nature than many a popular author."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a N 23 '24 220w

TERHUNE, ALBERT PAYSON. Treve. 312p $2 Doran
24-4361

Treve, the golden-tawny collie of the Dos Hermanos sheep ranch, is the hero of these episodes wherein figure straying sheep and a would-be dog thief, rustlers and a sheep-killing wolf. Always Treve does his duty and with uncanny collie skill protects the interests of his two gods, young Mack and grouchy old Fenno. The latter, at first detesting the sight and sound of Treve, gradually succumbs to his lovable traits and finally acknowledges his fondness openly. In an afterword the author devotes some space to the real Treve, a very strange and beautiful collie, who was the author's chum at Sunnybank.

Booklist 20:266 Ap '24
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 5 '24 650w
Reviewed by K. L. Bates
Int Bk R p474 My '24 700w
Nation 119:128 Jl 30 '24 80w

"Mr. Terhune in 'Treve' has established himself more firmly than ever as the Boswell of the collie elect. To that enviable audience which eagerly awaits each new addition to his wholesome yarns we can say that in 'Treve' they, too, may lose their heart to a dog and in the process thoroughly enjoy the good fun, dramatic incident and the delightfully masculine sentiment with which the chronicle abounds."
+ N Y Times p3 F 24 '24 720w

"One of the wonder dogs, of course. Mr. Terhune has raised that kind and knows all about them." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e F 24 '24 200w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p800 N 27 '24 150w

TETRAZZINI, MME LUISA. How to sing. 136p il $2.50 Doran [5s Pearson]

784.9 Singing 23-13129

The former prima donna of the Metropolitan opera company writes simply and briefly on such topics as the period of training and qualities and culture necessary to the singer, good and bad teaching, breathing, vocal cords, placing the voice, practising, studying a rôle, rehearsals, concert work, contracts, etc.

"This little book of advice could hardly be improved upon. It is sensible, clear, good-humored, full of anecdotes and practical." N. H. D.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 7 '24 650w
N Y World p7e D 30 '23 250w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p639 S 27 '23 90w

THARAUD, JEAN, and THARAUD, JEROME. Shadow of the cross; tr. from the French by Frances Delanoy Little. 244p $2.50 Knopf
24-26196

It is the slenderest thread of narrative that holds together this description of the life of a Jewish community in a little Carpathian village whose inhabitants live according to the strictest Hebrew law and omit no detail of ritual or observance. But they live also under the shadow of the cross in one of the most Catholic of countries, where at every crossroad stands a tall, roughly fashioned crucifix from which every devout Jew must avert his eyes. A pious Jew, dying, leaves to the village a sum of money for the purpose of having a copy made of the holy Thora, the sacred books of Moses. Among the copyists none is to be compared for accuracy and piety to Sofer Reb and he is chosen to transcribe the Thora. About him and his grandson Reuben is built this story, which is above all a picture of the religious life of the Jews.

Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 80w

"Something of the glorious past that was this ancient transplanted people's, something of the splendor that still clings to them, is conveyed to the reader."
+ Cleveland p24 Mr '24

"One cannot free one's enjoyment from a sense of extreme artifice. They may be called sensational writers, since their method is to intensify every emotional value in their material. Instead of a design they have a system, and the result is magnificent journalism. The translation is honest if not subtle."
— + Dial 76:465 My '24 100w
Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Int Bk R p668 Ag '24 1200w

"The reader is astonished by the minuteness of the author's documentation; it seems incredible that any non-Jew could have assembled such a mass of information upon Jewish law, ceremonial and superstition." Morris Bishop
+ Lit R p724 My 3 '24 700w

THARAUD, J.—Continued

"The authors intuitively know an ancient race, have set forth the beauty of its forms in living, and have let us behold that which is the prophet in man." Alfred Stanford
+ New Repub 39:25 My 28 '24 380w

"The book has a great wealth of characterization and is particularly rich in old men types. These with their flowing beards, finely formed features, gray ringlets and high fur caps, stand out in the Tharaud prose as they stand out in Rembrandt paint, by reason of warmth of tone and color and sympathetic study and treatment."
+ N Y Times p17 Ja 20 '24 500w

"With 'The Shadow of the Cross' the Tharaud brothers have produced a valuable work that interprets a misunderstood race sympathetically, without gushing or sentimentality. The restful delicacy of the style for which the Tharauds are noted and the simplicity of the narrative make it one of the best novels of contemporary France. Frances Delanoy Little has produced a bit of fine translation." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p6e F 3 '24 700w

THARAUD, JEROME, and THARAUD, JEAN. Long walk of Samba Diouf; tr. by Willis Steell. 201p $1.75 Duffield
24-6233

The story is a picture of life among the Senegalese in West Africa and later in the colonial regiment sent to fight for France in the Great war. Here the blacks are shown in the life of the barracks, beset by fears caused by their ignorance of what was going on, and fighting among themselves to work off inherited race feuds which had become aggravated by the promiscuous life of the camps. They are shown later in the trenches, in hospital, and even receiving decorations for bravery. Samba Diouf whose adventures are followed in his long trail from Africa to France and back again is a Senegalese fisherman and the strong man of his tribe.

"Here indeed is a real story and a story that has not been written until Jerome and Jean Tharaud took up the tale and told it with a fascinating mixture of humor and seriousness." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 19 '24 1100w

"The plot, which is amusing and direct, loses nothing in the translation."
+ Dial 77:346 O '24 70w
Ind 112:157 Mr 15 '24 40w
Ind 113:459 N 29 '24 270w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Int Bk R p668 Ag '24 1200w

"One approaches a book by the Tharaud brothers with the same hesitation, prejudice, and respect that one gives a newspaper report of an unusual invention or discovery. . . . There is sufficient evidence to show that the authors are simply superficial observers of the strange life which they depict. The psychology and the inner motives of their characters escape them." J. J. Smertenko
— + Lit R p835 Je 21 '24 750w

"One finds the book an interesting study of primitive impulses forced into unfamiliar expression; the jungle and the junker are shoulder to shoulder."
+ Nation 118:662 Je 4 '24 60w

Reviewed by Alfred Stanford
New Repub 39:26 My 28 '24 750w

"The book is as much of an anthropological study as it is a novel. At the same time the action is never held up and the vivid depiction of customs becomes an integral part of the plot. The book becomes in essence a curious and bizarre study of a strange aspect of the great war."
+ N Y Times p9 F 17 '24 600w

"It is told with a simplicity that suits the primitive mind and with a sympathetic understanding that comes from the complete absence of race prejudice in the Gallic point of view." Edith Leighton
+ N Y Tribune p20 Mr 16 '24 700w
N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 50w

"The book is unostentatious and simple, spirited and refreshing. It has its tenderness and its humor." M. M.
+ N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 350w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:294 Je '24
Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 23 '24 450w

THARAUD, JEROME, and THARAUD, JEAN. [3] When Israel is king; tr. from the 64th French ed. by Lady Whitehead. 248p $2 McBride

943.9 Hungary. Jews in Hungary

In these pictures of Hungary twenty years ago and again during the Communist revolution under Bela Kun the brothers Tharaud show the seriousness of the Jewish question in Hungary and the strength of feeling there against the Semitic race.

"Written on a plane that lifts it somewhat above the bare chronicle."
+ N Y World p9e O 19 '24 80w
N Y World p8e N 16 '24 70w

THAYER, LEE (MRS H. W. THAYER). The [2] key. 262p $2 Doubleday
24-29640

Only the skill of a quick-witted detective like young, red-headed Pete Clancy could possibly have unravelled the mystery of "The Key." Peter, in answer to a call from Tower Hall, the beautiful suburban home of Gilbert Fane, rushes to the scene of the murder, incognito. In the tower room containing Fane's collection of relics and trophies Clancy finds him stabbed in the back with an ancient poniard. The only key to the tower room, which had always been in Fane's possession, is found inside of the door. This door was locked when the murder was discovered. A thoro test of the walls reveals no secret passage. How did the murderer enter the room? Peter follows the clue of a little cake of red clay which leads to astounding discoveries and a dramatic climax.

"The solution is both unusual and surprising. Which is just as it should be." M. P.
Lit R p10 Ja 3 '25 200w
N Y World p9e D 7 '24 140w

THESE eventful years. 2v 692;695p il $11.50 Encyclopaedia Britannica, inc., 342 Madison av., N.Y.

909.9 History, Modern—20th century. Twentieth century. European war, 1914-1919
24-11785

These two volumes, which have been prepared quite independently of the Encyclopaedia Britannica and with an entirely different purpose, present the history of the twentieth century in eighty-four chapters signed by as many different authors. The contributors were chosen because of their qualifications either as participants in the events described or as students of these events. The history is intended primarily, not for reference, but for connected reading. Literature, art, science, industry, education and religion, business and commerce are included in the survey. There are 160 full-page illustrations and numerous maps.

Booklist 21:19 O '24

Reviewed by W. C. Abbott
Bookm 60:221 O '24 1000w

"For range of theme, vividness of presentation and directness of appeal to all sorts of readers this work can look back to no exact parallel in literature."
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 4 '24 1600w
Cleveland p96 D '24

"These books will end a few controversies. There is in them much new and never before published material. They will heap new fuel on the fires of other controversies. . . Many of its chapters will rip open old wounds now beginning to heal. 'The Causes of the World War' by Carlton J. H. Hayes is one of these. The first 193 pages by J. L. Garvin, editor of the London Observer, is itself full of statements that may be questioned by the super-heated, super-nationalists of all breeds. Mr. Garvin's work is brilliant, vibrant, nervous, high-keyed, a sweeping picture of the years from 1900 to 1924. Mr. Garvin alone would make 'These Eventful Years' notable. 'These Eventful Years' is solid stuff." C. M. Morrison

+ Lit R p982 Ag 23 '24 900w

Reviewed by L. S. Gannett

Nation 119:380 O 8 '24 1100w

"This is a remarkable book from many points of view. It is illustrated by photographs, chiefly of its authors or of the chief actors in these eventful years. They are not only extremely interesting and amusing, but, if studied carefully, throw much light upon our civilization and its catastrophes."

+ Nation and Ath 35:784 S 27 '24 600w

"A remarkable collection of essays which are characterised by energetic emphasis rather than detachment."

+ New Statesman 24:22 O 11 '24 500w

N Y Times p10 Ag 24 '24 1850w

"In spite of my strictures on the basic conception and plan of the work as a whole, I feel that the enterprise was not only highly worth while, even in its present form, but that its content is pragmatically more valuable to the social scientist and publicist of today than all the combined historical works ever written on the period prior to 1700 A. D." H. E. Barnes

+ — N Y Tribune p2 S 21 '24 2350w

"All this makes interesting reading, but it does not breed respect for history as anything more than fables spun by imaginations at work on certain unimportant details of fact." Burton Rascoe

— + N Y World p7e S 21 '24 1800w

"Some of the articles, particularly in the cultural part of the volumes, are of high value and interest, while all but a very few of them must be held useful and well presented."

+ — Outlook 138:64 S 10 '24 200w

R of Rs 70:334 S '24 240w

"It would have been difficult to have selected topics more absorbing or writers whose opinions are better worth attention than those which have been chosen. The whole globe had to be included, and not merely writers dedicated to the ephemeridæ of politics and the terrors of war, but the archæologist, the biologist, the psychologist, man of letters, and artist. . . Each writer seems to have been put on his mettle and striven to make his contribution an integral part of the whole enterprise. This is a great tribute to the editors who have avoided the usual weakness of a Sammelwerk or get-together-book. The reader is impressed with a certain coherence and a sense of fundamental coöperation. The aloofness of scholarship has given way to mutual support and understanding." J. H. Robinson

Sat R of Lit 1:25 Ag 9 '24 2000w

Spec 133:sup832 N 29 '24 1850w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 12 '24 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p563 S 18 '24 580w

THIBAULT, JACQUES ANATOLE. See France, A.

THOMAS, ALBERT ELLSWORTH. Double cross. 284p $2 Dodd

24-20610

"In 'The Double Cross,' a new love and mystery story of New York, we find Jim Stanley and Rollin Waterman in love with the same girl. These two young men have been the Damon and Pythias of Wall Street. The heart complication spells trouble—accounts for much of the stir and trouble in Mr. Thomas's book. The tale is one of betrayal, revenge, manoeuvres of 'the Street,' and all sorts of rapid life in the big city."—N Y World

"The best part of the whole thing is the relationship between Doris and her father, and the priceless conversation in the breakfast room as to which man she should marry. It is worth anything which may happen to bore us in the rest of it. Then, too, we cannot help admiring Jim, the noble hero, albeit feeling all along what a poor idiot he was to let things happen that way. And we do wish the author could have thought of some other obstacle than the eternal one of the wicked woman."

— + Boston Transcript p4 S 10 '24 250w

N Y Times p16 S 14 '24 500w

N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 90w

THOMAS, ALBERT ELLSWORTH, and HAMILTON, CLAYTON MEEKER. Better understanding. 153p $1.50 Little

812 24-7463

A drama in three acts which depicts a tense domestic situation threatening tragedy to the three people involved. Grace Norton is rapidly drifting away from her husband and into love with a younger man who has the leisure to play with her while her husband is engrossed with an absorbing and exacting law practice. The situation is saved at the critical moment by John Norton's sincerity and will to understand.

"Here is a play which will be enjoyed by all those who have neither attended the theatre or read a novel since 1900. Others, it is to be feared, will find still another recitation of the difficulties of the eternal triangle rather boring."

— + Boston Transcript p5 Ap 26 '24 150w

Cleveland p86 N '24

"From the craftsman's point of view, it must be declared a remarkably fine piece of work. In construction, dialogue, and character drawing it is nearly perfect. The theme is old as the hills, but Messrs. Thomas and Hamilton have, by mere skillful handling of stage possibilities, given it an astonishing freshness and force of appeal." Edwin Bjorkman

+ Outlook 137:238 Je 11 '24 170w

"The volume might be used as a prompt book by the director who found in its dignified disentangling of the usual three stranded knot anything of sufficient interest to warrant production."

Theatre Arts Mo 8:576 Ag '24 60w

Wis Lib Bul 20:176 Jl '24

THOMAS, CHARLES DRAYTON. Some new evidence for human survival; with an introd. by Sir William F. Barrett. 261p $5 Dutton [10s 6d Collins]

134 Psychical research. Spiritualism [22-24831]

The book sets forth one class of evidence pointing to the possibility of conversing with friends who have passed thru death. Two forms of this class of evidence are presented—book tests and newspaper tests, so-called. In the book tests the exact position of some book in the sitter's library is named, the page given, and certain words indicated which are appropriate either to the question asked or to the unseen communicator. The newspaper tests involve clairvoyance or prevision since they refer to certain words that will be found in a given page and column of a newspaper of the next day, not in type at the time of the sitting.

Boston Transcript p5 O 1 '24 550w

"The book is not a complete scientific report on all the tests, but a culling of the more significant, with statistics concerning the percentages of successes and failures. It indicates a line of investigation that may well prove fruitful; it hardly yet establishes its case in the eyes of science." Clement Wood

Lit R p12 O 25 '24 150w

THOMAS, CHARLES SWAIN, ed. Atlantic ^{2} book of junior plays. (Atlantic classics) 320p $1.90 Atlantic monthly press

808.2 Drama—Collections 24-8390

"Plays suitable for reading and study, or acting if desired, in junior high schools. Includes an adaptation of Tolstoi's What men live by, Tchekoff's A marriage proposal, Louis N. Parker's The minuet, Constance MacKay's The Christmas guest, and eight other plays, with an introduction on Appreciating the drama."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 21:18 O '24

"He has shown admirable catholicity of taste in his selections, ranging from Russian comedy and American realism to legend and fantasy. Most of the plays have been written for adolescent actors; consequently the adult reader will not always find them interesting per se." Drake de Kay

+ Lit R p9 S 13 '24 260w

Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 23 '24 240w

Wis Lib Bul 20:147 Je '24

THOMAS, DAVID YANCEY. One hundred years of the Monroe doctrine, 1823-1923. 580p $4 Macmillan

327.73 Monroe doctrine. United States—Foreign relations 23-17509

A survey of the international relations of the United States as affected by the Monroe doctrine. Announced in the first place simply as the policy of the Monroe administration the policy gradually became crystallized as a doctrine. Dr Thomas traces the developments to which it has given rise, laying emphasis upon the doctrine as forbidding our interference in foreign affairs and showing the later drift of our policy away from isolation. His review of the history of the doctrine in all its bearings comes down as far as the Washington and the Lausanne conferences.

Reviewed by C: N. Gregory

Am Hist R 30:161 O '24 850w

Reviewed by G. V. Price

Am Pol Sci R 18:414 My '24 350w

Booklist 20:326 Je '24

Cleveland p54 Jl '24

"Whatever the merits of this book—and there are many—it is regrettable that it was so hastily proof-read. There are inaccuracies and inconsistencies in the spelling of names, especially those of Latin-Americans and many errors of fact. The index is incomplete and in many items inaccurate." W. W. P., jr.

— + Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ja 13 '24 1700w

"The historical origins of the doctrine he treats briefly, conventionally, and not always accurately, obviously without first-hand knowledge. His interest lies very clearly in the developments to which the President's message has given rise." Dexter Perkins

— Nation 118:209 F 20 '24 550w

"As compared with Albert Bushnell Hart's work upon the Monroe Doctrine, this volume of Dr. Thomas's is much less of an interpretation and rather more of a compendium. In accuracy and fulness of detail, and in conciseness of statement, it shows all the skill of the trained historian, while in scope it is somewhat broader than most books of its kind."

+ No Am 219:428 Mr '24 500w

Reviewed by W: S. Robertson

Pol Sci Q 39:700 D '24 760w

R of Rs 69:669 Je '24 70w

Wis Lib Bul 20:145 Je '24

THOMAS, GEORGE CLIFFORD. Roses for all American climates. 251p il $3 Macmillan

716.2 Roses 24-10941

"It has been the aim of this work to go most thoroughly into the selection of varieties, and, in addition, to give enough information on the propagation and care of roses to enable the amateur rose-grower properly to select the sorts most adaptable to his district, and to grow them successfully. The descriptions of each class are made up from personal tests of over fifteen years in the Central Zone (from Philadelphia north to Massachusetts), and of close to five years in California. Besides personal operation and observation, much correspondence has been carried on with rose-lovers all over our land, and also in Europe and Australia, for more than ten years." (Foreword)

"The admirable illustrations add to the value of the sound and comprehensive study." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p923 Jl 26 '24 80w

"Will have a wide appeal, for up to the present no comprehensive work has been published which deals carefully with the different climatic conditions in this country and their effect on various roses."

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 10 '24 450w

"An extremely useful rose book, which should save many rose lovers from the disappointment so often incurred through ignorantly attempting the impossible or needlessly difficult in their choice of varieties."

+ Outlook 138:138 S 24 '24 150w

THOMAS, LOWELL JACKSON. With Lawrence in Arabia. 408p il $4 Century

953 Arabia—History. European war—Arabia. Lawrence, Thomas Edward 24-22807

The war made Thomas Edward Lawrence, British traveller and archeologist, a figure of romance. The young Oxford graduate was serving in 1916 as intelligence officer for the Mesopotamia expeditionary force. His traveler's knowledge of the Arab of the desert combined with a soldier's instinct and capacity for leadership fitted him to play the rôle which suddenly fell to him of liberating Arabia, the Holy Land of millions of Mohammedans, by uniting the wandering tribes of the desert against their Turkish oppressors.

Booklist 21:145 Ja '25

"His material is so unusual and his enthusiasm so unequivocal that even those of the cult of Sabatini will find themselves reading on into the still hours of the night." A. N. S. Strode-Jackson

+ Lit R p6 N 22 '24 2100w

"An admirably well-poised history in which full credit is given to everybody concerned without detracting from the extraordinary dramatic values of his central figure." Simeon Strunsky

+ N Y Times p4 O 12 '24 1150w

Outlook 138:512 N 26 '24 150w

THOMAS, MARY ROENAH, ed. Young folks' book of mirth; a collection of the best fun in prose and verse. 327p $2 Lothrop

808.7 24-8388

Sixty humorous selections, some of which are in poetry, others in prose. Partial contents: The owl and the pussy-cat; The emperor's new clothes; The purple cow; The golden reign of Wouter Van Twiller; The wonderful "One-hoss Shay"; A chapter from "Martin Chuzzlewit"; The origin of roast pig; Queen Alice; King Henry IV; Seein' things; Darius Green and his flying-machine; Little Orphant Annie; The suicidal cat; Condition and way of life of Don Quixote of La Mancha; The enchanted shirt; A study in piracy; A tragic story; Early rising; The sandal-maker of Babylon; Jest 'fore Christmas; "Lincoln's own stories"; Lord Dundreary and his brother Sam.

"Will appeal to the fun-loving instinct of every normal boy and girl."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '24 60w

Cleveland p83 N '24

"A banquet of jollity for the boys and girls."

+ N Y Tribune p25 Jl 27 '24 80w

"An excellent humorous anthology."
+ Outlook 137:642 Ag 27 '24 50w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 60w
Wis Lib Bul 20:215 O '24

THOMAS, NORMAN MATTOON. Conscientious objector in America. 299p $2 Huebsch

940.316 Conscientious objectors

This record of the experiences of conscientious objectors in America during the war reveals the importance of the problem raised in a man and its far-reaching consequences to him "when conscience says one thing and the state the other." Mr Thomas studies the different types of objectors and the motives which actuated them, the development of the government's policy toward them after the passing of the selective draft law, the life of the segregated groups of objectors in the camps, the persecution and cruelties they suffered, the injustices of court-martial procedure, their experiences in Fort Leavenworth and elsewhere and the nation's attitude toward them. While the book is decidedly sympathetic toward the objector, it is fair-minded.

"The book is written without vindictiveness and with more objectivity than one might expect from an author whose personal convictions on the subject are so strong. Some of the figures which Mr. Thomas gives are interesting and significant."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:423 My '24 90w
Booklist 21:9 O '24
Boston Transcript p3 My 3 '24 900w

Reviewed by Kirsopp Lake
New Repub 39:135 Je 25 '24 1200w

"Mr. Norman Thomas writes smoothly but somewhat too obviously in the interest of the social propagandists." C: W. Thompson
— N Y Times p12 My 18 '24 1050w
+ — Outlook 136:608 Ap 9 '24 650w
Springf'd Republican p7a F 3 '24 280w

"His clear and tolerant story of the conscientious objectors of various philosophies, and of the sufferings of many of them, carries its own justification to those who are interested in the psychologies of war-time, as well as to those interested in the wider and never-ending problems of the conflict between man's duty to himself and his duty to his fellows." M. R.
+ Survey 52:119 Ap 15 '24 320w
Wis Lib Bul 20:176 Jl '24

THOMPSON, ELBERT NEVIUS SEBRING. Literary bypaths of the renaissance. 189p $3 Yale univ. press

804 Literature 24-3683

Among the odd contents of old bookshelves which the author has drawn upon for these literary studies are the character books of which Theophrastus was the prototype; the emblem books which used a combination of motto, picture and short poem to expound some moral truth; some familiar letter writers popular in their day; and the old-time books of courtesy and etiquette. The last chapter is devoted to a "representative man of letters," Thomas Fuller.

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 8 '24 750w
N Y Times p7 Mr 16 '24 400w

"Professor Thompson's bypaths lead the reader into pleasant places, among old books, some familiar, some rare, among quaint forgotten literary fashions and authors. To read this leisurely, quiet book is like spending an evening in a retired library, well stocked with old volumes, whose owner discourses pleasantly and enthusiastically of them."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p352 Je 5 '24 750w

THOMPSON, VANCE CHARLES. Scarlet iris. 312p il $2 Bobbs

24-4510

"The theatre of action is San Remo and the Italian country round about. Andrew Torpichen, American, is the hero of the tale. Lamia is the favorite of a presumptive Russian Prince who has installed her in a villa on the outskirts of the town and has given her attendants who can be trusted to do a task of spying on the royal account. Our young Mr. Torpichen meets the Prince's lady not entirely by chance, and it is then that the principal romance in the book gathers speed. Andrew escapes the murder atmosphere, which gathers when the prince returns unexpectedly. By the aid of a friendly priest he convinces Lamia that even a highly-colored past such as hers can be forgiven and even forgot. So the finish of the story is happiness."—N Y World

"Mr. Thompson knows how to hold as well as to rouse interest. And as the mystery of this story of intrigue deepens (one, by the way, which is cleverly sustained until the end), the reader's interest deepens likewise." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 12 '24 950w

" 'The Scarlet Iris' is far above the average of this type of fiction, for Vance Thompson has lavished upon it the resources of a long experience, a keen sense of drama, and a rich, velvety vocabulary." W. N. Carlton
+ Int Bk R p480 My '24 500w

"Verging perilously on the sentimental, 'The Scarlet Iris' is couched in a style of exuberant, florid romanticism even more artificial than the Riviera life it describes. A frivolous tale for the summer girl."
— Lit R p710 Ap 26 '24 100w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Mr 2 '24 300w

"A well-told story of its type, with passages of literary merit quite aside from the stimulus of the tale and the fact that the persons seem real."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 100w

THOMPSON, WALTER. Federal centralization; a study and criticism of the expanding scope of congressional legislation. 399p $2.75 Harcourt

342.73 Federal government. United States—Constitution. United States—Politics and government 23-18090

Dr Thompson, of the faculty of political science, University of Wisconsin, here studies the expanding activities of the federal government. The first part is an analysis of the constitutional provisions which have served as legal bases for expanding federal control. The second and third parts consider the extent to which the federal government has gone in the field of social and economic legislation in regulating matters of public welfare. The fourth part accounts for the growing tendency toward centralization and indicates some of its dangers and limitations.

"The whole work is handled conservatively and for the most part scholarly. In the pages on national prohibition, however, Dr. Thompson leaves the cool, reflective atmosphere of his study and sets out with a whoop on a furious war dance in pursuit of the 'drys,' the Anti-Saloon League, and the allies of both." J. G. Kerwin
+ — Am J Soc 30:368 N '24 270w

"A scholarly and stimulating treatise." L. M. Short
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:396 My '24 600w

"Dr. Thompson having given us such an excellent survey of the general field and some of its problems, it may be hoped that he and others will now make a more intensive study of some of these problems in the same scientific spirit and with the same clarity and thoroughness that distinguish the present book." J. T. Young
+ Ann Am Acad 112:287 Mr '24 1250w
Booklist 21:9 O '24
Cleveland p55 Jl '24

THOMPSON, WALTER—Continued
"Prolixity is the worst fault of Dr. Thompson's volume, but it is more or less forgivable on account both of the intrinsic importance of the subject and the real merits of the author's treatment of it." E: S. Corwin
+ — Lit R p4 S 13 '24 500w

"The presentation is worth while and well fitted to accomplish the main purpose which he had in mind, namely, to stimulate other minds to grapple with the problem of finding a more accurate delineation between federal functions and state functions." H. G. James
+ Nation 118:536 My 7 '24 750w

Reviewed by J: Corbin
N Y Times p16 Mr 9 '24 880w

Reviewed by C. H. Gaines
No Am 219:885 Je '24 380w

Reviewed by W. F. Johnson
No Am 220:367 D '24 340w

R of Rs 70:111 Jl '24 60w

"No work in the field of constitutional interpretation has appeared in recent years which is likely to prove more useful to legal experts and laymen alike." Phillips Bradley
+ Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 750w

Wis Lib Bul 20:65 Mr '24

THOMSON, JOHN ARTHUR. Everyday biology. (Doran's modern readers' bookshelf) 262p $1.25 Doran
570 Biology 24-8782

"The aim of this little book is to serve as an unconventional introduction to biological way of thinking. It keeps close to matters of everyday experience and is content to suggest the biological consideration of these:—The moving and feeling creature, how it keeps agoing, how its behavior is regulated, how it relates itself to the outer world, how it persists in its own line of being, how the past lives in the present and yet allows the new to emerge, the influence of habits and surroundings, the curve of the individual life, the length of life's tether, the shears of fate, how the creature grows old and how it may sometimes grow young. There is not the slightest attempt at comprehensive treatment; the purpose is simply to illustrate the use of the biological torch and to provoke further inquiry." —Preface

Booklist 20:328 Je '24

"It is simply a statement of known facts about living matter and its behavior. Its language is that of the farmyard, the trout stream, the kitchen, the shop, assuming no background but that of interest." K. M. Gould
+ Bookm 59:599 Jl '24 300w

"Not only is the book interesting, but it brings together in a small volume a great number of interesting facts which are omitted from the average manual of biology, and relates them to everyday experiences."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 28 '24 300w

"The book is thoroughly authoritative, and in spite of the non-technical treatment of some rather difficult and complicated matters it is not marred by looseness or sentimentality."
+ Lit R p812 Je 7 '24 220w

"'Everyday Biology' differs from a high-school text on elementary biology in little but its unconventional style, which ranges from flippant and jocular to sentimental. The name of Sir J. Arthur Thomson will probably sell the book, but the 'fresh appraisals' of biological problems have yet to be made, and the fascinating treasure still lies buried in technical journals."
— Nation 118:745 Je 25 '24 120w

"There is scarcely any important region of biological thought which is not here handled in an attractive and stimulating fashion. We heartily recommend the book to the layman who would know something of the content of present-day biology, and are sure no specialist will regret the few hours required for its perusal."
+ Nature 113:780 My 31 '24 150w

"Once again Professor Thomson proves his very notable faculty for breaking up the solid bread of science and turning it into pieces of cake for popular consumption. Under his magic working fingers the recondite facts of biology become clear, simple, fascinating enough for even a tired business man to read with understanding and interest."
+ N Y Times p20 Mr 23 '24 650w

St Louis p340 O '24

"No one succeeds better than Prof J. Arthur Thomson in imparting literary charm and fascinating and imaginative interest to the data and speculations of science."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 14 '24 420w

THOMSON, JOHN ARTHUR. Science, old and new. 440p $3.50 Putnam
570.4 Biology. Natural history 24-13814

Professor Thomson selects a number of arresting topics in biology and discusses them in the light of recent advances. Many facts in the new biology, fresh to the layman, are presented in a framework of personal reflection. The studies fall into four main groups: problems of natural history or ecology; studies more strictly biological; questions of evolution; man and his outlook. Partial contents: Scientific snapshots; The underworld; Sea snakes and sea serpents; Cave animals; Ants and plants; Slavery among ants; Insect musicians; Gardener insects; Showers of gossamer; The passionate pigeon; Dancing among birds and beasts; Mothering among animals; Oddities of diet; The dancing mouse; Sensitive plants; How the elephant got its trunk; The romance of the wheat; Inbreeding and outbreeding; Man's place in nature; The beauty of animal life.

Booklist 21:11 O '24

Bookm 60:97 S '24 100w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 14 '24 780w

"Professor Thomson has a delightful style; and the driest topic becomes interesting when he deals with it."
+ Nation and Ath 36:sup390 D 6 '24 180w

"Professor Thomson shows his literary skill not only in the charm of his writing but in the way in which he manages to introduce the necessary scientific details without holding up the narrative in the least. His descriptions of insect life are particularly good. The book has a capital index. We hope it will have the wide circulation it undoubtedly deserves, for here is true 'popular education' in its very best and most attractive form."
+ New Statesman 24:206 N 22 '24 1450w

"It would be difficult to imagine the stories of living creatures and their adaptations to environment told more briefly, simply and vividly than they are in these fifty-two chapters. The mighty pageant which Professor Thomson unfolds in minute detail will hold the reader wrapped up in this volume. No smallest actor in this vast drama but becomes a protagonist for the moment as the author points out his place in the grand scheme of things as they are." C: McD. Puckette
+ N Y Times p15 Je 15 '24 1250w

"The editor of the 'Outline of Science' hews to a strictly scientific line without a great deal of technical terminology. He arouses more than a mild interest in such comparatively esoteric matters as symbiosis, commensalism and myrmecophily."
+ N Y Tribune p27 Je 8 '24 130w

"Perhaps one should have had just a smattering of nature study in order fully to appreciate this good book, but any one who has not will find it full of interest and romance. It is inspirational, unconsciously, about nature, but it has sacrificed none of its authenticity to this quality."
+ Outlook 138:102 S 17 '24 110w

St Louis p375 N '24

"It is full of fresh biological facts, and no one should need to be told that the author frequently makes them the medium of imparting fresh ideas."
+ Sat R 138:499 N 15 '24 120w

THOMSON, JOHN ARTHUR. What is man? 331p $2 Putnam [6s 6d Methuen]

575 Man. Evolution. Sociology 24-4015

"Professor J. A. Thomson has prepared a summary of the present state of scientific opinion on man, suitable for unscientific readers He avoids technicalities, quotes abundantly from well-known authorities, and provides a selected list of books by other authors on various sides of his subject. Man's pedigree, his fossil history, and the evolution of the human mind are discussed in successive chapters. A final chapter in Professor Thomson's pleasant optimistic spirit deals with the possible future of the human race."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The book is a most thoughtful one and full of meat from cover to cover. It might very well be described as evolution from the standpoint of the Christian religion."
+ Am J of Public Health 14:347 Ap '24 800w

Booklist 20:289 My '24

Bookm 59:335 My '24 60w

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 1 '24 650w

"Professor Thomson always writes pleasantly, with great wealth of quotation. The lectures are interesting and instructive, and there is less unfounded assertion in them than one often sees in such books. But the psychological part is very nebulous and unsatisfying."
+ — Cath World 119:428 Je '24 180w

Reviewed by H. W. Van Loon
Dial 77:163 Ag '24 1900w

"J. Arthur Thomson stands out at the present time as the most able expositor of biological phenomena. No matters are too intricate for him to make clear and fascinating to the layman." B. L. Kunkel
+ Lit R p886 Jl 12 '24 950w

"For the casual reader who desires to know the present stage of biological thought regarding man it would be difficult to find a volume that contains so much relating to this fascinating study as Professor Thomson has set down in his book."
+ Lit R p11 D 27 '24 450w

"It is always refreshing to read Prof. J. Arthur Thomson, not only, or even primarily, because he writes so well, but also because he adds to a sound knowledge of biology a moral interest in all questions of life and a hopeful outlook so far as man is concerned. This little book illustrates admirably all these qualities." F. S. M.
+ Nature 113:266 F 23 '24 550w

"Professor Thomson has an enviable and well-earned reputation as a popularizer of knowledge, but the present volume must be reckoned as one of his less happy enterprises. The reason is not far to see. There are limits to human capacity, and if one continues, year in and year out, to pour forth books and articles of a general nature, some are bound to show the effects of haste." R. H. Lowie
— New Repub 41:sup18 D 10 '24 600w

"Adequate and authoritative, and the writing is all that such writing should be."
+ New Statesman 22:276 D 8 '23 1150w

"This type of book, sketching in as it does the outlines of a vast field of study, can be valuable only when in addition to clearness and proportion it has the quality of emphasis at the right points. Professor Thomson achieves these things, and that is why his position as a successor to Huxley in the popular exposition of biology and its allied fields is rapidly being secured."
+ N Y Times p12 Ap 27 '24 1200w

"Professor Thomson is admirably qualified to write of the conclusions of science as regards the evolution of man, physically and intellectually. He has the rare gift of marshaling and using scientific data without lapsing into unintelligibility to the man of active interest but without technical training, even as had his great predecessors Huxley and Darwin."
+ Outlook 136:404 Mr 5 '24 300w

Pratt p19 summer '24

"Professor Thomson has a delightfully clear way of describing discoveries and discussing the reconstructions based on them. He can communicate to us some of the excitement of discovery. Yet it must be admitted that a large part of his book is drearily dull. It is not entirely his fault. When he has no facts, and yet wishes to fill in the gaps in our knowledge, his method is to infer what must have been from what is."
+ — Sat R 136:545 N 17 '23 800w

Reviewed by R: Church
Spec 132:127 Ja 26 '24 880w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p711 O 25 '23 100w

Wis Lib Bul 20:210 O '24

THOMSON, SIR JOSEPH JOHN. Electron in
2 chemistry; being five lectures delivered at the Franklin institute, Philadelphia. 144p $1.75 Franklin inst., 15 S. 7th st., Philadelphia [10s 6d Chapman & H.]

541.2 Electrons 23-13593

"The object is to show that the electron is the dominating factor in chemical theory and to interpret chemical problems in terms of electrons and their arrangements. It is for the most part a record of the author's personal views."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:589 D '24

THORNDIKE, RUSSELL, and ARKELL, REGINALD. Tragedy of Mr Punch; with an introductory essay by Max Beerbohm. 61p il $3.50 Boni & Liveright [15s Duckworth]

793 Puppet-plays

"Messrs. Russell Thorndike and Reginald Arkell have rewritten in 'The Tragedy of Mr. Punch' the old puppet play and departed not at all from those hoary scenes wherein Punch kills the baby, demolishes his wife, and tricks the hangman into putting his own head into the noose."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p6 N 5 '24 300w

"Not the least delightful feature of the book is the foreword by Max Beerbohm. Whimsical, reminiscent, softly humorous, and pricking ever so slightly the complacent skin of this generation of Boy Scouts who look upon Punch as something of a ruffian to whom good little boys shouldn't give their adulation, Mr. Beerbohm holds out his right hand in welcome to these old friends long strayed."
+ Lit R p9 O 4 '24 250w

Nation 119:550 N 19 '24 100w

Nation and Ath 34:496 D 29 '23 50w

N Y Times p2 O 5 '24 700w

"The allegory is unfortunately not sustained and the moral is somewhat vague. Further, this presentation of the old wretch is unconvincing. There is a thinness about the whole piece which is paralleled in the illustrations. The lines of the drawing are trite and the color is weak. A play concerned with Mr. Punch should show for either sublime or ridiculous. Here he is neither." Babette Deutsch
— N Y Tribune p5 O 5 '24 450w

Outlook 138:654 D 17 '24 10w

"A charming introduction, charming pictures, a beautifully made book, but a rather flat drama."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:149 S 27 '24 110w

"A wise as well as an amusing book."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 3 '24 150w

THORNTON, A. G. Astronomer at large. 374p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Melrose]
24-18769

An English professor of astronomy who has just made an important astronomical discovery, is fed up with his work. He determines to take a holiday alone, deserting his excellent sister who has kept house for him for years. In the first taste of "real life" he has ever had, the professor goes to the races where he meets Mary, a pretty lady, and falls in love with her. Mary has better principles than most of her class and when she realizes the professor's innocence of life she tries to persuade him to leave her, but this only makes him love her the more. Then the excellent sister appears on the scene and in the struggle which follows, sister Emily wins. The professor returns to his work and his home and Mary goes to America.

"It is a well-written light novel, made from the sudden awakening of a middle-aged astronomer to the fact that Romance had passed him by." H. B.
+ Lit R p970 Ag 16 '24 250w

"It is an amusing tale."
+ — Nation and Ath 34:806 Mr 8 '24 140w
N Y Times p8 S 28 '24 300w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 200w

"A light novel of considerable merit. The pace is a canter, the manner of writing amusing, the flavor of the different episodes very pleasant."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:17 Ag 2 '24 300w

"Very fresh and brightly written story."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p129 F 28 '24 120w

THORPE, CORA (WELLS) (MRS GEORGE CYRUS THORPE). In the path of the trade winds. 198p il $2.50 Putnam
398.2 Folklore—Hawaiian Islands 24-2367

A collection of fifteen Hawaiian legends, useful to the student of Polynesian customs, but told in an archaic English somewhat exasperating to the casual reader. The volume contains a glossary and a guide to pronunciation of Hawaiian names.

"The book is a delightful one for children, because it is packed with knowledge unawares. For the same reason it will be even more welcome to the old."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 26 '24 420w

"The customs, sports and means of livelihood of the natives are here set forth, and little intimate details which go to make them different from every other race are recorded. The book is well worth reading and satisfies, in part, a growing demand for enlightenment about this interesting people"
+ Detroit News p13 Ap 13 '24 350w

"As short stories they are too stilted to be read twice. But as a means of exhibiting the beliefs and customs of the Hawaiians they have ethnological interest."
— + New Statesman 23:266 Je 7 '24 250w

"The importance of legends as a guide to early racial history is well established, but these graceful little tales of Hawaii lead us nowhere beyond the cresting surf and the clustering islands, they explain no origins, not even of island sports; they suggest nothing. Ethnologically of course, their value is considerable."
+ — N Y Times p20 F 17 '24 700w

"A collection of Hawaiian folk tales of considerable interest, a little too high strung in style to be good reading, though excellent in matter."
+ — N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 200w

THURSTONE, LOUIS LEON. Nature of intel-
2 ligence; a biological interpretation of mind. (International lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 167p $3.75 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]
150 Intellect. Psychology 24-20796

"His book is not concerned with the intelligence tests themselves but with the nature of what is tested. Prof. Thurstone's thesis is that intelligence is unfinished action. . . It is not only the Freudian view which lends itself to his interpretation. There is also what Prof. Thurstone names the academic view, which describes mind in terms of structure and function, and the Behaviourist view, which rejects the notion of consciousness as an existence or entity altogether and regards intelligence as a particular kind of response to external stimulation. Prof. Thurstone shows the relevance of his thesis to each of these theories."—Sat R

"In sum, Dr. Thurstone gives intelligence a commonplace definition which he proceeds to rob of all vitality by amputation. He then justifies the amputation by a general hypothesis in which the disjecta membra of the leading psychological schools are somehow strung together, the torso of each being lost in the scramble." C. E. Ayres
— New Repub 41:150 D 31 '24 1300w

Reviewed by H. W. Carr
Sat R 138:242 S 6 '24 580w

"He is exclusively concerned with the practical aspect of the problem, and particularly with the nature of scientific tests of intelligence. In this connexion his book is of the first importance."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p663 O 23 '24 750w

THWING, CHARLES FRANKLIN. What education has the most worth? a study in eduational values, conditions, methods, forces, and results. 235p $2 Macmillan
371 Education 24-10836

Dr Thwing's book is concerned with educational values, and the relative worth of the different forces or applications of education. He believes that the intellect has a relatively more important place in man and in his education than the executive faculty and he looks for ways of adjusting educational methods and curricula to make thinkers.

"A finer picture of education at its best would not be easy to paint, but, if I understand Dr. Thwing correctly, he feels that its beauty and glory were dependent, partly at least, on its being education in a certain thing, whereas the truer answer would seem to be that they were the result of education in a certain way." T. L. Scholtz
+ — El School J 25:227 N '24 650w
J Home Econ 16:714 D '24 180w

"What Dr. Thwing has to say is sketchy, and suggests that the needs, or at least the wishes, of an audience that looks for a hopeful tone and a moral appeal have been kept in mind. It is exactly the kind of book that will be accepted in Main Street, and it is with the sluggish minds of Main Street, it must be remembered, that the reforms outlined by Professor Kandel and his associates have had principally to contend." W: MacDonald
— N Y Times p16 Jl 6 '24 1100w
N Y Tribune p11 O 19 '24 200w
St Louis p403 D '24

TIMMERMANS, FELIX. Pallieter; tr. by C. B. Bodde; introd. by Hendrick Willem Van Loon. 245p il $2.50 Harper
24-21076

This story, which has run thru many editions in its original Flemish and numerous translations, is dedicated in spirit to the great god Pan. Its scene is laid in a little Flemish village. Pallieter is a perfectly healthy young man to whom the earth is something beautiful and to be enjoyed in its fulness. Each day is a succession of delights from sun-up to bedtime. On this scene of contentment Marieke comes, a fit mate for Pallieter. His love for her is elemental, like all his joys. The story, which follows him thru a year's round, from spring to spring, is a paean to the beauties and joys of earth.

Booklist 21:114 D '24

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield
Bookm 60:525 D '24 400w

"Here we have a story so full of joy and of gratitude for the mere gift of living that it seems to move to unseen music." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p8 O 11 '24 1000w

Cleveland p84 N '24

"This story, which covers a year of life, reads more like a lyrical poem than a novel, relieved, however, not a little by interludes of comedy, full of feasting and rejoicing. It makes an excellent antidote to much of our modern fiction, in particular of the psycho-analytical variety, and we can only hope that its European success will be repeated here. . . The improprieties in the book are the improprieties of innocence, and the relations of Pallieter with his sweetheart Marieke are such as might have been possible in Greek civilization, not in ours." J. Cournos
+ Lit R p3 O 4 '24 660w

"The picture of human existence in the little Flemish farming community is so persuasive that the reader is tempted to forego all questions of the author's initial assumption. The buoyant optimism of Timmermans is so infectious that it overbears dissent; it seems niggardly to indulge the regret that his character, Pallieter, has been integrated so wholesomely at the expense of his humanity. The volume is delightfully illustrated with ink drawings by Anton Pieck which are entirely in sympathy with the pastoral naïveté of the text."
+ — N Y Times p17 S 14 '24 580w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
N Y Tribune p5 O 12 '24 650w

"It may seem over-optimistic to those of us who are too far divorced from Earth to have the strength and simple faith that come from living in close contact with her. Perhaps, however, our preoccupation makes it unwise for us to attempt to judge 'Pallieter.' Perhaps our wisest course is to take our cue from Pallieter himself, and simply to enjoy it." Suzanne La Follette
Sat R of Lit 1:375 D 13 '24 950w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 28 '24 870w

"We envy English readers a first acquaintance with this masterpiece of gaiety."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p822 D 4 '24 850w

TINKER, EDWARD LAROCQUE. Lafcadio
[2] Hearn's American days; designed and il by the author. 374p il $5 Dodd

B or 92 Hearn, Lafcadio 24-28711

A frank yet not unsympathetic portrayal of Lafcadio Hearn's life in the three cities where his twenty American years were spent—Cincinnati, New Orleans and New York—to his departure for Japan, in 1890. Mr Tinker has uncovered many incidents and friendships of these years which help to an understanding of Hearn's peculiar personality and genius.

"Mr. Tinker has had access to a great deal of manuscript material and has made the most exhaustive researches into Hearn's life at Cincinnati, Ohio, and New Orleans, with the result that he has composed a truly fascinating story of the strangest years in the life of this strange, timid, passionate outcast." Ernest Boyd
+ Ind 113:548 D 20 '24 1200w

"For the first time these biographical data have been set down without that undue squeamishness which has heretofore emasculated or distorted the realities of Hearn's progression in Cincinnati, New Orleans, and New York, although it is patent that in certain difficult and delicate passages Mr. Tinker has intimated more than he has actually set down." H. S. Gorman
Lit R p5 D 6 '24 1150w

"If Hearn could be called an American, I would put this with Mr. Mitchell's autobiography as one of the two best books dealing with the life of an American I have read this year." E. L. Pearson
+ Outlook 138:690 D 24 '24 430w

TIPPER, HARRY, and FRENCH, GEORGE. Advertising campaigns. 432p $4 Van Nostrand

659 Advertising 23-17824

"Not concerned at all with advertisements but confined to investigation of the product and the market and planning and operating the campaign."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"It should be a valuable study for the advertising department of an industrial concern or financial institution. If at times its analyses seem too detailed, it must be remembered that it is one of the first books of its kind in the field, a field of increasing importance, and one which should be distinguished from advertising in the ordinary sense of the word." J. G.
+ Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:205 Ap '24

TIPTON, EDNA SIBLEY. Table decorations for all occasions. 128p il $3 Stokes

642.8 Table decoration 24-9726

Suggestions for table decorations for all the year's holidays, for various kinds of parties and for birthdays, weddings, showers and other occasions. There are thirty-five illustrations, showing not only the decoration but the table correctly set for the various courses.

Booklist 21:11 O '24

"Good taste, common sense and an appreciation of the beauty of simplicity characterize the text throughout."
+ N Y Times p26 My 11 '24 360w

Wis Lib Bul 20:210 O '24

TOLLER, ERNST. Man and the masses (Masse mensch); a play of the social revolution in seven scenes; tr. by Louis Untermeyer. (Theatre Guild lib.) 109p il $2 Doubleday [4s 6d Nonesuch press]

832 24-20766

"Masses and Men was Ernst Toller's second play, originally produced, with great success, at the Berlin Volksbühne in September, 1921, by Jurgen Fehling, who contributes to the English edition an illuminating note on his production. It is the second of Toller's plays to be presented to English readers, the first being the Luddite-play, the Machine-Wreckers."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

English J 13:685 N '24 100w

"No library of plays, of course, can afford to lack a copy of this ardent experiment in social education." W. Y.
+ Lit R p937 Ag 2 '24 200w

Reviewed by Stark Young
New Repub 38:262 Ap 30 '24 750w

"Toller proves more faithful to the technique than to the philosophy, and thereby proves that his writing is not a mere 'war-reaction,' that his art is above propaganda, or is at least completely fused with it in a sincere and virile work of the imagination."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p16 Ja 10 '24 400w

TOLLEY, CYRIL JAMES HASTINGS. Modern golfer. 213p il $3 Knopf [15s Collins]

796 Golf 24-21382

"The well-known English amateur golfer has here written a most informative book. It is divided into two parts. Part I is instructional, showing methods of play and the exact uses of the various clubs. Part II is a delightful account of Mr. Tolley's golfing experiences, including his two visits to this country, together with a keen discussion of some of the leading

TOLLEY, CYRIL J. H.—Continued
English players. The book is profusely illustrated with photographs of how to play shots."—Publisher's note

"His book is quite a good book and, as regards its more technical side, is likely to help many wanderers in this vale of foozling, because for the most part he insists in simple language on a few simple doctrines. As regards golf from a mental rather than a physical point of view, the best and most characteristic thing in Mr. Tolley's book is his insistence on the value of confidence." Bernard Darwin

+ Nation and Ath 35:540 Jl 26 '24 800w

Sat R of Lit 1:132 S 20 '24 40w

"Mr. Tolley's style of writing is not quite so graceful or so easy as his style of playing, but it is straightforward and honest; he has decided views as to how strokes should be played, and is not afraid of expressing them in a decided manner. There is nothing iconoclastic about him. . . Apart from technical instruction, Mr. Tolley has something to say of his own matches both here and in America, and he says it with a very engaging modesty and now and then a pleasant touch of humour."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p444 Jl 17 '24 230w

TOLSTOI, LEO NIKOLAIEVICH, count, ed. My life; as told by the peasant Anissia. See Anissia.

TOLSTOI, LEON L., count. Truth about my father. 229p $2 Appleton [6s Murray]

B or 92 Tolstoi, Leo Nikolaievich, count

Tolstoi's son writes these memories of the family life at Yasnaya Polyana, of the friends and relatives who gathered there and of the domestic drama between Tolstoi and his wife. It gives an account of the development of Tolstoi's convictions on social and religious subjects and of the clash of wills between him and his wife. It describes Tolstoi's going away from Yasnaya Polyana and the will he made which was the principal cause of his flight.

"The wealth of facts and details contained in the book makes it a valuable contribution to Tolstoy's biography. . . In simple terms of every-day life at Yasnaia Poliana, Count Leo Lvovich tells of the circumstances under which his father's masterpieces were born." A. I. Nazaroff

+ Int Bk R p593 Jl '24 550w

"Read with the willingness to accept Count Léon's truths as truth for today and perhaps not for tomorrow, his book assumes unusual importance. In any case, it is stimulating as an intimate portrait of a great prophet through the eyes of a son who fashioned his life according to his father's dreams and then renounced them." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p846 Je 21 '24 480w

Reviewed by E: Garnett

Nation and Ath 35:207 My 17 '24 520w

New Statesman 23:168 My 17 '24 900w

"The difficult task of doing justice to his mother without laying an impious hand on his father's reputation, the younger Tolstoy has admirably carried through." Simeon Strunsky

+ N Y Times p4 My 11 '24 2000w

Sat R 137:442 Ap 26 '24 150w

"The evident sincerity of Count Tolstoy's book commands respect. But it does not contain much new material, nor does it throw much light upon the familiar problems of Tolstoy's aspirations. The son's devotion to the memory of both his parents is revealed on every page, but this very devotion is the cause of the bias with which he writes of the last years of family life at Yasnaya Polyana."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p233 Ap 17 '24 280w

TOMLINSON, H. M. Tide marks. 295p il $4 Harper

919.1 Malay archipelago 24-28785

An impressionistic account of a journey from London thru the Suez canal, down the Red sea and across the Indian ocean to the Moluccas and other islands of the Malay archipelago. Mr Tomlinson explored Java and Celebes, penetrated the Malay jungles and made two stops at Singapore.

Booklist 21:147 Ja '25

"Its charm lies infinitely more in the author than in his itinerary. Into a narrative interesting in itself, Mr. Tomlinson injects so much humor and gentle philosophy, with many a piquant side-glint, as to give double value to his story." S. L. Rich

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 15 '24 1500w

" 'Tidemarks,' is less a travel book than a record of the state of Mr. Tomlinson's mind. From his pages we have gathered a very clear picture of Mr. Tomlinson and (we fear) but a hazy picture of Malaya. That, of course, is quite a legitimate way of writing a book—even a book to be labelled travel." Norman Davey

Nation and Ath 36:447 D 20 '24 950w

"Mr. Tomlinson has a gust for adventure, a feel of the picturesque, a sense of beauty, humor, most of the gifts essential to the making of a good book in this kind; but somehow he fails to 'pull it off.' He is too continuously impressionistic, and the total effect of the book is hazy."

— + Outlook 138:651 D 17 '24 180w

R of Rs 71:110 Ja '25 80w

"Tomlinson is neither cunning and subtle, nor tempestuous and angry about his tale. He is too honest, and too much in earnest. We who read his pages know his voyage is of importance; and because his wide, ranging spirit fastens upon us, we know the voyage is important for us, not only for him." F. V. Morley

+ Sat R of Lit 1:409 D 27 '24 2500w

TOMPKINS, JULIET WILBOR (MRS JULIET WILBOR (TOMPKINS) POTTLE). Line a day. 302p il $1.90 Bobbs

23-14915

"Miserly old Austin Lee summons his previously ignored granddaughters and proposes that sensible, competent Julia and charming Mary Lee each keep a truthful line-a-day diary, on the gamble that he might leave his money to the girl whose record shows the most character. What happened to Mary Lee on the strength of the self-examination this diary-making induces, makes a light but agreeable story. Published in the Woman's Home Companion."—Cleveland

Booklist 20:220 Mr '24

Cleveland p36 My '24

N Y Tribune p20 F 17 '24 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:294 Je '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:27 Ja '24

TOOKER, LEWIS FRANK. Joys and tribulations of an editor. 369p il $4 Century

071 Century magazine. Journalism 24-22950

The author has been connected for nearly forty years with the editorial staff of the Century magazine and his book is made up of the memories and experiences of those years. He shows the inside of the editorial room and himself, as a young man, learning its ropes. He writes of the editor's relation with his contributors and his never failing hope of discovering genius. Impressions are given of the notable personalities of the Century's staff and contributors and the opening chapter sketches briefly the early history of the magazine in America.

Booklist 21:150 Ja '25

"Those chapters dealing with the author's professional labors as reader and 'mangler' of manuscript submitted to the magazine are told with a frankness, sincerity, and dry humor which will appeal strongly to both the reader unfamiliar with editing behind the lines and to the hardened veteran of Mr. Tooker's own calling."

+ Bookm 60:506 D '24 120w

"His reflections provide a thoroughly readable narrative story of the literary parade, vivacious, shrewd and witty. The only regret a reader can have in laying down this volume is that Mr. Tooker does not give more of the small fruits of literary gossip of the great men he saw and knew." C: Puckette

+ — N Y Times p12 N 2 '24 1450w

"It is an innocent book. And it is, quite unexpectedly, the work of an artist." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p9 Ja 11 '25 1400w

Outlook 138:654 D 17 '24 80w

R of Rs 70:668 D '24 200w

"Mr. Tooker's style is urbane with a recurring sparkle. His anecdotes are entertaining. His judgments are tempered. There is a hint here and there of the irascibility which occasionally took possession of the harried editor I once knew—an irascibility I remember as endearing, since it was a lovable idiosyncrasy of one of the kindliest of men." W: R. Benet

+ Sat R of Lit 1:321 N 29 '24 1100w

TORMAY, CECILE. Outlaw's diary; the commune. 2v v 2 233p il $3 McBride [12s 6d P. Allan]

943.9 Hungary—History 23-10148

The first volume of Miss Tormay's diary was an account of the collapse of the Hungarian state and the first phase of the revolution from the time of Karolyi's accession to power to the seizure of the government by the communists under Béla Kun. The second volume continues the tale of national disintegration, describing the reign of terror which followed the commune and drawing a merciless picture of Béla Kun. The author is an ardent supporter of the old aristocratic régime and this book, like its predecessor, is filled with resentment for those who have torn down the social order of which she was a part.

"Poor, prejudiced, and, we wager, unreliable history."

— Bookm 59:355 My '24 60w

Cleveland p62 Jl '24

"Obviously, the author chose the form of a diary for her description of the Commune because it afforded an unparalleled opportunity to record rumors and absurd phantasmagorias of her imagination without being subject to the charge of knowingly falsifying history. This liberty she misused to present mere fiction in the guise of experience. Consideration for those who expect from this book information about the Commune in Hungary requires therefore that at least the most outstanding distortions should be pointed out." Emil Lengyel

— Nation 118:484 Ap 23 '24 520w

"The picture it gives of Hungary under the Reds makes a valuable footnote to history, illuminating as it does from the viewpoint of the upper classes a period upon which the future historian will be glad of all the light he can get."

+ N Y Times p26 F 17 '24 500w

Outlook 136:323 F 20 '24 20w

TOWNE, CHARLES HANSON. Gay ones. 323p $2 Century

24-6455

"Roger Firth, a young engineer, marries a quite useless, pretty young woman, who starts out to lead a gay life and succeeds. Gertrude Randall is not at all a society person but she plays a very important part in the development of 'The Gay Ones.' Two more radically different types than Roger Firth's butterfly wife, who refuses to be inconvenienced with a family, and Gertrude Randall, who devotes most of her youth to caring for her mother, and who loves Firth, it would be hard to find. The war affords an escape for these persons caught in a situation strained to the breaking point."—Springf'd Republican

"'The Gay Ones' may beguile an idle hour but it is a poor substitute for a good novel."

— Boston Transcript p4 My 21 '24 160w

"There are many amusing lines, as there always are in what Mr. Towne writes. The dialog is true talk. In construction and technique the story is an advance on the novelist's first book, 'The Chain'; the canvas is broader, the sense of reality greater. It is a book that will make excellent summer reading and probably set a lot of people talking." Hildegarde Hawthorne

+ Int Bk R p672 Ag '24 1100w

"His attitude is that of an observer, detached, a trifle saddened by what he sees and understands thoroughly, and, above all, keen. To convey this attitude he has at his command a technique for writing well-organized narrative and the ability to marshal a large number of characters into vivid ranks, from which there emerges now and again a humanized individual figure."

+ Lit R p730 My 3 '24 250w

"Jaded Long Island flappers of both sexes carry on a grim, hysterical search for unplumbed pleasures. All real interest in this feverish social program soon fades, alike for flappers and reader. The few conclusions which the author draws are quite accurate, but so general and obvious in character as to add little to what has already been said about the modern high-speed dilettante."

— + Nation 118:591 My 21 '24 80w

"Mr. Towne is very much more at home in descriptions of Long Island house parties than in his tentative ventures among motives and emotions. It is hard to believe in the development attributed to some of the characters. And it is even more disappointing to have all the thinking and most of the significant action take place off stage. Content with the hint of thin ice, the story never ventures far from shore."

— N Y Times p16 Ap 6 '24 350w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p7e Mr 30 '24 80w

"It is well done, though not of unusual interest."

+ — Outlook 136:702 Ap 23 '24 50w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 250w

TOWNSEND, CHARLES WENDELL. Beach grass. 319p il $3.50 Marshall Jones

570.4 Sand-dunes. Beaches. Birds. Natural history 23-16168

Additional studies of the sandy seashore region of Ipswich, Massachusetts, about which the author has written before in his "Sand dunes and salt marshes." (Book Review Digest, 1913) It is a book of minute observation which endows an apparently commonplace subject with extraordinary interest. The flora and bird life of the dunes, stories written in the sand by animal and bird tracks, changes wrought in the beach by the cold of winter and a beach-land forest planted by the author are among Mr Townsend's descriptions.

"The book is one to be possessed, if possible, by every nature lover, especially if he be of those over whose heart the sea has cast its immemorial spell. Even the title, whose scientific name means 'the sandy sand-lover,' is of happy augury." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '24 1850w

Cleveland p37 My '24

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

Int Bk R p445 My '24 100w

TOWNSEND, C: W.—Continued

"While the book is based almost entirely upon personal experience, Dr. Townsend writes with a definite scientific background, and there are perspective and authority behind what he has to say. Many of his observations and conclusions will prove of genuine interest to the nature lover; and, in particular, it will be discovered that he has much of value to say regarding the birds of the dunes." S. A. Coblentz

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 20 '24 720w

R of Rs 69:224 F '24 80w

"The 82 illustrations, taken by his own camera under conditions which demanded the utmost patience and skill, give added clearness to his text, while the anecdotes sprinkled throughout add the human touch which we have learned to expect from Mr Townsend."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 17 '23 300w

Wis Lib Bul 20:45 F '24

TOWNSHEND, RICHARD BAXTER. Tenderfoot in New Mexico. 257p il $3.50 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]

917.8 Frontier and pioneer life. New Mexico—Description and travel 24-6260

The tenderfoot was an Englishman from Trinity college, Cambridge, who migrated to the West in 1869, and after five years of travel and cattle-ranching in Colorado, of which he has told the tale in "A Tenderfoot in Colorado," (Book Review Digest, 1923) decided to try his luck in New Mexico. At that time it was a territory of the United States—a land of Spaniards, Indians, cowboys and prospectors, Americans composing not more than five percent of the inhabitants. For a time he lived as a trader in the Indian pueblo of Jemez, where he was beloved of the natives. He writes further of hunting in the Sierras, prospecting for gold in the San Juan country, buying horses and mules in Texas and taking them on the long trail to Leadville to sell at a profit.

"It was a wild but a fascinating life and Mr Townshend chats of it in a fascinating manner. He is an excellent story-teller and his reminiscences of his early days in Western America, while he lived in his English home, where he passed his latest days, were a constant source of pleasure to his friends."

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 16 '24 520w

"Clear and remarkable as his account is, it has not that authenticity which would have made it valuable as evidence."

— + New Statesman 22:554 F 16 '24 250w

"Mr. Townshend has the knack of writing constantly interesting narrative. There are no passages that drag, no pages that tempt the reader to skip. It is all written with lively good humor and there are many droll stories and amusing anecdotes."

+ N Y Times p10 F 24 '24 720w

"'A Tenderfoot in New Mexico' is absorbing to students of American history as well as to lovers of wild adventures, for it paints again in vivid colors the exciting days on the ragged edge of civilization when the white man was conquering from the red savage the rich empire of the Great West, and men carried their lives in their hands everywhere in Colorado, New Mexico and Texas. The story is told in a clear, simple, restrained manner that throws into high relief the thrilling experiences of the author." J. O. Swift

+ N Y World p7e F 3 '24 780w

Outlook 136:403 Mr 5 '24 40w

"It is sufficient to say that this second volume has none of the disappointing characteristics which too often wait upon sequels."

+ Sat R 137:110 F 2 '24 480w

"Once or twice he touches eloquence, but his writing in general seems unstudied and careless. Yet he never fails to achieve an effect, for he has the gift of narration and of winning the reader's sympathy. . . Here is humor of an unaggressive kind playing round a well-told story of the days of the Bowie knife and the Winchester in the great Plains."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p58 Ja 31 '24 400w

Wis Lib Bul 20:148 Je '24

TOYNBEE, ARNOLD JOSEPH, tr. Greek historical thought from Homer to the age of Heraclius; with two pieces newly tr. by Gilbert Murray. (Lib. of Greek thought) 256p $2 Dutton [5s Dent]

880.8 Civilization, Greek. Hellenism. Greek literature—Collections 24-20160

"Mr. Toynbee's introduction deals with the essential characteristics of Greek historical writing. The book itself is an attempt to present by pertinent quotation from significant authors, chosen from a literature that stretches for a thousand years, the 'profoundly moving repetition of human experience on the Heroic scale.' To this end Mr. Toynbee has assembled not merely the expected passages from the standard historians, but also contributions from poets, scientists, philosophers who dealt with fundamental Hellenic ideals. The excerpts are grouped under such headings as 'The Philosophy of History,' 'Pride, Doom, and the Envy of the Gods,' 'Evolution,' 'Law and Causation,' 'Argument and Observation,' 'The Art of History'—a list which indicates the scope of the book."—Sat R of Lit

---

"It should be widely welcomed, for all lovers of Hellenic history and literature will find it a treasure house of that Hellenic thought which began 'at the moment when the first rudiments of the poetry of Homer shaped themselves in Greek minds,' and ended only when 'Homer yielded precedence to the Bible as the sacred book of a Greek-speaking and Greek-writing intelligentzia.'"

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 15 '24 600w

"It makes, in its own way, fascinating reading, and is subdivided into sections that enable the reader to grasp the comprehensive spirit with which classic writers treated history." J: Cournos

+ Lit R p4 N 15 '24 500w

New Statesman 23:474 Jl 26 '24 450w

"This is an even more valuable book than its companion volume of Greek literary criticism."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:17 Ag 2 '24 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Je 19 '24 300w

TRABUE, MARION REX. Measuring results in education. (Am. education ser.) 492p $2 Am. bk.

371 Mental tests. Educational measurements 24-6253

A most thorough and practical treatment of the whole subject of educational measurement, the purpose being to interpret its general principles for the average elementary school teacher. The book explains the nature of measurements, how standard tests developed and the whole method of procedure in making mental tests. Each chapter is provided with questions and exercises and references for reading. A few specific tests are given in illustration, but the emphasis thruout is placed on principles rather than on actual tests.

"To those accustomed to the recent texts which contain either description of extant tests or else elaborate statistical treatment, the straightforward explanation and interpretation appearing on every page of this volume will be a welcomed change. As a whole the book is clearly and interestingly written, it uses well graphs and cuts, and develops its ideas clearly and cogently. This book should prove of great practical help to principals and superintendents of schools as well as to the classroom teacher." A. M. J.

+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Je 22 '24 520w

Ind 112:241 Ap 26 '24 30w

TRACY, HENRY CHESTER. Island in time; charted by Sirov of Kanakir. 130p $1.50 Yale univ. press
24-22577

Sirov of Kanakir, the son of a rich Armenian merchant, recounts the simple happenings which take place in his life between the period of childhood and young manhood. The incidents are of family life, his trip to Stamboul, where he attends school for a year, and his return. This idyllic stretch of years he sees in retrospect as a "lifted land" having no relation to the present misery and sufferings of the Armenians.

Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '24 860w

"Which of us, however long pent up in city walls, however deeply engrossed in the feverish whirl of life as we live it, has not felt at times a longing to escape? Then is the time to read a book like 'An Island in Time.' To one in such a mood this little story, told in the melodious, muted prose of Sirov, will have a charm and sweetness not easily forgotten."
+ N Y Times p9 O 5 '24 400w

"This book is worthy of note as revealing a new writer of strong yet delicate prose, with an almost defiant disregard of the lesser conventions that make books weak and sometimes popular." H: S. Canby
+ Sat R of Lit 1:138 S 27 '24 450w

TRACY, LOUIS. The token. 314p $2 Clode [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
24-10301

"The Honorable Peggy Mainwaring, stealing a bicycular holiday with her maid in the absence of her parents, Lord and Lady Copmanthorpe, sees a half crown roll away from the grasp of a peculiar stranger on the British highway. The loser refers to it as a blankety token and is visibly moved by his loss. Peggy recovers the coin and, moved by its strange marking, shows it to a handsome young Sergeant of Police. He, too, is impressed by the coin and the girl's story. A story full of racing cars, murderous explosions, poison gas and thrills."—N Y World

"Old friends are best. Mr. Louis Tracy is, after all, an improvement on the crime-slingers of the hour. He has style and he has finish within reasonable limits. His characters are people of birth and breeding, and his detectives resemble Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's rather than the creations of George M. Cohan." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 7 '24 600w
Cleveland p67 S '24

"Somehow Mr. Tracy does adventure better than he does detectives. The material exists, but Furneaux is a bore."
— N Y Tribune p24 Jl 13 '24 400w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e My 11 '24 210w

"The story shows Mr. Tracy at his best."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p778 N 20 '24 200w

TRAGER, MRS HANNAH (BARNETT). Pioneers in Palestine; stories of one of the first settlers in Petach Tikvah; with a foreword by Israel Zangwill. 208p il $2 Dutton
915.69 Zionism. Jews in Palestine [24-25763]

"Mrs. Trager's father, Zorah Barnett, of London, inspired with Hebraic zeal for the accomplishment of the renascence of the land of his fathers', gave up his business in London, in 1880, and went to Jerusalem. From there started this first colonizing expedition of which he was the leader. By these Jewish pioneers was founded Petach Tikvor—'The Gate of Hope'—near Jappa. And Mrs. Trager's reminiscences of the heroic effort and endurance of these Zionist pioneers hold much of interest and revelation. Stories of the Jewish colonial life in Petach Tikvor form the larger portion of the book. The remainder chronicles the incidents of a visit made by Mrs. Trager to a transformed Petach Tikvor in 1911, after an absence of several years."—Boston Transcript

"Stories of all pioneer movements are arresting. Mrs. Trager's have an ingenuous appeal as well."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 7 '24 700w

"Mrs. Trager writes her reminiscent stories, it is evident, out of happy remembrance and she invests them with that charm that usually accompanies a simple, sincere account of pleasant memories."
+ N Y Times p23 Je 22 '24 380w

"The sketches fascinate."
+ N Y Tribune p26 Jl 13 '24 70w

TRAIN, ARTHUR CHENEY. Needle's eye. 416p $2 Scribner
24-23091

The completion of the Bible quotation from which the title is taken supplies the theme of the book—the rich man's difficulty in entering the kingdom of God. The hero, John Graham, is a young American millionaire who at twenty-seven inherits the long established and powerful banking business of his family. Growing acquaintance with the inside workings of the business and the relations of capital to labor, combined with the influence of the girl he loves, partially converts him to the cause of labor. But a visit to the coal fields in West Virginia, which his company controls, and experiences with the striking miners re-convert him to capitalism. The book closes with another Bible allusion, to the rich young man whom Christ, beholding, loved.

Booklist 21:154 Ja '25
Boston Transcript p5 O 18 '24 1250w

"The action is too theatric; coincidences are much too frequent to be convincing. Mr. Train's volume can not be ranked among the important novels of the season." A. B. Epstein
— Int Bk R p65 D '24 350w

"It drives unerringly toward the conclusion that capitalism is right and socialism crooked; it may achieve quite a popularity by this. The style is adequate for the theme rather than distinguished." Clement Wood
Lit R p6 O 4 '24 480w

"It is refreshing to come across a writer who boldly and understandingly sponsors the unpopular point of view, and in a novel of unusual scope and vitality depicts the rich man primarily as a human being suffering and struggling like all of us in a blind conflict with the torrential, overwhelming forces of the world . . . In its descriptions and character delineations 'The Needle's Eye' reaches a high plane. The narrative proceeds interestingly and with steady flow throughout the course of the 400 pages."
+ — N Y Times p8 S 28 '24 450w

"We have to thank Mr. Train not only for robust thinking and vigorous writing, but for a spirited piece of fiction—in The Needle's Eye—thoroughly alive in its viewpoint and its (possibly inadequate) philosophy." C. H. Gaines
+ — No Am 220:380 D '24 300w
Outlook 138:338 O 29 '24 320w

"Mr. Train's latest novel is a mansize piece of work; it presents a manful selection of material manfully employed. This material is comprehensive and somewhat miscellaneous, but it is all drawn to unification by and under its title." H: B. Fuller
+ Sat R of Lit 1:224 O 25 '24 700w
Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 850w

TRAIN, MRS ETHEL (KISSAM) (MRS ARTHUR CHENEY TRAIN). Son; and other stories of childhood and age. 546p $2 Scribner
23-18067

Short stories, many of them written around a friendly little boy called "Son" whose capacity for making friends and smoothing out other people's difficulties was unlimited. Contents:

TRAIN, ETHEL—Continued
"Son"; Jim; The little clown; Tom; Nils; Bill; The outlaw; Cousin Lemuel; The reflex; The little pink girl; The old cock; The ugly duckling; The reformation of Rhoda; In the garden: The rule of three; Angels unawares.

"Exquisite little stories."
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 2 '24 200w

"In the atmosphere the author creates in all these tales, there is that indefinable grace and sweetness than can issue only from a rare and noble spirit; in her manner there is the beauty of one whose heart is ever on the beautiful in literature, in nature, and in life; in her characters and in her outlook upon the world there is something that reminds one unmistakably of Dickens, for she has the optimism and the good cheer of the creator of 'Pickwick,' his love of mankind, and his unquenchable faith in that which is most generous and most inspiring in the human soul."
+ Lit R p496 F 2 '24 350w

"Ethel Train's book of children will receive a warm and delighted welcome from a publishing world whose literary offspring have of late been precocious brats and which should turn with pleasure to a child as simple, unaffected and sincere as 'Son.'"
+ N Y Times p14 Ja 13 '24 750w

"The style is delightful, clear and simple, with glints of humor, a style which is especially well suited to her studies of childhood and that phase of old age which resembles it so closely." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p22 Ja 27 '24 340w

"The merit of the stories about 'Son' lies in their exquisite workmanship; their happy optimism and the pictures they show one of wholesome likable people who are not afraid of sentiment or even sentimentality will commend them to many. Miss Train's touch is sure and exquisitely delicate, and the pictures she draws of dainty little old ladies are thoroughly delightful."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 350w
Wis Lib Bul 20:69 Mr '24

TRANSEAU, EDGAR NELSON, and SAMPSON, HOMER CLEVELAND. Laboratory and field work in general botany. (New world science ser.) 153p $1.20 World bk.
580 Botany

"Excellent text, with considerable attention to ecology. Designed to give a broad outlook, and lay a foundation for practical work in applied botany."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:310 Je '24

TREE, VIOLA. See Parsons, H., pseud.

TREVES, SIR FREDERICK. bart. Elephant man, and other reminiscences. 222p $2.25 Holt [7s 6d Cassell]
[24-703]

This volume of posthumous sketches is drawn from the experiences of an eminent surgeon. The first sketch, which gives its title to the book, is the story of a poor young man so deformed as to be a monstrosity, whom Sir Frederick rescued and found a home for in the London Hospital. In spite of his hideous body he had a charming mind, a highly romantic imagination and a personality that expanded under sympathetic treatment. Another sketch is a description of the old receiving room of the London Hospital which gives a ghastly picture of the conditions under which operations were performed forty years ago.

"Among recent books dealing with stark realism cleverly handled, we know of few save Russell's 'Where the Pavement Ends' and Powys's 'Ivory and Ebony' at all comparable with Sir Frederic's book." E. F. K.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 14 '24 550w
Dial 77:264 S '24 70w

"Each and every one of these sketches lays hold upon one, not alone as a page from a famous surgeon's note-book, but as an example of skilled story-writing and because of the sympathetic understanding that underlies the humor and the drama of the book."
+ Int Bk R p740 S '24 560w

"For the most part they are grim stories; pathetic, tragic, even horrible, but Sir Frederick also has humor, and that still rarer quality—geniality. His is a most unusual volume, both in its subject matter and in the author's deft handling of difficult material."
+ Lit R p617 Mr 22 '24 350w

"Banal, sentimental, and dull." J. J. Smertenko
— Nation 119:241 S 3 '24 90w

"This is not a book for a queasy stomach; but any one who is drawn to Poe, who can tolerate the confessions of the summer porch, or who, apart from this, is interested in medical anecdotes and medical histories will find much of interest in it." L. M.
+ New Repub 39:54 Je 4 '24 110w

"It is a genuine book, worthy of a place in the library of physician and layman."
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 6 '24 1250w

"For the most part these are tragic tales from his experiences as a doctor and will not charm the reader although well and graphically told."
+ — N Y World p6e Mr 9 '24 80w
Outlook 136:444 Mr 12 '24 180w

TROTSKY, LEON, pseud. (LEV DAVIDOVICH BRONSHTEIN). Problems of life; tr. by Z. Vengerova; with an introd. by N. Minsky. 114p $1.50 Doran [2s 6d Methuen]
304 Russia—Social conditions. Social problems 25-2264

A little book which shows a different and unexpected side of the Russian communist leader—his vision of a peaceful social reconstruction centering in problems of culture, education, civility and politeness, the duties and morals of daily life. He is interested here in the transformation of the individual and the development of personality. Contents: Not by politics alone does man thrive; Habit and custom; Vodka, the church and the cinema; From the old family to the new; The family and ceremony; Civility and politeness as a necessary lubricant in daily relationships; Struggle for cultured speech; Against bureaucracy, progressive and unprogressive; How to begin?

Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '24 500w
Nation and Ath 36:162 O 25 '24 550w
Reviewed by C. G. Bowers
N Y World p8e N 9 '24 160w

"Much of this curiously interesting and often illuminating book expresses opinions not very different from those that might come from any Western educator or social worker invited to Russia to give his advice. Perhaps only in Trotsky's remarks on the church would the latter's sensibilities be much disturbed. Trotsky writes of religion as if he had come from Mars and had a blind spot for this side of man's needs." Arthur Ruhl
Sat R of Lit 1:429 Ja 3 '25 1100w

"To everyone interested in the broadest social problems, the present and future of Russia must be profoundly interesting, and for the light it throws on these problems, this book of Trotsky's deserves to be read."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p604 O 2 '24 1000w

TROTTER, THOMAS HENRY YORKE. Music and mind. 246p $3.50 Doran [7s 6d Methuen]
780.1 Music—Psychology 24-15181

A treatise on the psychology of music which studies the art as an expression of the emotions. The first part deals with the relations of music and mind; the second part, with the theory and evolution of music; the third part, with musical education.

Reviewed by H: T. Finck
Nation 119:292 S 17 '24 650w

"There is scarcely an aspect of music with which Mr. Trotter's comprehensive pen has not dealt, from acoustics upwards. But there is one particular quarry the pursuit of which directs and co-ordinates his keen intellectual pack. The question of the effect of music on the hearer is one of the greatest interest, and, if Mr. Trotter's answer does not altogether satisfy, it is because no answer could." Anthony Asquith
+ Nation and Ath 34:928 Mr 29 '24 880w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p117 F 28 '24 1500w

TUCKER, GEORGE FOX. Boy whaleman. [2] (Beacon Hill bookshelf) 283p il $2 Little 24-21074

Homer Bleechly, a fifteen-year-old New Bedford boy, ships aboard a whaler for a three years voyage among the tropic isles and to the Arctic seas. To the adventure-loving lad the details of seamanship, the lore of whales, his interesting shipmates are as interesting as the actual capture of a whale. He has many thrilling experiences during his apprenticeship and the end of the cruise brings him renown for "actually raising more whales than any other man on the ship."

Booklist 21:73 N '24

"The quality of the book is not so much its simple genuineness as the young narrator's civilized point of view. All in all, an unusual book, and well worth the attention of those interested in a famous episode of American history." H: Beston
+ N Y Tribune p6 Ja 11 '25 430w

TUCKERMAN, ARTHUR. Galloping dawns. 271p $2 Doubleday
24-12762

"'You're stupid, Lawrence, I meant people like our fathers and mothers and relations. The older and finer your family is the more rules you've got. Now, Matthew, f'r instance, could marry any one he wanted, because he's just a coachman.' The words are those of young Janet Craig. They furnish the motive for the book, because they are spoken to Lawrence Dulac, a son of 'The' Dulacs, and they express the principle of social exclusiveness under which Lawrence grows up and by which he stands on the strength of his own breeding up to the moment when he has to surrender to the insurgency of his own daughter, Beryl, the child of an age when barriers are falling down."—N Y World

"The post-war youth, as viewed from the eyes of their elders, has been a frequent theme of late fiction, but none has made better use of the material than has Mr. Tuckerman." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 21 '24 700w
Cleveland p66 S '24

"In addition to his accurate and interesting picture of society, the author tells a story of absorbing interest."
+ N Y Times p9 Je 1 '24 530w

"From so slight a character it is impossible to construct a very substantial novel, but the author has made the most of his material." Isabel Paterson
— + N Y Tribune p27 Je 22 '24 290w

"Finely told story." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e Je 8 '24 210w
Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 20 '24 300w

TUGWELL, REXFORD GUY, ed. Trend of economics by Morris Albert Copeland, and others; ed. with an introduction. 556p $3.50 Knopf
330 Economics 24-13942

A collection of monographs by thirteen of the younger American economists showing the present trend of economic theory. Contents: The prospects of economics, by W. C. Mitchell; On measurement in economics, by F: C. Mills; The socializing of theoretical economics, by J: M. Clark; Communities of economic interest and the price system, by M. A. Copeland; The reality of non-commercial incentives in economic life, by P. H. Douglas; Economic theory and the statesman, by R. L. Hale; The limitations of scientific method in economics, by F. H Knight; Some recent developments of economic theory, by R. T. Bye; The organization and control of economic activity, by S. H. Slichter; Economics—science and art, by G: Soule; Experimental economics, by R. G. Tugwell; Regional comparison and economic progress, by W: E. Weld; Functional economics, by A. B. Wolfe. Appendix. Bibliography.

"A praiseworthy attempt to examine the current problems in economics and to evaluate objectively the present tendencies in that science."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:834 N '24 90w

"An important contribution to the general subject. It contains a valuable bibliography. The papers cover a fairly broad range in spite of the editor's policy, although not all of them discuss matters of practical application." J. G.
+ — Bookm 60:adv N '24 160w
Boston Transcript p7 My 3 '24 1050w
Cleveland p56 Jl '24
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:303 Je '24

TULLY, JIM. Beggars of life; a hobo autobiography. 336p $3 A. & C. Boni
B or 92 Tramps 25-2472

"This autobiography is a realistic faithful story of the American tramp. A small town boy, an early inmate of an orphanage, a rebel against the monotony of a drab Ohio town, and a throwback to the ancient Irish tellers of fairy tales, he took to the road naturally. He learned the ways and maxims of the road early, learned them well, and at twenty was worldly wise far beyond his years. 'Tramping in wild and windy places,' he writes, 'without money, food or shelter was better for me than supinely bowing to any conventional decree of fate.'"—Lit R

Boston Transcript p6 O 29 '24 700w

"How this man can write! Words that are like mountain breezes fresh from wild-flower fields. Words that leap, sing, crawl, explode. Always there is a beautiful rhythm. He has the great writer's ability to capture, with a few efficient words, the essence of a man's personality and appearance." R. A. Parker
+ Int Bk R p90 Ja '25 1600w

"Tully's portraits of the persons he meets vividly acquaint the reader with his characters; he writes keenly of what he has observed keenly and his descriptions of long night rides on mail trains and the death of 'Oklahoma Red' are little short of fascinating. The flow of his narration moves easily and rapidly." O. D. Russell
+ Lit R p14 O 25 '24 700w
N Y Times p18 Ja 4 '25 1000w

"In craftsmanship the book is crude. The style is marred by mannered processions of short sentences thrown loosely together and constructed on the same plan. This style is particularly irritating in the expository passages. Possessed as he is of power, intelligence and excellent materials, Mr. Tully should have written a better book." Glen Mullin
— N Y Tribune p10 N 16 '24 820w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y World p9e O 5 '24 1350w

"The book is sufficiently interesting. The 'raw stuff,' both in incident and conversation, is presented absolutely raw; which certainly makes for vividness. But is the life, even of the hobo, quite so consistently hideous as we have it here?"
Outlook 138:377 N 5 '24 450w

TULLY, JIM—Continued

"If all men wrote as honestly as Jim Tully, setting forth their goodness and their nastiness equally, with no attempt at exaggerating either, books would be better and fewer." J: S. Martin
+ Sat R of Lit 1:261 N 8 '24 1550w

"While 'Beggars of Life' has some rough passages, as might be expected, the book is a revealing and thought-provoking work of sociology as well as an interesting narrative."
Springf'd Republican p14 N 21 '24 650w

Reviewed by Nels Anderson
Survey 53:289 D 1 '24 500w

TURGENEV, IVAN SERGIEEVICH. Plays; tr. from the Russian by M. S. Mandell; with an introd. by William Lyon Phelps. 583p $2.50 Macmillan

891.72 24-9906

Ten plays of the great Russian novelist here translated into English for the first time. Carelessness; Broke; Where it is thin, there it breaks; An amicable settlement; The country woman and An evening in Sorrento are one act plays; The family charge has two acts; The bachelor, three; A month in the country, five; and A conversation on the highway is called "a scene."

Booklist 21:18 O '24
Dial 78:77 Ja '25 90w
Ind 112:346 Je 21 '24 460w

"They are plainly the work of a novelist rather than of a man of the theatre, of a fine and delicate realist, more interested in character, in the subtler fragrances and pains of life, than in external action and cunningly contrived surprises. Turgenev himself put it very modestly and well." Arthur Ruhl
+ Lit R p892 Jl 12 '24 600w
N Y Times p4 My 11 '24 420w

"The publication of his plays in English translation shows beyond doubt that he was essentially foreign to the dramatic form. If their dramatic value be questionable, however, their importance as documents on racial psychology can hardly be overestimated." Edwin Bjorkman
+ — Outlook 137:238 Je 11 '24 50w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:376 Jl '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p665 O 23 '24 2200w

"Turgenev's own fear that they were not entirely satisfactory for the stage has not been justified. That they are also excellent reading this volume amply proves." Rosamond Gilder
+ Theatre Arts Mo 8:648 S '24 350w

TURNER, EDWARD RAYMOND. Europe, 1450-1789. 871p $3.50 Doubleday

940.2 Europe—History 23-13494

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"The value of this book, written with admirable fairness, is greatly increased by the fact that it recognizes the unity of movement in human thought and life. This constant recognition of the solidarity of life gives vitality to the book and increases its power of illumination." E: Hulme
+ Am Hist R 29:757 Jl '24 500w

"Professor Turner's work is a fine one. The past he covers, its men and women, its problems and passions, really lives again in his pages. Professor Turner has given his work this quality of living interest which should insure its being read by his contemporaries."
+ Bookm 59:91 My '24 110w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes
New Repub 38:344 My 21 '24 290w

"The book, largely because it is no mere compilation but the individual effort of a scholar who thinks as well as reads, will take very high rank among works of the kind, and will attract readers who have a wholesome dislike of textbooks."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 20 '24 780w

TURNER, EDWARD RAYMOND. Europe since ^{2} 1789. 846p $3.50 Doubleday

940.2 Europe—History 24-6907

"This book is a revision and enlargement of the author's 'Europe: 1789-1920.' The author has brought the narrative down to the beginning of 1924, thus covering important developments in the field of international relations, and has also treated more extensively several topics included in the original work."—R of Rs

Bookm 60:100 S '24 160w
Cleveland p60 Jl '24

"Professor Turner's handling of the period since the World War, and indeed of the whole period since 1789, is distinguished by wide and accurate knowledge and pervading moderation of judgment, and the book in its revised form may be cordially commended to all who want or need their modern history in small compass. A word of special commendation should be given to the bibliographies, which open to the student a wide range of historical literature, not only in English but in French, German, and other languages as well." W: MacDonald
+ Lit R p970 Ag 16 '24 200w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky
N Y Times p4 My 18 '24 400w
N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 60w

"As a whole, Professor Turner's work is stamped by scrupulous fairness and a capacity for seeing and lucidly presenting those vaster movements on which the separate incidents are as little surface waves above the measured swell of the ocean."
+ Outlook 138:605 D 10 '24 260w
R of Rs 70:334 S '24 80w

TURNER, JOHN HASTINGS. Lilies of the field; a comedy in three acts. (British drama league ser.) 200p $2 Appleton [3s 6d Blackwell]

822 24-20973

The scene of this comedy is an obscure vicarage in England, the time the occasion of the birthday of the vicar's charming young twins, Betty and Kitty. Quite inadvertently, the vicar, a most unworldly man in the midst of his modern womenfolk, discloses the secret of the girls' presents—that the one who gains most favor with the new visitor, Barnaby Haddon, is to get a month in London, the other a length of crêpe-de-chine. The twins act accordingly. Betty, in the dress and manner of a demure Victorian maid wins, and goes to town. But she cannot revert to her modern ways without implicating her father. The entanglement grows and then unwinds itself in a series of amusing incidents. Barnaby adds another surprise for them all with the result that the conclusion is a happy one for both twins.

"There is not much harm in 'The Lilies of of Field.' We may even be mildly amused by the idiotically innocent, nice characters, who teach us that it is no use young women pretending to be what they are not, and that side-whiskers spoil a cheerful grin." Bonamy Dobrée
— + Nation and Ath 34:894 Mr 22 '24 130w

"The play, gentle in itself and not of any particular importance as an example of modern playwriting, affords the author an opportunity for a deal of clever and often sparkling dialogue. And because of this 'Lilies of the Field' makes excellent reading."
+ N Y Times p2 O 5 '24 700w
Sat R of Lit 1:168 O 4 '24 140w

TUTTON, ALFRED EDWIN HOWARD. Natural history of crystals. 287p il $5 Dutton [15s K. Paul]

548 Crystallography 24-19648

A new edition of an authoritative work first published in 1911, but largely re-written and brought up to date, with the addition of considerable new matter. It presents a complete survey of the science of crystallography, including both the theory and practice of the study of crystals and their many properties. There is a glossary of technical terms and a list of the thirty-two classes of crystals and their distribution among the seven systems, 166 illustrations, including 32 half-tone plates. Index.

Boston Transcript p3 S 6 '24 950w

"The author does not have the clear and simple style of writing which is the prime requisite of a satisfactory popular treatise. Many times it is difficult for even the practising crystal scientist to know exactly what is intended. . . The book cannot be recommended as an introduction to the newer crystallography. The theoretical aspects of crystallography are rarely handled in a clear-cut manner and the writer's discussions of atomic structure and crystal structure are not dependable. The book abounds in extraneous matter." R. W. G. Wyckoff

— Ind & Eng Chem 16:1202 N '24 550w

Lit R p15 S 20 '24 230w

St Louis p404 D '24

"For readers in whom we may fairly assume a moderate acquaintance with chemistry and physics, no more lucid and orderly account of the present position of our knowledge could be desired. Dr. Tutton has a remarkable faculty of clear exposition, in language as simple as is consistent with accuracy and brevity. For students of all grades Dr. Tutton's book should be most helpful and suggestive."

+ Sat R 137:270 Mr 15 '24 300w

"The interest of the book is great, and the descriptions are made real by a large number of excellent illustrations. Throughout it we feel the exceedingly human interest of the author in his subject, both when he is describing his own work in the laboratory and in his appreciation of the beauty of crystalline form as he found it in the snow crystals at high altitudes in the Alps."

+ Spec 132:642 Ap 19 '24 250w

"Dr. Tutton is surely justified in hoping for the influx of a new body of students of the science, and his book is admirably suited for enticing them through the entrance gate."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p444 Jl 17 '24 800w

TWAIN, MARK, pseud. See Clemens, S: L.

TWENTY-THREE stories, by twenty and three ^{2} authors. [ed. by C. A. Dawson Scott and Ernest Rhys]. 350p $2.50 Appleton

Short Stories—Collections 24-28114

A collection of short stories all of which, save one by Edith Wharton, represent English authors. There are tales of horror, of pathos, of adventure, and several deal with the supernatural. The book opens with Edith Wharton's "Kerfol," a medieval story of an old chateau, a mad woman and her ghostly dogs. "The monkey's paw" by W. W. Jacobs is included, and Thomas Burke's contribution is the pathetic story of "The Chink and the child" taken from "Limehouse nights." Other authors in the selection are: Robert Hichens, W. B. Yeats, Marquess Curzon of Kedleston, L. De Bra, Elinor Mordaunt, A. W. Mason, Cutliffe Hyne, Edwin Pugh, R. Ellis Roberts, John Masefield, Louis Golding, Arthur Lynch, A. Conan Doyle, Algernon Blackwood, Ward Muir, Morley Roberts, H. De Vere Stacpoole, T. F. Powys, W. W. Jacobs, Walter de la Mare and W. Somerset Maugham.

Reviewed by Kenneth Fuessle

Int Bk R p99 Ja '25 200w

"The blurb does not exaggerate when it states that the reader finds himself in distinguished company. The list of names included in the twenty and three is imposing, and the editors have not assembled second-rate work, as is so often done." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p16 D 6 '24 220w

"There is hardly one that does not justify its inclusion and rescue from ephemeral fiction by its high, imaginative quality. The genius that presided over their selection, it is clear, was one with a preference for the fringes of the 'beyond' and for the disquieting shapes that haunt the borderland of the human will. In other words, there are more shivers than thrills."

+ N Y Times p8 N 23 '24 750w

"Nine tales of nine authors in this book ensnare the readers swiftly into terror. The other fourteen attempt a mood. But claptrap plausibility and even strange facts themselves cannot achieve a weird sense of reality without perfect unity of impression—square imaginative impact." J. M. Wayer

+ — N Y Tribune p18 D 7 '24 390w

"It is a triumph of editing that the collection of 'Twenty-Three Stories' by as many authors has a remarkable unity in the midst of its striking variety." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p9e N 16 '24 230w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 138:602 D 10 '24 80w

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:365 D 6 '24 290w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p886 D 25 '24 440w

U

UNCENSORED recollections. 346p $4.50 Lippincott [12s 6d Nash & G.]

920 Courts and courtiers 24-15317

These are the intimate revelations of the Victorian aristocracy in Europe, principally the English and French, with an occasional mention of the Americans. Some of the great ones gossiped about include Queen Victoria, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Empress Eugenie, Lord Randolph Churchill, the Rothschilds, the Vanderbilts and other prominent personages in London, Parisian and New York society.

Bookm 60:356 N '24 160w

"With all the garrulousness and unconsciousness of a Pepys, but without the cipher, he maunders on, pillorying his inconsequential self as a man gossip, rather proud of his peccadillos. If he really exists, and we have some hope that he may be a clever hoax, a hybrid creature made out of the stories of many raconteurs, we hope never to have the honor of meeting him." S. L. Cook

— Boston Transcript p3 Jl 26 '24 1200w

"Delightful in places, disgusting or disappointing in others. Who would sup on horrors and lament the idiocy and depravity of the bête humaine, let him read this sorry book!" Shane Leslie

— Int Bk R p643 Ag '24 2100w

" 'Uncensored Recollections' may have little or no historical value, but it is a book not to be missed by those who enjoy reading reminiscences. The question of the good taste of many of the stories recounted must be left to the reader." W. O. T.

— + Lit R p5 S 6 '24 500w

"Most delightful, intriguing and alluring book." Walter Littlefield

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 3 '24 2300w

"This is about the most entertaining volume of intimate memoirs the reviewer has read for many seasons. For piquant and racy revelation of character and incident revolving around the eccentricities, pleasures and vices of the great and near-great of the last half of the

UNCENSORED RECOLLECTIONS—Continued
Victorian period, the anonymous author is to be highly commended." J: Armstrong
+ N Y Tribune p22 Ag 10 '24 1450w
Outlook 138:339 O 29 '24 160w
St Louis p385 N '24

"It is an essentially trifling book, with no value as history and hardly more as biography. Yet, since the world loves gossip, it will doubtless find a public."
— Sat R of Lit 1:51 Ag 16 '24 90w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 600w

"Somewhat loosely written but vivacious reminiscences, all rather belonging to the back stairs of biography."
— The Times [London] Lit Sup p81 F 7 '24 240w

UNDERWOOD, EDNA (WORTHLEY) (MRS EARL UNDERWOOD). Passion flower. 303p $2 Houghton
24-6733

This is the second volume of Mrs Underwood's New world trilogy, of which "The penitent" is the first. The story opens with a colorful picture of the coronation ball of Nicholas I, czar of Russia. Mingling with the noble guests was Pushkin—Alexis Sergiewitch—negro poet, recently freed from exile. On that evening Pushkin played a trick upon another guest, Count Alexis Orlow, which caused a great deal of trouble. This trick was the capture of Châli, the beautiful Austrian spy, whom Orlow loved, and it resulted in an ardent love affair which later caused the death of the poet. Nicholas hated Pushkin, yet he dared not kill him and followed the policy of "first pardoning—then crushing." In contrast to this hate was Châli's love for Pushkin. So great was it that upon his death she chose also to die.

"It is an ambitious undertaking that Mrs. Underwood has set for herself, an undertaking that requires a supreme analytical gift as well as a detailed knowledge of history; but she has succeeded measurably and has not only treated her audience to a vivid and interesting historical picture but has displayed marked insight in her interpretation both of character and of events."
+ Lit R p827 Je 14 '24 130w

"There is something splendid, something heroic in the sweep and rhythm of Mrs. Underwood's novel. The author justifies her selection of what at first glance seems a most audaciously chosen theme."
+ N Y Times p18 My 11 '24 1500w

"'The Passion Flower' is vivid in its historical passages and portraits and brilliant in its welding lines of pure narrative of fiction." E. W. O.
+ N Y World p6e Ap 13 '24 250w

UREN, LESTER CHARLES. Textbook of petroleum production engineering. 657p il $6 (30s) McGraw
2

622.33 Petroleum 24-5939

"Deals somewhat briefly with prospecting, and the transportation and refining of petroleum, but is devoted mainly to technology of oil-field development and petroleum production."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:514 N '24

UTTER, ROBERT PALFREY. Pearls and pepper. 234p $2.50 Yale univ. press [11s 6d Milford]

814 24-7243

The author of these essays is professor of English at the University of California but some of the most delightful of his essays have nothing to do with literary themes, though the style is literary. One of the best is the opening essay on the pup-dog, and there is a companion piece on the pup-boy. Contents: The pup-dog; The case against grammar; Winter mist; William De Morgan; My Neighbor and myself; The most contemplative man's recreation; The idiom of democracy; The pup-boy; Of woodpiles; The Laocoön of the shoe-lacings; The trembling year; Of stone walls: "Soldier, soldier, come from the wars—"; The ship's library; Progress in pronunciation; Lear's characters; The work of Thomas Hardy; The fishermans' path; On the alleged tediousness of Defoe and Richardson; The simple spellers.

"Mr. Utter saves part of his work from the state of boredom which only the repetition of a no-longer-popular style can produce less through his modernity than by virtue of his youth. Mr. Utter is still one year shy of fifty, and there is resiliency as well as vigor in his thinking." J. J. Smertenko
+ Nation 119:169 Ag 13 '24 50w

"Professor Utter's essays are stimulating reading and not to be missed." L: Kantor
+ N Y Times p13 Ap 13 '24 1050w

UZZELL, THOMAS H. Narrative technique; a practical course in literary psychology. 476p $1.80 Harcourt

808.3 Short story 23-11788

Written in conversational style, the book is planned for college students of English composition, particularly those who are ready for special training. Mr Uzzell herein offers a systematic discipline in the handling of narrative materials. The book is divided into three parts: The narrative purpose; The materials of narrative; Finishing the narrative plot. Each chapter is followed by a number of assignments, and there is a very helpful appendix which is grouped into the following four sections: Section A, Answers to assignments; Section B, Weak plot types; Section C, How to get story ideas; Section D, Suggestions to teachers.

"A book worth reading by those who hope to write professionally. It will never teach the novice who has nothing in reality to say, nor will any other volume, but it should be of real value to those who need but to learn the craftsmanship of narration." S. L. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 4 '24 400w

"It does not purport to make an O. Henry out of Carol Kennicott or Mr. Babbitt; but it will aid an innate story-teller in garbing his brain children acceptably." C. W.
Lit R p10 Ag 30 '24 140w

"Decidedly useful in its kind."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 60w

V

VACHELL, HORACE ANNESLEY. Quinney's adventures. 318p $2 Doran [7s 6d Murray]
24-18266

A sequel to the author's "Quinneys," this series of short tales affords fresh opportunities for Joe Quinney to test his shrewdness and wisdom against other sharp-eyed bargainers in "antiques." Contents: The Barbens of Barben-Lacy; The Paul Lamerie cup; A nocturnal visitor; A tug of war; A counterfeit presentment; The jade Bouddha; Possessed; The Ming vase; Duds; The D'Avenant mystery; Castle Kilrain.

Booklist 21:29 O '24
Boston Transcript p1 Ag 9 '24 450w
Cleveland p86 N '24

"Quinney is delightful and human."
+ Nation and Ath 35:sup258 My 24 '24 150w

"Like so many sequels it suffers in comparison with its original. Quinney, himself, in these adventures, is but the shadow of his former self. Neither as connoisseur nor as sentimentalist has he the old appeal."
— + New Statesman 23:236 My 31 '24 190w

"As is often the case with groups of short stories in which some of the same characters appear again and again, the reader is likely to experience monotony before the end is reached."
+ — N Y Times p18 Je 29 '24 320w

N Y Tribune p24 Ag 10 '24 460w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 60w

Outlook 138:26 S 3 '24 150w

"There is snobbery here, nor is there much understanding of Ireland. But the cheap point of view is not apparent in most of the Quinney stories, which have both charm and considerable originality in the well ploughed over field of the mystery tale."
+ — Sat R of Lit 1:34 Ag 9 '24 250w

Spec 132:1007 Je 21 '24 60w

"Of their kind the tales are excellent."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p324 My 22 '24 150w

VAIHINGER, HANS. Philosophy of as if; a system of the theoretical, practical and religious fictions of mankind; tr. by C. K. Ogden. (International lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 380p $7.50 Harcourt [25s K. Paul]

193 Thought and thinking. Pragmatism. Knowledge, Theory of 24-17317

"This book is an analysis of the thought-processes involved in the fictions we make to help us find our way about the world. Thought, according to Vaihinger, starts with sensations and aims at manipulation; on the way it experiences difficulties, and says, 'Let us act "as if" things were so and so.' Whereas such procedure is recognized as legitimate and proper in many situations of everyday life, there are cases where the 'as if' has overstepped the boundaries of mere practicality, and other cases, such as psycho-analysis, where critics are unable to recognize fictional constructs, and accuse those who use them of misinterpreting nature."—Nation and Ath

"The danger of so profound a book, alive in every page with deep insight and original turns of thought, is that appreciation of it may be held to depend on recognition of the validity of the thought process, and that, with this weakened or given up, the incautious reader may be tempted to regard the whole work as one to be taken from the 'As If' point of view." E. N.
Boston Transcript p7 S 27 '24 800w

Nation and Ath 35:700 S 6 '24 150w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 40:254 N 5 '24 1150w

New Statesman 23:472 Jl 26 '24 1150w

Reviewed by Alan Porter
Spec 133:61 Jl 12 '24 1050w

"The translation is quite excellently done, and but for an occasional lapse into Germanicized construction it reads like an original English work. . . The book is prefaced by a valuable and deeply interesting autobiography of the author."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p444 Jl 17 '24 1400w

VAJDA, ERNEST. Fata Morgana (Mirage); a comedy in three acts; tr. by James L. A. Burrel and Philip Moeller. 194p il $2 Doubleday

894 24-16043

"Briefly, the story of the play is the world-old one of the awakening of passionate love in the heart of a boy; of his ecstasy, and his quick disillusionment. In this instance the awakening, the ecstasy, the disillusionment all come through the grace and the cynicism of a beautiful woman twice the age of the boy. The Hungarian dramatist has handled his theme with much delicacy, taste, and with rare discrimination. The play has for background the old-fashioned country home of a comfortably well-off Hungarian family."—Lit R

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield
Bookm 60:240 O '24 190w

"It is by no means an ordinary phenomenon for a stage success to turn out a literary success as well. It seems to me that pleasant distinction belongs to Ernest Vajda's 'Fata Morgana,' for certain it is that the dramatic critics have heaped praise on both play and players, and equally certain it is that the book is a delight to read." R. B. Y.
+ Lit R p873 Jl 5 '24 150w

"Fata Morgana is not a great play but all the way through it is pleasing and entertaining and supple in its wit and spirit. . . The characteristic and promising quality of Vajda's play derives from a certain underlying sweetness of humanity and a certain vivacious wisdom about life." Stark Young
+ New Repub 38:128 Mr 26 '24 1200w

"A gay and excellent comedy, held as all comedy should be held, with tragedy lurking not far away."
Theatre Arts Mo 8:870 D '24 150w

VALENTINE, DOUGLAS, pseud. See Williams, V.

VANCE, LOUIS JOSEPH. Mrs Paramor. 283p $2 Dutton

24-16808

"The 'Mrs Paramor' of the title is first known to the reader as Nelly Wayne, the rather dowdy and altogether devoted wife of Pendleton Wayne. Jill Wetherell, pretty, poor, impudent and 27, on the hunt for a husband, deliberately takes Wayne away from his wife, declaring that: 'A woman who can't hold her husband doesn't deserve to have him.' But some two years later, when circumstances bring the opportunity for a just revenge to Nelly Wayne, now the famous and fascinating Mrs. Paramor, she phrases the matter somewhat differently. For it is her belief, learned through hard experience that: 'The bitter truth is . . . that a husband who has to be held isn't worth any woman's having.' "—N Y Times

Ind 113:104 Ag 16 '24 370w

"It is a Jazz Age of slightly older people who are really as mature as Mr. Vance pretends, and certainly more entertaining than those exhibited in fiction by more serious artists that Mr. Vance. Often Mr. Vance's lush prose gets the better of verisimilitude, but even so much is a relief." A. D. Douglas
+ — Int Bk R p739 S '24 600w

"An entertaining story for an idle hour is Mr. Vance's newest novel, written with smartness and sophistication, although lacking in novelty of plot or characterization."
+ — Lit R p921 Jl 26 '24 200w

"This new novel is of the carefully carpentered, carefully dove-tailed type, with a Jack for every Jill, and everything and everybody neatly fitted together. It has dramatic moments which make one think involuntarily of the stage, and in fact both the atmosphere and the characters of the book belong to the footlights rather than to real life. Nevertheless, it is entertaining, a light novel with which one may agreeably while away a couple of idle hours."
— + N Y Times p9 Jl 27 '24 340w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
N Y Tribune p25 Jl 20 '24 700w

" 'Mrs. Paramor' belongs to that large segment of fiction which treats of superficial people in a superficial way."
— Outlook 138:26 S 3 '24 300w

"The author writes in so light a vein and with such regard for best seller conventions that the most devoted Harold Bell Wright enthusiast could find little to criticize."
— Sat R of Lit 1:52 Ag 16 '24 420w

VANDERBLUE, HOMER BEWS. Problems in business economics. (Harvard business problem books) 631p $5 Shaw, A. W.

338 Business. Economics 24-20958

The author is professor of business economics in the Graduate school of business administration, Harvard university, and most of the cases and problems presented in this book were gathered for the course in advanced business economics. The book is in three parts. Part one is an introductory discussion of the business cycle, its phases, causes and effects and duration; forecasting business conditions; cyclical variations in manufacturing, mining employment, advertising and merchandising, bond yields and money rates; and the control of an industry in the business cycle. The second and longest part is devoted to a discussion of over one hundred financial, operating and distribution problems which the managers of various enterprises have had to meet. Part three contains various statistical tables.

Management and Adm 8:538 N '24 250w
Springf'd Republican p14 S 14 '24 220w

VAN DOREN, CARL CLINTON. Many minds. 242p $2.50 Knopf

814 American literature—History and criticism 24-26389

In this book of critical essays Mr Van Doren continues his appraisal of contemporary American writers. Under the label "Subsoil" he treats a group of authors including Mary Austin, George Ade, E. W. Howe, Robert Frost, Stuart P. Sherman and George Santayana. Another group "New Growths," includes Edna St Vincent Millay, H. L. Mencken, Carl Sandburg, Vachel Lindsay, Ring W. Lardner, and four Manhattan columnists, F. P. Adams, Christopher Morley, Don Marquis and Heywood Broun. He concludes with a chapter on himself, under the designation "The Friendly Enemy." Bibliographies of the writers criticised are included.

Booklist 20:332 Je '24

"At this exciting stage of American letters we must be thankful for a Carl Van Doren to tell us so clearly, so expertly, so interestingly, where we stand. 'Many Minds' is a complete and sympathetic and encouraging report of progress." W: K. Holland
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 5 '24 2650w
Cleveland p45 Je '24

"His mind is academic, but at the same time liberal, a most rare and useful combination."
+ Dial 77:84 Jl '24 120w

"One is thankful for the way Mr. Van Doren always goes straight to the heart of the matter in judging a writer, sensibly not concerning himself with the mint and cummin of 'artistry,' or troubling about a good writer's bad work, or merely recording his distastes." R: Le Gallienne
+ Int Bk R p583 Jl '24 850w

Reviewed by S: C. Chew
Lit R p665 Ap 12 '24 700w

"Not less interested in controversial issues than H. L. Mencken, he nevertheless does not raise his voice above the conversational pitch, much less wave a tomahawk. Indeed, he presents the singular appearance, in this book, of a civilized man discussing literature with an equally civilized group of friends. His serenity of temper enables his thought to follow many an elusive truth into those crevices of nuance where it so often stays hidden from us more impatient ones." Floyd Dell
+ Nation 118:741 Je 25 '24 1150w

"Toward the younger generation Mr. Van Doren is conspicuously friendly; and on the whole his method eschews slaughter. He is a hunter who shoots with the camera instead of the gun." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 39:23 My 28 '24 400w

"There is something disarming about Van Doren's impersonality—disarming and cool but seldom cold. An Emersonian note often creeps into his sentences. If there is no overwhelming enthusiasm in them, there is never any venom. He is virtually never lyrical, but when he begins to finger the wealth of a talent the pulse of his writing quickens. But he never passes dross for gold." H. J. Forman
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 6 '24 2300w

"A light touch, the remnant of more journalistic days, leavens the weightier substance of these essays. The criticisms do not weary the reader by exhaustive minutiæ. They are cool, kind and sane, eminently reasonable." Eva Goldbeck
+ N Y Tribune p22 Je 8 '24 360w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:324 Je '24
Wis Lib Bul 20:124 My '24

VAN DOREN, MARK. Spring thunder, and other poems. 69p $1.50 Seltzer
²

811

Simple and rugged poems whose style and spirit fit their themes, which are mostly of the world outdoors.

"He writes of small events so as to evoke the very sap and sting lurking for us humans in a wind-blown curtain, in a dilapidated barn, in grass, and snow, in humbler than these. Mr. Van Doren's work shows an alert, sensitive mind recording minutely observed facts, making poetry of them by preserving in his record the emotional tinge they had for one wise observer." Babette Deutsch
+ Lit R p4 Ja 17 '25 950w

"No one reading the very firmly knit verses which go to make up the contents can doubt that Mr. Van Doren is akin to the poets. The question is—is he quite a poet? The reader will be instantly reminded of Frost, and while reminded he will be conscious that just that quality which makes Frost's verse memorable (and what, just, is it?) is lacking."
+ — N Y Times p19 D 28 '24 540w

"There is little variety, little of the Olympian laughter, no crunching of the boots of doom; there is, however a cultivated and gentle strength like the fissuring of rocks in humid loam, a steady uninterrupted precision and purpose and music." Joseph Auslander
+ N Y World p9e D 28 '24 200w

"Every one who knows and loves our countryside of struggling farms and rough pastures will own the spell of the native pastorals included in Mark Van Doren's 'Spring Thunder.' " Arthur Guiterman
+ Outlook 138:730 D 31 '24 180w

VANE, SUTTON. Outward bound. 171p $1.75 Boni & Liveright [3s 6d Chatto & W.]

822

An English play which repeated in New York the success it had in London. It is a play about death, and its scene is a ship. Over the strange company of passengers there hangs an oppressive sense of unreality and uncertainty. Nobody seems to know where he is going. Without captain, crew or lights the ship is ploughing noiselessly along. Gradually it dawns on the shipmates that they are dead and bound for heaven—or hell. Then it is shown how each of them reacts to this grave situation.

Booklist 30:293 My '24
Cleveland p52 Jl '24

"Mr. Vane has managed to construct a situation of unusual emotional intensity, from which only the most callous auditor could escape unmoved" Harold Kellock
+ Freeman 8:473 Ja 23 '24 1000w

"Dealing imaginatively and somewhat audaciously with a subject of universal interest comparatively fresh in the theatre, well written, with a keen sense of situation and of character, it commands attention and provokes suspense, and yet at the end, leaves behind it a feeling of disappointment and a conviction of futility."
+ — Lit R p598 Mr 15 '24 340w

Reviewed by Joseph Anthony
Lit R p925 Jl 26 '24 60w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée
Nation and Ath 34:894 Mr 22 '24 130w

"It is a satirical comedy, with a note of poignant tragedy; withal, an amusing play, but one for thoughtful people."
Outlook 136:402 Mr 5 '24 210w

Pratt p30 summer '24

"A play apt to offend the orthodox by its manipulation of the geography of after-death countries, apt to incur the ridicule of disillusioned intellectuals; yet a play that does apparently neither of these things, but a play that shocks the reader and the hearer to attention by its terror and pity."
Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 9 '24 720w

"The author has accomplished a difficult feat in making a play on this theme that is wise and humorous and tender."
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:95 Ap '24

VAN HOOK, LA RUE. Greek life and thought. 329p il $3.50 Columbia univ. press [16s Milford]
913.38 Greece—Civilization. Greek literature
23-15286

A portrayal of Greek civilization which sums up the conditions of Athenian life chiefly in the age of Pericles and the period immediately following. Nearly half the book is given to a study of Greek literature and the Greek contribution to human thought in the realm of philosophy and science. There is a 20-page bibliographical appendix. Index.

"Although Van Hook's treatise presents nothing that scholars did not know before, it is a notably thorough and solid compendium of facts belonging to many branches of classical philology and archaeology. In a work so comprehensive it is inevitable that statements should occur which the specialist may query or which, he may think, require qualification. The illustrations, in general, are chosen wisely, but it is a pity that a better map of Greece could not have been provided." C. B. Gulick
+ — Am Hist R 29:589 Ap '24 520w

"A book which is equally well adapted to the use of the general reader, who wishes to inform himself upon this interesting topic, and to that of the student to whom is recommended a course in classical civilization to make up, as it were, for his discarding the study of the Greek language at first hand." E. J. C.
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 22 '23 1200w

"Like most guidebooks, this is distinguished more for data than for original deductions or acute observations. In fact, the author's criticism is decidedly barren. The literary criticism is correspondingly thin; the style of the Iliad is described as 'noble and dignified.' But one must not judge this book by standards which it seldom claims. It is primarily a guidebook. As such, it is adequate and attractive, well-organized and indexed." W. R. A.
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a N 11 '23 350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p80 F 7 '24 120w

VAN LOOT, CORNELIUS OBENCHAIN, pseud.; ELPHINSTONE, MURGATROYD, pseud.; KILGALLEN, MILTON, pseud. Collector's whatnot. 147p il $2.50 Houghton
817
23-17751

A take-off on the gentle art of antique collecting, written somewhat in the manner of the celebrated Dr Traprock. The book consists of a series of articles purporting to have been written by the various members of the American Academy for the Popularization of Antiquities founded by Eben S. Twitchett, B.B.S., Cornelius Obenchain Van Loot, D.A., C.O.J., Raymond L. Pry, A.B.A.M., S.I.W., and Professor Milton Kilgallen, F.R.S. of Balliol college. The seriousness of the society may be judged from two of the prized possessions of its members: an "old Dutch ovenside chair with the rare pretzel back"; and "a well-preserved file of Police Gazettes, running back to that celebrated issue in which Lillian Russell's portrait appeared for the first time."

"Once in a while we come upon a book of humor that arouses in us feelings of mingled envy and delight. When we read 'The Collector's Whatnot,' for instance, we were torn with jealousy at the thought of the pleasure that the author—or authors—must have had in writing it."
+ Bookm 59:95 Mr '24 80w

Cleveland p59 Jl '24

"Text and illustrations combine to create an amusing take-off of the cult of antiques and 'semi-antiques'—and antiquarians who don't take themselves too seriously will be the book's best appreciators." M. L. Franklin
+ Ind 112:52 Ja 19 '24 180w

"The maker, or makers, of this had an excellent idea, but the book hardly rises to the opportunity. There is abundant room for playful satire upon the collecting mania, but it really calls for subtlety and delicacy of handling. This for the most part is mere burlesque, farce that is rather too much of the horseplay order to be greatly entertaining."
— + Lit R p748 My 10 '24 130w

Reviewed by S: C. Chew
Nation 118:118 Ja 30 '24 190w

"Gorgeous satire. It has the full meed of maliciousness that it requires and it puts its finger unerringly on the Achilles heel, legs, body, shoulders, arms and head of the professional collector." H. J. Mankiewicz
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 13 '24 520w

"'The Collector's Whatnot,' in spite of reactionary tendencies, has performed a useful service. While the reader need not admit anything that may tend to incriminate or degrade, it is well now and again secretly to take stock of one's guilty knowledge of certain contents of the ancestral nest." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Tribune p22 Ja 6 '24 1550w

"On the whole, an amusing book. It is hard to keep up a burlesque and be funny throughout a volume, but this one stands the test at almost any point."
+ — Outlook 136:154 Ja 23 '24 320w

VAN RENSSELAER, MAY (KING) (MRS J. K. VAN RENSSELAER), and VAN DE WATER, FREDERIC FRANKLYN. Social ladder. 309p il $4 Holt
917.47 New York (city)—Social life and customs
24-12009

An insider in the life she describes writes this survey of New York society from its beginnings in a circle of Dutch gentry in New Amsterdam who brought society across the Atlantic from Holland at a time when, according to the author, "the Netherlanders were the most cultured people in Europe." She lingers over these times and the early social leaders whose names have come down to today, also over the "Age of innocence" sixty years ago, the comfortable era of the brownstone front on fashionable Fourteenth street. She brings her story down to the present "jazz and gin" period, with chapters on Newport and Washington society and on the conquest of Long Island by rich New Yorkers who are trying to bring the English tradition into their country estates and sports.

Bookm 59:591 Jl '24 90w

"She has apparently known everyone worth knowing in New York. And her memories of them, brimmed with anecdote, are free from that malicious comment which in too many cases of books of this kind detract from their real value." Frances Bartlett
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 14 '24 1400w

Cleveland p95 D '24

"Students of life, familiars of the city as it is, amateurs of older times, old inhabitants and newcomers, insiders, climbers, resigned outsiders, may find entertainment each after his bent

VAN RENSSELAER, M. and VAN DE WATER, F: F.—Continued
or after her fashion in these pages. It isn't necessary to take them too seriously, but it is quite possible to enjoy them and even to profit by them. The chapters are frankly journalistic. They are not flattering, but they are reasonably objective." H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p3 Je 8 '24 2150w

"A very entertaining and informative history. . . There are many amusing anecdotes." Burton Rascoe
+ N Y Tribune p21 Je 15 '24 2250w

"Mrs. van Rensselaer, near the end of a long life, writes with frank, affectionate intimacy of the society in which she was born, brought up and married. . . An unusual book by a New Yorker, of New Yorkers and for New Yorkers." M. M. Marshall
+ N Y World p7e My 18 '24 950w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson
Outlook 137:363 Jl 2 '24 180w
St Louis p353 O '24

VAN VECHTEN, CARL. Tattooed countess. 286p $2.50 Knopf
24-21077

The Countess Nattatorrini at the age of fifty, a well preserved woman of magnetic personality, returns to her home town, Maple Valley, Iowa, to escape the ridicule of those who had witnessed the dénouement of her latest sensational love affair with a young French tenor. Altho the natives of Maple Valley leave no stone unturned to give the countess a royal reception, she is bored by the dull unimaginative lives of these people. Not until she meets the young idealist, Gareth Johns, who is stifling in the Maple Valley environment, does life once more become refreshing both for Gareth and the countess. So under the pretense of going to college Gareth secretly meets the countess and together they go on their way rejoicing.

Bookm 60:220 O '24 30w
Cleveland p84 N '24
Dial 78:76 Ja '25 180w

Reviewed by E. A. Niles
Ind 113:201 S 27 '24 430w

Reviewed by Gertrude Atherton
Int Bk R p772 O '24 1900w

"What a perfectly corking title Van Vechten has given this thoroughly readable book!" H. B. Liveright
+ Lit R p963 Ag 16 '24 1000w

"George Moore might make these people human and real. but Mr. Van Vechten is, in spite of all his efforts not European enough, and try as he will he cannot except at moments vivify his people. In spite of all his grace of style and his wit the book is hardly more than a very clever stunt, an effort to capture a spirit which the author admires." J. W. Krutch
— + Nation 119:241 S 3 '24 680w

New Repub 40:53 S 10 '24 160w

"The book is easy reading, entertaining and light, not only in the Summer, but in all the seasons of the year."
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '24 520w
Springf'd Republican p8 S 9 '24 480w

VAN VORST, MARIE (MRS GAETANO CAGIATI). Sunrise. 243p $2 Dodd
24-20552

"Oliver Devyne, a boyish American, of austere traditions and strict training, goes to Rome as secretary to the American Ambassador. While developing into an efficient diplomat and a successful poet, he falls desperately in love with the enchanting Principessa della Brenta, a married woman of questionable reputation. Thereafter follow various incidents during the course of a jealous and unsatisfied love, ascendant over conscience, family and ambition. But, in the end even after the Princess has declared her love for Oliver, she disappears, perhaps sacrificially because of his career, and goes to Alfieri, her professed lover, a courageous leader of the Fascisti."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p4 S 20 '24 410w
Cleveland p66 S '24

"A closer connection between the action and the political background might have corrected the slight tendency to fall apart, which is a fault of the book. Yet, though we may not love Oliver quite as much as Mrs. Van Vorst does, the book of his youth has no little charm and much truth in it."
+ — Ind 113:200 S 27 '24 300w

"In spite of this author's power of colorful phrase and very real sense of beauty, her books produce in the reader a constant feeling of resentment due to the fact that she has not subordinated herself to the grammar of the language, to the technique of coherent expression, or even to the realities of life." Stella Heilbrunn
— Int Bk R p901 N '24 270w

"As literature it is a total loss." H. P.
— Lit R p9 Ag 30 '24 100w

"This plot, simple and obvious, is often without plausibility. The narrative is impaired by faulty sentence structure and minor grammatical errors. Even in its brief accounts of the political regeneration of Italy, the book will not particularly appeal to thoughtful readers. Its sentimental romance, however, and the emotional charm brought to it by its author will probably please many readers."
— + N Y Times p13 Ag 31 '24 250w
— N Y Tribune p19 S 21 '24 500w

"Miss Van Vorst is not especially happy in her use of local color and only infrequently makes Italy live in her book. However, she is quite carried away with enthusiasm by the spectacle of the triumphant entrance of the Fascist troops into Rome, and here achieves some passages full of color, vividness and life." E. M. J.
— + N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 120w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p633 O 9 '24 130w

VAN WAGENEN, THEODORE FRANCIS. Beacon lights of science; a survey of human achievement from the earliest recorded times. 444p il $3 Crowell
925 Scientists. Science—History 24-23199

Brief biographical sketches of nearly two hundred representative men of science whose researches in the various branches of knowledge have had a notable part in the development of science. The list of names extends from Thales and Pythagoras to Marconi and Einstein.

Booklist 21:150 Ja '25
Boston Transcript p2 D 27 '24 750w
Eng N 93:840 N 20 '24 430w

"The author of such a history must possess two important requirements. He must have, first of all, a sufficiently broad acquaintance with the general field of science in order to present the stages of its development in their true perspective by selecting the proper illustrative material; he must also have a sufficiently thorough knowledge of each science in order to give an accurate account of the contributions that have been made by each individual worker In each of these two essentials Mr. Van Wagenen, as judged by his 'Beacon Lights of Science' is sadly deficient. . . Too large a proportion of the two hundred sketches are marred with evidences of carelessness, superficiality, and inaccuracy." C. A. Browne
Ind & Eng Chem 17:104 Ja '25 920w

"Much painstaking effort has evidently gone into the preparation of the book, which makes an excellent biographical encyclopedia of scientists, although it is so arranged as to afford a panoramic view of the developments of scientific knowledge through the ages, and so becomes also a sort of history of science."
+ N Y Times p20 N 23 '24 400w
R of Rs 70:671 D '24 40w

"A volume on this plan would be very handy in schools and libraries where quick access to information about the workers of science, especially those of our own day, is often wanted and hard to get. Unfortunately, the book in its present state cannot be commended for that purpose, for it abounds in errors, great and small." E. E. Slosson

— + Sat R of Lit 1:356 D 6 '24 400w

Springf'd Republican p8 D 16 '24 300w

VEBLEN, THORNSTEIN B. Absentee ownership and business enterprise in recent times; the case of America. 445p $3 Huebsch

330 Industry. Capitalism. United States—Economic conditions

By absentee ownership the author means not the control of land by absent owners, but a much larger thing underlying the whole established social order—the control of industry by business enterprise, the modern capitalistic system. He shows how this conception of private control, which is securely grounded in the common law and the moral sense of the people, is at the bottom of all the dissensions in industry and the paramount issue between civilized nations, guiding the conduct of their affairs at home and abroad.

"On the whole, the book is an acute economic analysis (with a decided tendency) for those who have the patience which endures to the end, for it is fearfully repetitious, exaggerated in spots, and lumbering in its style in spite of occasional brilliant phrases." A. J. Todd

— + Am J Soc 29:619 Mr '24 550w

Booklist 20:201 Mr '24

"Theoretical, analytical, iconoclastic and stimulating."

Cleveland p13 F '24

"Its statement is one of real significance, but its setting forth is wrapped around with layers of verbiage which are intricate in the extreme." Ordway Tead

Ind 112:234 Ap 26 '24 1050w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

Int J Ethics 35:101 O '24 800w

"The intelligent reader will not swallow Mr. Veblen's book whole, but instead will read it gladly for its endless suggestivenes for its unsparing criticism of current conventions that are generally accepted in discreet silence, for its pitiless dissection of popular beliefs that rest on nothing better than tradition, for its keen discernment of underlying tendencies, for its sheer fun. It is a book for readers who are not afraid to think and laugh." H: R. Mussey

+ Nation 118:652 Je 4 '24 1000w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

N Y Times p14 Ap 13 '24 2400w

Reviewed by L. K. Frank

Pol Sci Q 39:509 S '24 2000w

Reviewed by J: M. Gaus

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 10 '24 1350w

VECKI, VICTOR G. Alcohol and prohibition, in their relation to civilization and the art of living. 165p $2 Lippincott

178 Prohibition 23-18093

In effect, the book is an argument against prohibition. It shows the legitimate use as well as the abuse of alcoholic beverages, the desirability of temperance and the difficulties in the way of the enforcement of the present law. The author believes that the law cannot be enforced until the majority is convinced of its wisdom, that prohibition laws can be really effective only when the desire for drink is controlled and that such self-control can be accomplished only by individual social education.

"If Dr. Vecki were to write a similar treatise of eating candy he might present somewhat the same kind of arguments. When you say that alcohol used in moderation is a pleasure and a stimulant, you have said it all. No books of this type will aid in repealing laws or in creating amendments giving us beverages containing any fair per cent of alcohol. No intelligent man, no matter how habitual his drinks have now become, will do anything but laugh at a book so crudely partisan which calls itself impartial."

— Boston Transcript p6 F 9 '24 260w

Int Bk R p189 F '24

"Dr. Vecki is no more capable than are most other people of making a judicial, unprejudiced discussion and survey of the question of prohibition, because he is convinced, and ardently so, that it is wrong in principle and bound always to be futile in practice. But if one reads Dr. Vecki's book with the knowledge always in mind that the reader must supply his own checks and balances for the author's statements he will find in it much interesting marshaling of medical opinion on the subject of the uses of alcohol in illness."

— + N Y Times p22 N 25 '23 350w

"He quotes extensively from the newspapers to show the alleged evils of prohibition. It will strike the casual reader that an author with a fairly sharp pair of shears could quote quite as extensively on the other side."

— Springf'd Republican p7a F 24 '24 360w

VEDETTE, pseud. See Williams, V.

VERHAEREN, EMILE. Five tales; tr. from ² the French by Keene Wallis. 96p il $2 A. & C. Boni

25-3196

"A collection of Verhaeren's adventures in the literature of terror." (N Y World) Contents: The inn of gentle death; In a village; The Horse fair at Opdorp; The three friends; One night.

Boston Transcript p5 D 27 '24 200w

"These bizarrely beautiful tales are written with the nerves as well as the mind. Their every sentence is a nervous discharge." E. R. Cheyney

+ Lit R p5 D 6 '24 750w

"The startling contrast, in Verhaeren's poems, between wistful, twilight simplicity, vague, half-pleasing sorrows and alien, implacable fate is implicit, likewise, in his prose. He conveys an exaltation of despair and suggests a stark panic. The mood swells irresistibly to crackling horror. It is as if he had snatched away the veil of complacent indifference with which the yawning abyss of the future is made endurable, even alluring, and forced unwilling eyes to stare into those terrible depths." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y Times p9 N 23 '24 1050w

"These sketches of village life, by the greatest of Belgian poets, are poetically conceived and written with exceptional charm and delicacy. Some of Frans Masereel's finest work is found among the illustrations."

+ N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 50w

"The first story, 'The Inn of Gentle Death,' is a masterpiece. It is such a story as only a poet could have written. The other stories are of lesser mould, yet they, too, are masterly." J. W. C.

+ N Y World p9e N 30 '24 260w

VERNON, FRANK. Twentieth-century theatre; with an introd. by John Drinkwater. 159p $1.50 Houghton [5s Harrap]

792 Theater. English drama

These chapters are mostly concerned with those illustrious years of the theater in England, the pre-war period of the twentieth century and the plays which were its great successes. According to the writer this already historic period of English drama began with "The Admirable Crichton" and ended, surviving into the war, with "Hobson's Choice" in 1916. There is a chapter on the wartime theater, which he calls the "theater of the flappers," one on post-war tendencies and another on the American play in England.

Reviewed by Brander Matthews

Int Bk R p113 Ja '25 400w

VERNON, FRANK—Continued

"It is true that Mr. Vernon writes pleasantly enough, but here he has given us rather the raw material for a book than the book itself. The material is there, but it is badly arranged and not properly digested."

— + New Statesman 23:744 O 4 '24 480w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

N Y Tribune p3 O 5 '24 650w

"Mr. Vernon strews his pages brightly with good sayings."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p526 Ag 28 '24 400w

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Deep sea hunters in the South seas. 265p $1.75 Appleton

24-4869

Fascinated by stories of the Far Pacific, the young deep sea hunters charter a vessel and with a capable crew start forth to those waters. Here they hope to get a cargo of black fish oil and adventure a-plenty. Needless to say they are not disappointed in the latter. Mutiny, whaling, pearl fishing are all in their romantic adventure. Also for the reader as well as for Tom and Jim there is a great deal of information concerning the South seas to be gleaned. Boys who have met before these young adventurers, the deep sea hunters, will be glad to accompany them on this cruise.

Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '24 60w

"It is told in a brisk style, with plenty of graphic conversation, and some of the characters are vividly and amusingly portrayed."

+ N Y Times p16 My 4 '24 120w

"It makes an informative and enjoyable book for boys."

+ N Y World p7e Mr 16 '24 80w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 30 '24 100w

VERRILL, ALPHEUS HYATT. Smugglers and smuggling. 327p il $4 Duffield

336.26 Smuggling 24-11582

This volume, Mr Verrill states, is the first to cover smugglers and smuggling in all its phases, lands and times and under all conditions. Smuggling is described as a whole, the interesting and picturesque as well as the basest and most despicable. The book also tells of the lives, adventures, dangers and methods of smugglers, and concludes with a chapter on "The long arm of the law." Partial contents: Smuggler pirates and pirate smugglers; The British smugglers; All aboard the lugger; Some picturesque smugglers; Smugglers of the orient; The greatest of all smugglers; The most despicable of smugglers; Smuggling methods and smugglers' tricks; True stories of smuggling.

Booklist 21:9 O '24

"It may not be a praiseworthy but it is certainly an entertaining page of history which Mr. Verrill unfolds." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 16 '24 850w

"There is much in 'Smugglers and Smuggling,' which should receive consideration from the thoughtful. And embryo authors, looking for plots for thrillers, will find no little material in this book, and promising 'leads' as to where more material is to be found. It is recommended heartily to all who are looking for reading which is off the usual track, although in no wise a momentous compilation."

+ N Y Times p7 My 18 '24 1500w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Outlook 137:282 Je 18 '24 30w

"We enjoy reading such a fascinating book as this." E. L. Pearson

+ Outlook 137:363 Jl 2 '24 100w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 1 '24 450w

VIAUD, LOUIS MARIE JULIEN. See Loti, P., pseud.

VILLARD, LEONIE. Jane Austen; tr. from the French by Veronica Lucas. 248p $4.25 Dutton [10s 6d Routledge]

823 Austen, Jane [24-11361]

This French appreciation of Jane Austen was presented as a doctoral thesis in 1915. It is a study of the novelist's treatment of woman, love and marriage, her psychology and art, her humor and satire, and her portraits of the gentry among whom she lived and wrote. Mme Villard's criticism is prefaced by R. Brimley Johnson's "New Study of Jane Austen."

Reviewed by S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 19 '24 1400w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey

Ind 113:76 Ag 2 '24 420w

"Mlle. Villard's study has something more than the freshness of outlook which is usually the chief value of an intelligent foreign estimate of an English classic; it is an important addition to the whole body of Austen criticism. It seems a pity that the editor and translator, while they were revising, did not reduce the staccato sentence-paragraphs of the original to something nearer customary English usage. Their omission of the bibliography and critical apparatus is perhaps justified, but nothing can justify the issue of an expensive work of criticism, which evey Janeite will want to refer to frequently, without an index." J. D. Ferguson

+ — Lit R p934 Ag 2 '24 400w

"Mlle. Villard's book in its translation scarcely supports the high standard which the French doctoral thesis has achieved. In her study of Jane Austen's social milieu, the lesser gentry among whom she lived and wrote, and of her attitude toward life, Mlle. Villard is finely critical." R. M. Lovett

+ — New Repub 39:250 Jl 23 '24 1000w

"Mlle. Villard's book shows at one and the same time the acuteness of the Gallic mind and the crudenesses of a doctoral thesis. She is everywhere so under the control of her fears that the book is a vast pile of bricks rather than a carefully planned and skillfully executed edifice."

— + N Y Times p6 Jl 20 '24 400w

"Altogether beautifully and delightfully done."

+ Outlook 138:215 O 8 '24 80w

"Her interpretation on the whole presents little that is new, but its orthodoxy takes on fresh interest from its emanation from a non-English source."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:10 Ag 2 '24 500w

"Mme. Villard's part of the book is a selection from her larger study of Jane Austen's Life and Work, a selection containing the strictly critical chapters. This study received the first award by the British Academy of the Rose-Mary Crashaw International Prize, and it is of unusual interest, not only because of its scope, but also because it is the work of a foreigner. . . We confess to finding a difficulty in making her criticism into one consistent whole that shall show us, once for all, the peculiar excellence of Miss Austen, that which distinguishes her from half-a-dozen other great novelists." J. B. Priestly

+ — Spec 132:206 F 9 '24 1300w

VILLARI, LUIGI. Awakening of Italy. 292p $4 Doran [10s 6d Methuen]

945 Italy—Fascisti movement. Italy—Politics and government [24-28706]

Fascism in Italy is here studied, not as an isolated movement, but in its relation to the whole political and economic situation in Italy since the outbreak of the World war. Its beginnings are sought in certain events and tendencies dating back to times before the war. The book explains Italy's position in the war and during her period of neutrality and follows political events since the Armistice to the elections of April, 1924.

Bookm 60:506 D '24 280w

Boston Transcript p2 N 8 '24 800w.

Reviewed by Tenney Frank
Nation 119:652 D 10 '24 800w

"When the author's personal sympathies are allowed for, the book gives an interesting account of the events which led up to Mussolini's dictatorship."
+ — Nation and Ath 35:756 S 20 '24 570w

"The book is well laid out and vigorously written. We note one minor, but not unimportant, point. The use of abbreviated dates, and the omission of the year even in the chapter headings, makes it difficult to place the events described. This is a fault especially common in books dealing with quite recent history."
+ — New Statesman 24:276 D 6 '24 200w

Reviewed by J: L. Heaton
N Y World p9e N 30 '24 780w

"Had Dr. Villari dealt with his subject on broader and less partial lines, giving more significance to facts, English people would now at last possess a valuable interpretation of this new and sane Italy."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p471 Jl 31 '24 1150w

VINAL, GEORGE WOOD. Storage batteries;
2 a general treatise on the physics and chemistry of secondary batteries and their engineering applications. 402p il $4.50 Wiley

621.354 Storage batteries 24-14190

"Is concerned mainly with the scientific principles involved and gives little attention to specific types of batteries. Only the more important applications are discussed."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:515 N '24

VINER, JACOB. Dumping; a problem in international trade. 343p $2.25 Univ. of Chicago press

382 Commerce. Dumping (commercial policy) 23-13343

Dumping is a questionable method of international competition which the author defines as "price-discrimination between purchasers in different national markets." He studies the prevalence of this practice, its economic significance to the dumping country and to the country dumped on, and the anti-dumping legislation which has been adopted to restrain the practice. Bibliography. Index.

"A book which bears witness throughout of the competence and detachment of its author, elucidates a subject hitherto obscured in a mass of biased polemic, and provides what must be, for the time being at any rate, the standard work on the subject with which it deals." F. D. Graham
+ Am Econ R 14:321 Je '24 1000w
Booklist 20:202 Mr '24
Cleveland p13 F '24

"This is the most complete and thoughtful study of dumping that has been made. It is a valuable contribution to our knowledge of practices in international trade. The author has rendered a distinct service both to students and to those responsible for our commercial legislature." T: W. Page
+ J Pol Econ 32:501 Ag '24 1200w

"It is a delight to read this book. Dealing as it does with a subject upon which so much emotion and so little reason has been expended, the detachment of the writer, his thorough grasp of principles, his close acquaintance with practice, and his careful circumscribing of his problem, unite to form a very worthwhile contribution to the history and theory of this phase of commercial policy." F. D. Graham
+ Lit R p507 F 9 '24 900w

"His book is a model of how to treat a controversial subject in a scientific manner. The style is perhaps unduly heavy, and the general attitude a little too restrained; but, if these are blemishes, at least they are faults on the right side." A. E. Zimmern
+ — Nation and Ath 34:768 Mr 1 '24 700w

VOGUE'S book of etiquette, by the editors of Vogue. 591p $4 Condé Nast press, Greenwich, Conn., for sale by Baker & Taylor

395 Etiquet

Every question about correct usage that is ever likely to come up is treated with good taste and good sense and not without readability in this comprehensive book of etiquet by the editors of Vogue. The book covers general behavior, dress, introductions, speech and conversation, letter-writing, table service and manners, entertaining, family events, the mixed family relations arising from divorce, the conventions of official Washington and etiquet in other countries.

Bookm 59:608 Jl '24 180w

"This book is astonishingly well written. It contains sterling philosophy, as well as minute instructions for very delicate occasions. . . It will be of great value to everyone who cares to consult it. It is the best thing of its type that has appeared in America." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 10 '24 480w

"The most outstanding excellence in this book is its analysis of the spirit behind good manners, the feeling which prompts an instinctive observance of the customary details of politeness. In such wise its own claim to distinction that it 'should serve not only to give etiquette's commandments, but etiquette's philosophy,' is justly made." E. W. C.
+ Lit R p875 Jl 5 '24 180w

"If I were asked to advise the fretful, fond American mamma in the way in which her difficult daughter should be led I should unhesitatingly say: 'Take her out of that finishing school at once, madam, and give her the 'Vogue's Book of Etiquette' to read. It will probably take less time; it will be much better for her disposition, to say nothing of her digestion and incidentally, it is much, much cheaper." Kathleen Millay
+ Nation 118:651 Je 4 '24 720w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky
N Y Times p4 Ap 27 '24 2100w

"It should please the best people and improve the next best."
+ N Y Tribune p29 Ap 27 '24 100w
N Y World p8e Ag 10 '24 720w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:305 Je '24

"The subject is rather terrifying, but the presentation here is at once thorough and reasonably simplified."
+ Springf'd Republican p14 Ap 11 '24 230w
Wis Lib Bul 20:173 Jl '24

VOLTAIRE, FRANCOIS MARIE AROUET DE. Voltaire's philosophical dictionary; selected and tr. by H. I. Woolf. 316p $4 Knopf [10s 6d Allen & U.]
844

"These short articles—extending from a paragraph to a few pages—selected by H. I. Woolf from Voltaire's 'Philosophical Dictionary' are on whatever happened to interest, stimulate, or antagonize Voltaire at the time—including most of the things under the sun. They range from one end of the alphabet to the other and (originally published as 'Questions on the Encyclopaedia') end with a series of rhetorical questions without answers, entitled 'Why?' "—Bookm

Bookm 60:97 S '24 100w

"That the deliverances get their brilliance from the art of a master stylist and literally bristle with epigrams goes without the saying. Offered as the revelation of a mind which regarded nothing human as alien to it, the book brings out Voltaire's many-sided intellectual make-up far more effectively than do the works which are usually listed as his chief contributions to literature." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 19 '24 650w

VOLTAIRE, F. M. A. de—Continued

"A wise old man was this ironical wit, whose writings did so much to prepare men's minds for the French Revolution. Like the English satirist, Swift, his words are still living, and not all the attractions of this rich age can woo readers away from this man whose advice to authors was to make their books 'infinitely agreeable.' " W: L. Chenery

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 27 '24 1350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p303 My 15 '24 1150w

[2] VON ENGELN, OSCAR DIEDRICH, and URQUHART, MRS JANE DALZIEL (MCKELWAY). Story key to geographic names. 297p $2 (6s) Appleton

929.4 Names, Geographical 24-12394

"Its successive chapters deal with geographic terms in general, with the names of continents, oceans, islands, of all the chief countries of the world and their important cities, lakes, rivers, mountains, and of the groups of States in the United States and their outstanding features. The meanings of all these names are explained, their origin indicated and their pronunciation given. In many of them is some sort of romantic story, human, interesting, likely to impress the memory. There are suggestions and advice as to ways of using the book, among them for the making of picture-name maps."—N Y Times

---

"The use of the book is facilitated by two indexes, one for names and one for places. If used as a supplementary handbook, it would, without doubt, be valuable in the upper elementary grades."

+ El School J 25:317 D '24 600w

"It is all told in an easily running narrative that quickly engages the attention and holds it as the story moves on rapidly from place to place."

+ N Y Times p12 Je 22 '24 300w

"The authors of this survey give an interest to what might have been a mere gazetteer by a careful examination into origins and meanings of the geographical nomenclature of the world at large. Very naturally they devote the greatest attention to their own continent, and indeed are often rather at sea as to derivations when they leave it. . . On their native heath, however, they are happier, and they display a wealth of history and picturesque memories in the explanations of American names."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p438 Jl 10 '24 500w

VORSE, MARY (HEATON) (MRS ROBERT MINOR). Fraycar's fist. 401p $2 Boni & Liveright

24-9266

A collection of fourteen short stories, varied as to subject matter and style. There is the tragic story of the Slovak steel worker, Steve Fraycar, who toiled away his life in the mills, leaving as his legacy only anger. Another story is the ironical tale of the beauty who married a blind man for peace, while the story of John Cuthbert, who shot the married Adelina to save his son from her wiles is still another type. Contents: Fraycar's fist; Twilight of the God; The girl who wanted a new face; The wallow of the sea; The other room; The hopper; The magnificent Suarez; The river road; A man's son; The halfway house; The promise; Huntington's credit; Northern lights; The red head.

"No discriminating reader of short stories can question this writer's technical ability. She has endowed her narratives with rare atmosphere in this volume."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 14 '24 300w

Cleveland p52 Jl '24

"The book is fairly well managed melodrama that satiates before it is done and then falls away like froth."

— + Dial 77:437 N '24 120w

"These stories are a disappointment, and a curious one. They have every appearance of vitality, even of a robust energy. Yet the stories, when read more or less consecutively in book form, lose their edge and individual flavor. They become wearisome because almost every one gives the reader some foreknowledge of the setting and psychology of the next, whereas each should have a large element of surprise to attain its full measure of effectiveness." Eva Goldbeck

— + Lit R p803 Je 7 '24 550w

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

Nation 119:265 S 10 '24 650w

"The title story in this collection should convince even a reader who has never heard of Mary Heaton Vorse that the American short story is at last escaping from its chains. If Mrs. Vorse had written only this she would need to be remembered, for 'Fraycar's Fist' contributes more than many a full-length novel —or for that matter, many an investigating commission's report—toward an understanding of a certain aspect of the American scene."

+ N Y Times p8 My 4 '24 850w

"Mrs. Vorse is too fine and subtle a writer not to realize the chasm between art and propaganda, and it is unfortunate, perhaps, that her title story introduces the reader to the latter form before he has had a chance to discover that Mrs. Vorse is really a first-rate story teller." D: Karsner

+ — N Y Tribune p25 Jl 13 '24 550w

"Mrs. Vorse writes in no man's tradition, nor woman's either. She writes of plain folks and in their idiom and finds in her subjects sources of strength. She has mined in overlooked crevices of American life." H. S.

+ N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 300w

"The stories give us the feeling of satisfaction that comes from work well and artistically done; they are all interesting and wholesome—some distinctly memorable, one or two really master-pieces—and, among other things, they make excellent reading aloud." E. M. J.

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 600w

Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

VROOMAN, JULIA GREEN (SCOTT) (MRS CARL SCHURZ). High road to honor. 299p $2 Minton, Balch & co.

24-22268

Written by the wife of the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture during the war, this is a political novel with Washington for its background. It has a highly idealized heroine, Mathilde Brandon, whose husband had led the fight against crooked business and politics in his state legislature, carrying the fight to Washington when he was elected senator. His chief issue is railroad legislation, and the climax of the book is reached in his speech for his cherished bill, made under the inspiration of his wife, who, miles away from him, is at the same moment fighting for her life and the life of her child.

Boston Transcript p6 D 27 '24 400w

"If 'The High Road to Honor' lives beyond the allotted span of the average novel—and we think it will—it will be due to the vivid and thrilling picture it gives toward the end of the story of an exciting session in the Senate when bill No. 1915 is up for passage. In describing this scene Mrs. Vrooman has more than justified the writing of her story. It is a fine and accurate piece of reporting and reaches a high level in descriptive writing." W. O. Tewson

+ Lit R p3 O 4 '24 400w

N Y Times p6 N 23 '24 400w

"There are some nice descriptive passages, and there is a genuine fire of idealism behind the author's conception. All her men, however, are heroes or villains: straight out of a political wonderland."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:169 O 4 '24 150w

W

WADE, HERBERT TREADWELL. Everyday [2] electricity; a simple introd. to common electric phenomena. (Useful knowledge bks.) 299p il $2 Little

621.3 Electricity. Electric engineering 24-15668

Explains the principles of electricity and its now familiar phenomena so that the electric light, electric motor, telephone, etc. may be better understood.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:515 N '24

WADE, HERBERT TREADWELL. Scales [2] and weighing; their industrial applications; with special reference to control of plant operation, transportation, and commercial transactions. (Ronald manufacturing management and administration ser.) 473p il $6 Ronald

531.7 Scales (weighing instruments) 24-4110

For executives of industrial concerns who are responsible for the purchase and maintenance of weighing machines for their plants. It covers the subject in all its phases with special emphasis on the relation of weighing to control of produce and thus of costs.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:506 N '24

WADE, JOHN DONALD. Augustus Baldwin Longstreet; a study of the development of culture in the South. 392p $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Longstreet, Augustus Baldwin. Georgia—Social life and customs 24-4512

Augustus Baldwin Longstreet, 1790-1870, was a Georgian of most varied talents who at different periods in his career was lawyer, politician, farmer, educator, author, preacher, newspaper editor and college president. His fame rests chiefly on a single book, "Georgia Scenes," humorous sketches of Georgia characters, manners and customs, which was immensely popular in his time and still remains a source book of the Georgia social scene during the first fifty years of the Republic. Mr Wade has used Judge Longstreet's career to frame a study of the development of culture in the South—especially in Georgia—from a period shortly after the Revolution up to the Civil war.

Reviewed by U. B. Phillips
Am Hist R 30:181 O '24 420w

"He has done a piece of work immensely creditable to the south, but one wonders if he will receive credit for it in the south." G. W. J.
+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ap 27 '24 1700w

"The book glides along like a romance, and yet it is all history." E. L. Pennington
+ Int Bk R p788 O '24 1850w

"His attitude is a representative one, which makes the study of his speeches and writings upon the subject of great historical interest and value."
+ Lit R p905 Jl 19 '24 400w

"Mr. Wade's account of this full, attractive life is written in a style in keeping with its subject—picturesque, humorous, and suggestive of the homely, kindly spirit which is middle Georgia's best heritage from early days." J. C. Harris
+ Nation 118:743 Je 25 '24 780w

"It is too bad this book isn't printed as well as it is written. It abounds in typographical errors. He hasn't given us an adequate picture of antebellum aristocracy in the South, but he has painted sympathetically and with humor 'the people in general,' of whom the Judge, ever consorting with the rich, certainly was not one. He has given to the writing of American history a decided forward propulsion. Since that is so, why cavil if he sometimes wears the wrong cuff buttons with his verbal dinner jacket?" Silas Bent
+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 2 '24 2100w

Outlook 137:319 Je 25 '24 440w

"An entertaining biographical work of secondary interest as a portrayal of character but of high merit as a picture of manners and embryonic culture in interior Georgia for four decades before the Civil war. This book combines the reliability derived from careful research with the animating force of a fresh, curious, humorous and impartial mind."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 8 '24 1250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p557 S 11 '24 220w

WADE, MARGARET. Social usage in America. 365p $2 Crowell

395 Etiquet 24-17965

The social secretary of a former vice-president and editor of a newspaper society column is the writer of this book giving the essentials of social usage. Running comment on the reasons for these conventions and illustrative examples of behavior which have come under the author's observation make the book something more than a collection of rules.

Ind 113:262 O 11 '24 200w
J Home Econ 16:658 N '24 100w

"The author of this very sensible book on the best social manners and customs of this country has been for twenty years a close observer of Washington society, both official and unofficial, and is also familiar with usages in other lands, so that her discussion of this subject is doubtless authoritative."
+ N Y Times p20 O 5 '24 300w

WALDO, FULLERTON LEONARD. Grenfell, [2] knight-errant of the North. 315p il $2 Jacobs

Grenfell, Wilfred Thomason 24-24148

This story of Labrador is based on the actual experiences of Dr Grenfell among his patients in the north. Mr Waldo has known him for many years and is acquainted with the territory of which he writes. The many incidents related show the simple Christian heroism of the doctor in his fight against disease, poverty and ignorance in this territory.

"His pictures of Eskimo life are excellent and instructive and any boy or girl—but most especially a boy—is sure to read the book several times over." R. W. Thompson
+ Lit R p12 D 6 '24 300w

"As a supplement to Dr Grenfell's books and a book especially fitted for boys and girls this book on the whole justifies itself."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 2 '24 200w

WALEY, ARTHUR. Introduction to the study of Chinese painting. 300p buck $20 Scribner [£3 13s 6d Benn]

759 Painting, Chinese A24-660

"Mr. Waley treats of calligraphy, and the beginnings of art-philosophy, the artists of the T'ang Dynasty, the Tun-huang paintings of the fifth and sixth century, landscapes, in color and monochrome, animals, birds and flowers, the art of the five dynasties (tenth century) Northern Sung, the writings and wall-paintings of Kuo Hsi, the Romantics of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries; the Dragons of Zen Buddhism, and the great artists, known as the Four Masters, one of whom, Ni Tsan, was also a poet."—Boston Transcript

"Excellent workmanship."
+ Booklist 20:290 My '24

"The volume is illustrated with six reproductions in color and with forty-two in half-tone. It is an admirable work." N. H. D.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 26 '24 800w

Reviewed by Alan Priest
Lit R p642 Ap 5 '24 1700w

Reviewed by Roger Fry
Nation and Ath 34:608 Ja 26 '24 850w

WALEY, ARTHUR—Continued

"The connection between Chinese art and Chinese poetry is exceptionally close, and what makes his book excellent is that it is written by one who understands the Chinese mind profoundly."

+ New Statesman 22:supviii D 8 '23 500w

"Mr. Waley has written an admirable book on Chinese painters. It is none the less valuable for the cautious spirit in which he discusses their works. He writes as one who desires to inform himself as a painter works to obtain true knowledge of his subject. This is an unusual quality in a writer on art." W: Rothenstein

+ Spec 131:845 D 1 '23 1050w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p105 F 21 '24 1750w

WALKER, JOHN. Rhyming dictionary of the
2 English language. 2d ed 549p $3.50 Dutton

426 English language—Rime. Rime

A new edition of the famous dictionary in which the whole language is arranged according to its terminations, with an index of allowable rimes; revised and enlarged by Lawrence H. Dawson.

N Y Tribune p17 D 7 '24 100w

Outlook 138:608 D 10 '24 20w

"A standard work as indispensable to poets as Roget's Thesaurus."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:436 Ja 3 '25 100w

WALKER, PERLEY F. Management engineering; the design and organization of industrial plants. 359p il $3.50 McGraw

658 Industrial management 24-6487

"Designed for classroom use, this book brings together authoritative information on many subjects, the methods described being in conformity with the best modern management practice. It is divided into two parts, the first dealing with the design and lay-out of manufacturing plants, and the second, with organization and administration."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:367 Jl '24

WALLACE, EDGAR. Green archer. 383p $2 Small [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

24-11553

"Old Abel Bellamy leaves America, which is treating him coolly, for the English countryside. He buys a castle with a ghost which immediately starts to haunt him. Of course, that supernatural explanation is all right for the natives but old Abel knows a tangible personality with murderous intent is back of it all. When a man resembling Bellamy is found on his estate with a green arrow in his heart, old Abel knows the game is up, and starts a losing fight for his life."—Springf'd Republican

"Even the most sophisticated must be exacting not to succumb to its manifold charm. If we are content to hold ourselves within bounds, we may say that it is a thriller that thrills and a mystery that mystifies."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 9 '24 260w

Cleveland p67 S '24

"The story is entertaining, but it would be a good deal better had it at least a bowing acquaintance with probability."

+ — N Y Times p9 My 18 '24 440w

"Certainly this is the most delirious, dizzy, double-ply detective story of the season." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p23 Je 8 '24 950w

Springf'd Republican p5a Jl 13 '24 280w

WALLACE, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Wooden
2 ships and iron men. 337p il $5 Sully [15s Hodder & S.]

387 Merchant marine—Canada

The sub-title describes the book as "the story of the square-rigged merchant marine of British North America, the ships, their builders and owners, and the men who sailed them." It is a compilation of records preserving whatever remains today of interest and value in connection with the old-time shipping of the maritime provinces of Canada, especially the ships and seamen of Nova Scotia.

"This story of the square-rigged merchant marine of British North America is carried over with a straightforwardness and a direct tang born of the nature of the contents." H. A. P.

+ Lit R p11 Ja 17 '25 150w

Reviewed by Arthur Warner

N Y Tribune p11 Ja 18 '25 660w

"His book is valuable, interesting and unexpectedly complete." Morris Markey

+ N Y World p9m Ja 4 '25 130w

"No book dealing with ships by one who knows the sea as Mr. Wallace does can be wholly dull, even for the general reader. Wild tales of heroism and hardship occur as it were incidentally."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p663 O 23 '24 900w

WALLACE, WILLIAM KAY. Passing of politics. 328p $4.50 Macmillan [12s 6d Allen & U.]

320 Political science [24-19197]

"In the introduction to this book we are informed that political organization, suited to an age when philosophy was dominant, is being replaced by industrial organization, the outgrowth of an historical mode of thought. A new pivotal factor is replacing politics as the cohesive element of social life. Then follow 300 pages of proof, in the course of which he deals with the evolution of Constitutional Government, political theory and practice, ethics, religion, liberty, equality, psychology, history, democratic progress, militarism, education, utilitarianism, and Socialism."—Spec

"If this interesting and provocative book has relieved us of much of the alarm with which we view politics, it has at the same time placed a tremendous responsibility on the shoulders of the industrial entrepreneur; for there is the new leadership." W: K. Holland

Boston Transcript p4 N 8 '24 1350w

"If his long sketch of historical evolution seems rather thin and unconvincing, it is perhaps because history is less of a science than Mr. Wallace supposes, and perhaps because for success he would need the erudition of Buckle as well as the synthetic genius of Mr. Wells. He is most interesting at the end of his book, where he seems to be hinting at, without quite discovering, the proposed state of economic pluralism which political theorists are now engaged in discussing." B. K. M.

+ — Nation and Ath 35:672 Ag 30 '24 100w

"Mr. Wallace has evidently read widely, though his references are not extensive. He is aware, generally speaking, of what is happening in the world of industry, finance, and diplomacy. But this book comes to an end before he has contrived to do more than indicate in rough terms what it is that politics is passing into."

— + New Statesman 23:628 S 6 '24 520w

Reviewed by James Luby

N Y Times p5 S 28 '24 1900w

"There is an excellent chapter in which the political theories of Stein, Comte, Marx, and Herbert Spencer are summarized and compared. But Mr. Wallace, it is to be feared, has also written some great nonsense." Robert Boothby

+ — Spec 133:566 O 18 '24 1300w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 25 '24 800w

"A lengthy, pretentious, very self-confident book, but it cannot be said to be an important one. Much of it is written in a sort of pontifical pseudo-scientific style, which is one of the least readable styles yet discovered."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p470 Jl 31 '24 1100w

WALLER, MARY ELLA. Deep in the hearts of men. 459p $2 Little 24-9785

Donald McQuade, coal miner, is the chief character in this new novel by the author of "The Wood carver of 'Lympus,'" but it is not a story of the mines, or the relations of capital and labor. The scenes are laid among the mountains of New Hampshire, West Virginia and the central Alleghanies of Pennsylvania. It is a story of the deeper and higher human interests, especially of a man's coming into spiritual light out of darkness. The fine things in life—courage, love, sympathy, self-sacrifice, real understanding—are in this book about Donald McQuade and his children and the two young people from the North, a man and a girl, whose coming to their village of Wenby in West Virginia changed the whole course of their lives.

Booklist 21:29 O '24

"We are never angry with the author for mediocre writing, which is well. Neither are we ever angry at man's inhumanity to man, and we wish she might have stirred us a little more toward that righteous emotion. It is just there that we think Miss Waller has not made the most of her opportunities." S. L. C.
— + Boston Transcript p4 My 14 '24 800w
Int Bk R p768 O '24 390w

"This book will appeal strongly to those readers who still have some faith in old-fashioned goodness, idealism, and even in romantic love as distinguished from the sometimes clinical 'realism' of the more modern schools of fiction. And it may be plausibly argued that there is more of real truth in the old-fashioned conceptions than in the current psychoanalytic subtleties." H. L. Pangborn
+ Lit R p932 Ag 2 '24 450w

"There is a somewhat involved and wholly uninteresting plot, with various coincidences of the most far-fetched kind."
— N Y Times p24 My 11 '24 220w

"Miss Waller's book is full of fine ideals and in that respect is commendable. As a story it falls short." Elizabeth Wyman
+ — N Y Tribune p23 Jl 27 '24 660w

"This writer is a yearning sentimentalist from the first chapter of her first book to this latest. She has a large following among readers who like a rich frosting on their sponge-cake."
— Outlook 138:214 O 8 '24 130w
Springf'd Republican p7a S 14 '24 100w

WALPOLE, HUGH SEYMOUR. The old ladies. 305p $2 Doran [7s 6d Macmillan]
24-23734

Three old ladies—Mrs Lucy Amorest, Mrs Agatha Payne, and May Beringer—all in their seventies, lodged on the top floor of a rickety old house in the cathedral town of Polchester. Mrs Amorest was a gentlewoman with "expectations"; Mrs Payne, a sensualist, with two passions in life—food and bright colors; May Beringer, a poor spinster whose only friend was her dog. Fate threw these three old ladies together and made them curiously dependent on each other. Tragedy even beyond that of poverty-stricken old age overtook Miss Beringer and Mrs Payne, but fate was kinder to Mrs Amorest, who was rescued from her loneliness by a long absent son.

Booklist 21:114 D '24

"Mr. Walpole has used some of the primary colors in the human spectrum, and has produced a picture rich in human interest, forceful in characterization, and clear in presentation." W: B. I. Blake
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 18 '24 1650w

"There is quiet humor and quiet tenderness in The Old Ladies. It is a little work of art. Mr. Walpole deserves all sorts of praise for writing it." M. K.
+ Cath World 120:424 D '24 360w
Cleveland p91 D '24
Ind 113:409 N 15 '24 20w
Ind 113:458 N 29 '24 400w

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz
Int Bk R p19 D '24 780w

Reviewed by Owen Johnson
Lit R p3 N 15 '24 650w

"Mr. Walpole's characters, situations, and backgrounds are real as he sees them, but he does not see them very profoundly. The result is that everything in the book is less important than it should be. He gives one the impression that he never goes so far as he should, because his craft is the chief thing to him, and he circumscribes himself as an artist to provide the most perfect conditions for it. Accordingly, the theme and the architecture of 'The Old Ladies' produce the same effect as those of his other novels: the regret that, with these promises of greatness, the whole should not be great. One recognizes the author's admirable mastery of his craft, but one suspects at the same time that what he describes is not life, but something very like it and parallel to it." Edwin Muir
— + Nation and Ath 36:158 O 25 '24 750w

Reviewed by J: Franklin
New Statesman 24:81 O 25 '24 1100w

"Mr. Walpole deserves credit for certain negative virtues—for avoiding a labored style, for never becoming false or artificial, for eschewing the conventional in style and structure. But beyond all that he is a true novelist, observing and writing by feeling and instinct, not by model or copybook rules. In other novels he has cut a larger cloth. In 'The Old Ladies,' however, he has spun a fragile theme with delicate skill."
+ N Y Times p10 O 12 '24 1400w

Reviewed by Mary Ross
N Y Tribune p6 D 7 '24 650w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y World p9e N 23 '24 400w

"Perhaps no one could make this slight story so appealing and so abiding in one's memory as Mr. Walpole, who, as always, writes sympathetically and with the reserve that is so great a part of true art."
+ Outlook 138:376 N 5 '24 110w

"Very far indeed from being his best work. It is not a wholly successful novel, but a novel it is, in its weakness as well as in its strength." Gerald Gould
— Sat R 138:370 O 11 '24 130w

"The book suffers from Mr. Walpole's divided intention, in spite of much careful patching-up and interlacing, and it suffers, too, from inflation. It starts like a novel and ends like a short story; in other words, it begins as a chronicle and ends as an incident. But the details are lively and exciting, the characters ably and sympathetically drawn, and the atmosphere of the provincial town admirably suggested; and the narrative, even when we must suspect Mr. Walpole of being not quite in earnest over it, is as thrilling as a good detective story." L. P. Hartley
+ — Spec 133:612 O 25 '24 750w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p628 O 9 '24 650w

WALSH, JOHN WILLIAM TUDOR. Elementary principles of lighting and photometry; with a foreword by Sir J. E. Petavel, and 85 diagrams by Frederick G. H. Lewis. 220p $4.50 Dutton [10s 6d Methuen]
628.9 Lighting. Photometry [23-11940]

"It is the aim of this book to provide a brief and simple guide to the solution of the problems most commonly met with in lighting engineering, and to give both an explanation of the faults which past experiences has shown

WALSH, J: W: T.—Continued
it necessary to avoid, and of the means available for the attainment of a satisfactory result in any given case."—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:365 Jl '24

"The book gives, on the whole, an excellent view of the subject, and it can be cordially recommended to all who wish to obtain a good idea of the scope of modern lighting science and practice." H. E. Ives
+ Science 59:531 Je 13 '24 1400w

WALSH, WILLIAM SEBASTIAN. Mastery of fear. 315p $2 Dutton
131 Fear. Mental hygiene 24-12129

Physicians say that a large proportion of their patients are victims more of fear than of the ailments for which they seek relief. Dr Walsh classifies and explains the various abnormal fears that beset the mind—fear of illness, public opinion, ridicule, old age and death, etc.—describes the directions which these fears take and advises how they may be conquered.

Booklist 21:93 D '24

Reviewed by J. A. Tobey
Int Bk R p39 D '24 150w

"This book was obviously written for the layman, and while it contains nothing which has not been said before, it does present the subject in a more popular manner than that of the more detailed scientific books." H. K.
— + Lit R p938 Ag 2 '24 230w

"A soothing and enlightening book." Van Buren Thorne
+ N Y Times p8 Ag 31 '24 1700w

WALTER, HUBERT CONRAD. Modern foreign exchange. 194p $2 McBride [5s Methuen]
332 Foreign exchange [24-6169]

"Mr. Walter has endeavoured to make plain to the ordinary student such subjects as inflation, purchasing power parties and other post-war nightmares. This is the distinguishing feature of a book which does not neglect matters customary to works on foreign exchange." Spec

"The book is more up-to-date than Wither's Money Changing, yet it is not as clear or as popular in its style. Neither is it as complete or as scholarly in its character as Spalding's Foreign Bills and Foreign Exchange, which I personally consider to be the best English volume that has been publishd since that of Lord Goschen." I. B. Cross
Am Econ R 14:558 S '24 480w

"The book is obviously written by a student of the subject and should be a worthwhile addition to the rapidly growing list of foreign exchange publications." J. G.
+ Bookm 59:adv My '24 120w

"This small volume is a brief but commendable attempt to explain in simple and non-technical language the working of the modern foreign exchange. It has been written primarily for bankers and businessmen, but other students of economics will probably find it useful as a summary of economic problems in the light of post-war experiences."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 5 '24 250w

"While Mr. Walter's book possesses definite merits, its usefulness in this country will be impaired by the fact that the subject is treated wholly from an English standpoint."
+ — N Y Times p2 My 25 '24 600w
R of Rs 70:109 Jl '24 50w
St Louis p371 N '24

"The book is obviously an outcome of practical experience, combined with a thoughtful outlook on international affairs; it makes short work of many current illusions, and a reader should become well equipped with up-to-date knowledge."
+ Spec 131:1037 D 29 '23 150w

"This book, which is complete to the end of 1922, satisfies an undoubted want. It is sound and carefully argued, it is complete for the period it covers, and it is easily understood. This simplicity is a matter of great moment, for, as the author points out, an understanding of the foreign exchanges is required not only by the specialist, but also by the ordinary citizen of to-day."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p772 N 15 '23 220w

WARD, ARTHUR SARSFIELD. See Rohmer, S., pseud.

WARD, CHRISTOPHER LONGSTRETH. Gentleman into goose. 77p il 85c Holt [2s 6d T. W. Laurie]
817 Parodies

"This fantasy, inspired by Mr. Garnett's 'Lady into Fox' tells how Mrs. Teapot, troubled with the care of her farm, to which her idle husband contributes nothing but criticism, one day in desperation wishes him a goose. Mr. Teapot immediately turns into a great grey gander, and henceforth life on the farm becomes simpler for Mrs. Teapot. All would have gone well but for feminine jealousy. Mr. Teapot's philandering with the plumpest and most personable goose on the farm leads to tragedy."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Lit R p906 Jl 19 '24 180w

"A really good joke, a successful parody on a first-rate book. And that, after all, is rather a rare thing." Ralph Wright
+ New Statesman 23:131 My 10 '24 180w

"'Gentleman Into Goose' satisfies all the demands of good nonsense. It is absurd and preposterous from beginning to end." J: Carter
+ N Y Times p2 Jl 27 '24 1500w

"This little book is a masterpiece of parody. It will stand alone as a piece of humor, as a conceit of writing, and as a satire for shiftless husbands and dominant wives." Laurence Stallings
+ N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 480w

"A very clever parody of 'Lady into Fox.' The ironic points are made much more obvious, and the archaic language is much more emphasized than in the original; but no more than is legitimate and indeed almost necessary in a parody."
+ Sat R 137:488 My 10 '24 80w

"The 'wooden engravings' by C. W. and C. W., Jr., that illustrate the book, are take-offs of a most amusing sort, and Mr. Ward has adopted Mr. Garnett's adopted style with a large measure of success."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:17 Ag 2 '24 220w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p290 My 8 '24 180w

WARD, CHRISTOPHER LONGSTRETH. Twisted tales. 217p $1.60 Holt
817 Parodies 24-24489

In his second book of parodies Christopher Ward gives some lively travesties of Fanny Hurst, Willa Cather, Carl Van Vechten, Booth Tarkington, and others. And it is not alone the novelists who are parodied. Both the new biography and the new poetry are held up to clever caricature.

Bookm 60:511 D '24 180w

"Some of the parodies have in them a note of contempt which makes Mr. Ward a critic with a very sharp pen. But, essentially, his note is one of good humor, and it is a humor that is contagious." Ernest Boyd
+ — Ind 113:37 O 25 '24 220w

"Made up of laborious and generally uninspired imitations of contemporarily popular writers." H. J. Mankiewicz
N Y Times p23 N 2 '24 160w
Outlook 139:37 Ja 7 '25 30w

"Christopher Ward has done it once again. Here is another book of excellent parodies." Margaret Widdemer
+ Sat R of Lit 1:379 D 13 '24 800w
Springf'd Republican p10 D 23 '24 250w

WARD, FRANCIS KINGDON. Romance of plant hunting. 275p il $4.20 Longmans [12s 6d E. Arnold]

581.95 Botany—China. China—Description and travel. Plants—Collection and preservation [24-17693]

The book is devoted to the kind of plant hunting which supplies nurserymen and plant breeders with material and gardens with novelties. The experiences described are based on six plant hunting excursions in western China, Burma and Tibet. Beside its account of flower hunting and seed collecting the book is a description of personal adventure, scenery and travel in the countries visited, illustrated with photographs.

Boston Transcript p2 My 17 '24 550w

"His books reveal him to have more general qualities than those absolutely necessary for the collecting of seeds, and among them ability to describe scenery and travel in a way to make them vivid for the stay-at-home. The layman will find intensity of observation which makes a specialist interesting to every curious mind and turns a record such as this into a human document."

+ New Statesman 23:170 My 17 '24 300w

"Captain Ward writes interestingly, with unexpected, vivid touches of phraseology, with sentiment and with the ability to imbue his printed page with the feeling of his own enjoyment of his varied experiences."

+ N Y Times p28 Je 8 '24 400w

"In spite of a forced emphasis and rapidity in transition, which occasionally suggest the cinema, Captain Ward's stories of travel on a disturbed and difficult border display striking descriptive gifts. These lands have burnt or soaked themselves deep into him, and he has the faculty of communicating his impressions."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p169 Mr 20 '24 1050w

WARD, GILBERT OAKLEY. Publicity for public libraries. 315p $2.40 Wilson, H. W.

021.7 Library advertising 24-23062

Written by the Technical librarian of the Cleveland public library this is a practical book of methods by which the library may get and keep itself known. These methods include not merely formal advertising, library news, publicity campaigns, etc., but other forms of library service which are only indirectly advertising. These latter include library lists and bulletins, talks or printed matter giving information about the library, and other educational methods. All these various means are explained in detail and illustrated.

"A clear statement of principles and methods, meant principally for the librarian of briefer or less comprehensive experience, for trustees, for assistants and students, who may be called upon to plan publicity for a medium-sized or smaller library."

Library J 49:788 S 15 '24 170w

WARDLAW, CHARLES DIGBY. Fundamentals of baseball. 94p il $1.75 Scribner

797 Baseball 24-8033

From a fifteen years' experience in teaching baseball in Columbia University summer sessions, the author explains the technique and mechanics of the game—the underlying principles of throwing, pitching, catching, batting and base-sliding, with illustrations from photographs. There is a chapter on coaching a team and one on testing the mechanics of baseball.

Booklist 21:14 O '24

"Pedagogic in tone and pretty elementary; most ten year old kids on the sand lots would scorn it." T. R. Coward

— Bookm 59:596 Jl '24 20w

Boston Transcript p3 D 27 '24 150w

Outlook 138:182 O 1 '24 20w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:322 Je '24

St Louis p348 O '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:123 My '24

WARE, NORMAN. Industrial worker, 1840-1860; the reaction of American industrial society to the advance of the industrial revolution. (Hart, Schaffner & Marx prize essays) 249p $2.50 Houghton

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—United States. United States—Economic conditions 24-4600

The preoccupation of historians of the period from 1840 to 1860 with the slavery issue has obscured other important social and economic developments of these two decades. It was a time of industrial upheaval, of great national prosperity accompanied by a lowering of the standards of the workingman. It is the purpose of the book to study the conditions from which the industrial revolution took its rise and to trace and interpret the labor movements and experiments which developed.

Boston Transcript p6 Je 14 '24 440w

Cleveland p56 Jl '24

"This volume is a highly significant contribution to the literature of social economics, for it deals with hitherto neglected phases of one of the most important periods in the history of this country. The author traces out with exceeding clarity the changes following the introduction of the factory system. Professor Ware writes interestingly even when discussing details. The volume is highly documented." M. W. Willey

+ Lit R p889 Jl 12 '24 300w

Reviewed by Leo Wolman

New Repub 40:77 S 17 '24 1650w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:303 Je '24

R of Rs 69:560 My '24 70w

Wis Lib Bul 20:172 Jl '24

WARNER, FRANCES LESTER (MRS MAYO HERSHEY). Groups and couples. 309p $1.75 Houghton

814 23-17451

More sketches of family life by the author of "Life's minor collisions." She touches off with humorous understanding some family customs and laws, moments of domestic drama like being locked out of one's house, the consequences of obeying the "do not open before Christmas" injunction, etc.

Booklist 20:212 Mr '24

"The art of the informal, humorous essay has perhaps no better exponent in America than Frances Lester Warner, and one opens her latest book with pleased anticipation. This little volume is to be recommended for reading aloud to the entire family; any attempt to read it individually will only result in constant eruptions of, 'Now listen to this!'"

+ Bookm 59:90 Mr '24 120w

Reviewed by R. M. Montgomery

Int Bk R p724 S '24 550w

Wis Lib Bul 20:24 Ja '24

WARRACK, GRACE, comp. and tr. Une guirlande de poésies diverses; from the song of France. 181p il $2.50 Appleton [6s Blackwell]

841.08 French poetry—Collections

This little gathering of French poetry is not a comprehensive anthology, but rather a collection of poems which appealed to the translator and seemed to her suitable for translation. The first part consists of the Noëls and psalms; the second part, early poetry; the third and fourth parts, verse and prose belonging to recent times. Original and translation are given on parallel pages. The illustrations include some inserted colored plates and the music for some of the Noëls is given.

"It is a very pleasant selection indeed and the translation on the whole is excellent, particularly the early Noëls, which it is evident, is the sort of poetry Miss Warrack likes best." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 17 '24 300w

WARRACK, G., comp.—Continued

"One cannot help feeling that Miss Warrack's book represents purely a labor of love, a volume the making of which was an unalloyed delight. She has made no attempt to be systematic, to inform or impress the reader, to point a moral or adorn a tale, but offers her informal collection of beautiful or quaint things which she herself loves, for the enjoyment of others. . . There is a unity of atmosphere about the book, however, in spite of its diversity, a predilection for rather difficult verse forms and a taste for the quaintly, quietly beautiful, showing personality as well as thought behind the making of it."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ap 30 '24 380w

WASHBURN, ROBERT MORRIS. Calvin Coolidge: his first biography; from cornerstone to capstone to the accession. 150p il $1.50 Small

B or 92 Coolidge, Calvin 23-15241

"The first biography of Calvin Coolidge, written by one who was closely associated with him in his work for a period of five years. It is decidedly eulogistic in style and stresses the president's characteristics through anecdotes and numerous quotations."—Cleveland

"The book is no profound analysis of a great character."

— Bookm 58:674 F '24 140w

"That it is far more an appreciation than it is a genuine biography must be the conclusion of the reader who lays it down. One cannot help the feeling that more biography and less eulogy would have been better in the end." E. J. C.

— + Boston Transcript p4 O 20 '23 600w

Cleveland p8 Ja '24

Cleveland p46 Je '24

"Mr Washburn's phraseology and typographical arrangement are somewhat capricious, and the material is not always so clearly organized as one could wish."

— Springf'd Republican p10 N 28 '23 270w

WASSERMAN, JAKOB. Gold; auth. tr. by Louis Collier Willcox. 431p $2.50 Harcourt

24-11234

"'Gold' is a long story covering with some detail the life and the adventures during a period of forty years of Ulrika Woytich, who makes her first appearance in the book as a heroine of the dreadful Ring Theatre fire in Vienna in 1881, and who soon reveals herself thereafter as the attendant dark angel of the family Mylius. Ulrika, indeed, seems to have pulled Josephine Mylius out of the fire in order that she may plunge the house of the rescued girl into the uttermost blackness of disaster. Herr Mylius is a millionaire, a fact which he conceals from his wife and children and those unfortunates live meekly a life of oppressions under his rules of economy and seclusion. Ulrika, becoming a favored guest after her bravery at the Ring, soon changes the order of things in the household. Cunningly she works out of Mylius the secret of his wealth. Armed with her knowledge and equipped with a tactful and persuasive tongue, she stirs the family into insurgency and costly indulgences. For the enterprising Ulrika graft accumulates while the family decays. And in the story of the Mylius downfall is that sad tale of gold which Herr Wasserman has spread over more than 400 pages of clever telling."—N Y World

Booklist 21:29 O '24

Boston Transcript p3 My 24 '24 360w

"Shows a creative force that is still dynamic, but that has deteriorated through the dominant influence of unbalanced emotion."

— + Dial 77:347 O '24 100w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey

Ind 112:317 Je 7 '24 150w

"He writes of the grand, the torrential, the overwhelming, and gives them plausibility. He exercises so potent an influence over the imagination of his readers, he is so brilliant a creator of characters and a deviser of plots, that it is with difficulty we realize we are reading fiction and not a record." Harry Salpeter

+ Int Bk R p606 Jl '24 650w

"It is a noble book, vibrant and colorful, every page of its 431! Once you begin it, put it aside without reluctance if you can!" Walter Yust

+ Lit R p883 Jl 12 '24 320w

"So skilfully does Wasserman handle his gigantic story, covering nearly eighty years of time and touching the crises in the lives of innumerable people, that the reader is hardly aware of its complexity. So cunningly are all the events drawn to a focus that when the two powers come face to face at last for a final struggle over the one representative of the family not yet lost, the battle seems to be for the soul of man itself." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 119:218 Ag 27 '24 1200w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 39:51 Je 4 '24 900w

"A novel of quiet epic sweep and grandeur."

+ N Y Times p13 My 18 '24 1200w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas

N Y Tribune p21 My 25 '24 1000w

N Y Tribune p7 D 21 '24 20w

"This book, like 'The Goose Man,' will afford cause for disappointment to readers who build their expectations upon its author's great work, 'The World's Illusion.' It is, nevertheless, in its narrower way, a book of interest and importance." E. W. Osborn

+ — N Y World p6e My 11 '24 540w

"Wasserman at length sacrifices art to ethical effect, and the story ends in a melodramatic setting. Yet the work is strong, subtle, and modern. The characters all move through the tale in a perfectly natural way, as if they were creations of nature. The work essays a large scale and attains it."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 700w

Wis Lib Bul 20:214 O '24

WATES, GEORGE FREDERICK. Religion of wise men. 127p $1.50 Doran [4s 6d Allen & U.]

201 Religion 24-17720

This little book deals with the subject of a universal religion, not in the sense of one great church organization but as a generally accepted body of principles governing our lives and binding the peoples of the earth more closely together. After considering the general attitude of such a religion, the author states the fundamental principles on which a religion of wise men should rest.

"Minds that find satisfaction in perfect freedom of discussion in matters religious will welcome this unprejudiced plea for a universal religion." E. E. F.

+ Bookm 59:adv Mr '24 80w

"The book is frankly and fearlessly iconoclastic and even ruthless in its manner. It is very largely negative and antagonistic." T. C. R.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 17 '24 140w

J Religion 4:332 My '24 40w

WATKINS, MARY FITCH. First aid to the opera-goer. 367p il $3 Stokes

782 Opera—Stories, plots, etc. 24-25348

The stories of forty-two of the better known operas are told in popular style. There is an introduction by Scotti in which he makes a plea for municipally supported opera houses like those of Italy.

Booklist 21:101 D '24

"Not only are the stories told with verve and sparkle, but there is a running comment on the music. It is an admirable handbook." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p11 N 8 '24 50w

"A highly interesting book for those who go to the opera. And also for those who cannot."
+ Outlook 138:261 O 15 '24 30w

R of Rs 71:112 Ja '25 200w

St Louis p408 D '24

"She goes a long way toward making these operas understandable so that one who reads may get an idea of what is being carried along by the singers on the stage, scene for scene."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 4 '24 180w

WATSON, E. L. GRANT. Innocent desires. 284p $2 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d J. Cape].

Fourteen short stories, the scenes of which are mostly laid in Australia. They are chiefly concerned with the love between men and women of different races. Contents: Out there; The case of Sir Reginald James Farquarson; Man and brute; The cave of Corycus; The mediator; Boy and girl; The diamond; Black wedgwood; White and yellow; A raison d'être; Gnilgie; A farewell; The last straw; Friend and neighbour.

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith
Lit R p8 D 20 '24 600w

"The best story in the volume is 'Man and Brute.' In exactitude and completeness it could hardly be bettered. Its movement is relentless, yet there is hardly an unnecessary or a cruel touch in it. None of the other stories is so good, but all, except 'The Last Straw,' a sententious and melodramatic dialogue between a philosopher and his second ego, have the mark of an original and sincere mind." Edwin Muir
+ — Nation and Ath 35:782 S 27 '24 520w

"There are several stories in Mr. Grant Watson's Innocent Desires which are achievements of a higher order. They show, although in a tentative and hestitating way, a power akin to that of Mr. Lawrence. But there is evidence of a capacity for more restraint and more balance." J: Franklin
+ New Statesman 24:18 O 11 '24 120w

"Each of the stories is unique in mood and treatment. The range is amazing."
+ N Y Times p8 D 7 '24 700w

N Y World p9e D 14 '24 550w

"The more violent the subject of the story, the more masterly is the author's treatment of it. The best thing in the book is an absolutely brutal story of a fight between a man and a dog. This is an exceedingly fine and striking piece of work. Although the collection is noteworthy, the author does not seem quite at ease in the medium of the short story."
+ — Spec 133:706 N 8 '24 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p594 S 25 '24 390w

WATSON, E. L. GRANT. Moods of earth and sky. 223p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

504 Nature 24-22937

A series of notes, in diary form, on the everyday happenings in nature, as witnessed by the author during the daily round of life in southern England, from winter through the year to winter again. The descriptions are interspersed with his own reflections on the beauty of the events he witnessed. Illustrated with a number of original sketches in black and white.

"He is capable of large and noble reactions to the punctual procession of English seasons, following one another across English landscapes. A little more imaginative daring, a little more originality, and such pages would undoubtedly have a long life."
+ Dial 77:525 D '24 130w

"Mr. Watson's diction is simple and distinguished; his interpretations have breadth and space and æsthetic validity." Michael Nadel
+ Lit R p5 O 11 '24 1400w

"The book is a rest and an exhilaration. It gives contact with an endless ebb and flow of pure being; it touches, somehow, the fount of all life. It is a grateful evidence of sanity and love and endurance. It is incidentally, a stirring tribute to Grant Watson's native land." J: N. Crawford
+ N Y Times p12 Je 1 '24 1600w

"It happens to be that rare miracle, a private journal, with no trace of literature or self-consciousness, which lets one into the life and thought of a sensitive and beautiful creative intelligence." J. C.
+ N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 600w

Outlook 137:401 Jl 9 '24 120w

WATSON, FLOYD ROWE. Acoustics of buildings; including acoustics of auditoriums and sound-proofing of rooms. 152p il $3 Wiley

534.84 Acoustics, Architectural 23-10310

"Summarizes the somewhat scanty information on the action of sound in buildings, and gives methods for acoustic design of new buildings and for correction of defects in existing structures. Brief attention to vibration in buildings."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:308 Je '24

WATSON, GILBERT. Amazing guest. 377p $2 Houghton

24-20722

"A fanciful romance woven about a house-party in Scotland. The hero is a delightful fellow, untrammeled by the ordinary conventions or motives of those leading a normal humdrum existence. Few people can resist the charm of his magnetic personality, and he is invited by a man whom he has met but once—and that most informally—to be his guest at his home in Scotland. There he meets his host's governess, a beautiful, lovable girl, with a dual personality. One side of her nature is normal and practical, and it is this part of her that is engaged to and deeply in love with a clerk. The other side of her nature, of which she stands in constant fear, is quixotic—impulsive. Although, previously, she has kept this part of herself in check, it is hypnotized by the charms of the 'fairy man,' and causes her to break her engagement with her fiancé. The practical part of her dual personality finally asserts itself however, just in the nick of time."—N Y World

---

"Will not cause readers to burn an extra quantity of midnight oil, but it makes pleasant reading between seasons." K. W.
— + Lit R p9 S 13 '24 200w

"There is no reason why 'The Amazing Guest' may not bring pleasure to those sensitive readers who desire more than the mere reality. Mr. Watson's style is sufficiently charming to carry the reader along, and no one will dispute his philosophy who is at all tinged with the delicate paganism that is apparently the animating influence behind the fairy man."
+ N Y Times p17 S 21 '24 470w

N Y Tribune p15 N 2 '24 130w

"While well-written and having considerable charm, the story is not altogether convincing, and is inclined to be somewhat tedious." G. H. S.
+ — N Y World p7e S 21 '24 220w

WATSON, ROBERT. Gordon of the lost lagoon. 271p $2 Minton, Balch

24-22118

Cheerful little Douglas Gordon and his faithful dog "Bones" were familiar figures on the Vancouver docks. Douglas knew little about his real mother except that she was a lady, but his devoted foster-mother, Mrs Berry, prior to her death left in the child's safe-keeping two envelopes to be opened on his twenty-second birthday. With this inheritance Douglas embarks on his career, first as newsboy and later as stevedore. Finally he becomes a beachcomber—and he runs full tilt into the headstrong and arrogant Ganns brothers. Interwoven thru Douglas' difficulties however, is the element of romance which results from the friendship between him and Sheila Campbell

WATSON, ROBERT—Continued
and her charming mother. Even "Bones" takes a vital part in this love story. There are dark hours for Douglas when Sheila refuses to marry him because of an unsolved mystery in her mother's life—but the contents of two large envelopes solve all problems and insure happiness for Sheila and Douglas.

"Mr. Watson has a combination of qualities which makes him a delightful story teller. His love of beauty, and passion for the outdoors, play as important a part as does the vividness with which he can describe Gordon's first battles with Harry Ganns."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 22 '24 390w

Cleveland p85 N '24

"It is a novel without any especial distinction, but there are sufficient fisticuffs and lovemaking in it to give it popularity." H. B.

— + Lit R p9 Ag 30 '24 200w

N Y Times p18 Ag 31 '24 500w

N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 70w

WATTS, MARY (STANBERY) (MRS MILES TAYLOR WATTS). Fabric of the loom. 268p $2 Macmillan
24-24345

Mrs Watts describes her novel as an attempt to set forth some of the differences between European life and standards and our own, as they would strike an American who had lived in Europe long enough to have become out of touch with her own country. It is thru the eyes of such an ex-patriate, returning to America after ten years' absence, that these contrasts are observed. Mrs Stevens, a well-born woman of good social position and somewhat Victorian traditions, comes back to St Louis with her daughter, of debutante age, who has been educated in Europe. The Americanization of Natalie Stevens, begun on shipboard, progresses briskly in her new home, but her mother is obliged to adjust herself to the social standards of another civilization as well as to the changed ideas of the younger generation.

"Mrs. Watts is exceptionally able, exceptionally intelligent and clear-sighted. This latest book of hers has in it a good deal that is worth while; only the reader can not help feeling that had she worked over it more, delved more deeply into her subject instead of for the most part merely touching it here and there, the novel might have been much more important than she has made it." L. M. F.

+ — Int Bk R p60 D '24 750w

"If Mrs. Watts has a definite thesis in all this it is not clear. Her satire is plain, although not wholly just. One guesses that she would have a fusion of grace and reticence with freshness and eager interest in life."

N Y Times p9 O 19 '24 1100w

Reviewed by B. A. Rosenbaum

N Y Tribune p12 D 21 '24 700w

Outlook 138:376 N 5 '24 120w

WAUGH, ALEC. Myself when young; confessions. 259p $2.50 Brentano's [7s 6d G. Richards]
24-17684

"Now and then a book simply grows out of a writer that is neither biography, fiction, essay nor anything else that may be placed under a specific category. Alec Waugh has written such a volume in 'Myself When Young,' and he has done it with an amusing mingling of sophistication and naïveté. . . Mr. Waugh is concerned primarily with his own reactions to life. The reader will find his book to be a smoothly running conversation in which all sorts of hobbies make their appearance. There is a deal about cricket, for instance. There is less about football. There are frank confessions about one's methods of literary creation. Chapters are devoted to literary speculations, to dramatic observations, to a Summer's trip to Norway with Clifford Bax, to the unnamed men and women observed in various restaurants and public places. All of this is flung together with a noble disregard for any particular literary form. Indeed, the book reads like nothing so much as a long evening's conversation with the author, a conversation in which Mr. Waugh has been persuaded to talk about himself and how he feels toward life."—N Y Times

"A wise and humorous book of a young man's thoughts on cricket, love, literature, London, and—more cricket."

+ Bookm 59:607 Jl '24 220w

"What strikes us as remarkable in this book of Alec Waugh's is the extraordinary wisdom and sanity of his viewpoints. Shylock's epithet might very truly be applied to him. Without affectation he appears to us as a very 'wise young judge.' Compared with much which is written in our own country by the younger generation, he impresses us as unusually sane." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 5 '24 800w

"From a literary point of view the book is trash from beginning to end."

— Dial 77:173 Ag '24 90w

"This vigorous young Englishman has written a frank, chatty chronicle of football and fantasy, cricket and criticism, without egotism, even without dragging in illustrious names."

+ Lit R p675 Ap 12 '24 340w

"Throughout the book is written with a delightful sense of humorous values that is never strained for effect. Although Mr. Waugh's opinions are sometimes fantastic and quite often bellicosely young, he never fails to outline these opinions with an ease and assurance that is less the result of premeditated art than of unaffected sincerity." Jean Wright

+ N Y Times p17 Mr 9 '24 1450w

"We do not cavil if Mr. Waugh parades some comparative nonentities as men of mark. The known are far from being always the fascinating, and 'x' in the artistic algebra allures the student. Our sole objection is that Mr. Waugh takes them and himself too seriously to be always amusing."

— Sat R 136:521 N 10 '23 850w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p722 N 1 '23 520w

WAUGH, FRANK ALBERT. Country planning; an outline of principles and methods; introd. by Kenyon L. Butterfield. (Farmer's bookshelf) 183p il $1.25 Harcourt

630.1 Country life
24-4047

"It is not merely physical improvement in money values and increased comfort alone that the author, who is Professor of Landscape Gardening in the Massachusetts Agricultural College, hopes may be attained by more efficient planning of countryside developments. He wants to see all this done in such ways as will bring out spiritual values and make them better appreciated and so he touches frequently on the importance of preserving and heightening the beauty of the landscape, of making the roadside attractive with trees and flowers, of so planning the farm home as to make it express the comfort, the content, the fullness, the appreciation of beauty which should be distinctive features of the life that goes on beneath its roof. He pleads also for recognition of the need of recreation and play in country life, and devotes a chapter to the discussion of parks and playgrounds."—N Y Times

"Answers admirably as a guide in the replanning of the physical side of country life. It is written in an easy, readable style with much excellent and practical advice from one well acquainted with the problems of the farmer and the rural community, and will appeal especially to the layman who is interested in studying the most practical and effectual means for permanent improvement of his home and neighborhood." Gertrude Sawyer

+ J Home Econ 16:273 My '24 300w

"It would be hard to think of a better short book for the rural shelf in home or library. As a wholesome chat on what rural life is in spots and what it may be made to be universally with proper country planning, the book has a great mission."

+ Lit R p907 Jl 19 '24 400w

"The outstanding feature of this little book is its practical quality. The author has a very clear vision of the objectives for which he thinks it worth while to work and an equally definite formulation of the methods by which they can be obtained."

+ N Y Times p24 F 24 '24 500w

"It is necessarily a book of suggestion rather than a work of exact science, but as such it is pleasantly and pungently written."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 24 '24 600w

"The raciness and forthright common sense which readers on rural subjects have long associated with Professor Waugh are at their best in this fresh contribution." G. S.

+ Survey 51:714 Mr 15 '24 120w

WEATHERFORD, WILLIS DUKE. Negro from Africa to America; with an introd. by James H. Dillard. 487p $5 Doran

326 Negroes. United States—Race question
24-18554

This book presents the vitally important problem of racial adjustment. It is a careful survey of the life and progress of the Negro beginning with his African background to his place in the social and economic life of today. Partial contents: African background of the Negro; The rise and fall of slavery in America; The free Negro; The religious life of the Negro; The Negro and the law; The Negro and education; The Negro and self expression; Negro leadership and self determination; Constructure movements.

"Honest-minded folk asking information as to their responsibilities, will do well to read Dr. Weatherford's book. It is harrowing, it is instructive, it is interesting. Above all it brings home to us a subject which it is our happy faculty generally to overlook." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 2 '24 500w

Cleveland p93 D '24

"In an appendix is a list of sources, each briefly reviewed, that will prove invaluable to any one planning to make a thorough study of the question, although the Weatherford book leaves little to be learned. It is an indispensable work, quite as much in place on a library table as in a college class room." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p908 Jl 19 '24 300w

"The book is poorly balanced; slavery overweights it, political development is almost absent, and while there is much economic information, economic interpretation is often lacking." W. E. B. DuBois

— + Nation 119:267 S 10 '24 700w

"No previous work on this subject surpasses Dr Weatherford's compilation of material in scope and in the good-tempered conviction with which he marshals facts and arguments."

+ N Y Times p18 N 30 '24 1100w

"Historically interesting and accurate the chief value of the volume will be found in the survey it makes of the conditions of the Negro to-day."

+ N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 350w

Outlook 138:215 O 8 '24 180w

St Louis p370 N '24

WEAVER, AMY. Office organization and practice. 144p il $1 Ginn

651 Office management 23-12122

The first eight chapters of the book deal with office organization and practice—mail handling, filing systems, orders, billing, purchasing, etc. The last four chapters deal more particularly with the duties of the executive in charge of the office and describe how he installs systems, manages people, hires new employees and keeps the office force working properly.

WEBSTER, HENRY KITCHELL. The innocents. 345p $2 Bobbs
24-22461

"'The Innocents' is a study in adolescent psychology. The author traces the development of a youth of high school age through the maturing experiences of a summer vacation during which he gradually emerges from his chaotic and inarticulate boyhood state and at last finds himself both sentimentally and intellectually."—N Y World

Boston Transcript p2 S 20 '24 390w

"'The Innocents' is painted on a smaller canvas than Mr. Webster's preceding novel, 'Joseph Greer and His Daughter.' But, if less impressive in scope and less striking in its character delineations, it is none the less distinguished by the insight it displays into the human mind, by its understanding portrayal of adolescent psychology. The younger Patterson is depicted convincingly and with fidelity to life; the elder Patterson, while somewhat more shadowy, yet stands forth with unmistakable reality; and the minor characters for the most part seem to be alive and breathing." S. A. Coblentz

+ Lit R p3 S 13 '24 660w

N Y Times p9 S 14 '24 780w

"The young people of the book are not only weak but stupid when they are not absolutely insane. Occasionally, however, in the midst of the awkward style and the inadequate psychology there are flashes of real insight into boy nature and family psychology which, with a certain number of humorous reflections and incidents, do much to redeem the book from utter dulness."

— + N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 210w

Outlook 139:33 Ja 7 '25 80w

WEDGWOOD, JOSIAH CLEMENT. Essays and adventures of a Labour M. P. 263p $3 Huebsch [7s 6d Allen & U.]

824 25-2061

The author is the present head of the famous potteries family and a member of the Labor cabinet of England. His essays show him a champion of economic and political freedom. His adventures include an experience of Bolshevism in Siberia and in Hungary, of South African warfare and with machine guns in Gallipoli. There is also a sketch of the Wedgwood works, and an essay on the single tax, of which he is an advocate.

Bookm 60:357 N '24 120w

Reviewed by C: A. Madison

Lit R p14 N 22 '24 310w

"As a whole, it is somewhat disappointing, because we feel that the author's genuine literary gifts have lacked opportunity for adequate development. Colonel Wedgwood's career has been so full and versatile that he can have had but scant leisure for writing, and these essays are occasional exercises rather than serious efforts. As a revelation of a vital, many-sided, and slightly paradoxical personality, the volume has its interest." Gilbert Thomas

— + Nation and Ath 35:569 Ag 2 '24 200w

"He has a light impressionistic touch. He can write, in fact, vividly; and his account of the landing at Gallipoli from the River Clyde is unsurpassable in its rendering of the nightmare of that terrible Sunday."

+ New Statesman 23:380 Ag 23 '24 250w

Reviewed by James Luby

N Y Times p16 Ja 11 '25 1800w

"It would be hard to find a more amiable, intelligent, cooly written book. Even the chapters on Single Tax aren't Messianic. They do carry a message from the lips of a highly civilized messenger."

WEDGWOOD, J. C.—Continued
+ N Y World p9e N 30 '24 200w
Sat R 138:267 S 13 '24 700w
Spec 133:198 Ag 9 '24 880w
Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 580w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p455 Jl 24 '24 800w

WEEK-END book. 320p $2 Dial press [6s Nonesuch press]

821.08 English poetry—Collections. Songs

Some of the less familiar English poems have been chosen for this week-end anthology, to which a group of songs suitable for unaccompanied chorus singing has been added, as well as suggestions for games, refreshments and first aid.

"At last London has done something worth while. By this we mean that the great city has proved itself to have a delicious sense of humor. Everybody in London, they tell us, has been reading and enjoying the Week-End book. If this is so, they must have a sense of humor that is unequalled. With the publication of this book here in America we are given an anthology, that is unique, one that only Englishmen could conceive, a book that has absolutely everything in it and all so well done that it is irresistible." K. S.
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 22 '24 950w

Reviewed by Polly Flinders
Nation and Ath 35:567 Ag 2 '24 1750w

"Never has a poetic anthology been served with such rare cuisinerie or household recipes served with such poetic trimmings. The book has sold like wildfire in England where the week-end trip was invented." Shane Leslie
Sat R of Lit 1:320 N 29 '24 500w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p416 Jl 3 '24 1000w

WEEKS, ARLAND DEYETT. Control of the social mind. (Conduct of mind ser.) 263p $2.25 Appleton

301 Social psychology 23-15600

A practical book which applies the principles of social psychology to the control of the social mind and which brings known laws of mind to bear upon social difficulties and civic relations. The writer considers those aspects of the mind which have special significance for further social development and better ways of getting on together and studies how certain social deficiencies which all men show more or less may be supplied by system.

Reviewed by C. L. Stone
Am Econ R 14:367 Je '24 40w

"A simple method of presentation and a clear style of writing lend value to the book."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:208 F '24 80w
Am Pol Sci R 18:651 Ag '24 120w
Booklist 20:250 Ap '24

"The attitude of the author is sane and his expositions are enlightening."
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 9 '24 400w

"Professor Jastrow, in his introduction, which is in the nature of a review, commends this volume highly. It is a welcome addition to the series upon which Professor Weeks has expended much patient labor." Van Buren Thorne
+ N Y Times p13 F 24 '24 2000w
Survey 51:708 Mr 15 '24 60w
Wis Lib Bul 20:64 Mr '24

WEHDE, ALBERT. Since leaving home. 575p il $3 Tremonia pub. co., 5 S. Wabash av., Chicago

B or 92 23-13247

The story of a man whose life has been one long adventure. Born in Germany, Wehde emigrated to the United States when barely sixteen. Turned out by the uncle to whom he had gone, he became a wanderer, adventurer and explorer, in the southern United States and Central America. After the Spanish war he rejoined his family and became a designer of jewelry in Chicago, but entered the service of Germany in the Far East when the war broke out. Altho he quit the service when America entered the war, he was arrested on his return to the United States, on a trumped-up charge and served a term in Leavenworth prison, where this autobiography was written. Here also he made the important discovery that finger-prints can be forged.

"This book is well-nigh unique throughout. An autobiographic narrative combining a series of most extraordinary adventures, it will probably be read by multitudes as an engaging tale with considerable literary merit, without regard to its social value. It is a drama of the most elemental passions of human life. The author deals with themes tabooed by conventional standards, with a simplicity and frankness that makes one wonder at the difficulty the rest of us have in calling a spade a spade when face to face with the elementary facts of life. Not a little light is thrown on the genesis of the Great War so far as the psychology of nationalism is concerned. A genuine service is rendered in the revelations concerning the treatment of political prisoners of whom the author was one, by the American Government, and particularly in the disclosures concerning the regime at Leavenworth." F. E. J.
+ Com on Church & Soc Ser. Inf ser p7 D 15 '23 260w

"His book, while not important, is an interesting story and will repay the reader with several hours of good entertainment." Albert DeSilver
+ — Nation 119:267 S 10 '24 600w

"An undeniable contribution to our social history. At first glance, the volume is deceiving; the chapter heads breathe romance. And romance is in the narrative; but the text is sound, honest, and informative; the style artless, but glowing."
+ Open Court 38:63 Ja '24 750w

WEIGALL, ARTHUR EDWARD PEARSE BROME. Tutankhamen, and other essays. 368p il $3.50 Doran [15s T. Butterworth]

913.32 Tut-ankh-amen. Egypt—Antiquities 24-4551

"A well-known Egyptologist and former inspector-general of antiquities in Egypt here puts into popular form the chief incidents of the recent excavations in the Valley of the Tombs of the Kings, and adds to his thrilling story of the Tutankhamen 'finds' a number of scholarly chapters on such subjects as 'The Problem of Egyptian Chronology,' 'The Red Sea Highroad,' 'Egyptian Empire,' and 'The Gateway of the East.' "—Boston Transcript

Booklist 20:335 Je '24
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 5 '24 1000w

"Of all the volumes and essays bearing the title Mr. Weigall's alone, as it seems to me, contributes anything definite to the historical side of the case. He builds up an elaborate but very convincing thesis concerning the identity of this king, the most important conclusion being that Tutankhamen was none other than the former Tutu, court chamberlain to Pharaoh Ahknaten, and that he became the Pharaoh of the Exodus." Robert Hillyer
+ Lit R p720 My 3 '24 460w

"Mr. Weigall's volume does not confine itself to the theme of Tutankhamen. In its wide scope and charming presentation, it is both valuable and entertaining." E. G. H. Kraeling
+ Nation 118:657 Je 4 '24 500w
New Statesman 22:310 D 15 '24 360w

Reviewed by C: De Kay
N Y Times p15 Mr 9 '24 1550w

"Half the volume recounts the desert trips, such as the author has given us before; they are useful impressions of remote sites which very few can hope to see, but the ghosts in the book are the fly that spoils the ointment. When will Mr. Weigall give the world something worthy of the knowledge that he has, and of the subject in his grasp?"

— Sat R 136:598 D 1 '23 300w

"The long chapter of Mr. Weigall's views on the future of excavation in Egypt touches on delicate ground, and there is much with which archæologists will not agree. Throughout he emphasizes his opinion that foreign excavators are under a very deep obligation to the Egyptians for being allowed to excavate at all in their country. But surely the matter is one of equal give-and-take: the concession to the excavator is duly made, according to the law of the land, in which the question of gratitude does not enter."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p810 N 29 '23 1350w

WEIRICK, BRUCE. From Whitman to Sandburg in American poetry; a critical survey. 245p $2 Macmillan

811.09 American poetry 24-5117

"This book attempts to do two things: to give a critical estimate of the American poetry of the last fifty years; and to supply at the same time the setting, national and cultural, without which such an estimate must necessarily be thin or meaningless. It is, therefore, a discussion of the American imagination, or as Henry James would say, of the American scene, as it reveals itself in our modern poetry. The shadow of Walt Whitman is everywhere on our modern literature, and his importance is vaster than even the egotism which some of his critics ascribe to him could have foreseen. Much of this book, therefore, is concerned with his influence, and his point of view as democrat, mystic, and poet."—Preface

Booklist 20:333 Je '24

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '24 1150w

"From his whole-hearted admiration of Whitman the author derives tenets which limit the natural catholicity of his taste; but if his rating of contemporary poets is frequently injudicious, it is based frankly on prejudice and not loaded with the weight of erudite condemnation."

+ — Dial 77:83 Jl '24 70w

"Though his book is often irritating because of its unsupported decrees, and though its style is loose and inaccurate, it is a stimulating work that will interest a host of readers in poetry and will bring many of them into forming opinions of their own." Stanley Alden

+ — Lit R p802 Je 7 '24 550w

"To devote thirty-five pages to Whitman, Titan that he is, and less than two pages to Emily Dickinson is to commit a cardinal error for a writer of literary history. So that while he has treated a great many more poets than come into any other book upon the subject, and has written with a genuine if somewhat elementary enthusiasm, and has furnished a guide for college students in a certain field of American literature, he cannot claim to have composed a really original or permanently stimulating volume."

— + Nation 118:664 Je 4 '24 170w

"That a thesis was creeping in as he progressed will have become apparent—the thesis, namely, that poetry not only will be, but that it must be, national. This robs his book of that nearness to finality of judgment which the reader had hoped for and had been led to expect. But Weirick has done a considerable task in a manner that will command respect and should win him no little praise." P. A. Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p11 Mr 2 '24 850w

"As a survey of accomplishment in this field, it is ingeniously constructed and entertainingly written." D: Morton

+ Outlook 136:745 Ap 30 '24 1000w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:324 Je '24

St Louis p349 O '24

"This book is written in a lively, challenging though careless, style and can hardly fail to stimulate interest in our poetry." S. A.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 13 '24 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p537 S 4 '24 1000w

WEISS, JOHN MORRIS, and DOWNS, ² CHARLES RAYMOND. Technical organization; its development and administration. 197p il $2.50 McGraw

607 Chemistry, Technical. Chemical laboratories 24-11143

Practical presentation of methods in building and maintaining a technical organization, a description of the physical tools necessary to the proper functioning of such an organization and an outline of operating methods which have proved practical and successful.

"The work does not contain anything that may be considered new, nor any revolutionary ideas, but it is a splendid common-sense presentation of most of the problems and conditions that must be met in the establishment, management, financing and accounting of a commercial research organization."

+ Chem & Met Eng 31:897 D 8 '24 350w

"Weiss and Downs have made a great many interesting suggestions, which make their book a delightful technical treatise, though they have not proposed any revolutionary ideas." D. B. Keyes

Ind & Eng Chem 16:764 Jl '24 220w

"The book should be valuable to manufacturers who contemplate starting a new technical staff and those who already have such an organization may find some new ideas which they can use advantageously."

+ Management and Adm 8:100 Jl '24 150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:510 N '24

WELBY, THOMAS EARLE. Popular history of English poetry. 284p $1.75 Appleton [5s A. M. Philpot]

821.09 English poetry—History and criticism [24-4330]

This volume contains a history of English poetry from its origin thru the nineteenth century. Contents: The beginnings; The age of Chaucer; Lyrical poetry; The ballad; The age of Spenser; Elizabethan and Jacobean dramatists; Donne and the mystics; Milton; Sixteenth and seventeenth century lyrics; Dryden; The eighteenth century; The early nineteenth century; The later nineteenth century.

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden

Nation and Ath 34:638 F 2 '24 650w

"It is quite refreshing to follow him although the reader may not agree with his conclusions. Mr. Welby is not a finished scholar in the true sense of the word, and his book, 'A popular History of English Poetry,' is not a definitive survey but is manifestly the result of personal reactions to certain aspects of English poetry." H. S. Gorman

+ — N Y Times p2 Ag 3 '24 1850w

"Let me recommend very heartily 'A Popular History of English Poetry.' It is not a textbook; it is the work of a man who has read our literature for himself, and has written his own impressions, not those of a selected band of predecessors."

+ Sat R 137:18 Ja 5 '24 500w

WELLMAN, FRANCIS LEWIS. Gentlemen of the jury; reminiscences of thirty years at the bar. 298p il $4 Macmillan

340.4 Jury. Law—Anecdotes, facetiae, satire, etc. 24-25300

From his experience of more than a thousand cases tried before juries, the author addresses himself particularly to those jurors who have never been in court before. He deals with the chief elements that the juror has to contend with: the witnesses, the lawyers in the cases, the judges, and the rendering of a verdict.

WELLMAN, F. L:—Continued
Methods of distinguishing truth from falsehood are explained and the means by which lawyers try to distort or conceal evidence. Many amusing experiences in open court as well as behind the scenes are related.

Booklist 21:150 Ja '25

"A book of entertaining memory." J. F.
+ Bookm 60:489 D '24 250w

"It is not often that one can find a book that is at once so useful and so lively, so valuable and so jolly. However, we are used to that from Mr. Wellman." C: W. Thompson
+ Int Bk R p866 N '24 2250w

Reviewed by C. M. Lewis
Lit R p6 N 1 '24 780w

"If the reader likes biography he will find it in Mr. Wellman's book in abundance; if he enjoys history he will find a cross-section of the history of New York in those days; if he is partial to romance he will discover any number of grim novels between the covers of one volume." Horace Green
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 4 '25 1250w

" 'Gentlemen of the Jury' ought to exert a powerful influence in awakening the conscience and sense of patriotic responsibility in the minds of great numbers of citizens who have avoided service as jurors. It ought also to open their eyes to the wealth of interest, amusement and education that lie in the experiences of a juror in our modern courts. To do that was Mr. Wellman's undertaking. No one could have accomplished it better." H: W. Sackett
+ N Y Tribune p9 Ja 18 '25 1400w

"This seems to me a fascinating book, and, incidentally, one which tends to make a civic duty glamourous. Mr. Wellman makes his case shrewdly." Heywood Broun
+ N Y World p11 O 21 '24 1400w
Outlook 138:731 D 31 '24 700w
R of Rs 70:672 D '24 150w

WELLMAN, RITA (MRS EDGAR F. LEO). House of hate. 276p $2 McBride
24-29075

The scene is laid in Florence of the present day, and offers a glimpse of the political struggle between the Fascisti and the communists. It is a psychological story concerning the fateful woman Drura, wife of a German rare book dealer. Drura is bound to her husband by a bond of hate from which she would not escape if she could, for it is the secret force of her life. John Wincomb, while browsing in Hellerman's bookshop, becomes acquainted with its owner who invites him to his home. Thus is Wincomb destined to meet the mistress of the house of hate and eventually to play a part in the tragedy of ths unusual woman, for only to him does she disclose the fearful passion which governs her life.

Reviewed by H. L. Pangborn
Int Bk R p9 D '24 150w
Lit R p9 D 27 '24 200w

"One would know that the actual narrator of this tale is a woman, even though the official narrator is a man. Nevertheless, the prose of this novel is uniformly good, and often special descriptions are first rate. Some of the book is thrilling in a melodramatic style."
— + N Y Times p9 O 19 '24 780w
N Y Tribune p18 D 7 '24 320w
N Y World p8e N 9 '24 100w
Sat R of Lit 1:233 O 25 '24 200w

WELLS, CAROLYN (MRS HADWIN HOUGHTON. Fourteenth key. 334p $2 Putnam
24-19920

Mark Winslow, wealthy, respected and retired, advertises for the grandchild whom he has never seen. A grandson appears with credentials that satisfy Winslow, altho neither his lawyer nor his nephew is convinced. Their suspicions are increased by the murder of an unknown woman and then of Mark himself, with the same weapon. A detective is employed, who discovers the murderer just as the true claimant appears on the scene.

"If Carolyn Wells did not make a practice of parking her sense of humor somewhere when she sets out to write a detective-mystery yarn her puzzle stories must gain a front rank. As it is, they remain cleverly built puzzle stories and nothing more." H. W.
— + Lit R p986 Ag 23 '24 170w
N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '24 550w

"A mystery tale that is both baffling and fascinating." F. V. R.
+ N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 220w
Outlook 138:558 D 3 '24 60w
Spec 133:848 N 29 '24 30w

WELLS, CAROLYN (MRS HADWIN HOUGHTON). Furthest fury. 320p $2 Lippincott
24-5946

The double murder of a much-esteemed man, Nevin Lawrence, and his lovable sister, Mrs Sayre, starts the ball rolling for a series of investigations that always lead nowhere. The local police and amateur detectives keep the summer boarders informed of clues and more clues. Even the famous Fleming Stone is baffled, because of the complete ignorance concerning the victims' past lives. However, with the aid of Emma Lily, the housemaid, he pieces together the bits of the puzzle.

"Since there are any amount of people who like them, we hope Miss Wells will keep it up."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 12 '24 300w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p7e Ja 27 '24 330w

WELLS, CAROLYN (MRS HADWIN HOUGHTON). Prillilgirl; a Fleming Stone story. 332p $2 Lippincott
24-21149

A general upheaval takes place in theatrical circles when the news of the murder of Mallory Vane, a well-known manager, is made known. Bloody finger prints are evident on the curious weapon with which Mallory was killed, and on a telephone book, while on the floor of the private telephone booth is found, unconscious, Prillilgirl, the beautiful child-wife of Guy Thorndike, a prominent actor. The fingerprints are identified as those of Mrs Guy Thorndike, but what motive had she in killing Vane when he had just completed a play for her husband, one that promised great triumphs for both actor and manager? And what was Thorndike's purpose in claiming to be the criminal? Into this perplexing maze steps Fleming Stone, master detective, who proves his skill by discovering an unheeded clue, and with the aid of radio traps the murderer.

" 'Prillilgirl' tells a straightforward story of night life as it is supposed to be in the land of the stage. That portion of the world is shut off from view to the ordinary individual. Consequently a tale like this goes for truth. As a 'Fleming Stone detective story' it may be judged from the fact that the great criminologist appears only in the last two or three chapters." W. E. H.
Boston Transcript p7 N 8 '24 480w

"A good detective story should be plausible in incident and motivation; this new tale is not plausible in any way, and does not possess a single well-drawn character."
— N Y Times p9 Ja 11 '25 450w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e O 19 '24 190w

WELLS, FREDERICK LYMAN. Pleasure and behavior. (Conduct of mind ser.) 274p $2.50 Appleton

150 Psychology. Emotions. Pleasure
24-2935

It is as the science of behavior that psychology derives its chief interest today. This book is concerned with the relation of pleasure to behavior. Beginning with an outline of the structural principles of psychology, it goes on to discuss the various modes and channels thru which humanity derives its enjoyments by liberating its energies. Contents: How the mind is organized; The sources of pleasure and pain; Self-maintenance; Eroticism; Social impulses; The sources of right and wrong; The major emotions; Intellectual processes; Frustrated urges; Factors of success.

Reviewed by L. L. Bernard
Am J Soc 30:354 N '24 600w

Booklist 20:322 Je '24

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 1 '24 600w

Reviewed by F. I. MacKinnon
J Philos 21:558 S 25 '24 350w

Reviewed by J: B. Watson
— Nation 119:449 O 22 '24 280w

Outlook 136:404 Mr 5 '24 20w

"Mr Wells is sane enough in what he has to say but there are more thorough and more adequate studies of the operation of instinct in society."
+ — Springf'd Republican p8 F 5 '24 160w

Survey 52:639 S 15 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p179 Mr 20 '24 80w

"On the whole simply written and understandable, but is not an essential purchase."
+ — Wis Lib Bul 20:91 Ap '24

WELLS, HENRY WILLIS. Poetic imagery; illustrated from Elizabethan literature. 231p $1.75 Columbia univ. press [8s Milford]

808.1 English poetry 24-2504

"In this study of poetic imagery the author analyses eight types of metaphor considering in each case a representative example from Elizabethan literature: the decorative (Sir Philip Sidney); the sunken (Daniel); violent or fustian (Kyd); radical (Donne); intensive (Spenser); expansive (Bacon); exuberant (Marlowe); and the figure of wit and humour (Nash). Shakespeare's 'infinite variety' is the subject of a separate chapter."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"This is one of the rare books about poetry which are worth reading by poets, for it tells them many things about their art which they did not suppose could be put into prose, and these things gain both in clarity and importance by the telling."
+ Nation 118:401 Ap 4 '24 340w

"As a rule the theses presented for University degrees are the fruit of industry and a respect for literature and not of enthusiasm or sensibility. Mr. Well's study of poetic imagery is an exception. He has attempted to display the peculiar attributes of imaginative expression, and in a tentative classification has brought out certain general considerations which cannot fail to lead to a fuller appreciation of poetic style and of its intimate connection with the mental character."
+ New Statesman 24:sup14 O 11 '24 280w

Reviewed by L. C. Woodman
N Y Tribune p22 Ag 10 '24 490w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:374 Jl '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 19 '24 50w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. The dream. 318p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d J. Cape]

24-7679

Sarnac, a scientist of the fortieth century, has a dream in which he harks back two thousand years and as Harry Mortimer Smith, son of a greengrocer, lives the life of a lower middle-class Englishman of that period. On waking, he gathers his utopian companions about him, "men like gods," bearing such names as Sunray, Radiant, Firefly and Starlight, and recounts his dream. It is a fully developed story of today extending thru the World war. The chief interest lies in the author's comments on these days, which are shown as being as incredible in their barbarity and superstition as prehistoric times seem to us. The story is thus made the vehicle for a criticism of our modern civilization and Mr. Wells's opinions on religion, education, politics, marriage and the conventions of our day.

Booklist 20:341 Je '24

"Although he does it extremely well, and though his story of Sarnac's dream may rank high with biographical novels because of its interest, its delicacy, its humor and its pity, I can find no added glamour and no added value by setting it through the eyes and lips of a man like a god in the cool of a Utopian evening, two thousand years from Harry Mortimer Smith." C. B. O.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 23 '24 1250w

"The whole argument of 'The Dream' leads to the inescapable conclusion that the only intelligent thing a man can do is to commit suicide. Which marks it for what it is—preposterous tommy-rot."
— Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 27 '24 300w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey
Ind 112:317 Je 7 '24 320w

"The book would be more effective if it were less one-sided. . . The novel is interesting; many of its people live, and its mechanics have been extremely well managed." L. M. Field
+ — Int Bk R p552 Je '24 650w

"The story is well told, and the characters, though not so finely and deeply molded as in the time when Mr. Wells was doing 'Kipps' and 'Tono-Bungay,' are sketched with the humorous verve and sympathetic insight the novelist still has at command. There is more narrative coating and less doctrinal pill than in some of his recent novels, but one still has the feeling that it is the doctrine rather than the story that Mr. Wells wants to get into the minds of his readers." J. W. Cunliffe
+ Lit R p739 My 10 '24 600w

"One is not surprised to find that Mr. Wells's customary verve is continually in evidence, but neither is one surprised that this, his forty-ninth volume, does not reveal any new side to his mind." J. W. Krutch
+ — Nation 119:21 Jl 2 '24 100w

"You never need to scratch a story by Mr. Wells to find a tract, but usually the tract is so clothed in flesh and blood, wit and invention, that you can, if you like, take the story and leave the moral. In 'The Dream' you cannot. Certainly Mr. Wells would not wish us to do so. And the moral is that in two thousand years, or probably much less, human beings will not only be still adorning this planet, but will have been made perfect. It is a happy thought. . . That is the thesis. And, as to the story, Mr. Wells can never avoid being readable, and his readableness is not spoilt either by his thesis or by his occasional lapses from accuracy." Rose Macaulay
+ — Nation and Ath 35:54 Ap 12 '24 700w

Reviewed by Rose Macaulay
New Repub 38:292 My 7 '24 800w (Same as in Nation and Athenaeum)

"It is a long while since Mr. Wells has written a novel so readable as The Dream. It contains something characteristic of each main period of his work. The first half of the book is the best part of it, for there he returns to the backshop, and invents characters whose comicality is relieved with pathos, like those that made Kipps and Tono-Bungay and Mr. Polly such excellent entertainments. . . But the moment Mr. Wells begins to think, all humour and tolerance desert him. Ancient grudges against whole sections of the community come to the surface and supply the driving-power for his reforming ideals." Raymond Mortimer

WELLS, H. G:—Continued
+ — New Statesman 23:16 Ap 12 '24 2300w

" 'The Dream' is a rearrangement. It is none the less an absorbing one, written with a power that shows no signs of flagging. Never has his attack been more truculent than when delivered by Sarnac, the reincarnated Harry Mortimer Smith. . . 'The Dream' is as good as anything that Mr. Wells has done, and there can hardly be higher praise." H: L. Stuart
+ N Y Times p1 Ap 27 '24 2300w

"Recurrent dreams are common, and tend to become tiresome. Mr. Wells has not only dreamed this one, but related it in detail so often that the latest repetition provokes a vulgar impulse to tell him to turn over. . . The facts are pretty bad, but his imagination is hardly more cheering; it has a mechanical smoothness and efficiency that leave one rather chilled than comforted." Isabel Paterson
— N Y Tribune p28 Ap 27 '24 1300w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
Outlook 137:31 My 7 '24 700w

"Mr. Wells has done it again, and done it as brilliantly as ever. I do not care how often I read his expositions of the muddled life of the 'lower middle-class' in the years round about 1900. His knowledge is so immense, his sympathy so acute, his humour so inexhaustible. But when it comes to the more philosophical implications of this latest work, I am not so sure. For his improved folk of two thousand years ahead have one vice which, at least in the eyes of the Christian religion, is morally worse than any that he charges against the twentieth century. They are self-satisfied. They have put away so much of the conflict, so much of the pitiful touching endearing weaknesses which make us human, that they seem to have put off humanity itself. Perhaps that is why it is the dream which convinces us, and the dreamer who becomes the dream."
+ — Sat R 137:356 Ap 5 '24 560w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Spec 132:604 Ap 12 '24 400w

"It is a better story than 'Men Like Gods'; the life, loves and death of Harry Mortimer Smith are of sufficient vitality in themselves to hold attention. It is also more inspiring propaganda for remaking society."
+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 9 '24 560w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p222 Ap 10 '24 950w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Story of a great schoolmaster. 176p il $1.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Sanderson, Frederick William. Oundle school 24-2153

This is the second book within a year about Frederick W. Sanderson and his life-work the headmastership of Oundle school. It is more concerned with the man and his personality than the earlier book "Sanderson of Oundle." (Book Review Digest, 1923) Mr Wells, who knew him intimately during the last eight years of his life, the most productive of his career, has set out as largely as possible in Sanderson's own words his fundamental ideas of the replacement of competition by group work, of the return of schools to real service and his conception of a House of Vision as the brain and center of community life.

"Mr. Wells has rendered a conspicuous service to the cause of education in picturing so grippingly a leader whose ideals and courage forced him to turn his back unhesitatingly on long established customs, to break squarely with cherished traditions, and to strike out boldly into new and, in a large sense, untried fields." A. E. Stearns
+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ap '24 550w
Booklist 20:202 Mr '24

"To tell his story is to reflect upon all the main educational ideas of the last half century and to revise our conception of the process and purpose of the modern community in education. Before his end Sanderson had come to a vision of the school as a centre for the complete reorganization of civilized life." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p1 F 9 '24 950w
Cleveland p80 S '24

"In style the book is headlong, impetuous, stimulating, almost exhausting, like the personality it portrays. There are abundant hero worship and a touch of pathos. It should be read by all students of education and of social problems—above all, by lovers of men." N. H. Batchelder
+ Lit R p630 Ap 29 '24 800w

"This biography might be advertised as a teachers' tonic." H. W. Horwill
+ Nation 118:145 F 6 '24 450w

"Mr. Wells deserves great thanks for having made available this shorter life of his friend. But it is a sound maxim that a man is usually a safer guide in his admiration than in his contempt, and some readers of this book will regret that the author's prejudices beguiled him to include in it a number of gibes at other schoolmasters and school methods which do not add to its attractiveness." J. R. M. B.
+ — Nation and Ath 34:770 Mr 1 '24 1000w

"Mr. Wells is extremely clever in his depiction of the personality of Sanderson, and especially amusing is that chapter in which is recreated a typical lecture by the headmaster. This material is the result of careful shorthand by two of Sanderson's students, and the picture that results is both laughable and lovable."
+ N Y Times p4 Ja 20 '24 1650w
Pratt p38 summer '24
R of Rs 69:448 Ap '24 70w
Sat R 137:162 F 16 '24 460w

"Everyone who is interested in education, or in any aspect of sociology, should read this little book—the account of a rare being who put into practice the things that many believe."
+ Spec 132:566 Ap 5 '24 350w

"The book runs only to 176 pages, but there is more of interest and suggestion in it than in many a ponderous volume."
+ Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 500w

"Mr. H. G. Wells has written, with his accustomed literary skill, a not very satisfactory book dealing with the lifework of Mr. F. W. Sanderson. The book suffers from the facts that Mr. Wells shows only a superficial knowledge of the history of education in England, and very little knowledge of the realities of public school life."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p37 Ja 17 '24 1050w
Wis Lib Bul 20:96 Ap '24

WENTWORTH, PATRICIA (MRS G. F. DILLON) (DELTA, pseud.). Astonishing adventure of Jane Smith. 313p $2 Small [7s 6d Melrose]

23-17476

"The beginning of the adventure was not Jane Smith's, it belonged rather to her cousin, Renata Molloy, a scared rabbit of a girl, as timorous and stupid as Jane was brave and clever. But their mothers had been twin sisters, and though internally so totally different, externally Renata Jane Molloy and Jane Renata Smith were all but precisely alike. Molloy, Renata's father, was none other than Number Three of the Inner Council of an organization whose aims and methods were of a type not encouraged by the police, and Renata, who was given to walking in her sleep, had stumbled upon a meeting of the council. Just how much had Renata overheard? Did she know enough to make her 'elimination' advisable, or not? Before deciding what should subsequently be done with her, they locked her up in her bedroom on the top floor of the apartment house, from which she was presently rescued by Jane Smith, with the aid of a plank, the fire escape and Arnold Todhunter. But this rescue was only the opening of Jane's adventure, and it is with her later more thrilling experiences at Luttrell Marches, the isolated country house by the sea that the tale is principally concerned." —N Y Times

Booklist 20:267 Ap '24

"Of course when it comes to underground passages and trapdoors, her architectural knowledge is scanty. The house she describes sounds like a rabbit warren. The grand blowing up at the end saved her a great deal of trouble. The personality of her heroine makes the story worth reading, quite apart from the mystery. Still it's not a bad mystery; and if Miss Wentworth continues in this vein she will soon beat Mr. Oppenheim at his own game."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Ap 2 '24 260w

"The bare bones of the plot are familiar to all readers of mystery-adventure tales, but there is plenty of originality in their detail, and the plotters are much more nearly human than such creatures are likely to be. It runs rapidly and smoothly and is not too extravagant to be interesting."

+ Lit R p582 Mr 8 '24 300w

"The liveliest sort of a lively yarn, well written and with one of the most attractive heroines we have met in some time."

+ N Y Times p25 Ja 27 '24 500w

"In the narration there is too much leisure and not enough explosives, and even the most willing credulous reader wonders just how those anarchists are going to blow up the entire world." Donald Douglas

— N Y Tribune p23 Ja 27 '24 440w

"Miss Wentworth's story is a little too much of the miraculous-made-to-order sort for our taste in mystery tales. Nevertheless, it has an element of suspense which many readers may find attractive." E. W. Osborn

— + N Y World p6e F 3 '24 350w

WESCOTT, GLENWAY. Apple of the eye. 292p $2.50 Dial press

24-23494

"Mr. Wescott's first novel falls at first glance into the familiar rural-realistic grouping. If one chose to look only at the surface it would appear to be just another study of the drab dreariness of farm life, this time in southern Wisconsin. But it is much more. . . 'The Apple of the Eye' is the story of spiritual tragedy, of conflict between the Puritanical and pagan view of sex. In the youthful Dan, Mr. Wescott presents a stirring study of an adolescent, harried and harassed by conflicting theories about sex; in Mike, a pagan who remains lovable even in the shadow of a great tragedy."—Lit R

"For many readers Mr. Wescott's story, 'The Apple of the Eye,' will prove one of the most interesting and one of the ablest novels of the season. As keenly alive to the beauty of nature as to her cruelties, Mr. Wescott has the faculty of vividly picturing these many phases, of setting down the activities of a farmer's daily routine along with his inner existence and its sordid tragedies or its elemental nobility." F. A. Goell

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 29 '24 1550w

"Mr Wescott is of much more highly critical temper than his first book would seem to indicate. On the other hand the brilliancy of his first book would certainly justify him in trying to develop in the avoidance of more specialized channels. In any case, we may for the time being content ourselves with this opportunity to welcome a work of such keen emotional appeal and stylistic vigour as are displayed in The Apple of the Eye." Kenneth Burke

+ — Dial 77:513 D '24 600w

Ind 113:409 N 15 '24 20w

"It is in a way disheartening to struggle through layer after layer of wrapping to so shopworn an idea; the pessimistic conclusion, although refurbished by certain scientists of the present day, would have appeared old-fashioned fifty years ago. Yet it is genuine tribute to the book's truthfulness, though a flaw in its organization, that the characters have a way of breaking through the molds of the theme, and manifest some of the density and intractability of human beings." G: B. Dutton

— + Ind 113:458 N 29 '24 750w

"Mr. Wescott has escaped the silly nonsense of those who in the latter days of the last century worshipped sin. He sees clearly and accurately the consequences of the mixing of the two attitudes, which is disaster; but he stands four-square for paganism. If his conclusion is not Biblical it is certainly singularly intelligent, and this first record is luminous with achievement and promise." C. H. Grattan

+ Int Bk R p59 D '24 380w

"A novel that those who demand entertainment and nothing else in their fiction may well leave alone; but a novel full of vital stuff, rich in thoughtful criticism of life. It is a serious book, one that often touches the depths of tragedy. And yet it leaves one with the memory of admirable people, and with a keen, bitter sense of the human struggle against circumstance. A first novel of real distinction." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p6 O 18 '24 480w

"The vision underlying the book is not quite equal to its fine execution. But it is a beautiful book, individual if not strongly original at bottom." Ruth Suckow

+ — Nation 119:654 D 10 '24 800w

"Mr. Wescott writes a finely cadenced prose. He is humane and enlightened in his attitude toward his material. Nature he sees familiarly and appreciatively, and utilizes to enforce the moods of his characters." H. G.

+ New Repub 41:241 Ja 21 '25 300w

" 'The Apple of the Eye,' by the excellence of its workmanship, flies high in the literary heavens, and fills the sky with its primeval clamor. It leaves the reader a sense of lonely solemnity, a sort of fierce isolation in the bitter savor of life. But for all that, the glittering images which Mr. Wescott produces bear no message of the angels, but merely repeat the perennial cry of the goose, winging south in search of a warmer, softer, more complaisant environment."

+ N Y Times p8 O 12 '24 800w

Reviewed by Margery Latimer

N Y Tribune p5 O 19 '24 700w

Reviewed by G. B. Munson

Sat R of Lit 1:320 N 29 '24 450w

"The author misses tragedy or lyrical emotion largely because his background seems strained and arbitrary and his characters are rather clinical cases than interesting human beings."

Springf'd Republican p7a O 26 '24 280w

WESTERVELT, WILLIAM DRAKE. Hawaiian historial legends. 215p il $1.50 Revell

398.2 Folklore—Hawaiian islands 24-3709

"From a considerable fund of folk-lore Mr. Westervelt has chosen with a discriminating mind a collection covering many phases of Hawaiian and Polynesian life, manners, customs and religious beliefs, together with the records of deeds of daring done by voyagers and warriors. There are twenty-one tales rich in legendary interest. The author has been for thirty-five years a resident of the islands and has made a thorough study of his subject." —N Y Tribune

"Mr. Westervelt knows his material intimately; and the result of his research and study is given to his readers in a popular spirit."

+ Boston Transcript p7 F 2 '24 240w

Reviewed by Padraic Colum

Lit R p917 Jl 26 '24 60w

N Y Tribune p27 Jl 13 '24 60w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 14 '24 180w

WETJEN, ALBERT RICHARD. Captains all. 217p $2 Knopf
24-15678

Tales of sea life, born out of the experiences of a young author who went to sea while still in his teens. Contents; Caution; A captain of the pickle fleet; Exactly; Strain; Broken; Breed; The iron sea; Conquest; Success; Value; Waffles.

Booklist 21:114 D '24

"The author presents generally the seamiest side. . . But all moralizing aside, he tells some very thrilling stories. They hold. They keep the reader eagerly reading every word until the climax."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 25 '24 180w
Cleveland p86 N '24
Lit R p922 Jl 26 '24 320w

"'Broken' is the masterpiece of the lot; it is only slightly marred by sentimentality in the grand manner. Restraint of language and a refreshing of his material by visualizations and evocations of immediate impressions would go far toward making Mr. Wetjen's second book a veritable literary experience."
+ — N Y Times p8 Je 22 '24 580w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko
N Y Tribune p12 S 21 '24 620w

"A notable first book of short-stories." F. V. Roman
+ N Y World p2e Je 29 '24 100w
Wis Lib Bul 20:214 O '24

WEYMAN, STANLEY JOHN. Traveller in the fur cloak. 328p $2 Longmans [7s 6d Hutchinson]
24-9128

"Germany at the time of the supreme domination of Napoleon I constitutes the setting of Mr. Weyman's novel. The hero, a certain Cartwright, sets off through Germany with his Chief, Percival Ellis, on an important mission for the British Foreign Office. For a while all goes well, then difficulties arise, thicken and multiply, and they find themselves overshadowed by a fatal cloud. To begin with, Cartwright and Ellis quarrel, and the former leaves his superior for what he imagines to be but a few hours; but the few hours lengthen into an eternity, for Cartwright is viciously assaulted and all but slain; and, upon convalescing a number of weeks later, he learns that his companion has inexplicably disappeared. This discovery opens the way to a long series of adventures complicated by the baffling mystery of the fate of Ellis; and while the enigma is at length solved, and while the hero incidentally wins success in a romantic love affair, there is no happy ending so far as Ellis is concerned."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:29 O '24
Cleveland p51 Jl '24

Reviewed by Harriet Henry
Int Bk R p676 Ag '24 450w

"This novel is an excellent specimen of sound artisanship, though it has not the values in character drawing that Mr. Weyman displayed in 'Ovington's Bank.' Indeed, here he is frankly aiming at no more than entertainment; the plot's the thing, and it is a first rate plot of its kind."
+ — Lit R p778 My 24 '24 220w

"The novel has little to offer the reader in search of historical information, yet it is to be recommended as a swiftly moving, capably told story of adventure."
+ N Y Times p22 My 4 '24 330w

"The accuracy of the historical detail seems unimpeachable, and the machinery of the plot is efficient though antiquated. It creaks perilously, but it finally arrives."
+ — N Y Tribune p25 My 4 '24 800w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:345 Jl '24

"The story moves in rather a leisurely fashion compared with the hectic type of mystery tale of today, but the array of incidents is closely related and has no appearance of being manufactured merely to afford a thrill. The story, though obviously fiction, helps to put the reader in the mood of a past era."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Je 15 '24 500w

"Mr. Weyman is successful in calling up conditions in a Germany occupied by French troops, and also in suggesting an atmosphere of intrigue and disorder. He dwells on this last rather to the detriment of a complicated plot—a plot in which the interconnexion of the varied episodes is not always easy to follow. The episodes themselves are vividly told."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p254 Ap 24 '24 150w
Wis Lib Bul 20:214 O '24

WEYMOUTH, PEARL. All that matters. 304p $2 Seltzer [7s 6d C. Palmer]
24-10304

The hero is young Cleeve Barrington who, urged on by his mother and political friends, engages himself to the wrong girl just before Yvonne, the right one, comes along. Yvonne masquerades as a married lady and mystery surrounds her. The rest of the book is taken up with further complicating and then swiftly unwinding the tangled skein of circumstances.

Lit R p954 Ag 9 '24 150w

"In spite of a violence in dialogue and an obvious straining for effect, 'All that Matters,' by Pearl Weymouth should serve to while away an idle hour. One thing that 'All that Matters' suggests is that English light fiction is no better than American light fiction."
+ — N Y Times p22 Je 1 '24 380w

"But for assurances to the contrary, we should suspect Miss Weymouth's people of the high life of having aped the manners and customs of a doubtful set below stairs." E. W. Osborn
— + N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 190w

"Hectic attempt to make an ultra-advanced novel out of melodramatic tricks that have served as substitutes for real life ever since the incipiency of modern fiction."
— Outlook 137:480 Jl 23 '24 70w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 70w

WHARTON, ANTHONY P., pseud. (ALISTER MCALISTER). Be good, sweet maid. 304p $2 Boni & Liveright
24-21819

This is a character study of Laura Strong, famous novelist—a writer of cheap, salacious love stories Her first literary triumph (known only to herself) is a translation of Madame Bovary, and this is rapidly followed by seven lurid novels which make her famous. Yet Laura's own life—how vapid! Several times she falls in love and she heroizes each love in her best sellers. Finally she marries the colorless Reggie Martin, a striving playwright. Her milk-and-water romance is short-lived and the last page of the book finds Laura's gold-banded fountain pen dashing off another "intrigue" to take its place amongst her triumphs.

"His is a well-executed, subtly ironical and thoroughly entertaining novel, although it may offend some women who are not yet sufficiently emancipated to enable them to snicker rather than foam at the mouth over the idea that 'The woman's place is in the home.'" Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p12 S 13 '24 250w

"To any one interested in writers or present day letters, 'Be Good, Sweet Maid' cannot fail to interest. It reveals a side of writing not often mentioned in novels. The portraiture is not relentless, for there is pity and understanding woven into the character of Laura, even when she is most ludicrous, which is often, yet there are ever present overtones of considerable insight and feeling."

+ N Y Times p8 S 7 '24 350w
N Y Tribune p16 S 21 '24 880w

"Mr. Wharton's work is a character study, sans incident, rather well done. As a human document we found it particularly stirring only in the chapter concerning Laura's adventure with her first cocktail." E. W. Osborn
— + N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 160w
Sat R of Lit 1:168 O 4 '24 560w
Spec 132:1050 Je 28 '24 70w

"Mr Wharton's own cleverness is so unremitting that it almost wearies the reader. Yet it is cleverness employed with delineative and satirical purpose. The dash and sparkle of the travesty are irresistible; the style light, delicate and workmanlike. Savagely ironical though the story is in its well-achieved aim, it reveals tender moments."
+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 29 '24 850w

WHARTON, MRS EDITH NEWBOLD (JONES).
False dawn (The 'forties). 143p $1.25 Appleton (Old New York, v 3) 24-11471
New Year's day (The 'seventies). 160p $1.25 Appleton (Old New York, v 2) 24-11470
The old maid (The 'fifties). 191p $1.25 Appleton (Old New York, v 1) 24-11469
The spark (The 'sixties). 109p $1.25 Appleton (Old New York, v 4) 24-11472

Four stories of four successive decades in New York social life which together form an authentic social history of old New York in the middle years of the last century. "False dawn" is a picture of the city in the "fabulous forties." The heir of the rich Raycies is sent to Europe to make the grand tour. The impressionable youth encounters artistic influences there which make him feel an alien in his stuffy, self-satisfied home, bring him into conflict with his father and profoundly affect his whole life. "The old maid" is an intense drama throbbing under the smooth surface of the complacent fifties—a story of mother-love revolving about the unacknowledged parentage of Tina Lovell. "The spark" tells the story of Hayley Delane, apparently acquiescent to his frivolous wife and the petty social round in which he moves, yet who lives an inner life of the spirit awakened by an impulse drawn from young Walt Whitman in the sixties. "New Year's day" is the story of Lizzie Hazeldean—another poignant tragedy unsuspected under the conventional surface of the seventies.

Reviewed by J: J. Chapman
Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '24 570w

"The tales certainly rank with her best work, and I suspect 'The Old Maid' of being almost as good as—if not, for its kind, a little better than 'Ethan Frome.'"
+ Bookm 59:590 Jl '24 270w

"It is only a minute fragment of New York—the New York of a handful of people who are typical and representative of merely a single phase of its life. These stories are really hole-in-the-corner stories—not cross sections of the whole of a great city or of humanity. They are biting in their commentary, in some phrases Mrs. Wharton's words eat like acid into the souls of her personages, but they traverse what seems to us to be merely a world of the novelist's artifice." E. F. Edgett
+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '24 1250w

"From these four books arises a composite picture of the society of 'Old New York'; very small, very closely connected in the first; little larger, almost as closely connected, and even more provincial, in the last. A society for the most part entirely materialistic. Mrs. Wharton denotes it all easily, with no straining after archeological effects, with no endeavor to be startling through topography." L. M. Field
+ Int Bk R p538 Je '24 1750w

Reviewed by J. L. Ford
— Int Bk R p785 O '24 1500w

"Edith Wharton has succeeded in catching and holding the esprit that was fashionable New York half a century or more ago. She has forgotten no detail of clothing, furnishings or food. She has brought into being the outward life of the middle of the last century with such a complete faithfulness to reality and such a fine selection of sense-words that each novelette is an individual cameo of form and color." Madelin Leof
+ Lit R p803 Je 7 '24 1000w

"In these four little novels of Old New York, Mrs. Wharton plays the double part of impressionist and story-teller, and succeeds in blending her two rôles with the perfection only attainable by a fine and subtle artist. Against a background rich in local and historical colour, she reveals those elemental human passions which, while they may superficially reflect their immediate setting, are perennially the same the world over." Gilbert Thomas
+ Nation and Ath 35:416 Je 28 '24 520w

"The stories in Old New York do not, on the one hand, follow life quite faithfully enough to be impressive as social studies and, on the other, are not quite dramatically enough developed to be satisfactory as conventional short stories. . . She has always been the Sargent of American fiction and as time goes on seems to become more and more willing to deal facilely with her subjects." Edmund Wilson
— + New Repub 39:77 Je 11 '24 780w

"The four stories which constitute 'Old New York' deserve wide popularity. Of them, one, 'The Old Maid' deserves and should acquire enduring fame. Not to read this story is to deliberately deny one's self an acquaintance with the finest contribution to our fiction made by any author in many years." Lloyd Morris
+ N Y Times p1 My 18 '24 2750w

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
N Y Tribune p21 Je 8 '24 1300w

"Each of these stories is a masterpiece in form and conception." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p7e My 25 '24 320w

"The true interest is not one of period, but of eternal human nature. . . The worth of these stories is in their merciless, powerful depiction of human suffering under social bondage and the deadly pressure of convention. We seem to detect a new note in the author's writing, one of sympathy for the victim, stronger than the irony by which here, as elsewhere, she has lightly yet keenly flicked at society's dull and deadly tyranny."
+ Outlook 137:201 Je 4 '24 520w

Reviewed by H: S. Canby
Sat R of Lit 1:43 Ag 16 '24 830w

"Her art has an affinity with blackmail: it is effective only so long as it threatens, but refrains from damaging disclosures; it depends upon our minding and her minding. Catastrophe she faces conscientiously but a little half-heartedly; the intimate discomfort of a false or tainted relationship she can convey as hardly anyone else can." L. P. Hartley
Spec 132:1006 Je 21 '24 1100w

"Succinctness and economy of means, as well as the utmost lucidity, characterize Mrs Wharton's total performance in these volumes. She has made the most rigid selection of material, and is eloquent by means of her missions as well as in what she chooses to set down. Certain defects are, however, to be discerned, and among these the chief one is that when Mrs Wharton attempts to picture men, she is not entirely at her ease." Stanley Alden
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 31 '24 1200w

"Mrs. Wharton cannot escape the defect of her quality: her handling of a plot is consummate, but precisely because she has such skill in giving veri-similitude to her delicate contrivance she sharpens our keenness to detect its weakness."
+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p553 S 11 '24 1900w
Wis Lib Bul 20:178 Jl '24

WHEELER, CHARLES GARDNER. Woodwork-
^{2} ing; a handbook for beginners in home and school, treating of tools and operations. 369p il $3.50 Putnam

684 Woodwork 24-6877

"Covers a wide field, presenting concisely the principles and methods of using hand tools and machines."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:511 N '24

WHEELER, JOSEPH LEWIS. Library and the community; increased book service through library publicity based on community studies. 417p il $3.50 A.L.A.

021.7 Libraries. Library advertising 24-18263

This book, which has developed from a series of lectures given annually since 1919 at the New York State Library School, is a practical treatise on library publicity. The first part, The community background, discusses the relation of the library to the community and outlines the chief factors in studying people in the neighborhood of the library, from the point of enlarging and improving library service. Part two, Public opinion and the library, emphasizes the library's dependence on public opinion and the importance of informing the public about what it is doing. Part three, The technique of publicity, is given to the various methods of library advertising—booklists, bulletins, posters, display, campaigns, newspaper publicity, etc.

Booklist 21:5 O '24

"The book is a veritable mine of information with regard to the important subject of contact between the library and the readers, actual and potential. The value of the book is greatly enhanced by the large number of pictures and reproductions of publicity methods and material which occur on almost every page and are accompanied with explanations in full detail. . . Taking the book as a whole, it is safe to say that no more useful library tool has ever been added to the fast-accumulating store of the librarian's professional literature." A. E. Bostwick

+ Library J 49:737 S 1 '24 1500w

N Y Times p26 S 7 '24 380w

St Louis p365 N '24

WHELPLEY, JAMES DAVENPORT. British-American relations. 325p $3.50 Little [14s G. Richards]

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations—United States. United States—Foreign relations—Great Britain 24-8063

"This book is an exploration into the present relations of the British and American peoples as influenced by their conceptions of each other, with a brief reference to a few of the historical events which are somewhat responsible." The author is an American who has lived many years in England. He believes that British policy since the war is working toward a better understanding and that the United States is justified in its present attitude of aloofness toward European affairs.

Reviewed by H. S. Quigley
Am Pol Sci R 18:816 N '24 390w

Booklist 21:53 N '24

"The book is valuable as coming from a well-informed, sympathetic, and high-minded American who has had exceptional opportunities of getting to know the life of the British people, and not the less so because the author is discriminating in regard to things English." R. A. Falconer

+ Canadian Hist R 5:262 S '24 1550w

Nation and Ath 34:932 Mr 29 '24 140w

"This is a thoughtful, informed and eminently practical study."

+ New Statesman 22:640 Mr 8 '24 350w

"Mr. Whelpley has done a conscientious task. If anything, he has overstated his case, for in his efforts to be just and to give both sides of the case he has been led into frequent repetition." W. B. Hayward

+ — N Y Times p18 Je 1 '24 820w

"Frank and understanding analysis." W. N. C. Carlton

+ N Y Tribune p21 My 25 '24 470w

"Mr. Whelpley's arguments are eloquent, but his premises are unsound.'

— N Y World p6e My 11 '24 380w

Reviewed by W. F. Johnson
No Am 219:892 Je '24 690w

"His book suffers from a certain redundancy, a going over of the same factors and data again and again, but otherwise it is well written and constructed."

— + Outlook 137:110 My 21 '24 300w

R of Rs 69:669 Je '24 90w

"As far as it goes it is thorough, documented, based on fact and common sense, good-tempered, and honest. The fact that Mr. Whelpley repeats himself a good deal and misses no opportunity to split an infinitive should not prejudice the reader against his matter and his conclusions." Joseph Brewer

+ — Spec 132:332 Mr 1 '24 300w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 20 '24 200w

Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p55 Ja 24 '24 2300w

"Any weight thrown into the scale of a better understanding will be welcome. Mr. Whelpley's book is such a weight; and it is all the more weighty as bearing the imprimatur of an American Ambassador."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p119 F 28 '24 2300w

WHIPPLE, THOMAS HEARNE BAILEY. Prin-
^{2} ciples of business writing. 182p $2 Westinghouse technical night school press, East Pittsburgh, Pa.

651.7 Commercial correspondence. English language—Business English 24-17824

"This book was prepared by the literary critic of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. It contains material originally prepared for a company publication which has been revised and extended to its present form. Principles of business letter writing are first discussed after which there appears a very extensive list of words and phrases often misused. A section on report writing is followed by a section which considers the mechanics of letter writing. In appendices are given some suggestions to authors and a list of questions and answers pertaining to business writing."—Management and Adm

"It is an excellent practical handbook for literary work, and, while it is directed mainly to the more work-a-day forms of literature, such as letters and reports, it will be found useful for any one who has writing to do."

+ Eng N 93:640 O 16 '24 150w

"A valuable addition to the constantly growing library on the subject of business writing."

+ Management and Adm 8:432 O '24 120w

St Louis p406 D '24

WHITE, DOROTHY VERNON (SMITH) (MRS WILLIAM HALE WHITE). Groombridge diary. 504p il $4.20 Oxford [12s 6d Milford]

B or 92 White, William Hale (Mark Rutherford, pseud.) 24-20013

"'The Groombridge Diary' was written by Dorothy Vernon, later Mrs. White and covers a period from 1908 until Rutherford's death in 1913. Rutherford had admired a story that Miss Vernon had written, and through this they met. The book to which the diary can best be compared is Boswell's 'Life of Johnson.' In both we have the same minute attention to detail, the same accurate reproduction of conversation, the skill in presenting not only the words and actions of the subject but the subject himself. Nothing very thrilling happens, life flows on gently, even so momentous an event as their marriage is presented merely as an interesting event."—Lit R

"She stresses the significant rather than the insignificant, and one has a notion that entries in this diary were made with an eye toward its ultimate publication."
— Bookm 60:508 D '24 120w

"Every line adds to the value of the none too extensive Mark Rutherford literature, and emphasizes the fact that both the man and his work have a lasting place in English letters." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 16 '24 1050w

Reviewed by I. C. Heyne
Lit R p12 S 20 '24 420w

Reviewed by R: Aldington
Nation and Ath 35:355 Je 14 '24 600w

"The Groombridge Diary is not quite so easy to read as White's own letters, but it tells simply and without affectation the story of Hale White's last years and of Mrs. White's beautiful devotion and service to him."
+ — New Repub 41:126 D 24 '24 220w

"The Diary, obviously, is not a book to be subjected to the usual sort of criticism. But it is necessary to say that it would have been vastly improved, as narrative and portrait, if it had been cut down by half."
— + New Statesman 23:654 S 13 '24 380w

N Y Times p15 Ag '24 1200w

Reviewed by S. T. Williams
No Am 220:352 D '24 600w

"No reader of this book but will be grateful to Mrs. White not only for a very interesting true story, but for helping us to much new understanding of the mind and temper of a remarkable man."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p299 My 15 '24 750w

WHITE, NEWMAN IVEY, and JACKSON, WALTER CLINTON, eds. Anthology of verse by American negroes. 250p $2 Trinity college press, Durham, N.C.

811.08 Negro poetry. American poetry—Collections 24-8393

This volume, which was ready for the press in 1921, lost its primacy thru the appearance of two other recent volumes, Johnson's "Book of American Negro poetry" and Kerlin's "Negro poets and their poems," listed in the Book Review Digest for May, 1922 and May, 1924 respectively. According to the statement of the compilers, the present volume gives a fuller representation to the older poets and includes some contemporary poets omitted in the later books. There is an historical and critical introduction. Brief biographies of the poets are included as well as bibliographical and critical notes.

Boston Transcript p3 My 24 '24 520w

"This anthology selects from the entire field of American negro verse that which for various reasons, seems most worth preserving. It must be confessed that the bulk of the work seems solely of historical interest." J. T .S.
Lit R p875 Jl 5 '24 300w

"A valuable collection covering about the same ground as that covered by Mr. Robert T. Kerlin in his recent volume. Both books are interesting as evidence of the fact that the poetic energies of the Negro race are at present directed away from folk-rhymes to more ambitious and more serious if as yet less successful forms."
+ Nation 118:688 Je 11 '24 50w

"It is without doubt the best anthology of American Negro poetry that has yet appeared. Good as is Kerlin's book, this is much superior to it; it lacks that work's passionate academicianism." E. D. Walrond
+ New Repub 40:52 S 10 '24 680w

"This is a most creditable and appreciative volume."
+ N Y World p7e Je 15 '24 200w

"The Introduction and the biographical and critical notes enhance the value of the book as a study of the rapidly increasing and developing literature of a race." Arthur Guiterman
+ Outlook 137:157 My 28 '24 110w

WHITE, PERCIVAL, and HAYWARD, WALTER SUMNER. Marketing practice. 577p $3.50 Doubleday

658.83 Marketing 24-13696

This book is a practical guide to marketing both for the student and the business man. The subject is examined from several viewpoints and is divided into seven parts as follows: I The approach to marketing; II Marketing functions; III Marketing agencies; IV Basic marketing systems; V The retail system; VI Marketing problems of the individual business; VII Foreign markets. There is also an introduction and a general outline. Appended to each chapter is a brief list of collateral readings as well as outlines which are followed by a list of problems pertaining to the topics discussed.

Booklist 21:95 D '24

"A comprehensive study. An extended bibliography is furnished which is helpful, and the book has been exceptionally well edited." J. G.
+ Bookm 59:adv Ag '24 120w

"A thoroughly practical and readable discussion of marketing, with sound theory underlying all."
+ N Y Times p19 Ag 10 '24 90w
R of Rs 71:111 Ja '25 120w

WHITE, STEWART EDWARD. Glory hole. 495p $2.50 Doubleday

24-29637

A rapidly growing, self-conscious Middle West town is the scene of this long story which opens in the closing decade of the last century. The Kirbys are the leading family of the town and young Fred Kirby's wife is showing the qualities which fit her for maintaining the leadership. An enormously rich expatriate uncle returns one day to the long-vacant Kirby mansion and when after some years he dies, Fred Kirby inherits his millions. The story deals with the effect of this sudden wealth on the husband and wife and young son, Zozo. Fred Kirby prefers simplicity but his wife's ambition is boundless and her will conquers. Young Zozo is spoiled by his mother's indulgence and comes to a tragic end in his freshman year at college. When Fred Kirby realizes the wreck of three lives he asserts his will, and Minnie's long held leadership passes to him. He determines to devote his wealth to some useful purpose.

"The story itself, surprising though we find it to be, reveals a new and important side to Mr. White's talent. It gives him the right to be placed among the other important interpreters of American life." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p6 N 12 '24 1600w

"The action is somewhat slow in beginning, but the novel is thoroughly readable; the excellence of the portraiture and the vividness of the setting help to give it an exceptional flavor." S. A. Coblentz
+ Int Bk R p138 Ja '25 330w

"The book holds the interest, inexorably, simply as a story. It is by far the best thing Mr. White has ever done, quite out of the class of his earlier work both in conception and in execution." H. L. Pangborn
+ Lit R p4 N 29 '24 600w

WHITE, STEWART E:—Continued

" 'The Glory Hole,' as has been said, is both a comedy and a morality. The comedy is very good indeed. As a morality it is less successful."

+ — N Y Times p22 N 9 '24 820w

N Y World p9e N 16 '24 190w

"Cabined as it is among the mediocre and the contemporary, this seems a strange book for Mr. White to be writing. But he has brought humor and subtlety to his new theme. The genre, which includes 'Babbitt' and 'Gold Shod,' holds no novel better done." Bernard De Voto

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:412 D 27 '24 720w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p733 N 13 '24 200w

WHITE, WALTER F. Fire in the flint. 300p $2.50 Knopf

24-21400

Written by a Georgian negro, this novel has for its theme the problem of race relations in the South. Dr Kenneth Harper, intelligent and better educated than most of his white townsmen, comes back from his training in the North to establish a practice in his home town. His attempts to live by his philosophy of tolerance and friendliness fail utterly. His duties as a doctor quickly bring him to a knowledge of the ignorance, unreasoning hatred and bitter persecution flourishing in the town. His sister's rape and his brother's murder rouse him to vengeance. Contrary to his impulses, he nevertheless heeds an urgent call to the bedside of a sick white woman, saves her, and steps out of the house into the hands of a lynching, howling mob of whites who misunderstood his visit.

"It is told with a sort of passionate vigor that sweeps you over faults in characterization to the finish which, to me, is inevitable and therefore not melodramatic." J. F.

Bookm 60:342 N '24 60w

Boston Transcript p5 D 17 '24 220w

"Negligible as literature, unreal as a picture, this book by a negro is nevertheless a cry of the oppressed, of a people genuinely oppressed and dishonorably abused. Let those who read it ask themselves if the indictment be not true. And then let us have the honesty to confess our sins of omission and commission, and the courage enough to try to right the wrong." E.

+ — Ind 113:202 S 27 '24 390w

"The contruction of the piece, after a rather awkward introduction, is admirable. The tragedy is built up steadily, logically, even if somewhat artfully: the effect is cumulative, and when he reaches his last act it moves splendidly to its end, making superbly good use of the dramatic irony of the situation." H. L. Pangborn

+ — Int Bk R p850 N '24 1750w

"It would not be hard to point out flaws in the book if one choose to judge it purely as literature—there are the marks of the amateur plainly upon it in many places, and yet the story is so filled with human emotions that it is intensely interesting." Herschel Brickell

+ — Lit R p14 N 1 '24 310w

"In such a mold Mr. White has poured all that he knows, all that he has observed in years, all that he has dreamed and all that he has experienced, interpreting everything with his own passion and leaving art to take care of itself. The result is a stirring novel, beautifully and passionately written, the exact like of which has never been seen in the United States." Konrad Bercovici

+ Nation 119:386 O 8 '24 780w

N Y Times p9 S 14 '24 1150 w

"The story is painful to a degree, and it is painful not primarily because it is tragic or bloody, but because Walter White knows so well what he is talking about. He has written a book that lives and breathes by the terrible truth and reality of its substance." Freda Kirchwey

+ N Y Tribune p5 S 28 '24 1150w

"It isn't a good enough novel to penetrate as literature; and as Mr. White hasn't Upton Sinclair's uncanny flair for the sensational approach, he can't win a hearing as a propagandist. However, it will penetrate some places, and by that much is helpful."

— + Survey 53:160 N 1 '24 1100w

WHITE, WILLIAM ALANSON. Introduction to the study of the mind. (Nervous and mental disease monograph ser.) 116p il $2 Nervous and mental disease pub.

150 Psychology, Pathological. Psychology

24-15311

"Dr. White is the superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital at Washington, D. C. He has prepared this monograph for the use of medical students, social workers, and all those interested in mental hygiene. He states that his purpose is not so much to present a body of facts as to create a 'state of mind.' His book is intended to draw attention to new methods in the study of mental processes and to suggest new points of view. He thinks that the time has come when it is important for the present generation to spend as much energy in learning about itself as it has been expending in the past in learning about its environment." —R of Rs

---

"Dr. White's presentation is not that of a trained writer. He is sometimes ungrammatical, often awkward. But his meaning is clear. The science he introduces is a far more human one than the old psychology used to be."

+ — Bookm 60:232 O '24 200w

"Very seldom does a difficult technical word make its way into these fascinating pages. The author's kindly sympathetic and wholesome personality is evident throughout. The book is an admirable introduction to the study of the mind." F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 30 '24 900w

R of Rs 70:335 S '24 120w

WHITE, WILLIAM ALLEN. Editor and his people; editorials, selected from the Emporia Gazette. 380p $2.50 Macmillan

814 24-10047

"William Allen White's editorials, gathered into book form not through any motion of their author's but for classroom purposes at the University of Kansas, are much more than merely readable. Go through the book at a sitting and you will find yourself in possession of several portraits: (a) the author, (b) Emporia, (c) any good country editor, (d) Main Street seen from the inside looking out, (e) America yesterday and today, America in its most characteristic phases. In fact, you get from the book a whole generation of American history in the Middle West. To help make this clear, these editorials from the files of the Emporia Gazette are doubly classified, as to date and as to theme. You begin with the earnest young reactionary of the 'nineties, busily agitated about saving the country from the Populists, and you move forward on several fronts to the author of the recent Pulitzer Prize editorial in support of free speech—To an Anxious Friend—as fine a declaration of the faith of the liberal as has been written in our time."— New Repub

---

Am Pol Sci R 18:652 Ag '24 80w

"Always he is an entertaining writer. Instinctively, he selected subjects of wide human interest. This explains much of the present attraction in these editorials which might otherwise be as stale as the episodes which evoked them. Mr. White is a chronicler of the significant events in the lives of the people of his village, and because he has the genius of a story-teller, what he writes has lived. Mr. White's personal willingness to respond honestly to the facts, and the freedom with which he has written, have given him a unique position in present journalism." W: L. Chenery

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '24 400w

Booklist 21:19 O '24

Bookm 60:96 S '24 150w

"Mr. White loves Kansas, which gives him the right to chide her when she needs it. He is most delightful on local ground, but his field goes beyond Emporia, beyond Kansas, out into all America and into the whole world. No smaller area could justify the delightful wit, joy, sadness, wisdom, neighborliness, praise and reprimand that make this collection so satisfying and enjoyable." W. K. H.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 28 '24 700w

Reviewed by Arthur Pound
Ind 113:22 Jl 5 '24 360w

"It should be noted that there is as good prose in this book as has appeared in any American newspaper in this generation, as good prose as that of Frank Cobb, and sometimes better. Even if you are not interested in studies of the American scene, there are many pages in this volume which will hold your attention; while for anyone who wants to know what Main Street is and has been like, it is at the head of the list of required reading." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 39:305 Ag 6 '24 1100w

"They are more than editorials. Kansas editors are not bound by the articles of war that impose solemnity upon their metropolitan brethren. Theirs is a liberty comparable with that of a New York 'colyumist.' They deal in anecdote, parable, autobiography or plain fiction, according to taste and mood. One would have to go far to find writing braver, simpler or more heartbreaking than this father's account of the death of Mary White. These fragments may be intelligible when much of the more pretentious writing of our age has lost all meaning to our descendants."

+ N Y Times p5 Je 1 '24 1100w

Reviewed by W: L. McPherson
N Y Tribune p21 Ag 3 '24 780w

"Here is a fat book of editorials, most of which are worth reading, many delightful. It is interesting to trace in them the transformation of the 'standpatter' into the 'progressive rampant.' You really get from this book a whiff as it were of Kansas at harvest time. Who could have imagined such a phenomenon in a book of old editorials?"

+ Outlook 138:462 N 19 '24 100w

St Louis p383 N '24

"Mr White's prominence is owed to his being a specimen of the prevailing Kansas and western type at its best—the type that, whether always at its best or not, is dominating and seems likely to dominate us still further in political, economic and social organization. Mr White possesses sincere and facile ability to express the spirit of his people to them and for them."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 2 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p558 S 11 '24 480w

WHITE, WILLIAM ALLEN. Woodrow Wilson, the man, his times, and his task. 527p il $5 Houghton

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 24-27886

"Mr. White has told the story of a man whom he obviously regards with a deep affection on his private side, and in his public career as one of the great figures of all time. . . The key to this story of Woodrow Wilson, written with love and with understanding, is to be found in Mr. White's phrase, 'as we know him who worked with him.' The book is the testimony of one who worked with Woodrow Wilson in the body as millions of Wilson's countrymen worked with him in the spirit; and because of this comradeship in an ideal and in an effort Mr. White has been saved from the fate that has overtaken so many of his fellow-Liberals. He has not permitted Wilson's shortcomings, errors and failures to send him reeling from a great faith into a violent grouch. . . Possibly under the influence of the new genetics, Mr. White resolves pretty nearly the whole of Wilson's early life and much of his later career into terms of the paternal Wilson strain of Irish and the maternal Woodrow strain of North British. It is certainly a convenient formula for the explanation of sharply clashing opposites within the same human framework." —N Y Times

---

Booklist 21:150 Ja '25

"William Allen White, the author of the most recent of the many biographies of this remarkable man, states at the outset that 'the story will disclose no new events nor details nor circumstances.' With becoming modesty he disclaims credit for having written a source book, but perhaps his volume will be more interesting to future historians than the author's disclaimer would lead us to believe." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 22 '24 2300w

"One of the best biographies, if not the best, of the late Woodrow Wilson that has yet been written." D: Lawrence

+ Int Bk R p91 Ja '25 1600w

Reviewed by T: L. Masson
Lit R p6 D 27 '24 1400w

"At times Mr. White misinterprets Woodrow Wilson. In the round he understands Wilson completely, and has made that fact clear in a book marked by high intuition, courage and tenderness." Simeon Strunsky

+ — N Y Times pl N 23 '24 3200w

"Mr. White has given us an illuminating portrait, one that will not easily be surpassed. He has written a book that is both fascinating, invigorating and beautiful. His final estimate is fair, and probably true." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p9e N 23 '24 1600w

"A strange work; interesting but peculiar. He tries to steer a middle course between the partisans, who see the ex-President as 'some sort of Heaven-sent Messiah,' and his enemies, who make of him 'a fine old striped devil.' He fears that he may please neither, and in that fear he is probably justified." E. L. Pearson

Outlook 138:688 D 24 '24 980w

R of Rs 70:667 D '24 130w

"William Allen White is no poet. It is because he has been untouched by the divine afflatus he has clothed a lay figure with the vesture of words, but into it he has put no soul. For he who does not live in visions cannot understand a man whose soul has been exalted by a vision." A. M. Low

— + Sat R of Lit 1:377 D 13 '24 1250w

WHITE, WILLIAM HALE (MARK RUTHERFORD, pseud.). Letters to three friends; [ed. by Dorothy Vernon White]. 404p il $3.50 Oxford [10s 6d Milford]

B or 92 24-16800

"'Letters to Three Friends,' contains three series of letters written by Mr. White, one to Mr. and Mrs. Colenutt ranging from 1872 to 1908, another to Miss Partridge covering the years from 1893 to 1912, and the third to Philip Webb dating from 1894 to 1913, the last one only a short time before he died. These intimate and long lasting friendships called out from Mr. White many interesting comments and reminiscences."—N Y Times

---

"A few widely scattered critical observations, and an occasional glimpse of Ruskin, Tennyson, or the Pre-Raphaelites, fail to compensate for countless pages describing the physical discomforts and mental depression attendant upon old age. The intimate record of daily events is interesting in contrast to our present way of life, although the intimacy which appeals in a letter frequently does not stand the test of type."

— + Bookm 60:508 D '24 120w

"The letters give a comprehensive view of the man and his mind, revealing through the course of a record of his daily activities, many of them mere trivialities in the eyes of the outer world, the diversity of his thoughts, his reading and his intellectual interests. Here and there come little touches of the old fashioned man who prefers the old world into which he was born to the new in which he is living." E. F. Edgett

WHITE, W: H.—Continued
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 16 '24 1050w

"Their intrinsic value is great. As calm, easy-going prose, and as bedside companions, they rank with the familiar letters of James Howell, and the Religio Medici of Sir Thomas Browne. They are not to be read in toto, but are rather to be dipped into at intervals." I. C. Heyne
+ Lit R p12 S 20 '24 420w

Reviewed by R: Aldington
Nation and Ath 35:355 Je 14 '24 600w

Reviewed by R: Aldington
New Repub 41:125 D 24 '24 900w

"The editing is almost non-existent. An introduction to the Letters and connecting pages are badly needed. The 'Three friends' are not three, but five. The footnotes are careless: the so-called Shelley Letters for which Browning wrote an introduction are referred to, but with no mention of the fact that they were spurious; the high bicycle is called a 'bone-shaker'—an earlier machine of torture. And there are other examples."
— New Statesman 23:654 S 13 '24 380w

"The letters are singularly fine in their literary quality, showing an instinctive use of words and a finish of style, although they were casual and intimate, and not intended for publication."
+ N Y Times p15 Ag 24 '24 300w

"This little volume is full of wisdom on literature and life." S. T. Williams
+ No Am 220:352 D '24 600w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Spec 133:164 Ag 2 '24 570w

"The letters are rich in good things—good thought and criticism, good narratives, good rages; but the best of them is their affectionate spirit and the light that shines from it."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p299 My 15 '24 750w

WHITE, WILLIAM PATTERSON. Twisted foot. 329p il $2 Little 24-19025

"A mysterious bandit, Twisted Foot, furnishes most of the thrills of this tale, and those he does not are given by Sam Calthorp, the big cattleman, who didn't like 'nesters' and didn't hesitate to make it uncomfortable for them. The cattleman came to grief because he pushed matters too far in trying to drive out the Fairs, who have had the audacity to try to farm on ground where he wanted to graze his cattle, and it was the woman who did it. Buff Warren, one of Calthorp's cowboys, fell in love with Gillian Fair, got himself appointed deputy sheriff and with the aid of his cousin Bill cleaned up things generally, disposing of the bandit and Calthorp in most workmanlike manner."—Lit R

"Mr. White's latest addition to the literature of saddle and gun is average. It is a good story, better than some and not as good as others."
+ — Boston Transcript p3 S 6 '24 240w

"Mr. White has provided a most interesting tale and has told it well." C. P. Sawyer
+ Lit R p10 S 27 '24 160w

"Amusing with the authentic humor of Americans on the plains."
+ — N Y Times p18 Ag 24 '24 220w

"An awakening tale for the August vacationist who takes along a book with a kick." E. W. Osborn
+ N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 100w

WHITECHURCH, VICTOR LORENZO. Bishop out of residence. 315p $2 Duffield [7s 6d Unwin]
[24-2574]

His lordship, the Bishop of Lenchester, was much in need of a rest, so under the ordinary name of Rev. J. M. Johnson he assumes the duties of vicar of a country parish. Then his troubles begin. When he is called upon to rout a lazy youth out of bed, and to comfort a neurotic widow to whose blandishments he remains immune, he begins to comprehend the difficulties of a country parson. His indignation knows no bounds when thru mistaken identity he is compelled to spend a night in jail! Thus does the "Rev. J. M. Johnson" find himself the victim of strange circumstances until by a chance meeting with his nephew his record is cleared and, to the chagrin of those who were responsible for his trials, he discloses his identity. There is also the lively love affair of the Bishop's irresistible nephew which complicates matters—but everybody is happy in the end.

Booklist 21:114 D '24

"Given a situation for a serious and admirable high comedy of manners, the author insists on developing a low-comedy motive from his material."
— + Boston Transcript p3 S 20 '24 700w
Lit R p9 D 20 '24 400w
N Y Times p9 S 7 '24 570w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e Ag 24 '24 130w
Outlook 138:512 N 26 '24 50w

"The humor of this book is irresistibly gay."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a S 7 '24 160w

"A highly diverting series of incidents."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Mr 27 '24 160w

WHITEHEAD, HAROLD. Business of selling. 247p $1.40 Am. bk.
658 Salesmen and salesmanship 23-9210

"A text-book which, without ignoring vocational, psychological, and general educational values, attempts to subordinate these to the idea of service."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:76 F '24

WHITING, EDWARD ELWELL. Calvin Coolidge; his ideals of citizenship. 391p $2 Wilde, A. W.
320

A collection of extracts from President Coolidge's addresses to which are added interpretative comments by the editor.

"Mr. Whiting's book is both a campaign and a public document. It is of vital interest not only to the Republican party, but also to the whole American people." E. F. E.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 30 '24 530w
Springf'd Republican p10 S 8 '24 480w

WHITRIDGE, ARNOLD. Critical ventures in modern French literature. 187p $1.75 Scribner
840.4 French literature 24-4138

The French writers whom Mr Whitridge ventures among are Stendhal, Sainte-Beuve, Gérard de Nerval, Barbey d'Aurevilly, Villiers de l'Isle-Adam, Théodore de Banville, Marie Lenéru, Sacha Guitry and Anatole France. The essays, which are both biographical and critical, represent an individual point of view, for each of the writers the critic has discovered for himself, and made his own by writing about.

Booklist 20:333 Je '24

"Mr. Whitridge's work deserves to be commended; for the author has not only illuminated the salient features of each writer's contribution but has briefly and clearly delineated the personality of the man himself—hence has distinctly traced the relationship between literature and the makers of literature."
+ Bookm 59:473 Je '24 100w

"Mr. Whitridge has taken mediocrities, often, and made of them personages, no small accomplishment in its way. He is a sane and clever guide along the bypaths of literary France, a companionable critic." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 23 '24 560w

Cleveland p45 Je '24

Dial 77:439 N '24 150w

"If one wishes to search for a defect, he will find it to lie in the fact that Mr. Whitridge is a gentleman first and a literary critic second. Much concerned as he is with the personality of the different writers, he frequently cannot resist the impulse to bring them up before the bar of gentlemanly conduct and find them wanting—thus giving a judgment which is true enough, but which the critic must get out of the habit of taking too seriously if he is to feel at all comfortable in the world of literature." J. W. Krutch

+ — Lit R p645 Ap 5 '24 800w

"The essay on Stendhal is interesting, but not notable. Gerard de Nerval, the eccentric 'sanitist,' who took his own life that he might discover what passes beyond the veil, proves a more happy choice. His choice of Marie Lenéru among the figures of our own time is almost as felicitous; and the paper on Sacha Guitry is the only one in the book that one feels ought not to have been preserved." W: A. Drake

+ — Nation 119:241 S 3 '24 700w

"Mr. Whitridge is an American who is neither pedagogic nor over sure of his ground. He is not tremendously excited about novelty and he can take men and their works for what they are without trying to read into them a theory which is his and not theirs. In most ways he is a good modern European; a journalist and none the worse for it; a lover of the things which have given him pleasure and a writer who can give his reasons for it."

+ New Statesman 23:72 Ap 26 '24 700w

"To the discussion of every one of these figures Mr. Whitridge brings a fresh and individual point of view, a rich and discerning critical faculty and a genuine and contagious enthusiasm for his subject matter."

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 13 '24 650w

"There are no lumps in the informational repast; most of the matter is pre-digested food. Mr. Whitridge serves more than adequately as the courteous gentleman who introduces you to the great or eccentric man." B. G.

+ N Y Tribune p25 My 18 '24 150w

"The little group of familiar talks (they are hardly essays) is stimulating and unconventional."

+ Outlook 136:486 Mr 19 '24 200w

"A collection—very desultory—of slight but pleasing interpretative studies of certain French writers."

— + Springf'd Republican p10 F 29 '24 250w

"On the whole Mr. Whitridge's judgments are sound and his style light and pleasing. There is enough real thinking and feeling in these pages to repay a more intensive cultivation."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p300 My 15 '24 550w

Wis Lib Bul 20:175 Jl '24

WIDDEMER, MARGARET. Charis sees it through. 272p $1.75 Harcourt
24-21401

Charis Drayton, the gently-bred daughter of a college professor, marries Jan Laszlos, a brilliant young Czechoslovakian and promising engineer. Very much in love with each other, they set up housekeeping in a New York apartment. They are shortly descended upon by four of Jan's family, immigrants from Bohemia with the dress and behavior of peasants. The story is concerned with the way Charis stands up under her trials and sees the thing thru.

Booklist 21:114 D '24

Boston Transcript p6 O 29 '24 460w

Cleveland p92 D '24

"The story is a moving narrative, its people definitely alive and profoundly understood."

+ Lit R p10 S 27 '24 420w

"The narrative is somewhat repetitious and drags occasionally, while the deeper possibilities of the theme are scarcely indicated. Though not quite so badly written as 'Graven Image,' the book, so far as style is concerned, has little to commend it."

— + N Y Times p16 N 23 '24 600w

"An interesting novel, with just the right amount of suspense to make it thrilling." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p8e O 5 '24 360w

WIENER, LEO. Contemporary drama of Russia. (Contemporary drama ser.) 276p $2.50 Little

891.72 Russian drama—History and criticism 24-27618

In his critical survey of contemporary Russian drama, the author, a Russian and professor of Slavic languages and literature at Harvard university, arrives at conclusions as to the comparative value of modern Russian dramatists which are often at variance with the views generally held. The successes of the Moscow art theater are rated somewhat less high than in the popular foreign estimation. He bases his conclusions on evidence drawn from Russian theatrical annals and periodicals and from contemporary letters. From these sources he has traced the evolution of the Russian drama and the relation of the dramatists to the stage production of their plays. Playwrights and plays not otherwise accessible have been dealt with and there is a bibliographical appendix of authors and plays.

Booklist 21:144 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '25 630w

"Professor Wiener has rendered a valuable service in compiling this handy volume. The final chapter, on 'The Theatre Under the Bolsheviks,' is frankly disappointing; not because the author dissents with the newest experimentalists, but because the information he divulges on this particular subject appears to be extremely scant. For what it is, however, a historic résumé of the achievements of the Russian drama, the book is a welcome addition to the growing literature on the creative achievements of the Russians." J: Cournos

+ — Lit R p5 O 18 '24 700w

"The preface of this curious contribution to scholarship leads one to believe that here at last is a history of the Russian drama. Further, one is given to understand that this is not merely an outline of developments but also a startling revaluation of accepted values. The table of contents, in contradiction of the title, indicates that from these pages one may learn about the Russian theater from its origins to its present status under Communism. In all such expectations one is deceived, much as was Mother Hubbard's dog." Avrahm Yarmolinsky

— Nation 119:576 N 26 '24 900w

"Wiener has provided a complete, exhaustive and practical catalogue of Russian drama in his appendices. But the illuminating, unbiased works on these subjects are still to be written." O. M. Sayler

— + N Y Times p23 D 28 '24 400w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko

N Y Tribune p4 Ja 11 '25 600w

"A most 'compendible packet of information about a subject on which not much in English is to be had.'" M. J. Moses

+ Outlook 138:511 N 26 '24 20w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 18 '25 400w

WIGGAM, ALBERT EDWARD. Fruit of the ^{2} family tree. 390p il $3 Bobbs

575 Heredity. Eugenics 24-29768

"Correctly and modestly described by the author as an 'incomplete account of the meaning of heredity and of biological forces in human life and society.' In brief, eugenics

WIGGAM, ALBERT E:—Continued
and its problems, which are, to quote Mr. Wiggam, 'problems of psychology, of biology, of economics, of political science, of practical politics, of climate, of race, of art, history, education, morals, religion and of all those forces which play ceaselessly, whether he will or no, upon the organic nature and destiny of man.''—N Y World

"His 'New Decalogue' has won for him a public which many a novelist might envy, and here he is on an even broader ground of popular interest, a field which nobody competent to write with his scientific definiteness and caution has yet occupied." F. P. Stockbridge
+ Lit R p6 N 22 '24 1550w

"An erudite, helpful and yet interesting volume." Will Cuppy
+ N Y World p8e D 28 '24 1050w

"Social service workers need precisely such summaries, interpretations, popular readable resumes of the technical advances outside their own special field. They cannot pursue these problems through the ramifications of an abstruse research volume. The interesting, yet accurate, volume here fills a real need." Leon Whipple
+ Survey 53:358 D 15 '24 580w

WIGNALL, TREVOR C. Story of boxing. 319p il $6 Brentano's [21s Hutchinson]
796 Boxing

"Mr. Wignall has written a comprehensive history of the sport of boxing from its very earliest days to the present, the most complete of the many books that have appeared within recent months to satisfy the public taste for more knowledge of the game. The interest in boxing, aside from its purely sporting aspects, centers in the odd and interesting personalities the game has developed. These are treated fully and well in 'The Story of Boxing,' with abundant quotations from contemporary authors."—Lit R

"A fascinating book." T. R. Coward
+ Bookm 59:597 Jl '24 80w

Reviewed by S. L. Cook
Boston Transcript p5 Mr 8 '24 2000w
Dial 77:268 S '24 100w

"The book is by a British sporting writer, who must, therefore, be forgiven for a slight leaning toward the English boxers and an entirely excusable attempt to apologize for the present sorry lot of British fighters. He has done his work, well, however, and followers of the sport will find the volume interesting, accurate, and informative."
+ Lit R p695 Ap 19 '24 370w

"It is a valuable book of reference for those who wish to have ready at hand the data of pugilism. Those who maintain a library of sports will also wish to inspect the book with a view to adding it to their collection. Much anecdotal material has been omitted which would enliven the pages."
+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 2 '24 1500w

WILDE, NORMAN. Ethical basis of the state. 2 236p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [11s 6d Milford]
320.1 State, The 24-23280

"The work is a contribution to the study of the preliminary ethical questions which precede all the present-day theories of the State. It is a popular and untechnical treatment of principles more or less clearly recognized since the time of Plato and Aristotle."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p7 D 6 '24 500w

Reviewed by James Luby
N Y Times p6 O 26 '24 900w

"Rarely nowadays do we have such satisfying speculation as Professor Wilde's. Drawn from the living model of the body politic and based upon an intimate and affectionate acquaintance with the great political speculators from Plato and Aristotle to Laski and Cole, he has made a very human and yet searching analysis of the underlying issues of statecraft, their applications in the past and their implications for the present." Phillips Bradley
+ N Y Tribune p5 O 19 '24 850w

WILDE, PERCIVAL. Inn of discontent, and other fantastic plays. 157p $1.50 Little 812 24-24069

There is an element of fantasy in every one of these one-act plays. In the first of them it is life itself that is pictured as the "inn of discontent." Contents: The inn of discontent; Lady of dreams; The luck-piece; Ashes of romance; Nocturne.

"The most solid piece in his latest volume is 'The Luck-Piece,' which is adroitly handled and possesses a good backbone of plot." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Tribune p12 D 14 '24 80w

"He and stage technique are in love with each other. If only the weight of his content was as unerring as his handling! But these plays are decorative; they do not bite into life, they do not sparkle with brilliant dialogue. They are clever sleights of hand—a hand that is excellently sure of what effect it wants to gain." M. J. Moses
+ — Outlook 138:511 N 26 '24 180w

WILDER, HARRIS HAWTHORNE. Man's prehistoric past. 463p il $5 Macmillan
571 Man, Prehistoric. Archeology 23-9585

For descriptive note see Annual for 1923.

"The author has given us a very readable and useful introduction to a vast, important, and comparatively new field of study."
+ Am Hist R 29:365 Ja '24 420w

"Professor Wilder has succeeded in producing a volume well adapted for use in the classroom, and at the same time so well written that it will appeal to all who are interested in the prehistory of man." Fay-Cooper Cole
+ Am J Soc 29:614 Mr '24 280w
Booklist 20:206 Mr '24

"Professor Wilder's book has much to recommend it for general consumption. Although as a zoölogist he stands somewhat aside from the current of professional anthropological discussion, he has read widely and boiled down a great mass of data into manageable compass." R. H. Lowie
+ Lit R p507 F 9 '24 420w

WILEY, HUGH. The prowler. 272p $2 2 Knopf
24-31905

The Memphis negro, Vitus Marsden, known as the Wildcat, and his mascot goat Lily continue their pursuit of Lady Luck, this time on the Pacific coast. The Wildcat runs a shoe-shining parlor in San Francisco, is chauffeur for a few hours to a rich lady in San Diego, takes a try in the movies and has an adventure with a whale. Thru all he is fairly successful in dodging Old Man Trouble.

"Mr. Wiley's astonishing negroes are satisfyingly real; they are, no doubt, exaggerated almost to the point of burlesque, but they are not burnt-cork imitations. It is frankly farce-comedy, and always entertaining, but it is built upon a solid enough foundation." H. L. P.
+ Int Bk R p61 D '24 190w

"Mr. Wiley has created from likable negro virtues and almost as likable negro failings, a very definite piece of characterization indeed. Through all the verbal grotesqueries that give light—albeit at times an artificial light—to his pages there stands out a living soul."
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 11 '25 300w

"It is an amusing and a vivid book."
+ N Y Tribune p11 N 2 '24 470w

WILEY, JOHN. Education of Peter. 313p $2 Stokes
24-4704

The setting is Yale but the story might be of any "different" boy's attempt to find himself during his four years of college life. Burdened with a family to live up to and his brother's injunction to know the right people, Peter Carey finds his inclinations lead him to the "Lit" and the highbrows rather than to athletics, where the right people are. Tho he misses election to a fraternity, in consequence, and has an unfortunate love affair, his college career is on the whole satisfying to him and eventually he finds the right girl.

Booklist 20:341 Je '24

"A college story written without violence is unusual. Peter is not a noble hero; but he is a human one. An undergraduate story such as this may be enjoyed by elders as well as by students themselves." J. F.
+ Bookm 59:339 My '24 30w

"The story contains a certain amount of rather ingenuous and young love stuff, but then, Peter was young. The whole volume has about it a freshness which makes it appealing."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 15 '24 420w

"'The Education of Peter' is unmistakably a first novel. It is rough in construction, grammar and punctuation are sometimes off the beaten track, words are occasionally used without much consideration for their meaning. It is the book of a young man who is learning about life and is teaching himself to write about it. As he shakes free of the incubus of the stillborn Yale 'literary renaissance,' gains greater familiarity with his subject and more ease with his medium, Mr. Wiley will be a writer to be respected and enjoyed. At present the odds are in his favor." J: Carter
+ — Lit R p575 Mr 8 '24 1200w
N Y Times p8 Mr 2 '24 480w

"There are neither black shadows nor lurid high lights in the picture, perhaps it is a trifle too Arcadian and refined to be taken as a literal transcript from student life; but the dull vulgarity and weak emphasis of some recent collegiate fiction make this a welcome relief to at least one reader. I doubt if an undergrad is worth a novel; still, I am glad to have met Peter." Isabel Paterson
— + N Y Tribune p20 Mr 2 '24 800w

"Peter is, alas, necessarily duller than his naughty novelistic contemporaries." Malcolm Ross
— N Y World p7e Mr 9 '24 350w

"Upon closing the book, the reader is inclined to feel that many of the characters are hazily and unimpressively drawn and that the author has offered neither a sweeping criticism nor an enthusiastic commendation of the American undergraduate."
— Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 6 '24 550w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p669 O 23 '24 190w

WILLCOX, LOUISE (COLLIER) (MRS WESTMORE WILLCOX), comp. The torch; a book of poems for boys. 514p il $5 Harper
2
821.08 English poetry—Collections. Children's poetry 24-13154

In dedicating this collection of poems to her little grandson Mrs Willcox tells him that she has gathered them to help "set his first thoughts to a happy tune." The poems, which are meant to be read between the third and tenth years, are taken from many sources, old and new. They are arranged in the following groups: Lullabies; Birds, beasts, and flowers; Out-of-doors; House and home; History and native land; Legends and stories; Humor; Prayers, graces, cards, and meditations.

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Bookm 60:167 O '24 30w

"Misleadingly subtitled 'A Book of Poems For Boys. The selection is a poet's gift to her grandson, and it is a most interesting selection. But it is not so much for boys as it is for children generally whose parents wish assistance in introducing them to poems which will sow the seeds of poetry-loving fruition." M. G. Bonner
+ — Int Bk R p129 Ja '25 80w

"The selections represent a wide range of ancient and modern, and one can only believe that the sensitive and responsive boy will find the pages greatly to his taste and communicative of real lessons about poetic quality."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 7 '24 190w

WILLIAMS, A. FRANCON. Everyone's book of the weather. 117p il $1 Macmillan [2s 6d Sheldon press]
551.5 Weather 24-26197

"The book has to do, not with the forecasting of the weather, but with the observation and recording of various meteorological occurrences. The greater part of the book is given over to explanations, simplified as much as possible, of such phenomena as winds, thunder and lightning, clouds and rainbows. The thermometer, barometer, aneroid and similar instruments are described in such a manner that there is hardly a possibility of anyone's not grasping their principles. Mr. Williams recommends the keeping of a weather chart by anyone interested in the weather and its changes. To that end, he tells how to obtain such data as the maximum, minimum and daily mean temperatures; the relative humidity; the barometric pressure; the amount of rainfall; and the kinds and quantity of clouds. Where results may be obtained by simple apparatus, the reader is advised how to make it."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 20:254 Ap '24

"Small but attractive book."
+ Boston Transcript p5 F 2 '24 200w
Outlook 136:235 F 6 '24 20w

WILLIAMS, ANNA VERNON (DORSEY) (MRS ALYN WILLIAMS). Spirit of the house. 328p $2 Appleton
24-11020

In this story of thirty years of Washington society life two families, typifying the old and the new order, are the center of interest: on the one hand, the Lowdens, aristocrats of the old South; on the other, the Bretts, newly rich Middle Westerners. In particular the daughters of the two families are made to illustrate the contrast in breeding—Courtney Lowden, sincere and honorable and a gentlewoman, and Coralie Brett, ill-bred, self-assured and unscrupulous. But the Brett money talks loudly enough to effect the marriage of Coralie and Lewis Lowden and their son Phillie is the product of the two bloods and the expression of the rising generation.

"Though there are rather crude moments in it, the story gives a definite atmosphere, bitter, from the author's viewpoint, against the new elements of wealth—the political parties did not matter—of life in the national capital for the last thirty years. If we get annoyed with the sweet Southern heroine we can forget about her. There is plenty more in it."
+ — Boston Transcript p5 Je 7 '24 500w

"One is entertained from the beginning to the end and, one gains besides in the reading of the book a fresh and vivid picture of the fascinating kaleidoscopic, life of Washington."
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 13 '24 360w

"Mrs. Williams writes with deep feeling. Those who still cherish Victorian ideals and look back regretfully to 'the good old days' will take 'The Spirit of the House' to their hearts. She writes with very evident sincerity, and this fact may give even those members of the younger generation who read it pause."
+ N Y Times p9 My 18 '24 630w

WILLIAMS, A. V.—Continued

"There are numerous minor characters, rather neatly though superficially sketched; if only the tale contained one positive personality to give it force and coherence it would be absorbingly interesting. As it is, the backgrounds are the best of it." Edith Leighton

— + N Y Tribune p23 My 25 '24 820w

Outlook 137:613 Ag 20 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Jl 10 '24 150w

Wis Lib Bul 20:214 O '24

WILLIAMS, BEN AMES. Audacity. 205p $2 Dutton
24-4705

A lively story of mistaken identity in which a clever and audacious swindler, taking the utmost advantage of his striking resemblance to a rich young Bostonian, has him shanghaied on a steamer bound for Cardiff and takes undisputed possession of his home, his servants, his bank account and his fiancée. When the rightful Perry Danton returns he is regarded as an impostor and he has no easy task to turn the tables on his impersonator and re-establish his identity.

Cleveland p51 Jl '24

N Y Times p22 Mr 30 '24 520w

"Light, gay, amusing and adventurous; also entirely impossible; but if one is in the mood, who cares?"

+ Outlook 136:567 Ap 2 '24 100w

Wis Lib Bul 20:99 Ap '24

WILLIAMS, BLANCHE COLTON, comp. Thrice told tales. 315p $2 Dodd
Short stories—Collections 24-11760

The thirteen short stories in this collection were written originally for the compiler's class in short-story writing at Columbia university and were published later in various magazines. Some of them have also found a place in the O. Henry prize stories and other anthologies. Contents: Fifty-two weeks for Florette, by E. Alexander; Wasted, by M. Arbuckle; Natalka's portion, by R. G. Cohen; The kiss of the accolade; by J. W. Bennett; The destiny of Dan VI, by S: A. Derieux; The cat of the canebrake, by F: S. Greene; "Contact," by F. N. Hart; Per contra, by H. A. Kniffin; The questing thirties, by H. Redington; Witch Mary, by G. Larsson; Butterflies, by R. Sidney; The wall, by H. Welles; Turkey red, by F. G. Wood.

"As a guide to the student of short story construction they are extremely handy and valuable. . . It is an excellent textbook for the study of the short story. It is also interesting reading for anyone who likes stories of the Pictorial Review type."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 24 '24 150w

"They are soundly standard magazine short stories, most of them excellent in mechanism. The most interesting portion of the book, however, is Dr. Williams's own belligerent introduction in defense of the 'teaching' of short story writing."

+ Lit R p906 Jl 19 '24 150w

"May unhesitatingly be recommended to the attention of the general reader who finds entertainment in the short story as well as to the student of the art. They are distinguished by variety of appeal, diversified interest and artistic excellence in content."

+ N Y Times p2 Jl 6 '24 300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:346 Jl '24

"Her notes on the stories and their authors add to the interest of the collection for students."

+ Wis Lib Bul 20:149 Je '24

WILLIAMS, DANIEL RODERICK. United States and the Philippines. 335p $3 Doubleday

991.4 Philippine Islands—Politics and government 24-28457

Writing from the perspective of the twenty-five years' history of American control of the Philippines, the author sets out the different sides of the problem and its steadily growing importance in view of the swing of international interest to the Far East. The writer disclaims political bias but maintains that the independence of the islands would be a "tragedy to the Filipino people . . . and a repudiation of obligations deliberately assumed by the American people."

Booklist 21:145 Ja '25

"The writer is evidently biassed against Philippine independence, but he presents an able plea and powerful protest. The book is comprehensive." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 26 '24 350w

"The author's statements of praise and blame are authenticated by a mass of historical and statistical data, records of commissions and courts, and quotations from newspapers and letters. His book is frankly partisan in its point of view, but it is sincere." A. F. Edmands

+ — Ind 113:522 D 13 '24 800w

"Judge Williams's book should be read by every one who has the best interests of the United States and the Philippines at heart, and who would avoid taking snap-judgments in a matter where exact information alone can save us from making a fatal mistake."

+ Int Bk R p34 D '24 1050w

Reviewed by H. P. Willis

New Repub 41:179 Ja 7 '25 1250w

"He has succeeded in presenting briefly just the sort of information people in this country must have if they are to act intelligently in dealing with the Philippines and the Far Eastern situation in general."

+ N Y Times p14 D 28 '24 1250w

"A lucid statement of the main elements of the Philippines question."

+ Outlook 138:650 D 17 '24 100w

"Despite the mass of historical and statistical data contained in the book, it is no dry-as-dust narrative; rather is it a vivid and arresting exposition of the human forces that are shaping the destiny of the Filipino people, with the necessary Baedeker material skilfully interwoven. There is, to be sure, a constantly recurring frank, and at times caustic, arraignment of the professional Filipino independence protagonists, whom the author accuses of demagogic ambitions, but he displays a genuine love and solicitude for the 'exploited' Filipino masses." Norbert Lyons

+ Sat R of Lit 1:245 N 1 '24 1600w

WILLIAMS, EDWARD THOMAS. China yesterday and to-day. 613p $4 Crowell

915.1 China—History. China—Social life and customs 23-13957

The author writes from an experience of thirty-five years of close association with Chinese affairs and with the aim thruout of contrasting China of the past with the China of today. The book deals with social life and customs, festivals, industries, religions, woman and her position, commerce, crafts and guilds, etc. An historical survey is included, and a statistical appendix. Bibliography. Index.

"There are few Americans better qualified than Professor Williams for the task of interpreting China to America. Long residence in China, careful scholarship, familiarity with the language and literature of the country—essential as these all are—cannot prepare a writer for this undertaking unless he has absorbed much of the spirit of the East and can present, without prejudging, the divergences between East and West. In addition to residence, scholarship, and knowledge of Chinese language and literature, Professor Williams has this all-important qualification to a marked degree." G. N. Steiger

+ Am Pol Sci R 18:198 F '24 500w

"The chief value of Dr. Williams's book is its comprehensiveness and its vivid pictures of Chinese life. . . But the book is ill-proportioned and at times inaccurate and so not an altogether trustworthy guide." K. S. Latourette
— + Lit R p690 Ap 19 '24 600w

"Professor Williams has produced a work of almost monumental scope on a subject he perhaps knows as well as any writing Occidental alive."
+ N Y Tribune p21 N 4 '23 80w

"A painstaking volume from a writer with extensive Oriental experience."
+ N Y World p10e O 21 '23 170w

Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 9 '24 380w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p180 Mr 20 '24 50w

WILLIAMS, FRANCES FENWICK. Viking's Rest; a story of the land of Evangeline. 301p $2 Century
24-19467

A check for $10,000 for a film prize makes it possible for Eve Barr to buy a house in Nova Scotia and to spend the summer there. With her is her friend Dorothy Fane, "of the Fanes of Virginia," and Aaron Burr, the faithful colored servant. The summer is one long season of delight, bringing to each of the two dwellers in Arcady a lover and the promise of a life of happiness.

"The annoying part of it is that Miss Williams has a delightful sense of humor. Her accounts of the country people are delicious, and her dialogues between the two girls most amusing. If she would write her next book without a plot, or at least without such an obvious one, and concentrate on the laughter, we should look for it with pleasure."
— + Boston Transcript p4 S 6 '24 350w

"An agreeable tale, pleasantly told." K. W.
+ Lit R p985 Ag 23 '24 150w

"The style is lively and often humorous; the characters, despite their conventionality are human, and the plot, highly improbable, moves swiftly and holds the attention." E. M. J.
N Y World p7e Ag 31 '24 120w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p8e O 5 '24 100w

WILLIAMS, HARPER. Thing in the woods. 291p $2 McBride
24-28959

A young doctor comes to a little Pennsylvania town to take temporarily a small country practice. He finds the whole community, mostly stolid Pennsylvania Dutch, in the grip of a paralyzing fear of a nameless "Thing" which had come to trouble the countryside. What the "Thing" really was and how it came to be discovered is the theme of this mystery story.

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p56 D '24 240w

"His people are truly animated, the movement of the action is steady and the effect cumulative, and his style is admirably smooth and unaffected. But his chief triumph is in maintaining a certain supernatural uncanniness clear through, without too much explaining and without becoming too fantastic to remain plausible."
+ Lit R p10 O 25 '24 220w

"The solution is very spectacular and quite fascinating. Those who like mystery tales will find this a specially good one."
+ N Y Times p14 N 23 '24 780w

"Mr. Williams has endowed his characters with delightful humor. They never stoop to the banal and are always interesting. Let us warn you, however, that one does not find the key to the situation in the second chapter—or even in the middle of the book. It is not until the author's own time that one comes upon a clew. Personally, we shall never again visit in rural Pennsylvania overnight."
Sat R of Lit 1:330 N 29 '24 250w

WILLIAMS, JESSE LYNCH. Not wanted. 83p 75c Scribner
23-17923

A father and son story which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post for November 17, 1923. Phil was a motherless boy and his father a mining engineer who was all the time absent on great projects in far distant lands and never even wrote to his son. Phil worshipped his father but felt himself not wanted. On the rare occasions when they saw each other they were embarrassed and could not seem to hit it off. Phil was nearly grown up before they learned to know each other and it was a touching incident which brought them together.

Booklist 20:220 Mr '24

"It is an innocuous little story, this new tale of Jesse Lynch Williams's—conventional, sentimental and rather dull."
— N Y Times p6 D 16 '23 500w

"A better study of boy and father psychology has rarely, if ever, been made than in this little story."
+ Outlook 135:729 D 26 '23 80w

"'Not Wanted' is human enough to circulate widely."
+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 17 '24 150w

WILLIAMS, VALENTINE (DOUGLAS VALENTINE, VEDETTE, pseuds.). Clubfoot the avenger. 289p $2 Houghton [7s 6d H. Jenkins]
24-11331

"In 'Clubfoot the Avenger' Valentine Williams continues the hairbreadth escapes of Major Desmond Okewood and his brother, Francis, in their efforts to capture Dr. Adolf Grundt, the club-footed spy of the German Secret Service. A shot in the dark from nowhere severs the rope around Desmond Okewood's neck as Clubfoot is about to spring the trap. It would not do to have Dr. Grundt captured or made an end of, and a secret passageway is always provided for his escape 'down the river,' even though half of Scotland Yard may have been sent down to surround his rendezvous. So, with impunity, this deformed, hairy-pawed giant of destruction depletes the detective force and demoralizes the survivors with his horrible murders."—N Y Times

"All in all, it is a pretty good yarn of the blood-and-thunder type. To say that it is not Valentine Williams' best leaves it plenty of room to be well above the average. And rather above the average it is."
+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p35 N 23 '24 250w

"There is much in the book that is stale and amateurish, in spite of the fact that Mr. Williams has written enough to have graduated from the amateur ranks. E. Phillips Oppenheim does very much better with the same sort of material."
— N Y Times p9 Jl 20 '24 300w

"After the sly and fearful plots engendered by Fu-Manchu one finds the Clubfoot's crude brutality obvious." A. D. D.
— N Y Tribune p24 Jl 20 '24 250w

"Mr. Williams is an able and experienced piler-up of thrills and his invention shows no sign of flagging, but the Clubfoot adventures do not offer quite the opportunity for ingenuity, intricacy, and cumulative interest of some others of his mystery novels."
+ — Outlook 137:613 Ag 20 '24 60w

WILLIAMS, VALENTINE (DOUGLAS VALENTINE, VEDETTE, pseuds.). Three of clubs. 316p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
24-17906

"What mysterious significance has the three of clubs? Stuck in a menu-holder, it marked a corner table at the old Munich Hofbrau, where sundry quiet men conversed in undertones. The Austrian, Von Bartzen, found it fallen face upwards between his elbows at Monte Carlo. It was at Borchari's restaurant in Berlin that Colonel Trummel, late of the Great General Staff, discovered it lying by his plate. Godol, the Hungarian, had it from a match-seller in the arcades in Milan. And perversely it united the loves and fortunes of Godfrey Cairsdale and Virginia Fitzgerald."—Publisher's note

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 20 '24 460w
Cleveland p92 D '24

"Although this book is a 'thriller,' it is not at all a cheap performance, but is, rather, a skillfully built, well-polished, substantial romance of not too wild modern adventure."
+ Lit R p922 Jl 26 '24 260w

"Mr. Williams has undoubtedly contrived in 'The Three of Clubs' a story of sufficient merit to warrant a foremost place on the holiday reading list of all those who delight in tales of intrigue and mystery."
+ N Y Times p9 Jl 27 '24 600w

"Valentine Williams manages to maintain in the hackneyed environment of his new book his usual newness and originality through his well-formed plots and a familiarity with environments that in most writers of that genre bears too patently a frequent communion with Baedeker." F. V. Roman
+ — N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 70w

Reviewed by J. L. Ford
Outlook 137:576 Ag 13 '24 260w
Spec 133:614 O 25 '24 90w
Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 17 '24 160w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p514 Ag 21 '24 180w

WILLIAMS, WAYLAND WELLS. I, the king; the story of a rich young man. 340p $2 Stokes
24-5828

The story of a man who found his greatest happiness in being responsible for the happiness and welfare of others. Forced by circumstances to rule as king over the tiny island on which he was cast away, he leaves it when relief comes, pledged to himself to do even greater things. But, at home, with more money than he knows what to do with, he drifts along the easiest way, until an orgy of drunkenness brings a sharp reaction and he accepts the position of responsibility that had long been waiting for him.

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 2 '24 900w

"It is filled with situations so thoroughly human that the reader is carried along irresistibly to the end. In style, too, the novel shows the author's advance toward greater things. Mr Williams writes as one who knows intimately what he portrays so feelingly and vividly."
+ Int Bk R p825 O '24 800w

"The story has many excellences, but the general effect is somehow unsatisfactory. However, it is good enough to warrant a serious inquiry as to why it is not completely successful." Hulbert Footner
— + Lit R p643 Ap 5 '24 750w

"Mr. Williams has narrative interest. No one who gets well started is likely to drop the book."
+ N Y Times p9 Mr 23 '24 900w

"'I, the King,' is satisfactorily readable in its class, but scarcely up to the books that Mr Williams probably has it in him to write."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Jl 6 '24 130w

WILLIAMS, WAYLAND WELLS. Seafarers, and other poems. 93p $1.50 Yale univ. press
811 24-7244

These poems by a Yale poet are arranged in three groups: Seafarers; Personalities; Chiefly experimental. He views life somewhat ironically, especially in his Air service portraits and Country club portraits. The longest of the experimental pieces is a sonata in verse holding to the musical structure.

Reviewed by E. A. Weeks
Ind 113:106 Ag 16 '24 360w

"His collection has little to recommend it. Artistry in the use of words, melody, authentic emotion, a powerful intuitive visioning of life, color, depth, and movement—these essentials of genuine poetry are but thinly scattered among Mr. Williams's verses. He is inclined to be pompous and wordy; even his sonnets are too long. He has ideas, social, moral, and literary, but does not express any clear or single philosophy."
— Lit R p812 Je 7 '24 200w

"There is felicitous rhyming here, a series of excellent portraits animated with a somewhat gentle satire, and some experiments in meter and stanzaic construction that are pleasing to read, although not particularly of value. . . . The reader will be more pleased with the less ambitious efforts such as the portraits and some of the lyrics."
+ — N Y Times p26 My 4 '24 320w

"The third section of Mr. Williams's book is entitled 'Chiefly Experimental' and it might well stand for the whole, which reveals little unity of experience but adventurous extemporizations in many manners. . . We are almost always left with an impression of more speed than substance."
— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p391 Je 19 '24 180w

WILLIAMS, WAYNE C. William Jennings Bryan. 127p $1 Revell
B or 92 Bryan, William Jennings 23-17994

"Subtitled 'A study in political vindication.' The author reviews Bryan's public career from 1896 onward with a view to showing that time has vindicated his principles."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 20:213 Mr '24

"A well written, interesting book; useful if read with a proper discount for its character as special pleading. Mr. Williams's volume is a tribute of hero worship, rather than a critical study."
— + Lit R p462 Ja 19 '24 240w
Wis Lib Bul 20:125 My '24

WILLIAMS-ELLIS, CLOUGH, and WILLIAMS-ELLIS, A. Pleasures of architecture. 275p $3.50 Houghton [10s 6d J. Cape]
720 Architecture [24-20064]

"This book is an attempt by a successful modern architect to move this art from its present isolated technical position. Besides its detailed account of the present architectural revival, it contains a useful and competent summary of the work of the greatest masters of the last four hundred years, including Italian and French architects such as Bernini and Perrault. A chapter is devoted to plans, and the details of construction, of houses ranging from week-end cottages to big country houses; and the hints for domestic arrangement and the list of points architect and client should consult on before starting work should be very useful to anyone about to build."—New Statesman

Booklist 21:142 Ja '25

"It sparkles with wit, it radiates common sense and good taste, it is sometimes justly savage and it appeals to everyone with eyes in his head and a hope of some time owning a house." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 4 '24 740w

Lit R p9 S 13 '24 300w

New Statesman 23:448 Jl 19 '24 280w

"One of the few books published recently which contrives to keep both the esthetic and the practical problems of architecture, its history and its criticism, in full view throughout the discussion, and it is an admirable reflection of the drift in present-day interest. If books of this calibre continue to appear we shall soon have a background comparable, perhaps, to that which every cultivated gentleman possessed in the eighteenth century." L: Mumford

+ N Y Times p15 D 21 '24 700w

Outlook 138:465 N 19 '24 280w

"Delightfully written book."

+ Sat R 138:96 Jl 26 '24 200w

"The two authors of The Pleasure of Architecture are to be congratulated on the production of a delightful, stimulating and extremely readable book." Osbert Sitwell

+ Spec 133:19 Jl 5 '24 1200w

"The temper of the book is pleasantly intellectual, or at all events is characterized by intellectual pleasantries—which may and may not be quite the same thing. The ideas of the authors are good; sometimes they are terse and compactly expressed. But, as a whole, one fears that the book will not assist those who find pleasure in the other arts to appreciate the delights of this Cinderella of a sister."

— + Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 20 '24 600w

"In spite of disagreements, this is a delightful and a friendly book. The authors are shrewd, observant, and healthily prejudiced. Let them but correct it a little more closely and cut out the references to minor personalities of only momentary interest, and it should go merrily swinging through many editions."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p553 S 11 '24 1250w

WILLIAMSON, ALICE MURIEL (LIVINGSTON) (MRS CHARLES NORRIS WILLIAMSON). Million dollar doll. 336p $2 Doran

24-8789

When Terry Desmond was a poor little child, Miles Sheridan had played the fairy godfather to her and had promptly forgotten doing so. But Terry continued to worship him as her ideal. In the years that followed trouble came to her hero. To save his wife from disgrace he provided her with a cause for divorce by arranging to take abroad with him Juliet Divine, notorious as the Million dollar doll. When the time came to go, Juliet preferred a marriage that she sighted upon the horizon, and prevailed upon her innocent half-sister, Terry, to go in her place, persuading her that this was the chance to repay Miles—but he must never know. Miles fell in love with this child, marvelling at the innocence of the Million dollar doll. The fates favored them by having his wife's lover kill her—and so Miles and Terry were married.

"There is not much scenery, nor any history. The author has gone with the tides and floated far out of her path." I. W. L.

— Boston Transcript p2 My 10 '24 370w

"A light, pleasing, deft romance."

+ N Y Times p25 Ap 20 '24 700w

"An attempt to combine romance and modern sophistication, and the result is not highly successful." Elizabeth Wyman

— + N Y Tribune p24 Jl 20 '24 1080w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn

N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 110w

"The story is highly improbable, but the heroine is charming and there is a piquancy in her anomalous position that some may relish."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a My 25 '24 350w

WILLIAMSON, CHARLES NORRIS, and WILLIAMSON, ALICE MURIEL (LIVINGSTON) (MRS CHARLES NORRIS WILLIAMSON). Lady from the air. 334p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

23-14916

Almost starving in a second-rate hotel in France, Patchinka Kapieha, registered as Miss P. Smith for reasons of her own, is saved thru the intervention of Captain Malet of the British army, and late the same night, is rescued by him again as she is about to drown herself. She turns out to be the sister of the famous Polish aviator and inventor, Sacha Kapieha, who at his death left her his plane in which were hidden certain jewels and valuable papers. But Patchinka, detained in foreign lands on account of the war, returns a year too late to claim her property, which is to be raffled off at Monte Carlo by the government. Patchinka and Malet, in their desperate determination to get both the plane and the papers, go thru many adventures, since a trio of villains is likewise on the trail of the plane. The final rescue takes place in a desert in Algeria when instead of a band of Arabs descending upon them, a corps of French légionnaires leads them to safety and the villains to jail. There is the inevitable conclusion for Malet and Patchinka.

Booklist 20:221 Mr '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:97 Ap '24

WILLIAMSON, CHARLES NORRIS, and WILLIAMSON, ALICE MURIEL (LIVINGSTON) (MRS CHARLES NORRIS WILLIAMSON). Lure of Monte Carlo. 189p il $2.50 Doubleday [5s Mills & B.]

914.49 Monte Carlo 24-21933

"The Williamsons tell you all about the history [of Monte Carlo] from Hercules up to the very last minute. They explain the scenery and climate and indicate the best excursions. From voyages and excursions they turn to the alarums of the various kinds of society and the devices for gambling, the superstitions and systems and all that sort of thing. You are guaranteed all sorts of information which (if you are rich) you may one day employ to advantage and excitement."—N Y Tribune

Boston Transcript p5 Je 14 '24 170w

N Y Times p7 Ag 31 '24 310w

"To read of the gambling and the demi-society of Monte Carlo in the form of a series of Baedeker prose rhythms is not nearly so exciting as to see it in the movies or under the guise of fiction."

— N Y Tribune p24 Jl 20 '24 160w

N Y World p8e Jl 27 '24 50w

"You may never risk a nickel on a race or an election, and yet you may enjoy these curious and amusing stories of the most celebrated gambling-place in the world."

Outlook 138:65 S 10 '24 40w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 24 '24 230w

WILLIAMSON, GEORGE CHARLES. Amateur collector (Eng title Everybody's book on collecting). 324p $3 McBride

740 Collectors and collecting 24-16546

The series of forty-three articles which make up the book appeared originally in Lord Northcliffe's Weekly Dispatch and so are somewhat journalistic in character. They deal with the lighter aspects of collecting, omitting from their scope pictures and other objects which would require more thorough treatment. Among the articles treated are old prints, Sèvres porcelain, postage stamps, postcards, old wines, Dinanderie, autographs, lace bobbins, decanter labels, bonbonnières, letter-weights and door-porters, cakes and ale and many others.

Booklist 21:59 N '24

Cleveland p59 Jl '24

WILLIAMSON, G: C:—Continued

"The book is not only superficial but sometimes annoyingly so, especially in its omissions—in its might-have-beens, which one is tempted to say become ought to have beens. The result is sometimes misleading to a reader who comes to the book for information. . . As a whet to the appetite it is valuable, and the author's style is agreeable."

+ — Lit R p763 My 17 '24 400w

"The author's wide and intimate knowledge of the subject is evident in the interesting discussion he makes of each kind of article suggested as possible for collecting, wherein he proves himself to be thoroughly familiar with its history as an object to be collected, its commercial value and possibility and its phases of interest."

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 20 '24 290w

N Y Tribune p27 My 18 '24 120w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Outlook 137:362 Jl 2 '24 40w

WILLIAMSON, HENRY. Dream of fair women. 463p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Collins]

24-23493

The love affair of a twenty-two year old, self-conscious idealist and a fascinating, worldly matron is the theme of this book. William Maddison, a war convalescent, secludes himself in rural Devonshire in a retreat called Rats' Castle. On a ramble thru the country he first meets the alluring Mrs Fairfax and falls at once under the spell of her charms. The illicit love affair which follows makes of William's life a thing of chaotic emotions, for, besides a devoted husband, Eveline Fairfax has several other admirers. William clings tenaciously to his trust in Eveline until he becomes actually convinced of her unfaithfulness.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '25 400w

"On putting down the book one has the sense of having been cheated. What does it all mean? One feels a something elusive that is too vague to comprehend, and one does not know whether to be disappointed in oneself or in the book. Nevertheless, read it. It is unusual, different, and it makes one wonder a little after the last page is turned. Surely, that is something." Harriet Henry

— + Int Bk R p64 D '24 300w

"In Mr. Williamson's novel—his first to make its appearance in this country—are passages full of a cadent mournfulness at the passing of beauty, and the early descriptions of life in the Devonshire hamlet are exceedingly well done." H. A. J.

+ Lit R p10 N 8 '24 230w

"Not merely is it slow in movement, overweighted with descriptions; it is very repetitious."

— N Y Times p21 D 28 '24 700w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p9e D 28 '24 920w

"Mr. Williamson creates character in the best meaning of the phrase. His personages are animated by a life within them and they move with an amazing reality that is only nullified when the author feels that he must be humorous via the Hardyan method and so descends to a farcicality of treatment." H. S. Gorman

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:427 Ja 3 '25 220w

Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Je 19 '24 150w

WILLIAMSON, JOHN BRUCE, comp. History of the Temple, London. 690p il $8 Dutton [21s Murray]

942.1 London. Temple [24-19661]

The Temple was originally the lodge of that religious and military establishment of the Middle Ages known as the Knights Templars. On its site now stands the two Inns of Court called the Middle Temple and the Inner Temple which for six centuries have been occupied by barristers. The author, who is himself a member of the Middle Temple divides his history into two parts—the Reign of faith and the Reign of law—seven eighths of the book being given to the Law. The history is brought down to the close of the Stuart period.

"Though Mr. Williamson's careful, detailed, and well-documented pages will be of value to those concerned with legal developments and technicalities, they present, on the whole, a rather arid aspect to the lay reader."

+ — Nation and Ath 35:696 S 6 '24 1800w

"Visitors to London can carry off an excellent history of one of its oldest institutions in this book. Mr. Williamson has gone to the records themselves, as every true historian should, and one may wonder at the proud antiquity of a book which begins in the twelfth century and stops short at the close of the Stuart period, though the illustrations take us to a later time."

+ New Statesman 23:602 Ag 30 '24 950w

"It is packed with good things of every sort and kind and is to be recommended to the lawyers of the overseas dominions and America who come to do their 'suit and service' on the banks of the Thames. The pictures, mostly taken from old prints, are often exceedingly attractive, and many of the documents, as is right, are quoted in full, and in several cases there are facsimile examples of the manuscript." J. St L. Strachey

+ N Y Times p11 O 5 '24 2350w

"Careful, learned and well balanced, and should promote new research at every turn."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p457 Jl 24 '24 1900w

WILLS, RIDLEY. Harvey Landrum. 271p $2 Simon & Schuster

24-29825

"Harvey Landrum was born with the most telltale of physiognomical characteristics, an almost total absence of chin. And Mr. Wills writes the story of a growing boy and a man who lived a lie. For Harvey, about the time his adolescence was beginning, discovered by chance in a fight that the show of strength and bravery was a large part of the battle of life. As he grew up to be a man he cultivated the manner. It served him well enough against the timid owner of the newspaper on which Harvey worked; it served him in his courtship (not to the manner born but to that acquired) of the high born Eleanor Witherspoon. It was not until the night when he swooned in an agony of revulsion at the sight of blood at a prize fight, not until he thought that his wife saw wholly through his sham, that Harvey gave way and melodramatically, though not successfully, attempted to end his life beneath the wheels of an automobile."—Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Oland Russel

Lit R p10 N 22 '24 330w

"'Harvey Landrum' is well-handled, constructive writing. Incidental characters, like music off-stage, are satisfactory but insignificant. Description is accurate, never obtrusive, and the style is dignified by a self-restraint that is akin to irony."

+ N Y Times p9 N 9 '24 1050w

"A preposterous story. There is bad writing in it which gives it now and then a touch of the grotesque. And yet, withal, there is something about it, perhaps we can do no better than to call it a quality of humanness, that keeps us reading it to the end." E. W. Osborn

— + N Y World p9e N 9 '24 800w

"Mr. Wills succeeds in his story only to a limited degree. He offers no convincing psychological analysis of Harvey's states of mind, or of the continuing animating false bravery which gave him power over others. Further, Mr. Wills' novel raises the question whether along with the public demand for truth in news, we should not require as urgently more truth in fiction."

— Sat R of Lit 1:197 O 18 '24 700w

WILLSIE, HONORE (MUCCUE). See Morrow, H. W.

WILLSON, BECKLES. Redemption. 399p $2 Putnam

24-19917

"'Redemption', by a Canadian author, brings to light an artist in the painting of rebellious feminine types. Though the book is written about the material and spiritual forces that strive for expression in a Canadian youth full of the traditions of an Oxford education, the character who holds the centre of the stage is Joan Campion—a wild, tragic symbol of feminine emancipation. . . In an escapade she gives herself to a youth of her class, not binding him to any duties and warning him that she will not marry. The results are disastrous to her virtue. When her family sets out for Canada, the land of opportunity, she is released of the chain of maternity by an unlooked for accident. Joan begins her life anew. Later, when she truly loves, the same story is repeated."—N Y World

"In the urge to write a one hundred per cent Canadian novel, Mr. Beckles Willson has attempted something considerably beyond his present powers; his book would have been better had it been less ambitious and less national. The first part of the story is not excelled by anything that comes later. Writing in a pithy and straightforward, if not highly distinguished style, Mr. Willson has the knack of making his characters live and breathe." J. F. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 30 '24 500w

"An excellent novel, an unusual novel, well written and with able character delineation." D. W.

+ Lit R p9 Ag 30 '24 180w

N Y Times p16 N 16 '24 700w

"'Redemption' is an intensely human novel. Technically it would have been more perfect had Beckles Willson concentrated and organized more adequately the wealth of material included in the book. There is enough for several novels." F. V. R.

+ — N Y World p8e Ag 17 '24 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p349 Je 5 '24 440w

WILLY, COLETTE, pseud. Cats, dogs & I; ³ stories from La paix chez les bêtes; tr. by Princess Alexandre Gagarine. 154p $1.75 Holt

Animals, Legends and stories of 24-28369

A little volume for animal lovers, being sketches of pet animals that are real individuals. There is Poum, the devil cat, whose beauty is exceeded only by his deviltry; "Shah" the Persian princess, an exquisite feline; Nelly and Polo, ambulance dogs whose courageous work is an enduring part of world war history; Cora and Manette, performing dogs. The author also tells of a Brazilian squirrel, a pig that hunts truffles, and two pet snakes.

"The book is not for those who do not love animals. For those who do, it will prove delightful, one of the best of the kind I know." H. B.

+ Lit R p11 Ja 3 '25 210w

"This is a little volume, slight in weight and unobtrusive in appearance, but possessing great distinction. It is a really fine translation from the French of a spirited and discerning set of essays—pen portraits of animals revealed sharply as personalities suffering from intensely human emotions."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:358 D 6 '24 210w

WILSON, CLARENCE TRUE, and PICKETT, ELBERT DEETS. Case for prohibition. 274p $2 Funk

178 Prohibition 23-16284

Written from the viewpoint that prohibition is of value to the country as a whole, that it has helped largely to raise the standard of living and the happiness of the masses, and that it is essential to the best interests of trade, the book sketches the history of the prohibition movement, shows what it has accomplished and wherein it has failed and the necessity of extending it thruout the world. One chapter is devoted to the effects of prohibition in Chicago, under a city policy of non-enforcement.

Booklist 20:247 Ap '24

Bookm 58:672 F '24 120w

"It is not violently partisan. In fact, it is, on the whole, rather fair. Undoubtedly, it will not convince the rabid opponents of prohibition, but it may convince the wavering, and it will be useful to those already convinced who want a reason for their position."

+ Cath World 118:860 Mr '24 150w

"Few men have had greater opportunities for knowing the Prohibition movement inside and outside, than the authors of this book. Into this volume they have put some of their vast stores of information. The general reader will find this a helpful book; and will derive much inspiration from it." S. Z. B.

+ Com on Church & Soc Ser. Inf ser p4 D 15 '23 350w

"Anybody who thinks a 'dry' book must necessarily be dry reading should get acquainted with 'The Case for Prohibition.'" E. L. Shuman

+ Int Bk R p189 F '24 650w

J Religion 4:223 Mr '24 30w

WILSON, DAVID ALEC. Carlyle to "The French revolution" (1826-1837). 434p il $6 Dutton [15s K. Paul]

B or 92 Carlyle, Thomas 24-28729

The second of Mr Wilson's five volumes on the life of Carlyle carries him thru his early married life in Edinburgh and at Craigenputtock, the change of residence to London and the writing of "Sartor Resartus" and the "French revolution." His friendship with Francis Jeffrey has a large place in this volume which includes many quotations from Jeffrey's letters.

"To the present writer, who has loved Carlyle for sixty years, greatly preferring him even to Confucius, Mr. Wilson's treatment of his subject is delightful, refreshing, most original and instructive. It is not, as the jacket ridiculously asserts, a biography at all. It is a commentary—detailed, wise, discriminating—on the life and works of Carlyle." Augustine Birrell

+ Nation and Ath 35:539 Jl 26 '24 1450w

"Mr. Wilson's narrative in this book is as direct and entertaining as in his earlier volume. He is an idolater of Carlyle, and a little too grudging of worship at any other shrine. If he errs on the side of extravagance in his devotion to Carlyle, he makes up for it by his treatment of some other Victorian demigods. The chapters in which he describes Mill's carelessness and Mrs. Taylor's callousness over the manuscript of The French Revolution are a delicious and dramatic piece of writing."

+ New Statesman 23:573 Ag 23 '24 1800w

"Although biography is a living narrative with the interest of a novel, it is not much to say that it deserves to be ranked next to Boswell."

+ N Y Times p3 D 21 '24 2900w

Reviewed by S. P. Sherman

N Y Tribune p1 Ja 11 '25 2950w

"It is a sign of the substantial merit of Mr. Wilson's biography that it grows in impressiveness as it grows in bulk. We might well have prophesied the reverse, for it is planned on a scale which modern taste suspects as being too cumbersome for significance. When he turns from the concrete to the abstract, from character of which he has a broad and tolerant understanding to speculation, his common sense is scarcely adequate to his task. His admiring exposition of Carlyle's philosophy suffers from the same lack of subtlety as the philosophy itself."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p425 Jl 10 '24 3750w

WILSON, EDMUND BEECHER. Physical basis of life. 51p il $1.50 Yale univ. press

576 Life. Cells 23-17230

"Since Huxley lectured under this title in 1868, a new world has been opened to us inside the cell as amazing in its minute multifariousness as the new world inside the atom revealed to us by Bohr. The veteran investigator, whose labors have largely led to this new knowledge, surveys the field in this slim volume and shows how the factors of heredity, though beyond the reach of the microscope, have been discovered, counted and mapped. These infinitesimal and indivisible entities are definite in number and arranged in serial and invariable order on the nuclear threads, each unit specific and self-perpetuating and carrying over to the offspring a particular set of physiological and mental characteristics. 'These conceptions have a practical value almost comparable to that of the atomic theory employed in chemistry and physics.'"—New Repub

"This is the most succinct, lucid and comprehensive statement of the nature and structure of protoplasm and of the organization and morphology of the cell to be found anywhere."

+ Am J of Public Health 14:439 My '24 250w

"Professor Wilson's address on the physical basis of life deserves more of a notice than the size of the book would appear to warrant. It is indeed worthy of a place on the library shelves alongside of Huxley's famous Edinburgh address of the same title delivered in 1868. It gives us the latest authoritative word on the biologist's conception of the material that exhibits the vital activities." B. W. Kunkel

+ Lit R p612 Mr 22 '24 500w

New Repub 37:319 F 13 '24 120w

WILSON, FRANCIS. Francis Wilson's life of himself. 463p il $5 Houghton

B or 92 Actors and actresses 24-27626

In one of the early pages of his autobiography Francis Wilson writes: "I never button up my coat and tuck my programme into my pocket without thinking how utterly impossible it would be to invent another amusement comparable with the theater for the delight and recreation of mankind." It is this delight in his art which fills every page of his memories and imparts itself to the reader. Beginning with minstrelsy and the variety stage Francis Wilson passed to the comedy and opera rôles which have delighted two generations. His autobiography is full of his friends—Eugene Field, Joseph Jefferson and Walt Whitman among them. The book is generously illustrated.

Reviewed by Philip Hale

Ind 113:493 D 6 '24 300w

"A delightful book. An autobiography written, to my way of thinking, in exactly the right vein. Personal without being egotistical, it succeeds in painting a self portrait of a most kind, sincere hardworking and whimsical man by his actions and reactions and by his attitude toward his profession and with every one with whom he has come in contact during an honorable and distinguished life." Cosmo Hamilton

+ Lit R p4 D 20 '24 1100w

"Mr. Wilson's genial autobiography is as well stuffed with anecdotes as a pudding is stuffed with raisins. The actor-author also adds several pages of valuable advice to beginners in his difficult art. Taken all in all, the book is both generous and entertaining. To revert to the vernacular of the profession of which it treats, it is difficult to see why it should not prove a 'hit'."

+ N Y Times p2 N 16 '24 1500w

"His power of story telling is not to be belittled. In fact as a writer, he is very agreeable; there are nice little twists of expression, gentle little ways he has of showing the flight of time. And through it all his profound love of the theater." M. J. Moses

+ N Y Tribune p3 N 16 '24 1200w

Reviewed by Wells Root

N Y World p9e N 23 '24 660w

Reviewed by M. J. Moses

Outlook 138:511 N 26 '24 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Outlook 138:690 D 24 '24 80w

R of Rs 70:668 D '24 200w

Reviewed by J. R. Towse

Sat R of Lit 1:411 D 27 '24 1400w

"It is mostly interesting, and the reader enamored of the stage would not forego any part of it; but a more personal tone would have added to its sprightliness."

+ — Springf'd Republican p6a D 14 '24 550w

WILSON, HARRY LEON. Professor, how could you! 340p $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

24-23599

Professor Copplestone, meek and middle-aged, was possessed of a wife before whose very look he quailed. One day when his courage was artificially raised by several glasses of sherry the professor rebelled. He departed surreptitiously from his home town in the guise of a tramp and spent a glorious summer in the company of various queer characters. He aided a bootlegger, joined two traveling shows, played the part of an Indian chief, and learned any amount of slang with which his professorial upbringing clashed weirdly. In the fall he returned to his college a changed man and a much more popular professor.

Booklist 21:114 D '24

Cleveland p85 N '24

Reviewed by Edwin Bjorkman

Lit R p8 O 18 '24 1750w

" 'Professor! How Could You?' is more than an antidote for the blues. To say that it is full of laughs and that chuckles are packed in between them is only doing it partial justice. Mr. Wilson is one of our few fundamental humorists. His effects are not dependent on situations, however funny, or personalities, however grotesque. They are the inevitable result of placing human beings, charged with mirthful possibilities, in sudden contact, standing by and watching the explosive result."

+ N Y Times p8 O 5 '24 800w

"Readers who cherish a fondness for Harry Leon Wilson when he is merry will have a chance to laugh their fill with this versatile writer through the pages of his new book, 'Professor, How Could You?' "

+ N Y World p8e O 12 '24 180w

Outlook 138:414 N 12 '24 200w

WILSON, JOHN FLEMING. Somewhere at sea, and other tales; with an introd. by Robert H. Davis; and an appreciation by Raymond Blathwayt. 423p $2 Dutton

24-1639

These stories of the sea and ships are written not only with a strong dramatic sense but from unusual technical knowledge of seamanship. The scenes are laid quite as often on the land, in the offices of presidents and general managers of steamship lines, as on the sea, and several stories have to do with the financial and industrial end of shipping. Contents: Somewhere at sea; The admiral of the Ooze; The great Arctic handicap; The story of Gunderson; The saving sense; Ninety days; Junk; The business of going to sea; Number 1100; Creation reef; David Mackleby; Commodore Erroll's subscription.

Booklist 20:267 Ap '24

"The volume is a thing of sheer charm, atmosphere full of delicate nuances hidden from the land-lubber's eye." I. W. Lawrence

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 2 '24 1300w

Cleveland p44 Je '24

"These stories which, incited and stirred by so much thundering in the index, I approached with the liveliest hopes, seem to me simply very clever, well-studied, ingenious yarns of that sea to which men go down in steamships. Of their technical accuracy I know nothing." H. W. Boynton

+ — Ind 112:156 Mr 15 '24 550w

"This book of Wilson's is extraordinarily good. Presumably only a technical seaman could show how very good it is. To the reviewer Wilson's success seems to be both subtle and complete. Just as the great tales of the land show men in their relation to the mothering earth, of which they are a part, and carry his sense irresistibly into the prose, so Wilson, in this collection of sea stories, makes his figures part of the sea itself by some masterful alchemy of writing and of spiritual intensity." J: F. Carter, jr.

+ Lit R p503 F 9 '24 650w

Nation and Ath 36:164 O 25 '24 160w

"Let no one think he will not get thrills and action and color in these stories just because their author was so thoroughly informed in all the technique of sea-going, for he will find all three in gorgeous measure. Mr. Wilson had all the instincts of the story-teller and his stories rush along like an old-time ship under full sail with a gale at her heels. Almost before the reader knows it his emotions are gripped and his curiosity is at high tension to know what is going to happen next. And his feelings are kept taut until the end and his curiosity is still alive and insistent at the last sentence. The stories are essentially of the romantic school."

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 27 '24 600w

Reviewed by Roy Chanslor
N Y Tribune p21 F 3 '24 420w

N Y World p7e Ja 20 '24 680w

Reviewed by Laurence Stallings
N Y World p7e F 3 '24 850w

Reviewed by J. J. Reilly
Springf'd Republican p7a S 14 '24 520w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p628 O 9 '24 390w

WILSON, PHILIP WHITWELL. Layman's confession of faith. 208p $1.50 Revell

230 Religion 24-13150

"A book that speaks to the hearts of men on the vital questions of the hour. Mr. Wilson has written the book out of a desire to aid men and women in ascertaining where they stand, and to what, in matters of doctrine, they subscribe."—Bookm

---

"Strong, lucid, tolerant, generous to those who hold views differing from those of the author, it is as applicable to the man in the pew as to the man in the pulpit, or to the man who, hitherto, has found his way into neither." E. E. F.

+ Bookm 59:adv Ag '24 70w

"Written in a vein fitted for delivery from rostrum or pulpit and affords much enjoyment to earnest seekers after hidden truths in one religion at least. Efficiency is Mr. Wilson's motto. He may not be profound or logical or philosophical, but he gets there with a triumphal stride and deserves to be credited with the best intentions, not so much as a persuader as a dictator." C: de Kay

+ — N Y Times p12 Ag 10 '24 1250w

"Mr Wilson's evangelicalism is as extreme as his intellectual naivete—as here disclosed—and his fondness for platitudes. He perhaps aims to reassure persons of wavering faith, but in doing so he seldom rises above self-evident assertions or mild affirmations."

— Springf'd Republican p8 Je 17 '24 160w

WILSON, PHILIP WHITWELL. Unofficial
2 statesman—Robert C. Ogden. 275p il $5
Doubleday

B or 92 Ogden, Robert Curtis

Robert C. Ogden, 1836-1913, was an American merchant and philanthropist, partner of John Wanamaker. He did much for the promotion of education in the South and was the leader of the "Ogden movement" to raise southern educational standards. To each of his great interests, his biographer devotes a chapter, at the same time giving many intimate and personal details of his life and friendships.

"Unlike the chronological arrangement usual in biographies, the writer of the present work has taken up by chapters and carried to completion the various interests of his subject, such as his church, his family, his ideals in business. The portrayal lacks nothing of vividness on this account." C. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 29 '24 900w

"The picture of a man just as admirable and attractive as Wanamaker himself, though of a quite different type of personality."

+ N Y Times p11 D 28 '24 580w

"Mr. Ogden's life, as Mr. Wilson writes it, sounds like a serial prepared for a success magazine. He has treated the career of this curious and baffling personality as one would handle the flashy achievements of the latest go-getter. . . Yet, despite its weak points, the book has some value. It is full of biographical material—letters, dates, and so on—collected with great care by Mr. Wilson. If any one ever wants to write a life of Robert C. Ogden he will find the material here, ready to his hand." W. E. Woodward

— + N Y Tribune p3 Ja 18 '25 1000w

Outlook 138:608 D 10 '24 30w

WILSON, ROBERT FORREST. Living pageant of the Nile. 239p il $3 Bobbs

913.32 Egypt—Antiquities 24-4644

"In the first chapter he sketches the outline of Egyptian history. Then he turns to the two most attractive ladies of those ancient days, Queen Hatshepsut and Queen Tiy, and devotes a chapter to each of them. With the objects found in the newly-opened tomb as a foundation, elaborated by the collections of the museum, he proceeds to give a description spread through three chapters of the variegated life of ancient Thebes, of the manner of dress, of the jewelry, of the furniture, of the palaces and gardens, of the pleasures, the art, the religion, and burial practices. The last two chapters are devoted to an account of the conditions and methods of this modern treasure hunt known as scientific archaeology, interspersed with many descriptive anecdotes."—Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News

---

Booklist 20:296 My '24

"Mr. Wilson's story is delightful throughout, but nothing is more fascinating than the account of the first great woman ruler in history, Hatshepsut, who ruled Egypt one hundred and fifty years before Tutankhamen's birth."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 24 '24 340w

"In the desire to present a living picture the author has succeeded remarkably well. To be sure in some minor respects the ancient Egyptians might not recognize themselves. However, in such a book such things are excusable. In its broad outlines the book is dependable." W. E. C.

+ — Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p12 Ap 6 '24 1350w

"Mr. Wilson humanizes his narrative; there is nothing dry about it, that is its chief merit. He writes with an enthusiasm that is contagious. He makes us want to go to Egypt ourselves and work a 'concession.' The colors of the great pageant of Egypt's past all strike upon his senses freshly and newly. Begin with Mr. Wilson and you will have become imbued with enthusiasm sufficient to enable you to tackle the classic accounts of the greatest Egyptian historians and archæologists themselves." W: R. Benet

+ Lit R p690 Ap 19 '24 700w

WILSON, ROBERT FORREST—Continued

"Mr. Wilson has written a very informing and very delightful book. But he seems hardly to give sufficient attention to the influence of their religion on the daily lives and customs of the Egyptians to make his book an all-round view of their 'living pageant.' Of their mundane occupations it is a fascinating account, but he leaves out of his reckoning, for the most part, the spiritual significance which their rigid and complicated religious system must have had for them. And it is a great pity that the book is not better illustrated."
+ — N Y Times p12 F 24 '24 2100w

"An exceptionally good popular exposition of Egyptology."
+ N Y Tribune p23 My 11 '24 250w
N Y World p7e F 24 '24 300w

Reviewed by G. M. Goldman
N Y World p6e Ap 6 '24 80w

WILTSHIRE, MARY. Patricia Ellen. 262p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Mills & B.]
24-21923

The story of a woman of thoroughly fine character, whose whole life was spent in making life comfortable and happy for others. Patricia Ellen, daughter of an English innkeeper, married a poor young artist and was ideally happy for a few years until he died. Then she devoted her life to her daughter, Phyllida, even making a second marriage with a man she did not love to provide a home and future for the child. But her undertakings were even more successful than she had hoped. Phyllida became an artist and married happily, Patricia Ellen gained friends and position, and best of all, the beloved artist husband's genius was at last recognized by the world.

Booklist 21:155 Ja '25

"The material in this story might easily have been rendered less beautiful. The vulgar minded fiction writer would have had ample opportunity to be cheap and sordid, amiably styling himself a realist. In Mrs. Wiltshire's keeping the narrative becomes a very noble portrait of a woman who knew how to love." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 25 '24 430w

Reviewed by E. A. Niles
Ind 113:374 N 8 '24 300w

"The author has not only told a story that is human, but she has made of Patricia Ellen a human sufferer. She shows the power to create a real person—a great deal to find in a first novel. The book has too many ups and downs, too many places where climaxes occur. It should flow steadily up stream to one crucial moment." Madelin Leof
+ — Lit R p12 O 25 '24 600w

"First novels are a poor basis for an estimate of any writer's ability, but there is no doubt that Mary Wiltshire has shown enough of the novelist's knack to make it worth while for her to write a second and a third. Incidentally, her novel may prove restful to readers who are fed up on the more strenuous, frank and passionate type of fiction."
+ N Y Times p9 O 12 '24 520w

"It is an excellent performance, as sound and just as a new ripe apple."
+ N Y Tribune p9 O 5 '24 470w

"The story is quite simply told and the book has no special distinction of style or great interest of plot and yet it attains a beauty and a value that is not at all banal. 'Patricia Ellen' is a beautiful book." E. McD. J.
+ N Y World p7e S 21 '24 100w
Sat R of Lit 1:251 N 1 '24 340w

"There is very little doubt that Mary Wiltshire's novels will become popular with a large section of the public. If she will only give us less of what is vulgarly called 'sob stuff,' and draw more figures as true and entertaining as her sketch of Bill Loder, she will deserve the success which awaits her."
— + Spec 133:104 Jl 19 '24 100w
Springf'd Republican p5a Ja 11 '25 480w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Jl 17 '24 150w

WINDLE, SIR BERTRAM COGHILL ALAN. Romans in Britain. 244p il $4 Doran

913.42 Great Britain—Antiquities. Great Britain—History—Early history to 1066
[23-18122]

A popular account of life in Britain during the period of the Roman occupation. Beginning with a description of the life which the Romans found there, the author tells how they took and held Britain and describes the building of their roads and cities. He also describes the types of houses built in Roman Britain, the household utensils used in them and the funerary monuments. There is a chapter on the religious memorials found in Britain and one on the oriental religions in the Roman Empire. Maps. Index.

"An immensely interesting and readable book on a theoretically dry subject, which is an achievement."
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 3 '24 330w
Cath World 119:273 My '24 850w

Reviewed by R. E. M. Wheeler
Eng Hist R 39:425 Jl '24

"Inevitably the book, which has the advantage of a genial, easy style, is best in its purely descriptive passages. When the author quits description in order to interpret and evaluate, he is disappointing." F. S. Barr
+ — Lit R p12 Ag 30 '24 600w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:330 Je '24

WISE, CLAUDE MERTON. Dramatics for school and community. 147p il $3 Stewart Kidd

792 Theater, Little. Drama. Amateur theatricals
23-12864

The first two chapters summarize the development of the little theater movement and the new dramatic literature which has found expression thru it. The remainder of the book takes up the director of the art theater and his aims, innovations in the way of stage setting and lighting, costume, and various other subjects relating to the operation of the little theater and the art theater. The bibliographies include collections of one-act and full-evening plays, biblical plays, a list for dramatization in school work, a general bibliography of drama and a list of individual plays for reading and presentation.

"The practical suggestions are many. Were it not for a thin thread of humor which here and there flashes out of the more manualistic prose, the book would become tedious because of the very weight and compactness of these suggestions. This humor, and the ability to phrase convincing statements of the new ideals of the theatre, are nearly enough to conceal the fact that much of the material has been presented before, and that this is just another handbook." W. L. S.
+ — Boston Transcript p5 D 1 '23 800w

"The serious amateur producer will avoid this and find time to read the original sources for himself."
— Theatre Arts Mo 8:211 Mr '24 120w
Wis Lib Bul 19:479 N '23

WISE, JAMES WATERMAN. Liberalizing liberal Judaism. 150p $1.50 Macmillan

296 Jews—Religion 24-23150

An earnest inquiry into the faults and virtues of liberal Judaism to discover where it has failed and to what its failure it due. The author states with clearness just what liberal Judaism is and teaches at the present time and its attitude toward the problem of religious education, intermarriage, the character and teaching of Jesus and the function of the ministry.

"Mr. Wise's book is perhaps the most judicious and well considered presentation of the case for Liberal Judaism."
+ N Y Times p21 Ja 4 '25 950w
N Y World p8e O 26 '24 140w

WISTER, MARINA. Helen and others. 112p $2 ² Macmillan
811 24-21792

"Miss Wister, who is the daughter of the novelist, Owen Wister, displays a discreet sensitivity toward the more patently æsthetic aspects of life in 'Helen and Others' that results in versified laudation of Chaliapin, Pauline Lord, Rachmaninoff, Fokina, Charles Gilpin, Jeritza, Katchaloff, John and Lionel Barrymore, and Joseph Schildkraut."—Sat R of Lit

"While the best of this volume is well worth preserving, we might wish that a little more power of selection had been exercised. Those poems which are labored and freighted with adjectives are heavy anchors when we seek to lift the better ones into the high place where it is our pleasure to put them. To all of her work there is much dignity and fine reverence for the classics." L. LeB. W.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 15 '24 1200w

"Altogether this is a worthy little volume: coming from so young a poet it is a remarkable little volume." E. S. A.
+ Lit R p15 S 27 '24 250w

"It is all done with an instinctive command of graceful melody and workmanlike rhyme."
+ Sat R of Lit 1:436 Ja 3 '25 120w

WITHERS, PERCY. Friends in solitude. 256p $3 Dutton [7s 6d J. Cape]
824

These memories are drawn from ten years of solitude in the Cumberland dales of the English lake district where the author built for himself a little cottage and lived close to nature with only the dalesmen for human companions. Chief among these was Peter Dalethwaite, an old woodsman whom he met and talked with almost daily and thru whom his impressions are evoked. Dalethwaite's whole seventy years had been spent among the lakes and fells and thru him Mr Withers came to see beauties and meanings in the landscape that must escape the tourist, and to enter into the lives of the human beings who were his neighbors. Dalethwaite himself—his character, his philosophy and moralizing—is woven into the tissue of the book.

Reviewed by A. D. Douglas
Int Bk R p442 My '24 500w
New Statesman 22:344 D 22 '23 50w

"It is as the initial sentence promises, a serene, happy book, filled with the content with which it was first lived, before it was written. Its simple dignity of style is a befitting medium and it is not without many a touch of reflection rooted in wisdom and showing deep knowledge of human nature. There is humor, too, in comments and viewpoints and underlying philosophy."
+ N Y Times p26 My 18 '24 800w
N Y Tribune p25 My 18 '24 80w

"The book does not lack charm, but it lacks vividness, profundity, positive quality."
— + Outlook 137:69 My 14 '24 100w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p667 O 11 '23 820w

WITTELS, FRITZ. Sigmund Freud; his personality, his teaching, and his school; tr. from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. 287p $3.50 Dodd [10s 6d Allen & U.]
B or 92 Freud, Sigmund. Psychoanalysis

The book is not merely a biography of Freud. The author develops in detail the Freudian theories and discusses those of rival schools. Separate chapters are devoted to Adler, Jung and Stekel and a critical and historical account is given of the main elements of psychoanalytical theory—dream interpretation, repression, narcissism, etc.

Booklist 21:109 D '24
Bookm 60:505 D '24 260w
Boston Transcript p1 D 20 '24 270w
Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 41:98 D 17 '24 400w
Reviewed by Alexander Goldenweiser
N Y Tribune p3 O 12 '24 1750w

"This immensely stimulating book is an event in a realm which has unquestioned significance." J: W. Crawford
+ N Y World p6e S 21 '24 900w
Outlook 138:340 O 29 '24 20w
St Louis p416 D '24
The Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 16 '24 1350w

WODEHOUSE, PELHAM GRENVILLE. Golf without tears. 330p $2.50 Doran
24-13137

Humorous short stories in which golf and romance travel hand in hand. There is Cuthbert Banks, young and proficient in the game, but unable to make any impression on the girl he loves, because a more literary rival holds her attention. But when Vladimir Brusiloff, Russian novelist, comes to town and in his enthusiasm for golf, kisses Cuthbert on both cheeks before the whole Literary society, the girl wakes up and Cuthbert dreams again. In "The coming of gowf" there is related the introduction of golf into the Kingdom of Oom by a captive from S'nandrews, and the love that came to King Merolchazzar thru his adoption of the new religion. Other stories are: A woman is only a woman; A mixed threesome; Sundered hearts; The salvation of George Mackintosh; Ordeal by golf; The long hole; The heel of Achilles; The rough stuff.

Booklist 21:29 O '24
Boston Transcript p4 Je 4 '24 800w

"Wodehouse's particular brand of humor is too well known to comment upon, save that it is a brand we recommend." W: R. Benet
+ Lit R p772 My 24 '24 60w

"Wodehouse's stories are somewhat stereotyped, but his humor will out. The more obvious types of golfers cross the links of these stories in combative gestures."
+ — N Y Times p22 Je 2 '24 600w

"An extremely jolly book. Any reader who should fail to be rejoiced by it would be beyond our prayers. . . Few there are who can ride the facetious at any length without a fall; Mr. Wodehouse is one of the few."
+ Outlook 137:401 Jl 9 '24 70w

WODEHOUSE, PELHAM GRENVILLE. Leave it to Psmith. 347p $2 Doran [7s 6d H. Jenkins]
24-8571

Freddie Threepwood was in need of money and so was his uncle, but for different reasons. Freddie wanted £1000 to start a bookmaker's business and marry Eve Halliday; his uncle wanted £3000 to help a runaway daughter. Neither dared to let the Lady Constance know. Taking his idea from a movie, Freddie suggested that they steal Lady Constance's diamond necklace, sell it, get their money and then buy back the necklace and give it as a new one. Then Freddie found Psmith's advertisement in the paper; Psmith who would 'take the dog out for a run' or 'assassinate your aunt.' Psmith was found and the fun began. Many things happened but the necklace was stolen and everything turned out right, if not quite according to schedule. In the matter of Eve, poor Freddie, who was not over-gifted with brains, lost out to Psmith, who was really from a very good family despite his incriminating advertisement.

WODEHOUSE, P. G.—Continued

Booklist 20:341 Je '24

"Delightful, incalculable man! How can he do it, turning them out with the frequency and bright cheerfulness of his own heroes, a couple of times a year? We are bound to admit that the present volume is quite as good as most of the others, with careful, indeed, inspired, character work, and any amount of yew alleys, roses, and peaches on the south wall." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 5 '24 1050w
Cleveland p51 Jl '24

"'Leave it to Psmith' sets a brand-new record in frivolity, it is a masterpiece of frivolity, it raises frivolity to the level of a fine art. Lovingly and delicately it studies nonsense. In a mad world it is a veritable Lord of Misrule."
+ Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 Jl 13 '24 500w

"The tale is as gay, as whimsical and as amusing as any Mr. Wodehouse has written, which is saying a very great deal."
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 16 '24 720w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p145 Mr 6 '24 220w

WOELLNER, FREDERIC PHILIP. Education for citizenship in a democracy. 252p $1.60 Scribner

307 Social sciences—study and teaching. Citizenship—study and teaching 23-10379

Part one considers the present status of citizenship education in the United States—adult immigrant education, methods for developing a better adult American citizenship and educating the rising generation for democracy. Part two analyzes the criteria for evaluating citizenship education. Part three is concerned with such practical topics as the value of citizenship programs, social activities in the grades, an elementary social science course, and how to teach social science. The book is in some sense an annotated bibliography as all of the bibliographical material appears in the body of the text.

"It is replete with worthwhile suggestions and does not assume a dogmatic attitude on any question of teaching method."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:210 F '24 150w

"Speaking frankly, this is not a particularly easy book to read. One has to become accustomed to its organization and style. One would scarcely sit down with it for a mere 'comfortable half-hour.'" R. T. Hill
— + Educ R 67:236 Ap '24 450w

"After a careful reading of the book, one has the feeling that the thing which Mr. Woellner has done well is to display his wide reading in the field rather than to present a well-organized, practical, concrete discussion of the subject under consideration. The book is of great value to those who wish an up-to-date, annotated bibliography on citizenship training. Besides this very practical value, one can get from the last three chapters a multitude of concrete suggestions along the lines of method and content in the social sciences other than history." R. M. Tryon
+ — School R 31:629 O '23 280w
Wis Lib Bul 20:145 Je '24

WOLF, ROBERT L. After disillusion. 38p $1.25 Seltzer

811 24-1011

"'After Disillusion' is a combination of love poems appallingly naive with love poems frankly physical. This divergence of viewpoints somewhat blurs the outlines of the book, which is for the most part a series of pagan and even savage hymeneal hymns."—N Y World

"Original, daring, and ruthless." B. L. Kenyon
Bookm 59:80 Mr '24 250w

"We find a young man commenting, at best with a certain verbal adroitness, at worst tritely, upon certain phases of human existence to which his comments add little of significance or distinction. He strikes an intellectual pose before something or other, and sketches the pose, perhaps in a sonnet, with an ease of diction, an occasional felicitous phrasing, which saves it from banality but is insufficient to set upon it the stamp and interest which attaches to the fusing of manner and matter in a distinctly personal idiom, and makes of the reading an experience rather than an exercise."
— Boston Transcript p4 My 10 '24 150w

Reviewed by Margaret Widdemer
Int Bk R p646 Ag '24 300w

"He has a native power, but one cannot prophesy from this first small book. One can only say that it has more vigor and authenticity than the average first volume."
— + Lit R p498 F 2 '24 220w

"Frank, original, and ingenious verse which, for some reason known only to the Muses, is never quite as interesting as it ought to be."
+ — Nation 118:237 F 27 '24 70w

"Mr. Wolf's book contains several sonnets, all of them neatly turned. His volume is not conclusive enough a venture to arouse any particular discussion of him, but it is evident that he possesses a deal of lyric charm and the ability to circumscribe his subjects in a clean-cut manner." H. S. Gorman
— + N Y Times p5 D 9 '23 400w

"That it has vigor, that the craftsmanship is often excellent, that it says many difficult things adroitly cannot be denied. That it opens certain new vistas of poetic thought must also be admitted, but that it is poetry of a high order seems to me dubious." Maxwell Anderson
— + N Y World p6e D 16 '23 450w

"Robert L. Wolf has written some excellent verse in 'After Disillusion.' The volume, though his first, is one hardly to be put aside, it is more than a volume of promise, though hardly one of fulfilment. If he has nothing else, he has vigor. However, he does have something else, a sure, splendid way of putting his lines down, a grasp of his subject matter—a certain flair." Harold Vinal
+ — Springf'd Republican p5a Je 29 '24 220w

WOLFE, ALBERT BENEDICT. Conservatism, radicalism, and scientific method; an essay on social attitudes. 354p $3.50 Macmillan

301 Social psychology. Conservatism. Radicalism 23-15262

Drawing on his experience in college classes, the professor of economics in Ohio state university attempts to formulate a scientific method by which to approach social questions objectively and without class prejudice and thence to arrive at judgment and action. He analyzes briefly and clearly the types of attitude toward human affairs which have chiefly to be reckoned with—conservatism and radicalism—their psychology and the motives behind them. His exposition of the function of scientific method and attitude leads into interesting fields of social psychology and practical ethics.

"An essay which never skims the surface and often dips into the profound." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 1 '23 1200w
Cleveland p12 F '24
J Religion 4:223 Mr '24 60w

"This readable and stimulating book mingles the moral brooding of the poet with keen scientific analysis." C. A. Dawson
+ J Religion 4:421 Jl '24 1200w
R of Rs 69:222 F '24 60w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p439 Jl 10 '24 50w
Wis Lib Bul 20:121 My '24

WOLFF, WILLIAM ALMON. The show-off. 308p $2 Little 24-24949

The novelization of the popular play of the same name.

"Dialogue being Mr. Kelley's most potent weapon, the text is best when the characters speak for themselves. No easy task is it to evolve a successful novel from a play, though it be a brilliant one. A something a shade too studied, a something less than spontaneous is apt to mark the endeavor, to which rule 'The Show-Off' is no exception."
+ — Boston Transcript p6 N 5 '24 350w

"Most stories 'novelized' from a successful play read like—well, like a novelized scenario. This doesn't. It holds well to the dialogue form, most of the narrative being unfolded directly in that way—best of all ways in the hands of a story teller capable of using it, so far as liveliness and verisimilitude are concerned." H. L. P.
+ Lit R p10 N 22 '24 500w

"Not often is a book written from a play any better than a play taken from a book; but there is humor so sparkling, pathos so genuinely moving that it cannot fail to touch the risibilities of any one who is agreeably human."
+ N Y Times p16 N 2 '24 950w

WOMAN'S INSTITUTE OF DOMESTIC ARTS AND SCIENCES, INCORPORATED, SCRANTON, PA. Woman's institute library of dressmaking. (Woman's inst. domestic arts ser.) 267p il $3 The institute, Scranton, Pa.

646 Textile fabrics. Sewing. Lace and lace making 23-10206

"This book is arranged for the convenience and ready reference of students, homemakers, and dressmakers, giving historical information, descriptions and uses of laces, textiles, embroideries, and findings, and showing their values, purposes, and uses in dressmaking work. Detailed illustrations and instruction are given for the mending of practical, every-day garments, as this work is required in the average home. Information is given for household sewing, including the making of draperies, bed coverings, scarfs, and art needlework, as well as the miscellaneous articles that a housewife may need to mend, remodel, or replace. A dictionary of trade and sewing terms completes the volume."—Preface

WOOD, EDITH (ELMER) (MRS ALBERT NORTON WOOD). Housing progress in western Europe. 210p il $3 Dutton

331.83 Housing—Europe 24-463

Mrs Wood gives an account of the efforts made by private initiative and state action in Great Britain, France, Italy, Holland and Belgium to do away with slums and have each family in a home of its own. She maintains that, in matters of housing, public opinion and legislation in these countries are years ahead of ours in the United States, and shows how the machinery for handling the re-housing of the working people is fully developed in England and Holland and in process of development in the other three countries. Notes on housing progress in Spain and Switzerland are given in the appendix. Bibliography. Index.

"A large amount of useful material is presented in readable form."
+ Am Pol Sci R 18:430 My '24 50w

"The task of compression in a book of this kind is a difficult one. The attempt has been made by the author to survey housing progress in Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy and Holland from the beginning of interest in the subject to the late summer of 1923. Much must be left out. We may say, however, that the author has done her work of selection well." L. W. Lancaster
+ Ann Am Acad 112:289 Mr '24 1050w
Booklist 20:250 Ap '24
Boston Transcript p4 Ja 19 '24 1000w
Cleveland p57 Jl '24
Eng N 92:733 Ap 24 '24 120w

"The book is well written, the descriptions are vivid and interesting, and Mrs. Wood's unusual qualifications for the discussion of her subject make it of unique interest to both the general reader and the professional worker." E. A. Winslow
+ J Home Econ 16:139 Mr '24 800w

Reviewed by B: R. Andrews
Lit R p520 F 16 '24 800w

"The time is ripe for such a book as this to rouse us from our indifference and ignorance. It is replete with information." A. D. Warbasse
+ Nation 118:261 Mr 5 '24 1200w

"Dr. Wood's book is illustrated with photographs and architects' plans which clarify the text."
+ N Y Times p22 F 3 '24 650w

"This book should prove an eye-opener to such self-satisfied Americans as can be persuaded to read it."
+ R of Rs 69:335 Mr '24 170w

"Without being at all profound the book gives a good summary of the housing legislation of each country, and the prospects of every family having a decent home."
+ Spec 132:644 Ap 19 '24 80w
Survey 52:467 Jl 15 '24 770w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p391 Je 19 '24 130w

WOOD, ELLIOTT. Life and adventure in peace and war. 315p $5.40 Longmans [16s E. Arnold]

B or 92 Wood, Elliott

Reminiscences of army life by an English officer who served with the Royal engineers in various parts of the Empire, particularly in Africa. His war experiences were in the Egyptian campaign of 1882-1885, in the Boer war as engineer-in-chief to Lord Roberts, and under Kitchener. The Great war found him retired from the army but able, at eighty, to enlist in the Herefordshire motor corps. His peace adventures were mostly in the way of sport, especially canoeing.

Boston Transcript p1 My 31 '24 540w

"Of course, the battle stories should be the most exciting part of this book, but they are not: the canoeing wins easily, and we wish there had been more of it."
Nation and Ath 35:362 Je 14 '24 80w
Sat R 137:440 Ap 26 '24 400w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p184 Mr 27 '24 450w

WOODBURN, JAMES ALBERT. American community. 455p il $1.48 Longmans

353 United States—Politics and government
24-3721

"'An elementary text in Community civics.'—Subtitle. Takes as a basis of study the various units which make up society, beginning with the family and leading up to the national community and the study of American citizenship. Numerous illustrations, study questions, chapter references and pronouncing lists."—Booklist

Booklist 20:326 Je '24

"Up-to-date and attractive."
+ Wis Lib Bul 20:145 Je '24

WOODCOCK, B. C. Textbook of advertisement writing and designing. 184p il $5 Dutton [10s 6d Constable]

659 Advertising [24-7870]

"Contains a large number of practical ideas and suggestions. Divided into three parts, the

WOODCOCK, B. C.—Continued
first dealing with analysis of subject matter and of constructive principles, and synthesis of the matters analyzed; the second, with analysis of psychological principles, psychology of wording, and originating of ideas; and the third, very briefly, with the complete advertisement."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:317 Je '24

WOODRUFF, LORANDE LOSS, ed. Development of the sciences, by Ernest William Brown, and others. 327p il $3.50 Yale univ. press

509 Science—History A24-247

A series of public lectures presented at Yale university in 1920. Each lecture deals with the historical development of one of the major sciences and together they form a history of science. Appendices give brief biographies of the more important scientists mentioned in the text, a bibliography, a table of the chemical elements arranged in the chronological order of their discovery, and the terms of the geologic column. Contents: Mathematics, by E. W: Brown; Physics, by H: A. Bumstead; Chemistry, by J: Johnston; Astronomy, by Frank Schlesinger; Geology, by H. E. Gregory; Biology, by L. L. Woodruff; Index.

Booklist 20:206 Mr '24

"On the whole the book is a scholarly work, but it is a little too full of facts to present them all in their proper integration." Elwood Hendrick

+ — Ind & Eng Chem 16:653 Je '24 580w

"The essays on astronomy and biology show how much can be done even in such limited space. They are admirable in every way. . . . On the whole all the contributors to the volume, and all connected in any way with its publication are to be congratulated on the notable result."

+ — Nature 113:419 Mr 22 '24 550w

"The essays are of uneven merit, and there is some duplication." B: Harrow

— + N Y Times p14 Mr 2 '24 750w

WOODS, ALICE (MRS EUGENE PAUL ULLMAN). Hairpin duchess. 224p $1.50 Duffield 24-25645

The "Hairpin duchess" was an American girl from the West whose father had made a fortune in hairpins. She came to Paris in search of her husband, who had left her, and she fell into the hands of a group of young men in the American colony who enjoyed her opulent beauty and good-nature, while laughing at her breaks and lack of good taste. Her Paris experiences taught her much, and the book closes with the prophecy of her reunion with her husband.

Boston Transcript p8 D 6 '24 320w

"We like this little tale; it is mildly entertaining and wholly innocuous."

+ Lit R p9 D 27 '24 240w

"Slight but clever and sparkling little story."

+ N Y Times p20 D 28 '24 360w

"'The Hairpin Duchess' is a sympathetic, moral version of 'Daisy Miller,' with a happy ending."

N Y World p9e N 23 '24 180w

"Provides an hour's mild entertainment for readers who don't want their cleverness too clever, their sophistication too alarming, or their pathos and tragedy too moving."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:364 D 6 '24 220w

Springf'd Republican p7a N 30 '24 220w

WOODS, MARGARET LOUISA (BRADLEY) (MRS H. G. WOODS). Poet's youth. 340p $2.50 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d Chapman & Dodd]

[24-13710]

The story is founded on the youthful love affair of the poet Wordsworth with a French girl, Annette Vallon, which M. Emile Legouis has narrated in a recent biography, "William Wordsworth and Annette Vallon." (Book Review Digest, 1923) The two met while Wordsworth was travelling in France after graduation from Cambridge. Aside from his romance, the poet's French experiences were full of drama, for he had strong Republican sympathies, while Annette was an ardent Royalist. Apparently insurmountable obstacles prevented their marriage and Wordsworth returned to England leaving Annette and his young daughter in France.

"Here is material for a novel of real beauty and worth; there is much in it that, if rightly treated, might make one of the prettiest stories of the generation. The author, however, has failed miserably to make this story one of absorbing interest. The characters fail to live for us; the dialogue is wooden; the plot encumbered with too much detail, moves slowly when it moves at all." K. S.

— Boston Transcript p4 Mr 26 '24 750w

"The book is a long one, packed with incident and description; it contains some well-marked figures and some scenes of good design. But there was no reason for calling it 'A Poet's Youth.' Why does Mrs. Woods assert that Annette's lover was the poet Wordsworth?—only because she knows that as a matter of fact he was. For a biographer it is reason enough; for a novelist it is obviously no reason whatever." Percy Lubbock

Nation and Ath 34:800 Mr 8 '24 850w

"The book is intensely interesting, because after all it deals with one of the greatest poets, but I do not think Mrs. Woods's hypotheses are particularly persuasive or inspired." Raymond Mortimer

— + New Statesman 22:454 Ja 26 '24 1150w

"The author yields too often to the temptations to prove the genuineness of her poet's inspiration by dragging in purple passages of her own, and some of these have more the flavor of Hollywood than of Rydal Mount. Yet when Miss Woods forgets her high purpose, as she does in the dramatic episode at the chateau she is able to tell a rattling good story. One rather wishes she would let Wordsworth sleep and go in for romance for its own sake."

— + N Y Times p8 Mr 16 '24 850w

"I have a feeling akin to having entered a shop for an express purpose, and, though being a little disappointed in that, having discovered therein all sorts of odds and curios and miscellanies which have compensated for my loss." Don Hanson

— + N Y Tribune p24 My 25 '24 1100w

"Some one who has carefully studied the known facts has ventured this romance of his youth. No doubt there are errors of incident and interpretation. No doubt history is distorted. Inevitably, that is true; but . . . here at least we meet a credibly young and ardent William Wordsworth, aged twenty-two."

+ Outlook 136:706 Ap 23 '24 270w

"Mrs. Woods writes well, and has made an exciting story of it all, with plenty of sensation. But as a serious artist, she is strong in her details of French life and scenery."

+ Sat R 137:110 F 2 '24 200w

"The whole interest depends upon the action; whereas, in the legitimate novel, we are interested in action primarily in as far as it shapes character. Nor will Mrs. Woods ever let us forget that the hero of her book is William Wordsworth. But when such detractions have been made, it must still be added that Mrs. Woods' accomplishment has been considerable. For those who can put aside aesthetic scruples, she has written a moving and well-planned novel."

+ — Spec 132:374 Mr 8 '24 500w

"It is really an achievement of no little merit —a good tale admirably told, a resetting of the human stage when the drama of life and of men's emotions ran high, and the sympathetic lighting of a dim corner in a great man's life.

whereby we may see more clearly into his soul and understand the better all the work that he has left us."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Je 8 '24 700w

"Mrs. Woods justifies, explains. All of which, true and interesting as it may be, is detrimental to romantic literature. The book none the less is an achievement; history made vivid, great figures brought close."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p7 Ja 3 '24 700w

Wis Lib Bul 20:127 My '24

WOODS, ROBERT ARCHEY. Preparation of Calvin Coolidge. 288p $1.50 Houghton

B or 92 Coolidge, Calvin 24-23161

It is the author's belief that "Calvin Coolidge went through a more consistent and complete preparation for the presidency than any previous incumbent of the office." Mr Woods traces this preparation from state representative up thru the steadily ascending scale of his public offices and tells his record in each. His interpretation of President Coolidge's character and acts is invariably sympathetic and usually favorable.

"He has written one of the soundest among the many interpretations of Calvin Coolidge which have been published during his incumbency of the high office which he holds." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 4 '24 600w

Ind 113:381 N 8 '24 20w

"Mr Woods has done an excessively good job." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p3 O 12 '24 1900w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 30 '24 580w

"While this book shows some evidence of hasty preparation, its inherently good qualities are likely to make it one that will outlive the present situation." Lucius Eastman

+ — Survey 53:97 O 15 '24 760w

WOODWARD, WILLIAM E. Lottery. 424p $2 Harper

24-24348

A story of phenomenal luck which brought to Jerry Garrison a million dollars when he was only a little over thirty. Jerry was a good looking but decidedly lazy young man living in a small Massachusetts town. By sheer luck he acquired the rights to a patent button, made some money on a race, put the button on the market and in a few years rose to fame and wealth. It was luck, too which made him marry Lulu, for altho she came of a poor family, she was very ambitious. Her ambition coupled with her good taste and wit made Lulu successful in her social climbing, and eventually the Garrisons were admitted into the inner circle of the socially élite.

Booklist 21:155 Ja '25

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '25 1000w

"More American realism after the pattern of Dreiser, but reaching only 'Main Street' level. In this instance, there are flashes of astute perception but the main subject is intrinsically uninteresting and insignificant."

— Ind 114:106 Ja 24 '25 80w

"The characters are naked souls, stripped of tinsel and rags that the reader may see the how and wherefore of their actions. 'Lottery' is one of the finest psychological studies in modern writing." J. M. Clark

+ Lit R p12 D 20 '24 330w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 119:575 N 26 '24 870w

"The color, the gusto, the crassness, passion, restless energy of America has gone into the making of this book. But the peals of Rabelaisian laughter are hearty. His is not that superior arrogance of some of our intellectuals. It is the writing of a man mellow with the wisdom of life and experience."

+ N Y Times p14 N 16 '24 1050w

"In his mood of radiant cynicism, Mr. Woodward writes like a fallen angel. But when he is merry, he sings with the joyous and lusty parody, as J. J. Garrison would indubitably say, of the genuine, American he-catbird." G. H. Carson

+ N Y Tribune p1 O 26 '24 2300w

"To our mind it appears that if the order of this author's productions had been reversed, if 'Lottery,' that is, had preceded 'Bunk,' he would be now in the position of a man hoping patiently to catch the next train to Reputationville. 'Bunk' was a book of satire and satiric philosophy as well as of fiction. 'Lottery' is such to a less degree." E. W. Osborn

— + N Y World p8e O 19 '24 800w

"'Lottery' is funny and is a story well told. It brings into focus a side of life that has achieved the exalted position of a religion—advertising—and it is free from 'Bunk.'" S. G.

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 18 '25 560w

WOOLLCOTT, ALEXANDER. Enchanted aisles. 260p $2.50 Putnam

792 Theater 24-7831

These essays of a dramatic critic have to do mostly with the stage and the drama, but he has not confined himself to the "enchanted aisles" of the theater. He divides his essays into Enthusiasms and Resentments. Among the former are Bernhardt, Duse, Neysa McMein, Charlie Chaplin, Mrs Fiske, Irving Berlin and Morris Gest; among the latter, Maurice Maeterlinck, a few annoying dramas and some after-dinner speakers.

Cleveland p53 Jl '24

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 112:260 My 10 '24 370w

"That some of these chapters were done under the lash of the time-piece in a newspaper office gives the whole, in a sense, an added value, comprising, as it necessarily must, swift intuitions and evaluations as well as leisurely reflection. Altogether these essays constitute a book of intrinsic and fundamental criticism." Mary Siegrist

+ Int Bk R p594 Jl '24 850w

"The enthusiastic temperament has its extreme. In Mr. Woollcott's writing, therefore, resentment and dissent often run high and caustic. If qualities he admires hotly are missing in a play, a performance, a 'personality,' he is apt not to be able to see anything in them at all. But in this present book there is little bitterness. In it—whether he happens to be writing about the theatre, about Paris taxi-drivers, or about admired people out of the theatre like De Pachmann or Harvard's beloved Professor Copeland—he is his gayest, his kindliest and his babbling best." Neil Martin

+ — Lit R p722 My 3 '24 850w

"Whatever posterity may say of Mr. Woollcott, New Yorkers of today will be glad to read his book. Whether he writes of France or America, whether he is reviving New York of the nineties or gayly foretelling the stars of the future, he is always amusing, in the manner of a first-rate escort."

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 20 '24 600w

"His enthusiasms are genuine and sound; his dislikes are described in such amusing fashion that the reader can only complain because he does not include more of them in this book. What he writes is interesting, readable, inviting."

+ Outlook 136:652 Ap 16 '24 340w

St Louis p347 O '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p254 Ap 24 '24 120w

WOON, BASIL. Real Sarah Bernhardt; as told to her friend Mme. Pierre Berton (Eng title, Sarah Bernhardt as I knew her). 361p il $3.50 Boni & Liveright

B or 92 Bernhardt, Sarah 24-7549

Mme Berton to whom from time to time during their long association, Sarah Bernhardt told the facts of her life, is the widow of Pierre Berton who played with Bernhardt at the Odéon. He was also her lover for a time and helped to shape her career. Mme Berton, after her marriage, accompanied Bernhardt on many of her tours and remained thru life her confidante and friend. The biography, which is told by Basil Woon as Mme. Berton related it to him contains some rather startling revelations.

WOON, BASIL—Continued

Cleveland p62 Jl '24

"Once embarked in the reading of such a book as this, one goes on to the bitter end, loathing oneself for having bathed in such muddy waters."
— Dial 76:562 Je '24 200w

"Remarkable both for its almost brutal frankness and for the clear insight it gives into the character of its subject." I: Anderson
+ Int Bk R p661 Ag '24 3400w

"As for the pretense that this volume is in any important respect revelatory, that it exhibits Bernhardt, her career, abilities, and character in any new or surprising light, that is without any solid foundation whatever. . . It is a scandalous chronicle, unnecessary, stale, and unjustifiable."
— Lit R p745 My 10 '24 450w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Nation 118:485 Ap 23 '24 500w

+ New Repub 38:290 My 7 '24 1000w

"Whether or not 'The Real Sarah Bernhardt' is scrupulously accurate in all detail, the book is a vitalized portrait of a dominating and bizarre personality, an enthralling character study. It has in the telling all the vivacity of the Frenchwoman's narrative which even the pedestrianism of Basil Woon's English rendering cannot smother. The utter absence of corroborating evidence for the thousand and one startling statements categorically made is a very definite obstacle."
+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 23 '24 2650w

"A fascinating book about a supremely fascinating woman." Isabel Paterson
+ N Y Tribune p17 Mr 16 '24 2550w

"'The Real Sarah Bernhardt' is a charming book. Mme. Berton adds to its worth by her own gestures." Laurence Stallings
+ N Y World p11 Ap 2 '24 900w

"The book is extremely interesting."
+ Outlook 136:746 Ap 30 '24 550w

"This book relates scores of interesting reminiscences concerning remarkable people in all walks of life and people whose achievements run the whole artistic range."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 21 '24 380w
Theatre Arts Mo 8:425 Je '24 180w

WORK, JOHN. Journal of John Work; ed. and with an account of the fur trade in the Northwest and his life, by William S. Lewis and Paul C. Phillips. 209p il $6 Clark, A. H.

971.2 Northwest, Pacific. Hudson's Bay company. Fur trade. Indians of North America 23-11965

"The journal of John Work is here for the first time published. Work entered the employ of the Hudson's Bay Company in 1814, serving east of the mountains for eight years. From 1823 to 1832 he was stationed at Astoria, Spokane House, Fort Colville, Fort Vancouver and other posts. His journal of the trip from York Factory to Fort George, 1823-24, shows his powers of observation, describing with intelligence the country traversed. Returning from an expedition to Clark's Fork in 1826, Work started out for trade with the Flathead Indians, every effort to win over this tribe being made by the Americans as well as by the Hudson Bay people. The sketch of the life of Work outlines his various activities and his journals fill in the details."—Boston Transcript

"Work's journal is in brief and pointed entries. It lacks much of the picturesqueness of some of the accounts of his predecessors, for with him trapping and hunting was a matter of serious business. The journals, however, fully indicate the geographical scope of the Hudson's Bay Company's activities, and his powers of observation are such that his account forms a valuable addendum to history. The notes which are furnished by the two editors, are copious and a check-list of works relating to the fur trade in the Northwest is given." G. H. S.
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 13 '23 500w

"This volume contains a sketch of the fur-trade in the Northwest. . . The sketch is interestingly written, but it is fragmentary, incomplete, and out of perspective. A considerable number of errors have crept into it. . . The book is well printed, and it contains a useful index." F. W. Howay
— + Canadian Hist R 5:66 Mr '24 1150w

WREN, PERCIVAL CHRISTOPHER. Beau
² Geste. 410p $2 Stokes

The Blue water, a priceless gem of magnificent beauty, is Lady Brandon's choicest treasure. Yielding to the requests of her young guests, she brings the sapphire to show them. While they are examining it, the beautiful stone disappears. Beau Geste, the favorite nephew, takes the blame upon himself and leaves. Follows an exciting chase to the Nigerian frontier and back, plot upon plot, mystery upon mystery, with no solution offered until the "beau geste" at the close.

"The piece is artistically anomalous and somewhat overdone in multiplicity of incident, but there is life in it. The texture of the author's style is also good—well above the average." H. L. P.
+ — Lit R p10 Ja 17 '25 400w

"The behavior of the three Gestes from first to last was nobly idiotic. But the author's knowledge of the North African terrain, its inhabitants and customs, is extensive and colorful and bears the stamp of accuracy. So the Gestes may pass as excuses." Isabel Paterson
— + N Y Tribune p10 Ja 18 '25 200w

"This novel has one of the best sensational openings which have appeared for years. . . It is very exciting reading, but the motive which leads the three young Englishmen to enlist in the French Foreign Legion is fantastically incredible. However, the reader's hair will stand on end countless times before he gets to the end of the book."
+ — Spec 133:790 N 22 '24 120w

WRIGHT, GENE. Pandora La Croix. 302p $2 Lippincott
24-11330

Another South Sea romance. John Clay, English army surgeon, was lord of a small island where he was living in exile for reasons of his own. John Clay despised all women until one night in Tahiti Tom's café, that den of iniquity, he saved Pandora, a beautiful little half-breed, from the assaults of G'rilla Bagsley. She appealed to Clay as something to experiment on, so by book and ring he married her with the sole purpose of making her a lady. It was a hard task but this little creature of the wilds loved him with a deep devotion, and when the time came to help him she gave her life for his gladly and unselfishly.

"A romantic and well-told tale."
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 24 '24 160w

"The book possesses plenty of action, both in the vivid narrative-present and in the hardly less vivid form of retrospect. It discloses a happy knack for phrase-making, for the hitting off of situations and relationships and a genuine if somewhat unreal sense of humor."
+ N Y Times p9 Ap 20 '24 700w

Reviewed by E. W. Osborn
N Y World p6e Ap 20 '24 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p557 S 11 '24 230w

WRIGHT, PETER E. The shirt. 305p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

"The shirt" is a satire on present day civilization. America and Great Britain under the names of Caria and Crete are brought into play. Charles, the heir of a great fortune, is advised by his physicians that the only remedy for his melancholy is for him to sleep in the shirt of a happy man. Thus starts the quest for the shirt. The remainder of the book gives sketches of prominent persons who are believed to possess this treasure. There is the Duke of Cydone, the statesman, the emperor, the general. The quest ends with the discovery of the Happy isles but the natives wore no shirts.

Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '24 380w

"I realize that I am about to incur the wrath of the Shavians, the Firbankers, the Macheniacs, the Huxleyans and the Arlenians; in my opinion Mr. Wright has produced the most notable piece of English satire of the twentieth century." Hugo Sonnenschein

+ Lit R p4 O 18 '24 800w

"This book has the double merit of a mellowness, a sort of sophistication of satire, and a refreshing novelty. It is always entertaining and very often true." E. V.

+ New Repub 41:153 D 31 '24 250w

New Statesman 23:330 Je 21 '24 200w

N Y Times p23 O 26 '24 750w

N Y Tribune p15 Ja 11 '25 310w

"Indubitably, 'The Shirt' is a satirical tale for the mentally adult only. It is too sharp fare for the stolid and graven keeper of formal virtues. But for the intelligently sophisticated it is one of the fattest books likely to be offered these lean years." Bruce Gould

+ N Y World p9e N 2 '24 560w

"Here is the true vein of paradox, revealing by startling." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 137:568 My 31 '24 250w

Reviewed by Philip Coan

Sat R of Lit 1:352 D 6 '24 420w

"Though individual passages are good (no financial magnate could read the commercial section without wincing) the book as a whole sprawls badly; it sets out to kill too many dragons." L. P. Hartley

— + Spec 132:846 My 24 '24 100w

"There are many episodes of delicious humour and a small gallery of quite credible personages. The satire, if a little borrowed in manner, is often brilliant. But 'The Shirt' remains a lively argument; its author has been too anxious to hold forth on weighty topics."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p320 My 22 '24 480w

WRIGHT, RICHARDSON LITTLE. Practical book of outdoor flowers. 319p il $7.50 (35s) Lippincott

716 Gardening 24-11778

The author, editor, of House and Garden, begins at the beginning of garden making, the preparation of the soil, and takes the reader thru a series of garden adventures to "a diversity of gardens." Contents: What soils are like; Preparing the soil; The childhood of plants; The enemies of plants; Managing a garden; The story of perennials; The making and maintenance of perennial borders; Getting the most out of annuals; Success with bulbs and tubers; Roses and rose gardens; The fascination of rock gardens; Wild and water gardens; Vines that give flowers; Trees and shrubs that flower; A diversity of gardens; Pronunciation of plant names; Index.

Booklist 21:14 O '24

"Mr. Wright has the happy faculty of treating his topic without recourse to textbook methods. He does not believe in taking gardening too seriously, and so he writes in a casual manner which is certain to interest and then fascinate a reader before the latter realizes that he has become absorbed in the subject."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 12 '24 260w

"Mr. Wright's book justifies its title. It is a thoroughly practical book, the outcome of experience, mostly his own but broadened also by that of other gardeners. It is also an exceedingly beautiful book, well printed and handsomely made and adorned with copious illustrations."

+ N Y Times p15 My 18 '24 750w

"Mr. Wright's book is, to borrow a word much used in a different field of effort, distinctly inspirational. . . One feels always an actual, companionable gardener behind the facts, incidentally revealing little glimpses of himself along with his experiences. . . Mr. Wright's book is admirably arranged; it is thorough; and it is beautiful."

+ Outlook 137:400 Jl 9 '24 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:370 Jl '24

The Times [London] Lit Sup p558 S 11 '24 140w

WRIGHT, RICHARDSON LITTLE. Small house and large garden; being a journal of the same with notes. 219p $2 Houghton

814 24-17536

Essays in light mood on sundry subjects, many of them on some aspect of the country house in Connecticut which the author owns. There is the tragedy of the week end guest who could not sleep in the purple guest room because she had a blue nightgown. Then there is the story of the dog called Delphinium and the cat Lydia Steamboat. A few of the sketches are more serious, as: The beginnings of a garden library and Looking into windows.

Booklist 21:12 O '24

"Mr. Wright has the irresistible gift of hitting on the rare idea and making it his own and the reader's in a homely, yet beautiful, way." J. F.

+ Bookm 60:86 S '24 250w

Cleveland p69 S '24

"None of the essays is about the same thing all the way through. Each begins by pretending with its title and its first paragraph to be concerned with some special subject, but before it ends it is sure to skirt along the edges of a variety of themes. But the essays are all entertaining and many of them have little stimulants to thought here and there through their paragraphs that lead one to let the book drop for a moment and allow the mind to start off on the trail the author has suggested."

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 13 '24 300w

N Y Tribune p2 S 28 '24 150w

St Louis p411 D '24

Wis Lib Bul 20:211 O '24

WRONG, HUME. Government of the West Indies. 190p $3.50 Oxford [10s 6d Milford]

342.729 West Indies—Politics and government

"A concise outline of the constitutional and governmental systems of the British colonies of the Caribbean. The author, who is assistant professor of modern history in the University of Toronto, notes that there is a high degree of particularism in the British West Indies, and he thinks that geographical and social differences make political federation a still remote possibility."—Nation

"It is to be hoped that Mr. Wrong's manual, brief as it is, yet sound in method and judgment, may serve as a point of departure for more exhaustive studies in West Indian history." F. W. Pitman

+ Am Hist R 29:615 Ap '24 420w

Boston Transcript p4 F 2 '24 600w

"Is of especial value at this moment when our own islands in that region are clamoring for more democracy and a greater amount of self-determination."

+ Nation 119:170 Ag 13 '24 80w

WU SHU-CHIUNG (MRS WU LIEN-TEH). [2] Most famous beauty of China; the story of Yang Keui-fei. 117p il $2 Appleton [8s 6d Brentano's]

915.1 Yang Kuei-fei 24-31505

Four famous beauties of China have been handed down from ancient times. These are: Hsi Shih, the most beautiful; Chao Chün, the most virtuous; Tiao Chan, the most patriotic; and Yang Kuei-fei, the most artful. This is the tale of the most artful of the four women. Yang Kuei-fei was for twenty years the undisputed mistress of the imperial court. Her beauty and talents as a musician, singer and dancer were unrivaled. When the Emporer Ming Huang first beholds Keui-fei he becomes enamored of her, and thus is the fate of an empire overturned. The love story of the emperor and his consort which comes to a tragic end, portrays the elegance of court life in China during the 8th century when the Tang dynasty was at the height of its prosperity.

Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '24 700w

"In this pretty gift book Mrs. Wu summarizes one of the most popular stories of the Far East. It is a pity that, instead of offering her own translations of the poems which she so frequently quotes, she has used Dr. Fletcher's rather sing-song versions."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p854 D 11 '24 110w

WYCLIFFE, JOHN. Against the tide. 279p $2 Dodd

24-17127

This is a business story in which stocks, bonds and voting trusts play an important part. Dorothy Deming's marriage is delayed one hour because of an important business transaction which takes place between her father and prospective husband, Reese Armstrong. Then follows the discovery by Armstrong that his most intimate friend, Lawrence MacGowan, is the means of involving him in a business deal which attacks his honor, threatens him with financial ruin and the loss of Dorothy's confidence. But with the timely help of friends and the assistance of an able detective, Armstrong discloses MacGowan's treachery, honor and business are again restored to Reese, so he and Dorothy are happy.

Booklist 21:115 D '24

"Mr. Wycliffe analyzes the financial problems presented with an insight as sane as it is keen. Modern methods of 'get-rich-quick' business, playing with other people's money, legal unscrupulousness, are starkly revealed. But revealed also are the invincible strength of honor in the heart of an honorable, if temporarily ambition-blinded man, and the strength, equally invincible, of the 'eternal feminine.'" F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Jl 12 '24 700w

"An extremely sprawling and incoherent novel."

— N Y Times p9 Jl 20 '24 470w

N Y World p6e Jl 6 '24 30w

Reviewed by F. V. Roman

N Y World p8e Jl 13 '24 180w

WYLIE, IDA ALENA ROSS. Ancient fires. 375p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Cassell]

24-11877

A tale of high adventure having its origin in the quiet English city of Stoneborough, the home of Sir Euan Fitzroy, a gentleman. Fitzroy, after four years of war, returns to Stoneborough to marry the exquisite Lisbeth Gay with whom he is passionately in love. But one John Smith by name, an adventurer, steps in and by his sheer magnetism and audacity wins the heart and hand of Lisbeth. Together they journey to a small Central American republic of which John Smith becomes dictator. Sir Euan meanwhile meets Paula Smith, a woman of the world, who claims to be John Smith's lawful wife. Fitzroy hastens to Central America to confront Smith with his perfidy and there ensue violent conflicts between the man of culture and the adventurer, each fighting courageously for Lisbeth. The story reaches a high climax by the unexpected death of John Smith—and Sir Euan takes Lisbeth back with him to England.

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 12 '24 2250w

"A romance of love and adventure, picturesque, dramatic and full of color." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p607 Jl '24 720w

"Miss Wylie has kept the fire of our ardor—and hers—burning straight through 'Ancient Fires,' a book of unusually virile style and extremely picturesque material." Madelin Leof

+ Lit R p844 Je 21 '24 720w

"In the first part of the book there is some solid achievement. . . In the second part the story runs wild. The old, well-known machinery of the O. Henry, Davis, South American republics, speeds up to the tempo that approaches a riotous whirlwind. . . Still, incredible as it is actually, in reading, the book moves with a fine gusto that will not be suppressed."

+ — N Y Times p8 Je 8 '24 950w

"Starting out with an appealing simplicity of style, and at times almost poetic beauty of language, as the plot becomes more complicated it relapses into commonplace, and what we hoped might prove an unusual 'find' merely turns out to be another of a hundred tales of 'love and adventure', surprisingly well told." Faith Giddings

— + N Y Tribune p28 Je 22 '24 750w

"It is a fine story of love and adventure—the greatest story, we believe, that Miss Wylie has written." E. W. Osborn

+ N Y World p7e Je 1 '24 420w

"An admirably told romantic tale."

+ Outlook 138:62 S 10 '24 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p266 My 1 '24 420w

WYMAN, MRS LILLIE BUFFUM (CHACE). Gertrude of Denmark, an interpretative romance; introd. by Courtney Langdon. 260p $2 Marshall Jones

24-8277

A romance based upon a wholly new interpretation of Shakespeare's "Hamlet." Thru the addition of some imaginary scenes to the actual scenes of the drama a conception of Queen Gertrude, Hamlet's mother, is built up which differs radically from the one ordinarily accepted by readers and critics. According to Mrs Wyman Gertrude was not faithless to her first husband and after his death married King Claudius not from self-interest but from a desire to secure her son's succession to the throne on the death of Claudius. Hamlet is depicted not as insane from grief but as a monstrous egotist.

"Burlesque or sermon, novel or critical treatise—despite any and all our prejudices—this book is a friendly, 'civilized,' humorous, beautiful, and assertive entry into the lists of Shakespeariana. Deserving to become at least a classic of curiosity."

Bookm 59:481 Je '24 130w

Reviewed by Dale Warren

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 12 '24 1250w

"A mixture which may, to use a perhaps excessively mild term, be described as peculiar."

— N Y Times p16 Ap 27 '24 600w

"Whether we are 'convinced' or not, this romance of Hamlet and his mother, as Mrs Wyman has conceived it is likely to stay in our memory."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a Je 15 '24 600w

"The method used is frankly intuitional and sentimental and weakens the value of what critically and historically handled might be an interesting contribution to the study of Hamlet."

— Theatre Arts Mo 8:576 Ag '24 50w

WYNDHAM, MAUD MARY (LYTTELTON) 2 (HON. MRS HUGH ARCHIBALD WYNDHAM). Chronicles of the eighteenth century. 2v 264;299p il $10 Houghton [30s Hodder & S.]

942.07 Lyttelton family. England—Social life and customs. Great Britain—History—18th century [24-18776]

"Maud Wyndham has delved into the teeming mine of manuscripts at Hagley, the seat in Worcestershire of the Lyttelton family. She has sifted them and collated them with all sorts of other documents in and out of print, and the result is two lively volumes which, if they add no startling discovery to the known facts of history, at least fill the picture of fifty critical years with details as unquestionable as they are picturesque."—N Y Times

---

"With the exception of a few generalities in her Introduction, Mrs. Wyndham rightly leaves these family chronicles to tell their own story; and no one who is interested in eighteenth-century England can afford to neglect the Lytteltons." S. C. Roberts

+ Nation and Ath 35:516 Jl 19 '24 880w

"It is a book which would be supremely interesting to a Lyttelton, and is very interesting to those who have not that distinction."

+ New Statesman 23:652 S 13 '24 1100w

"There is no startling revelation, but a copious outpouring of historical filling in material and popular recreative information. It must have cost infinite labor to compile the volumes, but the result justifies the task. They make monstrous good reading, as one of their heroes might have said, for lovers of the more or less good old times." James Luby

+ N Y Times p19 D 21 '24 1550w

"A very important selection of letters."

+ Spec 132:807 My 17 '24 140w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p313 My 22 '24 1200w

WYNNE, PAMELA. Ann's an idiot. 363p $2 Stokes [7s 6d P. Allan]

23-13007

"On her way to India, with her cousin Joyce, Ann meets Major Seymour, V. C., of the Royal Engineers. Ann falls deeply in love with him. Being an 'idiot,' the fascinatingly unconventional Ann plays the game more openly than girls usually do, with the result that when Bombay is reached where live Ann's mother and father, Major Seymour, somewhat to his surprise, seasoned man of the world although he is, and Ann, to her unrestrained delight, are engaged. But it chances that Major Seymour, twice eighteen-year-old Ann's age, was once far more in love with Ann's young mother than he is now with her daughter. And Muriel Church is by no means pleased to have allegiance once given her transferred, especially to her daughter. Her schemes to separate Major Seymour and Ann become more complicated, however, than she desires. For as a result of certain ones, Ann is captured by natives and nearly married to one of them. Of course everything comes out right, although at the expense of much inconvenience."—Boston Transcript

---

Boston Transcript p6 F 6 '24 450w

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News p8 My 25 '24 200w

"The charm of the story is uneven. There is too much insistence on innocent virginity, too much beating around it with only an intention and not an accomplished fact of frankness, for good taste. The happy ending, to which the story obviously leads, is not complete enough to atone for all [Ann] has gone through."

+ — Int Bk R p557 Je '24 200w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

N Y Tribune p19 Ja 6 '24 950w

"Miss Wynne has told the story of Ann briskly and well enough to please readers who care little for substance in their reading. She should have found a more attractive title for her book." E. W. Osborn

+ — N Y World p10m Ja 6 '24 220w

"Ann, though never credible, is amusing at first, though she grows a little tiresome before the end of this rather long story."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p234 Ap 5 '23 150w

Y

"Y.Y.", pseud. See Lynd, R.

YEATS, WILLIAM BUTLER. Later poems. new and rev ed 363p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

821 24-8173

This collection forms the initial volume of the first uniform edition of the works of William Butler Yeats to be completed in six volumes. It contains all his poetry not in dramatic form that he has written between his twenty-seventh year and the year 1921.

"There is no falling off in this volume called Later Poems. . . While there is in the older Yeats the savor of autumnal sadness, there is no diminution of lyrical integrity, no acrid compromise with cynicism or sentimentality." Joseph Auslander

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '24 550w

Reviewed by N. J. O'Conor

Bookm 60:91 S '24 240w

Boston Transcript p3 My 17 '24 230w

Outlook 137:549 Ag 6 '24 160w

YOST, CASPER SALATHIEL. Principles of journalism. 170p $1.50 Appleton

070 Journalism 24-9373

The editor of the St Louis Globe-Democrat defines the underlying principles of the higher type of journalism, the standards by which the profession should be governed, and by which it wishes to be judged. He examines its conception of responsibility to the public, its ideals of independence, truthfulness, impartiality, fair play and decency.

Booklist 21:48 N '24

"There have been many books published, both complimentary and derogatory in their attitude to the newspaper, but we have never read one that so well sets forth just what the press stands for as does Mr. Yost's 'Principles.' . . . This book is a masterly defense of contemporary journalism. It is a book which ought to be read by one and every newspaper reader because it shows that journalism is not a business or an industry, but that it is a profession as noble as the law, as generous as medicine, as spiritually necessary as the ministry." K. J. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 3 '24 900w

Reviewed by J. M. Lee

Lit R p923 Jl 26 '24 440w

Nation 119:242 S 3 '24 70w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 My 4 '24 1400w

"This book, although intended primarily perhaps, for classroom use, would serve a useful purpose in clarifying the notions of those who think too well of newspapers as well as of those who think too ill of them." Silas Bent

+ N Y Times p6 My 11 '24 700w

Pol Sci Q 39:719 D '24 260w

St Louis p365 N '24

"Mr Yost presents a sane and soberly perspicacious survey."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 14 '24 520w

YOUNG, BLAMIRE. Proverbs of Goya; being an account of "Los proverbios," examined and now for the first time explained. 156p il $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d J. Cape]

767 Goya y Lucientes, Francisco José de
24-4788

Among the works of this great Spanish artist is a remarkable series of etchings popularly named "Los Proverbios," but called by Goya himself the "Disparates." In these etchings, twenty in number, he placed his thoughts as in fable, and they form a shrewd and penetrating comment on human life. The etchings are here reproduced, with Mr Young's explanation of the satire and symbolism underlying them.

"Mr. Young has expended a great deal of ingenuity and trouble; but his solutions are sometimes most improbable, far-fetched, and arbitrary, and not always very profound in philosophical significance, in spite of the fact that he lays great emphasis on Goya's profound and fearless thinking." Angus Davidson

— + Nation and Ath 34:384 D 8 '23 240w

"This is an ingenious commentary on the collection of Goya's prints known as the Disparates or Proverbs. By dint of interpretation, biographic detail, and facile conjecture Mr. Young has pieced together a philosophy whose factitious character does not altogether undermine its interest."

+ New Repub 38:106 Mr 19 '24 100w

"The reader catches some of Mr. Young's enthusiasm and goes half way to accept his solutions of the puzzles Goya contrived. There is no doubt about the strange compelling quality of his etchings or of the fact that they leap at you exultant, daring you to guess their meaning." C: de Kay

+ N Y Times p14 F 24 '24 1200w

"Even without the explanation of the author, the thirty-three illustrations of the 'Disparates' would be worth the money. Goya in these curious and mad-looking etchings approaches the outmost verge of fancy. They are marked with the touch of immediate contact with his mind—a mind almost unwrought with all the passions of advancing age. They are obviously significant, not merely wild fancy, and if this is so our author's interpretation may well be true."

Sat R 136:500 N 3 '23 130w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p219 Ap 10 '24 750w

YOUNG, FRANCIS BRETT. Woodsmoke. 334p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Collins]

24-16564

The story of an amateur expedition, or safari, into the African bush, undertaken by two Englishmen and the wife of one. Jack Rawley, an unfortunate neurotic possessed of wealth and a taste for geology and photography, was passionately devoted to his wife, who gave him loyalty, without love. Rawley was a perfect foil to the resolute Captain Antrim who accompanied them as guide, but Antrim's loyalty to his sense of honor was as strong as Janet Rawley's. Their dependence upon each other in the terrors and perils thru which they passed in their ill-fated expedition and Rawley's insensate jealousy were bound to bring Janet Rawley and Jim Antrim closer and closer together and in the end a way was smoothed for these two predestined lovers. The human drama of the story, tense as it is, is second to the power and romance of Africa itself, its sights and sounds and smells

Booklist 21:30 O '24

"The later scenes of the story are very vivid and very remarkable. Certainly they are among the best which Mr. Brett Young has ever written. The sombre passion of them is tremendous in its effect." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 6 '24 1750w

Ind 113:104 Ag 16 '24 200w

"Dramatic and beautifully written, 'Woodsmoke' is well worth reading."

+ Int Bk R p824 O '24 470w

"Mr. Young has placed real people in elemental surroundings and this gives him the opportunity to deal with civilized beings under the stress of fundamental emotions, an opportunity of which he surely takes the best advantage." Helen Kestner

+ Lit R p915 Jl 26 '24 300w

New Repub 40:152 O 8 '24 60w

"Mr. Brett Young's important virtue lies in his gift for using vivid description to create atmosphere. Woodsmoke sends African forests to writhe around one's bed." Raymond Mortimer

+ — New Statesman 23:68 Ap 26 '24 350w

"The prologue is a gem. No words are wasted there. It is admirably done, and it may be that the expectations aroused by it are in a great measure responsible for one reader's disappointment with some of the succeeding chapters."

+ — N Y Times p9 Jl 20 '24 650w

"A quite remarkable book." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Tribune p26 Ag 10 '24 1000w

"Here is the material of a good book, and, if the beginning and end were left out, a good book it would be. But Mr. Brett Young has insisted upon a ghost, whose purpose, and indeed whose very nature, must remain obscure until the end, but whose existence puts him under the necessity of anticipating his epilogue in his prologue and presenting the story as if it were gathered from one of the characters in it." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 137:464 My 3 '24 500w

"A novel of distinction, finely conceived and well-executed. Its plot, to be sure, is hackneyed, but it rises from the bog of the conventional by its dignity of spirit." Amy Loveman

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:3 Ag 2 '24 480w

"Woodsmoke, though a very admirable novel, hardly does Mr. Brett Young justice. But what book that he has ever written could be said to do him justice? His qualities, that are so genuine and unpretentious, make a greater impression on the mind in their entirety than in detail." L. P. Hartley

+ — Spec 132:642 Ap 19 '24 550w

"Mr. F Brett Young's new novel Woodsmoke is announced as an African romance, and such it certainly is. However, when one considers the book as a romance of human beings the impression of reality conveyed is more doubtful."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Ap 3 '24 400w

YOUNG, STARK. Three fountains. 195p $2 Scribner

914.5 Italy 24-5688

Sketches and studies which convey, sometimes thru the conversation of guests about a pension table or, again, thru talks with priests and peasants and tourists, sensitive impressions of the Italian scene and character and the attitude of the foreign visitor, English, French and American, toward Italy. The sketches bring out the contrast between the Anglo-Saxon and the Latin viewpoint and culture.

Booklist 20:335 Je '24

"Through the book runs a sympathetic picture of the Latin mind subtly contrasted with the Anglo-Saxon, all done in Mr. Young's characteristic, finely chiseled prose."

+ Bookm 59:609 Jl '24 230w

"Mr. Young's volume of essays is a pleasant one for gentle hours. There is nothing to it, and yet there is everything: a mild patrician flavor from the thoughts of quiet minds." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 3 '24 900w

Cleveland p39 My '24

"His vignettes are generally well balanced. They are always vivid. At times Mr. Young's love of olden beauty seems transformed into an obtrusive display of learning, as when the reported conversation of an Englishwoman includes, in one casual chat, exact quotations from Baudelaire, Beranger, Rabelais, and Racine. However, this is at worst a colorful fault; more unfortunate are the rare lapses into careless expression." J. T. Shipley

+ — Nation 118:511 Ap 30 '24 650w

"These genial sketches not only constitute a book of criticism of many exits and entrances; they are, in another sense, a gesture, an atmosphere, a remembrance and an evocation of beautiful things. There is room in them for poetry and meditation and laughter." Mary Siegrist

+ N Y Times p13 My 11 '24 1200w

"Unlike most literary travelers to Italy, he does not stand at the crossroads but chooses rather obscure towns and villages where he may come upon the Latin in the unspoiled richness of his personality and as an equal." H. S.

+ N Y Tribune p25 My 18 '24 110w

"Italy, drenched with sun; Italy, animistic, pagan; Italy, vividly contrasted with the Nordics, is caught in a matrix of visualization and inevitable, easeful generality. Architecture, painting, history, the customs and physical habits of the people, religious festivals and the quality of light on color all contribute to Mr. Young's intention." J. W. C.

+ N Y World p7e Mr 23 '24 950w

"One feels that Mr. Young is trying his prentice hand in several kinds; and one has to say that, except for the description of the garden of the Villa d'Este, he fails to achieve notable success in any. . . He has been praised for clarity of style and rightly so; but in this book too often he does not think to a finish, he is vague; and his moralizings and digressive criticisms are thin and scarcely worth while."

+ Outlook 137:70 My 14 '24 120w

"Pictures painted by a word artist, travel notes by an unhurried tourist, literary criticism by a poet and aesthete. . . Altogether, the volume possesses much charm."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a My 18 '24 200w

"Mr. Stark Young's selection of episodes and his brief descriptions of people are admirable. . . His pages are stamped with the impress of a keen sensibility."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p310 My 22 '24 550w

Wis Lib Bul 20:117 Jl '24

YOUNG BOSWELL, pseud. See Stark, Harold.

YOUNGHUSBAND, SIR FRANCIS EDWARD. Wonders of the Himalaya. 210p $4 Dutton [10s 6d Murray]

915.4 Himalaya mountains [24-12851]

Memories of some of Sir Francis Younghusband's earlier travels in the Himalaya. The first chapter is an account of adventures as a young subaltern which marked the beginning of his life of exploration. Another chapter describes the crossing of the Mustagh Pass which no European had previously accomplished. Throughout the book it is the beauty and grandeur of the scenery which inspires his writing and which he passes on vividly to the reader.

Booklist 21:147 Ja '25

"Readers of Sir Francis's earlier books will understand what revelation and inspiration this one holds: that of an uncommonly virile and hence sympathetic personality." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 27 '24 1250w

Ind 113:234 O 4 '24 100w

Nation and Ath 34:932 Mr 29 '24 50w

"Few writers have Sir Francis Younghusband's magical gift of conveying a sense of wonder to the reader, and fewer still have his capacity for vivid narrative. He lived in the Himalaya for years together, explored them up and down from one side to another, backwards and forwards, year after year. The story of much of these wanderings he has told already in books and lectures: but none of his earlier works seems to have captured and communicated the spirit of the Himalaya so well as this."

+ New Statesman 22:674 Mr 15 '24 250w

"The lyric rapture of the high hills is its keynote; let us call it an Odyssey of the Himalaya. It describes most vividly and impressively the fascination which the untrodden snows must always exercise on those who see them for the first time with fresh and unjaded eyes. . . There are passages in these early chapters which can safely be read in parallel with the famous account of Ruskin's first vision of the Alps, and should find their way into any future anthology of the literature of mountaineering."

+ Sat R 137:415 Ap 19 '24 250w

"The adventures are told so simply and lucidly that the reader is made to see the actors with his own eyes. . . The people Sir Francis had to do with are as freshly presented as the mountains."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 6 '24 1150w

YOUTZ, HERBERT ALDEN. Supremacy of
2 the spiritual; essays toward the understanding and attainment of spiritual personality. 183p $1.75 Macmillan

248 Spiritual life 24-25198

Dr Youtz makes a fervent plea for the supremacy of the spiritual as the creative and corrective principle necessary to all social theories and service.

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 10 '25 200w

"With the daring of a prophet and the genius of a master teacher, howbeit with the insight and touch of an artist, Dr Youtz achieves his high purpose. With clarity and conviction he strips us of our intellectual conceit and materialistic comfort by demonstrating that the despiritualization of education, religion and morals is the greatest peril facing our civilization." C. A. McK.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 9 '24 700w

Z

ZEDLITZ-TRUTZSCHLER, ROBERT, count. Twelve years at the imperial German court; tr. by Alfred Kalisch. 306p $5 Doran [15s Nisbet]

B or 92 Germany—Court and courtiers. William II, emperor of Germany (abdicated 1918) [24-28021]

Seven of the author's twelve years at the German court were spent as controller of the household of the Emperor William II, from 1903 to 1910. Each day he made faithful notes of what he heard and saw at court with reflections on these happenings. Thru the course of these frank and intimate notes the picture of the emperor grows, as he appeared to his court marshal, and its cumulative effect is to reveal clearly the character of the man, his ideas, and the storm that was gathering about him.

Reviewed by G. L. Dickinson

Nation and Ath 35:414 Je 28 '24 1000w

N Y World p8e O 26 '24 450w

R of Rs 70:671 D '24 100w

"Of the considerable body of biography and critical comment that has grown up about William II while German Emperor this book supplies by far the clearest and most intimate account of him."

+ Sat R 138:193 Ag 23 '24 580w

ZIEGLER, VICTOR. Oil well drilling methods. 257p il lea $3 Wiley

622.23 Petroleum—Well-boring 23-18158

"A concise, non-technical description of the various operations and tools used in drilling oil-wells."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 29:365 Jl '24

ZON, RAPHAEL, and SPARHAWK, WILLIAM NORWOOD. Forest resources of the world; with a foreword by Gifford Pinchot; prepared under the authority of the secretary of agriculture of the United States and in coöperation with the National research council. 2v $12 McGraw

634.9 Forests and forestry 23-11126

"Zon and Sparhawk have compiled two volumes of forest statistics covering every nation in the world. With infinite pains they have given the best available data on the extent, character, distribution, and ownership of forests; the annual growth, cut, and losses as well as exports and imports and domestic consumption. They summarize the timber industries, legislation, and for some countries, such as Honduras, list the principal trees with their characteristics."—Lit R

Booklist 20:207 Mr '24

"A book that will prove invaluable to many people. The business man can refer to it to check up his investments and the casual traveler will be able to obtain from it a clear idea of the real climatic conditions of the region he plans to visit. For the economist and statesman are gathered together in one place figures and maps that he would otherwise have to search through numberless publications for. Furthermore, the material is digested, the chaff thrown out and facts presented in their proper perspective. Needless to say no forester can afford to be without it if he is called upon to consider the larger aspects of his profession."

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 8 '23 750w

"These two volumes of about 1,000 pages should be in every reference library in the United States since they contain all forest statistics of value." T. S. Woolsey, jr.

+ Lit R p458 Ja 19 '24 850w

Reviewed by E. S. Slosson

New Repub 36:78 S 12 '23 850w

"Perhaps no one will ever read the book through, but thousands of men will consult it to learn the lumber resources of particular countries, the qualities of unfamiliar woods, methods of forest conservation, markets for lumber, and the like. And few searchers need be disappointed if the information they want is anywhere on record; for what the book does not tell they can hunt up in the voluminous references." W. C. Mitchell

+ Pol Sci Q 39:168 Mr '24 800w

List of Documents for Use in the Smaller Libraries

Compiled by

MARY E. FURBECK,

Economics Division, New York Public Library

Agricultural credit

The federal farm loan act, as amended to Jan. 1, 1924. (U.S. Federal farm loan bureau. Circ. 20) 34p pa '24

Agriculture

Agriculture yearbook, 1923. U.S. Agriculture dept. 1284p '24

Suggestions for work in elementary agriculture: farm stock and dairying. (Connecticut. State board of education. Connecticut bul. 1, ser. 1923-24) 110p pa '24 State board of education, Hartford, Conn.

Bibliography

List of bulletins of the agricultural experiment stations for the calendar years 1921 and 1922. C. E. Pennington. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1199, sup 1) 24p pa '24

Europe

Agricultural survey of Europe: the Danube Basin. pt. 1 L. G. Michael. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1234) 111p pa '24

Apples

Apple growing east of the Mississippi river. H. P. Gould. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' Bul. 1360) 24p pa '24

How to use apples as food. Lucile Brewer. (N.Y. [state] State college of agriculture Extension bul. 88) 18p pa '24 State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

Apprenticeship

Apprentice education, survey of part-time education and other forms of extension training in their relation to apprenticeship in the United States. J. M. Turner. (U.S. Federal board for vocational education. Bul. 87) 521p pa '23

Arbor Day

Illinois Arbor and Bird Days, April 18, Oct. 24. H. T. Swift. (Illinois. Public Instruction dept. Circ. 183) 64p pa '24 Dept. of Public Instruction, Springfield, Ill.

Automobiles

Laws

The motor vehicle law of the state of New York, 1924. (New York (State) Motor vehicle bur.) 85p pa '24 New York State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Banks and banking

Scandinavian banking situation. Donald Frothingham. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 293) 59p pa '24

Beans

Beans. L. C. Corbett. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 289) 18p pa '24

Books and reading

Best books of 1923 selected for a small library. Mary Eastwood. (N.Y. State Library. Bibliography bul. 74) 57p pa '24 New York State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Canning

Successful home canning and jelly making. A. L. Marlatt and B. Dodge. (Wisconsin. College of Agriculture. Extension circ. 176) 28p pa '24 University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

Time-tables for home canning of fruits and vegetables. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Miscellaneous circ. 24) 4p pa '24

Central heating

Central and district heating; possibilities of application in Canada. F. A. Combe. (Canada. Mines branch. Bul. 628) 79p pa '24 Department of mines, Ottawa, Canada

Child labor

Proposed child labor amendments to the constitution of the United States: hearings, February-March, 1924. U.S. House, Judiciary Committee. (U.S. Congress, 68:2. House doc. 497) 311p '24

Child welfare

Foster home care for dependent children. (U.S. Children's bureau. Bureau pub. 136) 275p pa '24 30c

Children

Care and hygiene

Child health program for parent-teacher associations and women's clubs. L. W. Collier and Harriet Wedgwood. (U.S. Education bur. Health education, no. 5)

Colleges

Statistics

Statistics of universities, colleges, and professional schools, 1921-22. F. M. Phillips. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1924, no. 20) 161p pa '24

Commerce

Franco-American trade, 1921, 1922 and 1923. D. S. Green. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 227) 13p pa '24

Commerce, Foreign

International trade in 1923. J. J. Kral. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce. Trade information bul. 298) 37p pa '24

Community planning

Rural planning: the social aspects of recreation places. W. C. Nason. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1388) 30p pa '24

Cooperation

Agricultural cooperation in Denmark. C. L. Christensen. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1266) 88p pa '24

Cost of living

Cost of living in the United States. (U. S. Labor statistics bureau. Bul. 357) 466p pa '24

Cotton pests

Dusting cotton from airplanes. B. R. Coad and others. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. Bul. 1204) 40p pa '24

Country life

Bibliography

List of references on rural life and culture. (U.S. Education bur. Library leaflet 26) 12p pa '24

Credit

Sources of foreign credit information. A. S. Hillyer. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 292) 46p pa '24

Dairy industry

Statistics relative to the dairy industry in New York State, 1923. (New York State. Farms and Markets dept. Agriculture bul. 170) 64p pa '24 New York State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Dairying

The cow tester's handbook. J. C. McDowell. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Misc. circ. 26) 22p pa '24

Debts, Public

Wealth, public debt, and taxation, 1922: public debt. (U.S. Census bur.) 183p pa '24 25c. Compiled as part of the decennial report on wealth, public debt and taxation.

Dental hygiene

Children's teeth. G. H. Wandel. (Iowa. University. Extension bul. 104) 15p pa '24 University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa

Distances

Table of distances between ports via shortest navigable routes as determined by Hydrographic office. (U.S. Hydrographic office Publication 117) 288p pa '23

Drainage districts

Drainage district assessments; a study of present practices in assessing benefits under the state drainage laws. G. R. Boyd and R. A. Hart. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1207) 70p pa '24

Drama

Play production for the country theatre. A. M. Drummond. (N.Y. [state] State college of agriculture. Cornell extension bul. 82) 78p pa '24 State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

Education

Educational directory, 1924. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1924, no. 1) 191p pa '24

Federal aid for education. Isabel Watkins. (South Carolina, University. Bul. 135) 130p pa '24 University of South Carolina, Columbia, S.C.

Outline of education systems and school conditions in Latin America. G. W. A. Luckey. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1923, no. 44) 111p pa '23

The quest of youth; a pageant for schools. Hazel Mackaye. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1924, no. 33) 102p pa '24

Bibliography

A list of books for a teacher's professional library. E. A. Wright. (U.S. Education bur. Teachers' leaflet 17) 15p pa '24

List of references on the money value of education. (U.S. Education bur. Library leaflet 24) 7p pa '24

Eggs

Marketing eggs. R. R. Slocum. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1378) 28p pa '24

English for foreigners

Federal textbook on citizenship training: pt. 1, Our language, conversational and language lessons for use in public schools by candidate for citizenship learning to speak English. L. P. Clark. (U.S. Naturalization bur.) 198p pa '24

Farm labor

Farm labor in Massachusetts, 1921. J. C. Folsom. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1220) 25p pa '24

Finance, Public

Budgets of western European countries. R. C. Miller. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 222) 31p pa '24

Fire protection

Indiana fire prevention year book and manual, 1924. (Indiana, Fire marshal) 41p pa '25 Indiana Fire Marshal, Indianapolis, Ind.

Flies

The house fly and how to suppress it. L. O. Howard. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1408) 16p pa '24

Flowers

Herbaceous perennials. F. L. Mulford. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1381) 90p pa '24

Food

Food values and body needs shown graphically. E. A. Winslow. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1383) 36p pa '24

Forestry

Idle land and costly timber. W.B. Greeley. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1417) 22p pa '24

France

Finance

French finance; governmental and private. D. S. Green. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 290) 29p pa '24

Fur-bearing animals

Laws relating to fur animals for the season 1924-25. F. G. Ashbrook and F. L. Earnshaw. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1445) 22p

Game laws

Game laws for the season 1924-25; a summary of the provisions of federal, state and provincial statutes. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1444) 38p pa '24

Gas engines

The care of farm gas engines. C. C. Johnson. (Washington. Agricultural experiment station. Popular bul. 129) 51p pa '24. Agricultural Experiment station, Pullman, Wash.

The gas engine on the farm; principles of operation and valve timing. F. G. Behrends and F. L. Fairbanks. (N.Y. [state] State college of agriculture. Cornell extension bul. 85) 52p pa '24 State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

Germany

Taxation

Taxation in Germany. R. E. Schoenfeld. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 287) 14p pa '24

Government publications

Government publications useful to teachers. E. E. Windes. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1924, no. 23) 34p pa '24

List of publications of the Department of Commerce available for distribution, May 1, 1924. (U.S. Commerce dept.) 100p pa '24

Great Britain

Finance

British financial conditions in 1923. C. E. Lyon. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 206) 21p pa '24

Guinea fowls

The guinea fowl. A. S. Weiant. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1391) 12p pa '24

Haiti

Haiti; an economic survey. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 264) 25p pa '24

Home nursing

Home care of the sick. Wanda Przyluska. (Ohio. State university. Agricultural college extension service, Bul. v. 20, no. 1) 36p pa '24 Agricultural Extension Service, Ohio State University, Columbus, O.

Home ownership

Bibliography

Publications of interest to suburbanites and home builders: list of publications for sale. (U.S. Supt. of docs. Price list 72) 16p pa '24

Hygiene

Pathways to health, reading courses for parents. Harriet Wedgwood. (U.S. Education bur. Home education reading course 25) 6p pa '23

Immigration laws

Information relative to immigration laws and their enforcement in connection with the admission of aliens. U.S. Immigration bur. 4p pa '24

Kitchens

Just kitchens. G. M. Bane and H. P. Twitchell. (Ohio. State university. Agricultural college extension service. Bul. v. 20, no 2) 20p pa '24 Agricultural Extension Service, Ohio State University, Columbus, O.

Latin America

Finance

Budgets of Latin American countries. G. B. Sherwell. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 281) 75p pa '24

Livestock

A handbook for better feeding of livestock. E. W. Sheets and W. Jackson. (U.S. Agriculture Dept. Miscellaneous Circ. 12) 48p pa '24

Manufacturers

Census of manufactures, 1921: summary for United States by industries, geographic divisions and states. (U.S. Census bur. 141p pa '24

Statistics

Biennial census of manufactures, 1921. U.S. Census bur. 1625p '24

Meat

Commercial cuts of meat. W. C. Davis. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Department circ. 300) 9p pa '24

Mexico

Mexico, general descriptive data. Pan American Union. 46p pa '23. Director General of the Pan American Union, Washington, D.C.

Olive oil

The preparation and refining of olive oil in southern Europe. W. V. Cruess. (California. Agricultural experiment station circ. 279) 43p pa '24 Agricultural experiment station, University of California, Berkeley, Calif.

Panama

The republic of Panama. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 257) 15p pa '24

Philippine Islands

Tourist handbook of the Philippine Islands. Philippine Islands. Commerce and industry bur. 50p pa '24 Philippine Government Commercial Agent, 37 Broadway, New York city

Pickles

Making fermented pickles. Edwin Le Fevre. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1438) 16p pa '24

Pigeons

Homing pigeons: their care and training. A. R. Lee. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1373) 15p pa '24

Plants

Insects injurious to ornamental greenhouse plants. C. A. Weigal and E. R. Sasscer. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1362) 81p pa '24

Plumbing

Farm plumbing. G. M. Warren. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1426) 34p pa '24

Portuguese West Africa

Portuguese West Africa (Angola). E. A. Welden. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 254) 13p pa '24

Poultry

Inexpensive labor saving poultry appliances. J. E. Dougherty and S. S. Gossman. (California. Agricultural experiment station. Circ. 268) 32p pa '23 University of California, Berkeley, Cal.

Marketing poultry. R. R. Slocum. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1377) 30p pa '24

Poultry house construction. A. R. Lee. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1413) 27p pa '24

Poultry diseases

Prevention and control of poultry diseases. L. D. Bushnell and W. R. Hinshaw. (Kansas, Agricultural experiment station. Circ. 106) 78p pa '24 Kansas State Agricultural College, Manhattan, Kansas

Tuberculosis of fowls. Robert Graham and E. A. Tunnicliff. (Illinois. Agricultural college and experiment station. Circ. 285) 7p pa '24 University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.

Public lands

Suggestions to homesteaders and persons desiring to make homestead entries. (U.S. General land office. Circ. 541) 52p pa '24

United States

This public domain of ours. George Stewart. (Utah, Agricultural experiment Station Circ. 49) 56p pa '24 Utah Agricultural Experiment Station, Logan, Utah

Quebec

Natural resources of Quebec. (Canada Natural resources intelligence service) 133p pa '23 Department of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada

Railroads

Statistics

Statistics of railways in the United States, 1922. (U.S. Interstate commerce commission. 36th annual report) 475p pa '24

Reclamation

Land reclamation policies in the United States. R. P. Teele. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1257) 40p pa '24

Reparations

The reparation problem, 1918-1924. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 278) 50p pa '24

Retailing

Retail store planning. A. L. Bush. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade inf. bul. 291) 9p pa '24

Rumania

Rumania; an economic handbook. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Special agents ser. 222) 167p '24

Schools

California

Information about California school system, 1924. (California. Supt. of public instruction. Bul. 1) 14p pa '24 Superintendent of Public Instruction, Sacramento, Calif.

Sewage disposal

A farm septic tank. W. B. Herms and H. L. Belton. (California. Agricultural experiment station. Circ. 270) 16 pa '23 University of California, Berkeley, Cal.

Sewerage systems for farm homes. N. S. Fish and others. (Wisconsin. Agriculture college. Extension service. Circ. 173) 19p pa '24 Agricultural Extension Service, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

Social service

Iowa plan for organization of a county social service league. Louise Cottrell. (Iowa University Extension bul. 100) 20p pa '24 University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa

South Australia

South Australia, illustrated. (South Australia. Government intelligence and tourist bureau) 56p pa '24 Government Intelligence and Tourist Bureau, Adelaide, South Australia

South Dakota

The natural resources of South Dakota. (South Dakota. Geological and natural history survey. Circ. 16) 28p pa '24 University of South Dakota, Vermillion, S.D.

Tariff

Tariff and taxation, list of publications for sale by superintendent of documents. (U.S. Documents office. Price list 37, 10th ed.) 40p pa '23

Trees

Shade trees. Karl Schmitt. (New York State. Conservation Commission. Bul. 7) 32p pa '24 Conservation commission, Albany, N.Y.

Turkeys

Turkey raising. M. A. Jull and A. R. Lee. (U.S. Agricultural dept. Farmers' bul. 1409) 22p pa '24

United States

Commerce

Foreign trade of the U.S. in the fiscal year, 1923-24. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 276) 43p pa '24

Trade of the United States in 1923 according to the international statistical classification. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 256) 9p pa '24

Statistics

Statistical abstract of the United States, 1923. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur.) 878p '24

University extension

Taking the college to the people. A. J. Meyer. (Missouri, Agricultural extension service. Project announcement 20) 67p pa '24 Missouri College of Agriculture, Columbia, Mo.

Vegetables

Diseases and insects of garden vegetables. W. W. Gilbert and C. H. Popenoe (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1371) 46p pa '24

More vegetables from the home garden. F. W. Geise and V. R. Boswell. (Maryland. Univ. Extension service. Bul. 34) 74p pa '24 Extension Service, University of Maryland. College Park, Md.

Vegetable seeds for the home and market garden. W. W. Tracy and Shoemaker, D. N. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1390) 14p pa '24

Venereal diseases

Venereal disease handbook for community leaders, program of venereal disease control. (U.S. Public health service) 65p pa '24

Vocational education

Bibliography

List of references on vocational education. (U.S. Education bur. Library leaflet 25) 20p pa '24

Water power

Report to Federal Power Commission on water powers of southeastern Alaska. J. C. Doit. (U.S. Federal power commission) 172p pa '24

Wealth

Wealth, public debt, and taxation, 1922: estimated national wealth. (U.S. Census bur.) 34p pa '24 10c

Compiled as part of the decennial report on wealth, public debt, and taxation.

Weights and measures

Standard baskets for fruits and vegetables. F. P. Downing and H. A. Spilman. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1434) 18p pa '24)

West Point

Information relative to appointment and admission of cadets to Military Academy. (U.S. War dept.) 40p pa '24

Windbreaks

The windbreak as a farm asset. C. G. Bates. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1405) 15p pa '24

Women in industry

Radio talks on women in industry. (U.S. Women's bureau. Bul. 36) 34p pa '24

Some social and economic effects of work accidents to women. (New York State. Labor dept. Special bul. 127) 67p pa '24 New York State Library, Albany, N.Y.

State laws affecting working women: hours, minimum wage, home work. (U.S. Women's bur. Bul. no. 40) 53p pa '24

The Senate and House documents and reports are issued in limited editions, and unless otherwise indicated may be obtained only through members of Congress. Librarians should make application to their own representative in Washington.

The Department of Agriculture's supply of the Current number of Farmers' Bulletins is ordinarily sufficient to make it possible to send them free to all applicants. They are also for sale at 5 cents per copy [by the Superintendent of Documents].

The Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., is authorized to sell at cost of paper and printing any United States public document in his charge, the distribution of which is not otherwise provided for. Publications cannot be supplied free to individuals nor forwarded in advance of payment.

Subject, Title and Pseudonym Index

To Author Entries, March, 1924—February, 1925

A. Barton Hepburn. Bishop, J. B. (Mr '24)
A. O. Barnabooth, his diary. Larbaud, V. (F '25)
Abraham Lincoln, master of words. Dodge, D. K. (O '24)
Absentee ownership and business enterprise in recent times. Veblen, T. B. (Ap '24)
Accidents
  Prevention
  Beard, H. E. Safety first for school and home. (D '24)
Accountants' handbook. Saliers, E. A., ed. (Je '24)
Accounting
  Affelder, W: M. Contractors' accounting practice. (S '24)
  Couchman, C: B. Balance-sheet. (Ja '25)
  Greer, H. C. Chain store accounting. (F '25)
  Kilduff, F: W. Auditing and accounting handbook. (F '25)
  McKinsey, J. O. Managerial accounting. (F '25)
  Saliers, E. A., ed. Accountants' handbook. (Je '24)
  Sells, E. W. Natural business year. (F '25)
Accounting principles underlying federal income taxes, 1924. Kohler, E. L: (Mr '24)
Ace of blades. Stilson, C: B. (S '24)
Aces. New York guild for the Jewish blind. (F '25)
Acoustics, Architectural
  Watson, F. R. Acoustics of buildings. (S '24)
Acoustics of buildings. Watson, F. R. (S '24)
Across the great craterland to the Congo. Barns, T: A. (N '24)
Across the Sahara by motor car. Haardt, G. M., and Audouin-Dubreuil, L: (N '24)
Actors and actresses
  Eaton, W. P. Actor's heritage. (D '24)
  Goldwyn, S: Behind the screen. (Ap '24)
  Skinner, O. Footlights and spotlights. (S '24)
  Stanislavsky, C. My life in art. (Je '24)
  Wilson, F. Francis Wilson's life of himself. (D '24)
Actor's heritage. Eaton, W. P. (D '24)
Adjusting immigrant and industry. Leiserson, W: M. (Mr '24)
Administration and politics of Tokyo. Beard, C: A. (Ap '24)
Adventure in the night. Dawson, W. (N '24)
Adventures in the Near East. 1918-1922. Rawlinson, A. (Ag '24)
Adventures of Harlequin. Bickley, F. (O '24)
Advertising
  Brewster, A. J., and Palmer, H. H. Introduction to advertising. (F '25)
  Hall, S: R. Retail advertising and selling. (S '24)
  Hotchkiss, G: B. Advertising copy. (S '24)
  Luckiesh, M. Light and color in advertising and merchandising. (Ap '24)
  Namm, B: H. Advertising the retail store. (S '24)
  Praigg, N. T., ed. Advertising and selling. (Je '24)
  Tipper, H., and French, G: Advertising campaigns. (Je '24)
  Woodcock, B. C. Textbook of advertisement writing and designing. (S '24)
Advertising and selling. Praigg, N. T., ed. (Je '24)
Advertising campaigns. Tipper, H., and French, G: (Je '24)
Advertising copy. Hotchkiss, G: B. (S '24)
Advertising the retail store. Namm, B: H. (S '24)
Advisory Ben. Lucas, E: V. (Ag '24)
Aethiopian romance. Heliodorus. (D '24)
Africa
  Colonization
  Beer, G: L: African questions at the Paris peace conference. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Description and travel
  Cannan, G. Letters from a distance. (Je '24)
Africa, Central
  Description and travel
  Christy, C. Big game and pygmies. (O '24)
Africa, East
  Akeley, C. E. In brightest Africa. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Description and travel
  Johnson, M. E. Camera trails in Africa. (Je '24)
  Powys, L. Black laughter. (Ag '24)
African clearings. Mackenzie, J. K. (Ag '24)
African questions at the Paris peace conference. Beer, G: L: (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
After disillusion. Wolf, R. L. (Ap '24)
After harvest. Marsh, C: F. (O '24)
After the verdict. Hichens, R. S. (O '24)
Against the tide. Wycliffe, J: (O '24)
Against this age. Bodenheim, M. (Mr '24)
Agricultural credit
  Morman, J. B. Farm credits in the United States and Canada. (Ja '25)
Agricultural crisis, 1920-1923. Enfield, R. R. (S '24)
Agricultural engineering
  Struck, F. T. Construction and repair work for the farm. (My '24)
Agricultural machinery
  Struck, F. T. Construction and repair work for the farm. (My '24)
Agriculture
  App, F., and Woodward, C. R. Farmer and his farm. (N '24)
  McMillen, W. Farming fever. (S '24)
  Economic aspects
  Enfield, R. R. Agricultural crisis, 1920-1923. (S '24)
  Quick, H. Real trouble with the farmers. (Ag '24)
  South Africa
  Flemming, L. Call of the veld. (N '24)
  Texas
  Bizzell, W: B. Rural Texas. (S '24)
Alaska
  History
  Nichols, J. Alaska. (My '24)
  Politics and government
  Nichols, J. Alaska. (My '24)
Alcohol and prohibition. Vecki, V: G. (Ap '24)
Aldanov, M. A., pseud. See Landau, M. A. (Mr '24)
Alfonso XIII, king of Spain
  Blasco Ibáñez, V. Alfonso XIII unmasked. (F '25)
Alfonso XIII unmasked. Blasco Ibáñez, V. (F '25)
Alfred E. Smith. Moskowitz, H: (Ag '24)
Algeria
  Sloane, W: M. Greater France in Africa. (D '24)
All fellows and The cloak of friendship. Housman, L. (Ag '24)
All God's chillun got wings. O'Neill, E. G. (Je '24)
All that matters. Weymouth, P. (O '24)
All to seek. Patrick, D., pseud. (Ag '24)

Along the road. Barber, T: H. (S '24)
The Alps, the Danube and the Near East. Carpenter, F. G: (N '24)
Alternating-current armature winding. Croft, T. W. (F '25)
Altgeld, John Peter
  Browne, W. R. Altgeld of Illinois. (S '24)
Altgeld of Illinois. Browne, W. R. (S '24)
Amateur collector. Williamson, G. C: (Ag '24)
Amateur theatricals
  Dayton, H. S., and Barratt, L. B. Book of entertainments and theatricals. (Ap '24)
  Wise, C. M. Dramatics for school and community. (Ap '24)
Amazing guest. Watson, G. (N '24)
Amazon river
  Domville-Fife, C: W: Among wild tribes of the Amazon. (O '24)
Amber junk. Eng title of Riddle of the amber ship. Hanshew, M. E. and T: W. (Ag '24)
America
Discovery and exploration
  Columbus, C. Journal of [his] first voyage to America. (Ag '24)
America. Krapp, G: P. (Ja '25)
America of the fifties. Bremer, F. (Ja '25)
America revisited. Birkenhead, F: E. S. (S '24)
American colonial architecture. Jackson, J. F. A. (Ja '25)
American colonies in the eighteenth century. Osgood, H. L. (Je '24)
American community. Woodburn, J. A. (O '24)
American constitution as it protects private rights. Stimson, F: J. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual) American democracy today. Myers, W: S. (S '24)
American drama
Collections
  Federal council of the churches of Christ in America. Committee on religious drama. Religious dramas, 1924. (Ja '25)
  Indiana prize plays. (Ja '25)
  Koch, F: H: ed. Carolina folk-plays. (Ja '25)
American essays
Collections
  Farrar, J: C., ed. Bookman anthology of essays. (Ap '24)
American homes of to-day. Patterson, A. O. (F '25)
American judge. Bruce, A. A. (My '24)
American literature
Collections
  Patterson, F. A., ed. Copy 1924. (S '24)
History and criticism
  Boynton, P. H. Some contemporary Americans. (S '24)
  Canby, H: S. Definitions; second series. (N '24)
  Overton, G. M. Cargoes for Crusoes. (N '24)
  Phelps, W: L. Howells, James, Bryant and other essays. (Je '24)
  Rosenfeld, P. Port of New York. (Ag '24)
  Sherman, S. P. Points of view. (Ja '25)
  Tassin, A. de V., and Maurice, A. B. Child's story of American literature. (My '24)
  Van Doren, C. C. Many minds. (My '24)
American lumber industry. Brown, N. C. (S '24)
American mind in action. O'Higgins, H. J., and Reede, E: H. (Ap '24)
American miscellany. Hearn, L. (Ja '25)
American national Red cross. Pickett, S. E. (My '24)
American poetry
  Weirick, B. From Whitman to Sandburg in American poetry. (My '24)
Collections
  Braithwaite, W: S. B., ed. Anthology of magazine verse for 1923. (Ap '24)
  Coblentz, S. A., comp. Modern American lyrics. (D '24)
  Gray, R. P., ed. Songs and ballads of the Maine lumberjacks. (O '24)
  Morley, C. D., comp. Bowling Green. (Ag '24)
  Moult, T:, ed. Best poems of 1922. (My '24)
  Richards, G. M., comp. Magic carpet. (O '24)
  Strong, L. A. G: Best verse for 1923. (Ap '24)
  White, N. I., and Jackson, W. C. Anthology of verse by American negroes. (Ag '24)
American problems. Borah, W: E. (Mr '24)
American public library and the diffusion of knowledge. Learned, W: S. (N '24)
American revolution. McIlwain, C: H. (Mr '24)
American social history as recorded by British travellers. Nevins, A., comp. and ed. (Je '24)
American state government. Mathews, J: M. (F '25)
Americanization
  Kallen, H. M. Culture and democracy in the United States. (My '24)
  Leiserson, W: M. Adjusting immigration and industry. (Mr '24)
America's interest in world peace. Fisher, I. (F '25)
America's place in the world. Gibbons, H. A. (Je '24)
Amherst college
  Price, L. Prophets unawares. (Je '24)
Among wild tribes of the Amazons. Domville-Fife, C: W: (O '24)
An ambassador's memoirs. Paléologue, M. (My '24)
Analysis of secretarial duties and traits. Charters, W. W., and Whitley, I. B. (F '25)
Anatole France, the man and his work. May, J. L: (N '24)
Ancient Egypt from the records. Jones, M. E. M. (O '24)
Ancient fires. Wylie, I. A. R. (Ag '24)
Anderson, Sherwood
  Anderson, S. Story teller's story. (D '24)
Andes
  Carpenter, F. G: Lands of the Andes and the desert. (F '25)
Andorra. Sandy, I. (S '24)
Andreieff, Leonid Nikolaevich
  Kaun, A. S: Leonid Andreyev. (Ag '24)
Andrew's folly. Eng title of Green timber. Bindloss, H. (My '24)
Angelo, Pascal D'
  Angelo, P. d'. Pascal d'Angelo, son of Italy. (F '25)
Angkor, Cambodia
  Candee, H. C. Angkor the magnificent. (D '24)
  De Beerski, P. J. Angkor, ruins in Cambodia. (Ag '24)
Angkor, ruins in Cambodia. De Beerski, P. J. (Ag '24)
Angkor the magnificent. Candee, H. C. (D '24)
Anglican church principles. Foakes-Jackson, F: J: (N '24)
Anglo-American relations during the Spanish-American war. Reuter, B. A. (O '24
Animal life in deserts. Buxton, P. A. (Ag '24)
Animals
  Hornaday, W: T. Tales from nature's wonderlands. (D '24)
Habits and behavior
  Mayer, C: Jungle beasts I have captured. (F '25)
  Pitt, F. Woodland creatures. (S '24)
Photographs and photography
  Johnson, M. E. Camera trails in Africa. (Je '24)
Stories and legends
  Cooper, C. R. Lions 'n' tigers 'n' everything. (N '24)
  Glanville, E. Claw and fang. (Ap '24)
  Langford, G: Stories of the first American animals. (Je '24)
  Roberts, C: G: D. They who walk in the wilds. (Je '24)
  Scoville, S:, jr. More wild folk. (S '24)
  Willy, C., pseud. Cats, dogs & I. (F '25)

Training

Fairholme, E: G., and Pain, W. Century of work for animals. (N '24)

Animals, Extinct
Langford, G: Stories of the first American animals. (Je '24)

Animals, Mythical
Firestone, C. B. Coasts of illusion. (Ja '25)

Ann Vroome. Beach, L: (Ag '24)

Anne Boleyn, queen consort of Henry VIII, king of England
Sergeant, P. W. Life of Anne Boleyn. (My '24)

Annihilation. Ostrander, I. E. (Mr '24)

Ann's an idiot. Wynne, P. (Mr '24)

Antarctic regions
Brown, R. N. R. Naturalist at the Poles. (My '24)
Scott, R. F. Scott's last expedition. (Ap '24)

Anthology of English verse. Drinkwater, J:, ed. (N '24)

Anthology of humorous verse. Benjamin, H. M. and L: S., comps. (O '24)

Anthology of magazine verse for 1923. Braithwaite, W: S. B., ed. (Ap '24)

Anthology of verse by American negroes. White, N. I., and Jackson, W. C. (Ag '24)

Anthony Dare's progress. Marshall, A. (N '24)

Anthracite question. Raushenbush, H. S. (Je '24)

Anthropogeography
Huntington, E. Character of races. (F '25)
Newbigin, M. I. Mediterranean lands. (F '25)

Anthropology
Burton, R: F. Selected papers on anthropology. (S '24)
Kroeber, A. L: Anthropology. (Ap '24)

Ants of Timothy Thümmel. Ferenczy, A. (N '24)

Apes and angels. Connell, R: (Je '24)

Apocryphal New Testament. James, M. R., tr. (Ag '24)

Apple of the eye. Wescott, G. (D '24)

Apples here in my basket. Hoyt, H. (S '24)

Appraiers' and adjusters' handbook. Arthur, W: (Ja '25)

Arabia
Servier, A. Islam and the psychology of the Musulman. (O '24)

History

Thomas, L. J. With Lawrence in Arabia. (D '24)

Arc welding handbook. Holslag, C. J. (F '25)

Archeology
Hammerton, J: A., ed. Wonders of the past. (S '24)
Hammerton, J: A., ed. Wonders of the past. (Mr '24)
MacCurdy, G: G. Human origins. (D '24)
Wilder, H. H. Man's prehistoric past. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Archer, Herman
Archer, H. Mr Archer, U.S.A. (Je '24)

Archibald, Sir Edward Mortimer
Archibald, E. J. Life and letters of Sir Edward Mortimer Archibald. (S '24)

Architecture
Bryant, L. Children's book of celebrated buildings. (Ja '25)
Rutter, F. V. P. Poetry of architecture. (S '24)
Sullivan, L: H: Autobiography of an idea. (N '24)
Williams-Ellis, C. and A. Pleasures of architecture. (O '24)

Details

Gilman, R. Great styles of interior architecture. (Ag '24)

Great Britain

Davenport, C. Architecture in England. (S '24)

United States

Mumford, L: Sticks and stones. (D '24)

Architecture, Ancient
Hammerton, J: A., ed. Wonders of the past. (Mr, S '24)

Architecture, Colonial
Jackson, J. F. A. American colonial architecture. (Ja '25)

Architecture, Domestic
Brinckloe, W: D. Small home. (N '24)
Hering, O. C. Economy in home building. (D '24)
Murtagh, G. Small houses. (Ag '24)
Patterson, A. O. American homes of to-day. (F '25)

Bermuda islands

Humphreys, J: S. Bermuda houses. (Je '24)

Rome

Tanzer, H. H. Villas of Pliny the younger. (Je '24)

Architecture, Greek
Hambidge, J. Parthenon and other Greek temples. (N '24)

Architecture, Roman
Lethaby, W: R: Londinium, architecture and the crafts. (O '24)

Architecture in England. Davenport, C. (S '24)

Arctic regions
Brown, R. N. R. Naturalist at the Poles. (My '24)
Noice, H. With Stefansson in the Arctic. (N '24)

Are parents people? Miller, A. D. (Ap '24)

Ariel. Maurois, A. (My '24)

Aristotle
Cooper, L. Poetics of Aristotle. (Ap '24)
Ross, W. D., ed. Aristotle. (S '24)

Arizona
Austin, M. Land of journey's ending. (D '24)

Description and travel

Bernheimer, C: L. Rainbow Bridge. (F '25)

Ark of the covenant. MacClure, V: (Je '24)

Armaments
Enock, A. G. Problem of armaments. (Ap '24)

Armatures
Croft, T. W. Alternating-current armature winding. (F '25)

Armenian question
Elliott, M. E. Beginning again at Ararat. (Ap '24)

Armies, Cost of
Enock, A. G. Problem of armaments. (Ap '24)

Arnold Waterlow. Sinclair, M. (N '24)

Around the Horn to the Sandwich Islands and California. Lyman, C. S. (Ja '25)

Around the world in New York. Bercovici, K. (N '24)

Art
Cheney, S. Primer of modern art. (S '24)
Clutton-Brock, A., and others. Necessity of art. (Ag '24)
Dreier, K. S. Western art and the new era. (My '24)
Kennard, J. S. Friar in fiction. (Ap '24)
Magonigle, H. Van B. Nature, practice and history of art. (F '25)

History

Cotterhill, H: B. History of art: Later European art. (N '24)
Faure, E. History of art: modern art. (Je '24)
Orpen, W:, ed. Outline of art. (Je '24)

Philosophy

Hulme, T: E. Speculations. (F '25)

Art, Baroque
Sitwell S. Southern baroque art. (O '24)

Art, German
Scheffauer, H. G. New vision in the German arts. (Ag '24)

Art, Japanese
Brown, L. N. Early block-printing and book-illustration in Japan. (S '24)

Art of helping people out of trouble. De Schweinitz, K. (F '25)
Art of public speaking. Beveridge, A. J. (Ja '25)
Art of war in the middle ages. Oman, C: W: C. (Ja '25)
Art principles in literature. Donnelly, F. P. (Ap '24)
As a doctor sees it. Liber, B. (F '25)
As I like it; second series. Phelps, W; L. (Ja '25)
As it happened. Samms, A. L. (O '24)
Asceticism
  Hardman, O. Ideals of asceticism. (Je '24)
Ashton, Winifred. See Dane, C., pseud. (My '24)
Asia Minor
  Powell, E: A. Struggle for power in Moslem Asia. (Ap '24)
Aspects of the study of society. Evans, R. T. (F '25)
Assisi
  Fauré, G. Land of St Francis of Assisi. (Ja '25)
Assyria

History
  Olmstead, A. T. E. History of Assyria. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Asterisk, pseud. See Fletcher, R. J. (Ja '25)
Astonishing adventure of Jane Smith. Wentworth, P. (Ap '24)
Astrology
  Robson, V. E. Fixed stars and constellations in astrology. (S '24)
Astronomer at large. Thornton, A. G. (O '24)
Astronomy
  Gregory, R: A. Vault of heaven. (Ap '24)
  Hale, G: E. Depths of the universe. (S '24)
  Murphy, E. G. Beginner's star-book. (F '25)
  Nordmann, C: Kingdom of the heavens. (Ag '24)
At a venture. Bennett, C: A. A. (Mr '24)
At the foot of the rainbow. Hendryx, J. B. (N '24)
At the gateways of the day. Colum, P. (N '24)
Atavar. Reeve, A. B: (Ag '24)
Athens
  Powers, H. H. Hill of Athena. (F '25)
Athos, Mount
  Hasluck, F. W. Athos and its monasteries. (F '25)
Athos and its monasteries. Hasluck, F. W. (F '25)
Atlantic book of junior plays. Thomas, C: S., ed. (F '25)
Atlas and beyond. Coatsworth, E. J. (Ag '24)
Atom and the Bohr theory of its structure. Holst, H., and Kramers, H. A. (S '24)
Atomic theory
  Graetz, L. Recent developments in atomic theory. (S '24)
  Holst, H., and Kramers, H. A. Atom and the Bohr theory of its structure. (S '24)
Atoms
  Andrade, E: N. da C. Structure of the atom. (Ap '24)
  Berthoud, A. New theories of matter and the atom. (F '25)
  Stock, A. E. Structure of atoms. (Ap '24)
  Sullivan, J: W: N. Atoms and electrons. (My '24)
Atoms and electrons. Sullivan, J: W: N. (My '24)
Auction bridge
  Macbeth, J. C. H. Common sense in auction bridge. (O '24)
Audacity. Williams, B. A. (My '24)
Auditing
  Kilduff, F: W. Auditing and accounting handbook. (F '25)
  Kohler, E. L: and Pettengill, P. W. Principles of auditing. (Ja '25)
Auditing and accounting handbook. Kilduff, F: W. (F '25)
Augustus Baldwin Longstreet. Wade, J: D. (Je '24)
Augustus Carp, Esq. Carp, A., pseud. (O '24)
Austen, Jane
  Villard, L. Jane Austen. (S '24)
Australia
Description and travel
  Carpenter, F. G: Australia, New Zealand, and some islands of the South seas. (Ag '24)
Australia, New Zealand, and some islands of the South seas. Carpenter, F. G: (Ag '24)
Austria
Politics and government
  Graham, M. W., and Binkley, R. C. New governments of central Europe. (S '24)
Authentic history, Ku Klux klan. 1865-1877. Davis, S. L. (My '24)
Authority and freedom. Rawlinson, A. E: J: (Ag '24)
Authority (in religion)
  Rawlinson, A. E: J: Authority and freedom. (Ag '24)
Authors
  Bradford, G. Bare souls. (N '24)
  Moore, G: Conversations in Ebury Street. (D '24)
Authors, American
  Farrar, J: C., ed. Literary spotlight. (Ja '25)
  Phelps, W: L. Howells, James, Bryant and other essays. (Je '24)
Authors, British
  Guedalla, P. A gallery. (Ja '25)
  Kenyon, C. F. Written in friendship. (Ag '24)
  Maxwell, G. S. Authors' Thames. (Ja '25)
  Priestley, J: B. Figures in modern literature. (N '24)
Authors' Thames. Maxwell, G. S. (Ja '25)
Authorship
  Manly, J: M., and Rickert, E. Writer's index of good form. (Ag '24)
Autobiography of a blackguard. Paton, R. (Ja '25)
Autobiography of an idea. Sullivan, L: H: (N '24)
Autobiography of John Stuart Mill. Mill, J: S. (F '25)
Autobiography of T. Jefferson Coolidge. (Ag '24)
Autolycus, pseud. See Bacon, L. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Automobile engines
  Hamilton, E. H. Elementary thermodynamics of automobile engines. (Je '24)
Automobile pattern drafting. Morio, F. X. (Ap '24)
Automobiles

Design and construction
  Morio, F. X. Automobile pattern drafting. (Ap '24)
Autosuggestion
  Pierce, F: Mobilizing the mid-brain. (Ag '24)
Autumn. Reymont, W. S. (D '24)
Avalanche. Poole, E. (Ag '24)
Awakening of Italy. Villari, L. (N '24)
Ayuli. Binyon, L. (Ag '24)
Azorin, pseud. See Ruiz, J. M. (Ap '24)

Back of the book. Leech, M. (N '24)
Back stage. Oliver, R. (S '24)
Backbone. Drury, S: S. (Ag '24)
Bacon, Robert
  Scott, J. B. Robert Bacon. (My '24)
Balance-sheet. Couchman, C: B. (Ja '25)
Balance sheets
  Couchman, C: B. Balance-sheet. (Ja '25)
Balisand. Hergesheimer, J. (N '24)
Ballads, English
  Rollins, H. E:, ed. Cavalier and puritan. (Ja '25)
Ballads of a beachcomber. Atkin, R. H: (O '24)
Banks and banking
  Scroggs W: O. Century of banking progress. (Ja '25)
Bantus
  Mackenzie, J. K. African clearings. (Ag '24)

Barbarian lover. Pedler, M. (S '24)
Barbed wire and Wayfarers. Piper, E. F. (Mr '24)
Bardelys the magnificent. Sabatini, R. (Ag '24)
Bare souls. Bradford, G. (N '24)
Bargone, Charles. See Farrere, C., pseud. (N '24)
Barney, Joshua
  Paine, R. D. Joshua Barney. (N '24)
Barrett Wendell and his letters. Howe, M. A. De W. (N '24)
Barry the undaunted. Silvers, E. R. (S '24)
Baseball
  Wardlaw, C: D. Fundamentals of baseball. (Ag '24)
Basis of social theory. Balz, A. G: A., and Pott, W: S. A. (My '24)
Bates college
  Chase, G: M. George C. Chase. (Ja '25)
Bats
  Derennes, C: Life of the bat. (D '24)
Bavaria
Politics and government
  Roberts, K. L: Black magic. (Ag '24)
Bazaar. Armstrong, M. (O '24)
Be good, sweet maid. Wharton, A. P., pseud. (O '24)
Beach grass. Townsend, C: W. (Ap '24)
Beaches
  Townsend, C: W. Beach grass. (Ap '24)
Beacon lights of science. Van Wagenen, T. F. (Ja '25)
The beast. Allan, L., pseud. (O '24)
Beau Geste. Wren, P. C. (F '25)
Beautiful Mexico. Quinn, V. (Ja '25)
Beauty of the purple. Davis, W: S. (D '24)
Bed rock. Bethea, J. (F '25)
Bees
  Evrard, E. Mystery of the hive. (Ap '24)
Before the mast. Runciman, W. (D '24)
Beggar on horseback. Kaufman, G: S., and Connelly, M. C. (Ag '24)
Beggar's banquet. St John-Loe, G. (Mr '24)
Beggars of life. Tully, J. (D '24)
Beginner's star-book. Murphy, E. G. (F '25)
Beginning again at Ararat. Elliott, M. E. (Ap '24)
Behind the scenes in politics. (S '24)
Behind the screen. Goldwyn, S: (Ap '24)
Behold this dreamer! Oursler, F. (My '24)
Belcher islands
  Flaherty, R. H. and F. H. My Eskimo friends. (Ja '25)
Belgium
Politics and government
  Reed, T: H. Government and politics of Belgium. (Mr '24)
Belief and doubt
  Schiller, F. C. S. Problems of belief. (O '24)
La belle Pamela. Ellis, L., and Turquan, J. (Ja '25)
La belle Stuart. Hartmann, C. H. (N '24)
Bellehelen mine. Bower, B. M., pseud. (O '24)
Belloc, Hilaire
  Braybrooke, P. Some thoughts on Hilaire Belloc. (Ag '24)
Benjamin Constant. Schermerhorn, E. W. (Ag '24)
Benson, Edward White
  Benson, A. C. The trefoil. (Mr '24)
Benson family
  Benson, A. C. The trefoil. (Mr '24)
Bermuda houses. Humphreys, J: S. (Je '24)
Bernhardt, Sarah
  Woon, B. Real Sarah Bernhardt. (Ap '24)
Best British short stories. O'Brien, E: J. H., and Cournos, J: (Mr '24)
Best continental short stories of 1923-1924. Eaton, R:, ed. (Ja '25)
Best French short stories, 1923-1924. Eaton, R:, ed. (F '25)
Best moving pictures of 1922-1923. (Je '24)
Best news stories of 1923. Anthony, J., ed. (O '24)
Best plays of 1922-1923. Mantle, B., ed. (Mr '24)
Best plays of 1923-24. Mantle, B., ed. (F '25)
Best poems of 1922. Moult, T:, ed. (My '24)
Best sermons, 1924. Newton, F. F., ed. (Ja '25)
Best short stories of 1923. O'Brien, E: J. H., ed. (Ag '24)
Best verse for 1923. Strong, L. A. G: (Ap '24)
The betrothed. Manzoni, A. (O '24)
Better understanding. Thomas, A. E., and Hamilton, C. M. (Ag '24)
Beyond the pleasure principle. Freud, S. (O '24)
Bible. Whole
Criticism and interpretation
  Fosdick, H. E. Modern use of the Bible. (Ja '25)
Selections
  Cunliffe, J: W., and Battenhouse, H: M., eds. Century readings in the Bible. (Ag '24)
  Saunderson, H: H. Living Word. (Ap '24)
Women
  Marble, A. Women of the Bible. (Je '24)
Bible. Old Testament
  Moffat, J., tr. Old Testament; a new translation. (F '25)
Criticism, interpretation, etc.
  Gray, E: D. M. Old Testament criticism. (Ap '24)
History
  Noyes, C. E. Genius of Israel. (O '24)
Bible. New Testament
Apocrypha
  James, M. R., tr. Apocryphal new testament. (Ag '24)
History
  Norton, F: O. Rise of Christianity. (My '24)
Bibliography
  Becker, M. L. Reader's guide book. (D '24)
Best books
  Bennett, J. L. What books can do for you. (My '24)
  Dickinson, A. D., comp. One thousand best books. (F '25)
  Graham, B. Bookman's manual. (O '24)
Big game. Stevenson, L: L. (Je '24)
Big game and pygmies. Christy, C. (O '24)
Billings, John Shaw
  Lydenberg, H. M. John Shaw Billings. (Ja '25)
Billy Barnicoat. MacDonald, G. (Ap '24)
Biography
  Bernstein, H. Celebrities of our time. (Ja '25)
  Harris, F. Contemporary portraits, fourth series. (Ap '24)
  Schwob, M. Imaginary lives. (N '24)
Biological foundations of society. Dendy, A. (D '24)
Biology
  Dendy, A. Biological foundations of society. (D '24)
  Haldane, J. B. S. Daedalus. (S '24)
  Lillie, R. S. Protoplasmic action and nervous action. (Ap '24)
  Shipley, A. E. Life. (Ap '24)
  Thomson, J: A. Everyday biology. (My '24)
  Thomson, J: A. Science, old and new. (Ag '24)
Birds
  Townsend, C: W. Beach grass. (Ap '24)
Birmingham, G: A., pseud. See Hannay, J. O. (Je '24)
Bishop out of residence. Whitechurch, V: L. (O '24)
Bits of Harvard history. Batchelder, S: E. (Ap '24)
Black Babylon. Dow, D. (S '24)
Black bass
  Jones, S. R. Black bass and bass craft. (Ag '24)
Black bass and bass craft. Jones, S. R. (Ag '24)
Black Bryony. Powys, T. F. (My '24)
Black-eyed Susan. Gray, J. (S '24)

Black Golconda. Marcosson, I: F: (O '24)
Black hood. Dixon, T: (Ag '24)
Black laughter. Powys, L. (Ag '24)
Black magic. Roberts, K. L: (Ag '24)

Blackwood, Algernon
Blackwood, A. Episodes before thirty. (Mr '24)

Blake, William
Damon, S: F. William Blake. (O '24)
Saurat, D. Blake and Milton. (F '25)
Blake and Milton. Saurat, D. (F '25)
Blind Raftery and his wife, Hilaria. Byrne, D. (N '24)
Blindness of heart. Bell, V. C. (Mr '24)

Blockade
Parmelee, M. F. Blockade and sea power. (Ja '25)
Blockade and sea power. Parmelee, M. F. (Ja '25)

Blood

Pressure

Barker, L. F., and Cole, N. B. Blood pressure. (Ap '24)
Blue blood. Johnson, O. M. (Ap '24)
Blue lion. Lynd, R. (S '24)
Blue scarab. Freeman, R. A. (Mr '24)
Blue Swordsman. Crownfield, G. (My '24)
Blueprint reading for the machine shop and related trades. Brahdy, J. (Je '24)

Blue prints
Brahdy, J. Blueprint reading for the machine shop and related trades. (Je '24)
Boccaccio's untold tale. Kemp, H. H. (O '24)
Boëx, J. H. H. See Rosny, J. H., pseud. (Ja '25)

Bohr, Niels Henrik David
Holst, H., and Kramers, H. A. Atom and the Bohr theory of its structure. (S '24)

Bok peace prize
Lape, E. E., ed. Ways to peace. (My '24)

Bolivar, Simon
Lemly, H: R. Bolivar. (Ag '24)
Bolshevik persecution of Christianity. McCullagh, F. (Je '24)

Bolshevism
Sherrill, C: H. Purple or the red. (My '24)

Russia

Eaton, R: Under the red flag. (O '24)
Goldman, E. My disillusionment in Russia. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
McCullagh, F. Bolshevik persecution of Christianity. (Je '24)
Ross, E: A. Russian soviet republic. (Ap '24)
Sorokin, P. A. Leaves from a Russian diary. (Ja '25)
Book of Blanche. Richardson, D. (Mr '24)
Book of Canadian prose and verse. Broadus, E. K. and E. H., comps. and eds. (My '24)
Book of 'characters.' Aldington, R:, comp. and tr. (N '24)
Book of England for young people. Dark, S. (Je '24)
Book of entertainments and theatricals. Dayton, H. S., and Barratt, L. B. (Ap '24)
Book of everyday heroism. Faris, J: T. (S '24)
Book of famous ships. Smith, C. F. (N '24)
Book of France for young people Dark, S. (My '24)
Book of friendship verse. Morris, J., and Adams, St C., comps. and eds. (Ja '25)
Book of hobbies. Taussig, C: W:, and Meyer, T. A. (D '24)
Book of Scotland for young people. Dark, S. (D '24)
Book of the beloved. Johnston, J. C. (O '24)
Bookman anthology of essays. Farrar, J: C., ed. (Ap '24)
Bookman's manual. Graham, B. (O '24)

Books and reading
Becker, M. L. Reader's guide book. (D '24)
Bennett, J. L. What books can do for you. (Mr '24)
Dickinson, A. D., comp. One thousand best books. (F '25)
Phelps, W: L. As I like it; second series. (Ja '25)

Booksellers and bookselling
Graham, B. Bookman's manual. (O '24)
Boosters. Luther, M. L. (Ap '24)
Borzoi cook book. Gagarina, M., comp. and tr. (Ap '24)
Boss Platt and his New York machine. Gosnell, H. F. (Mr '24)

Boston

Education

Caldwell, O. W:, and Courtis, S. A. Then and now in education. (Ag '24)
Boston days of William Morris Hunt. Shannon, M. A. S. (Ap '24)

Botany
Bailey, L. H. Manual of cultivated plants. (S '24)
Transeau, E. N., and Sampson, H. C. Laboratory and field work in general botany. (S '24)

China

Ward, F. K. Romance of plant hunting. (Ag '24)

Botha, Louis
Buxton, S. C: B. General Botha. (S '24)
Bowling Green. Morley, C. D., comp. (Ag '24)

Boxing
Dartnell, F. Seconds out! (F '25)
Wignall, T. C. Story of boxing. (Je '24)
Boy chemist. Collins, A. F: (F '25)
Boy in the bush. Lawrence, D: H., and Skinner, M. L. (D '24)

Boy scouts
Smith, C: F: Games and recreational methods. (N '24)
Boy whaleman. Tucker, G: F. (F '25)
Boyd, Nancy, pseud. See Millay, E. St V. (D '24)
Boyhood of Edward MacDowell. Brown, A. F. (Je '24)
Boyhoods of our navy heroes. Stevens, W: O. (Ag '24)
Boy's book of forest rangers. Crump, I. (O '24)
Boys' games among the North American Indians. Stow, E. (F '25)
Boy's own book of politics. Sheperd, W: G. (Ag '24)

Bragg, Braxton
Seitz, D. C. Braxton Bragg. (Je '24)
Brain and golf. Bailey, C: W: (Ja '25)

Braun, Otto
Braun, O: Diary. (My '24)
Braxton Bragg. Seitz, D. C. (Je '24)

Bridges, Iron and steel
Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. Movable and long-span steel bridges. (Je '24)
Ketchum, M. S. Structural engineers' handbook. (F '25)

Brigands and robbers
Blakeborough, R., comp. Legends of highwaymen. (N '24)
Finger, C: J. Highwaymen. (Ap '24)
Rothert, O: A. Outlaws of Cave-in-Rock. (O '24)
Bright lights. Ostrander, I. E. (Ap '24)
Brighter intervals. Phillips, G. (Ja '25)
British-American relations. Whelpley, J. D. (Ap '24)
British labour speaks. Hogue, R: W., ed. (Ja '25)

Broadsides, English
Rollins, H. E:, ed. Cavalier and puritan. (Ja '25)
Broken bow. Harker, L. A. (D '24)
Broken bridges. Linford, M. (S '24)
Broken butterflies. Kinney, H: W. (Ap '24)

Brontë family
Southwart, E. Brontë moors and villages. (Ap '24)
Brontë moors and villages. Southwart, E. (Ap '24)
Brood of the witch-queen. Rohmer, S., pseud. (Mr '24)
Brooklyn murders. Cole, G: D. H. (Je '24)
Brothers of no kin. Richter, C. (Mr '24)

Browne, Arthur
Rogers, M. C. Glimpses of an old social capital. (Ag '24)

Browning, Robert
Burt, E. Seen and unseen in Browning. (Ag '24)
Cassidy, J. Study of Browning's "The ring and the book." (N '24)
Sim, F. M. Robert Browning, poet and philosopher. (Mr '24)
Brownstone front. Gabriel, G. W. (N '24)
Bruce, William Speirs
Brown, R. N. R. Naturalist at the Poles. (My '24)
Brunei
Blundell, P: On the fringe of eastern seas. (Ag '24)
The brute. Newton, W. D. (S '24)
Bryan, William Jennings
Williams, W. C. William Jennings Bryan. (Ag '24)
Buccaneers
Exquemelin, A. O. Buccaneers of America. (S '24)
Buccaneers of America. Exquemelin, A. O. (S '24)
Buchan, Anna. See Douglas, O., pseud. (S '24)
Buddenbrooks. Mann, T: (Mr '24)
Buddhism
Hodous, L: Buddhism and Buddhists in China. (O '24)
Satomi, K. Japanese civilization. (Ag '24)
Saunders, K. J. Epochs in Buddhist history. (Ag '24)
Buddhism and Buddhists in China. Hodous, L: (O '24)
Building
Lescarboura, A. C. Home owner's handbook. (S '24)
Estimates
Arthur, W: Appraisers' and adjusters' handbook. (Ja '25)
Dingman, C: F. Plan reading and quantity surveying. (F '25)
Building, Iron and steel
Ketchum, M. S. Structural engineers' handbook. (F '25)
The burden. Jeffery, J. E., pseud. (O '24)
Burma
Scott, J. G: Burma from the earliest times to the present day. (Ja '25)
Burma from the earliest times to the present day. Scott, J. G: (Ja '25)
Burmeister, José King. See Crane, M., pseud. (D '24)
Burns, Robert
Dakers, A. Robert Burns. (Ap '24)
Burroughs, John
Kennedy, W: S. Real John Burroughs. (Je '24)
Burroughs, Stephen
Burroughs, S. Memoirs of the notorious Stephen Burroughs of New Hampshire. (Ja '25)
Bury, J: B., and others. Hellenistic age. (Ag '24)
Bush-rangers
Finger, C: J. Bushrangers. (F '25)
Business
Filene, E: A. Way out. (Ja '25)
Jackson, W: M. Making business advancement sure. (S '24)
Johnson, E. C. To women of the business world. (Ap '24)
Johnson, J. F. Organized business knowledge. (Je '24)
McKinsey, J. O. Managerial accounting. (F '25)
Simonds, A. T. Business fundamentals. (S '24)
Vanderblue, H. B. Problems in business economics. (D '24)
Dictionaries
Spiegel, J., comp. Standard business dictionary. (F '25)
Business cycles
Hastings, H. B. Costs and profits. (Ap '24)
Business fundamentals. Simonds, A. T. (S '24)
Business letter-writer's manual. Buck, C: E. (F '25)
Business of missions. Patton, C. H. (O '24)
Business of selling. Whitehead, H. (Ap '24)
Business writing. Hall, S: R. (F '25)
Buttercup days. Eliot, E. A. (S '24)
Butterflies of Taiwan. McGovern, J. B. (Ja '25)
By bog and sea in Donegal. Shane, E. (Ag '24)
By haunted stream. Strong, L. A. G:, ed. (Ja '25)
By scarlet torch and blade. Euwer, A. H. (Ap '24)
By the waters of Egypt. Lorimer, N. O. (O '24)
Byron and Greece. Byron, G: G. N. B. (S '24)
Byron, George Gordon Noel Byron, 6th baron
Byron, G: G. N. B. Byron and Greece. (S '24)
Chew, S: C. Byron in England. (Ag '24)
Nicolson, H. Byron, the last journey. (Ag '24)
Raymond, D. Political career of Lord Byron. (Ag '24)
Byron in England. Chew, S: C. (Ag '24)
Byron, the last journey. Nicolson, H. (Ag '24)

C. Baring, M. (S '24)
Caesar remembers. Seymour, W: K. (My '24)
Calendar
Couzens, R. C. Stories of the months and days. (Je '24)
California
Description and travel
Lyman, C. S. Around the Horn to the Sandwich Islands and California. (Ja '25)
The caliphate. Arnold, T: W. (F '25)
Caliphs
Arnold, T: W. The caliphate. (F '25)
Calkins, Earnest Elmo
Calkins, E. E. "Louder please!" (N '24)
Call of the canyon. Grey, Z. (Mr '24)
Call of the road. Estaunié, E. (Ap '24)
Call of the veld. Flemming, L. (N '24)
The Callahans and The Murphys. Norris, K. (My '24)
Calvin Coolidge. Hennessy, M. E. (Je '24)
Calvin Coolidge. Washburn, R. M. (Ap '24)
Calvin Coolidge. Whiting, E: W. (O '24)
Cambodia
Antiquities
De Beerski, P. J. Angkor, ruins in Cambodia. (Ag '24)
Cambridge ancient history; v 2. (F '25)
Camera trails in Africa. Johnson, M. E. (Je '24)
Campbell-Bannerman, Sir Henry
Spender, J: A. Life of the Right Hon. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman. (Je '24)
Camping
Playground and recreation association of America. Camping out. (S '24)
Camping out. Playground and recreation association of America. (S '24)
Camps
Directories
Sargent, P. E: Handbook of summer camps. (F '25)
Can we find God? Patten, A. B. (Je '24)
Canada
Description and travel
Doyle, A. C. Our second American adventure. (Ag '24)
Faris, J: T. Seeing Canada. (Ja '25)
History
Bracq, J. C. Evolution of French Canada. (Ja '25)
Canadian literature
Collections
Broadus, E. K. and E. H., comps. and eds. Book of Canadian prose and verse. (My '24)
Canaries
House, C. A. Canaries. (Ag '24)

Cancer
  Barker, J. E. Cancer. (S '24)
Candle light. Ayres, R. M. (F '25)
Canning and preserving
  Collins, J. H. Story of canned foods. (S '24)
  Cruess, W: V. Commercial fruit and vegetable products. (F '25)
Capital punishment
  Lawes, L: E. Man's judgment of death. (O '24)
Capitalism
  Commons, J: R. Legal foundations of capitalism. (Ag '24)
  Veblen, T. B. Absentee ownership and business enterprise in recent times. (Ap '24)
Captain Shapely. Brighouse, H. (Je '24)
Captains all. Wetjen, A. R: (Ag '24)
Cargo handling at ports. Cunningham, B. (F '25)
Cargoes for Crusoes. Overton, G. M. (N '24)
Carlyle, Jane Baillie (Welsh)
  Carlyle, J. W. Letters to her family, 1839-1863. (Ag '24)
Carlyle, Thomas
  Neff, E. Carlyle and Mill. (S '24)
  Wilson, D: A. Carlyle to "The French revolution" (1826-1837). (Ja '25)
Carlyle and Mill. Neff, E. (S '24)
Carlyle to "The French revolution" (1826-1837). Wilson, D: A. (Ja '25)
Carolina folk-plays. Koch, F: H:, ed. (Ja '25)
Carpentry
  Saylor, H: H. Tinkering with tools. (D '24)
Carson of Red river. Bindloss, H. (D '24)
Case for prohibition. Wilson, C. T., and Pickett, E. D. (Ap '24)
The cask. Crofts, F. W. (F '25)
Castellane, Boni, marquis de
  Castellane, B. How I discovered America. (D '24)
Castles
  Gostling, F. M. Lure of French châteaux. (My '24)
Cathedral folk. Lyeskov, N. S. (Mr '24)
Cathedrals
  Gostling, F. M. Lure of English cathedrals. (Ag '24)
Catholic and Protestant elements in Christianity. Quick, O. C. (Je '24)
Catholic church
    Charities
  Lord, D. A. Our nuns. (My '24)
Catholic reaction in France. Gwynn, D. R. (F '25)
Cats, dogs & I. Willy, C., pseud. (F '25)
Catty Atkins, bandmaster. Kelland, C. B. (O '24)
Catullus, Caius Valerius
  Harrington, K. P. Catullus and his influence. (Ag '24)
Catullus and his influence. Harrington, K. P. (Ag '24)
Causes and prevention of corrosion. Pollitt, A. A. (Je '24)
Causes of industrial unrest. Fitch, J: A. (D '24)
Cavalier and puritan. Rollins, H. E:, ed. (Ja '25)
Cave-in-Rock, Illinois
  Rothert, O: A. Outlaws of Cave-in-Rock. (O '24)
Cedar box. Oxenham, J: (F '25)
Celebrities of our time. Bernstein, H. (Ja '25)
Cells
  Wilson, E. B. Physical basis of life. (Je '24)
Centerville, U.S.A. Merz, C: (N '24)
Central America
    Antiquities
  Smith, G. E. Elephants and ethnologists. (Ja '25)
    Description and travel
  Foster, H. L. Gringo in Mañana-land. (N '24)
Century magazine
  Tooker, L: F. Joys and tribulations of an editor. (Ja '25)
Century of banking progress. Scroggs, W: O. (Ja '25)
Century of excavation in the land of the Pharaohs. Baikie, J. (Ap '24)
Century of work for animals. Fairholme, E: G., and Pain, W. (N '24)
Century readings in the Bible. Cunliffe, J: W., and Battenhouse, T:, eds. (Ag '24)
A certain man. Holland, B. T. (Ag '24)
Chain store accounting. Greer, H. C. (F '25)
Chalk face. Frank, W. D: (D '24)
Challenge of the Klan. Frost, S. (O '24)
Chance—and the woman. Middleton, E. (N '24)
Changes and chances. Nevinson, H: W. (Ap '24)
Chanties
  Colcord, J. C., comp. Roll and go. (F '25)
  Frothingham, R., comp. Songs of the sea. (Ag '25)
  Shay, F., ed. Iron men and wooden ships. (F '25)
Chapter in American education. Baker, R. P. (Ja '25)
Character
  Fosdick, H. E. Twelve tests of character. (Mr '24)
Character of races. Huntington, E. (F '25)
Characters and characteristics
  Aldington, R:, comp. and tr. Book of 'characters.' (N '24)
  Blackford, K. M., and Newcomb, A. Right job. (My '24)
Charis sees it through. Widdemer, M. (D '24)
Charles Lamb. Brown, A. (F '25)
Charles Proteus Steinmetz. Hammond, J: W. (N '24)
Chase, George Colby
  Chase, G: M. George C. Chase. (Ja '25)
Chats on science. Slosson, E. E. (Ap '24)
Cheat-the-boys. Phillpotts, E. (Mr '24)
Chekhov, Anton Pavlovich
  Chekhov, A. P. Letters on the short story, the drama and other literary topics. (Ja '25)
Chemical elements
  Fajans, K. Radioactivity and the latest developments in the study of the chemical elements. (Je '24)
  Hopkins, B. S. Chemistry of the rarer elements. (F '25)
Chemical laboratories
  Weiss, J: M., and Downs, C: R. Technical organization. (F '25)
Chemical technology
    Bibliography
  Sohon, J. A., and Schaaf, W: L. Reference list of bibliographies. (Ap '24)
Chemistry
  Collins, A. F: Boy chemist. (F '25)
    Bibliography
  Sohon, J. A., and Schaaf, W: L. Reference list of bibliographies. (Ap '24)
    History
  Armstrong, E: F., ed. Chemistry in the twentieth century. (N '24)
  Stillman, J: M. Story of early chemistry. (F '25)
Chemistry, Organic
  Reid, E. E. Introduction to organic research. (F '25)
Chemistry, Physical and theoretical
  Taylor, H. S., ed. Treatise on physical chemistry. (F '25)
Chemistry, Technical
  Weiss, J: M., and Downs, C: R. Technical organization. (F '25)
Chemistry in the twentieth century. Armstrong, E: F., ed. (N '24)
Chemistry of the rarer elements. Hopkins, B. S. (F '25)
Cherry-stones. Phillpotts, E. (Mr '24)
Chess
  Marshall, F. J., and Macbeth, J. C. H. Chess step by step. (N '24)
Chess step by step. Marshall, F. J., and Macbeth, J. C. H. (N '24)

Chesterton, Gilbert Keith
  Bullett, G. W: Innocence of G. K. Chesterton. (Ap '24)
Chief pre-Shakespearean dramas. Adams, J. Q., ed. (F '25)
The child. O'Shea, M. V., ed. (D '24)
Child labor
  Fuller, R. G. Child labor and the constitution. (Ap '24)
Child labor and the constitution. Fuller, R. G. (Ap '24)
Child study
  Joint committee on methods of preventing delinquency. Three problem children. (Ag '24)
  O'Shea, M. V., ed. The child. (D '24)
  Pfister, O. R. Love in children and its aberrations. (Je '24)
  Stern, W: Psychology of early childhood. (S '24)
Childhood in verse and prose. Miles, S. (Ag '24)
Children
  Miles, S. Childhood in verse and prose. (Ag '24)

Care and hygiene
  Groves, E. R. and G. H. Wholesome childhood. (F '25)
  Lowry, E. B. What does your child weigh? (Ja '25)
  O'Shea, M. V., ed. The child. (D '24)

Management and training
  Crawley, J: Reveries of a father. (F '25)
  Groves, E. R. and G. H. Wholesome childhood. (F '25)
  Lhotzky, H. Soul of your child. (F '25)
  Pfister, O. R. Love in children and its aberrations. (Je '24)

Nutrition
  Lowry, E. B. What does your child weigh? (Ja '25)
  Peters, L. H. Diet for children. (Je '24)
Children, Abnormal and backward
  Horn, J: L: Education of exceptional children. (F '25)
  Mateer, F. Unstable child. (Ag '24)
Children in India
  Satyananda Roy. When I was a boy in India. (Ag '24)
Children of the age. Hamsun, K. (Mr '24)
Children's book of celebrated buildings. Bryant, L. (Ja '25)
Children's literature
  Abbott, C: G. Everyday mysteries. (Ag '24)
  Banks, H. W. House of the lions. (Ja '25)
  Barbour, R. H: Infield rivals. (S '24)
  Barbour, R. H: Spaniard's cave. (Ja '25)
  Barnes, H. E. Naju of the Nile. (F '25)
  Bone, W. A. Children's stories and how to tell them. (S '24)
  Bonsels, W. Heaven folk. (My '24)
  Borland, H. G. Rocky Mountain tipi tales. (S '24)
  Bryant, L. Children's book of celebrated buildings. (Ja '25)
  Charskaya, L. A. Little Princess Nina. (Ja '25)
  Cobb, I. S. Goin' on fourteen. (D '24)
  Collins, A. F: Boy chemist. (F '25)
  Crownfield, G. Blue Swordsman. (My '24)
  Dark, S. Book of England for young people. (Je '24)
  Dark, S. Book of France for young people. (My '24)
  Dark, S. Book of Scotland for young people. (D '24)
  Eliot, E. A. Buttercup days. (S '24)
  Field, R. L. Pointed people. (Ja '25)
  Frazer, J. G: Leaves from the Golden bough. (D '24)
  Garrott, H. Snythergen. (Ap '24)
  Gaze, H. Coppertop. (S '24)
  Gray, J. Black-eyed Susan. (S '24)
  Greene, A. Greylight. (F '25)
  Hanley, G. E. One-eyed fairies. (S '24)
  Hawkes, C. Gentleman from France. (Ag '24)
  Hawksworth, H. Clever little people with six legs. (S '24)
  Hillyer, V. M. Child's history of the world. (Ja '25)
  Hunt, C. W. Peggy's playhouses. (F '25)
  Kelland, C. B. Catty Atkins, bandmaster. (O '24)
  Kummer, F: A. First days of knowledge. (Je '24)
  Langford, G: Stories of the first American animals. (Je '24)
  MacDonald, G. Billy Barnicoat. (Ap '24)
  Meader, S. W. Down the big river. (Ja '25)
  Meigs, C. New moon. (Ja '25)
  Miles, S. Childhood in verse and prose. (Ag '24)
  Milne, A. A. When we were very young. (Ja '25)
  Moore, A. C. New roads to childhood. (Mr '24)
  Moore, A. C. Nicholas. (D '24)
  Mukerji, D. G. Hari, the jungle lad. (Ja '25)
  Paine, R. D. Privateers of '76. (My '24)
  Perkins, L. Colonial twins of Virginia. (F '25)
  Phillpotts, E. Human boy's diary. (Je '24)
  Pocock, D. A. Secret of Hallowdene farm. (S '24)
  Roberts, C: G: D. They who walk in the wilds. (Je '24)
  Rolt-Wheeler, F. W: Gem-hunters. (O '24)
  Rolt-Wheeler, F. W: Magic-makers of Morocco. (S '24)
  Root, H. W. Tommy with the big tents. (Je '24)
  Sarg, T. Tony Sarg's book for children. (Ja '25)
  Satyananda Roy. When I was a boy in India. (Ag '24)
  Seaman, A. Edge of Raven pool. (Je '24)
  Silvers, E. R. Barry the undaunted. (S '24)
  Snedeker, C. D. Theras and his town. (F '25)
  Taylor, M. Thrings of the dark mountain. (Ja '25)
  Thomas, M. R., ed. Young folks' book of mirth. (S '24)
  Tucker, G: F. Boy whaleman. (F '25)
  Verrill, A. H. Deep sea hunters in the South seas. (My '24)
Children's plays
  Bates, K. L. Little Robin Stay-behind. (Ag '24)
Children's poetry
  Barnes, W. Children's poets. (D '24)
  Conkling, H. Silverhorn. (F '25)
  De la Mare, W. J:, comp. Come hither. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Willcox, L., comp. The torch. (F '25)
Children's poets. Barnes, W. (D 24)
Children's stories and how to tell them. Bone, W. A. (S '24)
Child's history of the world. Hillyer, V. M. (Ja '25)
Child's story of American literature. Tassin, A. de V., and Maurice, A. B. (My '24)
Chile

Description and travel
  May, E. C. 2000 miles through Chile. (Ag '24)

Social life and customs
  May, E. C. 2000 miles through Chile. (Ag '24)
Chills and fever. Ransom, J: C. (N '24)
Chilswell book of English poetry. Bridges, R. S., comp. (Je '24)
China

Civilization
  Hovelaque, E. L. China. (Ap '24)

Description and travel
  Close, U., pseud. In the land of the laughing Buddha. (F '25)
  Collins, G. Far Eastern jaunts. (Ja '25)
  Ward, F. K. Romance of plant hunting. (Ag '24

History
  Parker, E. H. Thousand years of the Tartars. (Ja '25)
  Williams, E: T: China yesterday and to-day. (My '24)

China—Continued
Politics and government
  Close, U., pseud. In the land of the laughing Buddha. (F '25)
Religion
  Hodous, L: Buddhism and Buddhists in China. (O '24)
Social life and customs
  Bland, J: O. P. Something lighter. (F '25)
  Hosie, D. Two gentlemen of China. (N '24)
  Seton, G. Chinese lanterns. (My '24)
  Williams, E: T: China yesterday and to-day. (My '24)
China. Hovelaque, E. L. (Ap '24)
China yesterday and to-day. Williams, E: T: (My '24)
Chinese lanterns. Seton, G. (My '24)
Chinese recipes. Moore, A. M. (Ap '24)
Chipperfield, Robert Orr, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E. (Mr, Ap, Ag '24, F '25)
Chivalry
  Meller, W. C. Knight's life in the days of chivalry. (F '25)
Choice recipes for clever cooks. Allen, L. G. (Je '24)
Chris Gascoyne. Benson, A. C. (O '24)
Christ of the Gospels. Robinson, A. W: (N '24)
Christ of the New Testament. More, P. E. (O '24)
Christ triumphant. Royden, A. M. (F '25)
Christchurch. Coffin, R. P: T. (F '25)
Christian art and symbolism
  Garesché, E: F. Great Christian artists. (O '24)
Christian church in the modern world. Calkins, R. (O '24)
Christian faith and eternal life. Horr, G: E. (Je '24)
Christian life
  King, H: C. Seeing life whole. (Ap '24)
  Moran, H. A. Creed for college men. (F '25)
  Saunderson, H: H. Power of an endless life. (S '24)
Christian program for the rural community. Butterfield, K. L. (My '24)
Christianity
  Bennett, L. E. Realm of God. (Ag '24)
  Bowran, J: G: Christianity and culture. (Ag '24)
  Brown, C: R. Why I believe in religion. (Je '24)
  Brown, W: A. Imperialistic religion and the religion of democracy. (My '24)
  Crane, F. Why I am a Christian. (Ja '25)
  Gore, C: The Holy Spirit and the church. (My '24)
  Jacks, L. P. Lost radiance of the Christian religion. (S '24)
  King, H: C. Seeing life whole. (Ap '24)
  Mullins, E. Y. Christianity at the cross roads. (S '24)
  Parks, L. What is modernism? (Je '24)
  Patton, C. S. Religion in the thought of today. (Ag '24)
  Quick, O. C. Catholic and Protestant elements in Christianity. (Je '24)
  Royden, A. M. Christ triumphant. (F '25)
Christianity and culture. Bowran, J: G: (Ag '24)
Christianity and the race problem. Oldham, J. H. (N '24)
Christianity and the state. Cadman, S: P. (Ag '24)
Christianity at the cross roads. Mullins, E. Y. (S '24)
Christopher and Cressida. Carmichael, M. (F '25)
Christopher Columbus. Jensen, J. V. (Ap '24)
Chronicles of a great prince. Bryant, M., and McAnnally, G: H. (Ja '25)
Chronicles of a Russian family. Aksakov, S. T. (N '24)
Chronicles of the eighteenth century. Wyndham, M. M. (F '25)
Church
  Calkins, R. Christian church in the modern world. (O '24)
  Gore, C: The Holy Spirit and the church. (My '24)
  Simpson, P. C. Church principles. (Ag '24)
Church and social problems
  Oldham, J. H. Christianity and the race problem. (N '24)
Church and state
  Cadman, S: P. Christianity and the state. (Ag '24)
Church history
Primitive and early church
  Case, S. J. Social origins of Christianity. (Ag '24)
  Duchesne, L: M. O. Early history of the Christian church. (F '25)
  Foakes-Jackson, F: J: Studies in the life of the early church. (S '24)
  Merrill, E. T. Essays in early Christian history. (Je '24)
  Norton, F: O. Rise of Christianity. (My '24)
Church of England
  Headlam, A. C. Church of England. (F '25)
  Hunter, A. England's reawakening. (O '24)
History
  Foakes-Jackson, F: J: Anglican church principles. (N '24)
Church principles. Simpson, P. C. (Ag '24)
Church unity
  Hunter, A. England's reawakening. (O '24)
Circus
  Cooper, C. R. Lions 'n' tigers 'n' everything. (N '24)
Citadel. Husband, J. (D '24)
Citizenship
  Hadow, W: H: Citizenship. (Ap '24)
Study and teaching
  Almack, J: C. Education for citizenship. (F '25)
  Woellner, E. P. Education for citizenship in a democracy. (Je '24)
City of the sun. Sabin, E. L. (Ag '24)
City out of the sea. Stanford, A. B. (Ag '24)
City planning
  Adshead, S. D. Town planning and town development. (Mr '24)
  Hughes, T: H., and Lamborn, E. A. G. Towns and town-planning, ancient and modern. (Mr '24)
  Kimball, T. Manual of information on city planning and zoning. (Ag '24)
Civilization
  Burns, C. D. Short history of international intercourse. (Ag '24)
  De Burgh, W: G: Legacy of the ancient world. (Ja '25)
  Hart, J. K. Discovery of intelligence. (D '24)
  Jacks, L. P. Living universe. (Ap '24)
  Russell, B. A. W: Icarus. (S '24)
  Taylor, H. Conditions of national success. (O '24)
Civilization, Ancient
  Kummer, F: A. First days of knowledge. (Je '24)
Civilization, Arabic
  Servier, A. Islam and the psychology of the Musulman. (O '24)
Civilization, Greek
  Bury, J: B., and others. Hellenistic age. (Ag '24)
  Toynbee, A. J., tr. Greek historical thought from Homer to the age of Heraclius. (Ja '25)
Civilization, Medieval
  Huizinga, J. Waning of the Middle ages. (O '24)
Clairvoyance
  Osty, E. Supernormal faculties in man. (S '24)
Classical philology
  Kent, R. G. Language and philology. (My '24)
Claw and fang. Glanville, E. (Ap '24)

Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud.)
Clemens, S: L. Mark Twain's autobiography. (D '24)
Cleopatra, queen of Egypt
Ferval, C., pseud. Life and death of Cleopatra. (D '24)
Clevedon case. Oakley, N. and J: (Ap '24)
Cleveland, Grover
McElroy, R. M. Grover Cleveland. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Clever little people with six legs. Hawksworth, H. (S '24)
Clocks and watches
Milham, W. I. Time and time keepers. (Ap '24)
Clothing and dress
Heard, G. Narcissus. (F '25)
Rittenhouse, A., pseud. Well-dressed woman. (N '24)
Story, M. How to dress well. (Ja '25)
Clouded pearl. Ruck, B. (N '24)
Clubfoot the avenger. Williams, V. (O '24)
Clyde Fitch and his letters. Fitch, C. (D '24)
Coal
Porter, H. C. Coal carbonization. (F '25)
Shurick, A. T: Coal industry. (O '24)
Coal carbonization. Porter, H. C. (F '25)
Coal industry
Lubin, I. Miners' wages and the cost of coal. (D '24)
Raushenbush, H. S. Anthracite question. (Je '24)
Coal industry. Shurick, A. T: (O '24)
Coal miners
Blankenhorn, H. Strike for union. (Mr '24)
Lubin, I. Miners' wages and the cost of coal. (D '24)
Coal-tar products
Porter, H. C. Coal carbonization. (F '25)
Coast of folly. Dawson, C. (Mr '24)
Coasting down East. Hueston, E. (D '24)
Coasts of illusion. Firestone, C. B. (Ja '25)
Cobb of "The World". Cobb, F. I.
Coke
Porter, H. C. Coal carbonization. (F '25)
Collapse of Central Europe. Nowak, K. F. (N '24)
Collected essays and papers, 1875-1920. Saintsbury, G: E: B. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Collected poems. Gwynn, S. L. (Je '24)
Collecting of accounts
Beckman, T. N. Credits and collections in theory and practice. (F '25)
Collectors and collecting
Carrick, A. Van L. Collector's luck in France. (D '24)
Taussig, C: W:, and Meyer, T. A. Book of hobbies. (D '24)
Williamson, G: C: Amateur collector. (Ag '24)
Collector's luck in France. Carrick, A. Van L. (D '24)
Collector's whatnot. Van Loot, C. O., pseud., and others. (Ap '24)
Colloid chemistry. Svedberg, T. (F '25)
Colloids
Bogue, R. H., ed. Theory and application of colloidal behavior. (F '25)
Svedberg, T. Colloid chemistry. (F '25)
Colombia

Description and travel

Niles, B. Colombia, land of miracles. (D '24)
Colombia, land of miracles. Niles, B. (D '24)
Colonial background of the American revolution. Andrews, C: M. (F '25)
Colonial twins of Virginia. Perkins, L. (F '25)
Colonial women of affairs. Dexter, E. W. (S '24)
Color
Sargent, W. Enjoyment and use of color. (Je '24)
Color in advertising
Luckiesh, M. Light and color in advertising and merchandising. (Ap '24)
Color of youth. Friedlaender, V. H. (N '24)
Color prints
Brown, L. N. Early block-printing and book-illustration in Japan. (S '24)
Colorado river
Freeman, L: R. Colorado river. (Ap '24)
Columbus, Christopher
Columbus, C. Journal of his first voyage to America. (Ag '24)
Come hither. De la Mare, W. J:, comp. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Comely Lass. Moult, T. (Ag '24)
Coming of Amos. Locke, W: J: (O '24)
Commandment of Moses. McKenna, S. (Ag '24)
Commencement. Brace, E. (O '24)
Commerce
Viner, J. Dumping. (My '24)
Commercial correspondence
Buck, C: E. Business letter-writer's manual. (F '25)
Whipple, T: H. B. Principles of business writing. (F '25)
Commercial fruit and vegetable products. Cruess, W: V. (F '25)
Commercial geography. Newbigin, M. I. (Ag '24)
Commercial statistics

Bibliography

New York University. Bureau of business research. Source-book of research data. (Ap '24)
Common sense in auction bridge. Macbeth, J. C. H. (O '24)
Common sense of music. Spaeth, S. G. (O '24)
Common weal. Fisher, H. A. L. (My '24)
Commonsense of health. Rinehart, S. M. (O '24)
Communicable diseases. McLaughlin, A. J. (Je '24)
Communism

Russia

Ross, E: A. Russian soviet republic. (Ap '24)
Community playhouse. Goveia, C. J. de. (Ap '24)
Companionable poems. Cooke, E. V. (Ag '24)
Complete poems. Dickinson, E. N. (S '24)
Concrete construction
Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. Reinforced concrete and masonry structures (F '25)
Concrete, Reinforced
Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. Reinforced concrete and masonry structures. (F '25)
Conditions of national success. Taylor, H. (O '24)
Conduct of foreign relations under modern democratic conditions. Poole, DeW. C. (O '24)
Conduct of life
Allinson, A. C. Friends with life. (D '24)
Croce, B. Conduct of life. (F '25)
Drury, S: S. Backbone. (Ag '24)
Fosdick, H. E. Twelve tests of character. (Mr '24)
Payot, J. Conquest of happiness. (F '25)
Conduit wiring. Croft, T. W. (F '25)
Confessions of a prima donna. (Ap '24)
Conflict of policies in Asia. Millard, T: F. F. (S '24)
Conflicts with oblivion. Abbott, W. C. (F '25)
Confusion. Cozzens, J. G. (My '24)
Congreve, William
Gosse, E. W: Life of William Congreve. (F '25)
Conjuring
Radcliffe, W: H. Magic for amateurs. (Ag '24)
Conquering hero. Monkhouse, A. N. (Ap '24)
Conqueror passes. Barretto, L. (F '24)
Conquest of happiness. Payot, J. (F '25)
Conquest of the River Plate. Cunninghame Graham, R. G. B. (Ja '25)
Conrad, Joseph
Ford, F. M. Joseph Conrad. (Ja '25)
Stauffer, R. M. Joseph Conrad. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Conscientious objector in America. Thomas, N. M. (My '24)
Conscientious objectors
Thomas, N. M. Conscientious objector in America. (My '24)
Conservatism
Wolfe, A. B. Conservatism, radicalism, and scientific method. (My '24)
Conservatism, radicalism, and scientific method. Wolfe, A. B. (My '24)
Constant, Benjamin
Schermerhorn, E. W. Benjamin Constant. (Ag '24)
Constitution of the United States. Beck, J. M. (S '24)
Constitution of the United States. Schuyler, R. L. (Ap '24)
Construction and repair work for the farm. Struck, F. T. (My '24)
Constructive conscious control of the individual. Alexander, F: M. (Ap '24)
Constructive revolution of Jesus. Dickey, S: (Ap '24)
Consumption (economics)
Kyrk, H. Theory of consumption. (Ap '24)
Contemporary British philosophy. Muirhead, J: H:, ed. (Ap '24)
Contemporary criticisms of Dr Samuel Johnson. Spittal, J: K., comp. and ed. (O '24)
Contemporary drama of Russia. Wiener, L. (Ja '25)
Contemporary French literature. Lalou, R. (F '25)
Contemporary portraits, fourth series. Harris, F. (Ap '24)
Contemporary short stories. Robinson, K. A., comp. (F '25)
Continuity of letters. Bailey, J. C. (Ap '24)
Contractors' accounting practice. Affelder, W: M. (S '24)
The contrast. Belloc, H. (Je '24)
Contributions of science to religion. Mathews, S., and others. (F '25)
Control of social mind. Weeks, A. D. (Ap '24)
Controlled power. Holmes, A. (O '24)
Conversations in Ebury Street. Moore, G: (D '24)
Conversion
Cabot, P. Except ye be born again. (F '25)
Cook and the captain bold. Mason, A. (My '24)
Cookery
Allen, I. C. Mrs Allen on cooking, menus, service. (Ap '24)
Allen, L. G. Choice recipes for clever cooks. (Je '24)
Chambers, M. D. One-piece dinners. (N '24)
Fox, F. F., and Schwartz, L. S. Fannie Fox's cook book. (Ap '24)
Lord, I. E., ed. Everybody's cook book. (F '25)
Nichols, N. B. Farm cook and rule book. (Ap '24)
Cookery, Chinese
Moore, A. M. Chinese recipes. (Ap '24)
Cookery, French
Story, A. M. S. Dining in Paris. (O '24)
Cookery, Russian
Gagarina, M., comp. and tr. Borzoi cook book. (Ap '24)
Coolidge, Calvin
Green, H. Life of Calvin Coolidge. (S '24)
Hennessy, M. E. Calvin Coolidge. (Je '24)
Washburn, R. M. Calvin Coolidge. (Ap '24)
Whiting, E: W. Calvin Coolidge. (O '24)
Woods, R. A. Preparation of Calvin Coolidge. (N '24)
Coolidge, Thomas Jefferson
Coolidge, T: J. Autobiography. (Ag '24)
Co-operation
Blanc, E. T. Co-operative movement in Russia. (My '24)
Gillette, K. C. People's corporation. (Ag '24)
Co-operative movement in Russia. Blanc, E. T. (Ap '24)
Copper
Davis, W. Story of copper. (F '25)
Coppertop. Gaze, H. (S '24)
Copplestone, Bennet, pseud. See Kitchin, F: H. (Mr '24)
Copy 1924. Patterson, F. A., ed. (S '24)
Corporations
Finance
Gerstenberg, C: W: Financial organization and management of business. (Ag '24)
Sells, E. W. Natural business year. (F '25)
Corrosion and anti-corrosives
Pollitt, A. A. Causes and prevention of corrosion. (Je '24)
Corsica
Description and travel
Archer, D. Corsica, the scented isle. (N '24)
Corsica, the scented isle. Archer, D. (N '24)
Cory, William Johnson
Esher, R. B. B. Ionicus. (My '24)
Cosmetics
Poucher, W: A. Perfumes and cosmetics. (Je '24)
Cost accounting
Konopak, L. T. Cost accounting fundamentals from the standpoint of management. (S '24)
Manning, A. B. Elements of cost accounting. (F '25)
Cost accounting fundamentals from the standpoint of management. Konopak, L. T. (S '24)
Cost and standard of living
Kyrk, H. Theory of consumption. (Ap '24)
Costa's daughter. Bercovici, K. (Je '24)
Costs and profits. Hastings, H. B. (Ap '24)
Cotton
Crawford, M. de C. Heritage of cotton. (F '25)
Country church
Fry, C: L. Diagnosing the rural church. (N '24)
Morse, H. N., and Brunner, E. de S. Town and country church in the United States. (O '24)
Country folk. Ditchfield, P: H. (Ap '24)
Country life
Atkeson, M. M. Woman on the farm. (F '25)
Butterfield, K. L. Christian program for the rural community. (My '24)
Ditchfield, P: H. Country folk. (Ap '24)
Galpin, C: J. Rural social problems. (Ag '24)
Waugh, F. A. Country planning. (My '24)
Country people. Suckow, R. (Ag '24)
Country planning. Waugh, F. A. (My '24)
Courts
United States
Bruce, A. A. American judge. (My '24)
Courts and courtiers
Uncensored recollections. (O '24)
Courtyards
Byne, M. and A. Spanish gardens and patios. (F '25)
Cowboys
James, W. Cowboys north and south. (D '24)
Cowboys north and south. James, W. (D '24)
Crapsey, Algernon Sidney
Crapsey, A. S. Last of the heretics. (O '24)
Crazy man. Bodenheim, M. (Mr '24)
Creative experience. Follett, M. P. (Ap '24)
Creative life. Lewisohn, L. (Je '24)
Credit
Beckman, T. N. Credits and collections in theory and practice. (F '25)
Credits and collections in theory and practice. Beckman, T. N. (F '25)
Creed for college men. Moran, H. A. (F '25)
Creeds
Creeds and loyalty. (S '24)
Creeds and loyalty. (S '24)
Creevey, Thomas
Creevey, T: Creevey papers. (Ap '24)
Creevey papers. Creevey, T: (Ap '24)
Creole sketches. Hearn, L. (S '24)
Cricket
Maclaren, A. C. Cricket old and new. (N '24)
Cricket old and new. Maclaren, A. C. (N '24)

- Crime and criminals
  - Cairns, J: A. R. Sidelights of London. (D '24)
  - Dougherty, G: S. Criminal as a human being. (D '24)
  - Goodwin, J: C. Insanity and the criminal. (Je '24)
  - Henderson, G: C. Keys to crookdom. (Ja '25)
  - Kingston, C: Dramatic days at the Old Bailey. (F '25)
  - O'Hare, K. R. In prison. (Ap '24)
  - Stevens, C. L. M. Famous crime and criminals. (D '24)
- Crimean war, 1853-1856
  - Martin, B. K. Triumph of Lord Palmerston. (O '24)
- Criminal as a human being. Dougherty, G: S. (D '24)
- Crimson cloak. Montross, L. S. (Ag '24)
- Critical studies of the works of Charles Dickens. Gissing, G: (Ja '25)
- Critical ventures in modern French literature. Whitridge, A. (Ap '24)
- Criticism in America. (O '24)
- Crooked mile. De Voto, B. (D '24)
- Crookes, Sir William
  - Fournier D'Albe, E. E: Life of Sir William Crookes. (Mr '24)
- Crops
  - Gehrs, J: H: Soils and crops. (F '25)
- Crystallizing public opinion. Bernays, E: L. (Ap '24)
- Crystallography
  - Tutton, A. E. H. Natural history of crystals. (S '24)
- Cuddy of the white tops. May, E. C. (S '24)
- Cultivated evergreens. Bailey, L. H., ed. (Ap '24)
- Culture
  - Bowran, J: G: Christianity and culture. (Ag '24)
- Culture and democracy in the United States. Kallen, H. M. (My '24)
- Cumberland, Gerald, pseud. See Kenyon, C. F. (Ag '24)
- Cure of souls. Sinclair, M. (Mr '24)
- Curie, Pierre
  - Curie, M. S. Pierre Curie. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
- Currency question
  - Keynes, J: M. Monetary reform. (Ap '24)
- Current problems in citizenship. Munro, W: B. (D '24)
- Customs of mankind. Eichler, L. (D '24)
- Czechoslovak literature
  - Chudoba, F. Short survey of Czech literature. (D '24)
- Czechoslovakia
  - Gruber, J., ed. Czechoslovakia. (F '25)
  - Politics and government
  - Graham, M. W., and Binkley, R. C. New governments of central Europe. (S '24)

- D. H. Lawrence. Seligmann, H. J. (O '24)
- Daedalus. Haldane, J. B. S. (S '24)
- Dalla the lion-cub. Stockley, C. (D '24)
- Damascus gate. Raymond, E. (Ap '24)
- La dame de Sainte Hermine. King, G. E. (Ag '24)
- Dan Barry's daughter. Brand, M. (Mr '24)
- Dance in education. Marsh, A. M., and L. P. (Ag '24)
- The dancers. Parsons, H., pseud. (Ap '24)
- Dancing
  - Marsh, A. M., and L. P. Dance in education. (Ag '24)
- Dante Alighieri
  - Grandgent, C: H. Discourses on Dante. (Ag '24)
- Dante: a sonnet sequence. Day, R: E. (Ja '25)
- Dark chapter. Rath, E. J., pseud. (S '24)
- Dark cloud. Boyd, T: A. (O '24)
- Dark night. Sinclair, M. (Ag '24)
- Dark swan. Pascal, E. (My '24)
- Darkened windows. Rathbone, C. K. (Je '24)
- Darker phases of the South. Tannenbaum, F. (Mr '24)
- Daughters of Eve. Clark, E. H. (D '24)
- David, king of Israel
  - Drama
  - Pinski, D: King David and his wives. (My '24)
- David Blaize of King's. Benson, E: F: (N '24)
- David Wilmot. Going, C: B. (D '24)
- Daviess, Maria Thompson
  - Daviess, M. T. Seven times seven. (Je '24)
- Davis, John William
  - Huntley, T. A. Life of John W. Davis. (D '24)
- Day and night stories. Maupassant, G. de. (O '24)
- Days of delusion. Sears, C. E. (My '24)
- Dead reckonings in fiction. Brewster, D., and Burrell, A. (Ja '25)
- Deafness
  - Calkins, E. E. "Louder please!" (N '24)
- Dear pretender. Colver, A. M. (My '24)
- Debating
  - Phelps, E. M., and Johnsen, J. E. University debaters' annual. (My '24)
- Debts, Public
  - Fisk, H. E: Inter-ally debts. (N '24)
  - Russia
  - Pasvolsky, L., and Moulton, H. G. Russian debts and Russian reconstruction. (F '25)
- Deceit. Henry, B. M. (O '24)
- Deep in the hearts of men. Walter, M. E. (Je '24)
- Deep meadows. Larminie, M. R. (Ag '24)
- Deep sea hunters in the South seas. Verrill, A. H. (My '24)
- Defeat. Moss, G. (Ap '24)
- Definitions; second series. Canby, H: S. (N '24)
- Dehan, Richard, pseud. See Graves, C. I. M. (O '24)
- De La Mare, Walter John
  - Mégroz, R. L. Walter de la Mare. (S '24)
- Delta, pseud. See Wentworth, P. (Ap '24)
- Democracy
  - Babbitt, I. Democracy and leadership. (N '24)
  - Eldridge, S. Political action. (Ap '24)
  - Hearnshaw, F. J: C. Democracy and labour. (Ag '24)
- Democracy and labour. Hearnshaw, F. J: C. (Ag '24)
- Democracy and leadership. Babbitt, I. (N '24)
- Demonology
  - Macgowan, K., and Ross, H. Masks and demons. (My '24)
- Deportation
  - Post, L: F. Deportations delirium of nineteen-twenty. (My '24)
- Deportations delirium of nineteen-twenty. Post, L: F. (My '24)
- Depths of the universe. Hale, G: E. (S '24)
- Desert fauna
  - Buxton, P. A. Animal life in deserts. (Ag '24)
- Desert's price. Raine, W: M. (My '24)
- Design in the little garden. Steele, F. (My '24)
- Design of diagrams for engineering formulas. Hewes, L. I., and Seward, H. L. (S '24)
- Designing heating and ventilating systems. Fuller, C: A. (F '25)
- D'Esme, Jean, pseud. See Esménard, J. d'. (Ap '24)
- Detroit, Michigan
  - Catlin, G: B. Story of Detroit. (Ap '24)
- Development of the sciences. Woodruff, L. L., ed. (My '24)
- Devil Dare. Ollivant, A. (D '24)
- Devil Wolf. Schinke, N. S. (My '24)
- The Devonshers. Morrow, H. (N '24)
- Diagnosing the rural church. Fry, C: L. (N '24)
- Diary of a dude-wrangler. Burt, S. (N '24)
- Diary of Otto Braun. Braun, O: (My '24)

Dickens, Charles
Chancellor, E. B. London of Charles Dickens. (N '24)
Dexter, W. London of Dickens. (S '24)
Gissing, G: Critical studies of the works of Charles Dickens. (Ja '25)
Nicoll, W: R. Dickens's own story. (S '24)

Dictionaries

Hayward, A. L. Dickens encyclopedia. (Ja '25)
Dickens encyclopedia. Hayward, A. L. (Ja '25)
Dickens's own story. Nicoll, W: R. (S '24)
Dickinson, Emily
Dickinson, E. Life and letters. (Ap '24)
Dictionary of American politics. Smith, E: C. (O '24)
Dictionary of modern music and musicians. Hull, A. E., ed. (F '25)
Diet
Peters, L. H. Diet for children. (Je '24)
Diet for children. Peters, L. H. (Je '24)
The difference. Monroe, H. (O '24)
Ding dong bell. De la Mare, W. J. (S '24)
Dining in Paris. Story, A. M. S. (O '24)
Dinner of herbs. Mavity, N. B. (Je '24)
Diplomacy
Cresson, W: P. Diplomatic portraits. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Diplomacy of Napoleon. Mowat, R. B. (N '24)
Diplomatic portraits. Cresson, W: P. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual) Directories

Bibliography

Morley, L. H., and Kight, A. C. Mailing list directory and classified index to trade directories. (Je '24)
Discourses on Dante. Grandgent, C: H. (Ag '24)
Discoveries (in geography)
Buchan, J: Last secrets. (Je '24)
Discovery of intelligence. Hart, J. K. (D '24)
Diseases
Currier, A. F. How to keep well. (D '24)
Disinherited family. Rathbone, E. F. (Ag '24)
Distressing dialogues. Millay, E. St V. (D '24)
Diversions of Dawson. Kitchin, F: H. (Mr '24)
Divine lady. Barrington, E. (S '24)
Docks
Cunningham, B. Cargo handling at ports. (F '25)
Dr Graesler. Schnitzler, A. (Ap '24)
Dr Little's dog book. Little, G: W. (F '25)
Dog and duck. Machen, A. (Mr '24)
Dogs
Cox, H. E: de F. Dogs and I. (S '24)
Lemmon, R. S. Puppy book. (Ag '24)

Diseases

Little, G: W. Dr Little's dog book. (F '25)

Legends and stories

Ansell, M. Dogs and men. (Ja '25)
Foote, J: T. Pocono Shot. (Ja '25)
Hawkes, C. Gentleman from France. (Ag '24)
Terhune, A. P. Treve. (Mr '24)
Dogs and I. Cox, H. E: de F. (S '24)
Dogs and men. Ansell, M. (Ja '25)
Domestic animals
English, D. Friends of mankind. (F '25)
Domestic finance
Andrews, B: R: Economics of the household. (My '24)
Taber, C. W., and Wardall, R. A. Economics of the family. (My '24)
Dominant blood. McClure, R. E. (F '25)
Don Juan. Ruiz, J. M. (Ap '24)
Donkey trip through Spain. Gordon, J. and C. J. (S '24)
Donna Lisa. Hubbard, W. (Mr '24)
Doomsland. Leslie, S. (Ap '24)
Dorr, Mrs Rheta (Childe)
Dorr, R. Woman of fifty. (F '25)
Double cross. Thomas, A. E. (O '24)
Double demon. Herbert, A. P., and others. (S '24)
Double house. Dejeans, E. (My '24)

Down the big river. Meader, S. W. (Ja '25)
Down the Grand canyon. Freeman, L: R. (D '24)
Down to the sea in ships. Anthony, I. (F '25)
Downland pathways. Allcroft, A. H. (Ja '25)
Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan
Doyle, A. C. Memories and adventures. (N '24)
Drama
Dukes, S. Youngest drama. (Ag '24)
Glover, H. Drama and mankind. (F '25)
Nathan, G: J. Materia critica. (O '24)
Wise, C. M. Dramatics for school and community. (Ap '24)

Bibliography

Logasa, H., and Ver Nooy, W., comps. Index to one-act plays. (Ja '25)

History and criticism

Jourdain, E. F. Drama in Europe in theory and practice. (O '24)
Drama and mankind. Glover, H. (F '25)
Drama in Europe in theory and practice. Jourdain, E. F. (O '24)
Drama of the law. Parry, E: A. (O '24)
Dramas
Andreieff, L. N. Katerina. (My '24)
Andreieff, L. N. Samson in chains. (Ap '24)
Artsybashev, M. P. Jealousy. (Ap '24)
Barrie J. M. Mary Rose. (Ja '25)
Bax, C. Midsummer madness. (Mr '24)
Beach, L: Ann Vroome. (Ag '24)
Beach, L: Goose hangs high. (Ag '24)
Benavente y Martínez, J. Plays; fourth series. (O '24)
Bennett, A., and Knoblock, E: London life. (Ja '25)
Bercovici, K. Costa's daughter. (Je '24)
Binyon, L. Ayuli. (Ag '24)
Brooks, C: S. Luca Sarto. (Ja '25)
Brown, A. Charles Lamb. (F '25)
Cranmer-Byng, L. A. Salma. (My '24)
Crocker, B., pseud. Humble folk. (Je '24)
Dane, C. The way things happen. (Mr '24)
Davies, W: H: True travellers. (Ap '24)
Ervine, St J: G. Lady of Belmont. (Mr '24)
Field, R. L. Six plays. (F '25)
Galsworthy, J: The forest. (Ag '24)
Galsworthy, J: Representative plays. (F '25)
Gibson, W. W. Kestrel edge. (Ap '24)
Gorky, M., pseud. The judge. (Ja '25)
Hamilton, C. Four plays. (Ag '24)
Hamsun, K. In the grip of life. (Mr '24)
Hardy, T: Famous tragedy of the Queen of Cornwall. (Ap '24)
Hughes, H. Hell-bent fer heaven. (Je '24)
John, G. The prince. (Ag '24)
Kaufman, G: S., and Connelly, M. C. Beggar on horseback. (Ag '24)
Kelly, G: E: The show-off. (O '24)
Kemp, H. Bocaccio's untold tale. (O '24)
Knoblock, E: The lullaby. (O '24)
Langner, L. Moses (O '24)
Lawson, J: H. Roger Bloomer. (Je '24)
Lee, H. Little poor man. (My '24)
Mackaye, P. This fine-pretty world. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Molnar, F. Husbands and lovers. (My '24)
Monkhouse, A. N. Conquering hero. (Ap '24)
Morley, C. D. One act plays. (N '24)
Neilson, F. Sin eater's Hallowe'en. (My '24)
Nichols, A. Haunted circle. (My '24)
O'Neill, E. G. All God's chillun got wings. (Je '24)
Pinski, D: King David and his wives. (My '24)
Pirandello, L. Each in his own way. (Ap '24)
Rolland, R. The Montespan. (Ap '24)
Rosenberg, J. N. Punchinello. (My '24)
Rubinstein, H. F., and Glover, H. Exodus. (Je '24)
Shaw, G: B. Saint Joan. (S '24)
Thomas, A. E., and Hamilton, C. M. Better understanding. (S '24)
Toller, E. Man and the masses. (O '24)
Turgenev, I. S. Plays. (O '24)
Turner, J: H. Lilies of the field. (N '24)
Vajda, E. Fata Morgana. (S '24)
Vane, S. Outward bound. (Mr '24)
Wilde, P. Inn of discontent. (Ja '25)

Collections
- Block, E., tr. One-act plays from the Yiddish. (My '24)
- Federal council of the churches of Christ in America. Committee on religious drama. Religious dramas, 1924. (Ja '25)
- Herbert, A. P., and others. Double demon. (S '24)
- Loving, P., ed. Ten minute plays. (My '24)
- Mantle, B., ed. Best plays of 1922-1923. (Mr '24)
- Mantle, B., ed. Best plays of 1923-24. (F '25)
- Marriott, J: W., comp. One-act plays of today. (Ja '25)
- Moses, N. J., ed. Representative continental dramas. (Ag '24)
- Thomas, C: S., ed. Atlantic book of junior plays. (F '25)

Dramatic days at the Old Bailey. Kingston, C: (F '25)
Dramatics for school and community. Wise, C. M. (Ap '24)
Dramatis personæ. Symons, A. (My '24)
The dream. Wells, H. G: (My '24)
Dream of fair women. Williamson,, H: (D '24)

Dressler, Marie
- Dressler, M. Life story of an ugly duckling. (F '25)

Drink in 1914-1922. Shadowell, A. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Dry goods
- Hahn, L., and White, P., eds. Merchants' manual. (Je '24)

Du Maurier, Gerald. See Parsons, H., pseud. (Ap '24)

Dumping (commercial policy)
- Viner, J. Dumping. (My '24)

Durant, Henry Fowle
- Kingsley, F. Life of Henry Fowle Durant. (Je '24)

Dust to dust. Ostrander, I. E. (Ag '24)

Dutch East Indies
- Couperus, L: Eastward. (F '25)

Dwellers of the sea and shore. Crowder, W: (Je '24)
Dying lights and dawning. Holmes, E. (O '24)
Dynamic power of the inner mind. Brown, B. (Ag '24)
Dynamic psychology. Moore, T: V. (Ja '25)

Each in his own way. Pirandello, L. (Ap '24)
Eagle, Solomon, pseud. See Squire, J: C. (Je '24)
Eagle's wing. Bower, B. M., pseud. (Mr '24)
Earl of hell. Kitchell, J. G. (S '24)
Early block-printing and book-illustration in Japan. Brown, L. N. (S '24)
Early economic thought. Monroe, A. E. (S '24)
Early history of the Christian church. Duchesne, L: M. O. (F '25)

Earths, Rare
- Hopkins, B. S. Chemistry of the rarer elements. (F '25)

East (Far East)

Description and travel
- Cameron, C. Wanderings in south-eastern seas. (F '25)
- Harrison, M. E. Red bear or yellow dragon. (Je '24)
- Hervey, H. Where strange gods call. (Ja '25)

East and west. (S '24)
East of the setting sun. McCutcheon, G: B. (D '24)
The East window and The car window. Taylor, B. L. (Ag '24)

Eastern question
- Stannard, H. M. Fabric of Europe. (Je '24)

Eastern question (Far East)
- Millard, T: F. F. Conflict of policies in Asia. (S '24)

Eastern question (Near East)
- Powell, E: A. Struggle for power in Moslem Asia. (Ap '24)

Eastward. Couperus. L: (F '25)
Easy. Putnam, N. (My '24)
Echo de Paris. Housman, L. (Ap '24)

Eclipses, Solar
- Lewis, I. E. Handbook of solar eclipses. (F '25)

Economics
- Belloc, H. Economics for Helen. (Ja '25)
- Cassel, G. Theory of social economy. (Ap '24)
- Custis, V. Foundations of national industrial efficiency. (Ap '24)
- Franklin, F. Plain talks on economics. (O '24, Ja '25)
- Le Rossignol, J. E: Economics for everyman. (Je '24)
- Marriott, J: A. R. Economics and ethics. (Mr '24)
- Monroe, A. E. Early economic thought. (S '24)
- Patten, S. N. Essays in economic theory. (My '24)
- Riley, E. B. Economics for secondary schools. (F '25)
- Tugwell, R. G., ed. Trend of economics. (D '24)
- Vanderblue, H. B. Problems in business economics. (D '24)

Economics and ethics. Marriott, J: A. R. (Mr '24)
Economics for everyman. Le Rossignol, J. E: (Je '24)
Economics for Helen. Belloc, H. (Ja '25)
Economics for secondary schools. Riley, E. B. (F '25)
Economics of fatigue and unrest. Florence, P. S. (N '24)
Economics of food supply. Hedrick, W. O. (Ag '24)
Economics of the family. Taber, C. W., and Wardall, R. A. (My '24)
Economics of the household. Andrews, B: R: (My '24)
Economy in home building. Hering, O. C. (D '24)

Edar, pseud. See Anthony, E: (Ag '24)
Edge of Raven pool. Seaman, A. (Je '24)
Edge of the desert. Dunbar, I. M. (F '25)
Editing the day's news. Bastian, G: C. (My '24)
Editor and his people. White, W: A. (O '24)

Education
- Almack, J: C. Education for citizenship. (F '25)
- Baudouin, C: Tolstoi the teacher. (Je '24)
- Frasier, G: W., and Armentrout, W. D. Introduction to education. (F '25)
- Jacks, L. P. Living universe. (Ap '24)
- Kilpatrick, W: H., comp. Source book in the philosophy of education. (My '24)
- Mirick, G: A. Progressive education. (Ap '24)
- Peters, C: C. Foundations of educational sociology. (F '25)
- Suzzallo, H: Our faith in education. (O '24)
- Thwing, C: F. What education has the most worth? (D '24)

Curricula
- Bobbitt, J: F. How to make a curriculum. (S '24)

History
- Hart, J. K. Discovery of intelligence. (D '24)

New England
- Grizzell, E. D. Origin and development of the high school in New England before 1865. (Je '24)

United States
- Caldwell, O. W:, and Courtis, S. A. Then and now in education. (Ag '24)

Education for citizenship. Almack, J: C. (F '25)
Education for citizenship in a democracy. Woellner, F. P. (Je '24)
Education moves ahead. Smith, E. R. (Ag '24)
Education of Anthony Dare. Marshall, A. (Je '24)

Education of children
Coe, G: A. Law and freedom in the school. (S '24)
Freeland, G: E. Improvement of teaching. (F '25)
Horn, J: L: Education of exceptional children. (F '25)
McMillan, M. Education through the imagination. (Ap '24)
O'Shea, M. V., ed. The child. (D '24)
Smith, E. R. Education moves ahead. (Ag '24)

Education of exceptional children. Horn, J: L: (F '25)
Education of Peter. Wiley, J: (Ap '24)
Education through the imagination. McMillan, M. (Ap '24)

Educational advertising
Miller, C. R., and Charles, F. Publicity and the public school. (F '25)

Educational measurements
Trabue, M. R. Measuring results in education. (O '24)

Educational surveys
Caldwell, O. W:, and Courtis, S. A. Then and now in education. (Ag '24)

Edward FitzGerald and Bernard Barton. FitzGerald, E: (Je '24)

Edward IV, king of England
Scofield, C. L. Life and reign of Edward the Fourth. (My '24)

Efficiency
Pear, T. H. Skill in work and play. (F '25)

Efficiency, Industrial
Alford, L. P., ed. Management's handbook. (F '25)
Copley, F. B. Frederick W. Taylor. (Ap '24)
Custis, V. Foundations of national industrial efficiency. (Ap '24)
Florence, P. S. Economics of fatigue and unrest. (N '24)
Lichtner, W: O: Planned control in manufacturing. (S '24)

Egan, Maurice Francis
Egan, M. F. Recollections of a happy life. (D '24)

Egypt

Antiquities
Baikie, J. Century of excavation in the land of the Pharaohs. (Ap '24)
Blackman, A. M. Luxor and its temples. (Mr '24)
Capart, J. Tomb of Tutankhamen. (Mr '24)
Jones, M. E. M. Ancient Egypt from the records. (O '24)
Mercer, S: A. B. Tutankhamen and Egyptology. (My '24)
Weigall, A. E: P. B. Tutankhamen. (Ap '24)
Wilson, R. F. Living pageant of the Nile. (My '24)

Description and travel
Lorimer, N. O. By the waters of Egypt. (O '24)
Powers, H. H. Egypt. (F '25)

History, Ancient
Jones, M. E. M. Ancient Egypt from the records. (O '24)

Religion
Petrie, W: M. F. Religious life in ancient Egypt. (O '24)

Egypt. Powers, H. H. (F '25)
Egyptian love. Haweis, S. (F '25)
Eight panes of glass. Simpson, R. (Ap '24)

Einstein theory
Freundlich, E. Theory of relativity. (Ag '24)

Elaine at the gates. Maxwell, W: B. (D '24)

Elections

United States
Brooks, R. C. Political parties and electoral problems. (Je '24)

Electric conduits
Croft, T. W. Conduit wiring. (F '25)

Electric elevator equipment for modern buildings. Grierson, R. (F '25)

Electric engineering
Gray, A. Principles and practice of electrical engineering. (F '25)
Wade, H. T. Everyday electricity. (F '25)

Electric lighting
Croft, T. W. Lighting circuits and switches. (Ap '24)
Luckiesh, M. Portable lamps. (Ag '24)

Electric machinery
Croft, T. W. Electrical machinery and control diagrams. (F '25)

Alternating current
Croft, T. W. Alternating-current armature winding. (F '25)

Electric motor truck. La Schum, W: E. (S '24)

Electric welding
Holslag, C. J. Arc welding handbook. (F '25)

Electric wiring
Croft, T. W. Conduit wiring. (F '25)
Croft, T. W. Lighting circuits and switches. (Ap '24)

Electrical machinery and control diagrams. Croft, T. W. (F '25)
Electrical vibration instruments. Kennelly, A. E. (S '24)

Electricity
Wade, H. T. Everyday electricity. (F '25)

The electron. Millikan, R. A. (F '25)
Electron in chemistry. Thomson, J. J: (F '25)

Electrons
Millikan, R. A. The electron. (F '25)
Sullivan, J: W: N. Atoms and electrons. (My '24)
Thomson, J. J: Electron in chemistry. (F '25)

Electroplating
Blum, W:, and Hogaboom, G: B. Principles of electroplating and electroforming. (S '24)
Hughes, W: E. Modern electro-plating. (F '25)

Electrotyping
Blum, W:, and Hogaboom, G: B. Principles of electroplating and electroforming. (S '24)

Elementary hydraulics. Medaugh, F: W. (S '24)
Elementary principles of lighting and photometry. Walsh, J: W: T. (S '24)
Elementary thermodynamics of automobile engines. Hamilton, E. H. (Je '24)
Elements of cost accounting. Manning, A. B. (F '25)
Elements of land economics. Ely, R: T., and Morehouse, E: W. (S '24)
Elements of storage batteries. Jansky, C. M., and Wood, H. P. (Je '24)
Elements of vital statistics. Newsholme, A. (Je '24)
Elephant man. Treves, F: (Je '24)

Elephants
Bell, W. D. M. Wanderings of an elephant hunter. (My '24)
Maxwell, M. Stalking big game with a camera in equatorial Africa. (Ja '25)

Elephants and ethnologists. Smith, G. E. (Ja '25)

Elevators, Electric
Grierson, R. Electric elevator equipment for modern buildings. (F '25)

Elfin pedlar. Adam, H. D. (Ag '24)

Eliot, George, pseud. (Mrs Mary Ann Evans [Lewes] Cross)

Dictionaries
Mudge, I. G., and Sears, M. E. George Eliot dictionary. (O '24)

Elizabeth, queen of England

Drama
John, G. The prince. (Ag '24)

Elizabethan stage. Chambers, E. K. (Je '24)
Elizabethans. Bullen, A. H. (S '24)
Elsie and the child. Bennett, A. (D '24)

Emotions
Wells, F: L. Pleasure and behavior. (Ap '24)

Emperor Nicholas II as I knew him. Hanbury-Williams, J: (Ap '24)

Employees' representation in management
  Filene, A. L., and Kline, B. Merchant's horizon. (S '24)
  Myers, J. Representative government in industry. (Ag '24)
Employer's liability
  Downey, E. H: Workmen's compensation. (F '25)
Employment management
  Kornhauser, A. W:, and Kingsbury, F. A. Psychological tests in business. (F '25)
  Scott, W. D., and Clothier, R. C. Personnel management. (My '24)
Enchanted aisles. Woolcott, A. (My '24)
Enchanted hill. Kyne, P: B. (Ja '25)
Enchanted mesa. Dresbach, G. W. (S '24)
Enchanted wanderer. Lyeskov, N. S. (F '25)
Encounters. Bowen, E. (N '24)
Encyclopedia of music and musicians. Pratt, W. S., ed. (Je '24)
End of Fiammetta. Taylor, R. A. (Ja '25)
Enemies. See Jealousy. Artsybashev, M. P. (Ap '24)
Engineering
  Harbarger, S. A. English for engineers. (Ap '24)

Tables, calculations, etc.

  Hewes, L. I., and Seward, H. L. Design of diagrams for engineering formulas. (S '24)
England

Biography

  Benson, A. C. Memories and friends. (Je '24)
  Hamilton, M. A. England's labour rulers. (S '24)

Description and travel

  Brooks, C: S. Thread of English road. (Je '24)
  Fea, A. Where traditions linger. (My '24)
  Massingham, H. J. In praise of England. (Ja '25)
  Morley, F. V. Travels in East Anglia. (Je '24)

Social life and customs

  Beresford, J: Gossip of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. (S '24)
  Botsford, J. B. English society in the eighteenth century. (S '24)
  Coate, M. Social life in Stuart England. (D '24)
  Ditchfield, P: H. Country folk. (Ap '24)
  Fox, F. English, 1909-1922. (Ag '24)
  Horne, E. What the butler winked at. (Je '24)
  Nevill, R. H: World of fashion, 1837-1922. (Ag '24)
  Wyndham, M. M. Chronicles of the eighteenth century. (F '25)
England's labour rulers. Hamilton, M. A. (S '24)
England's reawakening. Hunter, A. (O '24)
English, 1909-1922. Fox, F. (Ag '24)
English drama
  Adams, J. Q., ed. Chief pre-Shakespearean dramas. (F '25)
  Chambers, E. K. Elizabethan stage. (Je '24)
  Vernon, F. Twentieth century theatre. (D '24)

Bibliography

  Logasa, H., and Ver Nooy, W., comps. Index to one-act plays. (Ja '25)

Collections

  Marriott, J. W., comp. One-act plays of today. (Ja '25)

History and criticism

  Morgan, A. E. Tendencies of modern English drama. (S '24)
English for engineers. Harbarger, S. A. (Ap '24)
English language
  Kent, R. G. Language and philology. (My '24)
  Mason, W: L., comp. Troublesome words and how to use them. (Mr '24)

Business English

  Hall, S: R. Business writing. (F '25)
  Whipple, T: H. B. Principles of business writing. (F '25)

Rhetoric

  Bezard, J. My class in composition. (Je '24)
  Harbarger, S. A. English for engineers. (Ap '24)
  Manly, J: M., and Rickert, E. Writer's index of good form. (Ag '24)

Rime

  Walker, J: Rhyming dictionary of the English language. (F '25)
English literature
  Bidwell, A. T., and Rosenstiel, I. D. Places of English literature. (S '24)
  Bullen, A. H. Elizabethans. (S '24)

History and criticism

  Albert, E: History of English literature. (S '24)
  Overton, G. M. Cargoes for Crusoes. (N '24)
  Saintsbury, G: E: B. Collected essays and papers, 1875-1920. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
English poetry
  Drinkwater, J: Victorian poetry. (My '24)
  Fausset, H. I'A. Studies in idealism. (Ap '24)
  Noyes, A. Some aspects of modern poetry. (Ja '25)
  Squire, J: C. Essays on poetry. (Je '24)
  Wells, H: W. Poetic imagery. (N '24)

Collections

  Benjamin, H. M. and L: S., comps. Anthology of humorous verse. (O '24)
  Binyon, L., comp. Golden treasury of modern lyrics. (F '25)
  Bridges, R. S., comp. Chilswell book of English poetry. (Je '24)
  De la Mare, W. J:, comp. Come hither. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Drinkwater, J:, ed. Anthology of English verse. (N '24)
  Elliott, G: R., and Foerster, N., eds. English poetry of the nineteenth century. (Ap '24)
  Gordon, M., and King, M. B., comps. Verse of our day. (Ap '24)
  Meynell, A. C. School of poetry. (S '24)
  Morris, J., and Adams, St C., comps. and eds. Book of friendship verse. (Ja '25)
  Moult, T:, ed. Best poems of 1922. (My '24)
  Oxford poetry, 1923. (My '24)
  Richards, G. M., comp. Magic carpet. (O '24)
  Stevenson, B. E. Famous single poems. (My '24)
  Strong, L. A. G: Best verse for 1923. (Ap '24)
  Strong, L. A. G:, ed. By haunted stream. (Ja '25)
  Week-end book. (D '24)
  Willcox, L., comp. The torch. (F '25)

History and criticism

  Hoyt, A. S. Spiritual message of modern English poetry. (Ag '24)
  Welby, T. E. Popular history of English poetry. (O '24)
English poetry of the nineteenth century. Elliott, G: R., and Foerster, N., eds. (Ap '24)
English secret. De Sélincourt, B. (Ap '24)
English society of the eighteenth century. Botsford, J. B. (S '24)
Enjoyment and use of color. Sargent, W. (Je '24)
Entertainments
  Dayton, H. S., and Barratt, L. B. Book of entertainments and theatricals. (Ap '24)
Enticement. Arden, C., pseud. (F '25)
Entranced. Flandrau, G. H. (Ja '25)
Enzio's kingdom. Percy, W: A. (Je '24)
Epigrams
  Lawson, J. G., comp. World's best epigrams. (Ag '24)
Episodes before thirty. Blackwood, A. (Mr '24)

Epitaphs
De la Mare, W. J: Ding dong bell. (S '24)
Epithalamium. Chardonne, J. (Ag '24)
Epochs in Buddhist history. Saunders, K. J. (Ag '24)

Erasmus, Desiderius
Huizinga, J. Erasmus. (F '25)
Erasmus. Huizinga, J. (F '25)

Errors, Popular
Ackermann, A. S. E. Popular fallacies. (Ag '24)
Hering, D. W. Foibles and fallacies of science. (Ja '25)
Escape. Brooks, A. (Ag '24)

Eskimos
Flaherty, R. J. and F. H. My Eskimo friends. (Ja '25)

Essays
Agate, J. E. Fantasies and impromptus. (F '25)
Asquith, H. H: Studies and sketches. (Ag '24)
Baring, M. Punch and Judy. (D '24)
Birrell, A. More obiter dicta. (N '24)
Bolitho, W:, pseud. Leviathan. (O '24)
Boyd, E: A: Portraits: real and imaginary. (Ja '25)
Broun, H. C. Sitting on the World. (F '25)
Buckrose, J. E., pseud. What I have gathered. (D '24)
Cabell, J. B. Straws and prayer-books. (D '24)
Chapman, J: J. Letters and religion. (Je '24)
Dell, F. Looking at life. (My '24)
De Sélincourt, B. English secret. (Ap '24)
Eliot, C: W: Late harvest. (Ap '24)
Ellis, H. Impressions and comments. (Ja '25)
Frank, W. D: Salvos. (My '24)
Gobineau, A. Golden flower. (F '25)
Guedalla, P. Supers and supermen. (N '24)
Hearn, L. American miscellany. (Ja '25)
Hearn, L. Creole sketches. (S '24)
Hewlett, M. H: Last essays. (Ag '24)
Hind, C: L: Life and I. (Ag '24)
Hulme, T: E. Speculations. (F '25)
Kennard, J. S. Friar in fiction. (Ap '24)
Lutoslawski, W. World of souls. (Ja '25)
Lynd, R. Blue lion. (S '24)
Machen, A. Dog and duck. (Mr '24)
Marr, G: S. Periodical essayists of the eighteenth century. (O '24)
Mencken, H: L: Prejudices: fourth series. (Ja '25)
Montague, C: E: The right place. (Ag '24)
Moore, G: Conversations in Ebury Street. (D '24)
Morley, C. D., comp. Modern essays; second series. (Ag '24)
Muir, E. Latitudes. (Je '24)
Odell, J. H: Unmailed letters. (F '25)
Pence, R. W., ed. Essays by present-day writers. (O '24)
Priestly, J B. I for one. (Ag '24)
Pritchard, F. H:, ed. Essays of to-day. (Ap '24)
Putnam, E. Master lights. (Je '24)
Repplier, A. Under dispute. (O '24)
Saintsbury, G: E: B. Last scrap book. (F '25)
Samuel, A. M. Mancroft essays. (Je '24)
Schelling, F. E. Summer ghosts and winter topics. (My '24)
Smith, P. J.- On strange altars. (Je '24)
Strachey, J: St L. River of life. (F '25)
Taylor, B. L. The East window and The car window. (Ag '24)
Utter, R. P. Pearls and pepper. (S '24)
Warner, F. L. Groups and couples. (My '24)
Wedgwood, J. C. Essays and adventures of a Labour M. P. (O '24)
Withers, P. Friends in solitude. (Je '24)
Wright, R. L. Small house and large garden. (O '24)
Essays and adventures of a Labour M. P. Wedgwood, J. C. (O '24)
Essays by present-day writers. Pence, R. W. ed. (O '24)
Essays in early Christian history. Merrill, E. T. (Je '24)
Essays in economic theory. Patten, S. N. (My '24)
Essays in European and Oriental literature. Hearn, L. (My '24)
Essays of to-day. Pritchard, F. H: ed. (Ap '24)
Essays on poetry. Squire, J: C. (Je '24)
Essentials of speech. Pelsma, J: R. (S '24)
Esquemeling, John. See Exquemelin, A. O. (S '24)

Etching
Leipnik, F. L. History of French etching. (Ja '25)
Eternal huntress. Seelig, R. (D '24)
Eternal Rome. Showerman, G. (O '24)
Ethical basis of the state. Wilde, N. (F '25)
Ethical teaching of Jesus. Scott, E. F. (My '24)

Ethics
Adler, F. Reconstruction of the spiritual ideal. (Ap '24)
Croce, B. Conduct of life. (F '25)
Givler, R. C. Ethics of Hercules. (S '24)
McDougall, W: Ethics and some modern world problems. (Ag '24)
MacKaye, J. Logic of conduct. (S '24)
Marriott, J: A. R. Economics and ethics. (Mr '24)
Otto, M. C. Things and ideals. (Ja '25)

History
Kropotkin, P. A. Ethics. (F '25)
Ethics. Kropotkin, P. A. (F '25)
Ethics and some modern world problems. McDougall, W: (Ag '24)
Ethics of Hercules. Givler, R. C. (S '24)
Ethics of journalism. Crawford, N. A. (Ag '24)
Ethics of opium. La Motte, E. N. (Ag '24)

Ethnology
Finot, J. Race prejudice. (O '24)
Huntington, E. Character of races. (F '25)
Smith, G. E. Elephants and ethnologists. (Ja '25)

Africa
Norden, H. White and black in East Africa. (Ja '25)

Europe
Stoddard, T. L. Racial realities in Europe. (D '24)

Etiquet
Eichler, L. Customs of mankind. (D '24)
Lutes, D. Gracious hostess. (Je '24)
Vogue's book of etiquette. (My '24)
Wade, M. Social usage in America. (D '24)
Eugene Field's creative years. Dennis, C: H: (D '24)
Eugène Scribe and the French theatre, 1815-1860. Arvin, N. C. (D '24)

Eugenics
Holmes, S: J. Studies in evolution and eugenics. (Ap '24)
Kammerer, P. P. R. Inheritance of acquired characteristics. (Ja '25)
Siemens, H. W. Race hygiene and heredity. (Ja '25)
Wiggam, A. E: Fruit of the family tree. (F '25)

Euripides
Lucas, F. L. Euripides and his influence. (My '24)
Euripides and his influence. Lucas, F. L. (My '24)

Europe

Biography
Huddleston, S. Those Europeans. (D '24)

Description and travel
Carpenter, F. G: The Alps, the Danube and the Near East. (N '24)
Huddleston, S. Those Europeans. (D '24)

Economic conditions
Blanc, E. T. Co-operative movement in Russia. (My '24)
Le Bon, G. World unbalanced. (O '24)

History
Benians, S. From renaissance to revolution. (S '24)

Cresson, W: P. Diplomatic portraits. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Macartney, M. H: H. Five years of European chaos. (S '24)
Mowat, R. B. Diplomacy of Napoleon. (N '24)
Turner, E: R. Europe, 1450-1789. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Turner, E: R. Europe since 1789. (F '25)

Politics

Graham, M. W., and Binkley, R. C. New governments of central Europe. (S '24)
Kessler, H. C. U. Germany and Europe. (Ap '24)
Le Bon, G. World unbalanced. (O '24)
Sherrill, C: H. The purple or the red. (My '24)
Stannard, H. M. Fabric of Europe. (Je '24)
Steed, H: W. Through thirty years. (F '25)

Race question

Stoddard, T. L. Racial realities in Europe. (D '24)

Europe, 1450-1789. Turner, E: R. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Europe since 1789. Turner, E: R. (F '25)
European literature in the nineteenth century. Croce, B. (Ja '25)
European war, 1914-1919
These eventful years. (S '24)
Steed, H: W. Through thirty years. (F '25)

Blockades

Parmelee, M. F. Blockade and sea power. (Ja '25)

Campaigns

Pierrefeu, J. de. Plutarch lied. (Mr '24)

Turkey and the Near East

Gilbert, V. Romance of the last crusade. (Ag '24)

Diplomatic history

Nowak, K. F. Collapse of Central Europe. (N '24)

Economic aspects

Consett, M. W: W. P:, and Daniel, O. H. Triumph of unarmed forces. (Je '24)
Enock, A. G. Problem of armaments. (Ap '24)

Finance

Fisk, H. E: Inter-ally debts. (N '24)

Hospitals, charities, etc.

Elliott, M. E. Beginning again at Ararat. (Ap '24)

Influence and results

Stannard, H. M. Fabric of Europe. (Je '24)

Naval operations

Frothingham, T: G. Naval history of the World war. (Ja '25)

Peace and mediation

Kellor, F., and Hatvany, A. Security against war. (F '25)

Personal narratives

Barber, T: H. Along the road. (S '24)
Gilbert, V. Romance of the last crusade. (Ag '24)
Greenwall, H. J. Scoops. (Mr '24)

Reparations

Moulton, H. G. Reparation plan. (Ja '25)

Strategy

Pierrefeu, J. de. Plutarch lied. (Mr '24)

Territorial questions

Beer, G: L: African questions at the Paris peace conference. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Arabia

Thomas, L. J. With Lawrence in Arabia. (D '24)

Austria-Hungary

Nowak, K. F. Collapse of Central Europe. (N '24)

France

Pierrefeu, J. de. Plutarch lied. (Mr '24)

Germany

Nowak, K. F. Collapse of Central Europe. (N '24)

Great Britain

Barnes, G: N. From workshop to war cabinet. (Mr '24)

Near East

Rawlinson, A. Adventures in the Near East. 1918-1922. (Ag '24)

Russia

Alexandra Feodorovna. Letters of the Tsaritsa to the Tsar. (My '24)
Hanbury-Williams, J: Emperor Nicholas II as I knew him. (Ap '24)
Paléologue. M. An ambassador's memoirs. (My '24)

South Africa

Buxton, S. C: B. General Botha. (S '24)

Everglades, Florida
Grey, Z. Tales of southern rivers. (Ja '25)
Evergreens
Bailey, L. H., ed. Cultivated evergreens. (Ap '24)
Everybody's business. Parsons, F. W. (Ap '24)
Everybody's cook book. Lord, I. E., ed. (F '25)
Everyday biology. Thomson, J: A. (My '24)
Everyday electricity. Wade, H. T. (F '25)
Everyday mysteries. Abbott, C: G. (Ag '24)
Everyday problems of American democracy. Greenan, J: T., and Meredith, A. B. (O '24)
Everyday psychology for teachers. Bolton, F: E. (Ag '24)
Everyone's book of the weather. Williams, A. F. (My '24)
Everywhere. Landor, A. H: S. (Ja '25)
Eve's lover. Clifford, L. (Je '24)
Evidence (law)
Mitchell, C: A. Expert witness. (Ap '24)
Evil vineyard. Hay, M. (Ag '24)
Evoe of Punch. See Knox, E: G: V. (D '24)
Evolution
Coulter, J: M. and M. C. Where evolution and religion meet. (Je '24)
Dawson, M. Nineteenth century evolution and after. (Ap '24)
Holmes, S: J. Studies in evolution and eugenics. (Ap '24)
Kellogg, V. L. Evolution. (O '24)
Lodge, O. J. Making of man. (Ag '24)
McDowall, S. A. Evolution, knowledge and revelation. (Ag '24)
Smith, G. E. Evolution of man. (O '24)
Thomson, J: A. What is man? (Ap '24)
Evolution, knowledge and revelation McDowall, S. A. (Ag '24)
Evolution of French Canada. Bracq, J. C. (Ja '25)
Evolution of man. Smith, G. E. (O '24)
Excavations (archeology)
Baikie, J. Century of excavation in the land of the Pharaohs. (Ap '24)
Except ye be born again. Cabot, P. (F '25)
Executives
Bloomfield, D., comp. and ed. Modern executive. (Ag '24)
Schell, E. H. Technique of executive control. (N '24)
Exercise
Crampton, C: W. Physical exercise for daily use. (O '24)
Exodus. Rubinstein, H. F., and Glover, H. (Je '24)
Expectancy. Eyton, J: S. (N '24)
Experience
Bentley, I: M. Field of psychology. (Ja '25)
Follett, M. P. Creative experience. (Ag '24)
Expert witness. Mitchell, C: A. (Ap '24)
Explorers
Buchan, J: Last secrets. (Je '24)
Expressionism
Scheffauer, H. G. New vision in the German arts. (Ag '24)
Eyeless sight. Romains, J., pseud. (S '24)
Eyes of Max Carrados. Bramah, E. (Je '24)

Fabric of the loom. Watts, M. (D '24)
Fabulous forties. Minnigerode, M. (Ap '24)

Factory management
Alford, L. P., ed. Management's handbook. (F '25)
Lansburgh, R: H. Industrial management. (Je '24)
Lichtner, W: O: Planned control in manufacturing. (S '24)

The failure. Papini, G. (My '24)

Fairy tales
Eliot, E. A. Buttercup days. (S '24)
Finger, C: J. Tales from silver lands. (N '24)

Faith
Brown, C: R. Why I believe in religion. (Je '24)

False dawn. Wharton, E. (Ag '24)

Family
Rathbone, E. F. Disinherited family. (Ag '24)

Famous crimes and criminals. Stevens, C. L. M. (D '24)
Famous sculptors of America. McSpadden, J. W. (Ja '25)
Famous single poems. Stevenson, B. E. (My '24)
Famous tragedy of the Queen of Cornwall. Hardy, T: (Ap '24)
Fangs of the serpent. Fox, G: R. (Ag '24)
Fannie Fox's cook book. Fox, F. F., and Schwartz, L. S. (Ap '24)
Fantasies and impromptus. Agate, J. E. (F '25)
Far Eastern jaunts. Collins, G. (Ja '25)
A far land. Ostenso, M. (F '25)

Farigoule, Louis. See Romains, J., pseud. (S '24)

Farington, Joseph
Farington, J. Farington diary. (N '24)

Farington diary. Farington, J. (N '24)
Farm cook and rule book. Nichols, N. B. (Ap '24)
Farm credits in the United States and Canada. Morman, J. B. (Ja '25)

Farm life
Atkeson, M. M. Woman on the farm. (F '25)
McMillen, W. Farming fever. (S '24)

Farm produce

Marketing

Hedrick, W. O. Economics of a food supply. (Ag '24)

Farmer and his farm. App, F., and Woodward, C. R. (N '24)
Farming fever. McMillen, W. (S '24)
Fata Morgana. Vajda, E. (S '24)

Fauche-Borel, Louis
Gosselin, L: L. T. Two royalist spies of the French revolution. (Je '24)

Fear
Walsh, W: S. Mastery of fear. (O '24)

Federal centralization. Thompson, W. (My '24)

Federal government
Thompson, W. Federal centralization. (My '24)

Federal income taxes. Rossmoore, E. E. (Mr '24)

Fiction (books about)
Brewster, D., and Burrell, A. Dead reckonings in fiction. (Ja '25)
Collins, J. Taking the literary pulse. (Je '24)

Bibliography

Bacon, C., comp. Standard catalog, fiction section. (Ap '24)

Fiction (classified by subject)

Adolescence

De Sélincourt, H. One little boy. (Ap '24)
Linford, M. Broken bridges. (S '24)
Webster, H: K. The innocents. (D '24)

Adventure

Abbott, J. La Roux. (Ja '25)
Barbour, R. H: Spaniard's cave. (Ja '25)
Beck, L. A. Treasure of Ho. (Je '24)
Bindloss, H. Carson of Red river. (D '24)
Bower, B. M., pseud. Eagle's wing. (Mr '24)
Boyd, T: A. Dark cloud. (O '24)
Bridges, R. Rats' castle. (D '24)
Burroughs, E. R. Land that time forgot. (N '24)
Clarke, L. South of the Rio Grande. (Ag '24)
Coolidge, D. Scalp-lock. (Mr '24)
Cunningham, E. Trail to Apacaz. (D '24)
Erskine, L. Y. Laughing rider. (Ap '24)
Esménard, J. d'. Red gods. (Ap '24)
Friel, A. O. King of No Man's Land. (My '24)
Friend, O. J. Round-up. (Je '24)
Green, F. Z R wins. (O '24)
Greene, L. P. The Major—diamond buyer. (F '25)
Grimshaw, B. E. Sands of Oro. (Mr '24)
Haggard, H: R. Heu-Heu. (Je '24)
Hayes, L. Thirtieth piece of silver. (Ja '25)
Heller, F., pseud. Grand Duke's finances. (Ja '25)
Hendryx, J. B. At the foot of the rainbow. (N '24)
Hough, E. Mother of gold. (Mr '24)
Husband, J. Citadel. (D '24))
Jepson, S. Sutton papers. (D '24)
MacGrath, H. Green stone. (N '24)
Mackenzie, C. Old man of the sea. (D '24)
McNeile, C. Jim Maitland. (F '25)
Masefield, J: Sard Harker. (D '24)
Miller, W. H. Medicine gold. (N '24)
Nordhoff, C: B. Pearl lagoon. (Ja '25)
Nordhoff, C: B. Picaro. (Ja '25)
Pertwee, R. Treasure trail. (D '24)
Rutledge, M. Sad adventurers. (O '24)
Sabin, E. L. City of the sun. (Ag '24)
Shanks, E: B. Richest man. (S '24)
Shiel, M. P. Lord of the sea. (D '24)
Small, A. J. Frozen trail. (S '24)
Stacpoole, H. de V. S. Golden ballast. (N '24)
Stevenson, B. E. Storm-center. (Mr '24)
Taine, J: Purple sapphire. (F '25)
Watson, R. Gordon of the lost lagoon. (O '24)
Williamson, C: N. and A. M. Lady from the air. (Ag '24)
Wylie, I. A. R. Ancient fires. (Ag '24)

Advertising

Burlingame, R. You too. (Ap '24)
Owen, J: The hoarding. (Ap '24)

Animal stories

Foote, J: T. Pocono Shot. (Ja '25)
Glanville, E. Claw and fang. (Ap '24)
Hawkes, C. Gentleman from France. (Ag '24)
Terhune, A. P. Tiger's claw. (D '24)
Terhune, A. P. Treve. (Mr '24)

Artist life

Hougham, A. Hammer marks. (N '24)
Shenton, E: Gray beginning. (S '24)
Speakman, H. This above all. (F '25)

Baseball stories

Barbour, R. H: Infield rivals. (S '24)

Business

Brace, E. Commencement. (O '24)
Perrin, C., pseud. Green scarf. (O '24)
Wycliffe, J: Against the tide. (O '24)

Character studies

Adams, S: H. Siege. (Mr '24)
Ades, A. Naked king. (Ja '25)
Baring, M. C. (S '24)
Benson, S. Pipers and a dancer. (N '24)
Burt, S. Interpreter's house. (Mr '24)
Cannan, G. House of prophecy. (D '24)
Cannan, G. Sembal. (Ag '24)
Coalfleet, P. Solo. (S '24)
Conrad, L. H. Temper. (Mr '24)
Cozzens, J. G. Confusion. (My '24)
Crane, M. Sara of Upper Dam. (D '24)
Cross, R. Golden cocoon. (My '24)
Dane, C., pseud. Wandering stars. (My '24)
Dawson, C. Coast of folly. (Mr '24)
De Knoop, F. Pauline. (Mr '24)
Edginton, M. Triumph. (Ap '24)
Ertz, S. Nina. (N '24)
Ferber, E. So Big. (Mr '24)

Frederick, J. G: Two women. (Ap '24)
Hermann, G. Betty Geybert. (S '24)
Hougham, A. Hammer marks. (N '24)
Hummel, G: F. Subsoil. (O '24)
Irons, I. Simples. (F '25)
Kaye-Smith, S. Isle of thorns. (Ag '24)
Kelland, C. B. Steadfast heart. (Mr '24)
Kelley, E. M. Wings. (N '24)
Leech, M. Back of the book. (N '24)
McClure, R. E. Dominant blood. (F '25)
Marshall, A. Anthony Dare's progress. (N '24)
Marshall, A. Education of Anthony Dare. (Je '24)
Mason, C. High way. (Ap '24)
Masters, E. L. Mirage. (Je '24)
Merrel, C. Miss Pilgrim's progress. (F '25)
Mitchell, R. C. White stone. (F '25)
O'Shaughnessy, E. L. Viennese medley. (D '24)
Oursler, F. Behold this dreamer! (My '24)
Parker, C. Jenny the joyous. (Ag '24)
Philippe, C: L: A simple story. (Je '24)
Poole, E. Avalanche. (Ag '24)
Raymond, E. Damascus gate. (Ap '24)
Shenton, E: Gray beginning. (S '24)
Sidgwick, E. Laura. (F '25)
Sinclair, M. Cure of souls. (Mr '24)
Smith, H: J. Josslyn. (Ag '24)
Solano, S. Uncertain feast. (N '24)
Spitzer, M. Who would be free. (N '24)
Stevenson, L: L. Big game. (Je '24)
Swinnerton, F. A. Young Felix. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Walpole, H. S. The old ladies. (D '24)
Wharton, A. P., pseud. Be good, sweet maid. (O '24)
Williams, W. W. I. the king. (My '24)
Wiltshire, M. Patricia Ellen. (N '24)

Cheerful stories

Choate, P. King who went on strike. (Ap '24)
Clouston, J. S. Lunatic still at large. (Ag '24)
Colver, A. M. Dear pretender. (My '24)
Douglas, O., pseud. Pink sugar. (S '24)
Forbes, R. E. Transactions of Oliver Prince. (S '24)
Hannay, J. O. King Tommy. (Je '24)
Hewlett, W: White Stacks. (Je '24)
Howard, F. M. Old firm. (S '24)
Hutten zum Stolzenberg, B. von. Pam at fifty. (Je '24)
Knight, G. Marriage for two. (S '24)
Locke, W: J: Coming of Amos. (O '24)
Lucas, E: V. Advisory Ben. (Ag '24)
Lutz, G. H. Re-creations. (S '24)
Lynch, B. Perfect day. (Je '24)
Mackail, D. G: Summertime. (Mr '24)
Morley, C. D., and Marquis, D. Pandora lifts the lid. (Ag '24)
Neville, N. Safety first. (N '24)
Oppenheim, E. P. Inevitable millionaires. (F '25)
Ruck, B. Leap year girl. (Ag '24)
Sampson, E. S. Masquerading lady. (Ja '25)
Smith, H. Pollyanna of the orange blossoms. (O '24)
Snaith, J: C. There is a tide. (Je '24)
Straus, R. Unseemly adventure. (O '24)
Tompkins, J. W. Line a day. (Ag '24)
Whitechurch, V: L. Bishop out of residence. (O '24)
Williams, B. A. Audacity. (My '24)
Wilson, H. L. Professor, how could you! (D '24)
Wodehouse, P. G. Leave it to Psmith. (Ap '24)

Children, stories about

Charskaya, L. A. Little Princess Nina. (Ja '25)
Cobb, I. S. Goin' on fourteen. (D '24)
Marguerltte, P., and V. Poum. (Ag '24)
Williams, J. L. Not wanted. (My '24)

Circus life

May, E. C. Cuddy of the white tops. (S '24)
Root, H. W. Tommy with the big tents. (Je '24)

Crime and criminals

Blake, G: Mince Collop Close. (Ap '24)
Bodenheim, M. Crazy man. (Mr '24)
Enright, R: E. Vultures of the dark. (F '25)
Heller, F., pseud. London adventures of Mr Collin. (S '24)

Divorce

Hepburn, E. Fulfillment. (Ag '24)

Eugenics

Clark, J. W. In the sight of God. (O '24)

European war

Miller, P. Natural man. (Ja '25)
Mottram, H. R. Spanish farm. (O '24)
Stallings, L. Plumes. (S '24)

Fairy tales

Housman, L. All fellows and The cloak of friendship. (Ag '24)
Stephens, J. In the land of youth. (D '24)

Family life

Aldrich, B. Mother Mason. (Ja '25)
Fisher, D. F. The home-maker. (Ag '24)
McClure, M. B. High fires. (Ap '24)
Norris, K. The Callahans and The Murphys. (My '24)

Fantasies

Barnett, A. Joyous adventurer. (Mr '24)
Bickley, F. Adventures of Harlequin. (O '24)
Bojer, J. Prisoner who sang. (My '24)
De la Mare, W. J: Henry Brocken. (Mr '24)
Dunsany, E: J: M. D. P. King of Elfland's daughter. (N '24)
Garnett, D: A man in the zoo. (Ag '24)
Irwin, M. Who will remember? (F '25)
Locke, W: J: Golden journey of Mr Paradyne. (Ja '25)
Oxenham, J: Cedar box. (F '25)
Parrish, A. and D. Lustres. (S '24)
Phillpotts, E. Lavender dragon. (Ap '24)
Powys, T. F. Black Bryony. (My '24)

Feminism

Fisher, D. F. The home-maker. (Ag '24)
Sachs, E. N. Talk. (S '24)
Stevenson, S. Surplus. (My '24)

Fishing

Foote, J: T. Wedding gift. (F '25)

Ghost stories

Benson, E: F: Visible and invisible. (My '24)

Golf

Wodehouse, P. G. Golf without tears. (Ag '24)

Gypsy stories

Bercovici, K. Iliana. (O '24)

Historical novels

Caskie, J. A. Figure in the sand. (N '24)
Jensen, J. V. Christopher Columbus. (Ap '24)
Laut, A. C. Quenchless light. (N '24)

Balkan states

Bryant, M., and McAnnally, G: H. Chronicles of a great prince. (Ja '25)

Canada

Bedford-Jones, H: J. O. Star woman. (O '24)

Constantinople

Davis, W: S. Beauty of the purple. (D '24)

Cuba

Gerould, G. H. Filibuster. (S '24)

England

Barrington, E. Divine lady. (S '24)

France

Aminoff, L. Success. (Je '24)
Stilson, C: B. Ace of blades. (S '24)

Italy

Manzoni, A. The bethrothed. (O '24)

Napoleonic era

Ollivant, A. Devil Dare. (D '24)

Fiction—Continued

Rome

Mitchison, M. When the bough breaks. (O '24)

Spain

Larreta, E. Glory of Don Ramiro. (N '24)

Turkey

Halidé Edib. Shirt of flame. (Ja '25)

United States

Cooper, C. R. Last frontier. (Ap '24)
Hergesheimer, J. Balisand. (N '24)
Hooker, F. When Geronimo rode. (My '24)
Marshall, E. Seward's folly. (S '24)
Meader, S. W. Down the big river. (Ja '25)
Page, T: N. Red riders. (N '24)

Virginia

Johnston, M. Slave ship. (D '24)

West Indies

Husband, J. Citadel. (D '24)

Humor and satire

Baerlein, H: P. B. Mariposa. (D '24)
Burke, K. White oxen. (Ja '25)
Carp, A., pseud. Augustus Carp, Esq. (O '24)
Cournos, J: The new Candide. (Je '24)
Davis, E. H. I'll show you the town. (My '24)
Ferenczy, A. Ants of Timothy Thümmel. (N '24)
Macaulay, R. Told by an idiot. (Mr '24)
Montague, C: E: Hind let loose. (Mr '24)
Mullins, H. and Gallegher, M. Paulus Fy. (D '24)
Wodehouse, P. G. Golf without tears. (Ag '24)
Wolff, W: A. The show-off, a novel. (D '24)
Woodward, W: E. Lottery. (D '24)
Wright, P: E. The shirt. (N '24)

Immigrants in America

Anthony, J. Golden village. (D '24)
Brown, B. Men of earth. (Je '24)
Putnam, N. Easy. (My '24)
Small, S. H. Fourscore. (Ja '25)
Widdemer, M. Charis sees it through. (D '24)

Jewish life

Cannan, G. Sembal. (Ag '24)
Lacretelle, J. de. Silbermann. (Ap '24)
Tharaud, J. and J. Shadow of the cross. (Mr '24)

Journalism

Lewis, E. H. Sallie's newspaper. (O '24)
Smith, H: J. Josslyn. (Ag '24)

Ku Klux Klan

Dixon, T: Black hood. (Ag '24)

Labor and laboring classes

Conrad, L. H. Temper. (Mr '24)

Law and lawyers

Elson, R. Morry. (F '25)

Letters (stories in letter form)

Harben, H: D. Love letters to a dead woman. (My '24)
Ott, O. and E. We three. (Ja '25)

Locality, Novels of

Africa

Berthoud, F. Legs Parsons. (Ag '24)
Haggard, H: R. Heu-Heu. (My '24)
Riddell, F. Kenya Mist. (Ja '25)
Stockley, C. Dalla the lion-cub. (D '24)
Stockley, C. Garden of Peril. (Mr '24))
Tharaud, J. and J. Long walk of Samba Diouf. (Mr '24)
Young, F. B. Woodsmoke. (S '24)

Alaska

Marshall, E. Seward's folly. (S '24)

Algiers

Abdullah, A. Shackled. (D '24)

Arizona

Grey, Z. Call of the canyon. (Mr '24)

Armenia

Tracy, H: C. Island in time. (Ja '25)

Australia

Lawrence, D: H., and Skinner, M. L. Boy in the bush. (D '24)
Watson, E. L. G. Innocent desires. (Ja '25)

Berlin

Borchardt, H. G. Hetty Geybert. (S '24)

Boston

Henry, B. M. Deceit. (O '24)

Brittany

Boyle, C. A. Nor all thy tears. (My '24)

Burma

East and west. (S '24)

California

Blasco Ibáñez, V. Queen Calafia. (N '24)
Cameron, M. Johndover. (Je '24)
Dunn, J. A. E. Water-bearer. (Mr '24)
Hart, J. A. Golconda bonanza. (S '24)
Luther, M. L. Boosters. (Ap '24)

Canada

Abbott, J. La Roux. (Ja '25)
Allan, L., pseud. The beast. (O '24)
Bindloss, H. Carson of Red river. (D '24)
Bindloss, H. Green timber. (My '24)
Curwood, J. O. Gentleman of courage. (S '24)
Grew, D: Two coyotes. (Ag '24)
Hendryx, J. B. At the foot of the rainbow. (N '24)
Pinkerton, R. E. Test of Donald Norton. (N '24)

Cape Cod

Lincoln, J. C. Rugged water. (D '24)

China

Beck, L. A. Treasure of Ho. (Je '24)
Miln, L. In a Shantung garden. (S '24)

Egypt

Forbes, J. R. Fool's hell. (N '24)

England

Galsworthy, J: White monkey. (D '24)
Macaulay, R. Told by an idiot. (Mr '24)
McFee, W: Race. (Je '24)
McKenna, S. Vindication. (Mr '24)
Mais, S. P. B. Prunello. (S '24)
Mordaunt, E., pseud. Reputation. (Ag '24)

England (provincial and rural)

Booth, E: C: Treble clef. (Ja '25)
Borden-Turner, M. Three pilgrims and a tinker. (Ja '25)
Buckrose, J. E., pseud. Single heart. (D '24)
Cannan, J. Misty valley. (Je '24)
Dudeney, A. Finger-post. (O '24)
Fletcher, J. S. Valley of headstrong men. (Ag '24)
Hargrave, J: Harbottle. (S '24)
Holland, B. T. A certain man. (Ag '24)
Jameson, M. S. Pitiful wife. (Mr '24)
Kaye-Smith, S. Isle of thorns. (Ag '24)
Marsh, C: F. After harvest. (O '24)
Phillpotts, E. Cheat-the-boys. (Mr '24)
Phillpotts, E. Redcliff. (D '24)
Powys, T. F. Mark only. (Ag '24)
Reid, A. Off the high road. (My '24)

Esthonia

Kallas, A. J. M. White ship. (Je '24)

Ethiopia

Heliodorus. Aethiopian romance. (D '24)

France

Locke, W: J: Coming of Amos. (O '24)
Mottram, R. H. Spanish farm. (O '24)
Sandy, I. Andorra. (S '24)
Sedgwick, A. D. Little French girl. (O '24)

Germany

Moss, G. Defeat. (Ap '24)

Glasgow

Blake, G: Mince Collop Close. (Ap '24)
Niven, F: J: Justice of the peace. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Hawaii

Ritchie, R. W. Stairway of the sun. (Mr '24)

Holland

Robbers, H. Fortunes of a household. (Je '24)

India

Blaker, R: Geoffery Castleton. (My '24)
Diver, M. Siege perilous. (O '24)
Eyton, J: S. Expectancy. (N '24)
Forster, E: M. Passage to India. (O '24)
Gompertz, M. L: A. Stella Nash. (Ja '25)
Savi, E. W. Mock majesty. (Je '24)
Steel, F. A. Law of the threshold. (D '24)

Indo-China

Esménard, J. d'. Red gods. (Ap '24)

Iowa

Suckow, R. Country people. (Ag '24)

Ireland

Byrne, D. Blind Raftery and his wife, Hilaria. (N '24)
Hackett, F. With benefit of clergy. (Je '24)
Leslie, S. Doomsland. (Ap '24)
O'Flaherty, L. Thy neighbor's wife. (Mr '24)
Stephens, J. In the land of youth. (D '24)

Italy

Thompson, V. C: Scarlet iris. (My '24)
Van Vorst, M. Sunrise. (O '24)
Wellman, R. House of hate. (D '24)

Japan

Bussenius, L. T. Honorable Miss Cherry Blossom. (N '24)
Kinney, H: W. Broken butterflies. (Ap '24)
Paris, J:, pseud. Sayonara. (My '24)

Kentucky

Magruder, M. L. Wages. (Ap '24)

Lapland

Berg, B. M. K. The motherless. (N '24)

London

Oppenheim, E. P. Passionate quest. (D '24)

Manitoba

Stead, R. J. C. Smoking flax. (F '25)

Mexico

Hough, E. Mother of gold. (Mr '24)

Mississippi

Richardson, N. That late unpleasantness. (Ja '25)

Nevada

Drago, H. S. Following the grass. (D '24)

New England

Cummings, W: Island chronicle. (Je '24)

New Guinea

Grimshaw, B. E. Sands of Oro. (Mr '24)

New Jersey

Chamberlain, G: A. Lantern on the plow. (N '24)

New Mexico

Kyne, P: B. Enchanted hill. (Ja '25)

New Orleans

King, G. E. La Dame de Sainte Hermine. (Ag '24)

New York

Gabriel, G. W. Brownstone front. (N '24)

New York (city)

Barrett, R. B. Rapture. (Mr '24)
Beer, T: Sandoval. (Ag '24)
Hughes, R. Golden ladder. (Ag '24)
Rockey, H. This woman. (Je '24)
Wharton, E. False dawn. (Ag '24)
Wharton, E. New Year's day. (Ag '24)
Wharton, E. The old maid. (Ag '24)
Wharton, E. The spark. (Ag '24)

North Carolina

Dixon, T: Black hood. (Ag '24)

Paris

Woods, A. Hairpin duchess. (Ja '25)

Pennsylvania

Martin, H. The snob. (Mr '24)

Poland

Reymont, W. S. Autumn. (D '24)

Rome

Hubbard, W. Donna Lisa. (Mr '24)

Russia

Artzybashev, M. P. The savage. (Je '24)
Rogers, L. Wine of fury. (Ag '24)
Underwood, E. Passion flower. (Je '24)

San Francisco

Rising, L. Proud flesh. (S '24)

Scotland

Douglas, O., pseud. Pink sugar. (S '24)
Graves, C. I. M. Pipers of the market place. (O '24)
Innes, J: Till a' the seas gang dry. (Je '24)
MacGill, P. Moleskin Joe. (Mr '24)
Simpson, R. Eight panes of glass. (Ap '24)
Watson, G. Amazing guest. (N '24)

South Africa

Greene, L. P. The Major—diamond buyer. (F '25)

South Sea islands

Fletcher, R. J. Gone native. (Ja '25)
Mumford, E. Wedding song. (Ja '25)
Nordhoff, C: B. Pearl lagoon. (Ja '25)
Stock, R. Uncharted waters. (N '24)
Wright, G. Pandora La Croix. (Je '24)

Spain

Espina de Serna, C. Mariflor. (Je '24)
Fish, H. F. X. Saint's theatre. (Je '24)
Paterson, I. The singing season. (S '24)

United States (middlewestern)

Aldrich, B. Mother Mason. (Ja '25)
Ashmun, M. The lake. (N '24)
Croy, H. R. F. D. no. 3. (D '24)
Hesser, E. D. Inner darkness. (Mr '24)
Montross, L. Half gods. (My '24)
Tarkington, B. The midlander. (Mr '24)
White, S. E: Glory hole. (D '24)

United States (southwestern)

Friend, O. J. Round-up. (Je '24)
Knibbs, H: H. Wild horses. (Je '24)
McCarter, M. Widening waters. (F '25)

United States (western)

Bower, B. M., pseud. Bellehelen mine. (O '24)
Brand, M. Dan Barry's daughter. (Mr '24)
Coolidge, D. Scalp-lock. (Mr '24)
Grey, Z. Call of the canyon. (Mr '24)
Grey, Z. Thundering herd. (F '25)
Mcfarlane, P: C. Tongues of flame. (Ag '24)
Morrow, H. The Devonshers. (N '24)
Mulford, C. E: Hopalong Cassidy returns. (N '24)
Mulford, C. E: Rustlers' valley. (Mr '24)
Pendexter, H. Old Misery. (O '24)
Quick, H. Invisible woman. (F '25)
Raine, W: M. Desert's price. (My '24)
Seltzer, C: A. Way of the buffalo. (O '24)
White, W: P. Twisted foot. (N '24)

Venezuela

Stribling, T: S. Red sand. (My '24)

Fiction—Continued

Venice

Roberts, C. E. M. Sails of sunset. (Ja '25)

Vienna

O'Shaughnessy, E. L. Viennese medley. (D '24)

Wales

Garstin, C. Owls' nest. (Mr '24)
Gibbon, M. M. John Peregrine's wife. (F '25)

Washington, D.C.

Williams, A. V. Spirit of the house. (Ag '24)

West Indies

Firbank, A. A. R. Prancing nigger. (My '24)

Love stories

Arlen, M., pseud. The green hat. (O '24)
Ayres, R. M. Candle light. (F '25)
Ayres, R. M. Man without a heart. (Ap '24)
Bailey, T. Peacock feathers. (Ja '25)
Balmer, E. Fidelia. (My '24)
Bell, V. C. Blindness of heart. (Mr '24)
Blasco Ibáñez, V. Queen Calafia. (N '24)
Carmichael, M. Christopher and Cressida. (F '25)
Cleugh, S. Matilda, governess of the English. (Ja '25)
Corelli, M. Love,—and the philosopher. (Mr '24)
Coxon, M. Youth wins. (Ja '25)
Frappa, J.-J. Princess and the clowns. (F '25)
Gibbs, G: F. Sackcloth and scarlet. (D '24)
Gide, A. P. G. Strait is the gate. (Mr '24)
Glyn, E. Six days. (Mr '24)
Heyer, G. Instead of the thorn. (Ag '24)
Hueston, E. Prudence's daughter. (D '24)
Jope-Slade, C. House of broken dreams. (N '24)
Magruder, M. L. Wages. (Ap '24)
Marsh, C: F. After harvest. (O '24)
Merrel, C. Love courageous. (Ag '24)
Miller, A. Priceless pearl. (O '24)
Miller, E. Y. Obligations. (O '24)
Moult, T: Comely Lass. (Ag '24)
Mumford, E. Wedding song. (Ja '25)
Newton, A. An old-fashioned romance. (Ag '24)
Newton, W. D. The brute. (S '24)
Norris, K. Rose of the world. (S '24)
Palmer, J: L. Looking after Joan. (My '24)
Panter-Downes, M. Shoreless sea. (Ag '24)
Parsons, H., pseud. The dancers. (Ap '24)
Patrick, D. pseud. All to seek. (Ag '24)
Payne, E. S. Lights along the ledges. (Ag '24)
Pedler, M. Barbarian lover. (S '24)
Pleydell-Bouverie, K. January. (O '24)
Pryce, R: Romance and Jane Weston. (D '24)
Recht, C: Rue with a difference. (N '24)
Reynolds, G. M. His second venture. (Ja '25)
Rising, L. Proud flesh. (S '24)
Roberts, C. E. M. Sails of sunset. (Ja '25)
Ruck, B. Clouded pearl. (N '24)
Ruck, B. Leap year girl. (Ag '24)
St John-Loe, G. Beggar's banquet. (Mr '24)
Samms, A. L. As it happened. (O '24)
Scarborough, H. E. Stephen the well-beloved. (D '24)
Thomas, A. E. Double cross. (O '24)
Thompson, V. C: Scarlet iris. (My '24)
Van Vorst, M. Sunrise. (O '24)
Waller, M. E. Deep in the hearts of men. (Je '24)
Watson, R. Gordon of the lost lagoon. (O '24)
Weymouth, P. All that matters. (O '24)
Williams, F. F. Viking's Rest. (O '24)
Williamson, A. M. Million dollar doll. (Je '24)
Williamson, H: Dream of fair women. (D '24)
Wynne, P. Ann's an idiot. (Mr '24)

Marriage

Arden, C., pseud. Enticement. (F '25)
Banning, M. C. Handmaid of the Lord. (D '24)
Bartley, N. I. Judd & Judd. (Mr '24)
Bottome, P. Perfect wife. (Je '24)
Chardonne, J. Epithalamium. (Ag '24)
Fergusson, H. Women and wives. (My '24)
Frankau, G. Gerald Cranston's lady. (Mr '24)
Hardinge, H. C. M. Whirlwind. (Je '24)
Jameson, M. S. Pitiful wife. (Mr '24)
Jeffery, J. E., pseud. The burden. (O '24)
McKenna, S. Commandment of Moses. (Ag '24)
Mavity, N. B. Hazard. (My '24)
Parrish, A. Semi-attached. (D '24)
Schieren, H. V: The quitter. (D '24)
Sedgwick, A. D. Little French girl. (O '24)
Seelig, R. Eternal huntress. (D '24)
Spadoni, A. Mrs Phelps' husband. (S '24)
Steele, W. D. Isles of the blest. (F '25)
Street, G. Peter was married. (O '24)
Vance, L: J. Mrs Paramor. (S '24)

Mining

Bethea, J. Bed rock. (F '25)

Moving pictures

Chester, G: R., and L. E. On the lot and off. (Je '24)

Musicians

Edginton, M. Triumph. (Ap '24)
Paton, R. Autobiography of a blackguard. (F '25)
Ramsay, J. High road. (Je '24)

Mystery stories

Asquith, H. Wind's End. (S '24)
Bailey, H: C. Mr Fortune's practice. (Mr '24)
Bramah, E. Eyes of Max Carrados. (Je '24)
Bridges, V: Red lodge. (My '24)
Buchan, J: Three hostages. (S '24)
Buck, C: N. Gentleman in pajamas. (Ap '24)
Burr, A. R. Great house in the park. (Ag '24)
Chancellor, J: Mystery of Norman's court. (My '24)
Christie, A. Man in the brown suit. (D '24)
Cole, G: D. H. Brooklyn murders. (Je '24)
Creed, S. The shot. (N '24)
Crofts, F. W. The cask. (F '25)
Curtiss, P. E. Gay conspirators. (Ja '25)
Dawson, W. Adventure in the night. (N '24)
Dejeans, E. Double house. (My '24)
Durand, M. Sincérité. (Ja '25)
Dutton, C: J. House by the road. (Ap '24)
Elvestad, S. C. S. Man who plundered the city. (F '25)
Farjeon, J. J. Master criminal. (O '24)
Fletcher, J. S. Heaven-kissed hill. (N '24)
Fletcher, J. S. King versus Wargrave. (Mr '24)
Fletcher, J. S. Mazaroff mystery. (My '24)
Fletcher, J. S. Safety pin. (Ap '24)
Fletcher, J. S. Time-worn town. (S '24)
Footner, H. Officer! (O '24)
Forman, H: J. Guilt. (My '24)
Foster, M. Humdrum house? (O '24)
Fox, G: R. Fangs of the serpent. (Ag '24)
Frank, W. D: Chalk face. (D '24)
Freeman, R. A. Blue scarab. (Mr '24)
Freeman, R. A. Red thumb-mark. (N '24)
French, J. L:, ed. Great detective stories from Voltaire to Poe. (F '25)
Gluck, S. House of the missing. (S '24)
Gluck, S. White streak. (Ag '24)
Hanshew, M. E. and T: W. Riddle of the amber ship. (Ag '24)
Hay, M. Evil vineyard. (Ag '24)
Hext, H., pseud. Who killed Cock Robin? (Je '24)
Ironside, J: 'Phone booth mystery. (O '24)
Johnson, G. E. Moon country. (F '25)
Jordan, E. G. Lady of Pentlands. (Ag '24)
Kitchin, F: H. Diversions of Dawson. (Mr '24)
Lincoln, N. S. Thirteenth letter. (O '24)
Lowndes, M. A. Terriford mystery. (Ag '24)
MacClure, V: Ark of the covenant. (Je '24)
MacGowan, A., and Newberry, P. Mystery woman. (Mr '24)
Mackail, D. G: Majestic mystery. (N '24)

Mason, A. E: W. House of the arrow. (N '24)
Moroso, J: A. Listening man. (Ag '24)
Mundy, T. Nine unknown. (D '24)
Oakley, N. and J: Clevedon case. (Ap '24)
Ostrander, I. E. Annihilation. (Mr '24)
Ostrander, I. E. Bright lights. (Ap '24)
Ostrander, I. E. Dust to dust. (Ag '24)
Ostrander, I. E. Handwriting on the wall. (S '24)
Ostrander, I. E. Liberation. (F '25)
Packard, F. L. Locked book. (D '24)
Pocock, D. A. Secret of Hallowdene farm. (S '24)
Praviel, A. Murder of Monsieur Fualdès. (Ag '24)
Rathbone, C. K. Darkened windows. (Je '24)
Reeve, A. B: Atavar. (Ag '24)
Rohmer, S., pseud. Brood of the witch-queen. (Mr '24)
Rohmer, S., pseud. Grey face. (D '24)
Souvestre, P., and Allain, M. Long arm of Fantômas. (Ag '24)
Terhune, A. P. Tiger's claw. (D '24)
Thayer, L. The key. (F '25)
Thomas, A. E. Double cross. (O '24)
Tracy, L: The token. (Ja '25)
Wallace, E. Green archer. (D '24)
Wells, C. Fourteenth key. (O '24)
Wells, C. Furthest fury. (Mr '24)
Wells, C. Prillilgirl. (D '24)
Wentworth, P. Astonishing adventure of Jane Smith. (Ap '24)
Williams, H. Thing in the woods. (Ja '25)
Williams, V. Clubfoot the avenger. (O '24)
Williams, V. Three of clubs. (S '24)
Wren, P. C. Beau Geste. (F '25)

Negro problem

Fauset, J. R. There is confusion. (My '24)
Merrick, L. Quaint companions. (Ja '25)
Sanborn, G. Veiled aristocrats. (My '24)
White, W. F. Fire in the flint. (N '24)

Negro stories

Cohen, O. R. Sunclouds. (N '24)
Firbank, A. A. R. Prancing nigger. (My '24)
McBlair, R. Mister Fish Kelly. (Ag '24)
Peterkin, J. Green Thursday. (N '24)
Wiley, H. The prowler. (F '25)

Oil industry

Gilkyson, T. W. Oil. (O '24)

Philosophical novels

Benson, A. C. Chris Gascoyne. (O '24)
Larbaud, V. A. O. Barnabooth, his diary. (F '25)

Pirates

Hutchinson, V. Great waters. (Ag '24))
Smith, A. D. H. Porto Bello gold. (D '24)

Politics

Vrooman, J. G. High road to honor. (Ja '25)

Prehistoric times

Rosny, J. H., pseud. Giant cat. (Ja '25)

Prophecies (novels of the future)

Oppenheim, E: P. Wrath to come. (My '24)
Wells, H. G: The dream. (My '24)

Pseudo-science

Burroughs, E. R. Land that time forgot. (N '24)
Kitchell, J. G. Earl of hell. (S '24)
Scarborough, H. E. Immortals. (My '24)

Psychic phenomena

Bryant, M. The heights. (Mr '24)
Poole, E. Avalanche. (Ag '24)

Psychological novels

Ashmun, M. The lake. (N '24)
Barrett, H. J. Patricia's awakening. (S '24)
Barretto, L. Conqueror passes. (Mr '24)
Bell, P. Sandra. (Ag '24)
Beresford, J. D. Unity. (D '24)
Bourget, P. C: J. The gaol. (Ja '25)
Bromfield, L: Green bay tree. (Ap '24)
Brooks, A. Escape. (Ag '24)
Coyle, K. Widow's house. (O '24)
De Voto, B. Crooked mile. (D '24)
Forman, H: J. Sudden wealth. (D '24)
Friedlaender, V. H. Color of youth. (N '24)
George, W. L. Triumph of Gallio. (N '24)
Grainger, B. The hussy. (Mr '24)
Henle, J. Sound and fury. (N '24)
Hichens, R. S. After the verdict. (O '24)
Howard, S. Three flights up. (Ja '25)
Jones, E. B. C. Inigo Sandys. (Je '24)
Keable, R. Recompense. (Ap '24)
Larminie, M. R. Deep meadows. (Ag '24)
Larsen, J. A. Philosopher's stone. (S '24)
Masters, E. L. Mirage. (Je '24)
Maxwell, W: B. Elaine at the gates. (D '24)
Miller, P. Natural man. (Ja '25)
Monkhouse, A. N. My daughter Helen. (N '24)
O'Higgins, H. J. Julie Cane. (N '24)
Pascal, E. Dark swan. (My '24)
Paul, E. H. Imperturbe. (Je '24)
Richardson, D. Book of Blanche. (Mr '24)
Sarawak, S. Toys. (My '24)
Sinclair, M. Arnold Waterlow. (N '24)
Spadoni, A. Mrs Phelps' husband. (S '24)
Stallings, L. Plumes. (S '24)
Stayton, F. Passionate adventure. (F '25)
Wellman, R. House of hate. (D '24)
Widdemer, M. Charis sees it through. (D '24)
Wills, R. Harvey Landrum. (Ja '25)

Reincarnation

Haweis, S. Egyptian love. (F '25)

Religion

Church, S: H. Flames of faith. (Ap '24)
McClure, M. B. High fires. (Ap '24)
Mackenzie, C. Heavenly ladder. (N '24)
Mackenzie, C. Parson's progress. (Mr '24)
Mason, C. High way. (Ap '24)

Religious psychology

Maxwell, W: B. Elaine at the gates. (D '24)
Quillen, R. Path Wharton found. (Ja '25)

Roman Catholic faith

Carmichael, M. Christopher and Cressida. (F '25)
Fish, H. F. X. Saint's theatre. (Je '24)
Huysmans, J. K. The oblate. (O '24)

Romance

Anderson, R. G. For love of a sinner. (Je '24)
Bordeaux, H: Gardens of Omar. (Ag '24)
Brighouse, H. Captain Shapely. (Je '24)
Broster, D. K. Mr Rowl. (Je '24)
Cabell, J. B. High place. (My '24)
Celestina. (O '24)
Chipp, E. Many waters. (S '24)
Farrere, C., pseud. Thomas the Lambkin. (D '24)
Goodwin, E. Stiletto. (O '24)
Husband, J. Citadel. (D '24)
McCutcheon, G: B. East of the setting sun. (D '24)
Middleton, E. Chance—and the woman. (N '24)
Orczy, E. Honourable Jim. (My '24)
Overton, G. Thousand and first night. (Mr '24)
Paterson, I. The singing season. (S '24)
Sabatini, R. Bardelys the magnificent. (Ag '24)
Sabatini, R. Mistress Wilding. (My '24)
Sabatini, R. Saint Martin's summer. (D '24)
Schinke, N. S. Devil Wolf. (My '24)
Sillars, J: Gavin Douglas. (D '24)
Stilson, C: B. Ace of blades. (S '24)
Weyman, S. J: Traveller in the fur cloak. (Je '24)

School and college life

Benson, E: F: David Blaize of King's. (N '24)
Clark, E. H. Daughters of Eve. (D '24)
Fitch, A. P. None so blind. (Ap '24)
Hilton, J. Passionate year. (My '24)
Marks, P. Plastic age. (Mr '24)
Phillpotts, E. Human boy's diary. (Je '24)
Silvers, E. R. Barry the undaunted. (S '24)
Wiley, J: Education of Peter. (Ap '24)

Fiction—Continued

Sea stories

Collins, D. Ordeal. (S '24)
Dingle, A. E. Wide waters. (Ja '25)
French, J. L:, ed. Sagas of the seas. (Ja '25)
Howard, F. M. Old firm. (S '24)
Kellermann, B. The sea. (Mr '24)
Mason, A. Cook and the captain bold. (My '24)
Newton, W. D. The brute. (S '24)
Paine, R. D. Four bells. (Ap '24)
Paine, R. D. Privateers of '76. (My '24)
Stanford, A. B. City out of the sea. (Ag '24)
Wetjen, A. R: Captains all. (Ag '24)
Wilson, J: F. Somewhere at sea. (Mr '24)

Short stories

Arlen, M., pseud. These charming people. (My '24)
Armstrong, M. Bazaar. (O '24)
Bennett, A. Elsie and the child. (D '24)
Bercovici, K. Iliana. (O '24)
Booth, E: C: Miss Parkworth. (S '24)
Bowen, E. Encounters. (N '24)
Bramah, E. Eyes of Max Carrados. (Je '24)
Brown, B. Men of earth. (Je '24)
Bullett, G. Street of the eye. (D '24)
Burke, K. White oxen. (Ja '25)
Child, R: W. Fresh waters. (F '25)
Clifford, L. Eve's lover. (Je '24)
Cohen, O. R. Sunclouds. (N '24)
Connell, R: Apes and angels. (Je '24)
Conrad, J. Shorter tales of Joseph Conrad. (Ja '25)
Deland, M. W. New Friends in Old Chester. (Ag '24)
Dial (periodical). Stories from the Dial. (O '24)
Diver, M. Siege perilous. (O '24)
Eaton, R:, ed. Best continental short stories of 1923-1924. (Ja '25)
Eaton, R:, ed. Best French short stories, 1923-1924. (F '25)
Finger, C: J. In lawless lands. (My '24)
Flaubert, G. Three tales. (F '25)
France, A. Merrie tales of Jacques Tournebroche. (Ja '25)
Frankau, G. Men, maids and Mustard-Pot. (N '24)
Freeman, R. A. Blue scarab. (Mr '24)
French, J. L:, ed. Great detective stories from Voltaire to Poe. (F '25)
Georgian stories, 1924. (S '24)
Gibbs, P. H. Little novels of nowadays. (D '24)
Harris, F. Undream'd of shores. (Ag '24)
Hastings, W: T., and others, eds. Short stories. (F '25)
Heller, F., pseud. London adventures of Mr Collin. (S '24)
Hémon, L: My fair lady. (Ap '24)
Hichens, R. The last time. (Mr '24)
Hoffmann, E. T. W. Weird tales. (Ap '24)
Howard, S. Three flights up. (Ja '25)
Huxley, A. L. Young Archimedes. (N '24)
Kallas, A. J. White ship. (Je '24)
Kenney, R. Pedlar's pack. (Ag '24)
Kitchin, F: H. Diversions of Dawson. (Mr '24)
Lardner, R. W. How to write short stories. (Ag '24)
Mansfield, K., pseud. Little girl. (D '24)
Mason, A. Cook and the captain bold (My '24)
Maupassant, G. de. Day and night stories. (O '24)
Merz, C: Centerville, U.S.A. (N '24)
Midland (periodical). Stories from the Midland. (My '24)
Miller, A. D. Are parents people? (Ap '24)
Mitchison, N. When the bough breaks. (O '24)
Moss, G. Defeat. (Ap '24)
New York guild for the Jewish blind. Aces. (F '25)
Noyes, A. Hidden player. (Ja '25)
O. Henry memorial award. Prize stories of 1923. (Ap '24)
O'Brien, E: J. H., ed. Best short stories of 1923. (Ag '24)
O'Brien, E: J. H., and Cournos, J: Best British short stories. (Mr '24)
Pedler, M. Waves of destiny. (D '24)
Perry, L. Touchdowns. (D '24)
Peterkin, J. Green Thursday. (N '24)
Porter, E. Hustler Joe. (O '24)
Reid, A. Off the high road. (My '24)
Richter, C. Brothers of no kin. (Mr '24)
Rinehart, M. Temperamental people. (N '24)
Robinson, K. A., comp. Contemporary short stories. (F '25)
Sackville-West, V. M. The heir. (Mr '24)
Stern, G. B. Smoke rings. (Ag '24)
Stevenson, R. L: Short stories. (Je '24)
Stock, R. Uncharted waters. (N '24)
Train, E. Son. (Ap '24)
Twenty-three stories. (F '25)
Vachell, H. A. Quinney's adventures. (Ag '24)
Verhaeren, E. Five tales. (F '25)
Vorse, M. Fraycar's fist. (Je '24)
Watson, E. L. G. Innocent desires. (Ja '25)
Wetjen, A. R: Captains all. (Ag '24)
Williams, B. C., comp. Thrice told tales. (S '24)
Wilson, J: F. Somewhere at sea. (Mr '24)
Wodehouse, P. G. Golf without tears. (Ag '24)

Slavery

Johnston, M. Slave ship. (D '24)

Social conditions and problems

Cram, M. The tide. (Ja '25)
Flandrau, G. H. Entranced. (Ja '25)
Galsworthy, J: White monkey. (D '24)
Hargrave, J: Harbottle. (S '24)
Herrick, R. Waste. (Je '24)
Irwin, W. A. Golden bed. (O '24)
Laurie, M. Shameless innocent. (F '25)
McKenna, S. To-morrow and to-morrow. . . (N '24)
Phillips, H: A. Other people's lives. (Je '24)
Rothery, A. E. High altar. (N '24)
Train, A. Needle's eye. (N '24)
Watts, M. Fabric of the loom. (D 24)
Wells, H. G: The dream. (My '24)

Society novels

Arlen, M., pseud. These charming people. (My '24)
Bibesco, E. The fir and the palm. (Mr '24)
Davis, B. One way street. (Ja '25)
Fabian, W., pseud. Sailors' wives. (N '24)
Henry, B. M. Deceit. (O '24)
Hudson, S. Tony. (Je '24)
Johnson, O. M. Blue blood. (Ap '24)
McKenna, S. Vindication. (Mr '24)
Towne, C: H. Gay ones. (My '24)

Sport and recreation

Perry, L. Touchdowns. (D '24)

Supernatural phenomena

Benson, E: F: Visible and invisible. (My '24)

Theater and stage life

Alexander, E. Rôles. (My '24)
Dell, E. M. Unknown quantity. (F '25)
Oliver, R. Back stage. (S '24)

Tramps

Garahan, M. Stiffs. (Mr '24)
Rath, E. J., pseud. Dark chapter. (S '24)

Translated stories

Danish

Elvestead, S. C. S. Man who plundered the city. (F '25)
Rung, O: Shadows that pass. (S '24)

Dutch

Robbers, H. Fortunes of a household. (Je '24)
Scharten-Antink, E. and M. House full of people. (My '24)

Finnish

Kallas, A. J. M. White ship. (Je '24)

Flemish

Timmermans, F. Pallieter. (N '24)

French

Ades, A. Naked king. (Ja '25)
Apollinaire, G. Poet assassinated. (My '24)
Bordeaux, H: Gardens of Omar. (Ag '24)
Bourget, P. C: J. The gaol. (Ja '25)
Céard, H: A lovely day. (N '24)
Chardonne, J. Epithalamium. (Ag '24)
Dorgelès, R. Saint Magloire. (Ag '24)
Eaton, R:, ed. Best French short stories, 1923-1924. (F '25)
Esménard, J. d'. Red gods. (Ap '24)
Estaunié, E. Call of the road. (Ap '24)
Farrere, C., pseud. Thomas the Lambkin. (D '24)
Flaubert, G. Three tales. (F '25)
France, A. Merrie tales of Jacques Tournebroché. (Ja '25)
Frappa, J.-J. Princess and the clowns. (F '25)
Hémon, L: My fair lady. (Ap '24)
Lacretelle, J. de. Silbermann. (Ap '24)
Margueritte, P., and V. Poum. (Ag '24)
Maupassant, G. de. Day and night stories. (O '24)
Morand, P. Green shoots. (Je '24)
Philippe, C: L: A simple story. (Je '24)
Praviel, A. Murder of Monsieur Fualdés. (Ag '24)
Proust, M. Within a budding grove. (O '24)
Rosny, J. H., pseud. Giant cat. (Ja '25)
Sandy, I. Andorra. (S '24)
Souvestre, P., and Allain, M. Long arm of Fantômas. (Ag '24)
Tharaud, J. and J. Long walk of Samba Diouf. (Mr '24)
Tharaud, J. and J. Shadow of the cross. (Mr '24)
Verhaeren, E. Five tales. (F '25)

German

Hoffmann, E. T. W. Weird tales. (Ap '24)
Mann, T: Buddenbrooks. (Mr '24)
Schnitzler, A. Dr Graesler. (Ap '24)
Wassermann, J. Gold. (Ag '24)

Italian

Bandello, M. Tragical tales. (Ja '25)
Manzoni, A. The betrothed. (O '24)

Norwegian

Bojer, J. Pilgrimage. (O '24)
Hamsun, K. Children of the age. (Mr '24)

Polish

Reymont, W. S. Autumn. (D '24)

Russian

Aksakov, S. T. Chronicles of a Russian family. (N '24)
Artzybashev, M. P. The savage. (Je '24)
Gusev, S. I. Land of the fathers. (D '24)
Landau, M. A. Saint Helena. (Mr '24)
Lyeskov, N. S. Cathedral folk. (Mr '24)
Lyeskov, N. S. Enchanted wanderer. (F '25)

Spanish

Baroja y Nessi, P. Red Dawn. (D '24)
Celestina. (O '24)
Espina de Serna, C. Mariflor. (Je '24)
Espina de Serna, C. Red beacon. (Ag '24)
Larreta, E. Glory of Don Ramiro. (N '24)
Pérez de Ayala, R. Fox's paw. (N '24)
Ruiz, J. M. Don Juan. (Ap '24)

Swedish

Berg, B. M. K. The motherless. (N '24)
Bergman, H. God's orchid. (Mr '24)
Heller F., pseud. Grand Duke's finances. (Ja '25)
Heller, F., pseud. London adventures of Mr Collin. (S '24)

Whaling

Tucker, G: F. Boy whaleman. (F '25)

Wheat

Garrett, G. Satan's bushel. (Mr '24)

Women

Morris, G. Keeping the peace. (N '24)

Young people

Clark, E. H. Daughters of Eve. (D '24)
Gibbs, P. H. Heirs apparent. (Ap '24)
McFee, W: Race. (Je '24)
Mavity, N. B. Hazard. (My '24)
Taylor, K. H. Tony from America. (O '24)
Tuckerman, A. Galloping dawns. (S '24)
Webster, H: K. The innocents. (D '24)
Wiley, J: Education of Peter. (Ap '24)

Fiction as she is wrote. Knox, E. G: V. (D '24)
Fidelia. Balmer, E. (My '24)
Field, Eugene
  Dennis, C: H: Eugene Field's creative years. (D '24)
Field of psychology. Bentley, I: M. (Ja '25)
Fields of adventure. Smith, E. (F '25)
Fifty years in Madagascar. Sibree, J. (D '24)
Fighting foes too small to see. McFarland, J. (Mr '24)
Figure in the sand. Caskie, J. A. (N '24)
Figures in modern literature. Priestley, J: B. (N '24)
Filibuster. Gerould, G. H. (S '24)
Finance
  Jensen, J. P. Problems of public finance. (N '24)

Europe

  Fisk, H. E: Inter-ally debts. (N '24)
Financial organization and management of business. Gerstenberg, C: W: (Ag '24)
Finger-post. Dudeney, A. (O '24)
The fir and the palm. Bibesco, E. (Mr '24)
Fire in the flint. White, W. F. (N '24)
Firearms
  McAdoo, W: When the court takes a recess. (N '24)
First aid in illness and injury
  Copeland, R. S: Health book. (O '24)
First aid to animals. Leonard, J: L. (F '25)
First aid to the opera goer. Watkins, M. F. (D '24)
First days of knowledge. Kummer, F: A. (Je '24)
First one hundred years of American geology. Merrill, G: P. (F '25)
First time in history. Stong, A. L. (Je '24)
Fishing
  Grey, Z. Tales of southern rivers. (Ja '25)
  Jones, S. R. Black bass and bass craft. (Ag '24)
  Mershon, W: B. Recollections of my fifty years hunting and fishing. (Ap '24)
  Stewart, P. M. Round the world with rod and rifle. (F '25)
Fitch, Clyde
  Fitch, C. Clyde Fitch and his letters. (D '24)
FitzGerald, Edward
  Some new letters of Edward FitzGerald. FitzGerald, E: (Je '24)
Fitzgerald, Pamela (Lady Edward Fitzgerald)
  Ellis, L., and Turquan, J. La belle Pamela. (Ja '25)
Five tales. Verhaeren, E. (F '25)
Five years of European chaos. Macartney, M. H: H. (S '24)
Fixed stars and constellations in astrology. Robson, V. E. (S '24)
Flames of faith. Church, S: H. (Ap '24)
Flaming terrapin. Campbell, R. (O '24)
Flint, Charles Ranlett
  Flint, C: R. Memories of an active life. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Floriculture
  Ortloff, H: S. Garden bluebook of annuals and biennials. (Je '24)
Fog
  McAdie, A. G: Making the weather. (Ap '24)
Foibles and fallacies of science. Hering, D. W. (Ja '25)
Folklore
  Bett, H: Nursery rhymes. (N '24)
  Frazer, J. G: Leaves from the Golden bough. (D '24)

Folklore—Continued

Hawaiian Islands

Colum, P. At the gateways of the day. (N '24)
Thorpe, C. In the path of the trade winds. (Ap '24)
Westervelt, W: D. Hawaiian historical legends. (S '24)

Turkey

Nasr-ed-Din Khoja. The Khoja. (D '24)

Folk-songs, American
Gray, R. P., ed. Songs and ballads of the Maine lumberjacks. (O '24)
Following the grass. Drago, H. S. (D '24)

Food
McFee, I. N. Food and health. (Ag '24)
Food and health. McFee, I. N. (Ag '24)

Food supply
East, E. M. Mankind at the crossroads. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Hedrick, W. O. Economics of a food supply. (Ag '24)
Fool's hell. Forbes, J. R. (N '24)
Footlights and spotlights. Skinner, O. (S '24)
For love of a sinner. Anderson, R. G. (Je '24)

Foreign exchange
Keynes, J: M. Monetary reform. (Ap '24)
Walter, H. C. Modern foreign exchange. (Ap '24)
Foreign policies of soviet Russia. Dennis, A. L: P. (Ag '24)

Foreign trade
Griffin, C. E. Principles of foreign trade. (F '25)
Lahee, A. W. Our competitors and markets. (Ja '25)
The forest. Galsworthy, J: (Ag '24)
Forest giant. Le Corbeau, A. (Je '24)
Forest resources of the world. Zon, R., and Sparhawk, W: N. (My '24)

Forests and forestry
Zon, R. and Sparhawk, W: N. Forest resources of the world. (My '24)

United States

Brown, N. C. American lumber industry. (S '24)
Crump, I. Boys' book of forest rangers. (O '24)

Formosa

National characteristics

Franck, H. A. Glimpses of Japan and Formosa. (D '24)
Fortunes of a household. Robbers, H. (Je '24)
Forty years in Washington. Barry, D: S. (Ap '24)
Fossil man in Spain. Obermaier, H. (F '25)
Foster on mah jong. Foster, R. F: (Je '24)
Foundations of educational sociology. Peters, C: C. (F '25)
Foundations of national industrial efficiency. Custis, V. (Ap '24)
Four bells. Paine, R. D. (Ap '24)
Four plays. Hamilton, C. (Ag '24)
Fourscore. Small, S. H. (Ja '25)
Fourteenth key. Wells, C. (O '24)
The fourth R. Bodley, H. S. (Ag '24)
Fox, David, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E. (Mr, Ap, Ag '24, F '25)

Foxes
Baynes, E. H. The Sprite. (Ja '25)
Fox's paw. Pérez de Ayala, R. (N '24)
Fragments from my diary. Gorky, M., pseud. (Ja '25)

France

Biography

Latour, T. L. Princesses, ladies and adventuresses of the reign of Louis XIV. (F '25)

Description and travel

Ferrand, H. Grenoble and thereabout. (My '24)
Gostling, F. M. Lure of French châteaux. (My '24)
Speed, M. Through central France to the Pyrenees. (O '24)

Foreign relations

Harden, M. Germany, France and England. (My '24)
Huddleston, S. Poincaré. (Ag '24)

History

Dark, S. Book of France for young people. (My '24)
La Batut, G. de., and Friedmann, G. History of the French people. (Mr '24)

House of Valois, 1328-1589

Bridge, J: S. C. History of France from the death of Louis XI. (Ja '25)

Bourbons, 1589-1789

Orleans, E. C. Letters of Madame. (O '24)

Louis XIV, 1643-1715

Latour, T. L. Princesses, ladies and adventuresses of the reign of Louis XIV. (F '25)

Revolution

Brown, P. A. French revolution in English history. (F '25)
Gosselin, L: L. T. Two royalist spies of the French revolution. (Je '24)

1789-1815

Mowat, R. B. Diplomacy of Napoleon. (N '24)

Second republic, 1848-1852

Kerry, H: W: E. P.-F., ed. Secret of the Coup d'état. (F '25)

Social life and customs

Huizinga, J. Waning of the Middle ages. (O '24)

France, Anatole
May, J. L: Anatole France, the man and his work. (N '24)

Francis of Assisi, Saint
Chesterton, G. K. St Francis of Assisi. (Mr '24)
Faure, G. Land of St Francis of Assisi. (Ja '25)

Drama

Lee, H. Little poor man. (My '24)
Francis Wilson's life of himself. Wilson, F. (D '24)
Fraycar's fist. Vorse, M. (Je '24)
Frederick W. Taylor. Copley, F. B. (Ap '24)
Freedom of the mind in history. Taylor, H: O. (Ap '24)

Freedom of the seas
Potter, P. B: Freedom of the seas in history, law and politics. (Mr '24)
Freedom of the seas in history, law and politics. Potter, P. B: (Mr '24)

Freight handling
Cunningham, B. Cargo handling at ports. (F '25)

French-Canadians
Bracq, J. C. Evolution of French Canada. (Ja '25)

French drama

History and criticism

Arvin, N. C. Eugène Scribe and the French theatre, 1815-1860. (D '24)

French in Africa
Sloane, W: M. Greater France in Africa. (N '24)

French in Canada
Bracq, J. C. Evolution of French Canada. (Ja '25)

French language
Dimock, E. Monsieur and Madame. (Ap '24)

French literature
France, A. Latin genius. (Ag '24)
France, A. On life and letters; fourth series (Ag '24)
Whitridge, A. Critical ventures in modern French literature. (Ap '24)

History and criticism
  Aldington, R: Literary studies and reviews. (O '24)
  Butler, K. T. History of French literature. (Ap '24)
  Lalou, R. Contemporary French literature. (F '25)
French poetry
  Collections
  Warrack, G. Une guidlande de poésies diverses. (Ag '24)
French revolution in English history. Brown, P. A. (F '25)
The French Riviera. Devoluy, P., and Borel, P. (S '24)
Fresh waters. Child, R: W. (F '25)
Freud, Sigmund
  Wittels, F. Sigmund Freud. (D '24)
Friar in fiction. Kennard, J. S. (Ap '24)
Friars
  Kennard, J. S. Friar in fiction. (Ap '24)
Friends, Society of
  Hirst, M. E. Quakers in peace and war. (Ap '24)
Friends in solitude. Withers, P. (Je '24)
Friends of mankind. English, D. (F '25)
Friends with life. Allinson, A. C. (D '24)
Friendship
  Poetry
  Morris, J., and Adams, St C., comps. and eds. Book of friendship verse. (Ja '25)
Friendship of God. Royden, A. M. (Je '24)
From a terrace in Prague. Baker, B. G. (My '24)
From Goethe to Byron. Rose, W: (S '24)
From renaissance to revolution. Benians, S. (S '24)
From Whitman to Sandburg in American poetry. Weirick, B. (My '24)
From workshop to war cabinet. Barnes, G: N. (Mr '24)
Frontier and pioneer life
  Faris, J: T. Romance of forgotten towns. (D '24)
  Rothert, O: A. Outlaws of Cave-in-Rock. (O '24)
  Townshend, R. B. Tenderfoot in New Mexico. (Mr '24)
Frozen gold. Eng title of Frozen trail. Small, A. J. (S '24)
Frozen trail. Small, A. J. (S '24)
Fruit of the family tree. Wiggam, A. E: (F '25)
Fulfillment. Hepburn, E. (Ag '24)
Fundamental ends of life. Jones, R. M. (F '25)
Fundamentals of baseball. Wardlaw, C: D. (Ag '24)
Fundamentals of social psychology. Bogardus, E. S. (N '24)
Fundamentals of vocational psychology. Griffitts, C: H. (Ja '25)
Fungicides
  Anderson, O. G., and Roth, F: C. Insecticides and fungicides. (F '25)
Fur trade
  Work, J: Journal of John Work. (Ag '24)
Furnishing the little house. Seal, E. D. (O '24)
Furniture
  Cescinsky, H. The old-world house. (Ja '25)
Furthest fury. Wells, C. (Mr '24)

Galápagos islands
  Description and travel
  Beebe, W: Galápagos, world's end. (Ap '24)
Galápagos, world's end. Beebe, W: (Ap '24)
The gallants. Barrington, E., pseud. (N '24)
A gallery. Guedalla, P. (Ja '25)
Galloping dawns. Tuckerman, A. (S '24)
Galvanometer
  Kennelly, A. E. Electrical vibration instruments. (S '24)
Galwan, Ghulam Rassul. See Ghulam, R. G. (Je '24)
Game ranger's note book. Percival, A. B. (D '24)
Games
  Smith, C: F: Games and recreational methods. (N '24)
  Stow, E. Boys' games among the North American Indians. (F '25)
Games and recreational methods. Smith, C: F: (N '24)
Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand
  Mukerji, D. G. My brother's face. (D '24)
  Rolland, R. Mahatma Gandhi. (Mr '24)
Ganpat, pseud. See Gompertz, M. L: A. (Ja '25)
The gaol. Bourget, P. C: J. (Ja '25)
Garden bluebook of annuals and biennials. Ortloff, H: S. (Je '24)
Garden book for autumn and winter. Lay, C: D. (Ja '25)
Garden grace. Driscoll, L. (Ag '24)
Garden of folly. Leacock, S. B. (S '24)
Garden of Peril. Stockley, C. (Mr '24)
Gardening
  Cloud, K. M.-P. Practical flower gardening. (Je '24)
  Lay, C: D. Garden book for autumn and winter. (Ja '25)
  Ortloff, H: S. Garden bluebook of annuals and biennials. (Je '24)
  Wright, R. L. Practical book of outdoor flowers. (O '24)
Gardens
  Byne, M. and A. Spanish gardens and patios. (F '25)
  Steele, W. Design in the little garden. (My '24)
Gardens of Omar. Bordeaux, H: (Ag '24)
Gas
  Porter, H. C. Coal carbonization. (F '25)
Gas, Natural
  Brown, R. W. Valuation of oil and gas lands. (F '25)
  Lichty, L. C. Measurement, compression and transmission of natural gas. (F '25)
Gas and oil engines
  Daw, A. W. and Z. W. Oil and gas engine power. (S '24)
  Huebotter, H. A. Mechanics of the gasoline engine. (Je '24)
Gavin Douglas. Sillars, J: (D '24)
Gay conspirators. Curtiss, P. E. (Ja '25)
Gay ones. Towne, C: H. (My '24)
Geikie, Sir Archibald
  Geikie, A. Long life's work. (N '24)
Gem-hunters. Rolt-Wheeler, F. (O '24)
Gems
  Rolt-Wheeler, F. W: Gem-hunters. (O '24)
General Botha. Buxton, S. C: B. (S '24)
Genesis and birth of the Federal constitution. Chandler, J. A. C., ed. (F '25)
Genius of Israel. Noyes, C. E. (O '24)
Genlis, Stéphanie Félicité, comtesse de
  Ellis, L, and Turquan, J. Le belle Pamela. (Ja '25)
Gentleman from France. Hawkes, C. (Ag '24)
Gentleman in pajamas. Buck, C: N. (Ap '24)
Gentleman into goose. Ward, C. L. (Ja '25)
Gentleman of courage. Curwood, J. O. (S '24)
Gentleman with a duster. See Begbie, H. (Ja '25)
Gentlemen of the jury. Wellman, F. L: (D '24)
Geoffery Castleton. Blaker, R: (My '24)
Geographical myths
  Firestone, C. B. Coasts of illusion. (Ja '25)
Geography, Commercial
  Lahee, A. W. Our competitors and markets. (Ja '25)
  Newbigin, M. I. Commercial geography. (Ag '24)
Geology
  History
  Merrill, G: P. First one hundred years of American geology. (F '25)
George C. Chase. Chase, G: M. (Ja '25)

George Eliot dictionary. Mudge, I. G., and Sears, M. E. (O '24)
George Macdonald and his wife. Macdonald G. (S '24)
George III and the American revolution. Mumby, F. A. (My '24)

George III, king of Great Britain
Mumby, F. A. George III and the American revolution. (My '24)

Georgia

Social life and customs

Wade, J: D. Augustus Baldwin Longstreet. (Je '24)

Georgian stories, 1924. (S '24)
Gerald Cranston's lady. Frankau, G. (Mr '24)

German fiction
Hewett-Thayer, H. W. Modern German novel. (Ja '25)

German literature
Scheffauer, H. G. New vision in the German arts. (Ag '24)

History and criticism

Rose, W: From Goethe to Byron. (S '24)

Germans in Pennsylvania
Rosenberger, J. L. Pennsylvania Germans. (Ag '24)

Germany

Colonies

Beer, G: L: African questions at the Paris peace conference. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Court and courtiers

Zedlitz-Trützschler, R. Twelve years at the imperial German court. (N '24)

Economic conditions

Coar, J: F. Old and the new Germany. (Mr '24)
Kessler, H. C. U. Germany and Europe. (Ap '24)
Morgan, J: H. Present state of Germany. (O '24)
Moulton, H. G. Reparation plan. (Ja '25)

Foreign relations

France

Harden, M. Germany, France and England. (My '24)

Great Britain

Harden, M. Germany, France and England. (My '24)

History

Morgan, J: H. Present state of Germany. (O '24)

Occupation by allies, 1918-

Allen, H: T. My Rhineland journal. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Politics and government

Coar, J: F. Old and the new Germany. (Mr '24)
Graham, M. W., and Binkley, R. C. New governments of central Europe. (S '24)
Harden, M. Germany, France and England (My '24)

Social conditions

Coar, J: F. Old and the new Germany. (Mr '24)

Germany and Europe. Kessler, H. C. U. (Ap '24)
Germany, France and England. Harden, M. (My '24)
Gertrude of Denmark. Wyman, L. B. (Ag '24)
Gesta Romanorum; entertaining stories. Gesta Romanorum. (O '24)

Ghosts
Flammarion, C. Haunted houses. (S '24)
Giant cat. Rosny, J. H., pseud. (Ja '25)
Gift of black folk. Du Bois, W: E: B. (N '24)

Gipsies
Brown, I. H: Gypsy fires in America. (N '24)

Girlhood stories of famous women. Cather, K. D. (D '24)

Girls
Davenport, F. I. Salvaging of American girlhood. (N '24)
Eggleston, M. W. Womanhood in the making. (Ap '24)

Glands, Ductless
Corners, G: F. Rejuvenation. (Ap '24)
Glimpses of an old social capital. Rogers, M. C. (Ag '24)
Glimpses of Japan and Formosa. Franck, H. A. (D '24)
Glory hole. White, S. E: (D '24)
Glory of Don Ramiro. Larreta, E. (N '24)

God
McGiffert, A. C. God of the early Christians. (My '24)
Patten, A. B. Can we find God? (Je '24)
God of the early Christians. McGiffert, A. C. (My '24)
God's orchid. Bergman, H. (Mr '24)

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von
Brandes, G. N. C. Wolfgang Goethe. (O '24)
Croce, B. Goethe. (Ap '24)
Goin' on fourteen. Cobb, I. S. (D '24)
Golconda bonanza. Hart, J. A. (S '24)
Gold. Wassermann, J. (Ag '24)
Golden ballast. Stacpoole, H. de V. S. (N '24)
Golden bed. Irwin, W. A. (O '24)
Golden cocoon. Cross, R. (My '24)
Golden flower. Gobineau, A. (F '25)
Golden journey of Mr Paradyne. Locke, W: J: (Ja '25)
Golden ladder. Hughes, R. (Ag '24)
Golden treasury of modern lyrics. Binyon, L., comp. (F '25)
Golden village. Anthony, J. (D '24)

Golf
Bailey, C: W: Brain and golf. (Ja '25)
Herd, S. My golfing life. (Ag '24)
Tolley, C. J. H. Modern golfer. (O '24)
Golf without tears. Wodehouse, P. G. (Ag '24)
Gone native. Fletcher, R. J. (Ja '25)
Good hunting. Davey, N. (Mr '24)
Goose hangs high. Beach, L: (Ag '24)
Gordon of the lost lagoon. Watson, R. (O '24)

Gorgas, William Crawford
Gorgas, M. D., and Hendrick, B. J. William Crawford Gorgas. (F '25)

Gorillas
Akeley, C. E. In brightest Africa. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Gorky, Maxim, pseud. (Alexei Maximovich Pyeshkoff)
Gorky, M., pseud. Fragments from my diary. (Ja '25)
Gorky, M., pseud. My university days. (Ap '24)
The goslings. Sinclair, U. B. (My '24)
Gossip of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Beresford, J: (S '24)
Government and politics of Belgium. Reed, T: H. (Mr '24)
Government of the West Indies. Wrong, H. (S '24)

Governors

United States

Collins, F: L: Our American kings. (Ja '25)

Goya y Lucientes, Francisco José de
Young, B. Proverbs of Goya. (Ap '24)

Grace church, New York city
Stewart, W: R. Grace church and old New York. (Je '24)
Grace church and old New York. Stewart, W: R. (Je '24)
Gracious hostess. Lutes, D. (Je '24)

Grand canyon of the Colorado
Freeman, L: R. Down the Grand Canyon. (D '24)
Grand Duke's finances. Heller, F., pseud. (Ja '25)
Grant, Allan, pseud. See Smith, A. D. H. (D '24)
Grant, Douglas, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E (Mr, Ap, Ag '24, F '25)

Graphic methods
Hewes, L. I., and Seward, H. L. Design of diagrams for engineering formulas. (S '24]

Great betrayal. Bierstadt, E: H. (O '24)
Great Britain
Antiquities
Windle, B. C. A. Romans in Britain. (Je '24)
Biography
Abbott, W. C. Conflicts with oblivion. (F '25)
Furniss, H. Some Victorian men. (F '25)
Colonies
Andrews, C: M. Colonial background of the American revolution. (F '25)
Foreign relations
Germany
Harden, M. Germany, France and England. (My '24)
United States
Davenport, E. H., and Cook, S. R. Oil trusts and Anglo-American relations. (Ap '24)
Reuter, B. A. Anglo-American relations during the Spanish-American war. (O '24)
Whelpley, J. D. British-American relations. (Ap '24)
History
Dark, S. Book of England for young people. (Je '24)
Lucas, C: P. Story of the empire. (F '25)
Roman period B.C.55-A.D.449
Haverfield, F. J: Roman occupation of Britain. (S '24)
Early history to 1066
Windle, B. C. A. Romans in Britain. (Je '24)
Lancaster and York, 1399-1485
Scofield, C. L. Life and reign of Edward the Fourth. (My '24)
Stuarts, 1603-1714
Coate, M. Social life in Stuart England. (D '24)
Hartmann, C. H. La Belle Stuart. (N '24)
Puritan revolution, 1642-1660
Rollins, H. E:, ed. Cavalier and puritan. (Ja '25)
18th century
Wyndham, M. M. Chronicles of the eighteenth century. (F '25)
1789-1820
Brown, P. A. French revolution in English history. (F '25)
19th century
Martin, B. K. Triumph of Lord Palmerston. (O '24)
History, Naval
Bradford, E: S. Lfe of Admiral of the fleet Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson. (S '24)
Manning, F: Life of Sir William White. (Ap '24)
Imperial federation
Grigg, E: W: M. Greatest experiment in history. (N '24)
Politics and government
Begbie, H. Windows of Westminster. (Ja '25)
Long of Wraxall, W. Memories. (O '24)
Social life and customs
Long of Wraxall, W. Memories. (O '24)
Great Christian artists. Garesché, E: F. (O '24)
Great detective stories from Voltaire to Poe. French, J. L:, ed. (F '25)
Great game of politics. Kent, F. R. (My '24)
Great house in the park. Burr, A. R. (Ag '24)
Great styles of interior architecture. Gilman, R. (Ag '24)
Great waters. Hutchinson, V. (Ag '24)
Greater France in Africa. Sloane, W: M. (N '24)
Greatest experiment in history. Grigg, E: W: M. (N '24)
Grecian Italy. Forman, H: J. (F '25)
Greece
Civilization
Van Hook, La R. Greek life and thought. (Ap '24)
Description and travel
Byron, G: G. N. B. Byron and Greece. (S '24)
History
Bury, J: B., and others. Hellenistic age. (Ag '24)
Navy
Shepard, A. M. Sea power in ancient history. (Ag '24)
Religion
Hyde, W. W. Greek religion and its survivals. (Ap '24)
Social life and customs
Firebaugh, W. C. Inns of Greece and Rome. (My '24)
Greek church
Hyde, W. W. Greek religion and its survivals. (Ap '24)
Greek drama
Incidental music
Stanley, A. A: Greek themes in modern musical settings. (D '24)
Greek historical thought. Toynbee, A. J., tr. (Ja '25)
Greek life and thought. Van Hook, La R. (Ap '24)
Greek literary criticism. Denniston, J: D. (N '24)
Greek literature
Denniston, J: D. Greek literary criticism. (N '24)
Van Hook, La R. Greek life and thought. (Ap '24)
Collections
Toynbee, A. J., tr. Greek historical thought from Homer to the age of Heraclius. (Ja '25)
Greek religion and its survivals. Hyde, W. W. (Ap '24)
Greek themes in modern musical settings. Stanley, A. A: (D '24)
Green archer. Wallace, E. (D '24)
Green bay tree. Bromfield, L: (Ap '24)
The green hat. Arlen, M., pseud. (O '24)
Green scarf. Perrin, C., pseud. (O '24)
Green shoots. Morand, P. (Je '24)
Green stone. MacGrath, H. (N '24)
Green Thursday. Peterkin, J. (N '24)
Green timber. Bindloss, H. (My '24)
Grenfell, Wilfred Thomason
Mathews, B. J. Wilfred Grenfell. (D '24)
Waldo, F. L. Grenfell, knight-errant of the North. (F '25)
Grenfell, knight-errant of the North. Waldo, F. L. (F '25)
Grenoble, France
Ferrand, H. Grenoble and thereabouts. (My '24)
Grenoble and thereabouts. Ferrand, H. (My '24)
Grey face. Rohmer, S., pseud. (D '24)
Greylight. Greene, A. (F '25)
Gringo in Mañana-land. Foster, H. L. (N '24)
Groombridge diary. White, D. V. (Ja '25)
Groups and couples. Warner, F. L. (My '24)
Grover Cleveland. McElroy, R. M. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Guide to literature of home and family life. Robertson, A. I. (O '24)
Guide to world history. Cowan, A. R. (S '24)
Guilt. Forman, H: J. (My '24)
Guthrie, Ramsay, pseud. See Bowran, J: G: (Ag '24)
Gwyn, Nell
Benjamin, L: S. Nell Gwyn. (D '24)
Gypsy fires in America. Brown, I. H: (N '24)
Gypsy gold. Divine, C: (Ap '24)

H. D., pseud. See Aldington, H. (N '24)
Hairpin duchess. Woods, A. (Ja '25)
Half century of sonnets. Davidson, G. (S '24)
Half gods. Montross, L. (My '24)
Haliburton, Thomas Chandler (Sam Slick, pseud.)
  Chittick, V: L. O. Thomas Chandler Haliburton. (F '25)
Hall, Josef Washington. See Close, U., pseud. (F '25)
Hallmark, Harrydele. See Rittenhouse, A., pseud. (N '24)
Hammer marks. Hougham, A. (N '24)
Handbook of sales management. Hall, S: R. (Mr '24)
Handbook of solar eclipses. Lewis, I. E. (F '25)
Handbook of summer camps. Sargent, P. E: (F '25)
Handicraft
  Saylor, H: H. Tinkering with tools. (D '24)
Handmaid of the Lord. Banning, M. C. (D '24)
Handwriting on the wall. Ostrander, I. E. (S '24)
Happiness
  Payot, J. Conquest of happiness. (F '25)
Happy marriage. MacLeish, A. (My '24)
Harbors
  Cunningham, B. Cargo handling at ports. (F '25)
    United States
  Collins, F. A. Our harbors and inland waterways. (Ja '25)
Harbottle. Hargrave, J: (S '24)
Harding, Warren Gamaliel
  Chapple, J. M. Life and times of Warren G. Harding. (Ja '25)
Hari, the jungle lad. Mukerji, D. G. (Ja '25)
Harp in the winds. Henderson, D. (F '25)
Harp-weaver. Millay, E. St V. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Harris, Corra May (White)
  Harris, C. M. My book and heart. (My '24)
Harvard university
  Batchelder, S: F. Bits of Harvard history. (Ap '24)
Harvest. Morton, D: (Ag '24)
Harvey Landrum. Wills, R. (Ja '25)
Haunted circle. Nichols, A. (My '24)
Haunted houses. Flammarion, C. (S '24)
Hawaiian historical legends. Westervelt, W: D. (S '24)
Hawaiian islands
  Lyman, C. S. Around the Horn to the Sandwich Islands and California. (Ja '25)
Hawtrey, Sir Charles Henry
  Hawtrey, C: H: Truth at last. (N '24)
Hay, Ian, pseud. See Beith, J: H. (S '24)
Hazard. Mavity, N. B. (My '24)
Health book. Copeland, R. S: (O '24)
Health problems of the empire. Balfour, A., and Scott, H: H. (D '24)
Hearing
  Ogden, R. M. Hearing. (Ja '25)
Hearn, Lafcadio
  Tinker, E: L. Lafcadio Hearn's American days. (F '25)
Heart
    Diseases
  Smith, S: C. How is your heart? (O '24)
Heart of a father. (D '24)
Heating
  Fuller, C: A. Designing heating and ventilating systems. (F '25)
Heaven folk. Bonsels, W. (My '24)
Heaven-kissed hill. Fletcher, J. S. (N '24)
Heavenly ladder. Mackenzie, C. (N '24)
The heights. Bryant, M. (Mr '24)
Heine, Heinrich
  Monahan, M. Heinrich Heine. (Ap '24)
    Fiction
  Brudno, E. S. Sublime jester. (F '25)
  Heinrich Heine. Monahan, M. (Ap '24)
The heir. Sackville-West, V. M. (Mr '24)
Heirs apparent. Gibbs, P. H. (Ap '24)
Heirs of the Incas. Michener, C. K. (Ja '25)
Helen and others. Wister, M. (F '25)
Heliodora. Aldington, H. (N '24)
Heliotherapy
  Hill, L. Sunshine and open air. (N '24)
  Saleeby, C. W. Sunlight and health. (Mr '24)
Hell-bent fer heaven. Hughes, H. (Je '24)
Hellenism
  Toynbee, A. J., tr. Greek historical thought from Homer to the age of Heraclius. (Ja '25)
Hellenistic age. Bury, J: B., and others. (Ag '24)
Hellenistic philosophies. More, P. E. (Je '24)
Henry Brocken. De la Mare, W. J: (Mr '24)
Henry Thoreau. Bazalgette, L. (F '25)
Hepburn, Alonzo Barton
  Bishop, J. B. A. Barton Hepburn. (Mr '24)
Herbert Levi Osgood. Fox, D. R. (S '24)
Herbert, William, pseud. See Croly, H. D: (N '24)
Herd, Sandy
  Herd, S. My golfing life. (Ag '24)
Here you have me! Roe, R. (Ap '24)
Heredity
  Holmes, S: J. Studies in evolution and eugenics. (Ap '24)
  Kammerer, P. P. R. Inheritance of acquired characteristics. (Ja '25)
  Kellogg, V. L. Mind and heredity. (My '24)
  Wiggam, A. E: Fruit of the family tree. (F '25)
Heritage of cotton. Crawford, M. de C. (F '25)
Hermann, Georg, pseud. See Borchardt, H. G. (S '24)
Herodotus
  Glover, T. R. Herodotus. (Ja '25)
Heroes
  Faris, J: T. Book of everyday heroism. (S '24)
Heroes of the puppet stage. Anderson, M. (Ap '24)
Herself and the houseful. Daly, T: A: (N '24)
Herzen, Aleksandr Ivanovich
  Herzen, A. I. Memoirs. (Je '24)
  Herzen, A. I. My past and thoughts. (O '24)
Hetty Geybert. Borchardt, H. G. (S '24)
Heu-Heu. Haggard, H: R. (Je '24)
Hidden player. Noyes, A. (Ja '25)
High altar. Rothery, A. E. (N '24)
High fires. McClure, M. B. (Ap '24)
High place. Cabell, J. B. (My '24)
High road. Ramsay, J. (Je '24)
High road to honor. Vrooman, J. G. (Ja '25)
High schools
  Grizzell, E. D. Origin and development of the high school in New England before 1865. (Je '24)
High way. Mason, C. (Ap '24)
Highwaymen. Finger, C: J. (Ap '24)
Hill of Athena. Powers, H. H. (F '25)
Himalaya mountains
  Younghusband, F. E: Wonders of the Himalaya. (S '24)
Hind let loose. Montague, C: E: (Mr '24)
Hinduism
  Ghoshal, U. History of Hindu political theories. (Ap '24)
  Mukerji, D. G. My brother's face. (D '24)
Hine, Muriel. See Coxon, M. (Ja '25)
His second venture. Reynolds, G. M. (Ja '25)
Historic wall-papers. McClelland, N. (F '25)
Historical fiction
  Butterfield, H. Historical novel. (D '24)
Historical Jesus. Piepenbring, C: (N '24)
Historical novel. Butterfield, H. (D '24)
Historical survey of Jewish philanthropy. Frisch, E. (O '24)
History
    Bibliography
  Davies, W: W. How to read history. (N '24)
    Philosophy
  Cowan, A. R. Guide to world-history. (S '24)

History, Ancient
  Cambridge ancient history: v 2. (F '25)
History, Modern
  20th century
  These eventful years. (S '24)
History, Universal
  Cowan, A. R. Guide to world-history. (S '24)
  Hillyer, V. M. Child's history of the world. (Ja '25)
History of art: Later European art. Cotterill, H: B. (N '24)
History of art: modern art. Faure, E. (Je '24)
History of Assyria. Olmstead, A. T. E. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
History of English literature. Albert, E: (S '24)
History of France from the death of Louis XI. Bridge, J: S. C. (Ja '25)
History of French etching. Leipnik, F. L. (Ja '25)
History of French literature. Butler, K. T. (Ap '24)
History of Hindu political theories. Ghoshal, U. (Ap '24)
History of Iceland. Gjerset, K. (Mr '24)
History of Ireland. Gwynn, S. (Mr '24)
History of Minnesota. Folwell, W: W. (Ja '25)
History of political ideas. Morris, C: R: and M. (F '25)
History of political thought. Gettell, R. G. (O '24)
History of religion in the United States. Rowe, H: K. (Ja '25)
History of the American frontier, 1763-1893. Paxson, F. L. (Ja '25)
History of the French people. La Batut, G. de., and Friedmann, G. (Mr '24)
History of the Temple, London. Williamson, J: B. (Ja '25)
History of the United States army. Ganoe, W: A. (O '24)
The hoarding. Owen, J: (Ap '24)
Hobbies
  Taussig, C: W:, and Meyer, T. A. Book of hobbies. (D '24)
Hodgetts, Edward Arthur Brayley
  Hodgetts, E: A. B. Moss from a rolling stone. (Ag '24)
Holy Spirit
  Gore, C: The Holy Spirit and the church. (My '24)
The Holy Spirit and the church. Gore, C: (My '24)
Home economics
  Andrews, B: R: Economics of the household. (My '24)
  Taber, C. W., and Wardall, R. A. Economics of the family. (My '24)
  Bibliography
  Robertson, A. I. Guide to literature of home and family life. (O '24)
The home-maker. Fisher, D. F. (Ag '24)
Home of an eastern clan. Milne, L. (N '24)
Home owner's handbook. Lescarboura, A. C. (S '24)
Home road. Clark, M. H. (My '24)
Honorable Miss Cherry Blossom. Bussenius, L. T. (N '24)
Honourable Jim. Orczy, E. (My '24)
Hopalong Cassidy returns. Mulford, C. E: (N '24)
Horse training
  Brooke, G. F. H. Horse-sense and horsemanship of today. (Ja '25)
Horsemanship
  Brooke, G. F. H. Horse-sense and horsemanship of to-day. (Ja '25)
Horse-sense and horsemanship of to-day. Brooke, G. F. H. (Ja '25)
House by the road. Dutton, C: J. (Ap '24)
House decoration
  Cescinsky, H. The old-world house. (Ja '25)
  Gilman, R. Great styles of interior architecture. (Ag '24)
  Patterson, A. O. American homes of to-day. (F '25)
  Seal, E. D. Furnishing the little house. (O '24)
House full of people. Scharten-Antink, E. and M. (My '24)
House ghosts. Grimes, J: (F '25)
House of broken dreams. Jope-Slade, C. (N '24)
House of hate. Wellman, R. (D '24)
House of prophecy. Cannan, G. (D '24)
House of the arrow. Mason, A. E: W. (N '24)
House of the lions. Banks, H. W. (Ja '25)
House of the missing. Gluck, S. (S '24)
Household painter. Kelly, A. A. (S '24)
Housing
  Europe
  Wood, E. Housing progress in western Europe. (Mr '24)
Housing progress in western Europe. Wood, E. (Mr '24)
How I discovered America. Castellane, B. (D '24)
How is your heart? Smith, S: C. (O '24)
How to dress well. Story, M. (Ja '25)
How to keep well. Currier, A. F. (D '24)
How to make a curriculum. Bobbitt, J: F. (S '24)
How to read history. Davies, W: W. (N '24)
How to sing. Tetrazzini, L. (Ap '24)
How to teach a trade. Selvidge, R. W. (Je '24)
How to write short stories. Lardner, R. W. (Ag '24)
Howells, William Dean
  Firkins, O. W. William Dean Howells. (F '25)
Howells, James, Bryant and other essays. Phelps, W: L. (Je '24)
Hudson, W. H.
  Roberts, M. W. H. Hudson. (Ap '24)
Hudson anthology. Hudson, W. H. (F '25)
Hudson valley
  Eberlein, H. D. Manors and historic homes of the Hudson valley. (Ja '25)
Hudson's Bay company
  Work, J: Journal of John Work. (Ag '24)
Human boy's diary. Phillpotts, E. (Je '24)
Human nature
  Lawson, C: F. You can change it. (My '24)
Human origins. MacCurdy, G: G. (D '24)
Humanism
  Hulme, T: E. Speculations. (F '25)
Humble folk. Crocker, B., pseud. (Je '24)
Humdrum house? Foster, M. (O '24)
Humor
  Anthony, E: "Razzberry!" (Ag '24)
  Barton, R. Science in rhyme without reason. (Ag '24)
  Benjamin, H. M. and L: S., comps. Anthology of humorous verse. (O '24)
  Bennett, C: A. At a venture. (Mr '24)
  Dayton, K. Loose leaves. (Je '24)
  Finck, H: T. Musical laughs. (F '25)
  French, J. L:, ed. Sixty years of American humor. (D '24)
  Hellman, S. Low bridge and punk pungs. (Ja '25)
  Herbert, A. P. Man about town. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Jerome, J. K. Miscellany of sense and nonsense. (Ag '24)
  Lawson, J. G., comp. World's best epigrams. (Ag '24)
  Leacock, S. B. Garden of folly. (S '24)
  Masson, T: L., ed. Tom Masson's annual for 1924. (Ja '25)
  Phillips, G. Brighter intervals. (Ja '25)
  Rogers, W. Illiterate digest. (F '25)
  Stewart, D. O. Mr and Mrs Haddock abroad. (Ja '25)
  Thomas, M. R., ed. Young folks' book of mirth. (S '24)
  Van Loot, C. O., pseud., and others. Collector's whatnot. (Ap '24)
Hungary
  Tharaud, J. and J. When Israel is king. (F '25)
  History
  Tormay, C. Outlaw's diary: the commune. (Mr '24)

Hungary—Continued

Politics and government

Graham, M. W., and Binkley, R. C. New governments of central Europe. (S '24)

Hunt, William Morris

Shannon, M. A. S. Boston days of William Morris Hunt. (Ap '24)

Hunting

Grey, Z. Tales of southern rivers. (Ja '25)

Mayer, C: Jungle beasts I have captured. (F '25)

Mershon, W: B. Recollections of my fifty years hunting and fishing. (Ap '24)

Stewart, P. M. Round the world with rod and rifle. (F '25)

Africa

Akeley, C. E. In brightest Africa. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Bell, W. D. M. Wanderings of an elephant hunter. (My '24)

Christy, C. Big game and pygmies. (O '24)

Johnson, M. E. Camera trails in Africa. (Je '24)

Percival, A. B. Game ranger's note book. (D '24)

Husbands and lovers. Molnar, F. (My '24)

The hussy. Grainger, B. (Mr '24)

Hustler Joe. Porter, E. (O '24)

Hydraulics

Medaugh, F: W. Elementary hydraulics. (S '24)

Hygiene

Copeland, R. S: Health book. (O '24)

Currier, A. F. How to keep well. (D '24)

Doty, A. H. Walking for health. (Ap '24)

Rinehart, S. M. Commonsense of health. (O '24)

Saleeby, C. W. Sunlight and health. (Mr '24)

Hymn as literature. Reeves, J. B. (My '24)

Hymns

Benson, L: F. Studies of familiar hymns. (Ap '24)

Reeves, J. B. Hymn as literature. (My '24)

Hyndman, Henry Mayers

Hyndman, R. T. Last years of H. M. Hyndman. (My '24)

I for one. Priestley, J: B. (Ag '24)

I, the king. Williams, W. W. (My '24)

Iceland

History

Gjerset, K. History of Iceland. (Mr '24)

Icarus. Russell, B. A. W: (S '24)

Iconoclast, pseud. See Hamilton, M. A. (Ap, S '24)

Idealism

Otto, M. C. Things and ideals. (Ja '25)

Idealism in literature

Fausset, R. l'A. Studies in idealism. (Ap '24)

Ideals of asceticism. Hardman, O. (Je '24)

Identification

Mitchell, C: A. Expert witness. (Ap '24)

Iliana. Bercovici, K. (O '24)

I'll show you the town. Davis, E. H. (My '24)

Illiterate digest. Rogers, W. (F '25)

Illustration of books

Brown, L. N. Early block-printing and book-illustration in Japan. (S '24)

Imaginary lives. Schwob, M. (N '24)

Imagination

McMillan, M. Education through the imagination. (Ap '24)

Immigrants in the United States

Leiserson, W: M. Adjusting immigrant and industry. (Mr '24)

Immigration

Abbott, E., comp. Immigration. (S '24)

Immortality

Horr, G: E. Christian faith and eternal life. (Je '24)

Jacks, L. P. Living universe. (Ap '24)

Marchant, J., ed. Immortality. (Ja '25)

Perry, W: J. Origin of magic and religion. (S '24)

Saunderson, H: H. Power of an endless life. (S '24)

Immortals. Scarborough, H. E. (My '24)

Imperialism

Grigg, E: W: M. Greatest experiment in history. (N '24)

Imperialistic religion and the religon of democracy. Brown, W: A. (My '24)

Imperturbe. Paul, E. H. (Je '24)

Imposters and imposture

Hering, D. W. Foibles and fallacies of science. (Ja '25)

Impressionism (art)

Dreier, K. S. Western art and the new era. (My '24)

Impressions and comments. Ellis, H. (Ja '25)

Impressions of great naturalists. Osborn, H: F. (Ja '25)

Improvement of teaching. Freeland, G: E. (F '25)

In a Shantung garden. Miln, L. (S '24)

In and under Mexico. Ingersoll, R. M. (Ag '24)

In brightest Africa. Akeley, C. E. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

In earthen bowls. Miller, N. (Ja '25)

In exile. Cournos, J: (Ap '24)

In lawless lands. Finger, C: J. (My '24)

In praise of England. Massingham, H. J: (Ja '25)

In primitive New Guinea. Holmes, J: H. (Je '24)

In prison. O'Hare, K. R. (Ap '24)

In quest of El Dorado. Graham, S. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

In the footsteps of the Lincolns. Tarbell, I. M. (Mr '24)

In the grip of life. Hamsun, K. (Mr '24)

In the land of art. Blasco-Ibáñez, V. (Ag '24)

In the land of the laughing Buddha. Close, U., pseud. (F '25)

In the land of youth. Stephens, J. (D '24)

In the path of the trade winds. Thorpe, C. (Ap '24)

In the sight of God. Clark, J. W. (O '24)

Income tax

Kohler, E. L: Accounting principles underlying federal income taxes, 1924. (Mr '24)

Rossmoore, E. E. Federal income taxes. (Mr '24)

Index to illustrations. Shepard, F: J., comp. (D '24)

Index to one-act plays. Logasa, H., and Ver Nooy, W., comps. (Ja '25)

India

Couldrey, O. J. South Indian hours. (D '24)

Description and travel

Ronaldshay, L. J: L. D. India. (O '24)

Non-cooperation movement

Gandhi, M. K. Young India. (Je '24)

Politics and government

Gandhi, M. K. Young India. (Je '24)

Ghoshal, U. History of Hindu political theories. (Ap '24)

Social life and customs

Mukerji, D. G. My brother's face. (D '24)

Ronaldshay, L. J: L. D. India. (O '24)

Satyananda Roy. When I was a boy in India. (Ag '24)

Indiana

Cobb, I. S. Indiana. (Je '24)

Indiana prize plays. (Ja '25)

Indians of North America

Borland, H. G. Rocky Mountain tipi tales. (S '24)

Work, J: Journal of John Work. (Ag '24)

Games

Stow, E. Boys' games among the North American Indians. (F '25)

Indians of South America

Domville-Fife, C: W: Among wild tribes of the Amazons. (O '24)

Industrial arts
Kaempffert, W. B., ed. Popular history of American invention. (Ja '25)
Industrial management
Cowdrick, E: S. Manpower in industry. (Ag '24)
Lansburgh, R: H. Industrial management. (Je '24)
Walker, P. F. Management engineering. (S '24)
Industrial relations
Fitch, J: A. Causes of industrial unrest. (D '24)
Rockefeller, J: D., jr. Personal relation in industry. (Mr '24)
Industrial worker, 1840-1860. Ware, N. (Ag '24)
Industry
Veblen, T. B. Absentee ownership and business enterprise in recent times. (Ap '24)
Industry and state
Commons, J: R. Legal foundations of capitalism. (Ag '24)

United States

Swenson, R. J: National government and business. (D '24)
Inevitable millionaires. Oppenheim, E. P. (F '25)
Inexcusable lie. Peat, H. R. (Je '24)
Infectious diseases
McFarland, J. Fighting foes too small to see. (Mr '24)
McLaughlin, A. J. Communicable diseases. (Je '24)
Infield rivals. Barbour, R. H: (S '24)
Inheritance of acquired characteristics. Kammerer, P. P. R. (Ja '25)
Inigo Sandys. Jones, E. B. C. (Je '24)
Inland navigation

United States

Collins, F. A. Our harbors and inland waterways. (Ja '25)
Inn of discontent. Wilde, P. (Ja '25)
Inner darkness. Hesser, E. D. (Mr '24)
Innocence of G. K. Chesterton. Bullett, G. W: (Ap '24)
Innocent desires. Watson, E. L. G. (Ja '25)
The innocents. Webster, H: K. (D '24)
Inns
Firebaugh, W. C. Inns of Greece and Rome. (My '24)
Inns of Greece and Rome. Firebaugh, W. C. (My '24)
Insanity
Goodwin, J: C. Insanity and the criminal. (Je '24)
Insanity and the criminal. Goodwin, J: C. (Je '24)
Insecticides
Anderson, O. G., and Roth, F: C. Insecticides and fungicides. (F '25)
Insecticides and fungicides. Anderson, O. G., and Roth, F: C. (F '25)
Insects
Felt, E. P. Manual of tree and shrub insects. (Ja '25)
Hawksworth, H. Clever little people with six legs. (S '24)
Instead of the thorn. Heyer, G. (Ag '24)
Insurance, Industrial
Downey, E. H: Workmen's compensation. (F '25)
Insurance, Unemployment
Morley, F. Unemployment relief in Great Britain. (Ja '25)
Intellect
Kellogg, V. L. Mind and heredity. (My '24)
Taylor, H: O. Freedom of the mind in history. (Ap '24)
Thurstone, L: L. Nature of intelligence. (F '25)
Intellectual cooperation
McDonald, W: Intellectual worker and his work. (My '24)
Intellectual worker and his work. MacDonald, W: (My '24)
Intellectuals
MacDonald, W: Intellectual worker and his work. (My '24)
Inter-ally debts. Fisk, H: E: (N '24)
International cooperation
Hughan, J. W. Study of international government. (Ap '24)
Lape, E. E., ed. Ways of peace. (My '24)
International law. Fenwick, C: G. (F '25)
International law and relations
Birkenhead, F: E. S. America revisited. (S '24)
Burns, C. D. Short history of international intercourse. (Ag '24)
Fenwick. C: G. International law. (F '25)
Hughan, J. W. Study of international government. (Ap '24)
Kellor, F., and Hatvany, A. Security against war. (F '25)
McDougall, W: Ethics and some modern world problems. (Ag '24)
Moore, J: B. International law and some current illusions. (S '24)
Poole, DeW. C. Conduct of foreign relations under modern democratic conditions. (O '24)
Stannard, H. M. Fabric of Europe. (Je '24)
International law and some current illusions. Moore J: B. (S '24)
Interpreter's house. Burt, S. (Mr '24)
Intimate character sketches of Abraham Lincoln. Rankin, H: B. (Je '24)
Intimate portrait of R. L. S. Osbourne, L. (Mr '24)
Introduction to advertising. Brewster, A. J., and Palmer, H. H. (F '25)
Introduction to education. Frasier, G: W., and Armentrout, W. D. (F '25)
Introduction to modern philosophy. Joad, C. E. M. (Ja '25)
Introduction to organic research. Reid, E. E. (F '25)
Introduction to reflective thinking. Columbia associates in philosophy. (Je '24)
Introduction to teaching. Bagley, W: C. and Keith, J: A. H. (O '24)
Introduction to the study of Chinese painting. Waley, A. (Je '24)
Introduction to the study of Chinese sculpture. Ashton, L. (F '25)
Introduction to the study of the mind. White, W: A. (D '24)
Inventions
Harris, F. S., and Butt, N. I: Scientific research and human welfare. (Ja '25)
Kaempffert, W. B., ed. Popular history of American invention. (Ja '25)
Investment. Sturgis, H: S. (Ag '24)
Investments
Kirshman, J: E. Principles of investment. (Ja '25)
Sturgis, H: S. Investment. (Ag '24)
Invisible woman. Quick, H. (F '25)
Ionicus. Esher, R. B. B. (My '24)
Ireland

History

Gwynn, S. History of Ireland. (Mr '24)
Iron men & wooden ships. Shay, F., ed. (F '25)
Irons, Ralph, pseud. See Schreiner, O. (F '25)
Islam and the psychology of the Musulman. Servier, A. (O '24)
Island chronicle. Cummings, W: (Je '24)
Island in time. Tracy, H: C. (Ja '25)
Isle of thorns. Kaye-Smith, S. (Ag '24))
Isles of Eden. Davidson, L. L. (N '24)
Isles of the blest. Steele, W. D. (F '25)
Isvor. Bibesco, M. L. (Ja '25)
Italian lakes. Faure, G. (My '24)
Italian literature

History and criticism

Phelps, R. S. Italian silhouettes. (D '24)
Italian silhouettes. Phelps, R. S. (D '24)
Italians in the United States
Stella, A. Some aspects of Italian immigration to the United States. (Ap '24)

Italy
Young, S. Three fountains. (My '24)
Description and travel
Blasco-Ibáñez, V. In the land of art. (Ag '24)
Faure, G. Italian lakes. (My '24)
Forman, H: J. Grecian Italy. (F '25)
Golding, L: Sunward. (Ja '25)
Fascisti movement
Mussolini, B. Mussolini as revealed in his political speeches. (Ap '24)
Roberts, K. L: Black magic. (Ag '24)
Villari, L. Awakening of Italy. (N '24)
Politics and government
Roberts, K. L: Black magic. (Ag '24)
Villari, L. Awakening of Italy. (N '24)

J. Ramsay MacDonald. Hamilton, M. A. (Ap '24)
James Joyce, his first forty years. Gorman, H. S. (My '24)
Jameson, Mrs Annie Edith (Foster). See Buckrose, J. E., pseud. (D '24)
Jane Austen. Villard L. (S '24)
Janitor's boy. Crane, N. C. R. (Ag '24)
January. Pleydell-Bouverie, K. (O '24)
Japan
Civilization
Bryan, J. T: I. Japan from within. (F '25)
Satomi, K. Japanese civilization. (Ag '24)
Description and travel
Collins, G. Far Eastern jaunts. (Ja '25)
Franck, H. A. Glimpses of Japan and Formosa. (D '24)
Powers, H. H. Japan. (Ap '24)
Economic conditions
Bryan, J. T: I. Japan from within. (F '25)
Japan. Powers, H. H. (Ap '24)
Japan from within. Bryan, J. T: I. (F '25)
Japanese civilization. Satomi, K. (Ag '24)
Japanese poetry
Page, C. H. Japanese poetry. (My '24)
Jealousy. Artsybashev, M. P. (Ap '24)
Jeanne d'Arc
Drama
Shaw, G: B. Saint Joan. (S '24)
Jenny the joyous. Parker, C. (Ag '24)
Jeritza, Maria (Baroness von Popper)
Jeritza, M. Sunlight and song. (S '24)
Jerusalem
Cust, L. H. Jerusalem. (O '24)
Jesus Christ
More, P. E. Christ of the New Testament. (O '24)
Robinson, A. W: Christ of the Gospels. (N '24)
Biography
Bosworth, E: I. Life and teaching of Jesus. (Je '24)
Piepenbring, C: Historical Jesus. (N '24)
Birth
Palmer, F: Virgin birth. (Mr '24)
Teaching
Bosworth, E: I. Life and teaching of Jesus. (Je '24)
Dickey, S: Constructive revolution of Jesus. (Ap '24)
Scott, E. F. Ethical teaching of Jesus. (My '24)
Jew and civilization. Sterling, A. (My '24)
Jews
Samuel, M. You gentiles. (O '24)
Sterling, A. Jew and civilization. (My '24)
Charities
Frisch, E. Historical survey of Jewish philanthropy. (O '24)
History
Noyes, C. E. Genius of Israel. (O '24)
Religion
Wise, J. W. Liberalizing liberal Judaism. (F '25)
Jews in Hungary
Tharaud, J. and J. When Israel is king. (F '25)
Jews in Palestine
Trager, H. Pioneers in Palestine. (Ag '24)
Jews in the making of America. Cohen, G: (O '24)
Jews in the United States
Cohen, G: Jews in the making of America. (O '24)
McCall, S: W. Patriotism of the American Jew. (O '24)
Jim Maitland. McNeile, C. (F '25)
John, Viscount Morley. Morgan, J: H. (F '25)
John Citizen's job. Curran, H: H. (My '24)
John H. Patterson. Crowther, S: (Ap '24)
John Henry Jowett. Porritt, A. (F '25)
John Martin, painter. Pendered, M. L. (My '24)
John Peregrine's wife. Gibbon, M. M. (F '25)
John Shaw Billings. Lydenberg, H. M. (Ja '25)
John William Strutt, third baron Rayleigh. Rayleigh, R. J: S. (F '25)
Johndover. Cameron, M. (Je '24)
Johnson, Samuel
Spittal, J: K., comp. and ed. Contemporary criticism of Dr Samuel Johnson. (O '24)
Joseph Conrad. Ford, F. M. (Ja '25)
Joseph Conrad. Stauffer, R. M. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Joseph Pulitzer. Seitz, D. C. (F '25)
Joshua Barney. Paine, R. D. (N '24)
Josslyn. Smith, H: J. (Ag '24)
Journal of his first voyage to America. Columbus, C. (Ag '24)
Journal of John Work. Work, J: (Ag '24)
Journal of Nicholas Cresswell. Cresswell, N: (F '25)
Journalism
Anthony, J., ed. Best news stories of 1923. (O '24)
Bastian, G: C. Editing the day's news. (My '24)
Crawford, N. A. Ethics of journalism. (Ag '24)
Mitchell, E: P. Memories of an editor. (D '24)
Morley, C. D. Religio journalistici. (D '24)
Smith, E. Fields of adventure. (F '25)
Tooker, L: F. Joys and tribulations of an editor. (Ja '25)
Yost, C. S. Principles of journalism. (My '24)
Jowett, John Henry
Porritt, A. John Henry Jowett. (F '25)
Joyce, James
Gorman, H. S. James Joyce, his first forty years. (My '24)
Joyous adventure. Barnett, A. (Mr '24)
Joys and tribulations of an editor. Tooker, L: F. (Ja '25)
Judd & Judd. Bartley, N. I. (Mr '24)
The judge. Gorky, M., pseud. (Ja '25)
Judges
Bruce, A. A. American judge. (My '24)
Jugoslavia
Politics and government
Graham, M. W., and Binkley, R. C. New governments of central Europe. (S '24)
Julie Cane. O'Higgins, H. J. (N '24)
Jumel, Betty (Bowen) (Mme Stephen Jumel)
Fiction
Hughes, R. Golden ladder. (Ag '24)
Jungle beasts I have captured. Mayer, C: (F '25)
Junior Sub., pseud. See Beith, J: H. (S '24)
Jurisprudence
Commons, J: R. Legal foundations of capitalism. (Ag '24)

Jury
  Wellman, F. L: Gentlemen of the jury. (D '24)
Justice of the peace. Niven, F: J: (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Juvenile delinquency
  Joint committee on methods of preventing delinquency. Three problem children. (Ag '24)
  Mateer, F. Unstable child. (Ag '24)

Kamerun, Africa
  Mackenzie, J. K. African clearings. (Ag '24)
Kansas
  Cobb, I. S. Kansas. (Je '24)
Katerina. Andreieff, L. N. (My '24)
Keeping the peace. Morris, G. (N '24)
Keeping up with science. Slosson, E. E., ed. (N '24)
Kenney, Annie
  Kenney, A. Memories of a militant. (Ja '25)
Kentucky
  Cobb, I. S. Kentucky. (Je '24)
Kenya colony and protectorate
  Norden, H. White and black in East Africa. (Ja '25)
Kenya Mist. Riddell, F. (Ja '25)
Kenyon college
  Smythe, G: F. Kenyon college. (O '24)
Kestrel edge. Gibson, W. W. (Ap '24)
The key. Thayer, L. (F '25)
Keys to crookdom. Henderson, G: C. (Ja '25)
The Khoja. Nasr-ed-Din Khoja. (D '24)
King David and his wives. Pinski, D:. (My '24)
King of Elfland's daughter. Dunsany, E: J: M. D. P. (N '24)
King of No Man's Land. Friel, A. O. (My '24)
King Tommy. Hannay, J: O. (Je '24)
King versus Wargrave. Fletcher, J. S. (Mr '24)
King who went on strike. Choate, P. (Ap '24)
Kingdom of God
  Bennett, L. E. Realm of God. (Ag '24)
Kingdom of the heavens. Nordmann, C: (Ag '24)
Kings and rulers
  Sherrill, C: H. Purple or the red. (My '24)
Knight's life in the days of chivalry. Mellor, W. C. (F '25)
Knights and knighthood
  Meller, W. C. Knight's life in the days of chivalry. (F '25)
Knowledge, Theory of
  McDowall, S. A. Evolution, knowledge and revelation. (Ag '24)
  Rogers, A. K. What is truth? (My '24)
  Vaihinger, H. Philosophy of as if. (D '24)
Kongo, Belgian

Description and travel

  Barns, T: A. Across the great craterland to the Congo. (N '24)
Ku Klux klan
  Davis, S. L. Authentic history, Ku Klux klan, 1865-1877. (My '24)
  Frost, S. Challenge of the Klan. (O '24)
  Mecklin, J: M. Ku Klux klan. (Ap '24)
  Tannenbaum, F. Darker phases of the South. (Mr '24)
Kuyumjian, Dikran. See Arlen, M., pseud. (My, O '24)

Labor and laboring classes
  Eddy, S. New world of labor. (Ap '24)
  Florence, P. S. Economics of fatigue and unrest. (N '24)
  Hearnshaw, F. J: C. Democracy and labour. (Ag '24)

Great Britain

  Barnes, G: N. From workshop to war cabinet. (Mr '24)
  Blanshard, P. Outline of the British labor movement. (Ap '24)
  Hogue, R: W., ed. British labour speaks. (Ja '25)
  Morley, F. Unemployment relief in Great Britain. (Ja '25)

United States

  Fitch, J: A. Causes of industrial unrest. (D '24)
  Leiserson, W: M. Adjusting immigrant and industry. (Mr '24)
  Ware, N. Industrial worker, 1840-1860 (Ag '24)
Labor disputes and the president of the United States. Berman, E: (Ja '25)
Labor movement. Spero, S. D. (D '24)
Labor party (Great Britain)
  Blanshard, P. Outline of the British labor movement. (Ap '24)
  Hamilton, M. A. England's labour rulers. (S '24)
  Hogue, R: W., ed. British labour speaks. (Ja '25)
Laboratory and field work in general botany. Transeau, E. N., and Sampson, H. C. (S '24)
Labour party's aim. (Ag '24)
Lace and lace making
  Woman's institute of domestic arts and sciences. Woman's institute library of dressmaking. (Ap '24)
Lady from the air. Williamson, C: N. and A. M. (Ag '24)
Lady of Belmont. Ervine, St J: G. (Mr '24)
Lady of Pentlands. Jordan, E. G. (Ag '24)
Lady Suffolk and her circle. Benjamin, L: S. (Ja '25)
Lafcadio Hearn's American days. Tinker, E: L. (F '25)
Lagerlöf, Selma Ottiliana Lovisa
  Lagerlöf, S. O. V. Mårbacka. (N '24)
The lake. Ashmun, M. (N '24)
Lake Superior country. Longstreth, T: M. (Ag '24)
Lamb, Charles

Drama

  Brown, A. Charles Lamb. (F '25)
Lamps
  Luckiesh, M. Portable lamps. (Ag '24)
Land
  Ely, R: T., and Morehouse, E: W. Elements of land economics. (S '24)
Land of journeys' ending. Austin, M. (D '24)
Land of St Francis of Assisi. Faure, G. (Ja '25)
Land of the fathers. Gusev, S. I. (D '24)
Land that time forgot. Burroughs, E. R. (N '24)
Landor, Arnold Henry Savage
  Landor, A. H: S. Everywhere. (Ja '25)
Lands of the Andes and the desert. Carpenter, F. G: (F '25)
Landscape painting
  Hind, C: L. Landscape painting, from Giotto to the present day. (My '24)
Landscape painting, from Giotto to the present day. Hind, C: L: (My '24)
Language and languages
  Bell, R. H. Mystery of words. (Mr '24)
  Kent, R. G. Language and philology. (My '24)

Study and teaching

  Bezard, J. My class in composition. (Je '24)
Language and philology. Kent, R. G. (My '24)
Lantern on the plow. Chamberlain, G: A. (N '24)
La Roux. Abbott, J. (Ja '25)
Last essays. Hewlett, M. H: (Ag '24)
Last frontier. Cooper, C. R. (Ap '24)
Last of the heretics. Crapsey, A. S. (O '24)
Last scrap book. Saintsbury, G: E: B. (F '25)
Last secrets. Buchan, J: (Je '24)
The last time. Hichens, R. (Mr '24)
Last years of H. M. Hyndman. Hyndman, R. T. (My '24)
Late harvest. Eliot, C: W: (Ap '24)
Later poems. Yeats, W: B. (S '24)

Latin America
Description and travel
May, S. B. Men, maidens and mantillas. (N '24)
Latin genius. France, A. (Ag '24)
Latin poetry
Sikes, E: E. Roman poetry. (Je '24)
Latitudes. Muir, E. (Je '24)
Laughing rider. Erskine, L. Y. (Ap '24)
Laughter
Gregory, J. C. Nature of laughter. (F '25)
Laura. Sidgwick, E. (F '25)
Lavender dragon. Phillpotts, E. (Ap '24)
Law
Anecdotes, facetiae, satire, etc.
Wellman, F. L. Gentlemen of the jury. (D '24)
Law and freedom in the school. Coe, G: A. (S '24)
Law of the savage. See Jealousy. Artsybashev, M. P. (Ap '24)
Law of the threshold. Steel, F. A. (D '24)
Law reform
Bruce, A. A. American judge. (My '24)
Lawrence, David Herbert
Seligmann, H. J. D. H. Lawrence. (O '24)
Lawrence, Thomas Edward
Thomas, L. J. With Lawrence in Arabia. (D '24)
Layman's confession of faith. Wilson, P. W. (O '24)
Laziness
Holmes, A. Controlled power. (O '24)
Lead
Harn, O. C. Lead, the precious metal. (Ag '24)
Smythe, J: A. Lead. (F '25)
Lead, the precious metal. Harn, O. C. (Ag '24)
Leadership
Babbitt, I. Democracy and leadership. (N '24)
League of nations
Alexander, H. G. Revival of Europe. (O '24)
Fisher, I. America's interest in world peace. (F '25)
Hughan, J. W. Study of international government. (Ap '24)
Keen, F. N. Towards international justice. (Je '24)
Kellor, F., and Hatvany, A. Security against war. (F '25)
Leap year girl. Ruck, B. (Ag '24)
Leave it to Psmith. Wodehouse, P. G. (Ap '24)
Leaves from a Russian diary. Sorokin, P. A. (Ja '24)
Leaves from the Golden bough. Frazer, J. G: (D '24)
Legacy of the ancient world. De Burgh, W: G: (Ja '25)
Legal foundations of capitalism. Commons, J: R. (Ag '24)
Legends
Firestone, C. B. Coasts of illusion. (Ja '25)
Legends of highwaymen. Blakeborough, R., comp. (N '24)
Legislative assemblies. Luce, R. (D '24)
Legislative bodies
Luce, R. Legislative assemblies. (D '24)
Legs Parsons. Berthoud, F. (Ag '24)
Lenin, Nikolai, pseud. (Vladimir Ilich Ulyanov)
Levine, I: D. The man Lenin. (Je '24)
Lenôtre, G., pseud. See Gosselin, L: L. T. (Je '24)
Leonid Andreyev. Kaun, A. S: (Ag '24)
Letters and religion. Chapman, J: J. (Je '24)
Letters from a distance. Cannan, G. (Je '24)
Letters from a senator's wife. Keyes, F. P. (Ag '24)
Letters from Theodore Roosevelt to Anna Roosevelt Cowles. Roosevelt, T. (D '24)
Letters of Archie Butt. Butt, A. W. (N '24)
Letters of Madame. Orleans, E. C. (O '24)
Letters of Olive Schreiner. Schreiner, O. (F '25)
Letters of the Tsaritsa to the Tsar. Alexandra Feodorovna. (My '24)
Letters on the short story, the drama and other literary topics. Chekhov, A. P. (Ja '25)
Letters to her family, 1839-1863. Carlyle, J. W. (Ag '24)
Letters to three friends. White, W: H. (D '24)
Leviathan. Bolitho, W:, pseud. (O '24)
Lewisohn, Mary Arnold Crocker. See Crocker, B., pseud. (Je '24)
Liberalizing liberal Judaism. Wise, J. W. (F '25)
Liberation. Ostrander, I. E. (F '25)
"The liberry." Beith, J: H. (S '24)
Libraries
Learned, W: S. American public library and the diffusion of knowledge. (N '24)
Wheeler, J. L: Library and the community. (D '24)
Library advertising
Ward, G. O. Publicity for public libraries. (S '24)
Wheeler, J. L: Library and the community. (D '24)
Library architecture
Hadley, C. Library buildings. (Ja '25)
Library buildings. Hadley, C. (Ja '25)
Life
Jones, R. M. Fundamental ends of life. (F '25)
Le Corbeau, A. Forest giant. (Je '24)
Wilson, E. B. Physical basis of life. (Je '24)
Life. Shipley, A. E. (Ap '24)
Life and adventure in peace and war. Wood, E. (Je '24)
Life and death of Cleopatra. Ferval, C., pseud. (D '24)
Life and I. Hind, C: L: (Ag '24)
Life and letters. Dickinson, E. (Ap '24)
Life and letters of John Muir. Badè, W: F: (Ja '25)
Life and letters of Sir Edward Mortimer Archibald. Archibald, E. J. (S '24)
Life and public services of Justin Smith Morrill. Parker, W: B. (Je '24)
Life and reign of Edward the Fourth. Scofield, C. L. (My '24)
Life and teaching of Jesus. Bosworth, E: I. (Je '24)
Life and times of Warren G. Harding. Chapple, J. M. (Ja '25)
Life of Admiral of the fleet Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson. Bradford, E: S. (S '24)
Life of Anne Boleyn. Sergeant, P. W. (My '24)
Life of Calvin Coolidge. Green, H. (S '24)
Life of Henry Fowle Durant. Kingsley, F. (Je '24)
Life of John W. Davis. Huntley, T. A. (D '24)
Life of Olive Schreiner. Cronwright-Schreiner, S. C. (My '24)
Life of Sir William Crookes. Fournier D'Albe, E. E: (Mr '24)
Life of Sir William White. Manning, F: (Ap '24)
Life of solitude. Petrarch, F. (F '25)
Life of the bat. Derennes, C: (D '24)
Life of the Right Hon. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman. Spender, J: A. (Je '24)
Life of William Congreve. Gosse, E. W: (F '25)
Life of Woodrow Wilson. Daniels, J. (Ag '24)
Life story of an ugly duckling. Dressler, M. (F '25)
Light and color in advertising and merchandising. Luckiesh, M. (Ap '24)
Light and work. Luckiesh, M. (F '25)
Lighting
Luckiesh, M. Light and color in advertising and merchandising. (Ap '24)
Luckiesh, M. Light and work. (F '25)
Luckiesh, M. Portable lamps. (Ag '24)
Walsh, J: W: T. Elementary principles of lighting and photometry. (S '24)
Lighting circuits and switches. Croft, T. W. (Ap '24)
Ligne, Charles Joseph, prince de
Gilbert, O. P. Prince de Ligne. (Ag '24)
Lilies of the field. Turner, J: H. (N '24)
Limb of Satan. Eng title of Long arm of Fantômas. Souvestre P., and Allain, M. (Ag '24)
Lincoln, Abraham
Dodge, D. K. Abraham Lincoln, master of words. (O '24)

Rankin, H: B. Intimate character sketches of Abraham Lincoln. (Je '24)
Tarbell, I. M. In the footsteps of the Lincolns. (Mr '24)
Line a day. Tompkins, J. W. (Ag '24)
Lions
Grey, Z. Roping lions in the Grand Canyon. (Je '24)
Lions 'n' tigers 'n' everything. Cooper, C. R. (N '24)
Liquor traffic
Shadwell, A. Drink in 1914-1922. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Listening man. Moroso, J: A. (Ag '24)
Literary bypaths of the renaissance. Thompson, E. N. S. (Ap '24)
Literary criticism
Aldington, R: Literary studies and reviews. (O '24)
Muir, E. Latitudes. (Je '24)
Pritchard, F. H: Training in literary appreciation. (Ap '24)
Sherman, S. P. Points of view. (Ja '25)
Literary journeys
Maxwell, G. S. Authors' Thames. (Ja '25)
Literary landmarks
Bidwell, A. T., and Rosenstiel, I. D. Places of English literature. (S '24)
Dexter, W. London of Dickens. (S '24)
Literary spotlight. Farrar, J: C., ed. (Ja '25)
Literary studies and reviews. Aldington, R: (O '24)
Literature
Bailey, J: C. Continuity of letters. (Ap '24)
Canby, H: S. Definitions; second series. (N '24)
Chapman, J: J. Letters and religion. (Je '24)
Collins, J. Taking the literary pulse. (Je '24)
Croce, B. European literature in the nineteenth century. (Ja '25)
Donnelly, F. P. Art principles in literature. (Ap '24)
Drinkwater, J:, ed. Outline of literature, v 2-3. (Mr, Je '24)
Frank, W. D: Salvos. (My '24)
Hearn, L. Essays in European and Oriental literature. (My '24)
Lewisohn, L. Creative life. (Je '24)
Moore, G: Conversations of Ebury Street. (D '24)
Pritchard, F. H: Training in literary appreciation. (Ag '24)
Smith, P. J.- On strange altars. (Je '24)
Symons, A. Dramatis personæ. (My '24)
Thompson, E. N. S. Literary bypaths of the renaissance. (Ap '24)
Little French girl. Sedgwick, A. D. (O '24)
Little girl. Mansfield, K., pseud. (D '24)
Little novels of nowadays. Gibbs, P. H. (D '24)
Little poor man. Lee, H. (My '24)
Little Princess Nina. Charskaya, L. A. (Ja '25)
Little Robin Stay-behind. Bates, K. L. (Ag '24)
Living pageant of the Nile. Wilson, R. F. (My '24)
Living universe. Jacks, L. P. (Ap '24)
Living Word. Bible. Selections. Saunderson, H: H., ed. (Ap '24)
Locked book. Packard, F. L. (D '24)
Logic
Robinson, D. S. Principles of reasoning. (D '24)
Logic of conduct. McKaye, J. (S '24)
Loisy, Alfred Firmin, abbé
Loisy, A. F. My duel with the Vatican. (F '25)
Loiterer in London. Henderson, H. W. (F '25)
Londinium, architecture and the crafts. Lethaby, W: R: (O '24)
London
Machen, A. London adventure. (F '25)
Antiquities
Lethaby, W: R: Londinium, architecture and the crafts. (O '24)
Description
Cairns, J: A. R. Sidelights of London. (D '24)
Chancellor, E. B. London of Charles Dickens. (N '24)
Dark, S. London. (F '25)
Dexter, W. London of Dickens. (S '24)
Gordon, G: B. Rambles in old London. (F '25)
Harper, C: G: More queer things about London. (F '25)
Harper, C: G: Queer things about London. (Ag '24)
Henderson, H. W. Loiterer in London. (F '25)
History
Gordon, G: B. Rambles in old London. (F '25)
Williamson, J: B. History of the Temple, London. (Ja '25)
Social life and customs
Beith, J: H. Shallow end. (F '25)
Ridge, W: P. Story teller. (My '24)
London. Dark, S. (F '25)
London adventure. Machen, A. (F '25)
London adventures of Mr. Collin. Heller, F., pseud. (S '24)
London life. Bennett, A., and Knoblock, E: (Ja '25)
London of Charles Dickens. Chancellor, E. B. (N '24)
London of Dickens. Dexter, W. (S '24)
Long arm of Fantômas. Souvestre, P., and Allain, M. (Ag '24)
Long life's work. Geikie, A. (N '24)
Long walk of Samba Diouf. Tharaud, J. and J. (Mr '24)
Longstreet, Augustus Baldwin
Wade, J: D. Augustus Baldwin Longstreet. (Je '24)
Looking after Joan. Palmer, J: L. (My '24)
Looking at life. Dell, F. (My '24)
Loose leaves. Dayton, K. (Je '24)
Lord of the sea. Shiel, M. P. (D '24)
Lord Shaftesbury. Hammond, J: L. Le B. and B. (D '24)
Lost radiance of the Christian religion. Jacks, L. P. (S '24)
Loti, Pierre, pseud.
Loti, P., pseud. Notes of my youth. (Je '24)
Lottery. Woodward, W: E. (D '24)
"Louder please!" Calkins, E. E. (N '24)
Louis XV, king of France
Angerville, M. d'. Private life of Louis XV. (O '24)
Louis Pasteur. Holmes, S: J. (Je '24)
Lourdes
Oxenham, J: Wonder of Lourdes. (N '24)
Love
Berl, E. Nature of love. (O '24)
Lay, W. Plea for monogamy. (Ap '24)
Pfister, O. R. Love in children and its aberrations. (Je '24)
Love,—and the philosopher. Corelli, M. (Mr '24)
Love courageous. Merrel, C. (Ag '24)
Love in children and its aberrations. Pfister, O. R. (Je '24)
Love letters
Charles, C. H. Love letters of great men and women. (D '24)
Love letters of great men and women. Charles, C. H. (D '24)
Love letters to a dead woman. Harben, H: D. (My '24)
A lovely day. Céard, H: (N '24)
The lover. See Wandering stars. Dane, C., pseud. (My '24)
Loves and losses of Pierrot. Griffith, W: (F '25)
Low bridge and punk pungs. Hellman, S. (Ja '25)
Lowery road. Strong, L. A. G: (S '24)
Luca Sarto. Brooks, C: S. (Ja '25)
Lucas, Emily Beatrix Coursolles. See Jones, E. B. C. (Je '24)
Lucio, pseud. See Phillips, G. (Ja '25)
The lullaby. Knoblock, E: (O '24)
Lumber trade
Brown, N. C. American lumber industry. (S '24)

Lunatic still at large. Clouston, J. S. (Ag '24)

Lure of English cathedrals. Gostling, F. M. (Ag '24)

Lure of French châteaux. Gostling, F. M. (My '24)

Lure of Monte Carlo. Williamson, C: N. and A. M. (N '24)

Lure of the Riviera. Gostling, F. M. (Ap '24)

Lustres. Parrish, A. and D. (S '24)

Lute player. Eng title of Carson of Red river. Bindloss, H. (D '24)

Luxor and its temples. Blackman, A. M. (Mr '24)

Lyttelton family

Wyndham, M. M. Chronicles of the eighteenth century. (F '25)

McAdoo, William Gibbs

Synon, M. McAdoo, the man and his times. (S '24)

McAdoo, the man and his times. Synon, M. (S '24)

McAlister, Alister. See Wharton, A. P., pseud. (O '24)

Maccarthy, Mary (Mrs Desmond Maccarthy)

MacCarthy, M. Nineteenth century childhood. (Ja '25)

Macdonald, George

Macdonald, G. George Macdonald and his wife. (S '24)

MacDonald, James Ramsay

Hamilton, M. A. J. Ramsay MacDonald. (Ap '24)

Macdonald, Louisa (Powell) (Mrs George Macdonald)

Macdonald, G. George Macdonald and his wife. (S '24)

MacDonald, Margaret Ethel

MacDonald, J. R. Margaret Ethel MacDonald. (My '24)

MacDowell, Edward Alexander

Brown, A. F. Boyhood of Edward MacDowell. (Je '24)

Machine design drawing room problems. Albert, C. D. (S '24)

Machinery

Design

Albert, C. D. Machine design drawing room problems. (S '24)

McKready, Kelvin, pseud. See Murphy, E. G. (F '25)

Maclagen, Bridget, pseud. See Borden-Turner, M. (Ja '25)

Madagascar

Osborn, C: S. Madagascar. (Ag '24)

Sibree, J. Fifty years in Madagascar. (D '24)

Magellan, Ferdinand

Hildebrand, A. S. Magellan. (Ja '25)

Magellan. Hildebrand, A. S. (Ja '25)

Magic

Frazer, J. G: Leaves from the Golden bough. (D '24)

Perry, W: J. Origin of magic and religion. (S '24)

Rivers, W: H. R. Medicine, magic and religion. (F '25)

Magic carpet. Richards, G. M., comp. (O '24)

Magic for amateurs. Radcliffe, W: H. (Ag '24)

Magic-makers of Morocco. Rolt-Wheeler, F. W: (S '24)

Magician among the spirits. Houdini, H. (Ag '24)

Mah jong

Foster, R. F: Foster on mah jong. (Je '24)

Hartman, L. F. Standardized mah jong. (Ja '25)

Mahatma Gandhi. Rolland, R. (Mr '24)

Mailing list directory and classified index to trade directories. Morley, L. H., and Kight, A. C. (Je '24)

Maine

Cobb, I. S. Maine. (Je '24)

Description and travel

Hueston, E. Coasting down East. (D '24)

Majestic mystery. Mackail, D. G: (N '24)

The Major—diamond buyer. Greene, L. P. (F '25)

Makers of science. Hart, I. B. (Ag '24)

Making business advancement sure. Jackson, W: M. (S '24)

Making of man. Lodge, O. J. (Ag '24)

Making the weather. McAdie, A. G: (Ap '24)

Malay archipelago

Tomlinson, H. M. Tide marks. (Ja '25)

Malta

Description and travel

Forman, H: J. Grecian Italy. (F '25)

Man

Thompson, J: A. What is man? (Ap '24)

Origin

MacCurdy, G: G. Human origins. (D '24)

Man, Prehistoric

Burkitt, M. C. Our forerunners. (S '24)

MacCurdy, G: G. Human origins. (D '24)

Obermaier, H. Fossil man in Spain. (F '25)

Wilder, H. H. Man's prehistoric past. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Man about town. Herbert, A. P. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Man and mystery in Asia. Ossendowski, F. (Mr '24)

Man and the masses. Toller, E. (O '24)

Man in the brown suit. Christie, A. (D '24)

A man in the zoo. Garnett, D: (Ag '24)

The man Lenin. Levine, I: D. (Je '24)

Man who died twice. Robinson, E. A. (My '24)

Man who plundered the city. Elvestad, S. C. S. (F '25)

Man without a heart. Ayres, R. M. (Ap '24)

Management engineering. Walker, P. F. (S '24)

Management's handbook. Alford, L. P., ed. (F '25)

Managerial acounting. McKinsey, J. O. (F '25)

Mancroft essays. Samuel, A. M. (Je '24)

Mankind at the crossroads. East, E: M. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Manners and customs

Eichler, L. Customs of mankind. (D '24)

Manors and historic homes of the Hudson valley. Eberlein, H. D. (Ja '25)

Manpower in industry. Cowdrick, E: S. (Ag '24)

Man's judgment of death. Lawes, L: E. (O '24)

Man's prehistoric past. Wilder, H. H. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Manual of cultivated plants. Bailey, L. H. (S '24)

Manual of information on city planning and zoning. Kimball, T. (Ag '24)

Manual of tree and shrub insects. Felt, E. P. (Ja '25)

Manuscript of St Helena. Lullin de Châteauvieux, J. F: (D '24)

Many minds. Van Doren, C. C. (My '24)

Many waters. Chipp, E. (S '24)

Many wings. Conant, I. (Je '24)

Mårbacka. Lagerlöf, S. O. V (N '24)

Marcel Proust. Scott-Moncrieff, C: K., comp. (Ap '24)

Margaret Ethel MacDonald. MacDonald, J. R. (My '24)

Margueritte, P., and V. Poum. (Ag '24)

Mariflor. Espina de Serna, C. (Je '24)

Marine biology

Crowder, W: Dwellers of the sea and shore. (Je '24)

Mariposa. Baerlein, H: P. B. (D '24)

Maritime law

Potter, P. B: Freedom of the seas in history, law and politics. (O '24)

Mark only. Powys, T. F. (Ag '24)

Mark Twain's autobiography. Clemens, S: L. (D '24)

Marketing

Copeland, M. T: Principles of merchandising. (Ja '25)

White, P., and Hayward, W. S. Marketing practice. (O '24)

Marketing practice. White, P., and Hayward, W. S. (O '24)

Marriage
Lay, W. Plea for monogamy. (Ap '24)
Marriage for two. Knight, G. (S '24)
Marston, Jeffery Eardley. See Jeffery, J. E., pseud. (O '24)
Martin, John
Pendered, M. L. John Martin, painter. (My '24)
Mary Rose. Barrie, J. M. (Ja '25)
Masks
Macgowan, K., and Rosse, H. Masks and demons. (My '24)
Masks and demons. Macgowan, K., and Rosse, H. (My '24)
Masquerade. Redman, B. R. (My '24)
Masquerading Mary. Sampson, E. S. (Ja '25)
Master criminal. Farjeon, J. J. (O '24)
Master lights. Putnam, E. (Je '24)
Master Richard Quyny. Fripp, E. I. (Ja '25)
Masters of modern art. Pach, W. (Ja '25)
Mastery of fear. Walsh, W: S. (O '24)
Materia critica. Nathan, G: J. (O '24)
Matilda, governess of the English. Cleugh, S. (Ja '25)
Matter
Berthoud, A. New theories of matter and the atom. (F '25)
Max Reinhardt and his theatre. Sayler, O. M., ed. (S '24)
Maxim, Hudson
Maxim, H. Reminiscences and comments. (Ja '25)
Maxwell, M. Stalking big game with a camera in equatorial Africa. (Ja '25)
Mayas
Smith, G. E. Elephants and ethnologists. (Ja '25)
Mazaroff mystery. Fletcher, J. S. (My '24)
Mazzini, Giuseppe
Hinkley, E. Mazzini. (F '25)
Mazzini. Hinkley, E. (F '25)
Measurement, compression and transmission of natural gas. Lichty, L. C. (F '25)
Measuring results in education. Trabue, M. R. (O '24)
Mecca
Burton, R: F. Selected papers on anthropology. (S '24)
Mechanical drawing
Bradhy, J. Blueprint reading for the machine shop and related trades. (Je '24)
Mechanical engineering
Marks, L. S., and others, eds. Mechanical engineers' handbook. (F '25)
Mechanical engineers' handbook. Marks, L. S., and others, eds. (F '25)
Mechanics of the gasoline engine. Huebotter, H. A. (Je '24)
Mediæval romance in England. Hibbard, L. A. (F '25)
Medicine, Popular
Copeland, R. S: Health book. (O '24)
Medicine, Primitive
Rivers, W: H. R. Medicine, magic and religion. (F '25)
Medicine gold. Miller, W. H. (N '24)
Medicine, magic and religion. Rivers, W: H. R. (F '25)
Medieval people. Power, E. E. (D '24)
Mediterranean lands. Newbigin, M. I. (F '25)
Mediterranean sea
Newbigin, M. I. Mediterranean lands. (F '25)
Meiklejohn, Alexander
Price, L. Prophets unawares. (Je '24)
Melville, Helen, pseud. See Benjamin, H. M. (O '24)
Melville, Lewis, pseud. See Benjamin, L: S. (D '24, Ja '25)
Memoirs. Herzen, A. I. (Je '24)
Memoirs of the notorious Stephen Burroughs of New Hampshire. Burroughs, S. (Ja '25)
Memoirs of Thomas O. Selfridge, jr. Selfridge, T: O. (D '24)
Memories. Long of Wraxall, W. (O '24)
Memories and adventures. Doyle, A. C. (N '24)
Memories and friends. Benson, A. C. (Je '24)
Memories of a militant. Kenney, A. (Ja '25)
Memories of an active life. Flint, C: R. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Memories of an editor. Mitchell, E: P. (D '24)
Men, maidens and mantillas. May, S. B. (N '24)
Men, maids and Mustard-Pot. Frankau, G. (N '24)
Men of earth. Brown, B. (Je '24)
Mental hygiene
Brown, B. Dynamic power of the inner mind. (Ag '24)
Burnham, W: H. Normal mind. (F '25)
Holmes, A. Controlled power. (O '24)
Pierce, F: Mobilizing the mid-brain. (Ag '24)
Walsh, W: S. Mastery of fear. (O '24)
Mental suggestion
Brown, B. Dynamic power of the inner mind. (Ag '24)
Mental tests
Bolton, F: E. Everyday psychology for teachers. (Ag '24)
Kellogg, V. L. Mind and heredity. (My '24)
Kornhauser, A. W:, and Kingsbury, F. A. Psychological tests in business. (F '25)
Trabue, M. R. Measuring results in education. (O '24)
Merchant marine
Canada
Wallace, F: W: Wooden ships and iron men. (F '25)
United States
Cartwright, C: E. Tale of our merchant ships. (F '25)
Merchant's horizon. Filene, A. L., and Kline, B. (S '24))
Merchants' manual. Hahn, L., and White, P., eds. (Je '24)
Merrie tales of Jacques Tournebroche. France, A. (Ja '25)
Messalina, Valeria
Crockett, V. Messalina. (Ja '25)
Messalina. Crockett, V. (Ja '25)
Metallurgical analysis
Scott, W. W. Technical methods in analysis of metallurgical and allied products. (Ap '24)
Metallurgy
Dean, R. S. Theoretical metallurgy. (F '25)
Metallurgy of steel. Harbord, F. W:, and Hall, J: W: (F '25)
Metals
Jeffries, Z., and Archer, R. S. Science of metals. (F '25)
Meteorology
Brooks, C: F. Why the weather? (N '24)
McAdie, A. G: Making the weather. (Ap '24)
Mexico
Beals, C. Mexico. (Mr '24)
Description and travel
Carpenter, F. G: Mexico. (Ag '24)
Foster, H. L. Gringo in Mañana-land. (N '24)
Graham, S. In quest of El Dorado. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Ingersoll, R. M. In and under Mexico. (Ag '24)
Quinn, V. Beautiful Mexico. (Ja '25)
History
Quinn, V. Beautiful Mexico. (Ja '25)
Micro-organisms
McFarland, J. Fighting foes too small to see. (Mr '24)
Middle ages
Huizinga, J. Waning of the Middle ages. (O '24)
Power, E. E. Medieval people. (D '24)
Middle twenties. Farrar, J: C. (S '24)
Middleton, Arthur, pseud. See O'Brien, E: J. H. (Mr '24)
Midland (periodical). Stories from the Midland. (My '24)
The midlander. Tarkington, B. (Mr '24)
Midsummer madness. Bax, C. (Mr '24)
Military art and science
Colby, E. Profession of arms. (D '24)
Oman, C: W: C. Art of war in the middle ages. (Ja '25)

Military intelligence
Sweeney, W. C. Military intelligence. (N '24)
Mill, John Stuart
Mill, J: S. Autobiography of John Stuart Mill. (Ja '25)
Neff, E. Carlyle and Mill. (S '24)
Miller, William
Sears, C. E. Days of delusion. (My '24)
Miller's youngest daughter. Norton, G. F. (Je '24)
Million dollar doll. Williamson, A. M. (Je '24)
Milton, John
Saurat, D. Blake and Milton. (F '25)
Mince Collop Close. Blake, G: (Ap '24)
Mind and body
Brown, B. Dynamic power of the inner mind. (Ag '24)
Mind and heredity. Kellogg, V. L. (My '24)
Mind in action. Green, G: H. (Ag '24)
Miners' wages and the cost of coal. Lubin, I. (D '24)
Minister's everyday life. Douglas, L. C. (Ag '24)
Ministers of the gospel
Douglas, L. C. Minister's everyday life. (Ag '24)
Minnesota
History
Folwell, W: W. History of Minnesota. (Ja '25)
Miracles
Parks, L. What is modernism? (Je '24)
Mirage. Masters, E. L. (Je '24)
Miscellany of sense and nonsense. Jerome, J. K. (Ag '24)
Miss Parkworth. Booth, E: C: (S '24)
Miss Pilgrim's progress. Merrel, C. (F '25)
Missions
Patton, C. H. Business of missions. (O '24)
China
Broomhall, M. Robert Morrison. (S '24)
Gulick, S. L: Winning of the Far East. (Ap '24)
Japan
Gulick, S. L: Winning of the Far East. (Ap '24)
Korea
Gulick, S. L: Winning of the Far East. (Ap '24)
Madagascar
Sibree, J. Fifty years in Madagascar. (D '24)
Mr and Mrs Haddock abroad. Stewart, D. O. (Ja '25)
Mr Archer, U.S.A. Archer, H. (Je '24)
Mister Fish Kelly. McBlair, R. (Ag '24)
Mr Fortune's practice. Bailey, H: C. (Mr '24)
Mr Rowl. Broster, D. K. (Je '24)
Mrs Allen on cooking, menus, service. Allen, I. C. (Ap '24)
Mrs Paramor. Vance, L: J. (S '24)
Mrs Phelps' husband. Spadoni, A. (S '24)
Mistress Wilding. Sabatini, R. (My '24)
Misty valley. Cannan, J. (Je '24)
Mitchell, Edward Page
Mitchell, E: P. Memories of an editor. (D '24)
Mobilizing the mid-brain. Pierce, F: (Ag '24)
Mock majesty. Savi, E. W. (Je '24)
Modern American lyrics. Coblentz, S. A., comp. (D '24)
Modern electro-plating. Hughes, W: E. (F '25)
Modern essays; second series. Morley, C. D., comp. (Ag '24)
Modern executive. Bloomfield, D., comp. and ed. (Ag '24)
Modern foreign exchange. Walter, H. C. (Ap '24)
Modern French music. Hill, E: B. (N '24)
Modern German novel. Hewett-Thayer, H. W. (Ja '25)
Modern golfer. Tolley, C. J. H. (O '24)
Modern gypsies. Bedell, M. (O '24)
Modern music. Myers, R. H. (My '24)
Modern short speeches. O'Neill, J. M. (Ag '24)
Modern use of the Bible. Fosdick, H. E. (Ja '25)
Modernism
Parks, L. What is modernism? (Je '24)
Patton, C. S. Religion in the thought of to-day. (Ag '24)
Mohammedanism
Arnold, T: W. The caliphate. (F '25)
Servier, A. Islam and the psychology of the Musulman. (O '24)
Moleskin Joe. MacGill, P. (Mr '24)
Monetary reform. Keynes, J: M. (Ap '24)
Money
Keynes, J: M. Monetary reform. (Ap '24)
Monroe doctrine
Alvarez, A. Monroe doctrine. (F '25)
Cresson, W: P. Diplomatic portraits. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Thomas, D: Y. One hundred years of the Monroe doctrine. (Ap '24)
Monsieur and Madame. Dimock, E. (Ap '24)
Montagu, Elizabeth (Robinson) (Mrs Edward Montagu)
Montagu, E. Queen of the blues. (Ap '24)
Monte Carlo
Williamson, C: N. and A. M. Lure of Monte Carlo. (N '24)
Montespan. Rolland, R. (Ap '24)
Moods of earth and sky. Watson, E. L. G. (Ag '24)
Moon country. Johnson, G. E. (F '25)
Moon-element. Fournier d'Albe, E. E: (N '24)
Moral education
Bodley, H. S. The fourth R. (Ag '24)
More obiter dicta. Birrell, A. (N '24)
More queer things about London. Harper, C: G: (F '25)
More stories from the operas. Davidson, G. (Ja '25)
More wild folk. Scoville, S:, jr. (S '24)
Morley of Blackburn, John Morley, 1st viscount
Morgan, J: H. John, Viscount Morley. (F '25)
Morocco
Sloane, W: M. Greater France in Africa. (N '24)
Description and travel
Forbes, J. R. Sultan of the mountains. (Je '24)
O'Connor, V. C. S. Vision of Morocco. (My '24)
Morrill, Justin Smith
Parker, W: B. Life and public services of Justin Smith Morrill. (Je '24)
Morrison, Robert
Broomhall, M. Robert Morrison. (S '24)
Morry. Elson, R. (F '25)
Mosaics. Harmon, B. E. (My '24)
Moscow art theater
Stanislavsky, C. My life in art. (Je '24)
Moses
Drama
Langner, L. Moses. (O '24)
Moses. Langner, L. (O '24)
Moss from a rolling stone. Hodgetts, E: A. B. (Ag '24)
Most famous beauty of China. Wu Shu-Chiung. (F '25)
Mother Mason. Aldrich, B. (Ja '25)
Mother of gold. Hough, E. (Mr '24)
The motherless. Berg, B. M. K. (N '24)
Mothers' pensions
Rathbone, E. F. Disinherited family. (Ag '24)
Motor truck. La Schum, E: E., and Bardwell, H. E. (F '25)
Motor trucks
La Schum, W: E. Electric motor truck. (S '24)
La Schum, E: E., and Bardwell, H. E. Motor truck. (F '25)
Mountaineering
Mitchell, B: W. Trail life in the Canadian Rockies. (F '25)
Rusk, C. E. Tales of a western mountaineer. (F '25)
Movable and long-span steel bridges. Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. (Je '24)

Moving pictures
Best moving pictures of 1922-1923. (Je '24)
Freeburg, V: O. Pictorial beauty on the screen. (Ap '24)
Goldwyn, S: Behind the screen. (Ap '24)
Lane, T., pseud. What's wrong with the movies? (Ap 24)
Talbot, F: A. A. Moving pictures. (Ap '24)
Moving pictures in education
Freeman, F. N. Visual education. (S '24)
Muir, John
Badè, W: F: Life and letters of John Muir. (Ja '25)
Municipal government
Beard, C: A. Administration and politics of Tokyo. (Ap '24)
Maxey, C. C. Outline of municipal government. (O '24)
Maxey, C. C., ed. Readings in municipal government. (O '24)
Murder
Jesse, F. T. Murder and its motives. (Ja '25)
Pearson, E. L. Studies in murder. (S '24)
Murder and its motives. Jesse, F. T. (Ja '25)
Murder of Monsieur Fualdès. Praviel, A. (Ag '24)
Muscles
Pear, T. H. Skill in work and play. (F '25)
Music
Buck, P. C. Scope of music. (D '24)
Finck, H: T. Musical laughs. (F '25)
Myers, R. H. Modern music. (My '24)
Rosenfeld, P. Musical chronicle. (Ap 24)
Spaeth, S. G. Common sense of music. (O '24)

Dictionaries

Hull, A. E., ed. Dictionary of modern music and musicians. (F '25)
Pratt, W. S., ed. New encyclopedia of music and musicians. (Je '24)

History and criticism

Landowska, W. Music of the past. (F '25)

Psychology

Savill, A. Music, health and character. (Ag '24)
Trotter, T: H: Y. Music and mind. (Ag '24)

United States

Damrosch, W. J. My musical life. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Music, French
Hill, E: B. Modern French music. (N '24)
Music, Greek and Roman
Stanley, A. A: Greek themes in modern musical settings. (D '24)
Music, Influence of
Benedict, M. E. What music does to us. (D '24)
Music and mind. Trotter, T: H: Y. (Ag '24)
Music, health and character. Savill, A. (Ag '24)
Music of the past. Landowska, W. (F '25)
Musical chronicle. Rosenfeld, P. (Ap '24)
Musical laughs. Finck, H: T. (F '25)
Musicians
Hull, A. E., ed. Dictionary of modern music and musicians. (F '25)
Kenyon, C. F. Written in friendship. (Ag '24)
Pratt, W. S., ed. New encyclopedia of music and musicians. (Je '24)
Rimskiĭ-Korsakoff, N. A. My musical life. (My '24)
Musicians, French
Hill, E: B. Modern French music. (N '24)
Mussolini as revealed in his political speeches. Mussolini, B. (Ap '24)
My book and heart. Harris, C. M. (My '24)
My brother's face. Mukerji, D. G. (D '24)
My class in composition. Bezard, J. (Je '24)
My daughter Helen. Monkhouse, A. N. (N '24)
My dear Cornelia. Sherman, S. P. (N '24)
My disillusionment in Russia. Goldman, E. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
My duel with the Vatican. Loisy, A. F. (F '25)
My Eskimo friends. Flaherty, R. H. and F. H. (Ja '25)
My fair lady. Hémon, L: (Ap '24)
My golfing life. Herd, S. (Ag '24)
My life. Anissia. (Je '24)
My life in art. Stanislavsky, C. (Je '24)
My musical life. Damrosch, W. J. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
My musical life. Rimskiĭ-Korsakoff, N. A. (My '24)
My past and thoughts. Herzen, A. I. (O '24)
My Rhineland journal. Allen, H: T. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
My tropic isle. Banfield, E. J. (Ag '24)
My university days. Gorky, M., pseud. (Ap '24)
Myself when young. Waugh, A. (Ap '24)
Mysteries and miracle-plays, English
Adams, J. Q., ed. Chief pre-Shakespearean dramas. (F '25)
Mystery of Norman's court. Chancellor, J: (My '24)
Mystery of religion. Martin, E. D. (S '24, Ja '25)
Mystery of the hive. Evrard, E. (Ap '24)
Mystery of words. Bell, R. H. (Mr '24)
Mystery woman. MacGowan, A., and Newberry, P. (Mr '24)
Mysticism
Bennett, C: A. A. Philosophical study of mysticism. (My '24)
Hardman, O. Ideals of asceticism. (Je '24)
Mythology
Couzens, R. C. Stories of the months and days. (Je '24)
Frazer, J. G: Leaves from the Golden bough. (D '24)
Mythology, Egyptian
Lorimer, N. O. By the waters of Egypt. (O '24)

Naju of the Nile. Barnes, H. E. (F '25)
Naked king. Ades, A. (Ja '25)
Names, Geographical
Von Engeln, O. D., and Urquhart, J. D. Story key to geographic names. (F '25)
Napoleon I, emperor of the French
Ballard, C. R. Napoleon. (F '25)
Faure, E. Napoleon. (D '24)
Forester, C. S. Napoleon and his court. (N '24)
Guérard, A. L. Reflections on the Napoleonic legend. (Mr '24)
Lullin de Châteauvieux, J. F: Manuscript of St Helena. (D '24)
Mowat, R. B. Diplomacy of Napoleon. (N '24)

Fiction

Landau, M. A. Saint Helena. (Mr '24)
Napoleon. Ballard, C. R. (F '25)
Napoleon. Faure, E. (D '24)
Napoleon and his court. Forester, C. S. (N '24)
Narcissus. Heard, G. (F '25)
Narcotics
McAdoo, W: When the court takes a recess. (N '24)
Narrative technique. Uzzell, T: H. (N '24)
National cash register company
Crowther, S: John H. Patterson. (Ap '24)
National characteristics, American
Belloc, H. The contrast. (Je '24)
Kallen, H. M. Culture and democracy in the United States. (My '24)
Nevins, A., comp. and ed. American social history as recorded by British travellers. (Je '24)
O'Higgins, H. J., and Reede, E: H. American mind in action. (Ap '24)
National government and business. Swenson, R. J: (D '24)
Natural business year. Sells, E. W. (F '25)
Natural history
Christy, C. Big game and pygmies. (O '24)
Hornaday, W: T. Tales from nature's wonderlands. (D '24)
Thomson, J: A. Science, old and new. (Ag '24)
Townsend, C: W. Beach grass. (Ap '24)

Natural history—Continued

Africa

Barns, T: A. Across the great craterland to the Congo. (N '24)

Galápagos islands

Beebe, W: Galápagos, world's end. (Ap '24)

Queensland

Banfield, E. J. My tropic isle. (Ag '24)

Natural history of crystals. Tutton, A. E. H. (S '24)

Natural man. Miller, P. (Ja '25)

Naturalist at the poles. Brown, R. N. R. (My '24)

Naturalists

Osborn, H: F. Impressions of great naturalists. (Ja '25)

Nature

Massingham, H. J. In praise of England. (Ja '25)

Swift, H. Where green lanes end. (Ja '25)

Watson, E. L. G. Moods of earth and sky. (Ag '24)

Nature of a crime. Conrad, J., and Ford, F. M. (N '24)

Nature of intelligence. Thurston, L: L. (F '25)

Nature of laughter. Gregory, J. C. (F '25)

Nature of love. Berl, E. (O '24)

Nature, practice and history of art. Magonigle, H. Van B. (F '25)

Navajo mountain, Utah

Bernheimer, C: L. Rainbow Bridge. (F '25)

Naval architecture

Manning, F: Life of Sir William White. (Ap '24)

Naval biography

Stevens, W: O. Boyhoods of our navy heroes. (Ag '24)

Naval history of the World war. Frothingham, T: G. (Ja '25)

Navies, Cost of

Enock, A. G. Problem of armaments. (Ap '24)

Near East

Bierstadt, E: H. Great betrayal. (O '24)

Rawlinson, A. Adventures in the Near East, 1918-1922. (Ag '24)

Near East relief

Elliott, M. E. Beginning again at Ararat. (Ap '24)

Necessity of art. Clutton-Brock, A., and others. (Ag '24)

Needle's eye. Train, A. (N '24)

Negro from Africa to America. Weatherford, W. D. (O '24)

Negro poetry

Kerlin, R. T: Negro poets and their poems. (My '24)

White, N. I., and Jackson, W. C. Anthology of verse by American negroes. (Ag '24)

Negro poets and their poems. Kerlin, R. T: (My '24)

Negroes

Du Bois, W: E: B. Gift of black folk. (N '24)

Weatherford, W. D. Negro from Africa to America. (O '24)

Nell Gwyn. Benjamin, L: S. (D '24)

Netherlands

Social life and customs

Huizinga, J. Waning of the Middle ages. (O '24)

Nevinson, Henry Woodd

Nevinson, H: W. Changes and chances. (Ap '24)

The new Candide. Cournos, J: (Je '24)

New encyclopedia of music and musicians. Pratt, W. S., ed. (Je '24)

New England

Description and travel

Murphy, T: D. New England highways and byways. (F '25)

New England highways and byways. Murphy, T: D. (F '25)

New friends in Old Chester. Deland, M. W. (Ag '24)

New governments of central Europe. Graham, M. W., and Binkley, R. C. (S '24)

New Guinea

Holmes, J: H. In primitive New Guinea. (Je '24)

Description and travel

Hurley, F. Pearls and savages. (My '24)

New Jerusalem church

Hodgetts, E: A. B. Reasonable religion. (My '24)

New Mexico

Austin, M. Land of journeys' ending. (D '24)

Description and travel

Graham, S. In quest of El Dorado. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Townshend, R. B. Tenderfoot in New Mexico. (Mr '24)

New moon. Meigs, C. (Ja '25)

New psychology and the preacher. Miller, H. C. (F '25)

New roads to childhood. Moore, A. C. (Mr '24)

New Spoon river. Masters, E. L. (N '24)

New theories of matter and the atom. Berthoud, A. (F '25)

New vision in the German arts. Scheffauer, H. G. (Ag '24)

New world of labor. Eddy, S. (Ap '24)

New year's day. Wharton, E. (Ag '24)

New York (city)

Churches

Stewart, W: R. Grace church and old New York. (Je '24)

Description

Bercovici, K. Around the world in New York. (N '24)

McIntyre, O. O. White light nights. (Ag '24)

Newton, J. F. Preaching in New York. (Ag '24)

Foreign population

Bercovici, K. Around the world in New York. (N '24)

Politics and government

Curran, H: H. John Citizen's job. (My '24)

Social life and customs

Van Rensselaer, M. Social ladder. (Ag '24)

New York (state)

Cobb, I. S. New York. (Je '24)

Historic houses, etc.

Eberlein, H. D. Manors and historic homes of the Hudson valley. (Ja '25)

Politics and government

Gosnell, H. F. Boss Platt and his New York machine. (Mr '24)

New Zealand

Description and travel

Carpenter, F. G: Australia, New Zealand, and some islands of the South seas. (Ag '24)

Newspapers

Bastian, G: C. Editing the day's news. (My '24)

Nichiren

Satomi, K. Japanese civilization. (Ag '24)

Nicholas. Moore, A. C. (D '24)

Nicholas II, emperor of Russia

Hanbury-Williams, J: Emperor Nicholas II as I knew him. (Ap '24)

Nicolson, Victoria Mary. See Sackville-West, V. M. (Mr '24)

Nina. Ertz, S. (N '24)

Nine unknown. Mundy, T. (D '24)

Nineteenth century childhood. MacCarthy, M. (Ja '25)

Nineteenth century evolution and after. Dawson, M. (Ap '24)

Non-resistance
  Hirst, M. E. Quakers in peace and war. (Ap '24)
Non-voting. Merriam, C: E:, and Gosnell, E. F. (N '24)
None so blind. Fitch, A. P. (Ap '24)
Nor all thy tears. Boyle, C. A. (My '24)
Normal mind. Burnham, W: H. (F '25)
North Carolina
  Cobb, I. S. North Carolina. (Je '24)
Northern woodlot trees. Berry, J. B. (F '25)
Northwest, Pacific
  Work, J: Journal of John Work. (Ag '24)
Not wanted. Williams, J. L. (My '24)
Notes of my youth. Loti, P., pseud. (Je '24)
Nuns
  Lord, D. A. Our nuns. (My '24)
Nursery rhymes
  Bett, H: Nursery rhymes. (N '24)
Nutrition
  McFee, I. N. Food and health. (Ag '24)
  Mendel, L. B. Nutrition. (Ap '24)
Nutt, Lily Clive. See Arden, C., pseud. (F '25)

The oblate. Huysmans, J. K. (O '24)
Obligations. Miller, E. Y. (O '24)
Occult sciences
  Hering, D. W. Foibles and fallacies of science. (Ja '25)
Occupation, Choice of
  Blackford, K. M., and Newcomb, A. Right job. (My '24)
Off the high road. Reid, A. (My '24)
Office management
  Weaver, A. Office organization and practice. (Mr '24)
Office organization and practice. Weaver, A. (Mr '24)
Officer! Footner H. (O '24)
Ogden, Robert Curtis
  Wilson, P. W. Unofficial statesmen—Robert C. Ogden. (F '25)
Oil. Gilkyson, T. W. (O '24)
Oil and gas engine power. Daw, A. W. and Z. W. (S '24)
Oil trusts and Anglo-American relations. Davenport, E. H., and Cook, S. R. (Ap '24)
Oil well drilling methods. Ziegler, V: (S '24)
Old and the new Germany. Coar, J: F. (Mr '24)
Old Bailey, London
  Kingston, C: Dramatic days at the Old Bailey. (F '25)
An old-fashioned romance. Newton, A. (Ag '24)
Old firm. Howard, F. M. (S '24)
The old ladies. Walpole, H. S. (D '24)
The old maid. Wharton, E. (Ag '24)
Old men of the sea. Mackenzie, C. (D '24)
Old Misery. Pendexter, H. (O '24)
Old New York. Wharton, E. (Ag '24)
Old St Andrews. Robertson, E. S. (My '24)
Old Spode. Cannon, T. G. (F '25)
Old Testament; a new translation. Moffatt, J., tr. (F '25)
Old Testament criticism. Gray, E: D. M. (Ap '24)
The old-world house. Cescinsky, H. (Ja '25)
On life and letters; fourth series. France, A. (Ag '24)
On strange altars. Smith, P. J.- (Je '24)
On the fringe of eastern seas. Blundell, P: (Ag '24)
On the lot and off. Chester, G: R. and L. E. (Je '24)
On the trail in Yellowstone. Smith, W. (Ag '24)
One act plays. Morley, C. D. (N '24)
One-act plays from the Yiddish. Block, E., tr. (My '24)
One-act plays of to-day. Marriott, J. W., comp. (Ja '25)
One-eyed fairies. Hanley, G. E. (S '24)
One hundred years of the Monroe doctrine. Thomas, D: Y. (Ap '24)
One little boy. De Sélincourt, H. (Ap '24)
One-piece dinners. Chambers, M. D. (N '24)
One thousand best books. Dickinson, A. D., comp. (F '25)
One way street. Davis, B. (Ja '25)
Ontario
Description and travel
  Longstreth, T: M. Lake Superior country. (Ag '24)
Opera
Stories, plots, etc.
  Davidson, G. More stories from the operas. (Ja '25)
  Watkins, M. F. First aid to the opera-goer. (D '24)
Opium trade
  La Motte, E. N. Ethics of opium. (Ag '24)
Opportunity and Theodore Roosevelt. Dawson, F. W. (My '24)
Orations
  O'Neill, J. M. Modern short speeches. (Ag '24)
Ordeal. Collins, D. (S '24)
Orenburgsky, Sergey Gussiev. See Gusev, S. I (D '24)
Organized business knowledge. Johnson, J. F. (Je '24)
Organized theatre. Ervine, St J: G. (N '24)
Origin and development of the high school in New England before 1865. Grizzell, E. D. (Je '24)
Origin of magic and religion. Perry, W: J. (S '24)
Origins of sociology. Small, A. W. (D '24)
Orinoco river
  Friel, A. O. River of Seven Stars. (D '24)
Orleans, Elizabeth Charlotte, duchesse d'
  Orleans, E. C. Letters of Madame. (O '24)
Osgood, Herbert Levi
  Fox, D. R. Herbert Levi Osgood. (S '24)
Other people's lives. Phillips, H: A. (Je '24)
Oundle school
  Wells, H. G: Story of a great schoolmaster. (Mr '24)
Our American kings. Collins, F: L: (Ja '25)
Our American theater. Sayler, O. M. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Our capital on the Potomac. Nicolay, H. (Ja '25)
Our competitors and markets. Lahee, A. W. (Ja '25)
Our faith in education. Suzzallo, H: (O '24)
Our foreign affairs. Mowrer, P. S. (My '24)
Our forerunners. Burkitt, M. C. (S '24)
Our harbors and inland waterways. Collins, F. A. (Ja '25)
Our nuns. Lord, D. A. (My '24)
Our physical world. Downing, E. R. (N '24)
Our presidents. Morgan, J. (D '24)
Our second American adventure. Doyle, A. C. (Ag '24)
Out of silence. Ficke, A. D. (Ag '24)
Outland piper. Davidson, D. (Ap '24)
Outlaws of Cave-in-Rock. Rothert, O: A. (O '24)
Outlaw's diary: the commune. Tormay, C. (Mr '24)
Outline of art. Orpen, W:, ed. (Je '24)
Outline of literature. 3v Drinkwater, J:, ed. (Mr, Je '24 and 1923 Annual)
Outline of municipal government. Maxey, C. C. (O '24)
Outline of the British labor movement. Blanshard, P. (Ap '24)
Outlines of general zoölogy. Newman, H. H. (D '24)
Outsider. Sutherland, J. (O '24)
Outward bound. Vane, S. (Mr '24)
Owen, Caroline Dale, pseud. See Snedeker, C. D. (F '25)
Owls' nest. Garstin, C. (Mr '24)
Oxford poetry, 1923. (My '24)

Packing industry
  Institute of American meat packers. Packing industry. (D '24)
Painters
  Garesché, E: F. Great Christian artists. (O '24)
Painters, American
Rosenfeld, P. Port of New York. (Ag '24)

Painting
  Cheney, S. Primer of modern art. (S '24)
  Speed, H. Science and practice of oil painting. (F '25)
  History
  Orpen, W:, ed. Outline of art. (Je '24)
Painting, Chinese
  Waley, A. Introduction to the study of Chinese painting. (Je '24)
Painting, French
  Pach, W. Masters of modern art. (Ja '25)
Painting, Industrial
  Kelly, A. A. Household painter. (S '24)
Paintings
  Lucas, E: V. Wanderer among pictures. (F '25)
Palaungs
  Milne, L. Home of an eastern clan. (N '24)
Palestine
  Description and travel
  Harry, M., pseud. Springtide in Palestine. (N '24)
Pallieter. Timmermans, F. (N '24)
Palmerston, Henry John Temple, viscount
  Martin, B. K. Triumph of Lord Palmerston. (O '24)
Pam at fifty. Hutten zum Stolzenberg, B. von. (Je '24)
Panama
  Description and travel
  Graham, S. In quest of El Dorado. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Pandora La Croix. Wright, G. (Je '24)
Pandora lifts the lid. Morley, C. D., and Marquis, D. (Ag '24)
Paper making and trade
  Kellogg, R. S. Pulpwood and wood pulp in North America. (Je '24)
Papini, Giovanni
  Papini, G. The failure. (My '24)
Parents
  Lhotzky, H. Soul of your child. (F '25)
Paris
  Description
  Laughlin, C. E. So you're going to Paris! (Je '24)
  Restaurants
  Story, A. M. S. Dining in Paris. (O '24)
Parker, E. H. Thousand years of the Tartars. (Ja '25)
Parodies
  Knox, E. G: V. Fiction as she is wrote. (D '24)
  Ward, C. L. Gentleman into goose. (Ja '25)
  Ward, C. L. Twisted tales. (Ja '25)
Parsons' Pleasure. Morley, C. D. (Ap '24)
Parson's progress. Mackenzie, C. (Mr '24)
Parthenon
  Hambidge, J. Parthenon and other Greek temples. (N '24)
Parthenon and other Greek temples. Hambidge, J. (N '24)
Pascal d'Angelo, son of Italy. Angelo, P. d'. (F '25)
Passage to India. Forster, E: M. (O '24)
Passing of politics. Wallace, W: K. (Ja '25)
Passion flower. Underwood, E. (Je '24)
Passionate adventure. Stayton, F. (F '25)
Passionate quest. Oppenheim, E. P. (D '24)
Passionate year. Hilton, J. (My '24)
Pasteur, Louis
  Holmes, S: J. Louis Pasteur. (Je '24)
Patchwork. Hall, G. E. (O '24)
Path Wharton found. Quillen, R. (Ja '25)
Patricia Ellen. Wiltshire, M. (N '24)
Patricia's awakening. Barrett, H. J. (S '24)
Patriotic poetry
  Drinkwater, J: Patriotism in literature. (N '24)
Patriotism
  Drinkwater, J: Patriotism in literature. (N '24)
Patriotism in literature. Drinkwater, J: (N '24)
Patriotism of the American Jew. McCall, S: W. (O '24)
Pattern making
  McCaslin, H. J: Wood pattern-making. (Ap '24)
Patterson, John Henry
  Crowther, S: John H. Patterson. (Ap '24)
Pauline. De Knoop, F. (Mr '24)
Paulus Fy. Mullins, H., and Gallegher, M. (D '24)
Pavements
  Harger, W. G. Rural highway pavements. (S '24)
Payne, E. S. Lights along the ledges. (Ag '24)
Peace
  Kellor, F., and Hatvany, A. Security against war. (F '25)
  Lape, E. E., ed. Ways to peace. (My '24)
Peace conference, 1919
  Beer, G: L: African questions at the Paris peace conference. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Peacock feathers. Bailey, T. (Ja '25)
Pearl lagoon. Nordhoff, C: B. (Ja '25)
Pearls and pepper. Utter, R. P. (S '24)
Pearls and savages. Hurley, F. (My '24)
Pedlar's pack. Kenney, R. (Ag '24)
Peggy's playhouses. Hunt, C. W. (F '25)
Pennsylvania Germans. Rosenberger, J. L. (Ag '24)
People you know. Stark H. (Ag '24)
People's corporation. Gillette, K. C. (Ag '24)
Pepys, Samuel
  Bradford, G. Soul of Samuel Pepys. (Ap '24)
Perfect day. Lynch, B. (Je '24)
Perfect wife. Bottome, P. (Je '24)
Perfumery
  Poucher, W: A. Perfumes and cosmetics. (Je '24)
Perfumes and cosmetics. Poucher, W: A. (Je '24)
Periodical essayists of the eighteenth century. Marr, G: S. (O '24)
Periodicals
  Drewry, J: E. Some magazines and magazine makers. (F '25)
  Marr, G: S. Periodical essayists of the eighteenth century. (O '24)
Perlet, Charles Frédéric
  Gosselin, L: L. T: Two royalist spies of the French revolution. (Je '24)
Personal relation in industry. Rockefeller, J: D., jr. (Mr '24)
Personal religion and the life of devotion. Inge, W: R. (Mr '24)
Personality
  Buckham, J: W. Personality and psychology. (F '25)
Personality and psychology. Buckham, J: W. (F '25)
Personality and social adjustment. Groves, E. R. (Ap '24)
Personality in politics. Munro, W: B. (Ja '25)
Personnel management. Scott, W. D., and Clothier, R. C. (My '24)
Perugia
  Fauré, G. Land of St Francis of Assisi. (Ja '25)
Peter was married. Street, G. (O '24)
Petroleum
  Brown, R. W. Valuation of oil and gas lands. (F '25)
  Garfias, V. R: Petroleum resources of the world. (Je '24)
  L'Espagnol de la Tramerye, P. World-struggle for oil. (Mr '24)
  Uren, L. C: Textbook of petroleum production engineering. (F '25)
  Well-boring
  Ziegler, V: Oil well drilling methods. (S '24)
Petroleum industry and trade
  Davenport, E. H., and Cook, S. R. Oil trusts and Anglo-American relations. (Ap '24)
  Marcosson, I: F: Black Golconda. (O '24)
Petroleum resources of the world. Garfias, V. R: (Je '24)

Pharisees
Herford, R. T. The Pharisees. (Ag '24)
Philippine Islands
Politics and government
Williams, D. R. United States and the Philippines. (Ja '25)
Philosopher's stone. Larsen, J. A. (S '24)
Philosophical dictionary. Voltaire, F. M. A. de. (O '24)
Philosophical study of mysticism. Bennett, C: A. A. (My '24)
Philosophy
Carr, H. W. Scientific approach to philosophy. (O '24)
Hulme, T: E. Speculations. (F '25)
Otto, M. C. Things and ideals. (Ja '25)
Philosophy, British
Muirhead, J: H:, ed. Contemporary British philosophy. (Ap '24)
Philosophy, Greek
More, P. E. Hellenistic philosophies. (Je '24)
Philosophy, Modern
Joad, C. E. M. Introduction to modern philosophy. (Ja '25)
Philosophy and religion
Balfour, A. J. B. Theism and thought. (My '24)
Philosophy of as if. Vaihinger, H. (D '24)
'Phone booth mystery. Ironside, J: (O '24)
Photo-engraving
Groesbeck, H. A., jr. Process and practice of photo-engraving. (S '24)
Photography of animals
Maxwell, M. Stalking big game with a camera in equatorial Africa. (Ja '25)
Photometry
Walsh, J: W: T. Elementary principles of lighting and photometry. (S '24)
Physical basis of life. Wilson, E. B. (Je '24)
Physical education and training
Crampton, C: W. Physical exercise for daily use. (O '24)
Physical exercise for daily use. Crampton, C: W. (O '24)
Physics
Downing, E. R. Our physical world. (N '24)
Physiognomy
Blackford, K. M. and Newcomb, A. Right job. (My '24)
Physiology
Grenfell, W. T. Yourself and your body. (F '25)
Picaro. Nordhoff, C: B. (Ja '25)
Pictorial beauty on the screen. Freeburg, V: O. (Ap '24)
Pictures
Indexes
Shepard, F: J., comp. Index to illustrations. (D '24)
Pierre Curie. Curie, M. S. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Pilgrimage. Bojer, J. (O '24)
Pilgrim's scrip. Rice, C. Y. (D '24)
Pink sugar. Douglas, O., pseud. (S '24)
Pioneers in Palestine. Trager, H. (Ag '24)
Pipe book. Dunhill, A. (F '25)
Pipers and a dancer. Benson, S. (N '24)
Pipers of the market place. Graves, C. I. M. (O '24)
Pirates
Jameson, J: F., ed. Privateering and piracy in the colonial period. (My '24)
Pitiful wife. Jameson, M. S. (Mr '24)
Places of English literature. Bidwell, A. T., and Rosenstiel, I. D. (S '24)
Plain talks on economics. Franklin, F. (O '24, Ja '25)
Plan reading and quantity surveying. Dingman, C: F. (F '25)
Planned control in manufacturing. Lichtner, W: O: (S '24)
Plants
Collection and preservation
Ward, F. K. Romance of plant hunting. (Ag '24)
Plants, Cultivated
Bailey, L. H. Manual of cultivated plants. (S '24)
Plastic age. Marks, P. (Mr '24)
Platt, Thomas Collier
Gosnell, H. F. Boss Platt and his New York machine. (Mr '24)
Plays. Turgenev, I. S. (O '24)
Plays; fourth series. Benavente y Martínez, J. (O '24)
Plea for monogamy. Lay, W. (Ap '24)
Pleasure
Wells, F: L. Pleasure and behavior. (Ap '24)
Pleasure and behavior. Wells, F: L. (Ap '24)
Pleasures of architecture. Williams-Ellis, C. and A. (O '24)
Pliny (Gaius Plinius Caecilius Secundus) the younger
Tanzer, H. H. Villas of Pliny the younger. (Je '24)
Plumes. Stallings, L. (S '24)
Plutarch lied. Pierrefeu, J. de. (Mr '24)
Pocono Shot. Foote, J: T. (Ja '25)
Poe, Edgar Allan
Cody, S. Poe—man, poet, and creative thinker. (S '24)
Poe—man, poet, and creative thinker. Cody, S. (S '24)
Poems. Byron, G: G. N. B. (Ag '24)
Poems. Spingarn, J. E. (O '24)
Poet assassinated. Apollinaire, G. (My '24)
Poetic imagery. Wells, H: W. (N '24)
Poetics
Cooper, L. Poetics of Aristotle. (Ap '24)
Poetics of Aristotle. Cooper, L. (Ap '24)
Poetry
Fausset, H. I'A. Studies in idealism. (Ap '24)
Noyes, A. Some aspects of modern poetry. (Ja '25)
Poetry (individual authors)
Adam, H. D. Elfin pedlar. (Ag '24)
Adams, F. P. So much velvet. (Ja '25)
Aldington, H. Heliodora. (N '24)
Atkin, R. H: Ballads of a beachcomber. (O '24)
Auslander, J. Sunrise trumpets. (My '24)
Bacon, L. Ulug Beg. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Belloc, H. Sonnets and verse. (My '24)
Blake, E. J. Up and down. (D '24)
Bodenheim, M. Against this age. (Mr '24)
Byron, G: G. N. B. Poems. (Ag '24)
Campbell, R. Flaming terrapin. (O '24)
Clark, M. H. Home road. (My '24)
Coatsworth, E. J. Atlas and beyond. (Ag '24)
Coffin, R. P: T. Christchurch. (F '25)
Conant, I. Many wings. (Je '24)
Conkling, H. Silverhorn. (F '25)
Cooke, E. V. Companionable poems. (Ag '24)
Cournos, J: In exile. (Ap '24)
Crane, N. C. R. Janitor's boy. (Ag '24)
Davidson, D. Outland piper. (Ap '24)
Davidson, G. Half century of sonnets. (S '24)
Davies, M. C. Skyline trail. (Ja '25)
Davies, W: H: Secrets. (S '24)
Day, R: E. Dante: a sonnet sequence. (Ja '25)
Dickinson, E. N. Complete poems. (S '24)
Divine, C: Gypsy gold. (Ap '24)
Dow, D. Black Babylon. (S '24)
Doyle, C. Poems. (My '24)
Dresbach, G. W. Enchanted mesa. (S '24)
Driscoll, L. Garden grace. (Ag '24)
Euwer, A. H. By scarlet torch and blade. (Ap '24)
Farrar, J. C. Middle twenties. (S '24)
Ficke, A. D. Out of silence. (Ag '24)
Field, R. L. Pointed people. (Ja '25)
Gay, J: Shepherd's week. (F '25)
Griffith, W: Loves and losses of Pierrot. (F '25)
Grimes, J: House ghosts. (F '25)
Guthrie, R. Trobar clus. (My '24)
Gwynn, S. L. Collected poems. (Je '24)
Hall, G. E. Patchwork. (O '24)
Harmon, B. E. Mosaics. (My '24)
Henderson, D. M. Harp in the winds. (F '25)
Heyward, Du B. Skylines and horizons. (Ap '24)
Holland, N. M. When half gods go. (Ag '24)

Poetry (individual authors)—Continued
  Hoyt, H. Apples here in my basket. (S '24)
  Johnston, J. C. Book of the beloved. (O '24)
  Lincoln, E. C. The ranch. (Ag '24)
  McGovern, J. B. Butterflies of Taiwan. (Ja '25)
  MacKaye, P. Skippers of Nancy Gloucester. (Ag '24)
  MacLeish, A. Happy marriage. (My '24)
  Mansfield, K., pseud. Poems. (Mr '24)
  Masters, E. L. New Spoon river. (N '24)
  Mavity, N. B. Dinner of herbs. (Je '24)
  Millay, E. St V. Harp-weaver. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Miller, N. In earthen bowls. (Ja '25)
  Monroe, H. The difference. (O '24)
  Montgomery, E. S. Scarlet runner. (My '24)
  Montross, L. S. Crimson cloak. (Ag '24)
  Morley, C. D. Parsons' Pleasure. (Ap '24)
  Morton, D: Harvest. (Ag '24)
  Norton, G. F. Miller's youngest daughter. (Je '24)
  Oppenheim, J. The sea. (Je '24)
  Ostenso, M. A far land. (F '25)
  Percy, W: A. Enzio's kingdom. (Je '24)
  Phillpotts, E. Cherry-stones. (Mr '24)
  Piper, E. F. Barbed wire and Wayfarers. (Mr '24)
  Ransom, J: C. Chills and fever. (N '24)
  Redman, B. R. Masquerade. (My '24)
  Reese, L. W. Wild cherry. (My '24)
  Rice, G. Songs of the open. (D '24)
  Robinson, E. A. Man who died twice. (My '24)
  Roe, R. Here you have me! (Ap '24)
  Seymour, W: K. Caesar remembers. (My '24)
  Shane, E. By bog and sea in Donegal. (Ag '24)
  Sinclair, M. Dark night. (Ag '24)
  Sitwell, E. Sleeping beauty. (O '24)
  Smith, C. F. Sea songs and ballads. (Ap '24)
  Spingarn, J. E. Poems. (O '24)
  Steese, E: Storm in harvest. (Ap '24)
  Strong, L. A. G: Lowery road. (S '24)
  Taylor, R. A. End of Fiammetta. (Ja '25)
  Van Doren, M. Spring thunder. (F '25)
  Williams, W. W. Seafarers. (Ag '24)
  Wister, M. Helen and others. (F '25)
  Wolf, R. L. After disillusion. (Ap '24)
  Yeats, W: B Later poems. (S '24)
Poetry of architecture. Rutter, F. V. P. (S '24)
Poetry of places
  Rice, C. Y. Pilgrim's scrip. (D '24)
  Richards, G. M., comp. Magic carpet. (O '24)
Poets
  Barnes, W. Children's poets. (D '24)
Poet's youth. Woods, M. L. (Mr '24)
Poincaré, Raymond
  Huddleston, S. Poincaré. (Ag '24)
Poincaré. Huddleston, S. (Ag '24)
Pointed people. Field, R. L. (Ja '25)
Points of view. Sherman, S. P. (Ja '25)
Poland
History
  Tennant, A. E. Studies in Polish life and history. (Ja '25)
Police dog. Brockwell, D: (Ja '25)
Police dogs
  Brockwell, D: Police dog. (Ja '25)
The policewoman. Hamilton, M. E. (S '24)
Policewomen
  Hamilton, M. E. The policewoman. (S '24)
Political action. Eldridge, S. (Ap '24)
Political ballads and songs, English
  Rollins, H. E:, ed. Cavalier and puritan. (Ja '25)
Political career of Lord Byron. Raymond, D. (Ag '24)
Political parties
  Holcombe, A. N. Political parties of today. (F '25)
United States
  Brooks, R. C. Political parties and electoral problems. (Je '24)
  Haynes, F: E. Social politics in the United States. (Je '24)
Political parties and electoral problems. Brooks, R. C. (Je '24)
Political parties of to-day. Holcombe, A. N. (F '25)
Political science
  Barnes, H. E. Sociology and political theory. (O '24)
  Benians, S. From renaissance to revolution. (S '24)
  Eldridge, S. Political action. (Ap '24)
  Ghoshal, U. History of Hindu political theories. (Ap '24)
  Martz, C: E., and Kinnemann, J: A. Social science for teachers. (Ap '24)
  Munro, W: B. Current problems in citizenship. (D '24)
  Taylor, H. Conditions of national success. (O '24)
  Wallace, W: K. Passing of politics. (Ja '25)
History
  Gettell, R. G. History of political thought. (O '24)
  Morris, C: R: and M. History of political ideas. (F '25)
Politics, Practical
  Behind the scenes in politics. (S '24)
  Curran, H: H. John Citizen's job. (My '24)
  Gosnell, H. F. Boss Platt and his New York machine. (Mr '24)
  Kent, F. R. Great game of politics. (My '24)
  Munro, W: B. Personality in politics. (Ja '25)
  Shepherd, W: G. Boy's own book of politics. (Ag '24)
Pollyanna of the orange blossoms. Smith, H. (O '24)
Polynesia
Description and travel
  Cameron, C. Wanderings in south-eastern seas. (F '25)
Popular fallacies. Ackermann, A. S. E. (Ag '24)
Popular history of American invention. Kaempffert, W. B., ed. (Ja '25)
Popular history of English poetry. Welby, T. E. (O '24)
Population
  East, E: M. Mankind at the crossroads. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Reuter, E: B. Population problems. (My '24)
  Swinburne, J. Population and the social problem. (Ja '25)
Population and the social problem. Swinburne, J. (Ja '25)
Population problems. Reuter, E: B. (My '24)
Port of New York. Rosenfeld, P. (Ag '24)
Portable lamps. Luckeish, M. (Ag '24)
Portland, William Bentinck, 1st earl of
  Grew, M. E. William Bentinck and William III. (Ap '24)
Porto Bello gold. Smith, A. D. H. (D '24)
Portraits: real and imaginary. Boyd, A. E: (Ja '25)
Ports and happy places. Parker, C. (Ag '24)
Portsmouth, New Hampshire
  Rogers, M. C. Glimpses of an old social capital. (Ag '24)
Postal service
United States
  Spero, S. D. Labor movement. (D '24)
Pottery
  Cannon, T. G. Old Spode. (F '25)
Poum. Margueritte, P., and V. (Ag '24)
Powell, Richard Stillman, pseud. See Barbour, R. H: (S '24, Ja '25)
Power of an endless life. Saunderson, H: H. (S '24)
Practical book of outdoor flowers. Wright, R. L. (O '24)
Practical flower gardening. Cloud, K. M.-P. (Je '24)
Practice and theory of individual psychology. Adler, A. (Ag '24)
Pragmatism
  Vaihinger, H. Philosophy of as if. (D '24)
Prague, Bohemia
  Baker, B. G. From a terrace in Prague. (My '24)

- Prancing nigger. Firbank, A. A. R. (My '24)
- Preaching in New York. Newton, J. E. (Ag '24)
- Prejudices: fourth series. Mencken, H: L: (Ja '25)
- Preparation of Calvin Coolidge. Woods, R. A. (N '24)
- Preparation of reports. Baker, R. P. (F '25)
- Present state of Germany. Morgan, J: H. (O '24)
- Presidential candidates
  - Gilbert, C. W. "You takes your choice." (N '24)
- Presidents
  - United States
    - Barry, D: S. Forty years in Washington. (Ap '24)
    - Berman, E: Labor disputes and the president of the United States. (Ja '25)
    - Morgan, J. Our presidents. (D '24)
- Prevention of vibration and noise. Eason, A. B. (Ap '24)
- Price of freedom. Coolidge, C. (My '24)
- Priceless pearl. Miller, A. (O '24)
- Prices
  - Bibliography
    - New York University. Bureau of business research. Source-book of research data. (Ap '24)
- Prillilgirl. Wells, C. (D '24)
- Primer of modern art. Cheney, S. (S '24)
- Primitive religion. Lowie, R. H. (N '24)
- The prince. John, G. (Ag '24)
- Prince de Ligne. Gilbert, O. P. (Ag '24)
- Princes of Wales
  - Bridge, F: M. Princes of Wales. (Mr '24)
- Princess and the clowns. Frappa, J.-J. (F '25)
- Princesses, ladies and adventuresses of the reign of Louis XIV. Latour, T. L. (F '25)
- Principles and methods of retailing. Greene, J. H: (F '25)
- Principles and practice of electrical engineering. Gray, A. (F '25)
- Principles of auditing. Kohler, E. L:, and Pettengill, P. W. (Ja '25)
- Principles of business writing. Whipple, T: H. B. (F '25)
- Principles of electroplating and electroforming. Blum, W:, and Hogaboom, G: B. (S '24)
- Principles of foreign trade. Griffin, C. E. (F '25)
- Principles of investment. Kirshman, J: E. (Ja '25)
- Principles of journalism. Yost, C. S. (My '24)
- Principles of merchandising. Copeland, M. T: (D '24)
- Principles of railroad transportation. Jones, E. (O '24)
- Principles of real estate practice. Fisher, E. M. (Ap '24)
- Principles of reasoning. Robinson, D. S. (D '24)
- Principles of sociology. Bushee, F: A. (Ag '24)
- Principles of teaching practically applied. Minor, R. (F '25)
- Principles of vital statistics. Falk, I. S. (S '24)
- Prisoner who sang. Bojer, J. (My '24)
- Prisons
  - O'Hare, K. R. In prison. (Ap '24)
  - Osborne, T: M. Prisons and common sense. (Je '24)
  - Tannenbaum, F. Darker phases of the South. (Mr '24)
- Prisons and common sense. Osborne, T: M. (Je '24)
- Private life of Louis XV. Angerville, M. d'. (S '24)
- Privateering
  - Jameson, J: F., ed. Privateering and piracy in the colonial period. (My '24)
- Privateering and piracy in the colonial period. Jameson, J: F. (My '24)
- Privateers of '76. Paine, R. D. (My '24)
- Prize stories of 1923. O. Henry memorial award. (Ap '24)
- Problem of armaments. Enock, A. G. (Ap '24)
- Problems in business economics. Vanderblue, H. B. (D '24)
- Problems of belief. Schiller, F. C. S. (O '24)
- Problems of life. Trotsky, L., pseud. (D '24)
- Problems of public finance. Jensen, J. P. (N '24)
- Process and practice of photo-engraving. Groesbeck, H. A., jr. (S '24)
- Profession, Choice of
  - Bureau of vocational information. Training for the professions and allied occupations. (F '25)
- Profession of arms. Colby, E. (D '24)
- Professions
  - MacDonald, W: Intellectual worker and his work. (My '24)
- Professor, how could you! Wilson, H. L. (D '24)
- Profit
  - Hastings, H. B. Costs and profits. (Ap '24)
- Progress
  - Taylor, H. Conditions of national success. (O '24)
  - Taylor, H: O. Freedom of the mind in history. (Ap '24)
- Progressive education. Mirick, G: A. (Ap '24)
- Prohibition
  - Vecki, V: G. Alcohol and prohibition. (Ap '24)
  - Wilson, C. T., and Pickett, E. D. Case for prohibition. (Ap '24)
- Project method in teaching
  - Coe, G: A. Law and freedom in the school. (S '24)
- Properties and uses of wood. Koehler, A. (F '25)
- Property
  - Commons, J: R. Legal foundations of capitalism. (Ag '24)
- Prophets unawares. Price, L. (Je '24)
- Protoplasm
  - Lillie, R. S. Protoplasmic action and nervous action. (Ap '24)
- Protoplasmic action and nervous action. Lillie, R. S. (Ap '24)
- Proud flesh. Rising, L. (S '24)
- Proust, Marcel
  - Scott-Moncrieff, C: K., comp. Marcel Proust. (Ap '24)
- Proverbs of Goya. Young, B. (Ap '24)
- The prowler. Wiley, H. (F '25)
- Prudence's daughter. Hueston, E. (D '24)
- Prunello. Mais, S. P. B. (S '24)
- Psychical research
  - Flammarion, C. Haunted houses. (S '24)
  - Osty, E. Supernormal faculties in man. (S '24)
  - Thomas, C: D. Some new evidence for human survival. (D '24)
- Psychoanalysis
  - Baudouin, C: Psychoanalysis and aesthetics. (Je '24)
  - Freud, S. Beyond the pleasure principle. (O '24)
  - Martin, E. D. Mystery of religion. (S '24)
  - Miller, H. C. New psychology and the preacher. (F '25)
  - Pfister, O. R. Love in children and its aberrations. (Je '24)
  - Wittels, F. Sigmund Freud. (D '24)
- Psychoanalysis and aesthetics. Baudouin, C: (Je '24)
- Psychological novels
  - Brewster, D., and Burrell, A. Dead reckonings in fiction. (Ja '25)
  - Collins, J. Taking the literary pulse. (Je '24)
- Psychological tests in business. Kornhauser, A. W., and Kingsbury, F. A. (F '25)
- Psychology
  - Bennett, H: E. Psychology and self-development. (Ag '24)
  - Bentley, I: M. Field of psychology. (Ja '25)
  - Buckham, J: W. Personality and psychology. (F '25)
  - Burnham, W: H. Normal mind. (F '25)
  - Dresser, H. W. Psychology in theory and application. (Ag '24)
  - Green, G: H. Mind in action. (Ag '24)
  - Groves, E. R. Personality and social adjustment. (Ap '24)
  - Lawson, C: F. You can change it. (My '24)
  - Martin, E. D. Psychology. (N '24)
  - Moore, T: V. Dynamic psychology. (Ja '25)
  - Robinson, E: S. and F., eds. Readings in general psychology. (Ap '24)

Psychology—Continued
Seabury, D: Unmasking our minds. (F '25)
Stern, W: Psychology of early childhood. (S '24)
Thurstone, L: L. Nature of intelligence. (F '25)
Wells, F: L. Pleasure and behavior. (Ap '24)
White, W: A. Introduction to the study of the mind. (D '24)
Psychology, Abnormal
Goodwin, J: C. Insanity and the criminal. (Je '24)
Psychology, Comparative
Kellogg, V. L. Mind and heredity. (My '24)
Psychology, Educational
Alexander, F: M. Constructive conscious control of the individual. (Ap '24)
Bolton, F: E. Everyday psychology for teachers. (Ag '24)
Psychology, Pathological
Adler, A. Practice and theory of individual psychology. (Ag '24)
Mateer, F. Unstable child. (Ag '24)
White, W: A. Introduction to the study of the mind. (D '24)
Psychology, Physiological
Givler, R. C. Ethics of Hercules. (S '24)
Griffitts, C: H. Fundamentals of vocational psychology. (Ja '25)
Pear, T. H. Skill in work and play. (F '25)
Psychology, Religious
Martin, E. D. Mystery of religion. (S '24)
Miller, H. C. New psychology and the preacher. (F '25)
Psychology and self-development. Bennett, H: E. (Ag '24)
Psychology in theory and application. Dresser, H. W. (Ag '24)
Psychology of early childhood. Stern, W: (S '24)
Public health
Moore, H. H. Public health in the United States. (Ap '24)
Great Britain
Balfour, A., and Scott, H: H. Health problems of the empire. (D '24)
Public health in the United States. Moore, H. H. (Ap '24)
Public opinion
Bernays, E: L. Crystallizing public opinion. (Ap '24)
Martin, B. K. Triumph of Lord Palmerston. (O '24)
Public relations counsel
Bernays, E: L. Crystallizing public opinion. (Ap '24)
Public schools
Miller, C. R., and Charles, F. Publicity and the public school. (F '25)
Sinclair, U. B. The goslings. (My '24)
Public speaking
Beveridge, A. J. Art of public speaking. (Ja '25)
Pelsma, J: R. Essentials of speech. (S '24)
Public utilities
Morgan, C: S. Regulation and the management of public utilities. (Je '24)
Publicity
Bernays, E: L. Crystallizing public opinion. (Ap '24)
Miller, C. R., and Charles, F. Publicity and the public school. (F '25)
Publicity and the public school. Miller, C. R., and Charles, E. (F '25)
Publicity for public libraries. Ward, G. O. (S '24)
Pulitzer, Joseph
Seitz, D. C. Joseph Pulitzer. (F '25)
Pulpwood and wood pulp in North America. Kellogg, R. S. (Je '24)
Punch and Judy. Baring, M. (D '24)
Punchinello. Rosenberg, J. N. (My '24)
Puppet-plays
Anderson, M. Heroes of the puppet stage. (Ap '24)
Thorndike, R., and Arkell, R. Tragedy of Mr Punch. (D '24)
Puppy book. Lemmon, R. S. (Ag '24)
Puritanism
O'Higgins, H. J., and Reede, E: H. American mind in action. (Ap '24)
Purple or the red. Sherrill, C: H. (My '24)
Purple sapphire. Taine, J: (F '25)
Putnam, Israel
Putnam, G: H. Some memories of the Civil war. (Ap '24)
Pyeshkoff, Alexei Maximovich. See Gorky, M., pseud. (Ap '24, Ja '25)

Quaint companions. Merrick, L. (Ja '25)
Quakers in peace and war. Hirst, M. E. (Ap '24)
Queen of the blues. Montagu, E. (Ap '24)
Queensland
Description and travel
Banfield, E. J. My tropic isle. (Ag '24)
Queer things about London. Harper, C: G: (Ag '24)
Quenchless light. Laut, A. C. (N '24)
Quiney, Richard
Fripp, E. I. Master Richard Quyny. (Ja '25)
Quinney's adventures. Vachell, H. A. (Ag '24)
The quitter. Schieren, H. V: (D '24)

R. F. D. no. 3. Croy, H. (D '24)
Race
Stoddard, T. L. Racial realities in Europe. (D '24)
Race. McFee, W: (Je '24)
Race hygiene and heredity. Siemens, H. W. (Ja '25)
Race prejudice. Finot, J. (O '24)
Race problems
Finot, J. Race prejudice. (O '24)
Oldham, J. E. Christianity and the race problem. (N '24)
Racial realities in Europe. Stoddard, T. L. (D '24)
Radicalism
Wolfe, A. B. Conservatism, radicalism, and scientific method. (My '24)
Radio communication
Dunlap, O. E. Radio manual. (D '24)
Low, A. M. Wireless possibilities. (D '24)
Radio manual. Dunlap, O. E. (D '24)
Radioactivity
Fajans, K. Radioactivity and the latest developments in the study of the chemical elements. (Je '24)
Radioactivity and the latest developments in the study of the chemical elements. Fajans, K. (Je '24)
Railroads
Jones, E. Principles of railroad transportation. (O '24)
Rates
Ely, O. Railway rates and cost of service. (S '24)
United States
Miller, S. L. Railway transportation. (F '25)
Railway rates and cost of service. Ely, O. (S '24)
Railway transportation. Miller, S. L. (F '25)
Rainbow bridge. Bernheimer, C: L. (F '25)
Raisuli, Mulai Ahmed el
Forbes, J. R. Sultan of the mountains. (Je '24)
Rambles in old London. Gordon, G: B. (F '25)
The ranch. Lincoln, E. C. (Ag '24)
Ranch life
Burt, S. Diary of a dude-wrangler. (N '24)
Richards, C. Tenderfoot bride. (My '24)
Rapture. Barrett, R. B. (Mr '24)
Rats' castle. Bridges, R. (D '24)
Rayleigh, Robert John Strutt, 3rd baron
Rayleigh, R. J: S. John William Strutt, third baron Rayleigh. (F '25)

"Razzberry!" Anthony, E: (Ag '24)
Reader's guide book. Becker, M. L. (D '24)
Readings in general psychology. Robinson, E: S. and F., eds. (Ap '24)
Readings in municipal government. Maxey, C. C., ed. (O '24)
Real Daniel Webster. Kennedy, E. R. (O '24)
Real estate business
  Fisher, E. M. Principles of real estate practice. (Ap '24)
  Isman, F. Real estate in all its branches. (Ag '24)
Real estate in all its branches. Isman, F. (Ag '24)
Real John Burroughs. Kennedy, W: S. (Je '24)
Real 'round South America. Black, W: H. (Ag '24)
Real Sarah Bernhardt. Woon, B. (Ap '24)
Real trouble with the farmers. Quick, H. (Ag '24)
Realities and shams. Jacks, L. P. (Je '24)
Reality and religion. Singh, S. S. (Ag '24)
Realm of God. Bennett, L. E. (Ag '24)
Reasonable religion. Hodgetts, E: A. B. (My '24)
Rebellion in labor unions. Kopald, S. (Ag '24)
Recent developments in atomic theory. Graetz, L. (S '24)
Recollections
  Benson, A. C. Memories and friends. (Je '24)
  Egan, M. F. Recollections of a happy life. (D '24)
  Flint, C: R. Memories of an active life. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Hamilton, C. Unwritten history. (My '24)
  Herzen, A. I. Memoirs. (Je '24)
  Hodgetts, E: A. B. Moss from a rolling stone. (Ag '24)
  Landor, A. H: S. Everywhere. (Ja '25)
  Le Queux, W: T. Things I know about kings. (F '25)
  Mitchell, E: P. Memories of an editor. (D '24)
  Nevill, R. H: Unconventional memories. (Ag '24)
  Ridge, W: P. Story teller. (My '24)
  Sayce, A. H: Reminiscences. (My '24)
  Sichel, W. S. Sands of time. (Je '24)
  Smith, E. Fields of adventure. (F '25)
  Treves, F: Elephant man. (Je '24)
Recollections of a happy life. Egan, M. F. (D '24)
Recollections of imperial Russia. Buchanan, M. (O '24)
Recollections of my fifty years hunting and fishing. Mershon, W: B. (Ap '24)
Recompense. Keable, R. (Ap '24)
Reconstruction (European war)
  Alexander, H. G. Revival of Europe. (O '24)
  Allen, H: T. My Rhineland journal. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Birkenhead, F: E. S. America revisited. (S '24)
  Kessler, H. C. U. Germany and Europe. (Ap '24)
  Le Bon, G. World unbalanced. (O '24)
  Macartney, M. H: H. Five years of European chaos. (S '24)

Russia

  Pasvolsky, L., and Moulton, H. G. Russian debts and Russian reconstruction. (F '25)
Reconstruction of the spiritual ideal. Adler, F. (Ap '24)
Re-creations. Lutz, G. H. (S '24)
Red beacon. Espina de Serna, C. (Ag '24)
Red bear or yellow dragon. Harrison, M. E. (Je '24)
Red cross
  Pickett, S. E. American national Red cross. (My '24)
Red Dawn. Baroja y Nessi, P. (D '24)
Red gods. Esménard, J. d'. (Ap '24)
Red lodge. Bridges, V: (My '24)
Red riders. Page, T: N. (N '24)
Red sand. Stribling, T: S. (My '24)
Red thumb-mark. Freeman, R. A. (N '24)
Redcliff. Phillpotts, E. (D '24)
Redemption. Willson, B. (O '24)
Reference books

Bibliography

  Graham, B. Bookman's manual. (O '24)
Reference list of bibliographies. Sohon, J. A., and Schaaf, W: L. (Ap '24)
Reflections on the Napoleonic legend. Guérard, A. L. (Mr '24)
Regulation and the management of public utilities. Morgan, C: S. (Je '24)
Reinforced concrete and masonry structures. Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. (F '25)
Reinhardt, Max
  Sayler, O. M., ed. Max Reinhardt and his theatre. (S '24)
Rejuvenation
  Corners, G: F. Rejuvenation. (Ap '24)
  Kammerer, P. P. R. Rejuvenation and the prolongation of human efficiency. (Ap '24)
Rejuvenation and the prolongation of human efficiency. Kammerer, P. P. R. (Ap '24)
Religio journalistici. Morley, C. D. (D '24)
Religion
  Brown, W: A. Imperialistic religion and the religion of democracy. (My '24)
  Chapman, J: J. Letters and religion. (Je '24)
  Holmes, E. G. A. Dying lights and dawning. (O '24)
  Jacks, L. P. Living universe. (Ap '24)
  Leighton, J. A. Religion and the mind of to-day. (S '24)
  Strong, T: B. Religion, philosophy and history. (Ag '24)
  Wates, G: F: Religion of wise men. (Ag '24)
  Wilson, P. W. Layman's confession of faith. (O '24)
Religion, Primitive
  Lowie, R. H. Primitive religion. (N '24)
  Perry, W: J. Origin of magic and religion. (S '24)
  Rivers, W: H. R. Medicine, magic and religion. (F '25)
Religion and natural law. Russell, C. F. (Je '24)
Religion and science
  Coulter, J: M. and M. C. Where evolution and religion meet. (Je '24)
  Mathews, S., and others. Contributions of science to religion. (F '25)
Religion and the mind of to-day. Leighton, J. A. (S '24)
Religion in the thought of today. Patton, C. S. (Ag '24)
Religion of wise men. Wates, G: F: (Ag '24)
Religion, philosophy and history. Strong, T: B. (Ag '24)
Religions
  Hume, R. E. World's living religions. (Ag '24)
Religious drama

Collections

  Federal council of the churches of Christ in America. Committee on religious drama. Religious dramas, 1924. (Ja '25)
Religious dramas, 1924. Federal council of the churches of Christ in America. Committee on religious drama. (Ja '25)
Religious education
  Athearn, W. S., and others. Religious education of Protestants in an American commonwealth. (My '24)
Religious education of Protestants in an American commonwealth. Athearn, W. S., and others. (My '24)
Religious life in ancient Egypt. Petrie, W: M. F. (O '24)
Religious surveys
  Athearn, W. S., and others. Religious education of Protestants in an American commonwealth. (My '24)
  Morse, H. N., and Brunner, E. de S. Town and country church in the United States. (O '24)
Reminiscences and comments. Maxim, H. (Ja '25)
Renaissance
  Benians, S. From renaissance to revolution. (S '24)
  Dark, S. Story of the renaissance. (My '24)

Rensselaer polytechnic institute
  Baker, R. P. Chapter in American education. (Ja '25)
Reparation plan. Moulton, H. G. (Ja '25)
Reports

Preparation

  Baker, R. P. Preparation of reports. (F '25)
Representative continental dramas. Moses, M. J., ed. (Ag '24)
Representative government. Ford, H: J. (S '24)
Representative government and representation
  Ford, H: J. Representative government. (S '24)
Representative government in industry. Myers, J. (Ag '24)
Representative plays. Galsworthy, J: (F '25)
Reputation. Mordaunt, E., pseud. (Ag '24)
Retail advertising and salesmanship. Hall, S: R. (S '24)
Retail trade
  Copeland, M. T: Principles of merchandising. (Ja '25)
  Greene, J. H: Principles and methods of retailing. (F '25)
  Greer, H. C. Chain store accounting. (F '25)
  Hahn, L., and White, P., eds. Merchants' manual. (Je '24)
  Hall, S: R. Retail advertising and selling. (S '24)
  Namm, B: H. Advertising the retail store. (S '24)
Reveries of a father. Crawley, J: (F '25)
Revival of Europe. Alexander, H. G. (O '24)
Rhododendrons
  Cox, E. H. M. Rhododendrons for amateurs. (N '24)
Rhododendrons for amateurs. Cox, E. H. M. (N '24)
Rhyming dictionary of the English language. Walker, J: (F '25)
Richest man. Shanks, E: B. (S '24)
Richmond and Lennox, Frances Teresa Stuart, duchess of
  Hartmann, C. H. La Belle Stuart. (N '24)
Riddle of the amber ship. Hanshew, M. E. and T: W. (Ag '24)
Right job. Blackford, K. M., and Newcomb, A. (My '24)
The right place. Montague, C: E: (Ag '24)
Rimbaud, Jean Arthur
  Rickword, E. Rimbaud: the boy and the poet. (Ja '25)
Rimbaud: the boy and the poet. Rickword, E. (Ja '25)
Rime
  Walker, J: Rhyming dictionary of the English language. (F '25)
Rio de la Plata
  Cunninghame Graham, R. G. B. Conquest of the River Plate. (Ja '25)
Rise of Christianity. Norton, F: O. (My '24)
Risk
  Hardy, C: O. Risk and risk-bearing. (Je '24)
Risk and risk-bearing. Hardy, C: O. (Je '24)
River life
  Rothert, O: A. Outlaws of Cave-in-Rock. (O '24)
River of life. Strachey, J: St L. (F '25)
River of Seven Stars. Friel, A. O. (D '24)
Riviera
  Devoluy, P., and Borel, P. The French Riviera. (S '24)
  Gostling, F. M. Lure of the Riviera. (Ap '24)
  Richardson, L. Things seen on the Riviera. (Ap '24)
Roads
  Harger, W. G. Rural highway pavements. (S '24)
Robert Bacon. Scott, J. B. (My '24)
Robert Browning, poet and philosopher. Sim, F. M. (Mr '24)
Robert Burns. Dakers, A. (Ap '24)
Robert Louis Stevenson. Steuart, J: A. (D '24)
Robert Morrison. Broomhall, M. (S '24)
Robert Smith Surtees. Surtees, R. S., and Cuming, E: W: D. (D '24)
Rocky Mountain national park
  Mills, E. A. Rocky Mountain national park. (Je '24)
Rocky Mountain tipi tales. Borland, H. G. (S '24)
Rocky mountains
  Rusk, C. E. Tales of a western mountaineer. (F '25)
Rocky mountains, Canadian
  Mitchell, B: W. Trail life in the Canadian Rockies. (F '25)
Roger Bloomer. Lawson, J: H. (Je '24)
Roget's treasury of words. Roget, P: M. (Ag '24)
Rôles. Alexander, E. (My '24)
Roll and go. Colcord, J. C., comp. (F '25)
Roman Catholic church
  Holmes, E. G. A. Dying lights and dawning. (O '24)
Roman Catholic church in France
  Gwynn, D. R. Catholic reaction in France. (F '25)
  Loisy, A. F. My duel with the Vatican. (F '25)
Roman occupation of Britain. Haverfield, F. J: (S '24)
Roman poetry. Sikes, E: E. (Je '24)
Romance and Jane Weston. Pryce, R: (D '24).
Romance of forgotten towns. Faris, J: T. (D '24)
Romance of plant hunting. Ward, F. K. (Ag '24)
Romance of the last crusade. Gilbert, V. (Ag '24)
Romances, English
  Hibbard, L. A. Mediæval romance in England. (F '25)
Romans in Britain. Windle, B. C. A. (Je '24)
Romantic rise of a great American. Conwell, R. H. (Ja '25)
Rome

Navy

  Shepard, A. M. Sea power in ancient history. (Ag '24)

Social life and customs

  Firebaugh, W. C. Inns of Greece and Rome. (My '24)
Rome (city)

Description

  Milton, A. Rome in seven days. (Je '24)
  Stannard, H. Rome and her monuments. (My '24)

History

  Showerman, G. Eternal Rome. (O '24)
Rome and her monuments. Stannard, H. (My '24)
Rome in seven days. Milton, A. (Je '24)
Roosevelt, Theodore
  Butt, A. W. Letters of Archie Butt. (N '24)
  Dawson, F. W. Opportunity and Theodore Roosevelt. (My '24)
  Gosnell, H. F. Boss Platt and his New York machine. (Mr '24)
  Hagedorn, H. Roosevelt, prophet of unity. (Ag '24)
  Roosevelt, T. Letters from Theodore Roosevelt to Anna Roosevelt Cowles. (D '24)
Roosevelt, prophet of unity. Hagedorn, H. (Ag '24)
Roping lions in the Grand Canyon. Grey, Z. (Je '24)
Rose of the world. Norris, K. (S '24)
Roses
  Thomas, G: C. Roses for all American climates. (O '24)
Roses for all American climates. Thomas, G: C. (O '24)
Round the world. Butler, F. H. (F '25)
Round the world traveller. Lorenz, D. E: (Ap '24)
Round the world with rod and rifle. Stewart, P. M. (F '25)
Round-up. Friend, O. J. (Je '24)

Royal society for the prevention of cruelty to animals
Fairholme, E: G., and Pain, W. Century of work for animals. (N '24)
Rubber
Bibliography
Bedford, C. W., and Winkelmann, H. A. Systematic survey of rubber chemistry. (Je '24)
Rue with a difference. Recht, C: (N '24)
Rugged water. Lincoln, J. C. (D '24
Rumania
Bibesco, M. L. Isvor. (Ja '25)
Runciman, Sir Walter, 1st bart.
Runciman, W. Before the mast. (D '24)
Rural highway pavements. Harger, W. G. (S '24)
Rural social problems. Galpin, C: J. (Ag '24)
Rural Texas. Bizzell, W: B. (S '24)
Russia
Description and travel
Eaton, R: Under the red flag. (O '24)
Economic conditions
Nansen, F. Russia and peace. (Mr '24)
Pasvolsky, L., and Moulton, H. G. Russian debts and Russian reconstruction. (F '25)
Strong, A. L. First time in history. (Je '24)
Foreign relations
Dennis, A. L: P. Foreign policies of soviet Russia. (Ag '24)
History
Alexandra Feodorovna. Letters of the Tsaritsa to the Tsar. (My '24)
Buchanan, M. Recollections of imperial Russia. (O '24)
Paléologue, M. An ambassador's memoirs. (My '24)
Revolution, 1917-
Palen, L: S. White devil of the Black sea. (Je '24)
Sorokin, P. A. Leaves from a Russian diary. (Ja '25)
Strong, A. L. First time in history. (Je '24)
Politics and government
Buchanan, M. Recollections of imperial Russia. (O '24)
Goldman, E. My disillusionment in Russia. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Ross, E: A. Russian soviet republic. (Ap '24)
Religion
McCullagh, F. Bolshevik persecution of Christianity. (Je '24)
Social conditions
Trotsky, L., pseud. Problems of life. (D '24)
Russia and peace. Nansen, F. (Mr '24)
Russian debts and Russian reconstruction. Pasvolsky, L., and Moulton, H. G. (F '25)
Russian drama
History and criticism
Wiener, L. Contemporary drama of Russia. (Ja '25)
Russian soviet republic. Ross, E: A. (Ap '24)
Rustlers' valley. Mulford, C. E: (Mr '24)
Rutherford, Mark, pseud. See White, W: H. (D '24)

Sackcloth and scarlet. Gibbs, G: F. (D '24)
Sad adventurers. Rutledge, M. (O '24)
Safety first. Neville, N. (N '24)
Safety first for school and home. Beard, H. E. (D '24)
Safety pin. Fletcher, J. S. (Ap '24)
Sagas of the seas. French, J. L:, ed. (Ja '25)
Sahara desert
Haardt, G. M., and Audouin-Dubreuil, L: Across the Sahara by motor car. (N '24)
Sailors' wives. Fabian, W., pseud. (N '24)
Sails of sunset. Roberts, C. E. M. (Ja '25)
St Andrews, Scotland
Robertson, E. S. Old St Andrews. (My '24)
St Francis of Assisi. Chesterton, G. K. (Mr '24)
Saint Helena. Landau, M. A. (Mr '24)
Saint Joan. Shaw, G: B. (S '24)
Saint Magloire. Dorgelès, R. (Ag '24)
Saint Martin's summer. Sabatini, R. (D '24)
Saint's theatre. Fish, H. F. X. (Je '24)
Sales management
Hall, S: R. Handbook of sales management. (Mr '24)
Salesmen and salesmanship
Hall, S: R. Retail advertising and selling. (S '24)
Whitehead, H. Business of selling. (Ap '24)
Sallie's newspaper. Lewis, E. H. (O '24)
Salma. Cranmer-Byng, L. A. (My '24)
Salvage
Masters, D: Wonders of salvage. (O '24)
Salvaging of American girlhood. Davenport, F. I. (N '24)
Salvos. Frank, W. D: (My '24)
Samson in chains. Andreieff, L. N. (Ap '24)
Sand-dunes
Townsend, C: W. Beach grass. (Ap '24)
Sanderson, Frederick William
Wells, H. G: Story of a great schoolmaster. (Mr '24)
Sandoval. Beer, T: (Ag '24)
Sandra. Bell, P. (Ag '24)
Sands of Oro. Grimshaw, B. E. (Mr '24)
Sands of time. Sichel, W. S. (Je '24)
Sanskrit drama
Keith, A. B. Sanskrit drama. (N '24)
Santa Rosa river
Grey, Z. Tales of southern rivers. (Ja '25)
Sapper, pseud. See McNeile, C. (F '25)
Sara of Upper Dam. Crane, M. (D '24)
Sarah Bernhardt as I knew her. Eng title of Real Sarah Bernhardt. Woon, B. (Ap '24)
Sard Harker. Masefield, J: (D '24)
Satan's bushel. Garrett, G. (Mr '24)
Satire
Millay, E. St V. Distressing dialogues. (D '24)
Satyananda Roy. When I was a boy in India. (Ag '24)
The savage. Artzybashev, M. P. (Je '24)
Sayce, Archibald Henry
Sayce, A. H: Reminiscences. (My '24)
Sayonara. Paris, J:, pseud. (My '24)
Scales (weighing instruments)
Wade, H. T. Scales and weighing. (F '25)
Scales and weighing. Wade, H. T. (F '25)
Scalp-lock. Coolidge, D. (Mr '24)
Scarlet iris. Thompson, V. C: (My '24)
Scarlet runner. Montgomery, E. S. (My '24)
School of poetry. Meynell, A. C. (S '24)
Schreiner, Olive (Mrs S. C. Cronwright-Schreiner) (Ralph Irons, pseud.)
Cronwright-Schreiner, S. C. Life of Olive Schreiner. (My '24)
Schreiner, O. Letters of Olive Schreiner. (F '25)
Science
Abbott, C. G. Everyday mysteries. (Ag '24)
Downing, E. R. Our physical world. (N '24)
Haldane, J. B. S. Daedalus. (S '24)
Russell, B. A. W: Icarus. (S '24)
Slosson, E. E. Chats on science. (Ap '24)
Slosson, E. E., ed. Keeping up with science. (N '24)
History
Hart, I. B. Makers of science. (Ag '24)
Van Wagenen, T. F. Beacon lights of science. (Ja '25)
Woodruff, L. L., ed. Development of the sciences. (My '24)
Science, Medieval
Haskins, C: H. Studies in the history of mediaeval science. (Ja '25)
Science and practice of oil painting. Speed, H. (F '25)
Science in rhyme without reason. Barton, R. (Ag '24)

Science of metals. Jeffries, Z., and Archer, R. S. (F '25)
Science, old and new. Thomson, J: A. (Ag '24)
Scientific approach to philosophy. Carr, H. W. (O '24)

Scientific research
  Harris, F. S., and Butt, N. I: Scientific research and human welfare. (Ja '25)
Scientific research and human welfare. Harris, F. S., and Butt, N. I: (Ja '25)

Scientists
  Hart, I. B. Makers of science. (Ag '24)
  Van Wagenen, T. F. Beacon lights of science. (Ja '25)
Scoops. Greenwall, H. J. (Mr '24)
Scope of music. Buck, P. C. (D '24)

Scotland

History
  Dark, S. Book of Scotland for young people. (D '24)
Scott's last expedition. Scott, R. F. (Ap '24)

Scribe, Augustin Eugéne
  Arvin, N. C. Eugéne Scribe and the French theatre, 1815-1860. (D '24)

Sculptors, American
  McSpadden, J. W. Famous sculptors of America. (Ja '25)

Sculpture, American
  McSpadden, J. W. Famous sculptors of America. (Ja '25)

Sculpture, Chinese
  Ashton, L. Introduction to the study of Chinese sculpture. (F '25)
The sea. Kellermann, B. (Mr '24)
The sea. Oppenheim, J. (Je '24)
Sea gypsy. Salisbury, E: A., and Cooper, M. C. (D '24)

Sea poetry
  Frothingham, R., comp. Songs of the sea & Sailors' chanteys. (Ag '24)

Sea power
  Parmelee, M. F. Blockade and sea power. (Ja '25)
  Shepard, A. M. Sea power in ancient history. (Ag '24)
Sea power in ancient history. Shepard, A. M. (Ag '24)

Sea songs
  Colcord, J. C., comp. Roll and go. (F '25)
  Shay, F., ed. Iron men & wooden ships. (F '25)
Sea songs and ballads. Smith, C. F. (Ap '24)
Seafarers. Williams, W. W. (Ag '24)

Seafaring life
  Chatterton, E: K. Seamen all. (N '24)

Seals (animals)
  England, G: A. Vikings of the ice. (Je '24)
Seamen all. Chatterton, E: K. (N '24)

Second advent
  Sears, C. E. Days of delusion. (My '24)
Seconds out! Dartnell, F. (F '25)
Secret of Hallowdene farm. Pocock, D. A. (S '24)
Secret of the Coup d'état. Kerry, H: W: E. P.-F., ed. (F '25)

Secretaries, Private
  Charters, W. W., and Whitley, I. B. Analysis of secretarial duties and traits. (F '25)
Secrets. Davies, W: H: (S '24)
Security against war. Kellor, F., and Hatvany, A. (F '25)
Seeing Canada. Faris, J: T. (Ja '25)
Seeing life whole. King, H: C. (Ap '24)
Seen and unseen in Browning. Burt, E. (Ag '24)
Selected papers on anthropology. Burton, R: F (S '24)

Selenium
  Fournier d'Albe, E. E: Moon-element. (N '24)
Sembal. Cannan, G. (Ag '24)
Semi-attached. Parrish, A. (D '24)

Sequoia
  Le Corbeau, A. Forest giant. (Je '24)

Sermons
  Brown, C: R. What is your name? (Je '24)
  Newton, J. F., ed. Best sermons, 1924. (Ja '25)
  Royden, A. M. Friendship of God. (Je '24)

Serner, Gunnar. See Heller, F., pseud. (S '24, Ja '25)
Servant of sahibs. Ghulam, R. G. (Je '24)

Servants
  Horne, E. What the butler winked at. (Je '24)
Seven lively arts. Seldes, G. V. (My '24)
Seven times seven. Daviess, M. T. (Je '24)
1700 miles in open boats. Foster, C. P. T. (Ja '25)
Seward's folly. Marshall, E. (S '24)

Sewing
  Hanley, G. E. One-eyed fairies. (S '24)
  Woman's institute of domestic arts and sciences. Woman's institute library of dressmaking. (Ap '24)

Sex instruction
  Davenport, F. I. Salvaging of American girlhood. (N '24)
Shackled. Abdullah, A. (D '24)
Shadow of the cross. Tharaud, J. and J. (Mr '24)
Shadows that pass. Rung, O: (S '24)

Shaftesbury, Anthony Ashley Cooper, 7th earl of Hammond, J: L. Le B. and B. Lord Shaftesbury. (D '24)

Shakespeare, William
  Fripp, E. I. Master Richard Quyny. (Ja '25)

Characters

Women
  MacKenzie, A. M. Women in Shakespeare's plays. (F '25)

Hamlet
  Wyman, L. B. Gertrude of Denmark. (Ag '24)

Music
  Bridge, F: Shakespearian music in the plays and early operas. (Mr '24)

Stage history
  Chambers, E. K. Elizabethan stage. (Je '24)
Shakespearian music in the plays and early operas. Bridge, F: (Mr '24)
Shallow end. Beith, J: H. (F '25)
Shameless innocent. Laurie, M. (F '25)

Shan States
  Milne, L. Home of an eastern clan. (N '24)
Shank's mare. Stoddard, C: C. (Je '24)

Sheet-metal work

Pattern-making
  Morio, F. X. Automobile pattern drafting. (Ap '24)

Shelley, Percy Bysshe
  Campbell, O. W. Shelley and the unromantics. (Je '24)
  Liptzin, S. Shelley in Germany. (N '24)
  Maurois, A. Ariel. (My '24)
Shelley and the unromantics. Campbell, O. W. (Je '24)
Shelley in Germany. Liptzin, S. (N '24)
Shepherd's week. Gay, J: (F '25)

Shipping

History
  Anthony, I. Down to the sea in ships. (F '25)

Ships
  Anthony, I. Down to the sea in ships. (F '25)
  Smith, C. F. Book of famous ships. (N '24)

Shipwrecks
  Foster, C. P. T. 1700 miles in open boats. (Ja '25)
The shirt. Wright, P: E. (N '24)
Shirt of flame. Halidé Edib. (Ja '25)
Shoreless sea. Panter-Downes, M. (Ag '24)
Short history of international intercourse. Burns, C. D. (Ag '24)

Short stories

Collections
  Dial (periodical). Stories from the Dial. (O '24)

Eaton, R:, ed. Best continental short stories of 1923-1924. (Ja '25)
French, J. L:, ed. Great detective stories from Voltaire to Poe. (F '25)
Georgian stories, 1924. (S '24)
Hastings, W: T., and others, eds. Short stories. (F '25)
Midland (periodical). Stories from the Midland. (My '24)
New York Guild for the Jewish blind. Aces. (F '25)
Newman, F. Short story's mutations. (F '25)
O. Henry memorial award. Prize stories of 1923. (Ap '24)
O'Brien, E: J. H., and Cournos, J: Best British short stories. (Mr '24)
O'Brien, E: J. H., ed. Best short stories of 1923. (Ag '24)
Robinson, K. A., comp. Contemporary short stories. (F '25)
Twenty-three stories. (F '25)
Williams, B. C., comp. Thrice told tales. (S '24)
Short stories. Hastings, W: T., and others, eds. (F '25)
Short stories. Stevenson, R. L: (Je '24)
Short story
Newman, F. Short story's mutations. (F '25)
Uzzell, T: H. Narrative technique. (N '24)
Short story's mutations. Newman, F. (F '25)
Short survey of Czech literature. Chudoba, F. (D '24)
Shorter tales of Joseph Conrad. Conrad, J. (Ja '25)
The shot. Creed, S. (N '24)
The show-off, a novel. Wolff, W: A. (D '24)
The show-off, a play. Kelly, G: E: (O '24)
Siberia
Channing, C. G. F. Siberia's untouched treasure. (Ap '24)

Description and travel

Ossendowski, F., and Palen, L: S. Man and mystery in Asia. (Mr '24)
Siberia's untouched treasure. Channing, C. G. F. (Ap '24)
Sicily

Description and travel

Forman, H: J. Grecian Italy. (F '25)
Sidelights of London. Cairns, J: A. R. (D '24)
Siege. Adams, S: H. (Mr '24)
Siege perilous. Diver, M. (O '24)
Sight
Romains, J., pseud. Eyeless sight. (S '24)
Sigmund Freud. Wittels, F. (D '24)
Silbermann. Lacretelle, J. de. (Ap '24)
Silverhorn. Conkling, H. (F '25)
A simple story. Philippe, C: L: (Je '24)
Simples. Irons, I. (F '25)
Sin eater's Hallowe'en. Neilson, F. (My '24)
Since leaving home. Wehde, A. (Mr '24)
Sincérité. Durand, M. (Ja '25)
Sinclair, Bertha Muzzy. See Bower, B. M., pseud. (Mr '24)
Singers
Jeritza, M. Sunlight and song. (S '24)
Singh, Puran. See Pūrna Simha. (My '24)
Singing
Tetrazzini, L. How to sing. (Ap '24)
The singing season. Paterson, I. (S '24)
Single heart. Buckrose, J. E., pseud. (D '24)
Sitting on the world. Broun, H. C. (F '25)
Six days. Glyn, E. (Mr '24)
Six plays. Field, R. L. (F '25)
Sixty years of American humor. French, J. L:, ed. (D '24)
Skiing. Poulsen, O. (F '25)
Skippers of Nancy Gloucester. MacKaye, P. (Ag '24)
Skis and ski-runnnig
Poulsen, O. Skiing. (F '25)
Skill in work and play. Pear, T. H. (F '25)
Skyline trail. Davies, M. C. (Ja '25)
Skylines and horizons. Heyward, Du B. (Ap '24)
Slave ship. Johnston, M. (D '24)
Sleeping beauty. Sitwell, E. (O '24)
Slick, Sam, pseud. See Haliburton, T: C. (F '25)
Small home. Brinckloe, W: D. (N '24)
Small house and large garden. Wright, R. L. (O '24)
Small houses. Murtagh, G. (Ag '24)
Smith, Alfred Emanuel
Moskowitz, H: Alfred E. Smith. (Ag '24)
Smoke rings. Stern, G. B. (Ag '24)
Smoking
Dunhill, A. Pipe book. (F '25)
Smoking flax. Stead, R. J. C. (F '25)
Smugglers. Teignmouth, H: N. S., and Harper, C: G: (S '24)
Smugglers and smuggling. Verrill, A. H. (N '24)
Smuggling
Teignmouth, H: N. S., and Harper, C: G: Smugglers. (S '24)
Verrill, A. H. Smugglers and smuggling. (N '24)
The snob. Martin, H. (Mr '24)
Snythergen. Garrott, H. (Ap '24)
So Big. Ferber, E. (Mr '24)
So much velvet. Adams, F. P. (Ja '25)
So you're going to Paris! Laughlin, C. E. (Je '24)
Social conditions
Cannan, G. Letters from a distance. (Je '24)
Social development. Hobhouse, L. T. (My '24)
Social discovery. Lindeman, E. C. (D '24)
Social ethics
Adler, F. Reconstruction of the spiritual ideal. (Ap '24)
McDougall, W: Ethics and some modern world problems. (Ag '24)
Social ladder. Van Rensselaer, M., and Van de Water, F: F. (Ag '24)
Social life and institutions. Hart, J. K. (F '25)
Social life in Stuart England. Coate, M. (D '24)
Social organization. Rivers, W: H. R. (F '25)
Social origins of Christianity. Case, S. J. (Ag '24)
Social politics in the United States. Haynes, F: E. (Je '24)
Social problems
Evans, R. T. Aspects of the study of society. (F '25)
Fisher, H. A. L. Common weal. (My '24)
Jacks, L. P. Realities and shams. (Je '24)
Swinburne, J. Population and the social problem. (Ja '25)
Trotsky, L., pseud. Problems of life. (D '24)
Social psychology
Allport, F. H: Social psychology. (O '24)
Balz, A. G: A., and Pott, W: S. A. Basis of social theory. (My '24)
Bentley, I: M. Field of psychology. (Ja '25)
Bogardus, E. S. Fundamentals of social psychology. (N '24)
Eldridge, S. Political action. (Ap '24)
Follett, M. P. Creative experience. (Ag '24)
Groves, E. R. Personality and social adjustment. (Ap '24)
Lindeman, E. C. Social discovery. (D '24)
Martin, E. D. Mystery of religion. (Ja '25)
Rivers, W: H. R. Social organization. (F '25)
Weeks, A. D. Control of the social mind. (Ap '24)
Wolfe, A. B. Conservatism, radicalism, and scientific method. (My '24)
Social reform
Gillette, K. C. People's corporation. (Ag '24)
Lawson, C: F. You can change it. (My '24)
Social science for teachers. Martz, C: E., and Kinnemann, J: A. (Ap '24)
Social sciences

Study and teaching

Greenan, J: T., and Meredith, A. B. Everyday problems of American democracy. (O '24)
Woellner, F. P. Education for citizenship in a democracy. (Je '24)
Social service
De Schweinitz, K. Art of helping people out of trouble. (F '25)
Social usage in America. Wade, M. (D '24)

Socialism
Labour party's aim. (Ag '24)
Socialism in the United States
Haynes, F: E. Social politics in the United States. (Je '24)
Society, Primitive
Kummer, F: A. First days of knowledge. (Je '24)
Rivers, W: H. R. Social organization. (F '25)
Society and its surplus. Sims, N. L. (F '25)
Sociology
Barnes, H. E. Sociology and political theory. (O '24)
Bushee, F: A. Principles of sociology. (Ag '24)
Dendy, A. Biological foundations of society. (D '24)
Hart, J. K. Social life and institutions. (F '25)
Hobhouse, L. T. Social development (My '24)
Martz, C: E., and Kinnemann, J: A. Social science for teachers. (Ap '24)
Peters, C: C. Foundations of educational sociology. (F '25)
Rivers, W: H. R. Social organization. (F '25)
Sims, N. L. Society and its surplus. (F '25)
Thomson, J: A. What is man? (Ap '24)

History

Small, A. W. Origins of sociology. (D '24)
Sociology, Christian
Butterfield, K. L. Christian program for the rural community. (My '24)
Sociology, Rural
Galpin, C: J. Rural social problems. (Ag '24)
Sociology and political theory. Barnes, H. E. (O '24)
Soils
Gehrs, J: H: Soils and crops. (F '25)
Soils and crops. Gehrs, J: H: (F '25)
Solitude
Petrarch, F. Life of solitude. (F '25)
Solo. Coalfleet, P. (S '24)
Some aspects of Italian immigration to the United States. Stella, A. (Ap '24)
Some aspects of modern poetry. Noyes, A. (Ja '25)
Some contemporary Americans. Boynton, P. H. (S '24)
Some magazines and magazine makers. Drewry, J: E. (F '25)
Some memories of the Civil war. Putnam, G: H. (Ap '24)
Some new evidence for human survival. Thomas, C: D. (D '24)
Some new letters of Edward FitzGerald. (Eng title of Edward FitzGerald and Bernard Barton). FitzGerald, E: (Je '24)
Some thoughts on Hilaire Belloc. Braybrooke, P. (Ag '24)
Some Victorian men. Furniss, H. (F '25)
Something childish. Eng title of A little girl. Mansfield, K., pseud. (D '24)
Something lighter. Bland, J: O. P. (F '25)
Somewhere at sea. Wilson, J: F. (Mr '24)
Sommerville, Frankfort, pseud. See Story, A. M. S. (O '24)
Son. Train, E. (Ap '24)
Songs
Week-end book. (D '24)
Songs and ballads of the Maine lumberjacks. Gray, R. P., ed. (O '24)
Songs of the open. Rice, G. (D '24)
Songs of the sea & Sailors' chanteys. Frothingham, R., comp. (Ag '24)
Sonnets and verse. Belloc, H. (My '24)
Soul of Samuel Pepys. Bradford, G. (Ap '24)
Soul of your child. Lhotzky, H. (F '25)
Sound
Eason, A. B. Prevention of vibration and noise. (Ap '24)
Sound and fury. Henle, J. (N '24)
Source book in the philosophy of education. Kilpatrick, W: H., comp. (My '24)
Source-book of research data. New York university. Bureau of business research. (Ap '24)
Sources and documents illustrating the American revolution, 1764-1788. Morison, S: E., ed. (My '24)
South

Description and travel

Henderson, A. Washington's southern tour. (Ap '24)

Economic conditions

Skaggs, W: H: Southern oligarchy. (Ja '25)

Politics and government

Skaggs, W: H: Southern oligarchy. (Ja '25)

Social conditions

Skaggs, W: H: Southern oligarchy. (Ja '25)
Tannenbaum, F. Darker phases of the South. (Mr '24)
South Africa
Flemming, L. Call of the veld. (N '24)
South America

Description and travel

Black, W: H. Real 'round South America. (Ag '24)
Carpenter, F. G: Lands of the Andes and the desert. (F '25)
Domville-Fife, C: W: Among wild tribes of the Amazons. (O '24)
Friel, A. O. River of Seven Stars. (D '24)
Michener, C. K. Heirs of the Incas. (Ja '25)

History

Lemly, H: R. Bolivar. (Ag '24)
South Indian hours. Couldrey, O. J. (D '24)
South of the Rio Grande. Clarke, L. (Ag '24)
South Sea islands
Carpenter, F. G: Australia, New Zealand, and some islands of the South seas. (Ag '24)
Southern baroque art. Sitwell, S. (O '24)
Southern oligarchy. Skaggs, W: H: (Ja '25)
Southwest

Description and travel

Austin, M. Land of journey's ending. (D '24)
Spain

Antiquities

Obermaier, H. Fossil man in Spain. (F '25)

Description and travel

Byne, M. and A. Spanish gardens and patios. (F '25)
Gordon, J. and C. J. Donkey trip through Spain. (S '24)

Politics and government

Blasco Ibáñez, V. Alfonso XIII unmasked. (F '25)
Deakin, F. B. Spain to-day. (O '24)

Social conditions

Deakin, F. B. Spain to-day. (O '24)
Spain to-day. Deakin, F. B. (O '24)
Spaniard's cave. Barbour, R. H: (Ja '25)
Spanish America

History

Cunninghame Graham, R. G. B. Conquest of the River Plate. (Ja '25)
Spanish farm. Mottram, R. H. (O '24)
Spanish gardens and patios. Byne, M. and A. (F '25)
The spark. Wharton, E. (Ag '24)
Speculations. Hulme, T: E. (F '25)
Speed, Nell, pseud. See Sampson, E. S. (Ja '25)
Spender, Harold. Byron and Greece. See Byron, G: G. N. B. (S '24)
Spirit of the house. Williams, A. V. (Ag '24)
Spirit of the Revolution. Fitzpatrick, J: C. (F '25)
Spiritual life
Cabot, P. Except ye be born again. (F '25)
Inge, W: R. Personal religion and the life of devotion. (Mr '24)
Patten, A. B. Can we find God? (Je '24)
Singh, S. S. Reality and religion. (Ag '24)
Youtz, H. A. Supremacy of the spiritual. (F '25)
Spiritual message of modern English poetry. Hoyt, A. S. (Ag '24)

Spiritualism
Doyle, A. C. Our second American adventure. (Ag '24)
Heart of a father. (D '24)
Houdini, H. Magician among the spirits. (Ag '24)
Thomas, C: D. Some new evidence for human survival. (D '24)
Spode family
Cannon, T. G. Old Spode. (F '25)
Sports
Anthony, E: "Razzberry!" (Ag '24)
Spraying
Anderson, O. G., and Roth, F: C. Insecticides and fungicides. (F '25)
Spring thunder. Van Doren, M. (F '25)
Springfield Republican
Hooker, R: Story of an independent newspaper. (N '24)
Springtide in Palestine. Harry, M., pseud. (N '24)
The Sprite. Baynes, E. H. (Ja '25)
Stained glass
Sherrill, C: H. Stained glass tours in Spain and Flanders. (Je '24)
Stained glass tours in Spain and Flanders. Sherrill, C: H. (Je '24)
Stairway of the sun. Ritchie, R. W. (Mr '24)
Stalking big game with a camera in equatorial Africa. Maxwell, M. (Ja '25)
Standard business dictionary. Spiegel, J., comp. (F '25)
Standard catalog, fiction section. Bacon, C., comp. (Ap '24)
Standard oil company
L'espagnol de la Tramerye, P. World-struggle for oil. (Mr '24)
Standardized mah jong. Hartman, L. F. (Ja '25)
Stanislavsky, Constantin
Stanislavsky, C. My life in art. (Je '24)
Star woman. Bedford-Jones, H: J. O. (O '24)
Stars
Murphy, E. G. Beginner's star-book. (F '25)
State, The
Wilde, N. Ethical basis of the state. (F '25)
State governments
Mathews, J: M. American state government. (F '25)
State of the nation. Beveridge, A. J. (Ag '24)
Statesmen
Huddleston, S. Those Europeans. (D '24)
Statesmen, American
Barry, D: S. Forty years in Washington. (Ap '24)
Statesmen, British
Begbie, H. Windows of Westminster. (Ja '25)
Guedalla, P. A gallery. (Ja '25)
Steadfast heart. Kelland, C. B. (Mr '24)
Steel

Metallurgy

Harbord, F. W:, and Hall, J: W: Metallurgy of steel. (F '25)
Steel and timber structures. Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. (F '25)
Stefansson, Vilhjalmur
Noice, H. With Stefansson in the Arctic. (N '24)
Steinach, Eugen
Corners, G: F. Rejuvenation. (Ap '24)
Kammerer, P. P. R. Rejuvenation and the prolongation of human efficiency. (Ap '24)
Steinmetz, Charles Proteus
Hammond, J: W. Charles Proteus Steinmetz. (N '24)
Stella Nash. Gompertz, M. L: A. (Ja '25)
Stephen the well-beloved. Scarborough, H. E. (D '24)
Stevenson, Robert Louis
Osbourne, L. Intimate portrait of R. L. S (Mr '24)
Steuart, J: A. Robert Louis Stevenson. (D '24)
Sticks and stones. Mumford, L: (D '24)
Stiffs. Garahan, M. (Mr '24)
Stiletto. Goodwin, E. (O '24)
Storage batteries
Jansky, C. M., and Wood, H. P. Elements of storage batteries. (Je '24)
Vinal, G: W. Storage batteries. (F '25)
Stories from the Dial. Dial (periodical). (O '24)
Stories of the first American animals. Langford, G: (Je '24)
Stories of the months and days. Couzens, R. C. (Je '24)
Storm in harvest. Steese, E: (Ap '24)
Storm-center. Stevenson, B. E. (Mr '24)
Story key to geographic names. Von Engeln, O. D., and Urquhart, J. D. (F '25)
Story of a great schoolmaster. Wells, H. G: (Mr '24)
Story of an independent newspaper. Hooker, R: (N '24)
Story of boxing. Wignall, T. C. (Je '24)
Story of canned foods. Collins, J. H. (S '24)
Story of copper. Davis, W. (F '25)
Story of Detroit. Catlin, G: B. (Ap '24)
Story of early chemistry. Stillman, J: M. (F '25)
Story of the empire. Lucas, C: P. (F '25)
Story of the Marys. Humphrey, G. (My '24)
Story of the renaissance. Dark, S. (My '24)
Story teller. Ridge, W: P. (My '24)
Story teller's story. Anderson, S. (D '24)
Story telling
Bone, W. A. Children's stories and how to tell them. (S '24)
Straight, Willard
Croly, H. D: Willard Straight. (N '24)
Strains and stresses
Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. Stresses in framed structures. (S '24)
Strait is the gate. Gide, A. P. G. (Mr '24)
Straws and prayer-books. Cabell, J. B. (D '24)
Street of the eye. Bullett, G. (D '24)
Stresses in framed structures. Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. (S '24)
Strike for union. Blankenhorn, H. (Mr '24)
Strikes and lockouts
Berman, E: Labor disputes and the president of the United States. (Ja '25)
Blankenhorn, H. Strike for union. (Mr '24)
Kopald, S. Rebellion in labor unions. (Ag '24)
Structural engineers' handbook. Ketchum, M. S. (F '25)
Structure of atoms. Stock, A. E. (Ap '24)
Structure of the atom. Andrade, E: N. da C. (Ap '24)
Structures, Theory of
Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. Stresses in framed structures. (S '24)
Hool, G: A., and Kinne, W: S., eds. Steel and timber structures. (F '25)
Struggle for power in Moslem Asia. Powell, E: A. (Ap '24)
Stuart, Eleanor, pseud. See Porter, E. (O '24)
Studies and sketches. Asquith, H. H: (Ag '24)
Studies in evolution and eugenics. Holmes, S: J. (Ap '24)
Studies in idealism. Fausset, H. l'A. (Ap '24)
Studies in murder. Pearson, E. L. (S '24)
Studies in Polish life and history. Tennant, A. E. (Ja '25)
Studies in the history of mediaeval science. Haskins, C: H. (Ja '25)
Studies in the life of the early church. Foakes-Jackson, F: J: (S '24)
Studies of familiar hymns. Benson, L: F. (Ap '24)
Study of Browning's "The ring and the book." Cassidy, J. (N '24)
Study of international government. Hughan, J. W. (Ap '24)
Sublime jester. Brudno, E. S. (F '25)
Subsoil. Hummel, G: F. (O '24)
Success
Jackson, W: M. Making business advancement sure. (S '24)
Success. Aminoff, L. (Je '24)
Sudden wealth. Forman, H: J. (D '24)

Suffolk, Henrietta (Hobart) Howard, countess of Benjamin, L: S. Lady Suffolk and her circle. (Ja '25)
Sultan of the mountains. Forbes, J. R. (Je '24)
Summer ghosts and winter topics. Schelling, F. E. (My '24)
Summertime. Mackail, D. G: (Mr '24)
Sunclouds. Cohen, O. R. (N '24)
Sunday schools
Athearn, W. S., and others. Religious education of Protestants in an American commonwealth. (My '24)
Sunlight and health. Saleeby, C. W. (Mr '24)
Sunlight and song. Jeritza, M. (S '24)
Sunrise. Van Vorst, M. (O '24)
Sunrise trumpets. Auslander, J. (My '24)
Sunshine and open air. Hill. L. (N '24)
Sunward. Golding, L: (Ja '25)
Superior, Lake
Longstreth, T: M. Lake Superior country. (Ag '24)
Supernatural
Holmes, E. G. A. Dying lights and dawning. (O '24)
Supernormal faculties in man. Osty, E. (Je '24)
Supers and supermen. Guedalla, P. (N '24)
Supremacy of the spiritual. Youtz, H. A. (F '25)
Surplus. Stevenson, S. (My '24)
Surtees, Robert Smith
Surtees, R. S., and Cuming, E: W: D. Robert Smith Surtees. (D '24)
Sussex, England

Description and travel

Allcroft, A. H. Downland pathways. (Ja '25)
Sutton papers. Jepson, S. (D '24)
Swedenborg, Emanuel
Hodgetts, E: A. B. Reasonable religion. (My '24)
Symbolism in literature
Baudouin, C: Psychoanalysis and aesthetics. (Je '24)
Synonyms
Roget, P: M. Roget's treasury of words. (Ag '24)
Systematic survey of rubber chemistry. Bedford, C. W., and Winkelmann, H. A. (Je '24)

Table decoration
Tipton, E. S. Table decorations for all occasions. (Ja '25)
Table decorations for all occasions. Tipton, E. S. (Ja '25)
Taking of Helen. Masefield, J: (S '24)
Taking the literary pulse. Collins, J. (Je '24)
Tale of our merchant ships. Cartwright, C: E. (F '25)
Tales from nature's wonderlands. Hornaday, W: T. (D '24)
Tales from silver lands. Finger, C: J. (N '24)
Tales of a western mountaineer. Rusk, C. E. (F '25)
Tales of old-timers. Bechdolt, F: R. (N '24)
Tales of southern rivers. Grey, Z. (Ja '25)
Talk. Sachs, E. N. (S '24)
Tanganyika territory

Description and travel

Barns, T: A. Across the great craterland to the Congo. (N '24)
Tartars
Parker, E. H. Thousand years of the Tartars. (Ja '25)
Tattooed countess. Van Vechten, C. (O '24)
Taxation
Mellon, A. W: Taxaton. (Ag '24)
Taylor, Frederick Winslow
Copley, F. B. Frederick W. Taylor. (Ap '24)
Teaching
Bagley, W: C. and Keith, J: A. H. Introduction to teaching. (O '24)
Freeland, G: E. Improvement of teaching. (F '25)
Minor, R. Principles of teaching practically applied. (F '25)
Technical education
Selvidge, R. W. How to teach a trade. (Je '24)
Technical methods in analysis of metallurgical and allied products. Scott, W. W. (Ap '24)
Technical organization. Weiss, J: M., and Downs, C: R. (F '25)
Technical writing
Baker, R. P. Preparation of reports. (F '25)
Technique of executive control. Scheil, E. H. (N '24)
Technology

Language

Harbarger, S. A. English for engineers. (Ap '24)
Telephone
Kennelly, A. E. Electrical vibration instruments. (S '24)
Temper. Conrad, L. H. (Mr '24)
Temperamental people. Rinehart, M. (N '24)
Ten minute plays. Loving, P., ed. (My '24)
Tendencies of modern English drama. Morgan, A. E. (S '24)
Tenderfoot bride. Richards, C. (My '24)
Tenderfoot in New Mexico. Townshend, R. B. (Mr '24)
Terriford mystery. Lowndes, M. A. (Ag '24)
Test of Donald Norton. Pinkerton, R. E. (N '24)
Texas
Bizzell, W: B. Rural Texas. (S '24)
Textbook of advertisement writing and designing. Woodcock, B. C. (S '24)
Textbook of petroleum production engineering. Uren, L. C: (F '25)
Textile fabrics
Woman's institute of domestic arts and sciences. Woman's institute library of dressmaking. (Ap '24)
Thackeray, William Makepeace
Ritchie, A. I. Thackeray and his daughter. (My '24)
Thackeray and his daughter. Ritchie, A. I. (My '24)
Thames river
Maxwell, G. S. Authors' Thames. (Ja '25)
That late unpleasantness. Richardson, N. (Ja '25)
Theater
Eaton, W. P. Actor's heritage. (D '24)
Ervine, St J: G. Organized theatre. (N '24)
Frank, W. D: Salvos. (My '24)
Macgowan, K., and Ross, H. Masks and demons. (My '24)
Nathan, G: J. Materia critica. (O '24)
Vernon, F. Twentieth century theater. (D '24)
Woollcott, A. Enchanted aisles. (My '24)

Censorship

McAdoo, W: When the court takes a recess. (N '24)

Little theater movement

Koch, F: H:, ed. Carolina folk-plays. (Ja '25)

England

Chambers, E. K. Elizabethan stage. (Je '24)

Germany

Sayler, O. M., ed. Max Reinhardt and his theatre. (S '24)

Russia

Stanislavsky, C. My life in art. (Je '24)

United States

Sayler, O. M. Our American theatre. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Seldes, G. V. Seven lively arts. (My '24)
Theater, Community
Goveia, C. J. de. Community playhouse. (Ap '24)

Theater, Little
  Wise, C. M. Dramatics for school and community. (Ap '24)
Thebes, Egypt
  Blackman, A. M. Luxor and its temples. (Mr '24)
Theism
  Balfour, A. J. B. Theism and thought. (My '24)
Theism and thought. Balfour, A. J. B. (My '24)
Then and now in education. Caldwell, O. W:, and Courtis, S. A. (Ag '24)
Theological education in America. Kelly, R. L. (N '24)
Theology
  Creeds and loyalty. (S '24)
  Russell, C. F. Religion and natural law. (Je '24)
    Study and teaching
  Kelly, R. L. Theological education in America. (N '24)
Theoretical metallurgy. Dean, R. S. (F '25)
Theory and application of colloidal behavior. Bogue, R. H., ed. (F '25)
Theory and relativity. Freundlich, E. (Ag '24)
Theory of consumption. Kyrk, H. (Ap '24)
Theory of social economy. Cassel, G. (Ap '24)
Theras and his town. Snedeker, C. D. (F '25)
There is a tide. Snaith, J: C. (Je '24)
There is confusion. Fauset, J. R. (My '24)
These charming people. Arlen, M., pseud. (My '24)
These eventful years. (S '24)
They who walk in the wilds. Roberts, C: G: D. (Je '24)
Thing in the woods. Williams, H. (Ja '25)
Things and ideals. Otto, M. C. (Ja '25)
Things I know about kings. Le Queux, W: T. (F '25)
Things seen on the Riviera. Richardson, L. (Ap '24)
Thirteenth letter. Lincoln, N. S. (O '24)
Thirtieth piece of silver. Hayes, L. (Ja '25)
This above all. Speakman, H. (F '25)
This fine-pretty world. Mackaye, P. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
This woman. Rockey, H. (Je '24)
Thomas Chandler Haliburton. Chittick, V: L. O. (F '25)
Thomas the Lambkin. Farrere, C., pseud. (D '24)
Thoreau, Henry David
  Bazalgette, L. Henry Thoreau. (F '25)
Those Europeans. Huddleston, S. (D '24)
Thought and thinking
  Columbia associates in philosophy. Introduction to reflective thinking. (Je '24)
  Vaihinger, H. Philosophy of as if. (D '24)
Thousand and first night. Overton, G. (Mr '24)
Thousand years of the Tartars. Parker, E. H. (Ja '25)
Thread of English road. Brooks, C: S. (Je '24)
Three flights up. Howard, S. (Ja '25)
Three fountains. Young, S. (My '24)
Three hostages. Buchan, J: (S '24)
Three of clubs. Williams, V. (S '24)
Three pilgrims and a tinker. Borden-Turner, M. (Ja '25)
Three problem children. Joint committee on methods of preventing delinquency. (Ag '24)
Three tales. Flaubert, G. (F '25)
Thrice told tales. Williams, B. C., comp. (S '24)
Thrings of the dark mountain. Taylor, M. (Ja '25)
Through central France to the Pyrenees. Speed, M. (O '24)
Through thirty years. Steed, H: W. (F '25)
Thundering herd. Grey, Z. (F '25)
Thy neighbor's wife. O'Flaherty, L. (Mr '24)
Tibet
    Description and travel
  Ghulam, R. G. Servant of sahibs. (Je '24)
  Gregory, J: W. and C. J. To the Alps of Chinese Tibet. (Je '24)
  McGovern, W: M. To Lhasa in disguise. (N '24)
The tide. Cram, M. (Ja '25)
Tide marks. Tomlinson, H. M. (Ja '25)
Tierra del Fuego
  Kent, R. Voyaging; southward from the Strait of Magellan. (N '24)
Tiger's claw. Terhune, A. P. (D '24)
Till a' the seas gang dry. Innes, J: (Je '24)
Time and time keepers. Milham, W. I. (Ap '24)
Time-worn town. Fletcher, J. S. (S '24)
Tinkering with tools. Saylor, H: H. (D '24)
To Lhasa in disguise. McGovern, W: M. (N '24)
To the Alps of Chinese Tibet. Gregory, J: W., and C. J. (Je '24)
To women of the business world. Johnson, E. C. (Ap '24)
Tobacco pipes
  Dunhill, A. Pipe book. (F '25)
The token. Tracy, L: (Ja '25)
Tokyo
    Politics and government
  Beard, C: A. Administration and politics of Tokyo. (Ap '24)
Told by an idiot. Macaulay, R. (Mr '24)
Tolerance. Brooks, P. (Ag '24)
Toleration
  Brooks, P. Tolerance. (Ag '24)
Tolstoi, Leo Nikolaievich, count
  Baudouin, C: Tolstoi the teacher. (Je '24)
  Tolstoi, L. L. Truth about my father. (Je '24)
Tolstoi, Leo Nikolaievich, count, ed. My life; as told by the peasant Anissia. See Anissia. (Je '24)
Tolstoi the teacher. Baudouin, C: (Je '24)
Tom Masson's annual for 1924. Masson, T: L., ed. (Ja '25)
Tomb of Tutankhamen. Capart, J. (Mr '24)
To-morrow and to-morrow. . . McKenna, S. (N '24)
Tommy with the big tents. Roots, H. W. (Je '24)
Tongues of flame. Macfarlane, P: C. (Ag '24)
Tony. Hudson, S. (Je '24)
Tony from America. Taylor, K. H. (O '24)
Tony Sarg's book for children. Sarg, T. (Ja '25)
The torch. Willcox, L., comp. (F '25)
Touchdowns. Perry, L. (D '24)
Towards international justice. Keen, F. N. (Je '24)
Town and country church in the United States. Morse, H. N., and Brunner, E. de S. (O '24)
Town planning and town development. Adshead, S. D. (Mr '24)
Towns and town-planning, ancient and modern. Hughes, T: H., and Lamborn, E. A. G. (Mr '24)
Toys. Sarawak, S. (My '24)
Tract for monetary reform. Eng title of Monetary reform. Keynes, J: M. (Ap '24)
Trade unions
  Kopald, S. Rebellion in labor unions. (Ag '24)
  Spero, S. D. Labor movement. (D '24)
Tragedy
  Dixon, W: M. Tragedy. (F '25)
Tragedy of Mr Punch. Thorndike, R., and Arkell, R. (D '24)
Tragical tales. Bandello, M. (Ja '25)
Trail life in the Canadian Rockies. Mitchell, B: W. (F '25)
Trail to Apacaz. Cunningham, E. (D '24)
Training for the professions and allied occupations. Bureau of vocational information. (F '25)
Training in literary appreciation. Pritchard, F. H: (Ag '24)
Tramps
  Tully, J. Beggars of life. (D '24)
Transactions of Oliver Prince. Forbes, R. E. (S '24)
Trapping
  Mayer, C. Jungle beasts I have captured. (F '25)

Travel
  Montague, C: E: The right place. (Ag '24)
Traveller in the fur cloak. Weyman, S. J: (Je '24)
Travels in East Anglia. Morley, F. V. (Je '24)
Travels through the interior parts of America. Anbury, T: (Ag '24)
Treasure of Ho. Beck, L. A. (Je '24)
Treasure trail. Pertwee, R. (D '24)
Treatise on physical chemistry. Taylor, H. S., ed. (F '25)
Treble clef. Booth, E: C: (Ja '25)
Tree, Viola. See Parsons, H., pseud. (Ap '24)
Tree ancestors. Berry, W: W. (S '24)
Trees
  Berry, J. B. Northern woodlot trees. (F '25)
    Diseases and pests
  Felt, E. P. Manual of tree and shrub insects. (Ja '25)
Trees, Fossil
  Berry, W: W. Tree ancestors. (S '24)
The trefoil. Benson, A. C. (Mr '24)
Trend of economics. Tugwell, R. G., ed. (D '24)
Treve. Terhune, A. P. (Mr '24)
Trevessa (steamship)
  Foster, C. P. T. 1700 miles in open boats. (Ja '25)
Trials
  Kingston, C: Dramatic days at the Old Bailey. (F '25)
  Parry, E: A. Drama of the law. (O '24)
Tristan
  Hardy, T: Famous tragedy of the Queen of Cornwall. (Ap '24)
Triumph. Edginton, M. (Ap '24)
Triumph of Gallio. George, W. L. (N '24)
Triumph of Lord Palmerston. Martin, B. K. (O '24)
Triumph of unarmed forces. Consett, M. W: W. P:, and Daniel, O. H. (Je '24)
Trobar clus. Guthrie, R. (My '24)
Troublesome words and how to use them. Mason, W: L., comp. (Mr '24)
True story of Woodrow Wilson. Lawrence, D: (Ag '24)
True travellers. Davies, W: H: (Ap '24)
Trusts, Industrial
    Law
  Swenson, R. J: National government and business. (D '24)
Truth
  Rogers, A. K. What is truth? (My '24)
Truth about my father. Tolstoi, L. L. (Je '24)
Truth at last. Hawtrey, C: H: (N '24)
Tully, Jim
  Tully, J. Beggars of life. (D '24)
Tunis
  Dunbar, I. M. Edge of the desert. (F '25)
Turkey
  Powell, E: A. Struggle for power in Moslem Asia. (Ap '24)
    Description and travel
  Rawlinson, A. Adventures in the Near East, 1918-1922. (Ag '24)
Tut-ankh-amen
  Capart, J. Tomb of Tutankhamen. (Mr '24)
  Mercer, S: A. B. Tutankhamen and Egyptology. (My '24)
  Weigall, A. E: P. B. Tutankhamen. (Ap '24)
Tutankhamen and Egyptology. Mercer, S: A. B. (My '24)
Twain, Mark, pseud. See Clemens, S: L. (D '24)
Twelve tests of character. Fosdick, H. E. (Mr '24)
Twelve years at the imperial German court. Zedlitz-Trützschler, R. (N '24)
Twentieth century
  These eventful years. (S '24)
Twentieth century theater. Vernon, F. (D '24)
Twenty-three stories. (F '25)
Twisted foot. White, W: P. (N '24)
Twisted tales. Ward, C. L. (Ja '25)
Two coyotes. Grew, D: (Ag '24)
Two gentlemen of China. Hosie, D. (N '24)
Two royalist spies of the French revolution. Gosselin, L: L. T. (Je '24)
2000 miles through Chile. May, E. C. (Ag '24)
Two women. Frederick, J. G: (Ap '24)

Uganda
  Norden, H. White and black in East Africa. (Ja '25)
Ulug Beg. Bacon, L. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Uncensored recollections. (O '24)
Uncertain feast. Solano, S. (N '24)
Uncharted waters. Stock, R. (N '24)
Unconventional memories. Nevill, R. H: (Ag '24)
Under dispute. Repplier, A. (O '24)
Under the red flag. Eaton, R: (O '24)
Undream'd of shores. Harris, F. (Ag '24)
Une guirlande de poésies diverses. Warrack, G. (Ag '24)
Unemployment
  Morley, F. Unemployment relief in Great Britain. (Ja '25)
Unemployment relief in Great Britain. Morley, F. (Ja '25)
United States
    Army
  Allen, H: T. My Rhineland journal. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Ganoe, W: A. History of the United States army. (O '24)
    Biography
  O'Higgins, H. J., and Reede, E: H. American mind in action. (Ap '24)
  Stark, H. People you know. (Ag '24)
    Civilization
  Belloc, H. The contrast. (Je '24)
  Kallen, H. M. Culture and democracy in the United States. (My '24)
    Commerce
  Lahee, A. W. Our competitors and markets. (Ja '25)
    Congress
  Luce, R. Legislative assemblies. (D '24)
    Constitution
  Beck, J. M. Constitution of the United States. (S '24)
  Chandler, J. A. C., ed. Genesis and birth of the Federal constitution. (F '25)
  Schuyler, R. L. Constitution of the United States. (Ap '24)
  Stimson, F: J. American constitution as it protects private rights. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
  Thompson, W. Federal centralization. (My '24)
    Description and travel
  Anburey, T: Travels through the interior parts of America. (Ag '24)
  Bedell, M. Modern gypsies. (O '24)
  Cresswell, N: Journal of Nicholas Cresswell. (F '25)
  Doyle, A. C. Our second American adventure. (Ag '24)
  Nevins, A., comp. and ed. American social history as recorded by British travellers. (Je '24)
    Economic conditions
  Filene, E: A. Way out. (Ja '25)
  Parsons, F. W. Everybody's business. (Ap '24)
  Veblen, T. B. Absentee ownership and business enterprise in recent times. (Ap '24)
  Ware, N. Industrial worker, 1840-1860. (Ag '24)
    Foreign relations
  Gibbons, H. A. America's place in the world. (Je '24)
  Lape, E. E., ed. Ways to peace. (My '24)
  Millard, T: F. F. Conflict of policies in Asia. (S '24)
  Mowrer, P. S. Our foreign affairs. (My '24)
  Thomas, D: Y. One hundred years of the Monroe doctrine. (Ap '24)

Great Britain

Davenport, E. H., and Cook, S. R. Oil trusts and Anglo-American relations. (Ap '24)
Reuter, B. A. Anglo-American relations during the Spanish-American war. (O '24)
Whelpley, J. D. British-American relations. (Ap '24)

Forest service

Crump, I. Boys' book of forest rangers. (O '24)

Frontier and pioneer life

Paxson, F: L. History of the American frontier, 1763-1893 (Ja '25)

History

Faris, J: T. Romance of forgotten towns. (D '24)
Krapp, G: P. America. (Ja '25)
Paxson, F: L. History of the American frontier, 1763-1893. (Ja '25)

Colonial period

Andrews, C: M. Colonial background of the American revolution. (F '25)
Jameson, J: F., ed. Privateering and piracy in the colonial period. (My '24)
Osgood, H. L. American colonies in the eighteenth century. (Je '24)

Revolution

Cresswell, N: Journal of Nicholas Cresswell. (F '25)
Fitzpatrick, J: C. Spirit of the Revolution. (F '25)
McIlwain, C: H. American revolution. (Mr '24)
Morison, S: E., ed. Sources and documents illustrating the American revolution, 1764-1788. (My '24)
Mumby, F. A. George III and the American revolution. (My '24)

Revolution—Causes

Andrews, C: M. Colonial background of the American revolution. (F '25)

Civil war

Putnam, G: H. Some memories of the Civil war. (Ap '24)
Seitz, D. C. Braxton Bragg. (Je '24)

Civil war—Naval operations

Selfridge, T: O. Memoirs of Thomas O. Selfridge, jr. (D '24)

Spanish-American war

Reuter, B. A. Anglo-American relations during the Spanish-American war. (O '24)

Industries

Parsons, F. W. Everybody's business. (Ap '24)

Navy

Stevens, W: O. Boyhoods of our navy heroes. (Ag '24)

History

Selfridge, T: O. Memoirs of Thomas O. Selfridge, jr. (D '24)

Politics and government

Barry, D: S. Forty years in Washington. (Ap '24)
Behind the scenes in politics. (S '24)
Beveridge, A. J. State of the nation. (Ag '24)
Borah, W: E. American problems. (Mr '24)
Brooks, R. C. Political parties and electoral problems. (Je '24)
Cobb, F. I. Cobb of "The World." (Ag '24)
Coolidge, C. Price of freedom. (My '24)
Curran, H: H. John Citizen's job. (My '24)
Gibbons, H. A. America's place in the world. (Je '24)
Gilbert, C. W. "You takes your choice." (N '24)
Haynes, F: E. Social politics in the United States. (Je '24)
Holcombe, A. N. Political parties of to-day. (F '25)
Kent, F. R. Great game of politics. (My '24)
McElroy, R. M. Grover Cleveland. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Munro, W: B. Current problems in citizenship. (D '24)
Myers, W: S. American democracy today. (S '24)
Redfield, W: C. With Congress and cabinet. (Ag '24)
Smith, E: C. Dictionary of American politics. (O '24)
Thompson, W. Federal centralization. (My '24)
Woodburn, J. A. American community. (O '24)

Race question

Skaggs, W: H: Southern oligarchy. (Ja '25)
Weatherford, W. D. Negro from Africa to America. (O '24)

Religion

Rowe, H: K. History of religion in the United States. (Ja '25)

Sanitary affairs

Moore, H. H. Public health in the United States. (Ap '24)

Social conditions

Haynes, F: E. Social politics in the United States. (Je '24)

Social life and customs

Bremer, F. America of the fifties. (Ja '25)
Dexter, E. W. Colonial women of affairs. (S '24)
Minnigerode, M. Fabulous forties. (Ap '24)
Nevins, A., comp. and ed. American social history as recorded by British travellers. (Ja '25)

United States and the Philippines. Williams, D. R. (Ja '25)
Unity. Beresford, J. D. (D '24)
University debaters' annual. Phelps, E. M., and Johnsen, J. E. (My '24)
Unknown quantity. Dell, E. M. (F '25)
Unmailed letters. Odell, J. H: (F '25)
Unmasking our minds. Seabury, D: (F '25)
Unofficial statesman—Robert C. Ogden. Wilson, P. W. (F '25)
Unseemly adventure. Straus, R. (O '24)
Unstable child. Mateer, F. (Ag '24)
Unstrung beads. Purna Simha. (My '24)
Unwritten history. Hamilton, C. (My '24)
Up and down. Blake, E. J. (D '24)
Utah
Description and travel
Bernheimer, C: L. Rainbow Bridge. (F '25)

Valentine, Douglas, pseud. See Williams, V. (S '24)
Valley of headstrong men. Fletcher, J. S. (Ag '24)
Valuation of oil and gas lands. Brown, R. W. (F '25)
Vault of heaven. Gregory, R: A. (Ap '24)
Vedette, pseud. See Williams, V. (S '24)
Veiled aristocrats. Sanborn, G. (My '24)
Ventilation
Fuller, C: A. Designing heating and ventilating systems. (F '25)
Verhaeren, Emile
Baudouin, C: Psychoanalysis and aesthetics. (Je '24)
Verse of our day. Gordon, M., and King, M. B., comps. (Ap '24)
Veterinary medicine
Leonard, J: L. First aid to animals. (F '25)
Viaud, Louis Marie Julien. See Loti, P., pseud. (Je '24)
Vibration
Eason, A. B. Prevention of vibration and noise. (Ap '24)
Victorian poetry. Drinkwater, J: (My '24)
Viennese medley. O'Shaughnessy, E. L. (D '24)

Vikings of the ice. England, G: A. (Je '24)
Viking's Rest. Williams, F. F. (O '24)
Villas of Pliny the younger. Tanzer, H. H. (Je '24)
Vindication. McKenna, S. (Mr '24)
Virgin birth. Palmer, F: (Mr '24)
Visible and invisible. Benson, E: F: (My '24)
Vision of Morocco. O'Connor, V. C. S. (My '24)
Visual education. Freeman, F. N. (S '24)
Visual instruction
  Freeman, F. N. Visual education. (S '24)
Vital statistics
  Falk, I. S. Principles of vital statistics. (S '24)
  Newsholme, A. Elements of vital statistics. (Je '24)
Vocational guidance
  Blackford, K. M., and Newcomb, A. Right job. (My '24)
Vogue's book of etiquette. (My '24)
Voting
  Merriam, C: E:, and Gosnell, H. F. Non-voting. (N '24)
Voyages and travels
  Burton, R: F. Selected papers on anthropology. (S '24)
  Chatterton, E: K. Seamen all. (N '24)
  Johnston, H. H., and Guest, L. H., eds. World of to-day. (F '25)
  Kent, R. Voyaging; southward from the Strait of Magellan. (N '24)
  Lorenz, D. E: Round the world traveller. (Ap '24)
  Lyman, C. S. Around the Horn to the Sandwich Islands and California. (Ja '25)
  Salisbury, E: A., and Cooper, M. C. Sea gypsy. (D '24)
Voyages around the world
  Butler, F. H. Round the world. (F '25)
Voyaging; southward from the Strait of Magellan. Kent, R. (N '24)
Vultures of the dark. Enright, R: E. (F '25)

W. H. Hudson. Roberts, M. (Ap '24)
Wages
  Lubin, I. Miners' wages and the cost of coal. (D '24)
Wages. Magruder, M. L. (Ap '24)
Wagner, Richard
  Newman, E. Wagner as man and artist. (Ja '25)
Wagner as man and artist. Newman, E. (Ja '25)
Walking
  Doty, A. H. Walking for health. (Ap '24)
  Stoddard, C: C. Shank's mare. (Je '24)
Walking for health. Doty, A. H. (Ap '24)
Wall paper
  MacClelland, N. V. Historic wall-papers. (F '25)
Walter de la Mare. Mégroz, R. L. (S '24)
Wanamaker, John
  Conwell, R. H. Romantic rise of a great American. (Ja '25)
Wanderer among pictures. Lucas, E: V. (F '25)
Wandering stars. Dane, C., pseud. (My '24)
Wanderings in south-eastern seas. Cameron, C. (F '25)
Wanderings of an elephant hunter. Bell, W. D. M. (My '24)
Waning of the Middle ages. Huizinga, J. (O '24)
War
  Peat, H. R. Inexcusable lie. (Je '24)
Ward, Arthur Sarsfield. See Rohmer, S., pseud. (Mr, D '24)
Washington, George
  Henderson, A. Washington's southern tour. (Ap '24)
Washington, D.C.
  Latimer, L. P. Your Washington and mine. (Ag '24)

History
  Nicolay, H. Our capital on the Potomac. (Ja '25)
  Page, T: N. Washington and its romance. (Ap '24)

Social life and customs
  Keyes, F. P. Letters from a senator's wife. (Ag '24)
  Nicolay, H. Our capital on the Potomac. (Ja '25)
Washington and its romance. Page, T: N. (Ap '24)
Washington's southern tour. Henderson, A. (Ap '24)
Waste. Herrick, R. (Je '24)
Water-bearer. Dunn, J. A. E. (Mr '24)
Waugh, Alec
  Waugh, A. Myself when young. (Ap '24)
Waves of destiny. Pedler, M. (D '24)
Way of the buffalo. Seltzer, C: A. (O '24)
Way out. Filene, E: A. (Ja '25)
The way things happen. Dane, C. (Mr '24)
Ways to peace. Lape, E. E., ed. (My '24)
We three. Ott, O. and E. (Ja '25)
Weather
  Williams, A. F. Everyone's book of the weather. (My '24)
Webster, Daniel
  Kennedy, E. R. Real Daniel Webster. (O '24)
Wedding gift. Foote, J: T. (F '25)
Wedding song. Mumford, E. (Ja '25)
Week-end book. (D '24)
Wehde, Albert
  Wehde, A. Since leaving home. (Mr '24)
Weird tales. Hoffmann, E. T. W. (Ap '24)
Welded. See All God's chillun got wings. O'Neill, E. G. (Je '24)
Well-dressed woman. Rittenhouse, A., pseud. (N '24)
Wendell, Barrett
  Howe, M. A. De W. Barrett Wendell and his letters. (N '24)
West

History
  Bechdolt, F: R. Tales of old-timers. (N '24)
  Paxson, F: L. History of the American frontier, 1763-1893. (Ja '25)
West Indies

Description and travel
  Graham, S. In quest of El Dorado. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)

Politics and government
  Wrong, H. Government of the West Indies. (S '24)
Western art and the new era. Dreier, K. S. (My '24)
Western Australia

History
  Battye, J. S. Western Australia. (F '25)
Whaling
  Hawes, C: B. Whaling. (D '24)
What books can do for you. Bennett, J. L. (Mr '24)
What does your child weigh? Lowry, E. B. (Ja '25)
What education has the most worth? Thwing, C: F. (D '24)
What I have gathered. Buckrose, J. E., pseud. (D '24)
What is man? Thomson, J: A. (Ap '24)
What is modernism? Parks, L. (Je '24)
What is truth? Rogers, A. K. (My '24)
What is your name? Brown, C: R. (Je '24)
What music does to us. Benedict, M. E. (D '24)
What the butler winked at. Horne, E. (Je '24)
What's wrong with the movies? Lane, T., pseud. (Ap '24)
When Geronimo rode. Hooker, F. (My '24)
When half gods go. Holland, N. M. (Ag '24)
When I was a boy in India. Satyananda Roy. (Ag '24)

When Israel is king. Tharaud, J. and J. (F '25)
When the bough breaks. Mitchison, N. (O '24)
When the court takes a recess. McAdoo, W: (N '24)
When we were very young. Milne, A. A. (Ja '25)
Where evolution and religion meet. Coulter, J: M. and M. C. (Je '24)
Where green trails end. Swift, H. (Ja '25)
Where strange gods call. Hervey, H. (Ja '25)
Where traditions linger. Fea, A. (My '24)
Whirlwind. Hardinge, H. C. M. (Je '24)
White, Dorothy Vernon (Smith) (Mrs William Hale White)
White, D. V. Groombridge diary. (Ja '25)
White, William Hale (Mark Rutherford, pseud.)
White, D. V. Groombridge diary. (Ja '25)
White, W: H. Letters to three friends. (D '24))
White, Sir William Henry
Manning, F: Life of Sir William White. (Ap '24)
White and black in East Africa. Norden, H. (Ja '25)
White devil of the Black sea. Palen, L: S. (Je '24)
White light nights. McIntyre, O. O. (Ag '24)
White monkey. Galsworthy, J: (D '24)
White oxen. Burke, K. (Ja '25)
White ship. Kallas, A. J. M. (Je '24)
White Stacks. Hewlett, W: (Je '24)
White stone. Mitchell, R. C. (F '25)
White streak. Gluck, S. (Ag '24)
Who killed Cock Robin? Hext, H., pseud. (Je '24)
Who will remember? Irwin, M. (F '25)
Who would be free. Spitzer, M. (N '24)
Wholesome childhood. Groves, E. R. and G. H. (F '25)
Why I am a Christian. Crane, F. (Ja '25)
Why I believe in religion. Brown, C: R. (Je '24)
Why the weather? Brooks, C: F. (N '24)
Wide waters. Dingle, A. E. (Ja '25)
Widening waters. McCarter, M. (F '25)
Widow's house. Coyle, K. (O '24)
Wilberforce, William
Coupland, R. Wilberforce. (Mr '24)
Wild cherry. Reese, L. W. (My '24)
Wild horses. Knibbs, H: H. (Je '24)
Wilde, Oscar Fingall O'Flahertie Wills
Housman, L. Echo de Paris. (Ap '24)
Wilfred Grenfell. Mathews, B. J. (D '24)
Willard Straight. Croly, H. D: (N '24)
William II, emperor of Germany (abdicated 1918)
Zedlitz-Trützschler, R. Twelve years at the imperial German court. (N '24)
William III, king of England
Grew, M. E. William Bentinck and William III. (Ap '24)
William Bentinck and William III. Grew, M. E. (Ap '24)
William Blake. Damon, S: F. (O '24)
William Crawford Gorgas. Gorgas, M. D., and Hendrick, B. J. (F '25)
William Dean Howells. Firkins, O. W. (F '25)
Willsie, Honore (McCue). See Morrow, H. W: (N '24)
Wilmot, David
Going, C: B. David Wilmot. (D '24)
Wilson, Sir Arthur Knyvet
Bradford, E: S. Life of Admiral of the fleet Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson. (S '24)
Wilson, Francis
Wilson, F. Francis Wilson's life of himself. (D '24)
Wilson, Woodrow
Annin, R. E. Woodrow Wilson. (My '24)
Daniels, J. Life of Woodrow Wilson. (Ag '24)
Lawrence, D: True story of Woodrow Wilson. (Ag '24)
White, W: A. Woodrow Wilson. (D '24)
Wind and the rain. Burke, T: (D '24)
Windmills
Brangwyn, F., and Preston, H. Windmills. (Mr '24)
Windows of Westminster. Begbie, H. (Ja '25)
Wind's End. Asquith, H. (S '24)
Wine and wine making
Allen, H. W. Wines of France. (F '25)
Wine of fury. Rogers, L. (Ag '24)
Wines of France. Allen, H. W. (F '25)
Wings. Kelley, E. M. (N '24)
Winning of the Far East. Gulick, S. L: (Ap '24)
Wireless possibilities. Low, A. M. (D '24)
With benefit of clergy. Hackett, F. (Je '24)
With Congress and cabinet. Redfield, W: C. (Ag '24)
With Lawrence in Arabia. Thomas, L. J. (D '24)
With Stefansson in the Arctic. Noice, H. (N '24)
Within a budding grove. Proust, M. (O '24)
Wolfgang Goethe. Brandes, G. N. C. (O '24)
Woman
Biography
Cather, K. D. Girlhood stories of famous women. (D '24)
Humphrey, G. Story of the Marys. (My '24)
Marble, A. Women of the Bible. (Je '24)
Employment
Johnson, E. C. To women of the business world. (Ap '24)
Pruette, L. Women and leisure. (F '25)
Occupations
Bureau of vocational information. Training for the professions and allied occupations. (F '25)
Dexter, E. W. Colonial women of affairs. (S '24)
Social and moral questions
Pruette, L. Women and leisure. (F '25)
Woman of fifty. Dorr, R. (F '25)
Woman on the farm. Atkeson, M. M. (F '25)
Woman suffrage
Kenney, A. Memories of a militant. (Ja '25)
Womanhood in the making. Eggleston, M. W. (Ap '24)
Woman's institute library of dressmaking. Woman's institute of domestic arts and sciences. (Ap '24)
Women and leisure. Pruette, L. (F '25)
Women and wives. Fergusson, H. (My '24)
Women in China
Seton, G. Chinese lanterns. (My '24)
Women in Shakespeare's plays. MacKenzie, A. M. (F '25)
Women of the Bible. Marble, A. (Je '24)
Wonder of Lourdes. Oxenham, J: (N '24)
Wonders of salvage. Masters, D: (O '24)
Wonders of the Himalaya. Younghusband, F. E: (S '24)
Wonders of the past. Hammerton, J: A., ed (Mr, S '24)
Wood, Elliott
Wood, E. Life and adventure in peace and war. (Je '24)
Wood
Koehler, A. Properties and uses of wood. (F '25)
Wood pattern-making. McCaslin, H. J: (Ap '24)
Wood-pulp
Kellogg, R. S. Pulpwood and wood pulp in North America. (Je '24)
Wooden ships and iron men. Wallace, F: W: (F '25)
Woodland creatures. Pitt, F. (S '24)
Woodrow Wilson. Annin, R. E. (My '24)
Woodrow Wilson. White, W: A. (D '24)
Woodsmoke. Young, F. B. (S '24)
Woodwork
Wheeler, C: G. Woodworking. (F '25)
Woodworking. Wheeler, C: G. (F '25)
Wordsworth, William
Garrod, H. W: Wordsworth. (Je '24)
Fiction
Woods, M. L. Poet's youth. (Mr '24)
Workmen's compensation. Downey, E. H: (F '25)
World of fashion, 1837-1922. Nevill, R. H: (Ag '24)
World of souls. Lutoslawski, W. (Ja '25)
World of to-day. Johnston, H. H., and Guest, L. H., eds. (F '25)

World unbalanced. Le Bon, G. (O '24)
World's best epigrams. Lawson. J. G., comp. (Ag '24)
World's living religions. Hume, R. E. (Ag '24)
World-struggle for oil. L'espagnol de la Tramerye, P. (Mr '24)
Wrath to come. Oppenheim, E: P. (My '24)
Writer's index of good form. Manly, J: M., and Rickert, E. (Ag '24)
Written in friendship. Kenyon, C. F. (Ag '24)

"Y.Y.", pseud. See Lynd, R. (S '24)
Yang Kuei-Fei
  Wu Shu-Chiung. Most famous beauty of China. (F '25)
Yellowstone national park
  Smith, W. On the trail in Yellowstone. (Ag '24)
Yiddish drama
  Collections
  Block, E., tr. One-act plays from the Yiddish. (My '24)
Yorkshire, England
  Southwart, E. Brontë moors and villages. (Ap '24)
You can change it. Lawson, C: F. (My '24)
You gentiles. Samuel, M. (O '24)
"You takes your choice." Gilbert, C. W. (N '24)
You too. Burlingame, R. (Ap '24)
Young Archimedes. Huxley, A. L. (N '24)
Young Felix. Swinnerton, F. A. (Ag '24 and 1923 Annual)
Young folks' book of mirth. Thomas, M. R., ed. (S '24)
Young India. Gandhi, M. K. (Je '24)
Youngest drama. Dukes, S. (Ag '24)
Yourself and your body. Grenfell, W. T. (F '25)
Your Washington and mine. Latimer, L. P. (Ag '24)
Youth wins. Coxon, M. (Ja '25)

Z R wins. Green, F. (O '24)
Zionism
  Harry, M., pseud. Springtide in Palestine. (N '24)
  Trager, H. Pioneers in Palestine. (Ag '24)
Zoology
  Newman, H. H. Outlines of general zoölogy. (D '24)
  Africa
  Maxwell, M. Stalking big game with a camera in equatorial Africa. (Ja '25)
  Percival, A. B. Game ranger's note book. (D '24)

Directory of Publishers

A. L. A. American Library Association, 86 E. Randolph St, Chicago
Aetco Pub. Co Aetco Publishing Company, 16 E 41st St, N Y.
Am. Bk. American Book Company, 100 Washington Sq E. N.Y.; 330 E 22d St, Chicago; 300 Pike St, Cincinnati; 63 Summer St, Boston; 2 N Forsyth St, Atlanta, Ga.
Am. Library Service. American Library Service, 500 5th Av, N.Y.
Am.-Scandinavian Foundation. American-Scandinavian Foundation, 25 W 45th St, N.Y.
Appleton. Daniel Appleton & Company, 29-35 W 32d St, N.Y.; 25 Bedford St, Convent Garden, London
  Selling agents for University of Pennsylvania Publications
  Have acquired the publications of Stewart-Kidd Company
Associated Publishers, Inc., 1538 9th St, NW, Washington, D.C.
Assn. Press. Association Press, 347 Madison Ave, N.Y.
Atlantic Monthly. Atlantic Monthly Press Publications
  Books distributed by Little, Brown & Company

Baird. Henry Carey Baird & Company, Inc., 2 W 45th St, N.Y.
Bankers Trust Co. Bankers Trust Company, 16 Wall St, N.Y.
Barnes, A. S. & Co. A. S. Barnes & Company, 7 W 45th St, N.Y.
Barse & Hopkins, Fifth Av Bldg, 200 5th Av, Room 418, N.Y.; 21-39 Division St, Newark, N.J.
Benziger. Benziger Bros., 36-38 Barclay St, N.Y.; 205 W Washington St, Chicago; 343 Main St, Cincinnati
Blakiston. P. Blakiston's Son & Company, 1012 Walnut St, Philadelphia
Bobbs. Bobbs-Merrill Company, 18 University Sq, Indianapolis, Ind.; 185 Madison Av, N.Y.
Boni, A. & C. Albert and Charles Boni, 39 W 8th St, N.Y.
  Have acquired the publications of Lieber and Lewis
Boni & Liveright. Boni & Liveright, 61 W 48th St, N.Y.
Brentano's, 5th Av & 27th St, N.Y.
Brick Row Bk. Shop. Brick Row Book Shop, Inc., 19 E 47th St, N.Y.
Brimmer. B. J. Brimmer Company, 384 Boylston St, Boston (17)
Broom. Broom Publishing Company, 45 King St, N.Y.
Brown, N. L. Nicholas L. Brown, 15 W 37th St, N.Y.
Bur. of Vocational Information. Bureau of Vocational Information, 2 W 43d St, N.Y.

Century. Century Company, 353 4th Av, N.Y.
Century Hist. Co. Century History Company, 156 5th Av, N.Y.
Chapple Pub. Chapple Publishing Company, 952 Dorchester Av, Boston
Chemical Catalog Co. Chemical Catalog Company, Inc., 19 E 24th St, N.Y.
Clark, A. H. Arthur H. Clark Company, 4027-4035 Prospect Av, Cleveland, O.
Clode. E. J. Clode, 156 5th Av, N.Y.
Codex Bk. Codex Book Company, Inc., 461 8th Av, N.Y.
Columbia Univ. Press. Columbia University Press, Columbia University, N.Y.
  Columbia university studies are published by Longmans

Cosmopolitan Bk. Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, 19 W 40th St, N.Y. (formerly Hearst's International Lib.)
Covici-McGee. See Hyman-McGee
Critic and guide. Critic and Guide, 12 Mt. Morris Park, W, New York
Crowell. T. Y. Crowell Company, 387-393 4th Av, N.Y.

Davis. F. A. Davis Company, 1914-1916 Cherry St, Philadelphia
Detroit News. Evening-News Association, 615 Lafayette Boulevard, Detroit, Mich.
Devin-Adair. Devin-Adair Company, 437 5th Av, N.Y.
Dial Press (Lincoln MacVeagh), 152 W 13th St, N.Y.
Dodd. Dodd, Mead & Company, 4th Av & 30th St, N.Y.
  Selling agents for The Cupid & Lion books
  Purchased the business of Moffat, Yard & Co.
Doran. George H. Doran Company, 244 Madison Av, N.Y.; American Agents for Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd., London
Dorrance. Dorrance & Company, Inc., Drexel Bldg, 5th and Chestnut St, Philadelphia
Doubleday. Doubleday, Page & Company, Garden City, N.Y.
Doubleday, N. Nelson Doubleday, Garden City, N.Y.
Duffield. Duffield & Company, 211 E 19th St, N.Y.
Dutton. E. P. Dutton & Company, 681 5th Av, N.Y.; American Agents for the London firms of J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd., George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner Co.

Faxon. F. W. Faxon Company, 83 St Francis St, Back Bay, Boston (17)
Forbes. B. C. Forbes Publishing Company, 120 5th Av, N.Y.
Forbes & Co. Forbes & Company, 443 S Dearborn St, Chicago
Four Seas. Four Seas Company, 454 Stuart St, Boston
Funk. Funk & Wagnalls Company, 354-360 4th Av, N.Y.; 134 Salisbury Sq, London, E.C. 4

Ginn. Ginn & Company (Educational publishers), 15 Ashburton Place, Boston (2); 2301-2311 Prairie Av, Chicago; 70 5th Av, N.Y., 95 Luckie St, Atlanta, Ga.; 1913 Bryan St, Dallas, Tex.; 199 E Gay St, Columbus, O.; 45 2d St, San Francisco; 7 Queen Sq, Southampton Row, London, W.C. 1

Harcourt. Harcourt, Brace & Company, 383 Madison Av, N.Y.; American Agents for G. Bell & Sons, Ltd., London
Harper. Harper & Brothers, 49 E 33d St, N.Y.
Harvard Univ. Press. Harvard University Press, Cambridge (38), Mass.
Heath. D. C. Heath & Company, 50 Beacon St, Boston; 231-245 W 39th St, N.Y.; 1815 Prairie Av, Chicago; 63 N Pryor St, Atlanta, Ga.; 182 2d St, San Francisco; 39-41 Parker St, Kingsway, London, W.C. 2
Hinds. Hinds, Hayden & Eldredge, Inc., 11-15 Union Sq W, N.Y.
Holt. Henry Holt & Company, 19 W 44th St, N.Y.; for educational books only: 2451 Prairie Av, Chicago; 6 Park St, Boston; 149 New Montgomery St, San Francisco

Houghton. Houghton, Mifflin Company (Riverside Press, Cambridge), 2 Park St, Boston; 16 E 40th St, N.Y.; 2451-2459 Prairie Av, Chicago; 612 Howard St, San Francisco
Huebsch. B. W. Huebsch, 30 Irving Pl, N.Y.
Hyman-McGee. Hyman-McGee Company, 158 W Washington St, Chicago
Formerly Covici-McGee

Jacobs. See Macrae Smith Co.
Jewish Pub. Jewish Publication Society of America, Broad St & Girard Av, Philadelphia; 148 E 57th St, N.Y.

Kennerley. Mitchell Kennerley, 489 Park Av, N.Y.
Kerr. Charles H. Kerr & Company, 341-349 E Ohio St, Chicago
Knopf. Alfred A. Knopf, 730 5th Av, N.Y.
Lauriat. Charles E. Lauriat Company, 385 Washington St, Boston
Lieber & Lewis. See Boni, A. & C.
Lincoln MacVeagh, 152 W 13th St, N.Y.
Lippincott. J. B. Lippincott Company, East Washington Sq, Philadelphia
Little. Little, Brown & Company, 34 Beacon St, Boston
Longmans. Longmans, Green & Company, 55 5th Av, Cor 12th St, N.Y.; sole American agents for Edward Arnold, London
Lothrop. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company, 275 Congress st, Boston
A consolidation of Lee & Shepard and The Lothrop Company

Macaulay. Macaulay Company, 115-117 E 23d St, N.Y.
McBride. Robert M. McBride & Company, 7 W 16th St, N.Y.
Formerly McBride, Nast & Company
McClurg. A. C. McClurg & Company, 330-352 E Ohio St, Chicago
McDevitt-Wilson. McDevitt-Wilson's, Inc., 30 Church St, N.Y.
McGhan, A. H. A. H. McGhan, 1513 11th St, NW, Washington, D.C.
McGraw. McGraw-Hill Book Company, Penn Terminal Bldg, 370 7th Av, N.Y.; 6-8 Bouverie St, London, E.C. 4
McKay. David McKay, 604-608 S Washington Sq, Philadelphia
Macmillan. The Macmillan Company, 66 5th Av, N.Y.; Prairie Av & 25th St, Chicago; 330 S Harwood St, Dallas, Tex.; Huntington Chambers, Copley Sq, Boston; 17 Houston St, Atlanta, Ga.; 350 Mission St, San Francisco; St Martin's House, 70 Bond St, Toronto, Canada; St Martin's St, Leicester Sq, London, W.C.; American Agents for Cambridge University Press
Acquired the business of the Outing Co., and Sturgis & Walton
Macrae Smith Co. Macrae Smith Company, 1712 Ludlow St, Philadelphia
Purchased the business of George W. Jacobs & Company
MacVeagh, Lincoln. See Dial press
Manual Arts Press, 237 N Monroe St, Peoria, Ill.
Marshall Jones. Marshall Jones Company, 212 Summer St, Boston
Medici Soc. Medici Society of America, 755 Boylston St, Boston
Minn. hist. soc. Minnesota Historical Society, St Paul, Minn.
Minton, Balch & Co. Minton, Balch & Company, 11-17 E 45th St, N.Y.
Moffat. Moffat, Yard & Company. See Dodd
Morehouse. Morehouse Publishing Company, 1801 Fond du Lac Av, Milwaukee, Wis., American Agents for A. R. Mowbray & Co., London

National Hist. Soc. National Historical Society, 37 W 39th St, N.Y.
Nervous and Mental Disease Pub. Nervous and Mental Disease Publishing Company, 3617 10th St, NW, Washington, D.C.
N. Y. Univ. Press. New York University Press, 32 Waverly Pl, N.Y.
Norman, Remington Co. Norman, Remington Company, 347 N Charles St, Baltimore

Oxford. Oxford University Press (American Branch), 35 W 32d St, N.Y.
Agents for the publications of Henry Frowde
Page. L. C. Page & Company, 53 Beacon St, Boston
Penn. Penn Publishing Company, 925 Filbert St, Philadelphia
Pioneer Press, 1035 Mason St, San Francisco
Prentice-Hall, Inc., 70 5th Av, N.Y.
Presbyterian Bd. Presbyterian Board of Christian education, Publication Department (Westminster Press), Witherspoon Bldg, Philadelphia; 156 5th Av, N.Y.; 420 Elm St, Cincinnati; 912 Pine St, St Louis; 125 N Wabash Av, Chicago; 711 Church St, Nashville, Tenn.; 278 Post St, San Francisco; 200 Auburn Av, Atlanta, Ga.; Granite Bldg, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Princeton Univ. Press. Princeton University Press, Princeton, N.J.
Putnam. G. P. Putnam's Sons (Knickerbocker Press), Putnam Bldg, 2-6 W 45th St, N.Y.; 24 Bedford St, Strand, London

Reilly & Lee. Reilly & Lee Company, 536 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago
Republic Pub. Co. Republic Publishing Company, 421 W 21st St, N.Y.
Revell. Fleming H. Revell & Company, 158 5th Av, N.Y.; 17 N Wabash Av, Chicago; 21 Paternoster Sq, London, E.C. 4
Ronald. Ronald Press Company, 20 Vesey St, N.Y.

Saunders. W. B. Saunders Company, West Washington Sq, Philadelphia; 9 Henrietta St, Covent Garden, London
Scientific American Pub. Scientific American Publishing Company, 233 Broadway, N.Y.
Scribner. Charles Scribner's Sons, 597 5th Av, N.Y.; 320 E 21st St, Chicago; American Agents for the Architectural Publication of B. T. Batsford, Ltd., London
Seltzer. Thomas Seltzer, Inc., 5 W 50th St, N.Y.
Formerly Scott & Seltzer
Shaw, A. W. A. W. Shaw Company, 660 Cass St, Chicago; 342 Madison Av, N.Y.; 43-4 Shoe Lane, London, E.C. 4
Simon & Schuster. Simon & Schuster, Inc., 37 W 57th St, N.Y.
Small. Small, Maynard & Company, 41 Mt Vernon St, Boston
State Co. State Company, Columbia, S.C.
Stewart Kidd. See Appleton
Stokes. F. A. Stokes Company, 443-449 4th Av, N.Y.
Stratford. Stratford Company, 234-240 Boylston St, Boston (9)
Sully. George Sully & Company, 114 E 25th St, N.Y.

U. P. C. Bk. U. P. C. Book Company, Inc., 243 W 39th St, N.Y.
A consolidation of the book department of David Williams Company, Class Journal Company, Iron Age, Hardware Age, Motor World, Motor Age, Building Age, American Architect, Metal Worker, Plumber & Steam Fitter, Dry Goods Reporter, Commercial Vehicle, Automobile, Motor Boat, Dry Goods Economist, Boot & Shoe Recorder
Univ. of Cal. University of California, Berkeley, Cal.
Address University Press, California Hall, Berkeley
Univ. of Chicago Press. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago
Univ. of Ill. Press. University of Illinois Press, Urbana, Ill.
For Univ. studies, address Editor, 305 University Hall, Urbana, Ill.

Van Nostrand. D. Van Nostrand Company, 8 Warren St, N.Y.

Watt. G. H. G. Howard Watt, 1819 Broadway, N.Y.
Watt. W. J. Watt & Company, 601 Madison Av, N.Y.
Westminster Press. See Presbyterian Bd.
Wilde. W. A. Wilde Company, 131 Clarendon St, Boston; 9 S Clinton St, Chicago
Wiley. John Wiley & Sons, 432 4th Av, N.Y.
Williams & Wilkins. Williams & Wilkins Company, Mt Royal Av, Baltimore
Wilson, H. W. H. W. Wilson Compony, 958-972 University Av, N.Y.
Winston. John C. Winston Company, 1006-1016 Arch St, Philadelphia; 629 S Wabash St, Chicago
Wise. Wm. H. Wise & Company, 50 W 47th St, N.Y.
Woman's Press, 600 Lexington Av, N.Y.
Formerly National Bd. of Young Women's Christian Associations
World Bk. World Book Company, Park Hill, Yonkers-on-Hudson, N.Y.; 2126 Prairie Av, Chicago; 108 W Peach Tree St, Atlanta, Ga.; 1307 Pacific Av, Dallas, Tex.; 149 Montgomery St, San Francisco; 100 5th St, Portland, Ore.
Purchased the business of the Globe School Book Co.

Yale Univ. Press. Yale University Press, 143 Elm St, New Haven, Conn.; 522 5th Av, N.Y.

R
Z
1219
C95
1924

2-28-61

51366

GTU LIBRARY
3 2400 00643 0734

Reference Room
San Francisco Theological Seminary
MUST NOT BE REMOVED